Harold Lancaster of Twin Falls holds his third electric chain saw after wearing out two others creating his mountain of firewood out of used pallets

He's found a 'palletable' way to trim fuel bills

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Harold Lancaster has found a "palletable" way to trim his electric heat bills without tearing up his pickup on forest roads. Lancaster, 70, a retired Twin Falls County clerk, cuts and burns odd-sized and damaged pallets he gleaned from local industries. He also dismantles packing crates and an occasional small building, burning the unsalvageable lumber. He's worn out two electric chain saws and more chains than he can count. But, at present, Lancaster has an estimated 20 cords of wood piled behind his South Park Avenue home in what looks like a 17-foot muskrat's den. "I wouldn't recommend it unless you've got plenty of time," he said. Some of the pallets he purchased for a small fee. Others he receive free from manufacturers and soft drink bottlers. He uses a saw to rip the pallets along the two-by-fours into fire-size chunks, leaving the nails safely in place to be hauled out with fireplace ashes. "I have some heavy ashes, but so what?" he shrugs.

The economics of wood heat — A2

"It's my luck that every time I have a sharp chain, I hit a nail on the second cut," he said. Fortunately a retired neighbor is willing to sharpen his chains in exchange for an occasional haircut. Since he began burning wood in a heat-circulating fireplace, the utility bill for his all-electric home has never gone over $49. Lancaster said he and his wife Phoebe have burned many kinds of wood in the 32 years they've been married. The 1930s Depression taught them to be frugal, he said, and sagebrush was among the fuels used. In the first years after the Deadline Burn was opened to wood cutting in the South Hills, he hauled as many as six cords of pine out of the forest. Now the wood is farther from main roads, he said, and not as accessible for people of retirement age. Other sources of fuel he has used include telephone poles and jacket boards from sawmills. The former make ideal fireplace logs, he said, but he quit burning treated ends of the poles because of the intense heat and black smoke they generate.

Lancaster keeps his main pallet supplier a secret, but said he has burned platforms constructed of oak, poplar, maple, pine, locust and fir. Asked which he prefers, he said "pine to cut and oak to burn." —By comparison with other woods, he said pallets and packing crates are no dirtier to handle than cord wood cut from the stump. "Sagebrush — now that's dirty," he said. Nor is a cheap firewood source a substitute for good insulation, Lancaster believes. He recently added a north entry-way to the couple's home to minimize air flow, and used the same insulation standards for glass and walls that are built into the rest of the house. The couple trims waste in other ways as well. They maintain an ample garden and fruit trees, and compost their wet garbage to return nutrients to the soil. Lancaster said he is "constantly and continuously on the lookout" for new wood sources, though his backyard supply should provide supplemental heat for several winters. He also saves an occasional piece of unusually good oak or maple to supplement home building projects, he said. A picture frame to display snapshots of the couple's 19 grandchildren is presently in the works.

Cities to plan goals

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — City and county officials from the Magic Valley will meet with local legislators Monday to outline their priorities for the 1981 legislative session. The meeting begins at 6:30 p.m. at the Littletree Inn in Twin Falls and will be jointly sponsored by the Association of Idaho Cities and the Idaho Association of Counties. Topics discussed at the meeting will include a series of legislative proposals endorsed by the AIC Board of Directors last week. Those include taking permanent action on the 1 percent initiative, broadening local government's authority to collect user fees and establishing a severance tax on non-renewable resources exported from the state. The number one priority continues to be for the third year running, finishing work on the 1 percent initiative. AIC director Martin Peterson said. Local officials are facing the third year under the Legislature's freeze on the amount of property tax revenues they can collect. The freeze has led to reductions in the level and number of services cities and counties can provide. Moreover, because the Legislature has not permanently enacted the initiative, passed by voters in 1978, local and county officials complain they are forced to deal with tax provisions that expire each year. "I think our people generally are saying that the situation that we have been facing has made it extremely difficult to plan for the future and to do an optimal job of planning for local government. We need to find out once and for all what the solution is going to be," he said. If the initiative is implemented, local officials want it to include funding increases for growth. They also want the final tax package to be more flexible toward local governments than is now the case. "The last and most important thing for us is we don't want to see the Legislature place any greater restriction on the operations of the cities than it does on the state general fund budget, or on other governmental entities like public schools," he said. Another legislative priority will be a measure granting cities the authority to assess uncollected user fees as fees against property. Cities now have that

Electrical failure identified as cause of MGM holocaust

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — An electrical failure in a wall near the MGM Grand Hotel casino sparked the fire that flashed through the gaming area and killed at least 83 guests and employees, Fire Chief Roy Parrish said Saturday night. Clark County Fire Investigator Mike Patterson said the fire may have smoldered in the wall for eight hours before it burst out in a fireball that ravaged the gambling area in less than two minutes. The confirmed death toll in Friday's fire was 83. It was believed to be the second worst hotel fire in U.S. history, exceeded only by a fire in Atlanta in 1946 that took 119 lives. "It just exploded," Parrish told a news conference. "It burned through the wall and burst into the casino with such force that it knocked down one of the employees." He said a short-circuit was found in the attic above a delicatessen restaurant off the casino. The chief said the loss of life would have been lower if hotel guests only remained in their rooms. He said most of the victims were found in elevators and stairwells. Parrish said the swift-moving flames were "searching for a vertical shaft" and they found it in the elevators. He said the shafts provided an avenue for the deadly smoke to pour upward into the corridors. More than 24 hours after the holocaust, at least 350 persons were still missing. Most were believed to be alive and well, if unaccounted for, and scattered around the city. Some probably did not know a vast apparatus was seeking to identify survivors, many sought loved ones from whom they were separated, and a few were thought to be still in the hotel, dead.

Jane Clayton, Suicide Prevention Center director, said she and her staff manned a bank of telephones hooked to computers big enough to cope with the massive task of locating the thousands of MGM guests. "People call up looking for their families, or parts of them, and we check the cross references and indexes. Other people call in saying they're okay. We find others in the hospital.

Some of the ones we were looking for find out they are among the dead." Good news, she said, is received by anxious families with a sigh of relief. They have no words to express their depth of emotion. Bad news is delivered grimly by the coroner. "We sent out all kinds of good news," Miss Clayton said. "We called all over the country, Mexico and Canada, all night long.

1981 Legislature will face a number of tough problems

Editors Note: This is the last in a three-part series on the 1981 Legislature.

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

1981 Legislature

A Times-News survey of legislators and other state political figures reveals at least seven major questions needing resolution in the next session. They are:

- "Right-to-Work" Legislation. A right-to-work law outlaws use of the union shop job contract in Idaho, a step supporters of the ban say prevents "forced unionism," and opponents say is "forced union-busting."
- A right-to-work bill narrowly missed becoming law in the 1977 Legislature. That year, supporters and opponents of the measure packed public hearing rooms for emotional confrontations. During one hearing on the bill, feelings between the two groups became so heated that armed state policemen were called in to patrol the capitol building. Following this year's general election, the Idaho Freedom to Work Committee said it would again seek passage of a right-to-work law.
- House Minority Leader Patricia McDermott, O-Pocatello, predicted the measure would pass the House, where Republicans hold a large edge, but might not pass the Senate. If it does pass the Senate it would be vetoed by Gov. John Evans, she said.
- Evans never publicly declared his position in 1977, but privately told legislators he would veto the measure had it reached his desk.
- Land Use Planning. Idaho now has a statewide land-use planning law, passed in 1973. Last year, legislators passed a measure making the law subject to county-by-county approval. That bill was vetoed by Evans, who said such a step would, in effect, gut the law by removing uniformity and certainty.
- Gen. Road Budget. R-Soda Springs, the Senate Finance Team, told the Times-News the county option measure would again be introduced in the 1981 Legislature.

Weatherman radicals negotiate surrender

CHICAGO (UPI) — Fugitives Benjamin Dorn and William Ayers, who disappeared into the radical underground 10 years ago, were reported trying to reach a plea-bargaining agreement with Chicago prosecutors so they can get out of hiding.

The Chicago Sun-Times, in a copyright story published in Sunday's early editions, said Miss Dorn and Ayers had been negotiating with the staff of outgoing State's Attorney Bernard Carey through New York lawyer Michael Kennedy.

Miss Dorn, 38, and Ayers, 35, are leaders of the Weather Underground movement which stormed through the city's streets during the "Days of Rage" demonstrations in October 1969.

Kennedy, reached at his home in Bridgehampton, N.Y., refused to comment on any plans to surrender.

der Miss Dorn and Ayers, the Sun-Times reported.

No local or federal charges have apparently remained against Ayers since 1973, the newspaper said. Ayers is the son of Thomas G. Ayers, chairman of the executive committee of Commonwealth Edison Co.

But Miss Dorn, who was once on the FBI's Most Wanted list, still faces charges of aggravated battery, solicitation to commit mob action, resisting a peace officer and mob action stemming from the Days of Rage demonstrations held to protest the Vietnam War and coinciding with the Chicago Seven trial.

Kennedy was a member of the team that defended the Chicago Seven on charges they plotted riots during the 1968 Democratic Convention.

TWIN FALLS — Woodcutting provides fall recreation for many families in the Magic Valley. Most also believe they are saving money.

But, as prime fuelwood areas on national forest land dwindle within a 75-mile radius of the valley's population centers, the economics of wood heating also, requires a sharper pencil.

A popular spoof on the pitfalls of woodcutting estimates total gathering costs at somewhere above $4,000 a cord. Expenditures in this very hypothetical case include damages to a truck, felled by a tree and slitches to a foot split by an axe.

A more realistic accounting places the cost of gathering wood from the forest somewhere between the price of coal at a rail terminal and the cost of oil delivered.

The University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service has several good pamphlets on the subject, available for a nominal fee from county extension offices. Three such brochures are "Fuelwood Costs," "Firewood Selection" and "Wood-Burning Stoves."

Don Hanley, university extension forester, said fuelwood gatherers can estimate their costs by dividing annual chainsaw expenses, after wood permit fees by the number of cords gathered, and by computing labor and vehicle costs on a per-hour and per-mile basis.

If labor falls into the category of "recreational activity," Hanley said, costs for the item can be disregarded.

Vehicle costs make up the bulk of most woodcutters' expenses. Extension brochures prepared in 1979 assume an average cost of 15 cents a mile. The Internal Revenue Service will allow 20 cents a mile this year for tax purposes. Recreational vehicles typically cost more to operate than the family car.

Assuming an annual saw cost of $35, a round trip of 150 miles and a vehicle capable of hauling three-fourths cord per load, an average winter's supply would cost the gatherer $47 a cord without labor or wood-charge permits.

A wasteful average efficiency consumes pine at a rate enabling the gatherer to buy a comparable amount of coal at $80 a ton, according to a chart in the Extension Service brochure.

Open fireplaces are less efficient, and actually increase heating bills in instances where large amounts of warm air are drawn up through the chimney, sucking cold outside air through loose door jams and windows.

Wood species can be a key factor in "penning out" fuelwood savings. Some Idaho hardwoods, such as apple and locust, yield almost twice the heat value of softer species such as pine, aspen and poplar.

The high cost of gasoline to transport wood already may be showing in some woodgathering patterns in the Magic Valley.

Roy London, forester for the Twin Falls Ranger District, said the number of free-use fuelwood permits requested for the South Hills this year increased by only 24 from last year's total of 3,900.

London said he sees a gradual leveling off of demand for firewood from national forest lands south of Twin Falls.

At least one Twin Falls resident said he burns pallets rather than travel to the South Hills to collect wood (See related story).

Three trimming firms in Twin Falls and Filer report many of their customers now ask that they leave the usable firewood on the site. David Lockwood, owner of Kimberly Nursery's tree service, said he has no trouble disposing of unwanted hardwoods at $70 a cord, and softwoods at $60 a cord.

Ron Rhead, manager of The Fireplace Inc. of Twin Falls, said he does not recommend that his customers burn exclusively on pallets or sawmill ends. Rhead said the pile in some low-grade lumber can quickly lead to a chimney creosote problem.

Renewed interest in alternative wood sources, however, may indicate fewer farm shelter belts will be bulldozed into piles and burned without at least passing thought to the value of the heat being generated by the blaze.

While MGM Grand still burned

Crime wave followed fire

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Looters stole fire-blacked money from the burned-out casino at the MGM Grand Hotel and burglarized the vacated guest rooms just after the tragedy, police disclosed Saturday.

There also was a telephoned warning to police that several other hotels along the Las Vegas Strip would meet the same fate as the MGM if their demands were met.

At the time, thieves entered a deserted fire exit near the MGM and stole the firetriggers' money with which they buy their food, Fire Capt. Ralph Dinsman said.

A uniformed MGM Grand guard wearing soot-blackened shoes was arrested at a nearby casino carrying a roll of sooty cash and pumping-burned coins into a slot machine.

Police Sgt. Paul Conner said another looting suspect was chased and captured by a police officer while fleeing from the burning hotel with a bag of cash and jewelry.

Looting occurred, he said, for about 30 minutes after the casino went up in flames at 7:15 a.m. It stopped when police set up a cordon around the massive gambling palace.

While rescuers comforted the survivors at a refuge shelter in the Las Vegas Convention Center, police received a call from a man who said "You had a fire today. What would you do if you had a bomb tomorrow?"

An hour later police communications got an extortion call.

Conner said, "The voice said, 'The Scorpion organization has a bank account in Zurich, Switzerland. We want $25 million deposited there by Tuesday or the Dunes, Caesars Palace, the Desert Inn and Sahara will go the same way as the MGM.'"

Several spokesman Bill Jensen said the hotels named in the call were alerted.

Six bystanders who were hampering firefighters at the stricken hotel were bitten by police dogs and had to be treated at a hospital, Conner said. The dogs attacked after one man allegedly swung at a police officer.

Canada gives books to BSU

BOISE (UPI) — About $4,000 worth of Canadian books have been donated to the Boise State University Library by the Canadian government.

The 500-volume collection includes books of history, literature, science, social science and art, all by Canadian authors.

The donation from the Canadian Council of the Canadian Department of External Affairs is one of several made each year to assist American university libraries add to their collections of books by Canadians and about Canada.

A course in Canadian history which will utilize the books will be taught at BSU during the 1981 spring semester.

Whales beach themselves

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (UPI) — More than a dozen sperm whales — ranging from 15 to 40 feet long — beached themselves around St. Augustine Saturday and most of them died in the shallow water despite efforts to save them.

"We've sighted between 14 and 15 sperm whales," reported Vicki Blanchfield, spokesman for Sea World, near Orlando. "Eleven are dead and at least two are alive. We're not sure about the others."

"We have no idea why they did it," Ms. Blanchfield said. "It could be something wrong with their echo-location system or they simply may have been following a leader."

She said renewed efforts to push or pull the whales found alive into deeper water would be made at low tide, about 2 a.m. Sunday.

Hansen may get cabinet spot

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Sen. Clifford P. Hansen is being considered by President-elect Ronald Reagan's Cabinet, it was reported Saturday.

The Washington Star, in its early Sunday editions, said a "well-informed source close to the Reagan transition operation" told it the 69-year-old Hansen is the front-runner for the post, although no final decision has been made.

Hansen, now a rancher in Jackson, Wyo., served in the Senate between 1966 and 1978. He is a Republican.

Arabs schedule summit

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — Arab foreign ministers overrode protests by hardliners Saturday and voted to hold a planned summit meeting next week but Syria said it would boycott it.

Diplomatic sources said the stormy meeting called in an attempt to patch up Arab ranks actually led to more in disarray than before.

However, the summit slated to convene in Amman next week will take place even though all of the Arab League's 22 members may not be there, the sources said.

At the root of the present dispute was the Persian Gulf war and the way its consequences have polarized the so-called moderate and hardline camps of the Arab world.

The only agreement reached at the foreign ministers' meeting was to coordinate political and military muscle in opposition to Israel. It appeared to be more symbolic than substantive — a face-saving way of giving the ministers something they could claim to be unified about.

Sniper suspects escape

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Two men suspected of firing shots from a roof Saturday apparently escaped a SWAT team that stormed the building.

There were no injuries, although some shots were reported to have come from atop the building before the police team moved in.

Police said they could not find the two men who had been spotted on the roof of the building.

A SWAT team leader, from aboard a helicopter, directed the siege by about 30 policemen. They were aided by firefighters and their rigs.

Police said the incident occurred in a predominantly black area but was not racially related.

9 arrested on spy charges

ROME (UPI) — Nine men were arrested in a plot to sell blueprints to the Soviet Union of a secret advanced radar system slated for use by the United States and other NATO countries, police said Saturday.

The plot was followed by an Italian navy captain who tipped off police after he was approached by two of the men and asked to act as the middleman in selling the plans to the Soviets through an undisclosed East European nation.

Budget predicted this time it would be passed, and if vetoed, the veto would be overridden.

College Closure. With the state facing a fiscal shortfall, suggestions to close Idaho's only four-year state college, Lewis-Clark College at Lewiston that has taken on a new urgency. According to Rep. Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, such a move could save the state $3 million annually. Students now attending the school could attend the University of Idaho, 30 miles up the road at Moscow, he said.

North Idaho legislators, however, say they will fight the school closure. "That school is needed up here," said Sen. Lester Clemm, D-Try. "They've got a fight on their hands if that takes up that case. South Idaho always thinks it can practice economy at the expense of north Idaho."

authority on uncollected water and sewer fees.

The AIC proposal would extend that authority to user fees pertaining to property-related services. Such a provision could be of major importance to cities which decide to implement user fees to pay for fire protection and street lighting.

The provision would not apply to non-property-related services such as recreation programs and animal control.

While not sponsoring such legislation, the AIC will support a measure establishing a severance tax on non-renewable resources taken from the state, Peterson said.

Peterson said such a tax would be necessary if the legislature opts to eliminate the state inheritance tax. Funds from that tax are used to pay 15 percent of the costs of city sewer projects.

IC lobbyists will argue for using severance tax revenues for the sewer programs, funding for local agencies, and for reforestation and reclamation of abandoned mine sites, he said.

Other AIC proposals include:

- Increasing bond funding for highway maintenance.
- Dividing a new sales tax revenue distribution formula to avoid

Today's weather

Morning fog and chance of rain predicted

Twin Falls, Gooding, Jerome, and Burley-Rupert areas: Areas of night and morning fog or low clouds, locally persisting into this afternoon. Otherwise variable higher clouds through Monday. Slight chance of showers, mainly in rain, today and again Monday. Winds light easterly locally 10 to 15 mph during the afternoon. Lows 25 to 30, highs in the low to mid 40s both days.

Halley, Camas Prairie, and Wood River Valley: Patches of night and morning fog or low clouds, otherwise variable higher clouds through Monday. Slight chance of showers, mostly snow, today and again Monday. Lows mostly in the teens, highs in the mid 30s to low 40s both days.

Synopsis: A storm spreading across Idaho Friday, bringing precipitation to most of the state. Showers diminished over the north and southwest areas Friday night and in the southeast by Saturday afternoon.

The storm brought snow to some areas with the snow level dropping to 4,000 feet in the Pocatello and Idaho Falls areas. Some of the snowmelt areas of the state reported the first heavy snowfall of the season. Bogus Basin near Boise received eight inches and Deadwood in Valley County had nine inches of snow.

Low cloudiness and fog were prevalent in valleys of southern Idaho Saturday.

The next Pacific storm was beginning to increase high cloudiness in northern and western portions of the state by Saturday afternoon. This frontal system will bring increased chance of showers today, consisting of rain in the valleys and snow in the mountains. Little temperature change is expected.

Temperatures of 27 at Grangeville and 30 at McCall at 38 at Twin Falls were the lows for the state. Highs Saturday included 50 at Twin Falls and 48 at Gooding.

Ex-speaker McCormack dies at 88

DEBHAM, Mass. (UPI) — Former House Speaker John William McCormack, who spent 42 years in Congress, died Saturday. He was 88.

The Massachusetts Democrat had been in poor health for several months.

He died with several family members and friends at his bedside, his nephew, Edward J. McCormack Jr., said. "He had been up, and had lunch, but he just quietly passed away and stopped breathing."

Current House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said in Washington, "We have lost a great American. I have lost a close friend and political mentor of 40 years."

He was raised in South Boston in a block of tenements where 20 families shared a common bathroom. When his father died he became the head of the family at age 15. By age 22 he was admitted to the Massachusetts bar. He was the first Roman Catholic to be elected speaker of the House.

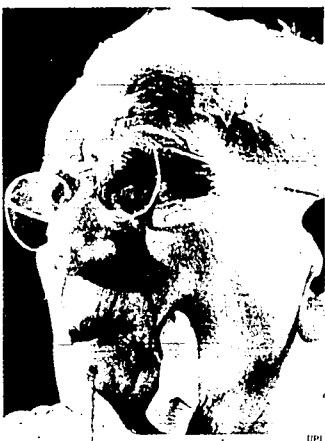

Massachusetts Gov. Edward King said, "John McCormack was integrity and character personified. He was an outstanding example of everything our faith and country stand for."

M McCormack's wife of 51 years died in 1971. His devotion to her was legendary, and one friend said that since her death he wore her hospital band.

"I have a feeling of contentment and happiness that the good Lord let me take the journey through life that I have done, the 43rd speaker of the House of Representatives since a 1876 interview."

M McCormack, first elected to the House in 1928, was known for his debating skill in his early years and for his loyalty to the Democratic Party and his constituents.

Ironically, he died on the 17th anniversary of the

JOHN McCORMACK
Nation's leaders mourn passing assassination of John F. Kennedy, with whom he did not always see eye to eye.

As speaker he had enormous influence in determining the course of government policy and he was charged with pushing President John Kennedy's legislative programs through the House. For McCormack it was a bitter pill.

Kennedy had promoted his brother, Edward M. Kennedy, into a Senate slot over McCormack's nephew, Edward J. McCormack Jr. In 1962, and there were strained relations even before that.

Those dated back to 1947 when Kennedy refused to sign a petition circulated by McCormack asking a Presidential pardon be given Boston Mayor James M. Curley, who had been convicted of mail fraud.

Economic future dim

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Recent economic reports do not augur well for consumers in the months ahead, despite indications this year's retail but sharp recession is beginning to fade.

The onerous news comes on three fronts — food, energy and housing. The quick turnaround of the recession has slowed, leaving interest rates near pre-recession peaks and choking the fragile recovery of the troubled housing industry.

Several reports released last week confirm business activity began to snap back in the July-September quarter after suffering a record drop in the April-June period. The Commerce Department reported the real gross national product — the value of the nation's goods and services — rose 0.9 percent in the third quarter following a 9.6 percent plunge in the second quarter, the largest decline since World War II.

The department also said major corporations posted a 7.9 percent gain in profits in the third quarter following a 19.6 percent drop in the previous quarter.

While the corporate profits report is a sign the recession is over, inflation remains a persistent problem and food prices are a continuing culprit.

Although "food-inflation" for 1980 is projected at 8.7 percent, the lowest since 1977, food prices are expected to rise steadily over the next few months.

Food prices will go up 12.2 percent next year, the Agriculture Department forecast last week, spurred by increases for meat, poultry and eggs.

On the energy front, economists warn the relatively stable energy prices of recent months will not continue if the Iran-Iraq war persists. Although neither country is a major exporter to America, the reduction in production eventually will pinch U.S. allies and drive world prices up.

According to a recent study by Evan Economics, a Washington forecasting firm, "The situation in the Middle East has deteriorated so rapidly that another major oil shock is possible within the next few months."

The outlook for the staggering housing industry forecast last week, spurred by interest rates started up again, meaning higher mortgage charges.

After the Federal Reserve Board boosted the discount rate it charges banks, the banks hiked their rates.

Atlanta searchers find clues

ATLANTA (UPI) — A volunteer search squad Saturday found a bloody knife and a bloodstained towel during a hunt for clues in the mysterious slayings and disappearances of 19 black Atlanta children.

Search coordinator Mack Henderson said the items were found in suburban DeKalb County near where 11-year-old Christopher Richardson vanished June 9th while walking to a swimming pool near his home.

He is one of four black children still missing since the killings and disappearances began 16 months ago.

Eleven children have been found dead.

Henderson said police could not immediately determine whether the knife and towel were connected to the boy's disappearance. The two items were among 15 shopping bags of material found in searches Saturday that have been sent to the state Crime Laboratory for analysis.

Mae West dies at age 88

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mae West, the voluptuous "come up and see me sometime" siren of the 1930s, died Saturday. She was 88.

A Police Department spokesman said Miss West died of apparent heart failure.

He said Miss West died at her home in the Ravenwood Apartments in Hollywood.

Miss West was released from Good Samaritan Hospital earlier this month following three months of care for a stroke and a concussion.

Stanley Musgrove, a spokesman for the actress, said at the time she was being cared for at her home by Paul Novak, her companion for the past 25 years.

The husky-voiced actress with the hour-glass figure had a fabulous and stormy career that made her name a household word and earned her a fortune. Exhibiting a 37-27-37 figure clothed in what she called a "sex personality," she earned a flat $450,000 a picture during the peak of her popularity in the 1930s.

The vintage sex queen came out of seclusion in 1970 to appear in "Myra Breckinridge," her first motion picture since "The Heat's On" in 1943. "Myra" was another sex film, but with a different slant. The movie was a bomb, but Miss West charmed her audiences — the grandchildren and great-grandchildren of her first fans.

Far from acting the dumb blonde in her films, Miss West made her mark as a world-wise sexpot who caused the most innocent words to drip with sexual implications. Miss West's explosive sex appeal overflew from what she implied rather than what she did.

MAE WEST
... the sultry siren

Later in her nightclub act, she used to deliver her famous line, "Come up and see me sometime," in a low voice that mixed suggestion and sarcasm.

In the 10 films she appeared in, she was never allowed to kiss her leading men. Movie-makers saw to it Miss West was displayed in fluffy and lacy low-cut gowns, often lounging on a divan or bed.

During World War II her burlesque figure inspired the Royal Air Force to name inflated life jackets worn by airmen "Mae Wests."

A playwright as well as an actress, Miss West first gained fame on the New York stage where her plays and performances were both condemned as being "too sexy" and praised for their wit and daring.

Despite the star's longtime reign as one of America's most sought-after vamps, Miss West was only married once — and she denied that for some time.

She finally admitted she married a one-time dancer named Frank Wallace in 1911 in Milwaukee after Wallace filed suit in Los Angeles in 1937 to force her to recognize him as her lawful husband. She later obtained a divorce.

Born Aug. 17, 1892, in Brooklyn, N.Y., Miss West broke into vaudeville at age 5. A year later she joined a Brooklyn stock company and began getting comedy and dancing roles. She became one of the original shimmy dancers.

Miss West's first big break came in the 1920s on Broadway where she achieved a certain notoriety as a daring playright and actress. In 1927 she hit the headlines with "Sex," a play that ran for more than two years.

She moved to Hollywood and in 1931 starred in "Night After Night." Her biggest box-office hit was "She Done Him Wrong," opposite Cary Grant. It was in this movie that she picked up the immortal line, "Come up and see me sometime." Another film with long-remembered words was "My Little Chickadee" with comedian W.C. Fields.

"Diamond Lil," a play she wrote and performed in during her Broadway days, was revived in 1949 when she returned to Broadway for a repeat performance. The critics loved it and gave her rave reviews.

Thanks to government reform, Reagan has an edge

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan will discover when he takes command in January that there is at least one rose among the thorns of office, and for this he can thank his predecessor.

Mr. Carter's reforms of the Civil Service seem to be working. Possibly, just possibly, Mr. Reagan may be able not only to form a government, but also to govern.

If things work out so happily, Mr. Reagan will be the first president since Franklin Roosevelt to bring off the trick Harry Truman railed against the Washington bureaucracy. Dwight Eisenhower successfully had commanded whole armies, but he could not get civilians in the Navy Department to do his bidding. John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford at various times voiced the same complaint. They gave orders, but nothing happened.

Their troubles were rooted in the same intractable soil. The president has power to appoint only 2 or 3 percent of federal personnel. The 97 or 98 percent who do the work — or as the case may be, do not do the work — hold their jobs under the rules of Civil Service. And until Mr. Carter came along, it was virtually impossible to fire even one of them.

The first fruits of any "reform" should be approached with caution, but even so, some figures recently obtained by the Washington Star are encouraging. Since enactment of the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978, the number of federal workers fired for all causes has increased 10 percent, and the number fired for incompetence has soared by 15 fold.

In 1977, the Star reports, 9,700 workers were dropped from federal payrolls for one reason or another, but only 115 of them were fired for poor performance. In the 1980 fiscal year, it appears, 10,700 were dropped, and 1,738 of them were ousted for failure to measure up. In the January-March quarter of 1980 alone, 709 incompetents were flat-out fired. That leaves only a hundred thousand to go.

This is bound to be good news for an incoming administration that hopes to institute some reforms of its own. Mr.

Reagan will be able to fill roughly 4,000 top positions in the executive agencies, but unless his own supercrats are able to direct the people down below, his most ambitious programs slowly will lose momentum in the bureaucratic goo.

My own wishful thought is that the Carter reforms, admirable as they are, should have been much extended. What was so wrong in the bad old days? There was a time when political victors could turn the old rascals out, the better to put their own rascals in. This was called the spoils system, and it developed an undeservedly poor reputation.

For a specific example, consider the postal service. Can anyone truly contend that today's U.S. Postal Service, dominated by powerful unions with costly work rules, is more efficient than the old Post Office Department? — When — local postmasters, clerks and carriers were political appointees, they had to perform. Party bosses would not tolerate conspicuous incompetence. Verily it is said that those who live by the ward may die by the ward, but the perils and rewards of old-fashioned party politics provided incentives we do not have today.

To pursue the point: Within the Department of Agriculture the Soil Conservation Service employs some 13,000 workers. Mr. Reagan can appoint only eight of them. All the rest are untouchables under the Civil Service. It might be a most salutary development if Republican chairman, state by state, had power to reward their faithful workers with at least the 788 jobs in grades 13 through 16. This way lies party accountability.

"Alas, our politics have become so sanitized and antiseptic that any such proposal would set off cries of wild alarm. Government unions would howl like savages. The folks at Common Cause would be aghast. Ralph Nader would take to his couch in despair. But when a Republican president gave the word to a Republican secretary, who gave the word to Republican subordinates in regions, states and counties, by damn something would happen down on the farm. And if things went badly, 788 hungry Democrats would be waiting in the wings for 1984.

Overturn police car action

Nearly a year ago, in an editorial listing goals for 1980, we said the Twin Falls City Council had to work hard to regain public trust.

Its city manager problems largely behind it, the council this year has done an admirable job of governing.

Until last week.

Unbelievably, council infuriated the public by botching a simple function: the awarding of a bid for three new police cars.

Council (1) accepted the highest bid (2) thereby awarding it to an out of town dealer (3) ignored the recommendation of its city manager (4) ignored the advice of its legal council (5) spent $1,800 more than it had to and (6) now faces the possibility of a suit.

The action clearly violates Idaho's bidding law. Attorney Charles Brumbach, before the vote was taken, told council officials they are obligated to seek the lowest and most responsible bid. They did not.

The bid should have gone to Ace Hansen Chevrolet, which submitted the lowest bid in terms of the specifications sought. That had actually been concluded in a council work session prior to its public meeting. But then during the meeting Police Chief Tim Qualls said he preferred a larger car and council approved the bid of Don Ovit of Burley.

Hansen and Bill Workman Ford representatives were first stunned and then angry, and rightfully so. Twin Falls residents should be just as outraged.

Not only did council treat two local dealers unfairly, but it made a mockery of its concern for spending cutbacks in light of the 1 percent initiative.

Mayor Hank Woodall is on the record as having said what is done is done.

We beg to differ. If council members have sworn to uphold the law and govern in the manner in which they were elected to serve, this action should be overturned immediately.

So this is transition

WASHINGTON — The Republicans are in power and there are going to be tremendous changes in government. Right? No, wrong.

If isn't that they are reluctant to make the changes — it's just that they can't. Thousands of patronage jobs are available, but no one can take them, and I'll tell you why. There is no available housing in Washington for the middle-management people who are supposed to take over the town.

The sad truth of the matter, as the GOP loyalists are starting to discover, is what the Democrats have learned in the last four years. Real estate rules the town and, although many people will be out in the streets, nobody is moving out of town.

The people of Reagan's team think this is very unfair. As one told me the other day, "How can we move in if we don't move out?"

"I guess the people you're firing have no place to go."

"But how can we increase military spending, cut taxes, and balance the budget, our supporters have no place to live?"

"You should have thought of that during the campaign. Anyone who lives in this city would have told you that no one intended to pull out if Carter lost the election. Our 550,000 homes are now worth $350,000. If the Republicans want to come to Washington, they're going to have to pay through the nose."

"I'm aware of that," he said angrily. "I went out to see a Carter appointee yesterday and asked him if he would be willing to give up his house for his replacement. He just laughed at me and said, 'You can take my office away from me, but my home is my castle.' I told him he owed it to our American political system to move out of Washington when the other party came to power. He said he had no intention of leaving, that he was joining a law firm and would be representing all the clients he had tried to throw in jail while he was in the government."

"I'm beginning to learn that," he said. "I went to see another high official in Carter's administration and asked him when he was moving back home. He told me he planned to stay through Reagan's entire first term, because with all the changes that would take place he'd be in heavy demand as a consultant." He said he had messed things up so badly in his department that he was the only one in Washington who understood it."

"That's usually the case when someone leaves the government. He is then in great demand as a consultant."

"What am I supposed to do?" he said. "How can we ask our people to come to Washington if they have no place to live?"

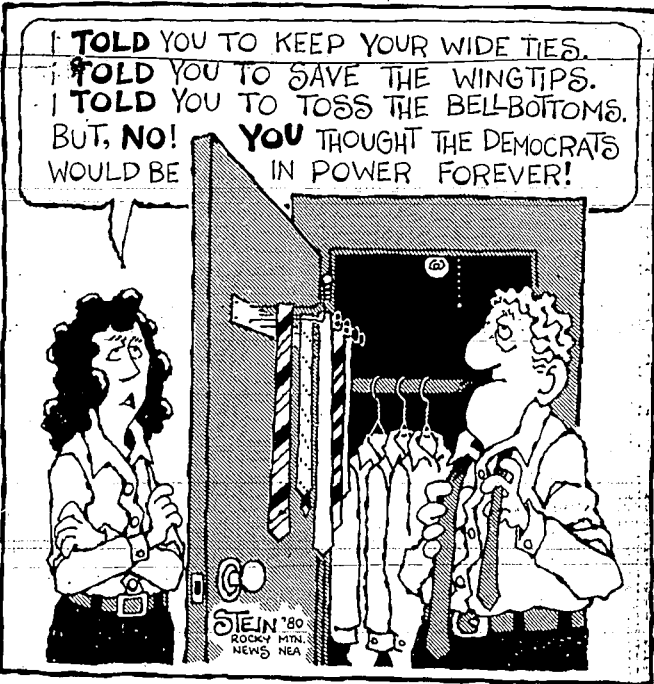

"You could build Quonset huts on the Mall. They did it during the war. Or maybe you could put mobile homes on the back lawn of the White House. You could hook up water and electricity and set up a laundromat in the East Room. Of course, you wouldn't want to put a trailer in the Rose Garden, because that's a national treasure."

"You're not being very helpful."

"I really don't have any great ideas for you," I told him. "Reagan won because he attacked Carter's inflationary policies. The biggest inflationary problem is the housing in this town."

"But how can Reagan do anything if his own people aren't here in town?"

"He can't. That's why so many Democrats have taken his landslide victory in stride."

No tax cut

Editor, Times-News:

I don't think we can stand a cut in taxes.

We have to have so much to run our state and our federal government. We do need a cut in the way our officials are spending our money needlessly. There is so terrific much waste. They say our big companies are paying exorbitantly large taxes. Yes, they do, but where do they get the money to pay their taxes? They collect it off of the other fellow. Most of it comes from the little man.

As I see it, if they cut taxes it will only help the big man (corporate).

The little man will pay the bill same as has been doing in the past.

For instance, the Idaho Power pays a lot of taxes, yes, they do, but where do they get the money to do so?

We are slaves to electricity. I know a man and his wife that are milking 100 cows. If they did not have electricity they would have to change their system pronto.

I feel I get more in return for the dollars I pay the Idaho Power than most anything else. We cannot afford to cut taxes. We should add more to them.

We are going to have federal sales tax if we keep spending at the present rate.

He's a new creature

Editor, Times-News:

The letter "The Real Harry" (Nov. 20) gave the impression that Robert Johnson would have taken a stick to the "prodigal son" in the Bible.

I know practically nothing of the commentator's past life; I do know he has become a new creature in Christ. From my own experience I doubt that any descendant of Adam, except the Saviour Himself, could do otherwise than hide in the bushes from the Divine presence.

Humans in general do not appreciate enough the provision that has been made for a new beginning; we can change to the new humanity headed by Christ. We receive God's spirit in our hearts on believing on him.

Frustration of protecting child's loss of innocence

BOSTON — It was dark outside and snowing. The first flakes of the year, always silent and magic, had begun camouflaging the cars, the streets, even the garbage cans around their house.

For one night at least, it seemed that any griminess in the world would be cut, be whitewashed.

But inside the house, the people in front of the television set were watching the newest version of an old story, "The Diary of Anne Frank."

The background of Anne's life in her family's hideaway was not new to the grown-ups. They watched the performance with a different eye, a different hide. But the girl beside them wasn't as tough.

She had not learned yet to take magazine covers of starving children off the breakfast table. She had not learned to discuss the inhumane-intellectually. She had not learned what grown-ups learn: to put pain in its place.

She was still a child who closed her eyes at scary parts in the movies, and was afraid of Anne's Nazi murderers.

When it was over, well past her bedtime, the girl turned to her mother and said — didn't ask, but said — "That couldn't happen here."

Her mother paused for a moment and answered honestly, "I hope not. The girl, unsatisfied, got under her quilt and said directly, "I just want you to tell me that everything is going to be okay until I grow up." The mother answered, "I know you do. I'd like to tell you that, too."

They had been here before, talking about cancer and war, accidents and evil. At some of these moments, the girl wanted a gift of reassurance: The mother wanted to give it to her. The child wanted protection. The parent wanted to protect. It is in the nature of things, of parent and child things.

Yet somehow as the girl grew older her mother was unable or unwilling to frost reality with an inch of fresh snow. She was reluctant to give false assurances.

When the girl was a baby, safety was a matter of putting covers on electrical sockets and gates on stairways. Now, this mother was more conscious of her own inability to protect her child's safe world.

Halfway to adulthood, children have to be armed with their own awareness.

But it wasn't quite that simple. There are always the contradictions. We don't want to frighten kids and don't want to lie to them. We want to be realistic but not ghoulish. We want to make them feel secure but not sanguine.

She knew a woman who parented by terror. The woman's mind was a full of every known childhood disaster from crib death to choking. She enlarged her list of cautions until her sons were straitjacketed in her paranoia. Yet the children remained, like all of us, vulnerable to accidents and events.

She knew a young woman who floated into a college dormitory untouched and out of touch. She was almost blessedly unaware of bad intentions, of the dark side of human nature. But the very first blow — a flawed man, not an evil one — left her crippled.

Parents are the careful people. We want to wrap the children in gauze. We want to save them from war, disease, evil. We have an investment in believing the world will be good to them.

But we are equally aware they may be caught between the ideal and the real world, between their good impulses and the dangers.

So we tell them to be trusting and not to take candy from strangers. We tell them to be generous and not to let anyone take advantage of them. We tell them to believe that people are good and watch out for those who are evil.

We worry that some will be trapped, like Anne Frank at the end of her diary and to be "trying to find a way of becoming what I would so like to be, and what I could be, if there weren't any other people living in the world" — if there wasn't any evil in the world.

The mother watched the snow falling past the window next to her daughter's bed. She wanted to paint and promise a safe world to her, but she didn't. This is, she thought, one of the things parents do. We supervise our children's loss of innocence before the world does it for us.

Evans sets pay hike

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans said he will recommend to the 1981 Legislature an overall 11.5 percent pay increase for state employees.

Evans, appearing on KTVB-TV's Viewpoint program, also said he would not propose an increase in general taxes, but added that it might be necessary to raise gasoline taxes and motor vehicle registration fees to provide more highway maintenance money.

Evans said he believes Idaho's economy will rebound enough during the last half of 1981 to support a tight budget, including the pay hike, without increasing individual income or sales taxes.

"I've come to the conclusion that the best way to handle this very critical financial crunch that the state is facing is to not propose any general-fund tax increase."

Evans said he will leave it up to the Legislature to choose the best way to raise money for highway maintenance costs, but said he would suggest some possibilities, including a 2-cent gasoline tax increase and corresponding registration fee hikes.

This year, the Legislature refused to raise taxes to provide for highway maintenance and construction funding.

Trout stocking is planned

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. will stock American Falls Reservoir beginning in April with about 32,000 rainbow trout a year under terms of an agreement between the utility and the Idaho Fish and Game Commission.

The agreement, announced by Idaho Power Vice President Logan Lanham and Department of Fish and Game Director Jerry M. Conley, is to compensate for turbine mortality losses and supplement the sport fishery in the reservoir and in the Snake River below the company's American Falls power plant.

It is subject to approval by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and is intended to replace a FERC order, calling for a three-year study to determine the mortality rate of fish moving downstream through the plant's turbines.

Lanham and Conley said the study started by Idaho Power last year proved to be unfeasible.

Idaho Power has agreed to stock 8,000 pounds of hatchery-produced rainbow trout — at a size of four fish per pound — annually for the duration of its FERC license. The agreement also states that the company will finance a two-year, $60,000 fish and game study to evaluate the effectiveness of the stocking program.

If the stocking program fails to benefit the fisher as stipulated in the agreement, the commission will recommend to FERC and the utility changes in the release program.

Man dies when truck drives over cliff

DONNELLY, Idaho (UPI) — A Kuma man was killed Thursday when the dump truck he was driving rolled down a 70-foot embankment at Cascade Lake.

G. D. Hehlin, 68, was working on a construction job at the Wagon Wheel subdivision when his truck rolled down the cliff, Valley County Coroner Marvin Heikkila said.

The City Council in their Council meeting of November 17, 1980, passed a resolution requesting the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to delay the approval of an application which would eventually direct Christian Church Homes of Idaho, Inc. to build 60 units of housing for low income Senior Citizens and handicapped persons.

The City Council in the same resolution requested the Community Development Director, LaMar Orton, to review and update the Housing Assistance Plan (HAP) that was established in 1978 to determine if the HAP should be decreased, left as is, or increased.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH HOMES OF IDAHO, INC., IN AN EFFORT TO BE OF ASSISTANCE TO THE COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT DIRECTOR, WISHES TO REQUEST ALL OF THOSE INTERESTED IN THIS TYPE OF HOUSING AND CARE PROGRAM TO MAKE THEIR INTEREST KNOWN BY DIRECTING A LETTER TO CHRISTIAN CHURCH HOMES OF IDAHO, INC., 8732 MOUNTAIN VIEW DRIVE, TWIN FALLS, IDAHO 83301

To comply with the contract under which Christian Church Homes of Idaho, Inc., has with HUD, we must state that any letters we receive can in no way be interpreted to be an invitation to make application for residency. At the proper time, not to exceed 120 days, prior to our opening, we will advertise for applications which will specifically request applications from all ethnic and religious oriented persons.

THIS ANNOUNCEMENT IS PAID FOR BY CHRISTIAN CHURCH HOMES OF IDAHO, INC., HAROLD D. COOK, PRESIDENT.

Coroner rules Boise woman died of aspirin

BOISE (UPI) — The death of a 22-year-old Boise woman last month was caused by an accidental overdose of aspirin, Ada County Coroner Mike Johnson said.

Linda Nelson died on Oct. 19 after suffering a viral infection, Johnson said.

Blood test results showed there was a buildup of aspirin in Ms. Nelson's system, Johnson said.

He estimated she had been taking about 20 aspirins a day for about a week while she suffered the virus. He said Ms. Nelson probably took that amount thinking she would get more relief if she took more aspirin.

"Aspirin particles have certain compounds, and when so many build up, you reach a toxic level," Johnson said.

He said the incident was "not real uncommon," but he said many times such deaths are not fully diagnosed. Ms. Nelson's death originally was thought to be caused by viral encephalitis.

Johnson said reactions to an aspirin overdose varies, depending on the person's weight, height and physical condition.

Student won't tell of source

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — High school senior Eric Wolf says he'll go to jail if he has to but he won't tell school authorities the name of the student cocaine dealer he interviewed for a story in the prize-winning school newspapers.

Principal Roy Malo of Wilson High School says he hopes to apprehend the purported drug dealer without getting his name from Wolf.

Mallo insists, however, the young reporter has a responsibility "as a student and a citizen" to name the youngster he says he saw selling cocaine in a Wilson hallway.

Mallo said his own investigation has failed to identify the alleged dealer or confirm Wolf's story. He said Portland School District investigators and possibly city police will be called next week.

Wolf said he was able to get the story for the student newspaper, the Statesman, only because he promised the dealer he would not be named.

Wolf said he can "see the administration's point of view." He added, however, "The same First Amendment that protects professional journalists should protect high school journalists... I'd go to jail if I had to. Under no circumstances would I reveal my source."

Mallo Jones, faculty adviser to the Statesman, said she supports Wolf. "Morally, I want the kid (the dealer) caught," she said, "but I am a newspaper person and I teach the students the value of their constitutional rights."

The story described "a quiet black student who dresses in the latest designer clothes" making a sale of cocaine for $50 to another student in the school.

The story quoted the seller, named "Jeff," as saying, "I'm selling cocaine like it's just a business — a job. Some guys work in a grocery store. Some guys cook hamburgers in a fast-food place. I sell cocaine."

The story said "Jeff" also sold marijuana, PCP and Quaaludes at the school.

The story was part of a package of articles on cocaine use, which included a report on dangers of the drug and interviews with student users.

Mallo conceded there probably was some cocaine sold at the school. "As far as I know, it's not rampant, but I can't say it's not possible to get some," he said. "That's true at every high school in the country."

The Statesman was named last week as one of five high school papers in the nation to receive the Paeffmar award for excellence for 1979-80.

THEISEN MOTORS ANNOUNCES THE Greatest Clearance Sale In Almost 30 Years.

Emmett Harrison announced today that Theisen Motors is starting a 7 day clearance sale of all the new and used cars on his lot.

"This will be our biggest sale in almost 30 years of business. Because of the high flooring costs, we must cut our inventory. We will be open today from 1-5 and for the next 7 days you will never find a better car buy than at Theisen Motors. We have over a million dollar inventory too and all must go. We are passing tremendous savings on to you.

Today and for the next 7 days you can save over $1000 on a brand new 1981 ZEPHYR. This is a really great automobile and American made with plenty of room. EPA 23 MPG City - 34 MPG Highway.

If you want a sportier car you can save over $1100 on a 1981 Mercury Cougar XRT. With an EPA of 23 MPG City - 34 MPG Highway. This is one of the sportiest looking yet economical cars on the road today.

If you prefer the ultimate in luxury, safety and comfort why not a beautiful 1981 Mercury Marquis. Slicker price was $9317, but for the next 7 days this car is featured at $7888. A savings of $1429.

Also we just received a shipment of 1981 Hondas. All styles and colors and for the next 7 days at tremendous savings.

In our stock we now have a complete line of the all new 1981 Mercury Lynx. With an EPA of 30 MPG City - 44 MPG Highway and equipped with front wheel drive this has to be one of the sportiest cars ever introduced into the Lincoln/Mercury lineup. For the next 7 days this car is only $5785.

Now let's talk about previously owned automobiles. We have perhaps one of the best selections in the Northwest and every one has been shopped for this 7 day clearance sale. For instance we have a 1976 Plymouth Fury that books for $2175, we have slashed this car 50% and passed the saving on to you. This Plymouth is now $1100. Also a 1975 Mercury Monarch Ghia 4 door equipped with air that was $2495 and is now $1400. This is the year some people think the best buy is a used car because they have depreciated from the original cost to 30-80%. If you agree I urge you to come in... We are open today from 1-5."

Our Congratulations and gratitude to:

Mr. Larry Arbaugh and Mr. Wiler Cobby, (Sales Managers), for supplying the leadership that enabled Theisen Motors to sell over 38% of the American made passenger cars sold in Magic Valley and for making Theisen Motors the No. 1 Lincoln/Mercury dealer in the U.S.

New winter hours at Theisen Motors

It was announced today that new winter hours for Theisen Motors will be from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. We suggest early morning shopping as a way to beat the rush. Drop in and have a cup of coffee.

TWIN FALLS — New line of '81 Cougars arrived today at Theisen Motors. All new 4 door models, sport coupes, and 2 door models. Luxury and economy in one car.

A REPORT TO OUR FRIENDS

Thank you for making Theisen Motors the great dealership that it is today. It's people like you that have made us the number one selling car dealership in the Magic Valley and in the United States. For that reason we pledge ourselves to our customers and to these goals:

1. To give the finest automotive service anywhere in the United States.
2. To always try to "Put ourselves in Your Shoes" in solving a service problem.
3. To be professional in sales, service and leasing.
4. To make our customer's ownership an enjoyable and rewarding experience.
5. To be the Easiest Place in the World to Buy a Car!

You tell us everyday by your many positive comments that we are succeeding in our efforts. We are privileged to represent Lincoln/Mercury products, unquestionably the innovative leader in automotive technology and planned innovations for the future. Having you as a customer is an even greater privilege.

Thank you sincerely for the confidence you have in Theisen Motors. You have my personal assurance that every department of this company will continue to dedicate themselves to serving your needs efficiently and professionally. "Our Reputation Grows."

Turn to page B-16 for more details on our tremendous clearance sale.

Let's Start A War On Waste!

In business and industry today, examples of needless waste are everywhere, which we at Theisen Motors are trying to avoid. Remember the two causes of waste are 1. Lack of knowledge and 2. Lack of attention. We have hired the most skilled technicians in the world to repair your automobile, Bobby Wills our Service Manager assisted by Whitey Jones and Larry Cobb and the rest of the service dept. will encourage you to ask questions about your car as to cost and time for repair. Our Honda repair technician Morrill Lewis has just returned from a two week seminar in Oregon to keep up with the latest developments in servicing your import. Our desire is to serve you BUT we will not do unnecessary repair and we WILL give you the best service in Magic Valley. That is the only way to do business.

Ladies in waiting

It's not easy being 'the girl' of the world's most eligible man

LONDON (UPI) — When Lady Diana Spencer walks through fashionable Kensington to the apartment she shares with three other girls, neighborhood kids skip after her chanting: "Prince Charles' girl friend."

The tall, willowy, 19-year-old daughter of wealthy Earl Spencer smiles and says nothing.

In that silence is perhaps the best clue that she is a serious contender for the title of Princess of Wales and, beyond that, Queen of England.

If there is one quality in a woman that would particularly appeal to Prince Charles, 32, the heir to the throne, it is the ability to dodge the salvos of questions fired by the press.

His other favorite of the moment, Lady Amanda Knatchbull, 22, granddaughter of the late Earl Mountbatten, also never discusses their relationship.

But any number of young ladies whose birth and breeding entitled them to serious consideration as his consort have talked themselves out of the race. It may be hard not to succumb to envious friends that you dated the son of Queen Elizabeth, but it generally ends the relationship.

Some think Diana's older sister, Lady Sarah, may have been too frank when she returned from a holiday with Charles two years ago and reported, "He's not ready for marriage." Outside of a double-date — she accompanied Charles while Diana teamed with his goodlooking brother, Prince Andrew, 20 — they were not seen out together again.

If Lady Diana won't talk, Britain's newspapers are less reticent. Diana's mother, now Mrs. Frances Shand-Kydd, has expressed her outrage and grief at the insinuations in some of the material written about her daughters and the distortion she perceives of friendship with the royal sons that goes back to childhood.

Bogus bingo card bilks church fund

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — Police say Virginia Teeple of Crystal Spring, Pa., found a sure-fire way to win bingo games — print your own card.

Teeple, 39, won $1,000 in a special bingo game at St. Bridget's Roman Catholic Church last Wednesday night, but sponsors checked her card after she left and discovered 20 of the 24 numbers on the card had been changed expertly.

The woman already had left, but the church immediately told the bank to stop payment on the check. When Ms. Teeple attempted to cash the check and couldn't, she called the church.

The church told her she received the wrong check and would she please drop by and pick up the correct one. When she went to the church, Richmond detectives picked her up instead.

She was carrying a small ink pad and dyes of every number that could appear on the card, police said, adding the dyes were exact copies of those on the card.

Police said Ms. Teeple would erase the original number on the card, hit the ink pad with a pen and print the new number on the card.

She was charged with attempted grand larceny through false pretense.

"The word (in Pennsylvania) is come to Richmond," said Ms. Teeple. "There are a lot of games and a lot of destroy a promising relationship.

Royal observers think that is what happened when Charles and the highly eligible Lady Jane Wellesley, daughter of the Duke of Wellington, were getting to know each other on a trip to the Wellington estates in Spain.

There were more journalists than trees.

In some instances, press scavenging of the past has destroyed reputations. Old lovers have been searched out. In one case an ungalant former boyfriend admitted he and Charles' favorite escort of the moment had lived together. End of romance. In another, a gossip columnist claimed he had a risqué photograph that wiped another name off the list.

The sort of life that is not unusual for liberated young women today apparently disqualifies a candidate for Charles' hand — and one woman columnist angrily demanded to know why, when Charles was obviously not a virgin, his wife had to be one.

Nevertheless, there has been stress on Diana's unblemished reputation as a big plus in the sweepstakes.

This did not stop the Sunday Mirror from claiming exclusive information of secret meetings between Diana and Charles that went on until the early morning hours.

Charles has had more girlfriends than most of the monarchs in the long history of the British throne, though probably no more than his great-great-grandfather, King Edward VII, who was a legend in Paris as well. There has been no pattern in his social life. He has dated brunettes, blondes and redheads, tall girls and short girls, Protestant girls and Catholic girls.

All of them were pretty, however. And all were upper-middle or upper-class.

His friends have included Princess Nora of Liechtenstein, beautiful socialites Davina Sheffield and Anna Wallace, Countess Angelika Lazensky who is Czech, Laura Jo Watkins of San Diego, Calif., daughter of an American admiral who was Charles' guest when he made his first speech in the House of Lords in 1981, Lady Leonora Grosvenor, daughter of the enormously rich Duke of Westminster, who finally married Charles' cousin, the Earl of Lichfield. And many, many others.

Space habitat proposed

There is growing interest among NASA officials in development of a permanent space base later in this decade to serve as an orbiting service station for the expanding space business they feel sure is coming. The proposed "Space Operations Center" shown in this artist's sketch, will house eight people at first. The large cylinders are the habitation modules, linked to the service modules below.

Brucellosis can infect people unnecessarily

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Brucellosis, a disease that animals spread to humans, continues to infect people in the United States despite the efforts of a federal-state eradication program that began 46 years ago.

Yet health authorities say the disease, also known as undulant fever or Malta fever, could be wiped out if people would pay more attention to it. "Breaking the chain of transmission demands full cooperation among farmers, abattoirs, slaughterhouses, government veterinarians and physicians," said Dr. William R. Barclay, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Most human cases of brucellosis come from swine and cattle. Those most at risk are farmers, livestock workers, dairymen, veterinarians, meat inspectors, packing plant workers, butchers and others who work with infected livestock and contaminated products. The disease, rarely transmitted from person to person, produces generalized aches and pains, headache, profuse sweating and a prolonged fever which goes up and down. The illness can be treated with antibiotics and, although chronic brucellosis can cause prolonged ill health, it is rarely fatal.

Dr. Robert I. Wise, a specialist on the disease from the Veterans Administration medical center at Togus, Maine, reported the Nov. 21 issue of the AMA journal that after years of decline, there was a resurgence of bovine brucellosis in the mid-1970s in the United States.

There were 18,401 herds of cattle known to be infected with the highly contagious disease in 1975 — an increase of 15 percent over the previous year. More than a third of those herds were in Texas and most of the others were in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma and Tennessee.

Although authorities believe many cases are missed, doctors reported 249 human cases of brucellosis across the nation in 1974. In 1975, that number increased to 528. In 1978, 271 cases were reported to the federal Center for Disease Control, more than half in packing plant workers. In 1978, the number of brucellosis cases reported in humans dropped to 172.

When the eradication program started in 1934, more than 11 percent of the cattle and 45 percent of the dairy herds in the United States were infected with brucellosis. Wise said approximately 20 percent of the general adult population then was believed to have been exposed at some time to the disease.

The disease is rarely spread by food now, but outbreaks continue in the meat packing industry and Wise said there is no successful program to protect packing plant workers from diseased animals brought to slaughter.

"Nationwide eradication of bovine and porcine brucellosis is the only sure way of protection," he said. Norway, Sweden, Finland, Denmark, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia and Romania have wiped it out.

Barclay, in an editorial accompanying Wise's report, said that for the United States to have similar success, doctors must recognize and report it to public health authorities. In addition, farmers and slaughterhouse operators must be willing to eliminate infected cattle, and veterinarians must carry out herd surveillance and vaccination to prevent its spread.

WSU prof heads NSF

By THOMAS KROSEK
States News Service

WASHINGTON — John Slaughter is in no hurry to take a top-level post in the federal government because Congress was apparently in no hurry to give it to him. Slaughter, provost of Washington State University in Pullman, was nominated by President Carter this summer to direct the National Science Foundation. After two months of election-year delays, he was confirmed by the Senate Sept. 23. But Slaughter has declined to be sworn in until his good and ready.

Published accounts have speculated he might be having second thoughts about serving at all. "Nonsense," says Slaughter. "I'll take the post, but not until January."

Speaking from the National Science Foundation office here Tuesday, Slaughter explained, "The more the delay went on the more and more I was linked into duties at Washington State."

Tolling over the university budget for next year will tie him up until mid-December, said Slaughter. In the meantime, he will fly back and forth to Washington to attend the foundation's monthly board meetings, as he is doing this week.

Science idea scholarships available

BOISE — High school seniors with ideas in science and engineering could win $5,000 scholarships or an expense-paid trip to Egypt. The contest, sponsored by the Thomas Alva Edison Foundation and the Max McGraw Foundation, is coordinated by Idaho Power Co. in its service area in cooperation with local school officials.

Ten scholarships will be awarded. Winners will be introduced at the annual meeting of the American Association of the Advancement of Science in Toronto Jan. 3, 1981, according to James Bruce, Idaho Power Co. president.

Two of the 10 winners will receive $5,000 scholarships and a trip to the International Edison birthday celebration Feb. 13 in Cairo. The other eight winners will receive $1,000 scholarships.

Entries must be typed on 8½-by-11-inch paper and limited to 1,000 words, and should be an abstract of a proposal, idea or experimental procedure dealing with a practical application of science or engineering, Bruce said.

Winners will be chosen from graduation seniors who "most nearly demonstrate the creativity and ingenuity exemplified by the life and work of Thomas Edison and Max McGraw," states an announcement by the sponsoring foundations.

Deadline for entries is Dec. 1. They should be sent to the Edison-McGraw Scholarship Program, Robert Dean, P.O. Box 80953, San Diego, Calif. 92138.

First lady thinks Carter will be remembered as great president

Rosalynn Carter talked to newswomen earlier in the week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rosalynn Carter said she "cried a little bit" and had some "weak moments" when she realized her husband would not be re-elected, but she believes he will be remembered as a great president.

The first lady, wearing a winter white jersey dress and looking relaxed and recollected, held an hour-long interview earlier this week with a group of newswomen in the White House family quarters.

She reminisced about her four years in the White House and her future life in Plains, Ga., when she expects to write her memoirs and perhaps give some speeches.

Mrs. Carter said she realized on election eve that her husband would lose, but did not shed tears until she was alone in her room on Election Day.

"I was just out of our beds, we had done all we could do," she said. "We got home and went upstairs with friends and we told them we were going to lose, and we were talking about it a little bit, and a friend had tears in her eyes."

"Then I went into the next room and cried a little bit, but I came right out and that was it," she said.

"I had some weak moments afterwards," she said, but, "I think you just accept it."

Mrs. Carter recalled that on Election Day, her daughter Amy told her, "I'm depressed about this election."

Amy, who popped in during the interview, said she would miss her "friends" the most when she has to leave the White House.

Of life in the White House, Mrs. Carter said, "It has been a very satisfying and very challenging experience. I've had some, I think, really concrete accomplishments."

"A lot more things I would like to have done. It's been an interesting four years. I'm very proud of some of the things I've done, and also of Jimmy because I think he was very successful and a great president; and I don't worry about a defeat because I know the people will realize he was successful."

"I think we opened up a friendly, warm White House," she said. She spoke of "the excitement of living in this house," and said, "We have really enjoyed it."

Mrs. Carter appeared a bit defensive about the kinds of entertainment the Carters have offered at the White House. In view of press reports anticipating a more "elegant" social life in the Reagan White House.

"We had more people here — ordinary people, I think — more than ever before, and we focused on a broad range of art and culture in the White House. We had the finest artists in the world, I think, for the Sunday afternoon series of concerts."

She mentioned cellist Mstislav Rostropovich, ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov, opera star Leonie Price and others.

Mrs. Carter also said she does not believe the vote for Ronald Reagan was a rejection of her husband. "I think he was a good president and I don't think there is any doubt about that," she said.

Of charges that her husband was incompetent as president, she said: "That is not true. I think people were frustrated. I think it was a protest vote. I do not think it was a rejection of Jimmy Carter. I think it was a protest vote against the situation — inflation, the Iranian thing that came up."

Asked if Reagan would be able to carry out his campaign promises, Mrs. Carter said, "I don't know. That's up to him."

"What I'm saying is that the things he is talking about now we were already doing. But I don't think people are aware of that. When you come done the best job that we could... and it was out of our hands, and you accept it. I felt very proud of ourselves, and I think we both accepted it because Jimmy has always told me to do the best job you can do and that's all you can do."

Asked if her husband would again seek elective office, she said, "I don't think so. I'm glad he will be able to go home and get some rest."

As for herself, she said, "You go into the next phase of your life. I think it's going to be very exciting... I don't intend to go to Plains and sit down and be lost. I'm going to write. I'm going to speak out."

On another subject, Mrs. Carter said that on the Sunday morning before the election when the Iranian parliament laid down terms for release of the hostages, the president called her and said, "To tell you the truth, I don't know what's going to happen. This could cause the election to go either way and we have to accept that. But I have to react to it. I have to come home."

She said he added, "I want you to know that and I want you to know that I love you."

"That was Sunday morning," she said. "I think I was the calmest person because... we knew we had done the best job that we could... and it was out of our hands, and you accept it. I felt very proud of ourselves, and I think we both accepted it because Jimmy has always told me to do the best job you can do and that's all you can do."

She said he added, "I want you to know that and I want you to know that I love you."

"That was Sunday morning," she said. "I think I was the calmest person because... we knew we had done the best job that we could... and it was out of our hands, and you accept it. I felt very proud of ourselves, and I think we both accepted it because Jimmy has always told me to do the best job you can do and that's all you can do."

Asked if her husband would again seek elective office, she said, "I don't think so. I'm glad he will be able to go home and get some rest."

As for herself, she said, "You go into the next phase of your life. I think it's going to be very exciting... I don't intend to go to Plains and sit down and be lost. I'm going to write. I'm going to speak out."

On another subject, Mrs. Carter said that on the Sunday morning before the election when the Iranian parliament laid down terms for release of the hostages, the president called her and said, "To tell you the truth, I don't know what's going to happen. This could cause the election to go either way and we have to accept that. But I have to react to it. I have to come home."

She said he added, "I want you to know that and I want you to know that I love you."

"That was Sunday morning," she said. "I think I was the calmest person because... we knew we had

Finalists for cabinet posts are likely to be old traditionalists

WASHINGTON — Until proven otherwise, it is hard to imagine that the group President-elect Reagan has appointed to choose candidates for Cabinet posts will try very hard to broaden the appeal of the new administration beyond its traditional conservative base.

Sixteen high-level advisers have been meeting in Los Angeles, winning a long list of candidates down to three to seven "finalists" for each Cabinet post.

Most of the recommendations remain secret, although leaks indicated Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, is a strong possibility to become defense secretary, and former Treasury Secretary William Simon appears to be in line for the same job again.

The members of the group picking the finalists are traditional Republican conservatives, most of them coming out of the world of business rather than politics.

Of the 16 persons sitting in on the screening session Monday, all are male, all are white, all are rich (millionaires or multi-millionaires), all are over 50, and most are as old or older than Reagan, who will be 70 in February. Virtually all are conservatives, and some, such as Colorado brewing magnate Joseph Coors, are extreme right-wingers.

It is particularly noticeable that almost no one in the group has much political experience, which might lead them to press for appointments pleasing to women, labor, ethnic minorities and other key voting blocs.

There are exceptions: William Casey, Reagan's 1980 campaign manager, and Caspar Weinberger, health, education and welfare secretary under President Nixon.

But the nucleus of the group is the old "kitchen cabinet" of rich conservatives who bankrolled Reagan's successful gubernatorial campaigns in 1966 and 1970, and have been personally and ideologically close to him ever since.

These include:
• William French Smith, 62, Reagan's personal attorney. The Monday meeting was held in Smith's law office.

• Holmes Tuttle, 75, multimillionaire Los Angeles auto dealer.
• Justin Dart, 73, drugstore magnate.

• Alfred Bloomingdale, 64, another wealthy businessman.

• Theodore Cummings, 72, builder of the Food Giant supermarket chain.
• William Wilson, fabulously successful rancher and land developer.

• Jack Wrathler, 62, a magnate in oil, entertainment and real estate.
• Jacqueline Hume (a man), San Francisco food entrepreneur.

Added to this longtime Reagan circle for the Monday meeting were former Treasury Secretary Simon, Weinberger, Los Angeles investor and GOP fund-raiser Charles Wick, and Daniel Terra, Reagan's national finance chairman.

"I hope that people like Laxalt and some of the other top campaign people can get a chop at the Cabinet lineup here before the governor (Reagan) finally makes up his mind," a Reagan transition staff source said here Tuesday, "but that isn't sure."

The source noted that it would be quite out of character for Reagan to stray beyond nominations handed to him, when the nominations had been reached at his request and according to his instructions.

Also members of this advisory committee are top-level veteran Reagan aides Edwin Morse and Michael Deaver — both certain to have very influential jobs.

"SOME COLOR IDEAS"

If you would like to add some brightness to a room, you might want to consider some furnishings in yellows. Yellow is the color of sunshine and that color can bring some sunshine to your home.

On the other hand, if you want to make a room seem quieter or more relaxed, try some blues or greens.

If you want to add some warmth and excitement to an area, you might consider some oranges and reds.

There are many things that the mere choice of color can do for you. Two identical pieces of furniture that are the same except for color can bring different moods and qualities to a room.

Don't overlook the fact, however, that a color is affected by the color it is next to, so be sure to use a color in relation to that to which it will be adjacent.

And there are other considerations too. For example, pale colors on things can make a room seem bigger since pale colors recede and give a feeling of more space, while dark colors come toward you and make an area seem smaller or more intimate.

We urge you to use color as a decorating tool, and we can help you select the colors and color combinations you want, in the places you want them in your home.

'Gang trial' showcase for new China

PEKING (UPI) — Proclaiming a new era in democracy and law and order, China denied Saturday that a guilty verdict in the Gang of Four trial was a foregone conclusion. But a provincial governor, sharing the official nervousness that supporters of the Gang might attempt to disrupt the trial, called for swift punishment for those stirring up trouble.

The Communist Party said the trial heralded a brighter era for the 1 billion people of the world's most populous nation.

China has now entered a new era of democracy and enforcement of the law," said the party newspaper, People's Daily.

China wants to convince the world the trial is scrupulously fair and that, after the chaos of the Cultural Revolution, China is now a law-abiding nation that respects human rights.

The regime stoutly denied the trial is rigged and the defendants presumed guilty, even though such powerful leaders as Vice-Premier Deng Xiaoping have denounced Jiang as an "evil woman."

"Before the end of the trial, the court will presume the accused neither guilty nor innocent, but will judge on the basis of facts during the trial," jurist Zhang Youyu said in an interview.

Nevertheless, even the English version of the official indictment said the defendants "are found guilty" of the 43 treasonable offenses listed.

Meanwhile, a government-inspired hate campaign continued in the national media against the 10 defendants at China's most sensational trial — the Gang of Four led by Mao Tse-tung's widow Jiang Qing and the so-called Clique of Six, composed of former associates of late Defense Minister Lin Biao.

All 10 are accused of mass murder and high treason in connection with the excesses of the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution during which Jiang reigned as virtual empress of China. Biao's associates are also accused of plotting to murder Mao by attacking his private train with jetlighters, artillery and flame throwers.

Peking radio reports 2nd Great Wall found

PEKING (UPI) — Radio Peking Saturday announced the discovery of what may be the second Great Wall of China.

The radio, quick to note the tourist potential, dubbed the new discovery "a second Ba Da Ling" — the spot along the known Great Wall that has appeared in millions of visitors' snapshots.

But experts also noted that the wall discovered in the rugged hills of northeastern Hebei province could also be a previously unknown arm of the Great Wall, the 3,500-mile rampart built to keep out the fierce nomads of the northern plains.

The radio said the monumental structure was "discovered recently" by the State Relic Bureau at Nangouli in Luanning county, an area some 100 miles northeast of Peking.

It runs along rugged hills some 20 miles north of the known stretch of the Great Wall, in an area where no section of the original wall had been mapped before.

Experts have determined the second wall was built during the Ming Dynasty. Historians have confirmed that new sections of the Great Wall were built in the 15th century.

City walls built by various warring states more than 2,000 years ago were linked together into one great wall by the Emperor Qin in 221 B.C. Since then, the gigantic structure has been rebuilt more than 20 times.

The present wall dates from the Ming Dynasty and the newly discovered section appears to have been built by the same administration, officials said.

Reagan may favor paying for Alaska gas line

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18 — Top U.S. congressional and industry officials expect the Reagan administration to boost the prospects of paying for the Alaska natural gas pipeline and speed construction of the project.

Their optimism is partly based on an assumption that President-elect Ronald Reagan and the Republican Senate will be more hospitable to changes in the financing formula mapped out by the President Carter.

Failure to come up with a financing scheme has been the biggest impediment to construction of the gas pipeline, estimated to cost between $20 and $25 billion, and some Wall Street analysts say the formula, which prohibits natural gas producers from making an equity investment in the project, is to blame.

The delay has made Canadians skittish. Having promised 2.3 trillion cubic feet of gas to the U.S. over the next seven years, Canada fears a collapse of the project, although it received a formal commitment from the American government this summer that the pipeline would be completed.

Adam Sieminski, of Washington Analysis Corp., a subsidiary of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., one of the nation's largest financial institutions, said the current financing plan is "a crock of beans," and said, "the smartest thing Ronald Reagan could do is throw out Jimmy Carter's (1977) decision and start from scratch."

"I don't think the new administration is going to be particularly wedded to the president's (1977) decision on the pipeline. From that point of view, Sieminski added.

Last week, Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, urged Reagan to set a deadline for the financing plan "or move to other transportation systems."

He said in an interview Monday that he did not mean to suggest a return to El Paso Natural Gas Co.'s proposal bypassing Canada by shipping natural gas in tankers from Valdez, Alaska to the rest of the United States.

"All I'm saying is that a deadline must be established" for finalizing the financing plans, said Stevens.

Industry officials have set April as the tentative date for completion of financing plans, but Stevens said the plans could still be incomplete, making a delay in construction of the pipeline inevitable.

There are substantial problems involved with all portions of financing under the present circumstances, said Stevens, who predicted that the pipeline sponsors "will not get full participation of the oil companies without changing some of the pertinent provisions including the ban on equity participation."

The call for equity participation by congressional leaders and Wall Street financiers, combined with the administration's pro-industry tilt, is bound to be a boon to Exxon Corp., Standard Oil of Ohio (Sohio) and Atlantic Richfield Co. (Arco).

The thinking in general in the industry is that Congress might be more receptive to the producers, said Sohio spokesman Don Nyberg.

Conversely, the sponsors could see a lessening in their influence. Northwest Alaskan Pipeline Co. president John G. McMillan's biggest backer was President Carter and he will be gone in January.

McMillan has already yielded some ground to the oil companies. Once vehemently opposed to producer participation in managing the pipeline, he has agreed to consider an equity investment. The negotiations currently underway call for producers to have as much as 40 percent in equity. However, Congress must grant a waiver before the oil companies can make an equity investment and Carter had not asked legislators to do that.

Officials on Capitol Hill and Wall Street expect Reagan to be as opposed to federal participation in the Alaska gas pipeline as Carter was. The president's 1977 decision precluded the federal government from a financial stake in the project.

Alaska bill to decide use of oil and gas

WASHINGTON — The House and Senate will try to work out difference in legislation allowing the development of oil and gas pockets in the National Petroleum Reserve-Alaska.

The Senate version of the bill calls for rapid federal action on the private leasing of the Reserve.

The government's drilling program has been criticized by the oil industry as too small and too slow.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, who will serve on the conference committee, said he thought the committee would be able to blend the two approaches to Petroleum Reserve leasing, allowing federal programs to continue while speeding up private leasing.

The $10 billion Interior appropriations for fiscal year 1981, $1 billion less than the Carter administration requested, is the main source of funding for many federal agencies affecting Alaska, including the Bureau of Land Management, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Fish and Wildlife, and the Park Service.

The House-Senate conference is expected to convene by the middle of the week, and could come up with a completed bill by late this week or early next week.

Wescon case draws mine officials in

BOISE (UPI) — Two Sunshine Mine Co. officials and the environmental manager for Bunker Hill Co. have been subpoenaed to testify in the U.S. government's criminal case against a southwestern Idaho toxic-waste disposal company.

Documents made public in Idaho U.S. District Court Friday show that J. B. Davis, purchasing agent for Sunshine in Kellogg, and Sunshine's electrical foreman, Floyd W. Strand, have been ordered to appear when Wes Con Inc. and its president, Eugene Rinebond Sr., go to trial on criminal charges Dec. 11.

Also subpoenaed to testify in the case are: James H. Boyd, environmental affairs manager for Bunker Hill of Kellogg; Eugene Rinebond Jr. of Wes Con of Grand View; and Jose Luis Madarieta, who, documents say, works at H&M Farm Supply, Grand View.

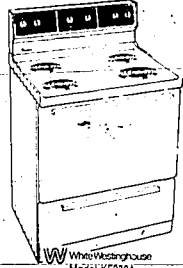

Public documents in the court file say Davis and Boyd also testified before the federal grand jury, which indicted Wes Con and the elder Rinebond on July 23. The indictment charges the company and Rinebond with conspiring to violate the Toxic Substances Control Act, which prohibits disposal of PCBs in excess of 500 parts per million in a landfill-disposal site.

The case, which is the government's first prosecution under the 1978 law, has been veiled in secrecy. Subpoenas issued by the U.S. Attorney's office and a list of individuals who testified before the grand jury have been made public this week in preparation for the trial.

Also included in the government's list of individuals identified as grand jury witnesses were: Carroll B. Mansfield, Jim Herring, Roy G. Crumrine, Trina Armstrong, Inez Hancy, Steven G. Fox, Duane E. Cornell, Larry Armstrong, Bruce Cameron, Richard D. Baker, Robert C. Goodman, Joe Way, Edgar G. Yates, J. Eugene Russell, Nicholas A. Czernich and Ed Barker.

Jonestown member faces trial

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Larry Layton, a former Quaker who became a confidant of Peoples Temple leader Jim Jones, was returned to California Saturday to stand trial on charges he was a member of the jungle attack team that killed Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., in Guyana.

He was indicted Oct. 9 by a federal jury in San Francisco on four counts: two of conspiracy to murder, one of murder and one of attempted murder.

Citing the severe sentences Layton faces if convicted, Assistant U.S. Attorney David Kirby asked that no bail be set.

William Kunstler, who represented Layton for Saturday's hearing only, did not argue the point, saying later that he did not believe Caden would have set bail.

Kunstler, who called Layton's case "tragic," said his client maintained his innocence.

Kunstler also said the defense in the San Francisco trial would challenge the constitutionality of a statute under which Layton is being prosecuted for trying to kill "an internationally protected person" — Richard Dwyer, deputy chief of the U.S. mission in Guyana.

Layton, who had a Quaker upbringing and who was a conscientious objector during the war in Vietnam, is accused of killing Ryan, D-Calif., on Nov. 18, 1978, and of trying to kill Dwyer the same day.

He allegedly posed as a defector from the cult before ambushing Ryan and his party on an airstrip.

Ryan was returning from Jonestown, the cult's settlement, where he had gone to investigate reports that relatives of his constituents were being held against their will.

McClure will move slow on DOE reform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The next chairman of the Senate Energy Committee wants to move slowly on the future of the controversial Energy Department, it was reported Saturday.

In an interview with the Washington Post, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said it is "premature to judge" whether the entire department, created under the Carter administration, should be dismantled as President-elect Ronald Reagan favors.

However, McClure said he will act "as soon as possible" to abolish the Economic Regulatory Administration — the branch of the department that regulates oil and gasoline pricing and allocation.

Snow tire safety warning issued

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With winter whistling near, government safety experts Saturday warned motorists to avoid mixing radial ply tires with regular bias ply snow tires on their vehicles.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said mixing types of tires will adversely affect a vehicle's handling.

NHTSA Administrator Joan Claybrook also noted many motorists are not certain if radial tires fulfill local regulations requiring the use of snow tires in season.

Power bill may aid mine

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

CHALLIS — If the Northwest Power Bill is signed into law, Cyprus Mines Corp. will be assured the power it needs for its proposed mine.

Cyprus plans to build a $300 million open-pit molybdenum mine about 25 miles southwest of Challis. Because it applied for power for the development before a Sept. 1, 1979, deadline contained in the power bill passed by Congress earlier this week, Cyprus will be able to avoid complicated negotiations to obtain the power the mine will need.

The Northwest Power Bill is a comprehensive power planning bill for the Pacific Northwest. It is intended to resolve conflicts over the distribution of relatively low-cost hydro-power distributed by the federal Bonneville Power Administration in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana. The bill authorized the BPA to acquire additional energy sources to meet its long-term commitments to customers. It also establishes a regional planning council to help set policy for the BPA.

President Carter is expected to sign the bill into law.

By applying for power before the deadline in the law, Cyprus will be considered a part of the Salmon River Electric Co-op's system. The co-op's power is supplied by BPA so BPA will now be committed to supplying power to Cyprus through the co-op, said Bob Laifel, BPA district manager in Idaho Falls.

Both Clayton Hurless, Salmon River Co-op manager, and M.M. "Maggie" McGee, Cyprus project manager, had expected complicated negotiations to be required before they could get the large amount of power necessary for the mine. In fact, negotiations to obtain power under the old BPA procedures had been going on for more than a year.

According to the U.S. Forest Service's final environmental impact statement on the Cyprus project, the mine and the growth it will bring to Challis will increase demand for electricity in the area approximately 300 percent. Almost 300 million kilowatt hours a year will be required by the mine when it reaches full production, which is expected to be about the middle of 1983. This compares with the 36 million kilowatt hours used by the entire Salmon Co-op system in 1979.

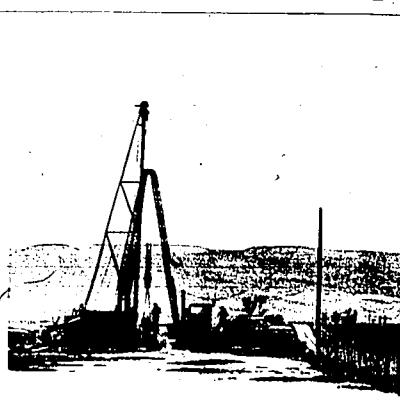

Hurless said the coop probably could get that power even if without the federal power bill. He said he has looked into getting power through participation in a coal-fired power plant or through small hydro-power projects. "There would be a price penalty for Cyprus," he said, but it appears power is available.

It will still be several years before Cyprus starts signing significant amounts of power. The environmental impact statement and Forest Service decision to approve the company's operating plan are still open for public review. If no appeals to the decision are filed by the Dec. 15 deadline, the mine will start producing in the fall of 1983.

In addition to the federal approval of the operating plan, Cyprus also needs a variety of other federal and state permits before it can proceed. Earlier this week it received unopposed approval from the National Reclamation Board on its reclamation application.

Farmer finds rare shallow water source

HOLLISTER — To Bruce Kunkel, finding water to irrigate his crops calls for a lot of luck.

But fate smiled on him Thursday. He hit a large and unusually shallow water supply in the parched Salmon Tract south of Hollister.

With a test pump installed Friday, Kunkel's new well produced about 500 inches per minute, or over 4,500 gallons per minute from a depth of only 150 feet.

Other wells along the Salmon Tract pump from depths of 250 to 400 feet, producing flows of 30 to 175 inches per minute, according to Kunkel.

"What's funny is that this is an area that has been highly prospected for water," Kunkel said. "It only goes to show there's still hope for finding shallow water in this water-short area," he added.

Finding the 150-foot well will significantly reduce Kunkel's anticipated pumping costs for irrigating his farm, Kunkel said.

Kunkel operates a grain and hay farm about five miles south of Hollister. He'd contracted Fred Walker, Twin Falls, to drill the well at a site of a shallow rain well dug 20 years ago.

Tests of the well were completed Saturday.

Kunkel said a permanent pump will be installed "in time for the 1981 crop."

Volunteers

Twin Fall County volunteer foster home program is in jeopardy of folding

By BONNIE BAIRD—JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Volunteers in Correction, a youth probation program of 11 years standing in Twin Falls County, is going out of business.

Marjorie Hoops who says she saw a need for the program and began developing it 11 years ago has tired of the 24-hour-a-day demands it makes on her time.

"I don't want to quit," Hoops says. "I love the work but it is getting to be too much for one person. After that many years you just burn out."

Hoops, like many others, is hoping that somehow funding will be found to extend Volunteers in Correction or replace it with some similar service.

"If this were possible, I would be willing to stay on as an assistant but not as director. I would work with a new director and give him or her the benefit of my experience, but I would like to work in the field with the people, not in the office," she says.

"When some of these young people go into a volunteer's home and find out the volunteer isn't getting a dime and is putting out personal money to buy the child clothes, books and other needs, the attitudes of even the most hardened kids completely change," Hoops says.

Hoops says the Twin Falls County program has earned wide recognition for its success.

"I think the reason is the volunteer status of our many foster parents," she said.

"Some of these young people who come to our attention have been shuffled from one home to another. In many cases the individuals look them in purely for monetary benefits."

"When some of these young people go into a volunteer's home and find out the volunteer isn't getting a dime and is putting out personal money to buy the child clothes, books and other needs, the attitudes of even the most hardened kids completely change," Hoops says.

The purpose of the program, she explains, has been to meet the needs of youngsters who cannot cope with situations in their own homes and to keep them out of court or out of jail.

Most of the youngsters have made an initial contact with the courts and are released to the volunteers. If they make it there, the eventual goal is to return them to their own homes on a permanent and satisfactory basis to the child and the parents.

Many of those serving as volunteers, Hoops says, have a history of problems in their own youth and are thus much more understanding.

If the program is not replaced or continued under other direction, many who have worked with it see a large void in the day to day business of handling juvenile problems.

"The program will be greatly missed I am sure," said Judge Daniel Meehl. "Some of the volunteers have been coming in and offering their services to Ron Roberson, county juvenile probation officer and I am sure the courts will continue to use any such services available," he said.

Recently appointed district judge, Meehl said as a magistrate judge he frequently found the volunteers in correction the answer to the problems of young people he dealt with.

Currently, Hoops says, there are

Wells accident injures 1 Filer man is killed on Jackpot highway

JACKPOT, Nev. — A Filer man was killed south of Jackpot in a pedestrian and car accident Friday night and a Washington motorist was seriously injured Saturday morning north of here.

Nevada Highway patrol officials identified the Friday night victim as James Beagles, 39. He was struck by a northbound car driven by Rickie Dance, 30, of Blackfoot.

Officers said the accident occurred about 8 p.m. four miles south of Jackpot on U.S. Highway 89, Elko County. Deputy Sheriff Danny Peterson, at Jackpot, said the victim was involved in another accident earlier about 12 miles south of Jackpot in which his vehicle left the highway after colliding with one operated by Roger Jardine of Arco. Beagles was traveling north and Jardine south, the officer said. Apparently Beagles left the scene of the first accident and continued north.

About four miles south of Jackpot, his vehicle again left the road, going down a slight embankment and coming to rest in the sagebrush.

Witnesses told officers Beagles was sitting in the highway, in the lane of traffic when the second accident occurred. He was struck by the Dance vehicle and died at the scene.

Nevada officers and Elko county officials are continuing the investigation.

Dance was alone and escaped injury.

Nevada Highway patrol officials said within an hour's time of the first fatality they were called to investigate a second in which one person was killed near Wells.

Idaho State Police reported Robert Paul Krutzich, 40, of Kennewick, Wash., suffered multiple injuries when he was thrown from his car at the north edge of Hollister about 11 a.m. Saturday.

Natural materials burn easily

Landscaping may increase fire hazard

SHOSHONE — Natural landscaping is the rage among homeowners, but fires also rage more easily among sagebrush and cheat grass, a Bureau of Land Management official warns.

"Planting as a yard that blends with its surroundings may be, wilderness landscaping does present potential fire hazards," said Carlos Mendolia, fire management officer for the BLM Shoshone District.

Recent fires in the Devil's Canyon region of the Southern California highlight the potential, Mendolia said. "There, entire developments have been threatened by runaway range fires.

Conditions in the intermountain region are not as severe, he emphasized. Closer to Idaho, homes built among trees in a canyon outside Missoula, Mont., were destroyed a few years ago when fire swept the canyon.

"It could happen in Idaho," Mendolia said. "The potential is there. As people continue to build in rural areas with natural surroundings, there is the increased chance of something burning."

The BLM fire officer gave the following suggestions to builders to help minimize fire hazards among homes on the range:

• Don't build in tall brush. Clean it back 25 feet from the house.

• Work in a natural fireline, if possible, by selectively removing larger sage plants.

• Build with flame-resistant materials. Rock is excellent for this purpose while retaining the indigenous look.

• Don't build close to trees.

Accident leads to lawsuit

TWIN FALLS — Floyd F. Higns of Twin Falls has brought suit against a north Idaho woman as the result of a traffic accident in Kellogg July 15.

Higns' complaint filed in 5th District Court charges Sarah J. Hartman failed to yield right of way and drove her car into the path of his motorcycle. He was traveling south on Division Street in Kellogg and the automobile was westbound on Market Street.

Higns alleges the carelessness and negligence on the part of the defendant resulted in his suffering injuries to his legs, knees, shoulders and head. He seeks $50,000 for loss of work and property and for injuries, and $10,000 for medical expenses.

Residents start own fund drives Filer rallies to dog pound fund

FILER — Funds for a new Filer dog pound building are trickling in but several community efforts are under way to boost the amount.

Police Chief James Trentham said about $85 in contributions had been collected last week toward the $1,000 goal. Mayor Eddon Ryals said more has come in but he did not have a current figure.

"We have to get our Filer city water project bulldozed up and then we will get to work on raising some more money for the pound. I think we will have to appeal to our merchants. That's probably where it will come from," Ryals said.

Trentham said at least one Filer business, Filer's Inn, has placed a table on the counter for donations. And a Camp Fire Girl's group is selling tickets for a Thanksgiving turkey to raise money for the pound.

The estate of Mabel Beavercomb also has pledged up to $1,000 to match dollar-for-dollar whatever is collected and contributed in the community for a new pound.

Trentham said a cutoff date for the drive has been set for next May.

"It is late in the year now to be pouring concrete, if we did have the money. We hope we will have the funds by next May and can start construction at that time," he said.

Filer resident Dr. William Strober, a veterinarian in Twin Falls, is donating his time to assist the city by designing a suitable building that can be ventilated and kept sanitary.

BSU beats ISU to clinch berth in playoffs

By MARV CLEMONS
Times-News sports editor and Mike Prater
Times-News sports writer

FOCATELLO — Boise State is going to the playoffs. The Broncos, relying on a stout first-half defense to build the lead, turned back Idaho State's vaunted passing attack with three second-half interceptions for a 22-13 decision and sole possession of the Big Sky Conference championship and a trip to the national playoffs for Division IAA teams.

An embattled Coach Jim Criner couldn't contain his praise for his Broncos who "played on their shoe strings with a lot of injuries and a lot of hurt."

"We've heard all week how there's nothing you can do... that their passing game can't be stopped. Well, it got stopped tonight," Criner said. "We matched balance (offense) against their passing attack and I think balance kicked their fancy."

The victory didn't come easily or without cost. Four Broncos left the game with injuries, the most noteworthy senior quarterback Joe Alotti. Criner said doctors didn't think the injury, sustained when he was tackled trying to scramble, would keep him out of the playoffs. However, X-rays were slated in Alotti's leg and fullback Dave Hughes' back Sunday.

"We've got a three-week layoff now and that gives us some time to get a lot of kids healthy," Criner said.

Criner said he believed Boise State would be pitted against Lehigh in the playoff opener Dec. 13. "I think Lehigh will be ranked No. 1 and we'll be No. 4 this week.

That means that Grambling and Eastern Kentucky will be ranked two and three. Generally they match the teams one-four-two-three," he said.

BSU Athletic Director Lyle Smith cautioned against considering BSU a shoo-in for the playoffs but he admitted it looked good.

"That will all be decided on a telephone conference call with all the concerned teams at 8 a.m. (MST) Monday," Smith said. "The other western possibility would be Portland State. But Idaho and ISU beat Portland State, and BSU has beaten both those schools. Under the playoff criteria, I would say that Boise State will get the berth."

The end for the Bengals came when BSU's secondary picked off two late Mike Machurek passes — the weapon that twice had ISU inside the 20 without scoring.

Machurek was disappointed over the loss but his blurring had taken ISU from a 0-16 team to a 6-5 one and within one step of the playoffs.

"It was a very emotional game with a lot of hard hitting. That's what happens," he said in reply to a question about a number of dropped passes by his receivers. "They made some good catches and some that weren't. The breaks just didn't go our way tonight."

Criner said "there's no question about it. The reason for the win was our ability to hold ISU inside the 20-yard line. The goal line defense was outstanding. The best it's been all year. They just went out and did what they had to do. We ran, we threw, played great defense and didn't give up the big play."

"Machurek's always going to get his states," Criner said about the 300-yard passing night for the ISU Junior, "but that's not going to bother me. The score's what counts."

UCLA, Michigan, Oklahoma win 'big ones'

Wolverine defense holds OSU

COLUMBIUS, Ohio (UPI) — Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler admits the Wolverines 9-3 victory over Ohio State Saturday was a thing of beauty.

"It may not be the prettiest win and it wasn't the most explosive offensive show you've ever seen," said Schembechler, "but we won it."

That's all that counts. The Wolverines won the game, both statistically and on the scoreboard, and will be in the Rose Bowl Jan. 1 to take on PAC-10 representative Washington.

The only touchdown of the game came on a 13-yard scoring pass from John Wanger to Anthony Carter in the third quarter.

"That was a great group in terms of never giving up," he said. "I enjoy this championship more than any of the previous ones because of the way we came back."

The Wolverines lost to their first three games and Saturday's victory was the eighth in a row.

A disappointed Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce termed the game "a typical slugfest between Michigan and Ohio State."

"I thought our defense did an excellent job of holding its ground," said Bruce, "but offensively we were spitting and spitting and you can't do that in a big game."

"We just have to get back to the drawing board. We can salvage a fine season by beating Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl."

The Buckeyes and Nittany Lions met Dec. 26 at Tampa, Ariz.

The Wanger-to-Carter touchdown dart, which came with five minutes left in the third period, climaxed a 56-yard, 14-play drive for the Wolverines and was Carter's 13th scoring reception of the year and his 11th in Big Ten play, a record.

The Michigan touchdown was set up by a fumble by Ohio State split end Gary Williams that was recovered by free safety Tony Jackson.

Michigan tailback Butch Woolfolk, who led all rushers with 142 yards in 31 carries, was the workhorse of the drive.

UCLA Coach Terry Donahue is carried from the field by his players after they surprised USC with a 20-17 defeat Saturday.

Sooners tip Nebraska in final minutex

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Freshman Buster Rhymes swept right end for a 1-yard touchdown with 56 seconds remaining Saturday to give ninth-ranked Oklahoma at least a share of its eighth straight Big Eight championship with a 21-17 upset over third-ranked Nebraska.

Oklahoma can clinch a trip to its fourth straight Orange Bowl with a victory next Saturday over Oklahoma State in its regular-season finale. The Sooners, who have now won outright or shared the Big Eight a little in each of Barry Switzer's eight years as head coach, boost their record to 8-2 overall and 6-0 in the conference.

If Oklahoma beats Oklahoma State, Nebraska will have to settle for a trip to the Sun Bowl in El Paso to play Mississippi State. An Oklahoma loss would send the Cornhuskers to the Orange Bowl for the second time in three years.

Rhymes' touchdown capped an 80-yard drive to give Switzer his eighth victory in nine games against archrival Nebraska. The score also came 2:20 after Nebraska quarterback Jeff Quinn snuck in from the 1-yard line to put the Huskers in front 17-14.

Rhymes set up his score with a 43-yard run to the Nebraska 14. Quarterback J.C. Watts then completed only his second pass of the game, a 15-yarder to Bobby Grayson to the Nebraska 1, where Rhymes went in two plays later to snap a six-game Cornhuskers winning streak.

Nebraska, trailing 14-10 at intermission, spent the entire second half at the Oklahoma doorstep. The Huskers drove to the Oklahoma 35 in the third quarter only to have Jarvis Redwine thrown for a loss on a fourth-and-three situation. Nebraska moved to the Oklahoma seven at the start of the fourth quarter only to have Redwine stopped for no gain on a fourth-and-two.

The Cornhuskers then drove to the Oklahoma 13 on their next possession only to have Anitra Franklin fumble the ball away to the Oklahoma one where safety Darrell Songy recovered.

Late TD bomb on deflected pass beats USC

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Freeman McNeill caught a deflected pass and raced 58 yards for a touchdown with 2:07 remaining in the game Saturday to lift 19th-ranked UCLA to a dramatic 20-17 Pacific-10 victory over 12th-ranked Southern California.

With the Bruins trailing 17-14, some Jay Schroeder dropped the puck on his own 42 and lofted the pass that was tipped by USC's Jeff Frisell and fell into the hands of McNeill, who ran untouched into the end zone for the game-winning TD. Norman Johnson's extra point attempt was wide.

UCLA took a 14-10 lead early in the third quarter on a 25-yard scoring pass from Schroeder to Michael Braml, but the Trojans scored what appeared to be the winning TD 2:37 into the final period on a 1-yard scoring run by Marcus Allen, the nation's leading rusher entering the game. Southern Cal needed four plays from the 3-yard line to penetrate a surging UCLA defense.

UCLA then took over on its 20 and moved to the 42 on five plays before Schroeder's TD pass to McNeill.

USC regained possession with 2:06 left in the game; but the Trojans were shut down in their final drive after reaching the Bruins' 24. The Trojans neglected to go for a game-tying field goal from the 29.

UCLA improved its record to 8-2 while Southern Cal fell to 7-2-1.

Neither team is eligible for the Pac-10 title or a Rose Bowl appearance because of academic violations.

Schroeder, a 6-foot-3, 200-pounder from Pacific Palisades, Calif., completed 9-of-11 passes for 165 yards and a pair of touchdowns. He was intercepted once. McNeill rushed for 111 yards in 24 carries. The nation's 11th leading rusher entering the game, McNeill increased his UCLA career total to 3,086 yards.

Eight-man football alignment changes imminent

MAGIC VALLEY — Idaho's eight-man football scene appears in for a sharp change.

The change will probably occur about 2 p.m. Monday at Carey when four Magic Valley teams will leave the old Snake River Eight-Man Football Conference and reform under the Northside Conference banner. Those teams would include Camas County, Carey, Richfield and Clark County of this area.

In the wake of that, another four-team eight-man conference — with apparently at least two other candidates possible — will arise with North Gem, Rockland, Shoshone and Castletford. The speculation, based on high school enrollments, is that both Hagerman and Murtaugh would be eight-man candidates in the foreseeable future.

The Snake River eight-man conference came into being in the fall of 1961 when the Northside Conference adopted that limitation to accommodate decreasing enrollment.

At that time, Bellevue, now absorbed as part of Wood River High School, Bliss and Dietrich were members. The latter two since have dropped football. In addition, Brunau and Grainier View high schools joined the purely basketball league. Those two left when they consolidated into Rimrock High School, which was in the A-3 classification.

At one time Hagerman did withdraw from the Magic Valley Conference and participate in the eight-man league.

As the membership of the Snake River Conference dwindled, Richland, North Gem and Clark County went to eight-man and were admitted into the league.

But at the same time, Castletford, too, has been losing enrollment with virtually each graduating class.

During that time, with the exception of a three-year reign by Hagerman, Camas County dominated the league, winning six of the first eight state titles offered. But the Musershans ran out of playing size and depth two seasons ago.

Currently, Shoshone's enrollment has been taking perhaps the most drastic pounding of any Magic Valley team. The Indians have fallen well below the 175 A-3 classification enrollment — into about the 130 area. That culminated this fall with the Indians having to cancel its football program about a week before the season opener because of a too-small turnout.

This combination of factors came to a head two weeks ago when the Northside Conference met and rejected Shoshone's petition for membership.

At the same time, a suggestion that Shoshone be accepted and the league divided into two divisions — big school, little school — died on a 4-4 count. That plan included each of the four-team divisions playing a double round robin schedule with the champion of each division advancing to a one-game little playoff. That winner then would advance against the Long Pin Conference titlist for the state playoff.

"I am anticipating that the Monday meeting that Carey, Camas County, Clark County and Richfield will leave the Snake River Conference and immediately reform into a four-team eight-man league," Camas County Superintendent Harold Stroud said.

"I think that would equalize the size of the schools in each league and that's the main consideration. Right now Shoshone isn't able to field an 11-man team but they feel that can get out enough for eight-man. For a year or two, they might be comparable (in on-the-field ability) but because of their size, by the third year and from then on they would become a dominating force."

"Camas County's enrollment has dropped to 50 and the other (three) schools face the same problem. If our teams get thumped too long, we're afraid of losing our football programs."

Stroud said he would like to see the state create a new eight-man classification, based on enrollment that controls membership in the state's basketball competition.

"I would be 100 percent in favor of that," Stroud said, "whatever the figure would be, 75 or 60, although I personally would prefer the smaller figure."

There can be no doubt that while Castletford is basking in two years of rich football success, it owes its entire football program to the Snake River Eight-man Conference. In the five years previous to leaving the Magic Valley Conference, Castletford had managed a 7-32 record. In four of those five years, the Wolves managed just one win. Their turnouts were dropping into the high teens for the 11-man game.

Castletford Principal Julie Domowicz agrees that eight-man was indeed the answer to rebuilding Castletford's football program.

"Coach (Randy) Clark feels that he would like to have one more year of eight-man before going to 11-man if we are forced to," Domowicz said. "But we tend to agree with the other people (in the conference) that Castletford might be an even more dominating factor next year than it has been the past two (when the Wolves were undefeated)."

"We tend to agree with the appraisal that Castletford will be stronger next year — we have just about every body back — and the rest of the league teams will be down at least a little. For instance, North Gem (undefeated until the title showdown the past two years) graduates 17 seniors this year. Their football team will be decimated. We only lose a few people."

Domowicz said, however, that declining enrollment is not peculiar to the Northside Conference members.

"We are down to 79," he said of the school that not long ago always flirted with the A-3 classification (before the number was raised) and once was forced to play A-3 basketball for two seasons.

"If this down trend continues, and our projections based on elementary and junior high enrollments indicates it will, we will be looking at the prospect of being forced to play 11-man football when our turnouts will be at their smallest," he said.

For that reason, Domowicz said Castletford is awaiting a final decision by the Northside schools before deciding which way to jump.

"We have told Shoshone we would schedule them twice and we have no objection to playing the other schools twice if that's what is needed. We have heard that story that Murtaugh and Hagerman are declining in enrollment and may be considering eight-man."

"But, yes," he answered a question, "we would be interested in a six-team league like that."

Any realignment that formed two eight-man teams from Castletford east would firm the easy state playoff format now available with just two eight-man leagues.

"It presents another problem," Stroud said, "but right now we're just interested in keeping our football programs alive."

BSU beats ISU to clinch berth in playoffs

POCATELLO — Boise State is going to the playoffs. The Broncos, relying on a stout first-half defense to build the lead, turned back Idaho State's vaunted passing attack with three second-half interceptions for a 23-13 decision and sole possession of the Big Sky Conference championship and a trip to the national playoffs for Division IAA teams.

An exuberant Coach Jim Criner couldn't contain his praise for his Broncos who "played on their shoe strings with a lot of injuries and a lot of hurt."

"We've heard all week how there's nothing you can do...that their passing game can't be stopped. Well, it got stopped tonight," Criner said. "We matched balance (offense) against their passing attack and I think balance kicked their fancy."

The victory didn't come easily or without cost. Four Broncos left the game with injuries, the most noteworthy senior quarterback Joe Alotti. Criner said doctors didn't think the injury, sustained when he was tackled trying to scramble, would keep him out of the playoffs. However, X-rays were slated on Alotti's leg and fullback Dave Hughes' back Sunday.

"We've got a three-week layoff now and that gives us some time to get a lot of kids healthy," Criner said.

Criner said he believed Boise State would be pitted against Lehigh in the playoff opener Dec. 13. "I think Lehigh will be ranked No. 1 and we'll be No. 4 this week.

That means that Grambling and Eastern Kentucky will be ranked two and three. Generally they match the teams one-four, two-three," he said.

BSU Athletic Director Lyle Smith cautioned against considering BSU a shoe-in for the playoffs but he admitted it looked good.

"That will all be decided on a telephone conference call with all the concerned teams at 8 a.m. (MST) Monday," Smith said. "The other western possibility would be Portland State. But Idaho and ISU beat Portland State and BSU has beaten both those schools. (Under the playoff criteria, I would say that Boise State will get the berth.)"

The end for the Bengals came when BSU's secondary picked off two late Mike Machurek passes — the weapon that twice had ISU inside the 20 without scoring.

Machurek was dependent over the loss but his blooming had taken ISU from a 0-16 team to a 6-5 one and within one step of the playoffs.

"It was a very emotional game with a lot of hard hitting. That's what happens," he said in reply to a question about a number of dropped passes by his receivers. "They made some good catches and some that weren't. The breaks just didn't go our way tonight."

Criner said "there's no question about it." The reason for the win was our ability to hold ISU inside the 20-yard line. The goal line defense was outstanding. The best it's been all year. They just went out and did what they had to. We ran, we threw, played great defense and didn't give up the big play."

"Machurek's always going to get his states," Criner said about the 300-yard passing night for the ISU junior, "but that's not going to bother me. The score's what counts."

UCLA, Michigan, Oklahoma win 'big ones'

Wolverine defense holds OSU

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler admits the Wolverines' 9-3 victory over Ohio State Saturday wasn't a thing of beauty.

"It may not be the prettiest win and it wasn't the most explosive offensive show you've ever seen," said Schembechler, "but we won it."

That's all that counts. The Wolverines won the game, both statistically and on the scoreboard, and will be in the Rose Bowl Jan. 1 to take on PAC-10 representative Washington.

The only touchdown of the game came on a 13-yard scoring pass from John Wanger to Anthony Carter in the third quarter.

"This was a great group in terms of never giving up," he said. "I enjoy this championship more than any of the previous ones because of the way we came back."

The Wolverines lost to their first three games and Saturday's victory was their eighth in 10 rows.

A disappointed Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce termed the game "a typical slugfest between Michigan and Ohio State."

"I thought our defense did an excellent job of holding its ground," said Bruce, "but offensively we were spitting and sputtering and you can't do that in a big game."

"We just have to get back to the drawing board. We can salvage a fine season by beating Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl."

The Buckeyes and Nittany Lions meet Dec. 26 at Tempe, Ariz.

The Michigan touchdown Carter touchdown dart, which came with five minutes left in the third period, climaxed a 56-yard, 14-play drive for the Wolverines and was Carter's 13th scoring reception of the year and his 11th in Big Ten play, a record.

The Michigan touchdown was set up by a fumble by Ohio State split end Gary Williams that was recovered by free safety Tony Jackson, on the Michigan 41.

Michigan tailback Butch Woolfolk, who led all rushers with 142 yards in 31 carries, was the workhorse of the drive.

Sooners tip Nebraska in final minutex

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Freshman Buster Rhymes swept right end for a 1-yard touchdown with 56 seconds remaining Saturday to give ninth-ranked Oklahoma at least a share of its eighth straight Big Eight championship with a 21-17 upset over third-ranked Nebraska.

Oklahoma can clinch a trip to its fourth straight Orange Bowl with a victory next Saturday over Oklahoma State in its regular-season finale. The Sooners, who have now won outright or shared the Big Eight title in each of Barry Switzer's eight years as head coach, boosted their record to 8-2 overall and 6-0 in the conference.

If Oklahoma beats Oklahoma State, Nebraska will have to settle for a trip to the Sun Bowl in El Paso to play Mississippi State. An Oklahoma loss would send the Cornhuskers to the Orange Bowl for the second time in three years.

Rhymes' touchdown capped an 80-yard drive to give Switzer his eighth victory in nine games against archrival Nebraska. The score also came 2:20 after Nebraska quarterback Jeff Quinn snuck in from the 1-yard line to put the Huskers in front 17-14.

Rhymes set up his score with a 45-yard run to the Nebraska 14. Quarterback J.C. Watts then completed only his second pass of the game, a 13-yarder to Bobby Grayson to the Nebraska 1, where Rhymes went in two plays later to snap a six-game Cornhuskers winning streak.

Nebraska, trailing 14-10 at intermission, spent the entire second half at the Oklahoma doorstep. The Huskers drove to the Oklahoma 35 in the third quarter only to have Jarvis Redwine thrown for a loss on a fourth-and-three situation. Nebraska moved to the Oklahoma seven at the start of the fourth quarter only to have Redwine slip for no gain on a fourth-and-two.

The Cornhuskers then drove to the Oklahoma 13 on their next possession only to have Andre Franklin fumble the ball away to the Oklahoma one where safety Darrell Songy recovered.

Late TD bomb on deflected pass beats USC

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Freeman McNeil caught a deflected pass and raced 50 yards for a touchdown with 2:07 remaining in the game Saturday to lift 19-ranked UCLA to a dramatic 20-17 Pacific-10 victory over 12th-ranked Southern California.

With the Bruins trailing 17-14, sophomore Jay Schroeder dropped back on his own 42 and lofted the pass that was tipped by USC's Jeff Fisher and fell into the hands of McNeil, who ran untouched into the end zone for the game-winning TD. Norm Johnson's extra-point attempt was wide.

UCLA took a 14-10 lead early in the third quarter on a 25-yard scoring pass from Schroeder to Michael Bramt, but the Trojans scored what appeared to be the winning TD 2:37 into the final period on a 1-yard scoring run by Marcus Allen, the nation's leading rusher entering the game.

Southern Cal needed four plays from the 3-yard line to penetrate a surging UCLA defense.

UCLA then took over on its 20 and moved to the 42 on five plays before Schroeder's TD pass to McNeil.

USC regained possession with 2:06 left in the game, but the Trojans were shut down in their final drive after reaching the Bruins' 24. The Trojans neglected to go for a game-tying field goal from the 29.

UCLA improved its record to 8-2 while Southern Cal fell to 7-2.

Neither team is eligible for the Pac-10 title or a Rose Bowl appearance because of academic violations.

Schroeder, a 6-foot-3, 200-pounder from Pacific Palisades, Calif., completed 9-of-11 passes for 165 yards and a pair of touchdowns. He was intercepted once. McNeil rushed for 111 yards in 24 carries. The nation's fifth-leading rusher entering the game, McNeil increased his UCLA career total to 3,066 yards.

Eight-man football alignment changes imminent

MAGIC VALLEY — Idaho's eight-man football scene appears in for a sharp change.

The change will probably occur about 2 p.m. Monday at Carey, when four Magic Valley teams will leave the old Snake River Eight-Man Football Conference and reform under the Northside Conference banner. Those teams would include Camas County, Carer, Richfield and Clark County of Dubois.

The wake of that, another four-team eight-man conference will be formed at least two other candidates possible — will arise with North Gem, Rockland, Shoshone and Castelford. The speculation, based on high school enrollments, is that both Hagerman and Murtaugh would be eight-man candidates in the foreseeable future.

The Snake River eight-man conference came into being the fall of 1978, when the conference adopted that limitation to accommodate decreasing enrollment.

At that time, Bellevue, now absorbed as part of Wood River High School, Bliss and Dietrich were members. The latter two since have dropped football. In addition, Brunenu and Grand View high schools joined the purely football league. Those two left when they consolidated into Elkrock High School, which was in the A-3 classification.

At one time Hagerman did withdraw from the Magic Valley Conference and participate in the eight-man league.

As the membership of the Snake River Conference dwindled, Rockland, North Gem and Clark County went to eight-man and were admitted into the league.

Three years ago to Castelford, which had less than poor success in 11-man, petitioned for and won membership in the eight-man league. After one year of learning, the Wolves, representing the largest school by enrollment, became dominant and have gone undefeated the past two seasons, picking up two state championships along the way. But at the same time, Castelford, too, has been losing enrollment with virtually each graduating class.

During that time, with the exception of a three-year reign by Hagerman, Camas County dominated the league, winning six of the first eight state titles offered. But the Musers ran out of playing size and depth two seasons ago.

"We've talked to Murtaugh (down now to about 50 in its upper four grades) about it and they won't even think of it. Maybe that will change but for right now I don't see any way we could get Murtaugh into an eight-man league next fall or ever, the fall after. I've never talked to Hagerman about it really."

"But, yes," he answered a question, "we would be interested in a six-team league like that."

Any realignment that formed two eight-man teams from Castelford east would crimp the easy state playoff format now available with just two eight-man leagues.

"It presents another problem," Strood said, "but right now we're just interested in keeping our football programs alive."

BYU's McMahon sets more records in whipping Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Junior Jim McMahon passed for three touchdowns and ran for a fourth, bringing Utah to a 26-7 win over Utah in the 1980 Western Athletic Conference title Saturday.

The win was the Cougars' 10th straight this season and sends them into the Holiday Bowl against Southern Methodist University Dec. 19 at San Diego, Calif.

McMahon passed for 339 yards in the game. His three touchdowns passing gives him 42 this year, breaking the NCAA single-season record he shared with Dennis Shaw of San Diego State.

McMahon's 7-yard touchdown run was his fourth of the season, giving him a collegiate record 46 scores rushing and passing, which breaks the record that Shaw also set in 1969. Shaw had 39 TDs passing and 45 combined.

The BYU quarterback's touchdown throws included a 76-yard bomb to tight end Clay Brown in the third quarter. That pass put him over the 300 yard mark passing for the tenth consecutive time this year.

McMahon also threw a five yard touchdown pass to Brown and an 11-yarder to running back Eric Lane. Lane also scored on a pair of one-yard plunges for the Cougars. He rushed for 77 yards and caught five passes for another 53.

The nation's passing and total offense leader, McMahon completed 21 of 34 passes, with only one interception.

Utah's only score came in the opening seconds of the fourth quarter on freshman Hiriia Johnson's one-yard plunge. The score was set up by a face mask penalty giving the Utes a first down on the 19-17 ten. An offside penalty later moved the ball inside the five.

Washington 30, WSU 23

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Quarterback Tom Flick passed for 311 yards and three touchdowns Saturday to bring Rose Bowl-bound Washington from behind to a hard-fought 30-23 Pac-10 conference victory over Washington State.

The victory gave the 17th-ranked Huskies, 9-2, the Pac Ten Conference championship with a 6-1 record. The Cougars finished the year at 4-7 and 3-4.

After falling behind 14-0 after the first quarter, Flick brought the Huskies back on scoring passes of 22, 41 and 47 yards. Washington's other touchdown came on a 5-yard run by Willie Brown, while Chuck Nelson booted a 28-yard field goal with 1:37 left to ice the victory.

WSU quarterback Samoa Samoa ran for two touchdowns and passed for a third in a losing effort.

Turnovers proved critical in the game's early going, with both of the Huskies' two first-half touchdowns coming on the heels of Cougar fumbles. One of WSU's first-half touchdowns came after an interception of a Flick pass.

A last-minute Husky interception of a Samoa pass ended a late Cougar rally near midfield.

The Cougars left many of the Husky fans stunned when they jumped to an early 14-0 lead, the first score coming on a 34-yard run right up the middle by Samoa with 8:06 to go in the first quarter.

Samoa scored five minutes later on a 5-yard run, capping a drive in which punter Tim Davey completed a 56-yard pass to flanker John West in punt formation on fourth down.

Arizona 24, Oregon St. 17

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Freshman halfback Brian Holland scored two touchdowns in helping Arizona to a 24-17 victory over winless Oregon State in a Pac 10 football game Saturday played in cool, misty weather before a small crowd of 15,300.

The victory evened Arizona's record at 5-5, with one game left against the 10th-ranked Beavers. Oregon State, 0-10, plays its final contest against UCLA next week in the first American college football game every held in Japan.

Holland, a 5-foot-10, 195-pounder from Devon, Pa., ran 15 yards for his first score midway in the first period to climax the 59-yard, six-play drive.

Holland got his second touchdown down with 7:18 left in the game on a 5-yard run after Oregon State had gambled on fourth down at midfield and failed.

Oregon State's only touchdown came after a midfield gamble by Arizona failed early in the third period. On fourth and one, the Wildcats went for it, but were held. The Beavers then drove 50 yards to score on a 5-yard pass from quarterback Ed Singer to fullback Tony Robinson.

The Beavers threatened to tie the score as Robinson ran 41 yards and Singer 25, but the drive ended on the Arizona 5-yard line when Chris Mangold missed a 22-yard field goal attempt.

Arizona had 25 first downs to 14 for Oregon State and outlasted the Beavers 308 to 99.

Hawkins rips records as Reno belts Idaho

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Senior fullback Frank Hawkins rushed for 265 yards and four touchdowns Saturday in leading Nevada-Reno to a 38-7 victory over Idaho.

Hawkins became the third leading rusher in NCAA history with 5,333 yards. He ended the season with 1,719 yards on the ground, giving him his third straight Division I-AA rushing title.

The contest was his 21st consecutive 100-yard-plus performance and the fifth time in his career that he has rushed for more than 200 yards in a single game.

Idaho scored its only touchdown in the first quarter on a 9-yard run by Terry Ilder, but the Wolf Pack defense stifled and Hawkins controlled the INIT offense for the rest of the game.

The Wolf Pack did not throw a pass and rolled up 251 of its 411 rushing yards in the second half with Hawkins accounting for 155.

Hawkins' final run, the one that pushed him into the No. 3 NCAA spot, was a 47-yard scamper up the middle on first down late in the fourth quarter.

His other TD runs covered 4, 1 and 1 yards.

Portland St. embarrasses Weber St. 75-0

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Neil Lomax threw for five touchdowns and 474 yards to lead the Portland State Vikings to a 75-0 football victory over Big Sky Conference member Weber State.

The Vikings completed their regular season with an 8-3 record and now await the decision of NCAA Division I-AA officials regarding a playoff berth.

Lomax, the most prolific passer in NCAA history, completed his four-year career at PSU with 13,200 aerial yards. His senior season was his finest with 4,094 yards.

He tossed to Kenny Johnson for a 73-yard scoring play, 54 yards to Dave Simantel, 21 to Jeff Peterson, 14 to Clint Didier and 12 to Joel Frederick.

The Vikings scored four times in the first period, twice within four seconds; added three more touchdowns and a field goal in the second quarter; scored one TD and a field goal in the third period and a pair of touchdowns in the final quarter.

Portland State ran up 558 yards of passing offense, mostly on Lomax's 32 completions in 55 attempts, and tallied 426 yards of total offense, compared to 135 for the visiting Wildcats, who ended up with zero net yards rushing.

Boise State

Boise State provided all the defense and offensive fireworks in the first half, posting a 12-0 decision.

The Broncos led an early thrash when Phil Stamp picked off a BSU pass at the 13:19 but Boise State quickly forced a punt and went marching.

The big play was a 36-yard gainer from Joe Aioliotti to freshman Jake Jacoby that carried to the ISU 28.

From there BSU used Terry Zahner as a runner and a receiver the next three plays. He responded with 21 points but a holding penalty nullified them.

After one pass was ruled caught out of the end zone, Aioliotti hit Kipp Bedard for 27 yards and the go-ahead points with 25 seconds left in the first quarter. ISU blocked Kenrick Camerud's point-after kick.

The Broncos used up a lot of the second quarter on their next possession. They put together a 13-play drive that started with a scope long gainer to Jacoby. The Broncos moved rapidly until reaching a first-down at the 24. On third down, fullback David Hughes took a pitch that appeared to start a sweep to the right. Hughes pulled up and threw back to quarterback Aioliotti to make a good catch for the first down at the 14.

Zahner rammed the ball to the five on the next play and Aioliotti then scrambled out of the pocket for the second Bronco touchdown. A two-point conversion pass failed.

But at that point Idaho State's offense started moving a little. With the aid of a face mask penalty, ISU moved into BSU territory for the first time before going to punt. On its next possession Boise State closed enough for Case DeBrujn to try a 40-yard field goal. It strayed wide.

Hughes moved centerstage with the second-half kickoff. He reeled off a 33-yard run, picked up 11 on a screen pass and ran a four for six yards. That put the ball at the seven. Hinton ran to the five and Zahner to the one before Aioliotti hit Duane Dlouhy for the final yard and a 19-0 lead.

From that point on both teams moved the ball well. ISU rebounded on a three-straight strikes by Machurek and from the 29 he turned to Jerry Bird for a fourth strike at the six. Two passes and a penalty netted a loss of one yard before ISU turned to the throw back. Lamar Fite wound up throwing to Machurek who bang in from the seven with six minutes left. DeBrujn converted.

Shortly after the kickoff, Aioliotti left the field with a leg injury with 2:29 left in the third quarter.

The Broncos punted and Machurek immediately went back to the passing air. He worked for three first downs before Mike Bretillion picked a pass off. The Bronco drove inside the 10 and appeared headed for some breathing room. But ISU held, forcing a Camerud field goal try from point-blank range that missed.

Machurek immediately came back to the attack and drove the Bengals to a first down at the Boise State seven. But that ended when Bretillion made his second interception in the end zone. Boise State punter then gave his teammates more breathing room when he boomed a 71-yard kick to pin ISU back on its 20 again.

ISU had to punt back and Boise State appeared stopped and ready to return the kick. But the center snap went to Rick Wood who stunned ISU with a romp to the Bengal 29-yard line. ISU held but Camerud redeemed himself for missing the short field goal earlier when he drilled a 47-yarder. That made it 22-7 with 6:29 left in the game.

Machurek then hit four of five passes, the last three to Bird, to put the ball on the BSU 10 and Ray Zambrase plunged over from there with 4:50 left. But ISU's hopes dwindled when the wide-open Fite dropped the two-point pass in the end zone.

BSU's Wood then fell on the expected outside kick and BSU went the clock to 1:53 before punting. On the first play, ISU's doom was sealed when Don Brown picked off Machurek's last pass of the season.

Boise State provided all the defense and offensive fireworks in the first half, posting a 12-0 decision. The Broncos led an early thrash when Phil Stamp picked off a BSU pass at the 13:19 but Boise State quickly forced a punt and went marching.

From that point on both teams moved the ball well. ISU rebounded on a three-straight strikes by Machurek and from the 29 he turned to Jerry Bird for a fourth strike at the six.

But at that point Idaho State's offense started moving a little. With the aid of a face mask penalty, ISU moved into BSU territory for the first time before going to punt.

ISU had to punt back and Boise State appeared stopped and ready to return the kick. But the center snap went to Rick Wood who stunned ISU with a romp to the Bengal 29-yard line.

In NBA play

Cavs drops Celtics 113-98

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Randy Swope playing in his 700th consecutive NBA game, poured in 28 points and Kenny Carr added his season-high 22 Saturday night to pace the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 113-98 victory over the Boston Celtics.

Cleveland, hitting 55.5 percent from the field, poured in 28 points behind Smith's 23 points and took an 87-77 advantage into the final 12 minutes as Carr poured in 12 points in the third stanza.

Roger Phegley came off the bench to toss in 10 points for the Cavaliers in the second and Mike Mitchell added six points to ice the victory.

Pistons 117, Nets 103

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — Phil Holland scored 21 points and Keith Harris added 22 Saturday night to pace the Detroit Pistons to a 117-103 victory over the New Jersey Nets.

The victory was the second straight for the Pistons, 6-16, while the Nets lost their fifth game in their last six outings to drop to 8-14.

Detroit took an 18-2 lead by hitting eight straight field goal tries and then built a 58-48 halftime advantage. New Jersey, behind Cliff Robinson's 11 third-quarter points, cut the margin to one point with less than two minutes to play in the period.

Detroit took an 82-79 lead into the final quarter and outscored New Jersey 16-6 in the first four minutes of the period to up its margin to 88-85.

Greg Kelsey sank six straight free throws during the spurt.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Loyd Free scored a game-high 30 points, 18 in the final quarter, and Bernard King added 25 Saturday night to lead the Golden State Warriors to a 116-110 victory over the New York Knicks in the Golden State outdoor New York

Bulls 114, Bullets 101

CHICAGO (UPI) — Larry Kenon, Artis Gilmore, and David Greenwood combined for 67 points Saturday night to lead the Chicago Bulls to a 114-101 victory over the Washington Bullets.

Kenon had a game-high 28 points. He scored 11 points in the first quarter when the Bulls shot 56 percent and built up an 86-68 lead entering the final period.

In the third quarter the Bulls scored only 7 points in the first 7:56 and made only 6 of 20 shots for 30 percent. Washington rallied in the final period by scoring the first 9 points but the closest it could come was within 7 points, 96-89 with 6:30 left to play.

The Bulls scored six unanswered points to build up a 102-89 lead and were never threatened. Gilmore added 17 points and Greenwood 20. Guard Reggie Theus had 18.

Sixers 108, Spurs 101

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — Julius Erving led six Philadelphia players to a 108-101 victory with 26 points Saturday night, including nine in the fourth quarter, to lead the 7ers to their ninth straight victory, a 10-1 decision over the San Antonio Spurs.

The triumph was Philadelphia's 10th in last 19 games.

Darryl Dawkins, who added 14 points and 10 rebounds, hit two free throws with 1:44 left to put the Sixers up 102-101 and Erving, who scored 17 in the second half, hit two free throws to put Philadelphia ahead at 104-101.

Lionel Hollins and Maurice Cheeks each hit layups to ice the game. Philadelphia held San Antonio scoreless the last two minutes.

Spurs guard George Gervin, who hit 11 straight points in the fourth period, led all scorers with 30 but could not offset the absence of running mate James Silas, who was attending his father's funeral in Louisiana.

Jerome tops Wendell for fifth win

JEROME — Riding the scoring of Julie Hosman, the Jerome girls ran their record to 5-1 Saturday night by downing Wendell 18-10.

The Algea broke the game wide open with an 18-point second-quarter while Wendell, going without two starters, could manage only four.

Hosman, who has been a top gun for Coach Jim Stauffer the past three seasons, picked up 14 points as Jerome continued to win despite injuries. Stauffer said after the expected senior guard Marge Marshall, injured in the opener at Middleton, to return for the Burley game Dec. 10.

Purdue stops late Indiana bid 24-23

WEST-LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Ben McCall scored two touchdowns and senior linebacker Mike Marks knocked down a pass from Tim Clifford on a two-point conversion attempt Saturday to give Purdue a 24-23 victory over Indiana in the traditional battle for the Old Oaken Bucket.

The triumph gave Purdue a 38-15-3 lead in the Bucket series between the Big Ten rivals. Purdue finished the year with a 7-1 conference record and an 8-3 overall mark. Indiana wound up 3-5 in Big Ten play and 6-5 overall.

Quarterback Mark Herrmann, who owns most of Purdue's school passing records, completed 19 of 29 passes for 323 yards and one touchdown in his last appearance at Ross-Ade Stadium. His touchdown pass, a 20-yarder to Bart Burrell in the third quarter, was his first against Indiana in his career.

McCall's second touchdown, on a 4-yard run midway through the fourth quarter, gave Purdue a 24-17 lead.

Midwest

Later in the quarter Indiana started a drive at its own 35 and went 65 yards in 15 plays, scoring on a 10-yard pass from Tim Clifford to Steve Corso with 17 seconds remaining, making the score 24-21. Clifford tried to pass for a two-point conversion but it was knocked down by Marks.

Iowa blanks Michigan St.

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Senior split end Keith Chappelle scored one touchdown, set up another and broke two team records Saturday to lead Iowa to a season-ending 34-0 trouncing of Michigan State in a Big Ten match.

Junior quarterback Pete Gales tossed three touchdown passes for the Hawkeyes, who closed out the year with a 4-7 overall mark and a 4-4 Big Ten record. MSU wound up 3-8 overall and 2-6 in the conference.

Chappelle, who pulled in 10 passes on the day, set Iowa season records for receiving and total yardage, ending the year with 64 catches for 1,037 yards. He tied the Hawkeye season touchdown record with six.

Wisconsin rips Minnesota

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Freshman quarterback Jess Cole, making only his second start of the season, scored four touchdowns, including one on a 52-yard run, to spark Wisconsin to a 25-7 victory over Minnesota Saturday in a Big Ten season finale.

The victory gave Wisconsin a 4-7 record and 3-5 in the Big Ten. Minnesota, which was shooting for its first winning season in four years, finished 5-6 overall and 4-5 in the conference.

Missouri drills Kansas

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI) — Quarterback Phil Bradley, playing his final game before a hometown crowd, passed for 206 yards and two touchdowns Saturday to lead Missouri past Big Eight arch-rival Kansas 31-6.

The Jayhawks, 4-5-2, had entered the game with a slim hope for a bid to the Peach Bowl.

But the Tigers quickly marched for four unanswered first-half touchdowns, two on runs by Bob Meyer and James Wilder with Bradley adding his TD passes of 32 and 23 yards.

Ron Verrill contributed a 27-yard third-quarter field goal to round out the Tigers' scoring.

Kansas St. nips Colorado

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — Jim Jackson kicked a 17-yard field goal and L.J. Brown rushed for 148 yards and two touchdowns Saturday to lead Kansas State to a 17-14 victory over Colorado.

The game was a backluster affair until the final five minutes when the K-State defense intercepted two passes — the final one by Gary Morrill, setting up the winning drive. Morrill intercepted a Scott Kingdom pass with 2:48 left to give the Wildcats the ball at the 5-yard line.

Kansas State's Darrell Dickey huddles for a first down.

Nine plays later, after K-State had been stopped at the 1-yard line, Jackson kicked the shortest field goal of his career to win the game. The victory ended the Wildcats' season with a 1-6 Big Eight Conference record and a 3-8 mark overall.

Iowa State edges Cowboys

STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI) — Iowa State converted three Oklahoma State fumbles into touchdowns — two by Dwayne Cruichfield — to give the Cyclones a 23-21 Big Eight Conference victory Saturday over Oklahoma State.

Cruichfield scored on runs of 1 and 4 yards in the second quarter to lift Iowa State from a 14-10 deficit to a 23-14 halftime lead.

Wide receiver Jerry Lorenzen, being used as a running back on a special play, ran two yards for a Cyclone touchdown that also was set up by a Cowboy fumble.

Alex Giffords kicked a 41-yard field goal and added the extra point after two of the three ISU touchdowns. His attempt following Cruichfield's first score failed and it was the first time this season Giffords had missed a conversion kick.

Irish outlast Air Force

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Halfback Carter gained 181 yards and scored the go-ahead touchdown in the third quarter and reserve Jim Stone added to touchdowns to lift second-ranked Notre Dame to a 24-10 victory Saturday over stubborn Air Force.

The Irish, boosting their record to 9-1, held Air Force to only one first down through three and an half quarters and limited the Falcons to only 105 yards total offense.

Air Force finally broke the Irish school record of 23 quarters without allowing a touchdown by taking advantage of a turnover in the fourth quarter but the Falcons still fell to 2-8.

The two teams were tied at 3-all midway through the third quarter when the Irish marched 76 yards in 14 plays with Carter scoring on a 2-yard run with 5:17 left in the third quarter.

Baylor drops Texas to clinch crown

WACO, Texas (UPI) — Dennis Genry's touchdown runs of 61 and 16 yards and a critical fourth quarter interception by Cedrick Mack at his own goal line combined Saturday to bring Southwest Conference champion Baylor a 16-10 triumph over Texas and give the Bears their first 10-victory season ever.

On a chilled, damp day before a sellout crowd, Baylor ended its most successful regular season by completing an unbeaten march through its eight conference foes.

The eight-ranked Bears, who will meet Alabama Jan. 1 in the Cotton Bowl, defeated Texas at Waco for the fourth consecutive time and in the process set school records for interceptions and first downs. Walter Abercrombie also set a Baylor single season rushing mark with 1,187 yards.

Baylor ended its regular season with a 10-1 mark, spoiled only by a stunning setback against San Jose State, while Texas — bound for the Bluebonnet Bowl and a date with the North Carolina Tarheels — are 7-3 with a game left to play against traditional rival Texas A&M.

SMU tops Texas Tech

HOUSTON (UPI) — Sophomore tailback Johnny Hector ran for 191 yards Saturday, including a 32-yard draw play for a fourth quarter touchdown, to help Texas A&M defeat TCU, 13-10.

TCU, trying to snap the Aggies' seven-game victory streak in the series, had A&M pinned down at its 1-1 yard line early in the fourth quarter after a punt, but quarterback David Best passed 43 yards to Earnest Jackson on the first play and five plays later Hector followed two blocks at the line of scrimmage to score from 32 yards out.

A&M added a 21-yard field goal by Steve Hardy to secure its first victory in its last six games after

Leonard stresses street fighting

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Sugar Ray Leonard, who has never missed a chance to call welterweight champ Roberto Duran a bully and an all-round dirty guy, is trying to bend his own style a bit from a gym-style to a mean city street style.

Sparring partner Dale Staley was keeping a constant pressure on Leonard, pushing the former champ into corners and holding him there for roughhouse maulings in the style of Duran.

Suddenly, Leonard erupted with a display of brute force, bulling his way out of the corner and sending Staley sprawling to the canvas with a beautifully executed body slam.

Leonard and manager Angelo Dundee have been working in secret all week to respond to Duran's "foul" tactics — by returning them in kind.

"As Duran doeth, Duran will get it," Dundee said.

Asked about the wrestling tactics at a news briefing Friday, Leonard said he had learned an important lesson about working against Duran in their first meeting in Montreal.

"I feel this time around I'll give back what I receive," he said. "What I was doing was just a matter of using rough tactics."

Leonard said he might have "to revert to street tactics" this time.

As whether he would box, fight or wrestle Duran Tuesday in the Superdome, Leonard responded simply: "It makes no difference."

Miami earns bid to Peach Bowl

MIAMI (UPI) — Quarterback Jim Kelly and receiver Larry Brodsky shredded the North Texas State secondary Saturday to power the Miami Hurricanes to a 28-8 victory over the Mean Green, and a trip to the Peach Bowl in Atlanta Jan. 2.

Miami, now 7-3 with one game remaining against Florida next Saturday, will face Virginia Tech (6-3) in the nationally televised bowl.

North Texas State finished its season at 6-5.

The bid was extended by Peach Bowl Selection Committee Chairman Art Gregory and came only after it was learned that Stanford had lost its game to California, 28-21. Stanford had been considered a leading candidate for the bowl, along with Indiana, which also lost Saturday, 24-23 to Purdue.

It will be the first bowl appearance for Miami since the 1967 Bluebonnet Bowl.

"I feel so proud of this football team for what they set out to do and what they achieved when everyone thought they were down," said Miami Coach Howard Schnellenberger. "We look the symbol of the Phoenix bird by rising out of the ashes."

The Hurricanes went into the second half leading 10-0 on a 1-yard touchdown run by Chris Hobbs and a 42-yard field goal by Danny Miller. Miller added two more three-pointers from 29 and 41 yards and Kelly hit Brodsky on a post pattern for a clinching 37-yard touchdown with 10:46 left in the game.

Miller added a school record fourth field goal from 42 yards out with 42 seconds left in the game.

The Eagles finally scored with 3:52 left in the game when freshman quarterback Greg Carter sneaked over from the one and Malcolm Jones made a two-point conversion over the right side of North Texas State line.

The Eagle touchdown finished off a 15-play, 80-yard drive highlighted by completions from Carter of 18 yards to Ron Battle, and 15 yards and 19 yards to Marvin Walker.

The final Hurricane touchdown was set up when Miami took over on the Eagle 42 as a result of a short 30-yard punt. On the first play, Kelly and Brodsky hooked up for 14 yards and two plays later they tried again and scored.

Miami scored the first time it got the ball in the first half, rolling 55 yards in nine plays. The big gainers were passes of 17 and 16 yards from Kelly to running back Mark Rush, setting up Hobbs' 1-yard score.

Woods paces Gobbler Classic

TWIN FALLS — Leslie Woods covered the six mile course in 32 minutes, 36 seconds Saturday morning to take first place for men in the Gobbler Classic Run.

Mimi Ritten won the women's division by covering the course in 44:04.

The winners in the three mile event were Claude Goodrich in 14:32 and Vickie Crombie in 20:06.

Fifty-one runners took part in the race and 26 turkeys were awarded as prizes. Turkeys went to the four winners and to those who came closest to guessing the time it would take them to complete the course.

Ed Tyrrell predicted he would cover the three miles in 18:20 and that's exactly the time he finished in. Fred Bodin guessed a time of 42:00 for the six miles and he ran it in 42:01.

The event, the first in what organizers hope will be an annual affair, was sponsored by the Magic Valley Run Runners and Magic Valley YFCA.

O'Leary to host outlas tourney

TWIN FALLS — The fourth annual O'Leary Christmas Outlaw basketball tournament will accept entries through Dec. 9.

Clarence Phillips, co-tournament director, said the tournament will be divided into A and B divisions and teams will be restricted to those with players from Magic Valley.

Phillips said the tournament will be single elimination with consolation. Playing dates will be Dec. 20, afternoon and evening, and evenings of Dec. 22 and 23. All action will be at the O'Leary Gymnasium.

Further information may be obtained by calling Phillips at 733-1701 or O'Leary Junior High School at 733-2153.

Lombardi award finalists announced

HOUSTON (UPI) — Defensive ends Hugh Green of Pitt and E.J. Junior of Alabama, nose guard Ron Simmons of Florida State and linebacker Mike Singletary of Baylor Saturday were named finalists in voting for the Lombardi Award that goes to the nation's outstanding college lineman.

The winner will be announced December 12. The finalists, all seniors, were chosen by a committee of 96 coaches, sports writers and broadcasters who will vote again to determine the recipient of the block of granite symbolizing the late Vince Lombardi.

Green, 6-2, 225 pounds, was a Lombardi finalist last year. He was named to the Pitt All-Time team as a sophomore. Simmons, 6-1, 235, was the only lineman in the top 10 Heisman Trophy voting last year.

Kuhn clears Atlanta's Turner

ATLANTA (UPI) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has closed an investigation of Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner's tampering in outfielder Gary Matthews' dealings with the San Francisco Giants, prior to signing Matthews away from the club in that year's free agent draft.

"Yes, Turner was being investigated concerning tampering charges involving Winfield," said Vince Naus, a spokesman for Kuhn in New York. "We were looking into charges before the re-entry draft, but we have no reason to believe there were any rule violations."

Eskimos seek third Grey Cup

TORONTO (UPI) — The Edmonton Eskimos, with the most productive offense in the history of the Canadian Football League, admit that only perfection can stop their drive for a third straight Grey Cup Sunday against the Hamilton Tiger-Cats — "Beast from the East" defense.

The Tiger-Cats agree.

The Eskimos and the Tiger-Cats went through light workouts Saturday before secluding themselves to avoid the non-stop parties, pageants, and festive rowdiness that have become a fixture of Canada's Super Bowl week.

Ranger ready to hire Brooks

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Rangers fired non-productive coach Fred Shero at a team practice Saturday and named operations director Gary Patrick interim coach until U.S. Olympic hockey hero Herb Brooks can assume command.

The Rangers refused to say outright that Brooks, who led Poland to an upset gold-medal victory over the Soviet Union at Lake Placid, N.Y., last February, would take over when his contract with the Davos club in Switzerland expires next March. But there were indications when Brooks turned down an offer to coach the Colorado Rockies he was waiting for just such an opportunity to coach a possible contender.

ABC Radio Sports reported that Brooks said in a telephone conversation from his Swiss home that he would join the Rangers when his overseas obligations are fulfilled, but would not confirm he is in line to become coach.

Clemson pins 27-6 upset on South Carolina

CLEMSON, S.C. (UPI) — Senior safety Willie Underwood capped his Clemson career with two interceptions that resulted in touchdowns and Obed Arieli kicked three field goals Saturday to lead the Tigers to a stunning 27-6 victory over 15th-ranked South Carolina.

Tiger fullback Jeff McCall ran 15 yards with 2:24 left in the game for a final touchdown to spoil the Gator Bowl-bound Gamecocks' chances for their best record. South Carolina finished the season 8-3 and Clemson was 6-5.

The Tigers broke a 6-6 tie in the third quarter after Underwood ran back his first interception 64 yards. Quarterback Homer Jordan scored on a 1-yard keeper with 32 seconds left in the quarter to make the score 13-6.

Minutes later, Underwood ran back his second interception 37 yards for a score with 14:13 left in the game. They were his only two career interceptions.

McCall's touchdown in the closing minutes made the final score 27-6.

The Tigers scored on a pair of Arieli field goals in the first half. The first came with 4:47 left in the opening quarter, from 41 yards out and was set up by a 54-yard pass from Jordan to wide receiver Perry Tuttle.

South Carolina's Eddie Leopard kicked a 39-yard field in the first quarter with 1:51 on the clock. The score came after a 35-yard romp by Heisman Trophy candidate and college Rogers — his longest of the game.

Rogers finished with 168 yards rushing, although Clemson defensive back Steve Durham seemed to have a permanent assignment to key on him. Rogers gained over 100 yards every game of his senior season.

Maryland 31, Virginia 0
CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (UPI) — Charlie Wysocki ran for 148 yards and a touchdown Saturday to break Maryland's single-season rushing record and the Tangerine Bowl-bound Terrapins scored three fourth-quarter touchdowns in a 31-0 Atlantic Coast Conference romp over Virginia.

Wysocki, a 5-foot-11, 204-pound junior fullback, rushed for 1,359 yards this season, breaking the mark of 1,261 set by Steve Atkins. The Terps, 8-3, meet Florida Dec. 20 in the Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Fla.

Wysocki scored on a 50-yard run midway in the third quarter to cap a 10-play, 49-yard drive in which he carried the last nine plays.

Maryland's other scores, two set up by Virginia mistakes, came on Wayne Wingfield's 3-yard run, Tim Whittle's 10-yard run and a 23-yard pass from reserve quarterback Brent Dewitz to split end Mike Lewis. Dale Castro kicked a 25-yard field goal in the first quarter.

The Cavaliers, ending their season at 4-7 after a winning 6-5 mark last season, gained just 75 yards, 12 on the ground, in the first half. The closest they came to scoring was late in the fourth quarter when they drove to the Maryland 36, but Wayne Morrison's 52-yard field goal attempt was short.

Vols 45, Kentucky 14
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Speedster Willie Gault raced 92 yards with the opening kickoff and burned Kentucky with a 48-yard touchdown reception and James Berry bulled for 125 yards Saturday to lead Tennessee to its 14th rout of the Wildcats.

Gault, a world-class sprinter and wide receiver, had Tennessee up 7-0 with only 11 seconds gone in the game with the kickoff return. He completed the rout by outracing defenders in the final period to haul down the touchdown pass from quarterback Jeff Olszewski.

Berry kept the Wildcats off balance with his running in the well-balanced Tennessee attack that was also aided by the passing of quarterback Steve Alatorre.

The 45 points scored by the Vols was more points than Tennessee had scored in its last four games — all losses — combined. The victory improves Tennessee's record to 4-6 with Kentucky limited to the year's 3-8.

Following Gault's kickoff return, the Wildcats came back to knot the score 7-7 on quarterback Larry McCrimmon's 1-yard run, but the Vols went ahead 14-7 on freshman Vernon Phillips' 1-yard plunge in the second period.

N.C. 44, Duke 21
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina's tailback duo of Amos Lawrence and Kelvin Bryan rushes for two touchdowns apiece and each broke the 1,000-yard mark Saturday, enabling the 13th-ranked Tar Heels to crush arch-rival Duke, 44-21, and clinch the Atlantic Coast Conference title.

Lawrence, who entered the game with 975 yards, broke loose for a 56-yard touchdown in the first period to join Tony Dorsett as the only college players in history to rush for more than 1,000 yards four straight seasons. He finished with 103 yards and ends the season with 1,118.

Bryan, who had 840 yards going into the game, rushed for 199, much of it on time-consuming drives in the second half that stifled a Duke comeback threat.

It is the 11th time that two runners from the same team have rushed for more than 1,000 yards in a single season.

Miss. St. 19, Miss. 14
JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Quarterback John Bond galloped 57 yards for one touchdown and fired a 54-yard pass to set up another Saturday to lift 16th-ranked Mississippi State to a 19-14 victory over arch-rival Mississippi in a rainy regular-season finale for both teams.

Bond, a 200-pound freshman from

South

Valdosta, Ga., rushed and passed for a total of 314 yards in guiding the Bulldogs to their ninth victory against two defeats — their best record since a 9-0-1 mark in 1940.

Mississippi State already had accepted an invitation to play in the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Texas, on Dec. 27.

The Rebels, who wound up 3-8, trailed most of the overcast afternoon but pushed ahead 14-13 with 8:20 left on a 7-yard scoring pass from quarterback John Fourcade to flanker Gino English. Their hopes for an upset, however, were quickly dashed.

Bond fired to split end Glen Young on a play covering 54 yards; and halfback Michael Haddix scored on the next play on a 10-yard run to clinch the triumph.

The Bulldogs took an early 10-0 lead in the first quarter when Bond, getting a key downfield block from Haddix, sprinted 57 yards for State's lone touchdown of the first half. Sophomore Dana Moore kicked a 24-yard field goal in the first quarter and added a 32-yarder in the final period.

N.C. State wins

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Andre Marks and Eddie Jackson scored a little more than a minute apart in the third quarter Saturday to make up for numerous North Carolina State mistakes and give the Wolfpack a 36-14 victory over East Carolina.

The victory ended the Wolfpack's year at 6-5, but North Carolina State's play during the first half made it appear the Wolfpack was intent on a losing season.

A 37-yard return of the opening kickoff by senior Anthony Collins gave East Carolina, which finished the season 4-7, a 7-0 lead with just 16 seconds gone in the game.

North Carolina State had one pass intercepted and fumbled four times in the first half.

Can hospitals afford new CT scanner?

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Imagine being able to carefully examine a slice of bread without removing it from the loaf.

Doctors are now able to examine a "slice" of the human body without actually "going in" with exploratory surgery.

Using a remarkable new machine called a Computed Tomography (CT) Scanner, doctors are able to peer inside the human body with a clarity not achieved before.

A CT scanner uses x-rays and a computer to project the image of a thin cross-section of the head or body on a video screen. Unlike conventional x-rays, a CT scan shows muscles and organs as well as bone and picks up slight variations in tissues to reveal abnormalities.

Scientists hail CT scanning as the most significant advance in diagnostic medicine since the discovery of x-rays. Manufacturers predict the CT scanner, which looks like a device out of Star Trek, will someday be standard hospital equipment.

In 1978, just eight years after its introduction, about 1,400 head and body scanners were in use, according to the National Electrical Manufacturers Association.

Magic Valley Memorial Hospital has yet to invest in a CT scanner, although renovation plans set aside room for one in the future. Three Idaho hospitals have scanners, and a fourth is in the process of buying one.

But increasing purchases of CT scanners, one of the most expensive machinery investments a hospital can make, have provoked some opposition from insurance companies and state agencies aiming to hold down health care costs.

A CT scanner can cost $125,000 to $750,000, depending on how it is equipped, according to Aetna Life and Casualty. A full-body scan made by General Electric, one of the leaders in the Computed Tomography field, sells for $350,000.

A CT scanner is "about the most expensive, single piece of equipment you can find around," said John Collins of the Idaho Health Systems Agency.

Aetna calls the CT Scanner "the most visible example of institutional pride leading to proliferation" of expensive equipment.

"There's a little bit of keeping up with the Joneses (among hospitals)," Collins said. "They get one, so we need to get one."

All major hospital purchases, such as CT scanners, are subject to the Certificate of Need process, which includes analysis by the HSA. Collins questioned whether every hospital needs a CT scanner. He especially wonders if rural hospitals, with their smaller population, can generate enough scanning business to make the scanner cost-effective and keep hospital rates down.

But local doctors emphatically support CT scanners. Not only does it provide doctors with information quickly without major discomfort for the patient, but it can be cost effective in eliminating exploratory surgery and long hospital stays, they feel.

"It will be, in the very short future, an absolutely essential part of the medical practice," said Dr. R. Dennis Davis, head of MVMH's radiology department.

Lois Gordon, administrator of Bannock Memorial Hospital, Pocatello, said "Many people feel hospitals over 100 beds may well be able to justify installation of a full-body CT scanner."

CT scanning is part of a major component in medical "imaging." Previously, computers analyzed images produced by x-rays; in computed tomography, the computer creates the image.

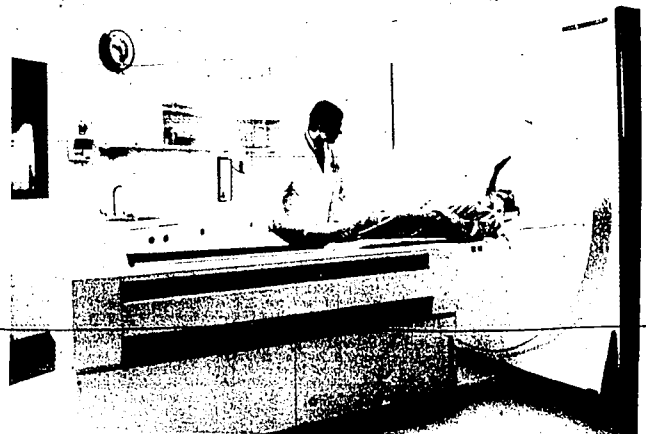

CT scanning was first developed for head examinations to allow doctors to distinguish tumors from healthy brain tissues. The first U.S. head-scanning units were installed in the Mayo Clinic and Massachusetts General Hospital in 1973. Whole-body scanning was developed later; the first such machine was installed in 1974.

Now, the scan of a one centimeter "slice" of a human body may take seconds with the GE model scanner. When the patient's body or head is correctly positioned inside the scanner's doughnut-shaped opening, x-ray tubes and detectors rotate in a complete circle about the patient. The tubes emit a tiny stream of radiation pulses collected by the detectors, which measure the density of tissue by the amount of radiation absorbed.

A computer translates these measurements into a black, white and grey image projected on a video screen. Although a tumor varies in density only slightly from surrounding normal tissues, a CT scan can pick up the variations.

As in x-rays, patients feel nothing. A series of scans may be made to explore a particular part of the body. Doctors can thus pinpoint problems and are provided with a precise "roadmap" if surgery is warranted.

CT head scans have replaced

G. E.'s Total Body Scanner system can do entire scan of head or body in 4.8 seconds other, more painful methods of brain scans and have become useful in emergency diagnosis of head injuries.

The use of body scanning continues to expand from examining the lungs to the thorax to the pancreas and other organs. A 1978 study at Massachusetts General Hospital "substantiates the major role of CT scanning in evaluation of patients with unexplained upper abdominal pain."

The Sciences magazine reports CT technology to be a "relatively safe technology although it does expose patient to ionizing radiation." The dose may be higher than that of a normal chest x-ray, but head scanning radiation is lower than that of other diagnostic procedures. However, pregnant women are urged not to undergo CT scanning.

"Whenever we're using radiation, we're talking about the benefits versus the risk," Dr. Davis said. "No one knows what the bottom line is (on radiation's effects)."

CT information from GE states: "The matter of patient dose is often academic if the power of the diagnostic tool outweighs the risk in the severely ill."

But the main concerns about CT scanning are "social and economical" not medical, said Dr. James Prochaska, radiologist with St. Alphonsus Hospital, Boise, which has both a head and a body scanner.

At St. Alphonsus, a routine head scan is $235; a complete body scan is $350. At St. Anthony Community Hospital in Pocatello, a head scan is $250; Gordon feels the Pocatello hospital's lower volume may lead to its higher prices. In comparison, chest or head x-rays normally run $35 to $40 in Idaho.

Collins feels a major problem with CT scanning investments is rapid innovations which quickly outdate the machinery. Newly developed "ultra-sound" techniques an "imaging" process using sonar instead of radiation, costs much less than CT equipment, he said.

Prochaska, however, said information from CT scanning and ultra sound "complements each other" but does not overlap in the same area. "You can't replace one with the other," he said, adding that CT scanning was a better tool than ultra-sound in the areas for which it was used.

Dr. Davis feels the cost of a CT scanner would be justified at MVMH with the number of people it serves. Presently, patients are usually referred to Boise hospitals. He also contends it will save patients money by allowing them to forego costly exploratory surgery and shortening or eliminating hospital stays.

One solution to the high cost of CT scanning for smaller hospitals, now used in California, is the mobile CT scanning unit, which travels to various hospitals. As most CT scans are not for emergencies, scanning appointments can be scheduled ahead.

About a year ago, a Southern Idaho mobile CT unit was proposed by a group of hospital administrators. The proposal was dropped after being opposed by physicians who felt it did not adequately serve the area's needs, according to Gordon.

However, Gordon feels the idea served as a "catalyst" for individual hospitals to purchase CT scanners. Body scanners are scheduled to be installed in St. Luke's Hospital in Boise and Idaho Falls Consolidated Hospital, which already has a head scanner.

The debate over CT scanning is not over whether it is a valuable tool. It is whether smaller hospitals can afford to have one. Or whether they can afford not to.

Nancy Davis Reagan remains enigma to press

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — What is Nancy Reagan really like?

What sort of social life, what sort of private life will she be able to establish at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue?

Will she be another Jacqueline Kennedy? Another Mamie Eisenhower? Certainly not a Bess Truman, a Betty Ford, a Pat Nixon.

Nancy Reagan elicits more controversy among some people than her president-elect husband, whom she clearly, admittedly, adores.

The glare of Hollywood klieg lights during Nancy Davis' movie career pales compared with the white hot light of public attention now focused on Nancy Reagan. She finds finds herself — reluctantly — a continuing media event.

Essentially, a private person thrust into international celebrity, the tiny (size 6, 106-pound) Nancy accepts the detailed scrutiny as the price of furthering her husband's political career. And many feel she, not Ronald — is the driving, ambitious force in the Reagan family.

No question is too trivial these days — will she serve hot dogs in the White House? (No). Liquor? (Yes). Include Hollywood pals at parties? (Yes). Attend cabinet meetings like Rosalynn Carter? (No).

Nancy's answers by now are rote after months on the campaign. But despite countless hours of interviews, Nancy Davis Reagan remains an unknown quantity to the media and, therefore, to the American public.

Reporters find her distantly amiable — she passed out chocolates on campaign trips and rolled an orange down the center aisle of the plane during takeoff — but when questions turn personal, she turns aloof and guarded.

Because by nature she is reserved with strangers, Nancy has taken her licks in print.

She has been called cold and calculating, the brains and the ambition behind her husband. Her autobiography, "Nancy," has been scored for clues to her personality and character. Columnist Maxine Cheshire of the Washington Post printed a story that Nancy was born in 1921, not 1923 — placing her considerably closer to 60 than her professed 57.

The Los Angeles Herald Examiner published a lengthy and unflattering five-part profile — friends called it a vicious hatchet job — which contained many unattributed quotes from "close associates."

Unlike Jacqueline Kennedy, with whom the media had an enduring love affair, Nancy Reagan is encountering some hostility in the weeks before she becomes mistress of the White House.

The two women do, however, share a discriminatory eye for fashion. Nancy's wardrobe includes such designers as Adolfo, Bill Blass, Galanos and other high-priced fashion leaders.

Reporters sometimes don't know what to make of her.

One who traveled on the campaign said Nancy "makes me feel that she is somehow better than we are. It's nothing she says—just her attitude."

Another reporter, a woman, said, "She is very controlled and has built an impenetrable wall around herself. They admire her moral standards, her devotion to Reagan, her courage in standing at his side during a long, arduous campaign."

Said Bonita Granville Wrather, a former actress and the wife of businessman-showman Jack Wrather, a Reagan adviser:

"I've known Nancy for more than 20 years. She's well-bred, meticulous and intelligent. She will discharge the duties of the first lady in her own unique way.

"I can't comprehend the media antagonism toward Nancy. The press gets furious because she won't talk about subjects she considers private — her relationship with her children and husband. What woman would discuss those matters publicly?"

"And they've already singled out her circle of friends, calling it 'The Group' as if we were some kind of court or something. They accuse her of having only rich and powerful friends. She has had the same friends for 20 years or more."

Nancy counts among her closest confidants Marion Jorgensen, Betty Wilson, Betsy Bloomfield, Harriet Deutsch, Jean French Smith and Jane Dart. Their husbands are powerful and enormously wealthy.

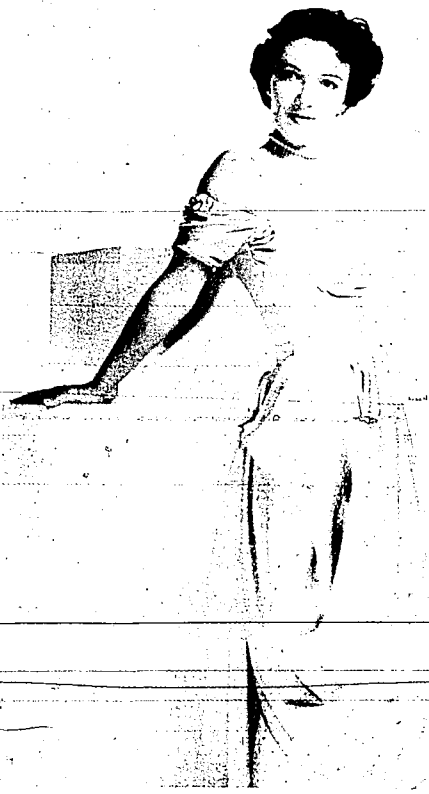

While Nancy was not born with a silver spoon in her mouth — in New York on July 6, 1923, she says — neither has she known hard times or privation: She is the daughter of one-time actress Edith Dee-Dee Luckett and automobile salesman

Kenneth Robbins.

Her father left her mother when Nancy was an infant. As a child — for five years — she was left with relatives when her mother was on the road.

Her mother divorced Robbins and married Dr. Loyal Davis, a Chicago surgeon. Nancy remains close to her adoptive father — a strong influence in her life — and her mother, who now make their home in Phoenix, Ariz.

Nancy was reared in upper middle class security. She attended Chicago's chic Girls Latin School there and went on to Smith College to major in drama.

MR. AND MRS. MANLEY HANSON

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Manley Hanson will be honored at an open house to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary Nov. 28. The event will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in the First Nazarene Church in Twin Falls. All friends and relatives are invited. Hanson and Emma Knutson were married Nov. 29, 1930, at Crosby, N. D. They moved to the Twin Falls area from North Dakota in 1936. He built a number of houses in this area. Mrs. Hanson belongs to the First Nazarene Church and the Salmon Tract Homemakers Extension Club. The couple has six children, Mrs. Ora W. (Mildred) Jones of Hollister, Allen Hanson of Portland, Mrs. Don (Virginia) Oliver of Tacoma, Wash.; Gary Hanson of Twin Falls, Mrs. Bob (Donna) Ellingwood of Vancouver, Wash., and Donald Hanson of Aloha, Ore. There are 15 grandchildren.

MR. AND MRS. EARL H. MASON

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Earl H. Mason of Twin Falls will be honored Nov. 29 in observance of their 50th wedding anniversary. All relatives and friends are invited to an open house from 2 until 5 p.m. at the American Legion Hall in Filer. Mason and Freda Garlipp were married Nov. 19, 1930, in Seneca, Kan. He was engaged in farming and Mrs. Mason worked in the hot lunch program at the Filer Elementary School. They are both members of Peace Lutheran Church in Filer. The open house will be hosted by their nine children, Mrs. Dorothy Brown, Marjorie Evans and Mrs. Judy Barlow, all of Las Vegas, Nev.; Leland Mason of Springfield, Ore.; Jack Mason of Salt Lake City; Mrs. Georgene Malaperdas of Ely, Nev.; Mrs. Marsha Lively of Kuna, and Kenneth Mason and Peggy Sparks, both of Twin Falls.

MR. AND MRS. H. BRADLEY BISHOP

BUHL — Mr. and Mrs. H. Bradley Bishop of Buhl will be honored Nov. 29 in observance of their 50th wedding anniversary. All relatives and friends are invited to an open house from 3 to 5 p.m. at Lincoln Courts, 1310 West Main in Buhl. Bradley and Hazel Reynolds were married Nov. 29, 1930, in Pryor, Okla. He was engaged in farming in the Buhl and Castleford areas. The open house will be hosted by their six children, Bonnie-Louise of Twin Falls, Mrs. Connie Thatcher of Odgen, Mrs. Sharon Mulligan of Lake Stevens, Wash., Mrs. Mary Griggs, Bradley Bishop and Don Bishop, all of Buhl.

MR. AND MRS. NEWELL D. DICKSON

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls couple will mark their 40th wedding anniversary Nov. 28 at a reception also honoring their newly married son-in-law and daughter. Both couples were married Nov. 7. Honorees are Mr. and Mrs. Newell D. Dickson of Twin Falls and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wallstedt. Wallstedt and Joan Dickson Hochstrasser were married this fall in Spanish Fork, Utah, where they now reside. Friends of both couples are invited to the open house at the Dickson home, 443 Fourth Ave. N., Twin Falls from 7 to 9 p.m. Nov. 28. The event is being hosted by the Dicksons' children and their spouses. Dickson and Beth Archibald met while attending Brigham Young University, where he majored in agronomy and she in journalism. After their marriage in the LDS Temple in Mantu, Utah, they spent several years in western Washington. In the 1950s he was transferred to Pocatello as an agronomist for the Pacific Supply Co.-ops. The couple has taught school in Pocatello, Wayan, Burley, Declo, Midvale, Murtaugh and Twin Falls. They both have obtained realtors licenses and Dickson was in the home construction business when the couple served a mission for the LDS church in Philadelphia in 1978-79. Dickson presently is serving in the bishopric of his ward and she is meeting house librarian. They serve weekly in the Twin Falls Genealogy Library. Their children include Mrs. Jack (Cheryl) Strauss of Rupert, Kent Dickson of Pittsburgh, Mrs. Larry (Pae) Burgener of Brigham City, O., David Dickson of Astoria, Ore.; Mrs. Jerry (Karen) Fenn of Caldwell, S. Sgt. Clark R. Dickson, stationed in Korea, Ruth Blubaugh of Spanish Fork and Mrs. Patrick (Luana) Henry of Snohomish, Wash., and Mrs. Wallstedt. They have 32 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

DR. AND MRS. M. A. DRAKE

BUHL — Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Drake, former Buhl residents now of Mesa, Ariz., will be honored here Nov. 29 on their 50th wedding anniversary. The reception will be held from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Lincoln Courts Recreation hall in Buhl, hosted by friends in this area. Attending will be the Drakes' three daughters and their families, Mrs. Chester (Ann) Lind of College Place, Wash.; Mrs. John (Lois) Westerholm of Los Gatos, Calif., and Mrs. Ronald (Janette) Van Arsdell of Joliet, Ill. All friends of the family and former patients of Dr. Drake are invited.

MR. AND MRS. ELLIS FULLER

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Fuller will be honored Nov. 30 in observance of their 40th wedding anniversary. The open house will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Denis (Ellen) Taylor, Route 1, Twin Falls. The Taylor home is 7 3/4 miles south of Twin Falls on Blue Lakes Blvd. S. Fuller and Arline Shaffer were married Dec. 1, 1940, in Burley. They farmed on the Salmon tract for many years. The reception is being given by their children, Mrs. Jon (Carol) Wells of Castleford, Mrs. Lyle (Fritz) Fuller of Twin Falls, Mrs. Fred (Eva) Smith of Oscoda, Mich., and Mrs. Taylor. The couple has nine grandchildren.

Poisoning risk

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — People who play chemist in the kitchen or bath by mixing their own cleaning solutions risk accidental poisoning from chlorine gas, the same gas that maimed or killed soldiers in World War I. Pharmacy Prof. Roger Maickel says the gas is released when you add bleach to a household cleaner. Maickel, a Purdue University poison expert, says self-medication with a mixture of drugs can be just as dangerous. Before combining drugs or drugs and alcohol, consult your doctor or pharmacist, he says. Maickel is head of the pharmacology and toxicology department of the Purdue School of Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences.

Slice half gallon
If you've been purchasing ice cream by the half gallon to save money, did you know that you can slice that in half and have two quarts? If you cut that half gallon into four, it provides four pints. If you wish, separate into plastic containers with light lids for freezer storage or wrap with pliable plastic wrap, then freezer wrap to prevent ice crystals from forming.

Readers recall day Kennedy was shot

By ABIGAIL VUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: I invited readers to tell me where they were when they first heard that President Kennedy had been shot. I've received over 16,000 responses, and they're still pouring in! Some excerpts from this incredible collection:

"How could I forget that day? I had gone to the grocery store, where I heard the shocking news. I rushed home immediately to find my dear husband slumped in his chair — dead of a massive heart attack! The radio beside him was still blasting in — LILLIAN MILLER, PHOENIX, ARIZ.

"I was on the operating table in the middle of a hemorrhoidectomy when a nurse rushed in and shouted, 'Doctor, I just heard that President Kennedy was shot in Dallas!' The doctor dropped the instrument he was holding and gasped, 'Oh my God! He was left in a jackknife position until he regained his composure, after which he completed the surgery with somewhat unsteady hands. Later, the former stuck her head in the room and said, 'Sorry, Doc, I guess that news could have waited.' To which he replied, 'It sure as hell could have!' — ATLANTA CONSTITUTION READER

"I was in third grade in a Catholic school when the news came over the loudspeaker. The sister cried, then we were all sent home. At that age we thought that was the way we got our presidents. Later when I saw Mrs. Kennedy on TV moving out of the White House so Mrs. Johnson could move in, I thought, 'The least they could do for Mrs. Kennedy was to let her keep the house.' — PETER J. SMALL, L.A., CALIF.

"I was working as a pharmacist in a drugstore when I heard the terrible news. A few minutes later two women came in. I asked if they had heard President Kennedy had been shot. One said, 'Yeah, but it don't mean nothing to us because we're Republicans.' I couldn't believe my ears." — EVA IN ANAHEIM

"President Kennedy's assassination was announced as I entered USC's dental clinic, where 24 students were working on patients. Twenty-four dental instruments were held skyward and 48 mouths opened simultaneously — 49 including my own." — ELBERTA, LONG BEACH

"I was in the waiting room of my psychiatrist's office, slightly early for my appointment. I had a transistor radio with a silent attachment plugged into my ear. When I heard the shocking news, I ran to the desk girl and shouted, 'The president has been shot!' She came out, calmly took my arm, led me into the doctor's office and asked the doctor to see me at once!" — ST. LOUIS MEMORIES

"I was in the peace Corps in Liberia, West Africa, when the tragic news came over the short-wave radio on the Voice of America. I will always remember the deep sorrow expressed by the people of Liberia over the death of the man who had inspired me to join the Peace Corps." — RAY HATLER, L.A.

"My husband and I (both Canadians) were in our hardware store in Hamilton, Ontario, when we heard the first bulletin on the radio. We and our customers waited in shock and disbelief for further news. We Canadians shared your grief. The border, after all, is at times only an imaginary line." — MARY AND RONALD NICE

"We were at the Imperial Hotel in Tokyo when some Americans we had just met shamed us from the lobby to give us the news. We joined them downstairs and wept openly with other Americans. The Japanese, reputed to be unemotional, wept with us.

J.F.K. was loved by them and still is." — JACK AND ELLA, N.Y.C.

"I was in London attending a ballet starring Dame Margot Fonteyn and Rudolf Nureyev when the manager interrupted the performance to say, 'England has lost one of her greatest friends. President Kennedy was assassinated.' We were stunned. Flags were flown at half mast, and for days afterward, strangers stopped me on the street to express sympathy." — EDWARD G. BEST, SAN FRANCISCO

"On Nov. 22, 1963, I was in my mother's lap, crying. Why? Because she was." — SUSAN STILLWATER, OKLA.

MR. AND MRS. JEFFREY MILLER

Phillips-Miller

TWIN FALLS — Deborah Phillips and Jeffrey Miller exchanged wedding vows Aug. 2.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Charles J. Kadlecik of Castro Valley, Calif., and Lelon E. Phillips of San Leandro, Calif. Jack and Geri Miller of Twin Falls are the parents of the bridegroom.

The ceremony was held at St. Leanders Church in San Leandro, Calif., and the reception was held at the snow building in Knowland Park, Oakland, Calif.

The bride wore a gown of white organza trimmed with brussels and venice lace along the sleeves, and a sheer old fashioned yoke and high collar.

Andrews-Routt

TWIN FALLS — Angie Andrews and Roger Routt of Twin Falls exchanged wedding vows Sept. 20.

The double ring ceremony was held in Elko, Nev., with Edward Lunsford officiating.

The bride is a student at the College of Southern Idaho and the bridegroom is employed by Idaho Frozen Foods.

Following a trip to Sun Valley and northern Idaho, the couple will reside in Twin Falls.

Barbara Ann Nunes was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Nadine Gerhart, Odilia Finbello, Debbie Thompson, Gigi Calkins and Lori Miller.

Best man was J. Richard Jordan. Other attendants were Tim Kadlecik, Mike Renzl, Bruce Harris, Bob Beltz and Mark Miller.

After a trip to Mazatlan, Mexico, they are making their home in Las Vegas, Nev., where the bridegroom is employed by Moore Business Forms and the bride is a dental hygienist.

Blood drawing in Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the United Presbyterian Church in Twin Falls Monday and Tuesday.

Hours are from 2 to 6 p.m. each day with a quota of 100 pints of blood daily, according to Ariene Florence, blood program chairman for the Sawtooth chapter of the American Red Cross.

The chairman said the recent annual Red Cross meeting honored many volunteer workers. The only recognition most blood donors receive, she said, is their own feeling of personal satisfaction.

Autographing party planned

TWIN FALLS — An autographing party is planned for Friday and Saturday afternoons at the B. Dalton Book Store in the Blue Lakes Mall, for Helen M. E. Wilson, author of "Gold Fever."

The book, now in its second printing, recounts early history of the mining community of Jarbridge, Nev. The author, who lives in Jarbridge part of the year, will meet friends and autograph copies of the paperback volume.

The autographing party is scheduled from 1 to 4 p.m. both days.

Open house set for Hazelton woman

HAZELTON — Mrs. Mable Budd will be honored with an open house in observance of her 90th birthday Saturday.

The event will be held from 2 to 4:30 p.m. at the Valley Presbyterian Church, hosted by her five children.

All friends and neighbors are invited. Mrs. Budd is a longtime Hazelton resident, coming here from Parsons, Kan., with her husband and family in 1921.

Her children include Mrs. Irvin (Barbara) Kevan of Hansen, Mrs. Barton (Virginia) Bradley of Boise, Rev. Jay B. Budd of Reynoldsburg, Ohio; Dale E. Budd of Hazelton and James F. Budd of Glendale, Calif. She has 14 grandchildren and 28 great-grandchildren.

Bishop's House festivities slated

BOISE — "A Victorian Christmas" is the theme of the first large public events to be held in the historic Bishops' House in Boise.

The recently restored 1890 house will be open Dec. 4 for a one-day only series of cooking classes.

From Dec. 5 through 7 the house will be open from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. so visitors can see the large Victorian rooms which are being decorated by area florists and businesses for the holidays.

No tickets or reservations are necessary, but a $2 per person tax-deductible donation may be paid at the door.

Reservations for the cooking school are necessary because of limited seating capacity in the kitchen area. They can be made by calling the Idaho Historical Museum, 324-2120. Price for each class is a $5 donation to the Friends of the Bishops' House.

Proceeds will go to further restoration of the house.

Fay 'Benny' Benjamin of Gooding has many enjoyable stories and a few sad ones about his 36-year hobby of collecting automobile hubcaps

Long-time love affair with automobiles has led a Gooding collector to become

Hubcap king

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

GOODING — "I just trust that she died with the peace of mind that she'd been found," said Fay "Benny" Benjamin paced his small, Gooding snowmobile shop as he recalled when his favorite hobby, hubcap collecting, turned a little sour several years ago.

"My wife, Sis, and I were driving from Livingston to Bosman (Mont.) and we had found hardly any hubcaps," Benjamin explained. "So we were popping along kind of slow when I spotted a cap off the road, almost out of sight. Got out, went over there and way down in this little gully was a wreck."

"It was a little pickup, down out of sight from even the truckers, and the poor woman had laid there all night and most of the morning."

"It was crazy that a bum like me, with such a dumb hobby, was about her only hope for being found," he continued. "We called an ambulance and everything, but later we heard she hadn't made it."

Benjamin, 48, smiled again as he looked over his collection of more than 3,600 hubcaps. "Of course I have a lot more fun stories than sad ones," he said.

The shiny discs that are his 36-year monument to man's love affair with automobiles have come from numerous past and present makes, such as Packard, Nash, Chevy, Ford; there's even one from a 1913 Vellie.

And it's not a collection of just Americana either. Even a Mercedes-Benz will lose a hubcap once in a while, Benjamin said, holding up examples from the respected German manufacturing firm.

"Why do I do this? I really don't know," Benjamin admitted, somewhat frustrated by the question.

"It started back in 1944 when I was kind of poor and spent many days picking up old beer bottles along the road for the return (money)," Benjamin said. "I kept seeing these nice chromed hubcaps and before long I had a huge mountain of them stashed behind the outhouse."

Now Benjamin's collection hangs in the large, upstairs room above his combination snowmobile, sales store, and cabinet shop. Although he owns several old cars, including a Model A Ford and two Edsels, Benjamin said he's really not so much a car buff as he is a packrat.

Perhaps Benjamin's greatest attribute in his hobby is keen eyesight.

"I know some people may question this, but I actually spotted one hubcap from the window of a 727 airliner as we landed in Salt Lake City, on my way to Spain and Africa," Benjamin said. He earned the 1977 trip after being named a top snowmobile salesman in the Northwest for a snow machine dealer.

"It wasn't even that hard to find," Benjamin said of the Salt Lake City hubcap. "I just had to locate the road I'd seen from the air, and by golly, there it was, a Buick Wildcat hubcap, plus four others."

Benjamin said he placed the hubcaps in a clear plastic bag and attached it to his luggage, much to the wonderment of several baggage men, he said.

Evidently Benjamin's reputation preceded him. At the company's convention in Florida that year, "Benny from Idaho" was awarded a slightly crushed, slightly dirty, Chevy Caprice hubcap "in front of about 900 people," Benjamin recalled. "It was kind of embarrassing."

Benjamin's only problem now is trying to decide what to do with his collection when he dies. Daughter Rene, a Gooding High School student, says with great fervor that she wants no part of the tons of chrome, stainless steel and plastic.

"I tell people that if they donate hubcaps to my collection, I'll name them in my will," Benjamin laughed. "One (snowmobile) salesman from Washington stopped by here to give me a couple hubcaps, stressing that they were from his wife and saving 'The last thing I need is to have a dump truck pull into my yard someday and dump all these confounded things into a big pile.'"

"I don't know what will happen to them," he said.

Hailey hearing Monday

HAILEY — The Hailey City Council will hold a public hearing Monday on a planning recommendation that the controversial Northridge Subdivision be annexed and zoned light residential.

The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. in Hailey City Hall.

The Hailey Planning and Zoning commission recommended LR-2 zoning for the 184-acre parcel after a hearing Nov. 3.

Northridge was annexed in 1979 with a mix of residential and commercial zones, despite a P&Z recommendation that it be zoned residential. A new council majority de-annexed the subdivision earlier this year after several lawsuits had mired progress on the issue.

Also on Monday's agenda is an update from engineering consultant Jim Coleman on the city's grant application to study the feasibility of hydroelectric generation on city property at Indian Creek.

The city recently received approval of a $3,000 loan from the Department of Energy, which doesn't have to be paid back if the plant proves unfeasible. Hailey must put up $1,000 for the study and repay the other 90 percent at low interest from revenues if the generating plant is constructed.

A generator would be powered by water pumped under high pressure from springs 300 feet above the city's water system at Indian Creek.

The plant would be built by Barber Engineers, a division of J-I-B Engineers in Boise. Coleman serves as Hailey city engineer through a consulting contract between the city and J-I-B.

Election on Dec. 9

SHOSHONE — Two director positions for the American Falls Reservoir District 2 will be open in a Dec. 9 election.

Charles Barnes of Hunt is up for re-election in Precinct 2, as is Robert Johansen of Gooding in Precinct 6.

All District 2 members are eligible to vote in the election, according to Secretary Colleen Bishop.

"At present, no one else has filed for the positions," Bishop said. "People interesting in running for director can file up until 5 p.m. (Friday) Nov. 28."

Each of the reservoir district director seats is for a three-year term, Bishop said. Candidacy filings may be submitted at the Big Wood Canal Co. office in Shoshone.

During election day, voting polls will be open from 10 to 7 p.m.

Polling locations in the seven precincts of District 2 are as follows:

- Precinct 1: Office of the Big Wood Canal Co., 1125 Apple St., Shoshone.
- Precinct 2: Shop at Norman Johnson farm near Hunt.
- Precinct 3: Richtfield City Library.
- Precinct 4: Charles J. Johnston farm residence near Richtfield.
- Precinct 5: Office of Village Properties, 546 Main St., Gooding.
- Precinct 6: Gooding City Hall.
- Precinct 7: Manning Patterson farm residence, northeast of Gooding.

Hagerman patrolman appointed

JEROME — After six months without resident police protection, Hagerman residents can rest a little easier beginning Dec. 1.

Galen Edwards, 26, was named Thursday as Hagerman's resident deputy sheriff by Gooding County Sheriff Robert Aja.

The city has contracted with Aja's department for 24-hour protection with a deputy living in Hagerman.

The Hagerman City Council Tuesday night signed the $15,000-a-year contract approved earlier this month following a public hearing.

"Galen actually started work for us last Friday (Nov. 14), although the city contract doesn't go into effect Dec. 1," Aja said Thursday. "He started patrolling the Hagerman area on his own earlier this week."

Originally from Richtfield, Edwards has lived in Hagerman about six months. According to Aja, Edwards applied for a position on the sheriff's force several months ago and was one of seven applicants considered for the Hagerman position.

Hagerman had been without a policeman since Kenneth Pearce resigned last May. Since then, community protection has been provided by spot checks by Gooding County Sheriff's deputies.

Aja said Edwards is already active in working with the town's significant, elderly population, but will also focus on youth relations.

"I know Galen fairly well," Aja said. "Knowing his qualities and qualifications, he should be an excellent man for the job."

Aja listed Edwards' primary duties as controlling downtown traffic during school hours plus burglary and prowler checks at night.

However, as a county employee, Edwards will still be responsible for responding to any emergency outside the city, Aja said.

The $15,000 contract between Hagerman and the county covers the new deputy's salary plus expenses, including most travel costs, Aja said.

In the valley

'M.A.S.H.' on Tuesday

JEROME — The Jerome High School advance drama class will present the play "M.A.S.H." on Monday and Tuesday.

The performance begins nightly at 8 o'clock in the Jerome High School auditorium.

Cost of admission will be $2.50 for adults and students without activity cards. Admission is free for children under six years of age.

Suit brings confusion

JEROME — A Jerome concrete company is being confused with a California firm involved in a local lawsuit, claim owners of the company.

According to Roy and Bob Meyers, they have received several calls from customers concerned that the Jerome contracting company, R&B Concrete Inc., is being sued and may be in financial trouble.

The confusion evidently began when legal notices were printed in two newspapers, the Times-News and the Northside News, of a foreclosure request by the Bank of Idaho branch in Twin Falls, against several parties involved in Country Villa Estates, a subdivision south of Jerome.

One party named in the bank's complaint for alleged non-payment of a mortgage was R&B Inc., a California-based firm not connected with R&B Concrete Inc. of Jerome.

Investment plan ready

JEROME — A Jerome accountant will begin investing more of Jerome's checking account funds to increase the city's interest earnings.

The Jerome City Council has approved a contract with Charles Correll to make short-term transfers of money from city checking accounts to savings programs, beginning Dec. 1.

Correll told councilmen Tuesday his money management plan could net the city at least $5,000, or as high as $15,000, in extra revenue per year.

Correll will receive $300 per month for his services. However, the contract can be broken with 30 days notice either from the council or Correll.

Correll, a former Jerome councilman, claimed more money is left in city checking accounts than needed to meet cash flow demands. He proposes daily or weekly checks to see how much money is available compared to the forecasted fund flow.

According to Correll, there was a monthly average of about $138,000 remaining in city checking accounts this past year. He said perhaps as much as $125,000 of this money could be transferred to savings accounts to gain additional earnings, even if it was just for a day.

"The main thing is to make sure all the money available is being invested," Correll said in an interview earlier this month.

Variance hearing set

JEROME — A public hearing for a city zoning variance will be conducted by the Jerome Planning and Zoning Commission Dec. 8.

Robin Kinsey of Jerome has requested his property at 122 E. Ave. F be rezoned from residential to business for operation of a beauty shop.

All interested persons are eligible to attend and comment on the proposed land-use change. The hearing will be at 8 p.m. in Jerome City Hall.

A second public hearing on Kinsey's request is scheduled Dec. 16 at 8 p.m. before the Jerome City Council.

Jerome woman new rodeo queen

JEROME — Janice Nelsen of Jerome was crowned professional rodeo's Wildness Circuit Queen in Nevada recently.

She won the title in competition at the Wilderness Circuit Championship Finals Nov. 15 at the Horse Palace in Elko, Nev. Nelsen was judged on horsemanship, personality and appearance.

First runner-up in the Elko finals was another Jerome woman, Kelly Miller. Second runner-up was Kim Holmes of Ogden, Utah.

The circuit is one of 12 rodeo circuits in the U.S. and includes competitions in Idaho, Utah and Nevada.

North Valley calendar

Meetings will be included in the calendar in each Sunday-North Valley section of the Times-News. Information must be received at the Times-News office, P.O. Box 55, Jerome, Idaho 83338, no later than noon Thursday prior to publication.

'Invisible' details show up in craftsman's tiny furniture

Angelo County — homes that delight a child or collector, for Park's furniture is scaled 1 inch to the foot and is made for doll houses.

In the last few years, miniature collecting has been surpassed only by coins and stamps in world popularity, said a spokesman for the National Association of Miniature Enthusiasts.

Yet, it is rare to find furniture like

Park's — so carefully made to reproduce full-sized furniture in even the "invisible" details.

Park, 72, worked as a prop maker for Paramount Studios, as a lobby artist for movie theater chains, as a display window artist and as a designer of folding-paper containers, before settling and turning to miniatures seven years ago.

Working in his garage, Park cuts every piece of wood himself, even pieces as tiny as one thirty-second of an inch square. His favorite woods include birdseye maple, ebony, pine and walnut.

Small World." The grand piano's open top reveals "strings" made out of "very fine, thin, dried flower stems," and the upright piano's stool has a seat that can be raised or lowered to accommodate a pianist of any height, up to 5 inches.

but for the pleasure."

Park, who grew up on a farm outside of Nashville, Tenn., has been working with his hands most of his life. "My granddaddy had lots of skills," he says. "He was a blacksmith and a harness maker and built his own barns. I was always hanging around him and getting in his hair while I tried to help. I don't know if I was much help, but I sure learned a lot."

"Blue Skies" with Bing Crosby and "Monsieur Beaucaire" with Bob Hope.

"It took three weeks to make the little piano with wooden soldiers for legs that Bing Crosby played on for his 'son' for all of three minutes in 'Blue Skies.' You'd work long and hard on a movie prop and then it'd be on screen for just a few minutes. Miniatures are more rewarding."

ROSEMEAD, Calif. — Jim Park builds exquisite antique furniture, rich in detail, carefully constructed out of the finest hardwoods.

His furniture can be found in some of the most beautiful homes in Los

Because it is "difficult, if not impossible, to find tools to make turnings and other furniture refinements," Park said, he has fashioned many of his own tools. He uses jeweler's blades as saws.

Each piece Park fashions is one of a kind. "I may make six or seven Queen Anne chairs, but no two will be exactly alike. After all," Park said, "there must be 50 different kinds of Queen Anne chairs in the full-sized world."

For models, Park uses pieces from his own full-sized collection or visits stores and exhibitions. Some clients ask him to produce miniature versions of their own chairs or tables.

"I like the challenge of making each piece as authentic as possible. And I like to give things an antique touch: I aim for a feeling of these being pieces people have really lived with. They're not split-and-polish, right-out-of-the-factory pieces. I work each piece the way I feel it until I've got it right."

Part of what feels right to Park is putting in the details that make each piece as close to its full-sized counterpart as possible.

For example, his pianos have brass pedals, authentic keyboards, top covers that open to reveal the piano strings, and keyboard covers that open and close. The player piano actually plays. Its song is "It's a Cabinet-type pieces such as his drop-leaf desk, bookcase and a woman's vanity include "invisible" extras such as stress supports inside the drawers. These pieces also boast more readily visible extras such as handmade brass drawer pulls, custom for his work, cut-glass cabinet doors and beveled mirrors.

Park has no set fee for his work, although he makes furniture to order and sells items at miniature shows. "I price my furniture the way I feel it," Park said. "I never gouge anyone. Sometimes, if I like someone or feel they're hard up, I'll cut the price way down. I'm not in this for the money, but for the pleasure."

Park said his farm years taught him the importance of hard work, self-reliance and basic skills that could get him a job.

After years of traveling around the South doing theater-lobby art, Park moved to California in 1957.

"I became an expert with the air brush," Park said. "I'd go into a theater and create scenes all over the lobby depicting something from the movie's theme. If a jungle picture was playing, I'd turn the lobby into a jungle."

Park wanted to break into films, and landed a job at Paramount where he created props for such films as

But Park attributes much of his zest for life to miniatures. "I never watch the clock when I'm working. Don't be a slave to time. There's no pushing or sweating when I'm working. I work relaxed. My mind gets involved with the piece I'm working on and I relax totally. My mind is free of all problems. The world could move away and I'd never know it."

DIVORCES GRANTED — Jayne F. Fields from Pete L. Fields.
COURT — Alice Schuyler is suing

Idaho Power Co. for $85,000 on grounds of alleged negligence. Schuyler was riding her horse in the vicinity of the old Ferry Road, a half-mile north of Shoshone Falls. She claimed Idaho Power had transmission lines in the area that were allowed to lay on the ground while conducting electrical energy. A horse she was riding ran into the lines, causing great shock to herself and subsequently killing the horse, the suit claims.

Schuyler seeks $30,000 for mental anguish, $3,000 for the horse, $18,000 in punitive damages, $1,953.52 in medical expenses for the horse and $10,000 in attorney fees.

Jackpine Bob satisfied with count

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Jackpine Bob Cary, standard bearer of the Independent Fisherman Party, figures he made a pretty good showing in the presidential election and he won't call for a recount.

"I don't notice I tied John Anderson for electoral votes," said Cary, managing editor of the Ely, Minn., Echo, in a telephone interview Wednesday. "Anderson got zero and I got zero."

While Cary was out grouse hunting on election day, some 20 residents in the northern lake and woods country around Ely wrote in votes for their favorite son — even though there was no formal place on the ballot for write-ins.

"Not exactly a landslide," said Anne Wognum, publisher of the Echo and Cary's boss. "But it was nice."

Cary didn't concede until two days after the election to make sure all the votes were in from the canoe country. Satisfied with the tally, he said he will not ask for a recount.

Jackpine, outdoor editor of the Chicago Daily News before moving to Minnesota in the 1920s for better fishing, said he suspected "there may have been a deal among Anderson, Carter and Reagan forces to keep fishermen from casting write-in votes."

"But I feel it is time to pull the nation together, bind up the wounds and let bygones be bygones — even if some of those other guys are bums."

Cary had his Cabinet all lined up before the election, including the local "Ayatollah" Peterson to deal with Iran.

Jackpine's Cabinet and advisory board and a lot of other friends crowded Ely's Homestead Bar election night for a victory party.

"Dave Robich, the head of my advisory staff, was estimating the percentage of the popular vote during the evening," Cary said. "At one time I asked, 'Where do we stand now?' and Dave said, 'I think we've got about 3.2,' and with the mention of 3.2 the Independent Fisherman's Party bought a round of beers for everyone in the house."

Cary said auditors of the Independent Fisherman Party reported the campaign ended with $3,400 left in the treasury out of the original $27,500.

"No other candidate or any other major political party can point to such a record of fiscal responsibility," he said.

Will Cary run for president again in 1964?

"Well, we will wait and see how Ronnie does," he said. "If he gets the job done, fishing picks up and the price of live bait is stabilized from runaway inflation, we may not do anything."

"But if he screws up, we'll be right back in there in 1964."

No funding for oil plant

EDMONTON (IPC) — Energy minister Merv Letch says the Alberta government will not provide any of the $40 million needed to keep work going at Imperial Oil's Cold Lake oil sands project.

Letch said the question had been discussed in cabinet "and we decided to stand by the remarks I made in the assembly yesterday."

The Alberta minister said Wednesday it was "appropriate the federal government put up the money" that Imperial Oil president J.A. Armstrong said was needed to keep the project active.

Federal energy Minister Marc Lalonde said Wednesday his government would lend Imperial Oil the $40 million but added he hoped Alberta would pick up half the amount.

Letch said the reasons given by Imperial for suspending funding at Cold Lake "were the terms of the federal budget and the fact an (provincial-federal energy) agreement is not in place."

"It's my view the federal government's stand during negotiations is the reason there's no agreement in place," Letch said.

"We already have spent a large sum of money putting the infrastructure (for the oil sands plants) in place," Letch said. "We were acting in good faith to make sure there would be no holdups" once the governments reached an energy agreement.

The Alberta government is withholding final approval for oil sands developments pending the signing of an all-encompassing energy pricing agreement with the federal government.

Ship owner sued for negligence

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Dis-trought relatives of some of the 34 crewmen lost at sea with the ship MV Poet have charged in suits seeking $31 million that the craft's owner was negligent, and the vessel was un-seaworthy.

While the latest suits were being filed Thursday, a U.S. Coast Guard panel investigating the Poet's Oct. 24 disappearance heard two inspectors testify the vessel was loaded properly when it sailed from the Port of Philadelphia.

The Coast Guard inquiry is expected to determine why the ship's owner did not report the vessel missing until 10 days after radio contact was lost and why the Coast Guard itself waited another five days to begin a search.

In all, 11 suits have been filed against the New York-based Hawaiian Eugenia Corp. Seven were filed Thursday in Philadelphia. The other four — one in Philadelphia and three in New Orleans — were lodged earlier.

One suit was filed by Uris Jill Batcher, 38, Philadelphia, whose 19-year-old son, Jerry, was aboard the Egypt-bound vessel.

"I don't think they gave the ship the proper inspection," Mrs. Batcher said. "I think they just pushed it through."

Capt. S. Fraser Sammis, president of National Cargo Bureau Inc., and Capt. Albert Gercken, one of three NCB surveyors who inspected the Poet, testified the ship, which NCB certified for seaworthiness, was properly loaded.

"The possibility of cargo shift was pretty low," said Sammis.

In other testimony, Capt. David A. Potter Jr., a river pilot, said the ship handled well on its way into the Port of Philadelphia Oct. 16.

Potter said he spoke this week with Capt. Gary Harper, who piloted the loaded Poet back downriver Oct. 24, over Harper's concern the ship was riding low in the bow.

Potter said had he been in Harper's place and knew of the impending severe weather, he would have contacted the Coast Guard to let it know of the Poet's potential unseaworthiness.

Harper testified earlier he was concerned with the way the ship was riding and told the Poet's captain. The captain said he would try to correct the problem.

Utah man pleads guilty

DOUGLAS, Wyo. (UPI) — A Utah man has pleaded guilty to first-degree murder in the Aug. 10 stabbing death of a 4-year-old Douglas girl in exchange for the state's pledge not to impose the death penalty.

Donald A. Latray, 19, of Moab, Utah, entered the plea Thursday during an appearance before Converse County District Judge William Taylor.

Under the plea-bargaining agreement, Latray will spend a year at the state hospital at Evanston undergoing treatment for drug, alcohol and mental problems and then will be moved to the state penitentiary at Rawlins, where he is to serve a life term.

Latray pleaded guilty to stabbing Crystal Lynn Courrier in a restroom at a Douglas park. Witnesses during a preliminary hearing earlier this week testified that Latray had confessed the killing to authorities three times.

Douglas police officers testified Latray told them he had been drinking and taking drugs before the incident, became ill and then was angered when the girl followed him into the men's room.

Prosecutor Ruth Blake said she was "very satisfied with the results" of Thursday's plea bargain.

"I feel the ends of justice have been served," she said. "An additional matter that pleases me is that I feel Converse County taxpayers will have saved a good deal of money on this."

Detectives looking for loot

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Burglary detectives are checking warehouses in Salt Lake County to see if they can locate any more loot in a $50,000 theft ring headed by 41-year-old James Russell Ross.

Salt Lake City Det. Ken Halterman said the stolen goods — including a 21-foot cabin cruiser — were recovered from a warehouse in South Salt Lake. He said the loot came from burglaries dating back to 1976.

Ross was convicted of burglary and theft charges in Sevier County, but escaped from jail prior to sentencing. He was recaptured in Ogden on Nov. 8, and was returned to Richfield, where he was sentenced to consecutive multi-year terms in the state prison.

Halterman said investigators are convinced that thousands of dollars in stolen property is still hidden in Salt Lake Valley warehouses.

'Star Wars' filmmaker gives $4.7 million to USC

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Film maker George Lucas, whose "Star Wars" became an overnight sensation, said Thursday he will donate $4.7 million to the University of Southern California's film school to encourage young talent.

Lucas, who has often expressed fears for the future of Hollywood's film talent, was quoted in "Rolling Stone" Magazine as saying that filmdom's denizens were "rather sleazy, unscrupulous people."

He got his start at USC, and assisted fellow alumnus Francis Ford Coppola who produced Lucas' first commercial film, "American Graffiti," a low budget grossing movie in 1973.

appropriate for me as a film producer to support one of the main sources of young talent."

The contribution will ensure a 1981 start on USC's $14 million film school complex and groundbreaking is expected next summer for the first two of five planned structures.

The first buildings will be built near the present Norse Cinema Theatre and will house a post-production facility and cinema studies center, USC President James Zumberge said.

A film stage, video stage and cinema library and research center will be housed in the other three buildings.

Lucas and Coppola, producer and director of "The Godfather" and "Apocalypse Now," are probably the school's best known graduates.

Officers settle out of court

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Two Salt Lake City police officers have agreed to the out-of-court settlement of a suit alleging the lawmen acted negligently when they shot and wounded a suspect while he slept in his car.

Terms of the settlement were not disclosed. The case was scheduled to be tried this week before U.S. District Court Judge Aldon Anderson.

Officers John R. Leavitt and Arthur L. Wright were sued by Keith David Eaby, who was shot in the head by Leavitt during an early-morning incident on July 24, 1977.

Eaby suffered some paralysis and the loss of his right eye in the shooting.

Leavitt and Wright responded to a report that a man with a gun was sitting in a automobile behind a Salt Lake City apartment complex. The officers said they found Eaby in the front seat of his car with a 30-30 rifle lying across his chest.

Wright reached in the driver's window and attempted to remove the weapon. When Leavitt, who was stationed outside the passenger window, saw the movement of the gun, he fired at Eaby.

Then Salt Lake County Attorney Paul Van Dam ruled the shooting was justified, noting that Leavitt could not see his partner reaching for the gun and thought the suspect might be raising the rifle to fire it.

Judge revokes own license by mistake

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Judge James C. Carrull sent the State Department of Transportation the driver's license of a man he had put on probation for reckless driving but the bureaucrats revoked the judge's license by mistake.

The judge's license was revoked and the defendant got his back — and went to work as a cab driver.

"I'm just glad I didn't sentence him to jail or I'd probably have been thrown in there myself," said the judge. "I'll probably get stopped in the middle of the night by some highway patrolman who thinks I don't have a license."

Because Spitfire is a super lightweight, it responds immediately to body English and corners with great agility. It scampers across the snow like a sunbeam—light and quick. Spitfire is powered by a 340 Fireburst engine, and built on a compact chassis for spunky performance. And Spitfire is one of the stingiest fuel users in its class.

The direct drive system with the unique John Deere secondary sheave transfers power more directly from engine to track. There's no chaincase to add weight or complexity. And fewer parts mean greater reliability.

Electronic ignition fires the engine for quick starts. Disc brakes add stopping power. An aggressive rubber track with riveted grousers bites deep into ice and snow for good traction. Canted ski spindles maintain a flatter stance when cornering.

The 1981 Spitfire is comfortable and easy to handle. It responds in a way bigger snowmobilers can't.

Idahoans feel slight impact from embargo

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Whether the grain embargo against the Soviet Union is removed or not, it will probably have little impact on wheat growers in Idaho.

Bob Sargent, an agricultural economist at Washington State University, said lifting the embargo would have no direct effect on Idaho and Pacific Northwest wheat growers because they have never sold wheat to the Russians.

The overwhelming majority of the wheat grown in the northwest is soft white wheat, which is used for noodles and pastries, as opposed to the hard red wheat, which is used for bread. The Soviet Union buys the only imported wheat in the northwest from removing the embargo would be to "improve the tone of the market," Sargent said. Besides, he added, the main impact of the embargo was to reduce corn sales, not wheat sales.

According to the agriculture division of Chase Econometrics, the grain embargo against the Soviet Union is all but over.

"We're assuming, in most of our analysis, it will be removed," said Chase agricultural analyst Raymond Daniels. Chase picks February as the most likely time for such a move, he said.

Even if the embargo is not removed, it will become "non-effective," Daniel said. The Soviet Union will move into the world grain markets to buy the grain it needs. Whether it buys grain from this country or other countries, the overall impact on world supply and demand will be about the same.

Removing the embargo would have a stronger psychological impact on the market, Daniel said. If it is called off, it could send wheat prices up to around $5 a bushel, where they would probably stay until next summer's harvest begins, Daniel said.

This compares with current wheat prices of slightly under $5 in major cash markets. Futures contracts for grain delivered in the months before the harvest ranged from about $5.20 a bushel to $5.55 a bushel near the end of last week.

Dick Rush, head of the Idaho Wheat Commission, said the initial "psychological reaction" to the removal of the grain embargo would increase all wheat prices. How much, he couldn't guess, but he said the short-run psychological reaction will be larger than any long-run change in white wheat markets removing the embargo would bring.

The major consumers of U.S. white wheat are countries of the far east such as Japan and South Korea. White wheat prices will be set by world supply and demand, Rush said. The world is currently short of all wheat and feedgrains, so white wheat prices will continue to be strong regardless of what is done with the embargo, Rush said.

The price of white wheat in the Magic Valley is nearing $4 a bushel. During the height of the harvest a few months ago, prices fell as low as almost $3 a bushel.

Sargent suggested the embargo may have actually helped the wheat growers in the Northwest. The federal government worked to increase grain exports to other countries as a way to limit the damage the embargo did to farmers. White wheat sales benefitted substantially from this effort, even though their sales had not been hurt by the embargo, he said.

Decision may cost county thousands

TWIN FALLS — A decision in small claims court last week could cost Twin Falls County about $300 now and several thousand dollars later.

Fifth District Magistrate Court Judge Michael Redman awarded $341 in damages and another $20 in court costs to Frank Pohanka, a Twin Falls farmer who sued the Twin Falls County Weed Bureau for failing to kill weeds on his farm.

Pohanka told the court Friday that he paid the county $311 to spray for weeds on about 20 acres on his farm northwest of Twin Falls. The weeds were not killed, however. As a result, Pohanka said, he had two acres of weeds in a bean field. The weeds cost him $1,000 or more in lost production, he said.

He brought snapshots of the field with him to the court.

Redman said Pohanka "has proven sufficient cause, but he didn't get what he paid for." Redman also said the county was lucky Pohanka only asked to be reimbursed for the spraying cost and did not ask for damages due to his lost crop production.

But Wallace Savage, supervisor of the county Weed Bureau, said the judge's decision "stunk." Savage estimated it could cost the county $4,000 to $5,000 to reimburse farmers who have similar complaints.

The loss could be higher if any farmers seek damages for lost crop production.

Savage said he can't make guarantees for the herbicides the county uses because the manufacturers only offer limited warranties on their products. He said he can only promise that he'll apply the chemicals according to the instructions printed on the label.

However, Redman disagreed. He said a farmer pays the county to spray for weeds because the weed control personnel are experts. They are held to a higher standard of care. If they see something that will hinder the effectiveness of the chemical, Redman said, they must tell the farmer, rather than spray a field when they know the spray might have no effect.

Pohanka brought several witnesses with him who testified the product the county used works on weeds when it is applied correctly, but that there are several things that can reduce its effectiveness.

Savage said he will ask the Twin Falls County Commissioners next week if they want to appeal the case. Pohanka told the court he is not the only farmer who has had this problem with the county. He said Glen Terry and John Klompen, two Kimberly farmers, and Herman Woebke, a Twin Falls farmer, also paid for spraying that did not relieve their weed problems.

They paid thousands of dollars for the spraying work and suffered thousands of dollars more in lost production, Pohanka said.

Farmer, feedlot operator, legislator: Ralph Olmstead's farming beliefs have changed but his political beliefs haven't

But he wouldn't do it again Olmsteads' gamble worked

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If the economy had gone down instead of up in the mid 1950s, Ralph Olmstead said he might be broke today.

The Twin Falls farmer, feedlot operator and state legislator, recalls how he and his two brothers went heavily into debt trying to expand the farming operation their father, Edgar H. Olmstead, had turned over to them.

"Whether through courage or wisdom or foolishness," Olmstead said, "I wanted to be as deeply in debt as I possibly could. I felt I could pay it back later in cheaper dollars."

The gamble worked. Ralph, his older brother Neil and younger brother Tom expanded a feedlot with a capacity of a few hundred head of cattle into one of 3,500 head. They expanded their land holdings southeast of Twin Falls at the same time, to maintain the diversity of their operation.

The Olmsteads raise about 10 percent of their own feed, he said. In addition, they raise beans and sugar beets as cash crops.

Though the gamble of the '50s worked, Olmstead said he wouldn't do it again today. "My brothers and I had the ambition for growth and expansion that comes from youth," he said, wanting to build something for their families.

When younger, they didn't have much to lose. Today, the more conservative trio doesn't want to see what they've built "eroded" because of a foolish risk, Olmstead said.

Olmstead said he appreciates his father's wisdom. One of the first farmers in the Magic Valley to buy a tractor, he also was one of the last to stop using horses on his farm.

While seeing the potential of mechanization, Olmstead said, he didn't rush headlong into it, preferring to handle the transition "cautiously and with wisdom."

While his ideas on running the farm have changed through the years, Olmstead's conservative political beliefs have not.

Olmstead describes himself as outspoken, something he says won't change, despite having "had his wings clipped" more than once for speaking out when others thought he should have consulted with them first.

Olmstead ran for his first political office in 1958 when he was elected to a seat on the Highway Commission. In 1972, he was elected to the Legislature and in 1978 he was chosen Speaker of the House.

Olmstead comes from a family that has always been involved in community affairs. His father was a long-time member of the school board. His brother Tom recently retired from the board of directors of the Twin Falls Canal Co.

And his daughter Marilyn Olmstead Broek, who is a civil engineer in Boise, was defeated in the recent election as a Republican candidate for the Legislature.

Idaho Falls man aims for spud record

TWIN FALLS — Will Anderson of Idaho Falls will try to grow a record crop of spuds next year.

Whatever the cost, he wants to shatter the state record for potato yields.

That record is about 600 sacks an acre. Anderson is aiming for 1,000 sacks. He thinks he can do it with the help of Filer agricultural consultant Robert Faust and Faust's unconventional farming methods.

Faust is trying to wean farmers from their dependence on expensive chemical nitrogen and phosphate fertilizers in a world of steeply climbing energy costs, farmers have to learn to rely on products and techniques that use less energy, Faust said.

In contrast to chemical fertilizers which require large amounts of energy to produce, Faust uses "nitrogen-fixing bacteria," bacteria that can actually pull nitrogen out of the air and make it available to growing crops. "Bacteria are the world's cheapest chemists," Faust said.

He also uses a mildly acidic sulphur soil to reduce the high alkalinity that is present in the soil of most Magic Valley farms. The sulphur soil also unlocks nutrients trapped in the soil, Faust said.

While Faust's methods are contrary to most conventional farming practices, some of his methods, such as his work with nitrogen-fixing bacteria, are similar to things showing great promise in research at universities across the country.

Faust will readily admit his methods can't produce miraculous results. It may be possible to produce the record potato yield Anderson hopes to get next year, he said, but it won't be economical.

Some of the people Faust worked with this year didn't get good results, he said. Some who did, don't want to work with him again next year.

However, a review of the results some of Faust's farmers got on their crops this year shows Faust can often reduce the cost of production while delivering yields at least as good as a farmer is accustomed to getting.

Richard Ihler Jr., a farmer west of Twin Falls, is perhaps Faust's most enthusiastic supporter. "I'm in farming to make a buck," he said. With Faust's help he feels he can almost be guaranteed success.

He farmed about 3,000 acres this year, up from about 800 the year before, and he hopes to farm 6,000 acres next year. On one 280-acre farm he rents, Ihler said he made as much money this year as the farm produced in any seven-year period in the past. Ihler raised corn, beans, hay and radish seed this year. He said working with Faust he got super yields, which he doesn't like to talk about because people don't believe him, and his cost of production was lower.

Bob Colner, another farmer west of Twin Falls, has worked with Faust for a number of years. He likes the results he gets working with Faust, but he gives him a more mixed review than Ihler does.

"Bob has some good ideas," Colner said, but notes not all of them are practical.

"We've got the farming experience, he's got the knowledge of new techniques," Colner said. "Together, we come up with some interesting things."

He said he doesn't think Faust has made him a lot of money. "He improved my yields on some crops." The most important aspect of Faust's work is the things he does to improve the condition of the soil, Colner said.

Idahoan to be heard on farm policy

Farmers gain key places in Senate

By SONJA HILLGREN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Four men newly elected to the Senate, who will be influential in agricultural policy and are likely candidates for membership on the Senate Agriculture Committee, are farm-ers themselves.

That is a departure from the norm of recent years when most senators who shaped farm and food policy have not been farmers.

If any of this group of Republicans, all of whom now serve in the House — Mark Andrews of North Dakota, James Abdnor of South Dakota, Charles Grassley of Iowa and Steve Symms of Idaho — do not take Agriculture Committee slots, they will articulate their agricultural viewpoints on other panels.

As the GOP takes control of the

STEVE SYMMS
...he'll have voice

Senate, they also may get spots on the important Agriculture Appropriations subcommittee or the Finance Committee, which handles tax and trade issues of interest to farmers.

In separate interviews, the senators-elect spoke of food and farm issues they regard as most important for the incoming administration and Congress.

They want higher prices for farmers, reduced inflation, change in the focus of the Agriculture Department from consumers to producers and food stamp cuts.

Abdnor said he wanted "to try to bring it back to be a Department of Agriculture." He said blame for an alleged consumer bill under the Carter administration must be shared by current members of the agriculture committees.

"They shouldn't tolerate it," Abdnor said, referring to the bill. He said it "would be a crime" if President-elect Ronald Reagan reneged on his campaign promise to lift the embargo of grain to Russia.

"We'll rather have these countries spending money for food than putting it into guns and ammunition," he said.

Abdnor and his family own about 3,500 acres of land near Kennebec, S.D., where they produce grain and cattle.

Symms, who worked with his family fruit ranch in Idaho's Sunnyslope district before his election to Congress, said he hoped the Agriculture Department would focus on producers instead of welfare programs.

He said he favors giving flexibility to states in paying for food stamps with bloc grants, workfare, restoration of a requirement that people pay part of the value of their stamps and tightening of

BLM earmarks funds in Shoshone district

SHOSHONE — The Bureau of Land Management Shoshone District will receive $72,170 for range improvements during fiscal year 1981.

Charles Hazzler, BLM district manager, said the funds will be spent on 27 grazing improvement projects in the Bennett Hills management area and 34 projects in the Monument Area.

The funds derive from the Public Rangelands Improvement Act of 1978. Hazzler told members of the Shoshone District Grazing Board, but the money could not be used until the district completed its Shoshone Environmental Impact Statement this past summer.

An additional $78,900 in grazing fees, returned to the district from the U.S. Department of Interior, also will be spent on grazing projects.

At its Nov. 6 meeting, the board approved several projects funded through grazing fee monies, including footings for a new Ketchum Sheep Bridge and extension of a BLM seedling project at Macon Flat.

The board also discussed new grazing regulations that will extend the adjustment schedule for grazing allotment reductions from three to five years, and will establish a 17-month consultation period before any grazing adjustment is imposed.

Initial agreements or decisions are adjusted in the third year, and again in the fifth, under the new regulations. Permit holders may request a change in adjustment at the beginning of each period based on the condition of the range, which is to be monitored by the BLM in conjunction with the University of Idaho.

Responding to a question from Jim Campbell of Wendell, Hazzler said agreements reached with ranchers do not rule out the possibility of appeals if more severe reductions are imposed later.

Hazzler also urged permit holders to respond promptly with numbers for Animal Management Plan billing after actual use. The data is used to provide an accurate base for future planning of grazing allotments, he said.

Georgian preserves apple varieties

BALL GROUND, Ga. (UPI) — Down on Hawks Nest Branch, Jim Lawson is preserving a bit of history — saving from extinction old varieties of apple trees that flourished in the American past.

Along the creek in the moist soil grow carefully tended one- and two-year-old trees with names like Black Twig, Rambo, Sops of Wine, Roxbury Russet, Horse Apple, Crow Egg Apple, Rusty Coat, Wolf River, all familiar names more than a century ago.

Lawson, a 54-year-old self-taught nurseryman and horticulturist, has saved 185 varieties of old apple trees that were dying out. His nursery may be the only place in the nation one can find so large a variety of vintage apple trees, some of which were mentioned in Thomas Jefferson's Garden Book.

The Sops of Wine variety says Lawson, is an ancient English culinary and cider apple. The Sweet Winesap apple has a history that goes back at least to the middle 1800s. The Wolf River apple was originated by W.A. Springer near Wolf River in Fremont County, Wis., and entered in the catalogue of the American Pomological Society in 1881.

Lawson grew up on the family farm near this North Georgia town, about 30 miles north of Atlanta. Apples trees were a part of his youth. But as family farms disappeared and people moved to the cities many varieties of apple trees began to disappear.

Commercial growers dropped the older types because the new kinds of apples were prettier and stood up to shipping better, said Lawson, who is convinced that apples like the Tenderskin, the Horse, Schockley, and Black Twig are far superior in taste and keeping ability than any of the commercial varieties.

"People don't taste, they just look at something," he said. "I got concerned that all the old varieties would disappear. It got so I couldn't find any."

In 1954, when he was 29, Lawson and his wife, Bernice, began collecting cuttings from ancient apple trees they found in the area and grafting them onto healthy root stock. They roamed the mountains, exploring abandoned farms looking for old and dying trees, finding many on their own, such as the Rusty Coat and the Winter Banana. "It smelled so good," said Lawson of the Winter Banana apple. "I went back and got some cuttings the next year. We're constantly looking for new varieties."

Jim Lawson: He's self-taught, modern Johnny Appleseed

When word got around about Lawson's hobby, people began bringing him cuttings and asking him to propagate new trees.

"It spread by word of mouth. Every year there were more and more people. We gave away a lot of trees. It got so I had so much time we just went into business."

Lawson grows about 40,000 trees a year on his 25 acres, with 20 acres in nursery stock. He ships about 20,000 trees annually to buyers in every state. Customers in the Midwest, he says, prefer varieties that are wind resistant.

The Horse Apple is one of Lawson's best sellers, along with Sops of Wine and Sweet Winesap. Most of his trees are the semi-dwarf kind that Lawson says can produce three or four bushels of apples each growing season. From some trees, Lawson has picked as many as eight bushels.

Using special grafting techniques, Lawson can graft many different varieties of apples onto a single root stock, giving the owner a wide selection of apples from one tree. Eleven varieties are the most he has ever grafted onto one tree, a job he doesn't particularly like to do because such trees do not ship well, he says.

Some of the older varieties such as Tenderskin, Rusty Coat, Roxbury Russet and Golden Russet, unlike the modern day apple trees that need constant spraying, are resistant to insects and disease, he says.

"I sell more trees than I can dig, really," says Lawson who believes he may have more varieties than anyone else selling the old time trees.

It's a year-round business of grafting, planting, digging and shipping. Digging and shipping begins in November after the young trees, or "whips" have shed their leaves and continues into the early spring. He tries to ship the trees the same day they are dug to increase their chances of survival.

Lawson is aided in identifying and finding the old varieties by fellow members of the North American Fruit Explorers Association and by Dr. Elwood Fisher of Harrisburg, Va., a biologist who has made a hobby of collecting ancient fruit tree types. He also has several out-of-print books, one dated 1906, about types and culture of apple trees, like the Rambo, grown in the 17th Century, or the Baldwin, a favorite in Massachusetts before the American Revolution.

"There's a lot of interest in these old varieties that we didn't have a few years ago," Lawson said.

"I get a big kick out of hearing from people about how their trees are doing."

eligibility standards.

He predicted the House would go along with major changes even though it is controlled by Democrats who have voted for the current food stamp program.

"I think the American people pretty well spoke" in the election, he said.

Grassley, whose 19-year-old son Robin runs his 200-acre farm near New Hartford, Iowa, said farmers "want a secretary of agriculture who's going to be an ombudsman for the farmer."

Taking a swipe at assistant agriculture secretary Carol Tucker Foreman, he said there are summer advocates "all over the bowels of the bureaucracy."

He asked, "If the secretary of agriculture is not going to speak for farmers, who is?"

Grassley is concerned not only about the current embargo, but also about future embargoes. Congress must put more restraints on a president's power to impose grain embargoes, he said. He suggested making embargoes for national security subject to congressional review.

Grassley said he would support farm policies with greater emphasis on self-assides to take land out of production rather than on grain reserves, the centerpiece of Carter farm policy.

He said use of grain reserves to stabilize prices "may sound like a worthy goal, but whenever government stabilizes prices they're stabilized at the cost of production or below."

Grassley said he advocates greater promotion of agricultural exports through possible creation of a revolving trust fund to finance exports.

Changes must be made in tax laws governing inheritance of farms and ranches, he said. For example, he advocated tax-free transfer of estates between spouses, greater exemptions from estate taxes and indexing of estate tax rates to inflation.

He would like to see a tax incentive like an investment credit to encourage soil conservation.

As for food stamps, Grassley said he favors subtracting the value of free school lunches from families' food stamp benefits and transferring more administrative power over the program to the states.

States might be given an option of requiring recipients to work out the value of their stamps under a workfare program, which is now being studied, he said.

Andrews, whose 30-year-old son Mark runs the family farm at Mapleton, N.D., called for significantly higher price support loans, phasing out direct payments to farmers, more American export promotion offices around the world and more research on production and human nutrition.

Higher loan rates would encourage farmers to hold grain in reserve without a need for the strict rules governing the current farmer-held reserve, he said.

Andrews also spoke of a need to change inheritance taxes.

"We have to find how we pass the farm from one generation to another," he said.

Co-op export bank authority survives

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legislation granting new international banking authority for financing of agricultural exports by farmers' cooperatives won approval, surviving a last-ditch attempt to kill it on the House floor.

A bill to give Banks for Cooperatives authority to finance exports by farmer-owned cooperatives was approved Wednesday by voice vote after the House overwhelmingly, by a 327-47 vote, rejected a move to block the new authority.

The legislation is intended to help farmers reap more of the profits made from selling U.S. farm products overseas. Cooperatives now ship only 10 percent of U.S. farm exports, which totaled a record $40.5 billion last fiscal year.

The rest are shipped by private firms, including the giant international grain trading firms.

At present, Banks for Cooperatives can finance co-op shipments only as far as American ports.

At one point, the legislation was believed to be nearly dead for this Congress because of time constraints of the short lame duck session.

The House sent its bill to the Senate, which earlier passed another version, in top the Senate would go along with the House bill. If a House-Senate conference can be avoided, and the bill can be sent direct to President Carter for his signature.

Rep. Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., called the banking authority a "new grab of power" in a radical departure from the original purpose of the federally chartered, farmer-owned Farm Credit System, of which Banks for Cooperatives is an arm.

Rep. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, retorted that the Heckler amendment was supported by "a few big banks in this country that are jealous of a little competition."

Rep. Thomas Harkin, D-Iowa, said, "Farmers believe they can become more active farm exporters."

The legislation contains a loophole that would permit private firms to borrow from Banks for Cooperatives if they purchased products from cooperatives and then shipped them abroad.

The loophole is not expected to be used by the major grain traders but by cotton shippers, many of whom are small and medium in size.

The legislation is part of an extensive package of changes for the Farm Credit System, which holds one-third of American farm debt and is the largest source of capital for farmers and ranchers by way of local Production Credit Associations and Federal Land Banks.

The bill also would reduce the down payment necessary or Farm Credit System real estate loans to farmers from 15 percent to 3 percent of the value of farms for loans guaranteed by the federal government.

It would reduce the level of farmer voting control required for co-ops to borrow from the system to 60 percent.

It would permit financing of marketing and processing by farmers if they produce at least 20 percent of the product handled.

Farm income increase seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government economists predict net farm income will rise 20 percent next year and U.S. agricultural exports will rise 20 percent.

That increase in farm income would be equal to the percentage decline in farm income from last year to this year, while the value of farm exports would set another record for the 12th consecutive year.

Agriculture Department economists said they based their farm income forecast on "projected higher farm prices, lower interest rates and a decline in the rate of increase in production expenses."

Farm prices are up because of smaller drought-stressed crops and expectations of strong export demand.

The department forecast farm income at $27 billion to $32 billion for calendar year 1981.

The middle number of that range, $29.5 billion, is 23 percent greater than $24 billion, the middle number of a 1980 farm income forecast of $23 billion to $25 billion. Also, $24 billion is 23 percent smaller than net farm income of $31 billion in 1979.

The 1979 figure was the highest amount since net farm income reached a record $33.3 billion in 1973.

Economists said farm exports for fiscal 1981, which began Oct. 1, may rise to $48.5 billion, up from a record $46.5 billion last fiscal year.

Export volume is expected to set a record 170 million tons, up 6 million tons from last fiscal year.

Exports of feed grains, wheat and rice are expected to rise, while exports of soybeans, cotton, tobacco and vegetable oil are expected to fall.

Imports of agricultural products are expected to set a record of $18.5 billion so that the agricultural trade surplus will be $30 billion.

Soviet grain embargo end likely

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — A member of President-elect Ronald Reagan's agricultural transition team says the Carter administration's embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union is a failure and will be eased soon.

"I think there will be a softening of the attitude of the United States on the embargo," Allan Grant told reporters. Grant has been mentioned as a possible agriculture secretary in the Reagan administration.

"The embargo has not done any good," he said. "The Soviet Union got all the grain it needed from Canada and Argentina. It was a total failure, and I told President Carter it would be a failure."

Grant, a livestock raiser from Visalia in California's San Joaquin Valley, told a news conference that if he were asked to be secretary of agriculture, "I'd consider it seriously."

"I told Governor Reagan before the election that I would contribute to his campaign, but that I didn't want anything in return," he added. "There are many other people who may be equally or better qualified, and who are a lot younger."

Grant, who turned 74 on Saturday, retired at the start of this year as president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Carter's grain embargo was imposed shortly after Soviet armies invaded Afghanistan.

"I am opposed to using food as a weapon," Grant said at the news conference held at a symposium for California grain growers conducted by the California Farm Bureau.

Growers also were told by a grain trading consultant that if the embargo is lifted the Soviets probably will need about 15 billion to 17 million metric tons of American grains.

Westmoreland served during World War II, Korea and Vietnam and retired as Army chief of staff in 1972 after 36 years of military service. He was commander of the U.S. Military Assistance Command in Vietnam from 1967 until 1968. He is a native of South Carolina.

Twin Falls interest rates staying in step

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The interest rates at Twin Falls banks are climbing in step with rates at the biggest banks in the country.

The prime rate, the rate large banks charge their most credit worthy customers, went as low as 10 1/2 percent last summer. But since then it has climbed steadily to its current level of around 16 1/4 percent. Twin Falls banks have matched that rate, and also adjusted all their other lending rates upward.

At the Twin Falls Bank and Trust, President and Chairman Curtis Eaton, said the prime agricultural lending rate Thursday was 16 1/2 percent.

People may be getting used to high interest rates, according to Ken Newman, manager of the Twin Falls branch of First Security Bank. There has been less resistance to high rates than earlier this year when they first reached 16 percent. First Security's prime is at 16 1/4, Newman said.

Still, a prime rate above 16 percent seems to reach a "compression point" where almost all lending stops, Newman said, except to those farmers and businessmen who must borrow money to operate.

Considering the high interest rate, Steve Houston, manager of the Twin Falls branch of Idaho Bank and Trust, said he sees a fairly strong loan demand.

Houston's prime rate now stands at 16 1/4 percent. The impact it is having is not at all like last winter, he said. After the prime rate topped 16 percent, it wouldn't have mattered if the rate was 16 percent or 50 percent, Newman said, the only people borrowing money were the ones who had to.

On the mortgage market, rates may already be so high that it hardly matters if they get higher. First Federal Savings is charging 14 1/2 to 15 percent on conventional mortgages. Home Federal Savings is charging only 13 1/2 percent for conventional mortgages. Manager Gary Karnes said he would have to charge more if he was doing more business because the cost of borrowing money is higher than his current mortgage rate. (Banks and savings and loans began paying more than 14 1/2 percent for new $10,000, six-month certificates of deposit on Thursday.)

As it is, though, the 13 1/2 percent rate is high enough to eliminate almost all demand for mortgages, Karnes said.

Jan Thompson, manager of the Sherwood and Roberts mortgage banking office in Twin Falls, said she can offer government-guaranteed Federal Housing and Veterans administration loans at 13 percent. A person selling the house to a buyer who gets such a loan has to pay a fee of 7.5 percent of the loan to close the deal, however.

That is a stiff fee, she admitted, but it's lower than it has been. The rate on FHA and VA loans is also high enough to eliminate almost all business in the housing market, she said.

Industry says workers shouldn't worry; labor takes beachheads calmly

By FRED FERGIUSON
United Press International

Industry, on the whole, says never fear. No jobs will be lost. Robots will be good for you.

Labor, the organized kind, so far has taken the first robotic beachheads in industrial plants calmly.

About the only ripple in that calm came earlier this year when some workers were reported to have speculated that the closing of Ford's big Mahwah, N.J., plant was actually a scheme to automate it more fully before reopening it at a time when the auto market had improved.

But the union most affected, the IAW, has pretty much accepted the use of robots in automotive plants. Other unions affected, and there are few so far, have followed suit. But in all cases, with provisos. Any workers replaced must be retrained or reassigned.

"What Charlie McCarthys (as autoworkers have dubbed robots) do in the skilled trades," says Dick Martin, co-director of the IAW's skilled trades department, "is to increase our work force — electrical work, installation, computer operation — that's your skilled trades worker."

"We really end up pulling more people into skilled trades to maintain these robots."

"Normally," Martin says, "people think it's just a piece of equipment that sits there and does the work. But it creates lots of work for the maintenance trades. As automation increases, the skilled trades work force increases."

In fact, robots have so far had little or no effect on the workforce size. There are only some 3,000 of these mechanical arms in use in U.S. production plants. And such robots have been around for 20 years.

But now their numbers appear destined to grow more rapidly. The advent of microprocessors and, as a result, brainier computer systems tied to newly developed robots that can see and feel is moving them from limited and specialized production work to true assembly line status.

"Assembly robotics is just emerging," says Dr. Jules Mirabel, who heads what amounts to an in-house automation consulting firm set up by General Electric.

"It is a much larger opportunity for industry than the present applications of industrial robots. Assembly is the second largest activity we have and the second largest cost behind the finished product."

"The biggest use of robots, ultimately," says Dennis Wyszowski, who heads the Air Force-aerospace industry's ICAM project, aimed at eventual development of the automated factory, "will be in assembly, where we have far too labor-intensive operations which limit our ability to change to respond to surge."

Rather than replacing a relatively few workers from work they didn't want to do in the first place — welding, painting, feeding curing furnaces — robots are expected to soon have a larger role on the production line. But the pace at which the change takes place is likely to be slow since total U.S. production of robots is now only about 100 a month.

"So long as the replacement (of workers) hasn't exceeded natural attrition," says Gordon Richardson, author of a report evaluating the advent of robots for the financial consulting firm of Arthur D. Little, "robots haven't been resisted by labor. When that is going to change, I don't know."

Other authorities interviewed are equally uncertain. But most feel the change, in view of organized labor's strength and other factors, will be more evolution than revolution.

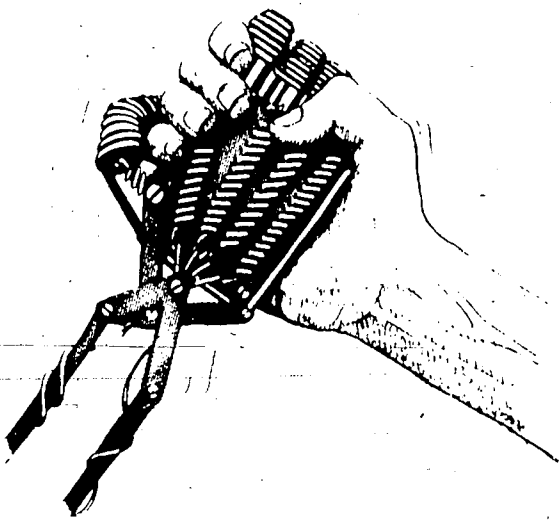

In the long run, says George Sutton of the Machine Tool Task Force, Lawrence Livermore Laboratories in California, "On balance, there will be a fewer number of heads but they will be more professional."

Prof. Peter F. Drucker, writing in the Wall Street Journal, views it as a part of the reindustrialization he and other social scientists see as an answer to this country's need to increase productivity to compete with foreign products.

Drucker notes the nation's blue collar work force is rapidly diminishing with the advent of white-collar technicians to run the computers and robots. He believes, "The shift to knowledge-based manufacturing is the only way to expand employment in this country without worsening inflation."

"A robot is merely another piece of automation," says John Fulmer, president of the Robotics Institute of

Electric cars move nearer maturity; GM planning to introduce 1984 model

By JAMES V. HIGGINS
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT — Every increase in the price of gasoline is bringing new appeal and maturity to the once-scorned electric car.

People who consider themselves on the leading edge of product innovation can buy one now — at hefty price.

Or you can wait until 1984, when General Motors Corp. plans to fulfill its promise of fielding a mass-produced electric car at a price competitive with other small commuter vehicles.

It's not that there aren't skeptics. Some auto industry executives say electric vehicles will remain little more than glorified golf carts until there is a dramatic improvement in battery technology allowing range, speed, durability and performance closer to the gasoline engine.

No one in the auto industry believes electric cars will replace internal combustion engines in the foreseeable future.

The betting at GM and elsewhere in the fledgling industry is that sufficient numbers of people will want them as second or third vehicles — commuter cars suitable for the 90 percent of family driving that is done in round trips of less than 40 miles.

"You recognize it as a limited application appliance and you use it accordingly," said John S. Makulowich, executive director of the Washington-based Electric Vehicle Council.

The council just completed a pioneering study of 17 electric vehicle manufacturers in the U.S. and found they had produced 182 passenger cars and light trucks so far this year. They had back orders for 3,540 more vehicles and estimated the full year production at 9,622.

But those same manufacturers predicted a 1981 manufacturing level of 62,832 vehicles — an astounding annual increase of more than 500 percent.

Makulowich said several other factors point toward a growing vitality in the electric vehicle industry, even though he concedes the 1973 oil embargo prompted a similar increase in interest which waned when gasoline supplies returned.

GM's Elliott Estes describes new storage batteries

Corporate marketing departments, schools and colleges, power utilities, auto dealers, parts suppliers and the government are showing more than a passing interest in the electric, he said.

Those people are not awed by the brand new idea. Makulowich said they are asking sophisticated and practical questions about component, drive-trains and marketing techniques.

Although improvements are needed, there have been some major advances in the technology of electric cars and their cousins — hybrid vehicles which operate both electrically and with an internal combustion engine.

In dozens of pieces around the world, research is going on aggressively.

Ninety years after his discovery, GM has displaced the conventional lead-acid storage cell with a zinc-nickel oxide battery. It says can store more than two times as much energy.

The system can provide a vehicle speed of around 50 miles per hour, a range of 100 miles and a battery life of about 20,000 miles, GM says.

GM & Western Industries recently introduced a zinc-chloride storage system it claims is capable of powering a car 150 miles at 55 miles per hour between charges.

GM President Elliott M. Estes said the company currently is examining both systems in its electric vehicle project center. The company apparently gives a slight edge to its own system because it can be recharged on wall current. The G & W battery requires separate recharging equipment costing about $400, but G & W doesn't consider that a drawback.

"The project center is in full operation, the first prototype is now being designed, and we're still aiming to bring it to market in the mid-1980s," Estes said.

In fact, GM's first production electric car is now listed on our forward product schedule as a 1984 model. "I don't know whether we'll make it or not, but that's our goal, today," he said.

Because of the low power-to-weight ratio in an electric vehicle, GM will make extensive use of its new wind tunnel to come up with a design featuring minimum air drag. Aerodynamics, he said, is three times as important for an electric as for a gasoline vehicle.

On a pure heat energy basis, electric vehicles are at least 10 percent less efficient than the gasoline piston engine, engineers say.

Apart from low maintenance, low pollution levels and reduced noise, their major advantage is that — through the medium of the electric power plant — they run on coal or nuclear energy instead of increasingly dear petroleum.

The prospect that gasoline will cost more than $2 a gallon before too long that means a $50 fill-up for some cars accounts for the revival of a vehicle that was common on U.S. streets in the beginning of this century.

"You'll all be driving electric vehicles within this decade," Sir Jon Samuel, president of Electric Auto Corp., told a Detroit audience recently.

If that prediction holds up, Samuel hoped many of the hearers would choose his "Silver Volt," a full-sized luxury electric car scheduled to go into production next year.

The well-appointed car has a backup gasoline engine and its electric powerplant can achieve 70 miles per hour, a constant cruising speed of 55 mph and a range of 80 to 100 miles between charges, Samuel said.

Trade winds

Matthew L. Devine has joined Edward G. Smith & Associates, Inc., as senior vice president. Edward G. Smith, president of the Twin Falls-based investment and tax planning firm, said that Devine was president and chief executive officer of Banker Ramo Corp., a firm engaged in the electronic and data processing business. Devine holds degrees in law and engineering and has served as a director of several other major industrial companies.

Thomas A. Rudy of Burley has purchased the Northview Shopping Center in Meridian. The center will be managed by Rick L. Knight, who handled the sale as a broker for Gem State Realty in Boise. The sale price was in excess of $1.5 million.

Wes Duke, 17, of Murtaugh, was among three Idahoans honored by Burlington Northern at a recognition breakfast during the national convention of the Future Farmers of America in Kansas City. Duke has been Murtaugh chapter president and is a first-year president among other attainments in FFA.

Interstate Trailers, a division of Interstate Mark, with a sales outlet in Twin Falls, has been appointed in Idaho for Timpte-Beall, Inc., a Denver manufacturer of steel bottom dump trailers.

Downtown Deli branch due

TWIN FALLS — The Deli will open a restaurant downtown next month.

Mac Mayer, one of the Deli partners, said the downtown Deli should open Dec. 1. It will be located at 151 Main Ave. W., next to Royal Optical.

Hours for the new restaurant haven't been set, Mayer said, but in addition to serving lunches, it will be open early in the morning so people can stop in for a cup of coffee or a bagel before work.

The Deli will sell beer and wine with meals and the menu will probably be a little broader, Mayer said, with some special emphasis placed on unique deserts.

The new restaurant will have seating room for about 50 people, he said.

It will also feature a wine cellar and wine, cheese and sausage gift packs, he said.

Donut House remains open

TWIN FALLS — The Winchell's Donut House on Blue Lakes Boulevard North is now simply the Donut House because Winchell's planned to close it.

Owner Edith Smith said Winchell's is closing the doors on many of its stores in the Northwest. "They were going to close the shop. We were on the agenda," she said.

But Smith didn't want to let that happen. The people who work there need the job — "I need the job," she said. "We have enough unemployment in this town."

So she bought the equipment from Winchell's and changed the name to Donut House. "Now we've had to sink or swim," Smith said.

Record Idaho crops likely

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service today predicted a record production of dry beans this fall and a record yield of sugarbeets.

Dry bean production is forecast at 3 million hundredweight, up 8 million cwt. from last year and 4 million cwt. above the previous record set in 1976. The increased production is attributed to a large increase in acreage. Yield, at 1,700 pounds per acre, is down 8 percent from last year's 1,850 pounds.

Computer lice prowl about but they're easy to control

MIAMI (UPI) — Employees of a major airlines are complaining that virtually invisible lice, impervious to insecticide, live in the wiring system of their computers and fatten on their operators.

But an entomologist says it's probably the employees who are biting — on a delusion as old as the electronics age.

"Working conditions are becoming increasingly worse," a reservations agent for the Air Lines, which writes the Miami Herald's Action Line, which solves readers' problems. Her problem: "Cable lice, which thrive on the cables of computers."

"These pests' bites are worse than that of fleas since they're practically invisible to the human eye," the agent wrote. "We've tried monthly pest control spraying, but it doesn't seem to help."

Della officials confirmed Wednesday that the complaints, at least, are getting better. Manager Paul Teichba, pointing to canisters of insecticide, said, "We spray for them. But I've never seen them."

"They're delusions," says Phillip Koehler, a University of Florida entomologist and mite expert who says he gets three or four calls a year from computerized institutions asking for help in exterminating the pests.

He said the computer mites are related to the "cord lice" that for years have terrorized telephone operators and the "paper mites" that plague workers in records rooms.

"People, usually women, complain about a creeping sensation and occasional bites," he said. "Usually they work among electronic equipment or among old dusty records."

He said clients have sent him captured specimens preserved in alcohol. "Mostly, they've been grains of sand or specks of dust."

He has, however, won some battles against the mites. "Sometimes we can take care of the problem by just telling people that we've gotten rid of the mites."

What's Russian word for 'Wrong number'?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Come February, dialing Moscow direct will be a reality for roughly half of the Bell System's telephone customers.

Moreover, dialing direct anywhere internationally will be cheaper.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. announced it will begin offering direct international dialing to eight additional countries, including the Soviet Union, starting in February.

In a separate filing with the Federal Communications Commission, the company also proposed to reduce rates for many overseas calls beginning Feb. 8, an action it estimated would save U.S. customers $46 million in 1981.

The additional direct dialing service will bring to 82 the number of countries and areas that many U.S. customers can reach directly. The other countries added are the Ivory Coast, Libya, Nigeria, Senegal, Sri Lanka, Suriname and Tunisia.

The proposed new rates include a 15-cent reduction in the initial three-minute period charge for all customer-dialed international calls, and an across-the-board, 5-cent reduction in additional-minute charges.

Ray of hope for Idahoans

BOISE (UPI) — A New York financier said Thursday interest rates will begin declining next year, giving a boost to wood-products workers and prospective homeowners in Idaho.

George Benoit, president of Matthews & Wright Inc. underwriters, said at Boise that the prime lending rate should drop next year to 10 percent from the current approximate 17 percent level.

Benoit said investors have gained confidence that Congress and the incoming Reagan administration will control federal spending and be consistent with economic policies. Benoit's firm underwrites Idaho Housing Agency bonds.

Sunshine readies for funding effort

DALLAS — Sunshine Mining Co. has filed with the Securities Exchange Commission a proposed public offering of $25 million in silver certificates due Nov. 19, 1985.

The principal amount of each certificate whenever due shall be the greater of either $1,000 or the price of a certain number of troy ounces of silver bullion. The certificates are to be secured by a percentage of the company's annual production with certain limitations related to the silver bullion backing required for the total amount of the issue.

Drexel, Burnham and Lambert Inc., has been designated manager of the underwriting group expected to market the certificates to the public in about four weeks.

HAI gains new firm

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Hospital Affiliates International (HAI), the hospital management corporation under contract with Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, has acquired a psychiatric hospital management company.

American Health Services (AHS) was acquired by HAI, a subsidiary of the INA Corporation, following the dropping of a anti-trust suit against the company.

The value of the transaction is $17 million with the public holders of the AHS stock to be paid in cash, according to a report in the Federation of American Hospitals Review.

The U.S. Justice Department filed a anti-trust suit in New Orleans to block HAI from purchasing AHS, contending HAI owns all or part of two private psychiatric hospitals in the area and the acquisition would adversely affect competition in the New Orleans psychiatric care market. An injunction against the sale was filed.

The case was the first time the Justice Department had challenged a hospital merger or acquisition, according to the hospital magazine.

Last month, a Federal District Court in New Orleans dissolved the injunction with the agreement of the Justice Department after HAI sold its previous interests in New Orleans.

America, head of Cincinnati-Milliron's robot-making division. "It is going to change the character of jobs."

"Automation has taken man out from behind an ox up to an air conditioned tractor that helps him grow 100 times as much food. Now you don't see the old stoop worker in the fields of the South anymore."

"Automation has improved the lives of everybody who has to do that kind of thing."

"The robot, it merely improves productivity, multiplies man's power. But it is still just automation which, historically has resulted in an improved standard of living, more productivity and more jobs."

"An example — the impact of automatic telephone systems, the kind used every day now. Compare it with the old operator system which would take every woman in the country to do today. And your elevator operators in office buildings. There are more elevator service technicians today than there ever were elevator operators."

Joseph Engelberger, industrial robotics pioneer, head of the robotics firm, Unimation, has another example.

"Look at all the jobs the computer industry has created," he says.

"I argue about this with a lot of people, particularly liberal arts academic types. I say that productivity is always good, bar none."

"What you do with this blessing, how you divide it up, is up to you."

Workers, he says, might benefit with shorter working hours, a four-day week, cleaner and less strenuous working conditions.

"I look at it this way, a gain in productivity increases the options. But if you don't have productivity, you don't get any of it."

"Obviously," says Paul F. Guy, Ford Motor Co.'s director of manufacturing, engineering and systems. "This is an area of high interest on the part of the UAW. I sit on the UAW-Ford technology interchange committee where we work to communicate our plans that may impact on our labor force."

Earnings limits raised for 1981

CHICAGO — Railroad retirement annuitants subject to earnings limitations may earn more during 1981 without a reduction of benefits.

The U.S. Railroad Retirement Board said the 1980 exempt earnings amount of $5,000 has been raised to $5,500 for annuitants age 65 to 71 to earn up to $5,000 next year without a reduction in benefits. Annuitants under age 65 can earn up to $4,000 before their annuities are subject to a reduction of $1 for every $1 earned over the exempt amount.

However, the board said, if 1981 is the first year benefits are payable, reductions apply only to months when earnings exceed $450 for beneficiaries age 65 to 71 or $340 for those under age 65.

U.S. should prepare now for major oil supply disruptions, Bradley says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Claiming American self-sufficiency in energy is an illusion, Sen. Bill Bradley warns the United States should prepare now for major disruptions of foreign oil supplies he feels are inevitable in the 1980s.

"An energy independent America is an illusion," the New Jersey Democrat said at a Senate Energy Committee news conference held Thursday to release a committee report called "The Geopolitics of Oil."

Bradley said even if the United States imported no oil at all, its economy would be ruined if Middle East oil supplies to European allies were disrupted. The United States will have to import foreign oil for the rest of this century, he said.

"The most pressing item on our agenda is to prepare this country to last through an oil supply interdiction," Bradley said.

Bradley also said the United States should fill the strategic petroleum reserve, increase private domestic stockpiles, help boost oil production in the rest of the world, and enact a credible military policy.

Committee Chairman Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said he fears increased use of oil as a political weapon and major disruptions of allied oil supplies in the 1980s.

Jackson said the situation is so serious that America's foreign and energy policies must be linked if the country is to get enough oil to keep the economy growing.

"We are now in the extraordinary situation where the success of our foreign policies will determine whether we get enough oil to keep our economy growing," he said.

"Our access to oil imports will rest in no small part on the strength and credibility of our defenses. Our ability to maintain a strong defense depends on the strength of our economy and our industrial base."

"Whether we like it or not, these linkages between security, the economy, and national energy

SEN. BILL BRADLEY ...expects oil cutoff will govern national policy in the 1980s."

He expressed concern about increased Soviet influence in the Middle East, the vulnerability of Saudi Arabia to a coup, and U.S. ability to respond to such a crisis.

"The United States should build a 'domestic petroleum reserve' by filling the Strategic Petroleum Reserve as rapidly as possible and by encouraging private stockpiling of petroleum," the report said.

Other recommendations included developing plans with allies to manage the impact of any energy emergency, resisting Soviet advances in the Middle East, and supporting increased oil production outside the Middle East.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said to succeed Jackson as the committee chairman in the new Congress, criticized the report, saying it "falls to point to opportunities of increased domestic production."

MCO Holdings reports earnings slide

LOS ANGELES — MCO Holdings, Inc. reports a decline in earnings and net income during the first nine months of this year.

Net income of $11.17 million or 67 cents a share was down from $27.56 million or $1.54 a share in the same period in 1979.

Revenues of $96.45 million were up from $54.48 million in the same period a year ago after exclusion of $22.92 million in revenues from discontinued real activities.

For the quarter ending Sept. 30, Holdings reported net income of $5 million or 35 cents a share compared with $2.4 million or $1.32 a share in 1979. Revenues of $34.58 million were up from $22.48 million a year ago.

Net income for the third quarter in 1979 was increased by sale of an overriding royalty interest in a Canadian gas field offset by provision relating to certain soil conditions and gas processing facilities.

THERE'S NOTHING WRONG WITH AMERICA! Inflation and the other economic problems have taken their toll, but the only real problem we have is this, too many people have lost their faith and confidence in their own abilities. Too many believe that the chance to start a business, to build it into a successful enterprise, to be independent, to be in control of their future is a dream left over from a world that no longer exists.

I say that's bunk!! Opportunities for the independent minded, persevering, ambitious individual have never been better. Of course the opportunities that exist today are different from those of 20 or 40 years ago, but that doesn't make the ones we have today any less rewarding. The chance to get ahead, to build a future on the foundation of individual effort, to become financially independent is more available today than ever before.

If your faith in the future of America is the same as mine, we should get to know each other. We have an opportunity that just might be the vehicle to put you on top and change your entire life.

Communications law easing top priority for Packwood

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., incoming chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, said he will give top priority to deregulating the communications industry.

Packwood also said he will follow a policy of loosening federal regulations whenever possible.

"We should not interfere with capitalistic acts between consenting adults," Packwood said at a news conference called to discuss his plans for the panel.

He also said he will not try to change any of the transportation deregulation bills passed in the past two years, although he will hold hearings on their effectiveness.

Packwood will become chairman of the committee next year because the GOP swept into power in the Senate.

In addition to communications and transportation, the Commerce Committee also has jurisdiction over the Federal Trade Commission and several other regulatory agencies.

Packwood said his philosophy is "in harmony" with President-elect Ronald Reagan regarding federal regulation in general.

While he did not lay out specific legislation, Packwood made clear that communications deregulation is his major concern.

Packwood said his communications deregulation plan might have to be broken into several bills — one covering the telecommunications industry, another the broadcast industry and a third for foreign communications.

He said total deregulation of broadcasting is unlikely because there were "giants" in the industry that could not be allowed to go without control.

Cable television also is one area that must be addressed, Packwood said, but he gave no details.

Packwood said a substantial part of AT&T could be set up as independent subsidiaries. The Justice Department is trying to break up the Bell System through a massive antitrust suit against AT&T scheduled to go to trial early next year.

However, legislation to revamp the Communications Act has been moving through Congress for years and came close to passage this year.

Packwood also listed these goals for the committee:

Consumers: The committee will have a consumer subcommittee, headed by Rep. John Danforth, R-Mo. He does not see any major fight over reauthorizing the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Aviation: The committee will hold hearings to determine whether computer airlines are giving good and safe service to local communities that were dropped by major airlines following airline deregulation. He still favors removing federal financial aid from large airports.

Railroads: The nation's rail freight system is essential and must be kept running. Long-distance rail passenger service may not be necessary, although "long distance commuter" rail service probably is needed.

Big diamond nets record price at sale

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — The famous "Polar Star" diamond that once belonged to Napoleon Bonaparte's brother sold for a world record price of $4.6 million for a single gem at auction, Christie's auction house announced today.

At $112,000 per carat, the diamond also set a new world per carat record price for a white gem, Christie's said.

The 41.28-carat, square diamond was bought by an anonymous Indian collector from Bombay during a late night bidding session Thursday.

The stone was extracted from the Golconda mines in India, and belonged to Joseph Bonaparte, King of Naples and brother of Napoleon Bonaparte. It later passed into the possession of Russian princess Tatiana Youssouffoff, before being acquired in the 1920s by Cartier of Paris on behalf of Lady Deterding, widow of the founder of Royal Dutch Shell.

Lady Deterding's total collection was sold for $11.7 million and included a superb diamond and ruby necklace, two pearl necklaces originally owned by the Russian Imperial family and a rose-shaped brooch studded with small canary yellow diamonds.

The total jewel sale, including the Deterding collection, came to $21.7 million at Christie's annual Geneva sale that ended today.

NEWSPAPER DISCOUNT RATE FOR SCHOOLS

Biggest U.S. firms on list of those afool of federal laws

NEW YORK (UPI) — A total of 117 U.S. corporations, including some of the biggest and most prestigious, have been involved in at least one federal offense since 1970, Fortune Magazine says in its latest issue.

A survey of 1,043 major American companies showed that 11 percent of them were either convicted of federal charges or made settlements of the allegations. Many of the companies were repeat offenders.

Fortune's survey, limited to five federal offenses, saw a total of 186 offenses in 1979, 28 cases of kickbacks, bribery or illegal rebates, 21 cases of illegal political contributions, 11 cases of fraud, and 5 cases of tax evasion.

The survey also was limited to domestic cases. "The list would have been longer had it included foreign bribes and kickbacks," the article said.

"The big cases are often shockers ... and indicate that big-business crime hasn't been swept away in a tide of post-Watergate morality," Fortune said.

All of the crimes were undertaken for the benefit of the corporation and not for personal benefit, the article said.

While no single answer accounts for the variety of corporate misbehavior, one defense counsel said business crimes "are perceived by the individual actors as victimless. We all grew up in an environment in which we learned that thou shalt not murder, rape, rob, probably not pay off a public official — but not that it was a crime to fix prices."

Stanley Sporkin of the Securities and Exchange Commission said a "persuasive explanation" for the crimes is economic pressure — "the bottom-line philosophy."

"In many instances where people are not lining their own pockets you can only explain corporate crime in terms of 'produce or perish,'" Sporkin said.

Conservative politics offer strong elixir for Wall Street

©Boston Globe

Analysis

NEW YORK — The immittance of conservative politics in Washington has injected the stock market with what British economist John Maynard Keynes called "animal spirits."

These animal spirits are presently a more powerful elixir than the high interest rates that are supposed to depress stock prices.

They are driving the Dow Jones Industrial Average into the 1000 breakthrough area for a possible try at the old record high of 1051.70 established when peace came to Vietnam.

This past Wednesday, the Dow fell 6.31 points in a typical moderate spate of profit taking. The big correction is yet to arrive.

But before it fell the Dow twice pierced through the 1000 level in heavy trading.

This market has risen steadily and unusually some 25 percent in the seven months since the bulls first came in April 21.

Such a performance of undying strength has now added several extra attractions.

Investors are exulting in the Reagan honeymoon period. They believe the next four years will bring a more balanced federal budget, lower taxes and lower inflation. The possibility of a capital gains tax at only 20 percent is enough to juice the market.

People are viewing the long-term future with more confidence. The whole environment for investment will be improved," says Frank Morris, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston.

Also, it took the market about 18 months and a great many frustrated attempts to make it over the 900 mark. Each time 900 was approached there was a great deal of selling. It was a psychological obstacle that was finally breached.

It could very well be that the magic 1000 mark also will bring in a wave of selling. However, the bets in Wall Street favor the Reagan market over the Carter market.

The last time the Dow 30 climbed over 1000 was Dec. 31, 1976, when the average closed at 1004.65 just before the Carter Administration began.

Now, Wall Street is transfixed by the Reagan victory. Every day its hopes for a new economic era are fed by fresh ideas, like cutting back Social Security benefits.

Investors are hoping "the concern about fading productivity, insufficient capital formation and sharp increases in personal tax burdens will be converted into political actions," according to a special study by Data Resources Inc., a forecasting group, entitled "Can Reagan Do It?"

If and until the President-elect demonstrates he cannot "do it," there could be more froth in the stock market. The honeymoon is not yet over.

Large institutional investors such as pension funds have turned away from buying bonds because of their volatility this year. While stocks have risen 25 percent, bonds have moved down, then up, then down again as interest rates fluctuate.

Basically, stocks have been more stable than bonds, leading investors to forego 13 percent for 30 years of the promise of energy and technology stocks today.

Long-term bonds returned a miserly 1 percent per year over the past three years. By comparison, some stocks have doubled and tripled already in 1980.

Investors are not Pavlovian idiots responding to weekly hikes in the prime rate. Even though the prime rate of lending has risen to 16.25 percent and may go higher, Wall Street is looking for a peak in interest rates and a decline in the cost of money next year.

Everyone remembers what happened between April and June when the cost of money fell from 20 percent to 8 percent. They are not running from a 17 percent prime rate, but believe stocks will go higher when the cost of money declines again. Bache Halsey Stuart Shields believes the prime rate will be back down to 11 percent by next spring.

Still, the optimism is puzzling and confusing to most experts. They believe the markets must weaken after less than seven months of strength.

They cannot understand how stocks can keep climbing along with interest rates. They believe the Reagan honeymoon must soon be over.

Wage rate climb slows in quarter

By PETER S. NAGAN
Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Certain recent statistics suggest there is hope for improvement in the inflation rate, but some government economists don't entirely believe the figures — or believe the improvement can continue.

The statistics the economists are looking at are the average hourly wages in manufacturing. Figures for the third quarter show a marked slowing in the rate of increase compared with the rate of the year's first half.

From January to June, the Labor Department's figure for the average hourly wage was rising at a rate of 9 1/2 to 10 percent a year. By contrast, the increase in the July-September quarter came at an annual rate of 7 1/2 percent.

In other words, industry's labor costs were rising more slowly. And that, in turn, implies that the pressures to raise prices will diminish.

But the pressure won't go away. Those wage increases still outran the increases in productivity — output per man-hour — for the same period.

The numbers suggest that inflationary forces could finally be easing in one major sector of the economy. But there are several reasons the impact could be limited. Some economists suspect that slowing in the rise of the wage rate may have been only a one-shot phenomenon. They cite two reasons:

"The sharp drop in business activity in the second quarter caused layoffs in many industries. Workers may have been reluctant to push hard for big wage increases. But with a recovery — even a weak one — now apparently under way, it may be catch-up time again. New wage demands may be stiffer."

"The slowing may also have reflected what happened to the inflation rate in the first half. The Consumer Price Index fell sharply between the first and second quarters from a rate of more than 18 percent a year down to about 12 percent. That meant smaller increases showing up a little later in the cost-of-living escalators that are built into so many labor contracts.

But the inflation rate now seems headed higher. Food, fuel and housing costs all are pointing upward. So the cost-of-living adjustments could soon be bigger again.

Normally, the beginning of a recovery brings big gains in productivity, because slack is taken up and more production can be achieved by the same labor force. Conceivably, productivity gains could offset accelerating wage increases and keep the rise in unit labor costs down to something like that better third-quarter rate. But, as noted, the recovery is expected to be limited — and so would the beneficial impact on inflation.

Slowing inflation rate may require long time

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Any significant reductions from the current inflation rate may take years, a Federal Reserve System official says.

Fredert H. Miller, vice chairman of the system's board of governors, told the United States League of Savings Associations that extraordinary measures by the federal government to rein in "the rampant advance in prices" has caused the inflation rate to decline from the first quarter of this year.

"Reducing inflation through monetary and fiscal policy, however, is not easy or painless, but it is the single most important thing that can be done to help the thrift industry."

Schultz told the League's annual convention.

"The Federal Reserve and the savings and loan industry need better communication about our common concerns and goals than we have achieved to date."

As an example, he mentioned new reserve and reporting requirements recently authorized by the Congress.

Taxable bonus can be tax-free

© Field Enterprises, Inc.
Last of four parts

You may be able to save substantially on taxes when your company pays you year-end bonuses.

The right timing often can completely eliminate the Social Security tax — thereby pulling up hefty savings both for the company and for employees receiving the bonuses.

Social Security tax boost in 1981: The tax goes up to a higher rate (6.65 percent in 1981 against 6.13 percent in 1980) on a higher wage base of $29,700 in 1981 against $25,900 in 1980. This is an increase of more than 24 percent in the maximum Social Security tax — from $1,588 in 1980 to $1,975 in 1981. Keep in mind that the tax is paid by each employee and matched by the company — so the Social Security tax for each employee who makes at least $29,700 in 1981 comes to a whopping $3,950.

But there are tax moves you can make now to wipe out Social Security taxes on year-end bonuses. Here are three typical ones.

(1) Bonus for the Young Employee. Let's say your company pays you, a junior executive, $26,000 a year — and you're due for a $2,000 bonus at year-end. Your company can pay you the bonus in December 1980 or in January 1981.

If your company pays in 1981, your entire bonus is hit by Social Security tax (in '81, taxes must be paid on wages up to $29,700). The tax on the bonus is $266 — $133 from the company, $133 from you. It costs the company $2,133 to give you $1,867 in pocket.

Tax-Saving Move: But if your company pays you the bonus in December, the bonus is totally free of Social Security tax. The company pays $2,000 and you get $2,000 (not counting income taxes, of course).

Reason: You and your company already have paid tax on the maximum wage base in 1980 of $25,900. There's no more tax to be paid.

(2) Bonus for the New Employee. Let's say you, an experienced executive, joined your company this past September at an annual salary of $36,000. Your company expects to pay you a year-end bonus for 1980 of $2,500 either in December or January.

If your company pays you the bonus before Dec. 31, the money is fully taxable — your company pays $153.25 in Social Security taxes and you pay $153.25.

Reason: Even though your salary level is $36,000, your company is paying you around $12,000 in 1980 — your salary through the final months of the year. And that's what counts: Even with the bonus added in, you're still far short of the $25,900 maximum wage base for 1980.

Tax-Saving Move: Your company pays you the bonus in January 1981. Reason: You will receive at least $36,000 from your company in 1981. So you and your company will be paying the maximum Social Security tax even without the bonus. The bonus won't add a cent to the overall tax burden. Even though income tax will be owed on the bonus, the overall Social Security tax bill for the year will be the same.

(3) Bonus for the Retiring Employee. Now let's say you, a longtime executive with your company, are retiring at the end of 1980. Your 1980 salary is $30,000. Your company plans to give you a $4,000 year-end bonus — again to be paid either in December 1980 or in January 1981.

If your company pays you in 1981, both you and your company will each owe $266 in Social Security tax on the bonus. Since you are retiring, the $4,000 bonus presumably will be the total sum of your earnings in 1981. So the bonus will be fully taxable.

Tax-Saving Move: Your company should consider paying you the bonus in December 1980. Reason: The bonus is then Social Security tax-free. You are being paid $30,000 by your company in all of 1980, so the maximum Social Security tax already has been paid by the time you will be receiving your bonus in the next few weeks.

(Of course, depending on your own situation, you may save income taxes by receiving the bonus in 1981, but that's a factor that complicates each of these situations. This discussion is centering on Social Security taxes for clarity but is in no way un-derestimating the impact of income taxes on the individual's financial affairs and the pivotal role of these taxes in affecting the best timing that the taxpayer can receive additional funds.)

Some final words: Also for the sake of simplicity, these examples have been limited to just one employee at a time. Thus, only a few hundred dollars have been at stake in each case.

But as Prentice-Hall stresses, when savings of a few hundred dollars each are multiplied by 10, 20, 100, etc. employees, the significance to the company of the savings truly emerges. And it's huge.

Hecla future looks bright

SEATTLE — W.A. Griffith, president of Hecla Mining Co., told the Seattle Society of Financial Analysts he expects 1980 earnings for his firm to fall in the range of $7.30 to $8 a share.

Griffith said Hecla plans to spend $4 million in 1981 for exploration of new properties.

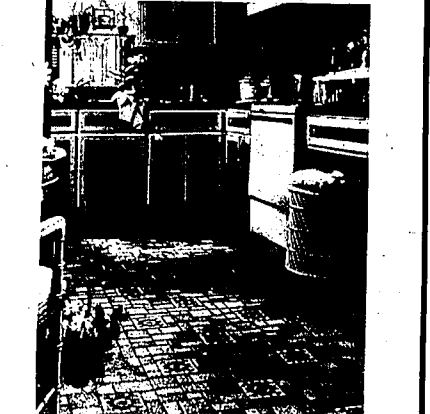

Regarding other operations of the company, Griffith said the Silver Shaft which will increase Lucky Friday Mine production by 35 percent in 1986, is ahead of schedule. The headframe was completed in October and the shaft has passed the 300 foot level.

Mine production began at the Consolidated Silver Project earlier this month and the concentrator was to start up this past week. Shaft sinking for a deep-level exploration program is expected to start early in 1981.

Hecla is based in the Coeur d'Alene mining district of northern Idaho.

SKY HIGH LOGGING

Sawtooth foresters are using helicopters in

by BRUCE HAMMOND Photographs by BOB DeLASHMUTT

FAIRFIELD — Dangling like a yo-yo on a 150-foot cable, the 7,000-pound log dances dangerously.

Hovering in mid-air, a two-man helicopter crew methodically checks possible reasons behind failure of the log to drop from the electrically controlled cable onto a landing pad where two young loggers wait to ready the tree for trimming.

"It really wasn't any big deal this morning," logging foreman Dave Horrax said of the incident. "The electronic release failed for some reason and the crew had to release the log with a mechanical lever."

The emergency lasted only a minute. There were no injuries and the huge log was picked up by loader and dumped unceremoniously with a hundred others awaiting a truck trip to Sawtooth Forest Products' mill in Mountain Home.

Helicopter logging is a relatively new method of harvesting forests where roads can't be built without harming watersheds and wildlife. Barker Gulch north of Fairfield is the first area in the Sawtooth National Forest harvested this way.

"It's a pretty precise business," said Horrax, of pilots flying the 30-foot-long craft. "They have to bring the logs exactly on target, laying them down gently so debris doesn't splinter off and hit someone."

Racing 2½ miles between two sharp ridges between Barker Gulch and a timber drop pad near Featherville, the two-bladed Boeing Vertol 107 helicopter reaches speeds upwards of 120 mph.

It's a feat the Columbia Helicopters Inc. flight crews from Portland, Ore., have performed well since helo-logging operations were begun 10 years ago. The company has had no fatalities, on or off the ground, in that time.

"I know it sounds really corny, but yeah, safety always comes first in everything you think and do," said pilot Chuck Bailey.

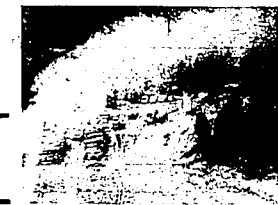

Bailey, 38, had just completed a five-hour shift in the air. As he talked, several mechanics performed a concentrated, 30-minute maintenance check on his helicopter's two huge engines before a new flight crew took over.

"Our maintenance is better than any other private or military operation. That's why I fly for Columbia," said Bailey, visibly shaking after the hours of high-speed concentration. "We also have continuous checks of all parts and equipment every night."

None of Columbia's 11 logging helicopters have ever been damaged in a crash, although a few have taken a few hard knocks, Bailey said.

"The hairiest experience I ever had involved a mechanical failure where I had to shut down one of the engines," Bailey recalled.

"Normally, that'd be no problem, but we were too high, the air was too thin and we came right down," he continued. "Hit so hard it blew out one of the tires."

"What goes through your mind? I just remember telling myself to keep the ship upright — not let it roll over on us," Bailey said.

Although three ground loggers on Columbia crews were killed this past year (a tragically average statistic for all logging operations), the threat of death isn't the biggest disadvantage most of the loggers think about, according to Horrax, 26.

"There are a lot of other problems," Horrax explained. "Most of the 24-man crew is young and single. The six-day weeks and separation from family can take its toll on some men."

Bailey, for example, drives to Boise every day to be with his wife and five children.

"Most of us, though, wouldn't want (logging) to be any other way," Horrax said.

Horrax said his crew feels secure in their safety record and the precautions they take.

Before logging on Barker Gulch began Oct. 20, arrangements were made with the Mountain Home hospital to receive injured loggers and provide a landing spot for the helicopter. Transport time is less than a half hour, Horrax said.

An added precaution is a siren, located on the helicopter's fuselage, used to warn loggers of "widow makers," tree tops knocked loose by other falling trees.

"Logging gets into your blood," Horrax continued. "We can move more logs with our one helicopter than any other means of logging ever devised—under normal conditions we're talking 120,000 board feet of timber for nine hours of flying time."

"We just move from site to site. When the winter gets too fierce here we'll move to other parts of the country, like northern California, or maybe one of the company's construction projects."

Logging accounts for about two-thirds of Columbia's business, according to Horrax.

"But we're diversifying — using the helicopters for everything from off-shore oil projects to setting ski lifts on mountains," Horrax said.

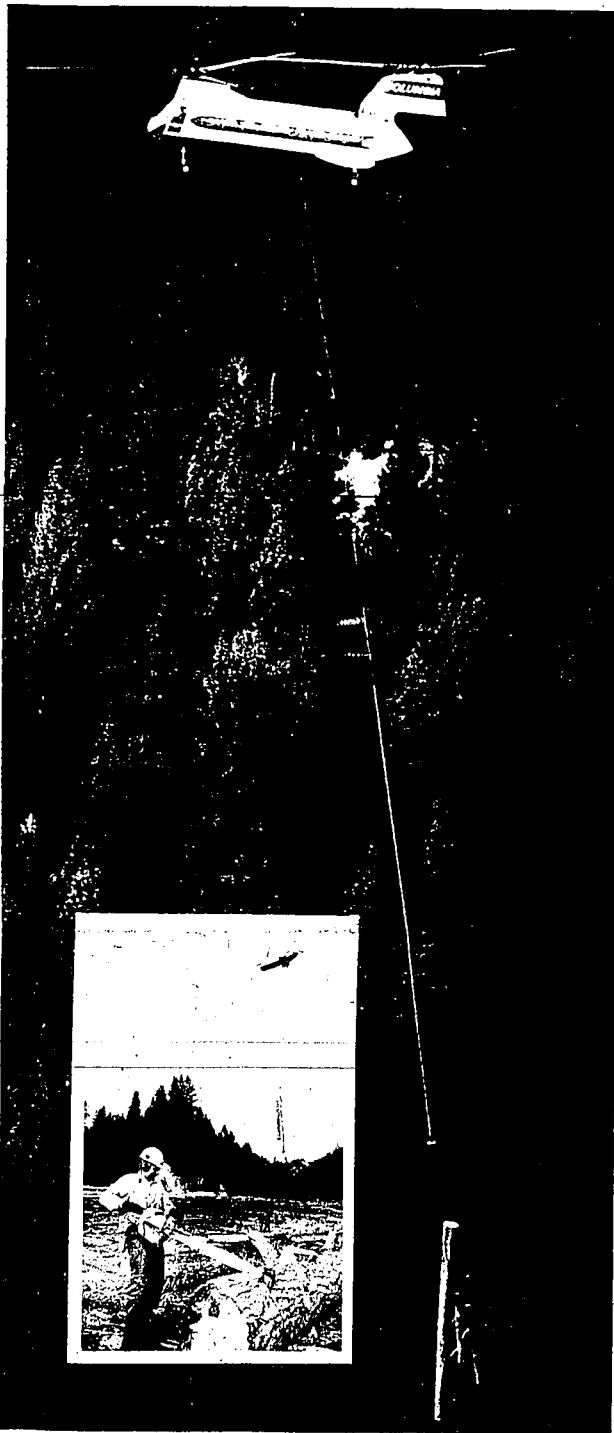

Bailey laughed when asked about this multi-purpose use of the helicopters.

The craft he pilots began life shuttling New York City residents to work during the early 1960s. In fact, the many windows on the 24-passenger transit chopper have been retained, though the contents of the passenger section were junked in 1970.

A similar craft purchased today would cost between $8 million and $10 million, Horrax said.

"The best thing about this type of logging is that once we're done, no one could ever tell we'd been there," Horrax said proudly.

"We don't do clear cuts, just thinning and partial cuts, plus there are no roads left to see, no skid trails, no ripped up ground," he said.

Loggers work at a landing site as helicopter crews haul in Ponderosa and Fir trees via air lanes to avoid environment damage in outlying regions of Sawtooth National Forest

Helicopter logging protects wildlife and watersheds

FAIRFIELD — When logs can't be transported from a forest by truck, U.S. Forest Service officials look to the air.

"Once an area is deemed in need of logging, but the terrain won't handle any road construction, our only alternative is either helicopter logging or dropping it as a possible sale," explained Fairfield District timber specialist Lance Raff.

This fall marked the first time helicopter logging was used in the Sawtooth National Forest. According to Raff, it was the only possible way of clearing old and reformed timber from the Barker Gulch area north of Fairfield.

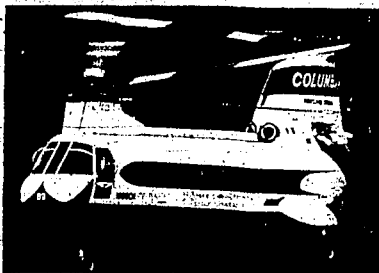

Located just a few miles north of Featherville, the gulch includes several environmental qualities common to the SNEC, deep mountain lakes, fragile soil, mountain springs and a valuable elk calving ground.

"Our interdisciplinary team spent most of the time evaluating three alternative road systems into the area," Raff said of a study that began in 1977.

"The primary problem in the area was that there was no regeneration," Raff said. At the same time, none of the road alternatives met environmental requirements and all proposals would have required deep cuts in mountainsides, plus costly fills over springs and snow runoff channels.

"The best of the three road proposals also failed to meet our visual management plan," Raff continued. "There would have been one section, about 600 yards, that would have been visible from Featherville, disrupting the mountainside."

The Barker Gulch sale of 6.13-million board feet was finally opened for bids as a helicopter sale last spring at an estimated deficit cost to the purchaser of $157 per thousand board feet of timber.

"To understand a deficit sale, you have to realize that our appraisal (of the logging cost) is based on an average operator," Raff said. "Of course, there are more efficient operations that can harvest the sale and still make money. Otherwise, no one would ever buy it."

Almost all large timber sales on the Sawtooth are marketed as deficit sales, Raff said.

Despite concern the declining housing market would scare companies away, Barker Gulch sold last summer to Sawtooth Forest Products of Mountain Home, Columbia Helicopters Inc., Portland, Ore., was then contracted to cut and transport the timber to a truck-loading site 2½ miles away from Barker Gulch.

"The main benefit of a helicopter sale is it's a no-road system," said Idaho Fish and Game Region IV Supervisor Bill Webb. "There are also no skid trails and very little damage to the ground."

According to Webb, the Fish and Game Department approves sales like Barker Gulch for two reasons.

"First, building roads in an area like that causes all sorts of erosion problems — deterioration of the watershed," Webb said.

"The other problem with these kinds of roads is that they open a lot of area to hunters, so there often are no longer any security areas for deer and elk," he continued.

In addition to calving areas, Barker Gulch provides significant thermal cover for elk, according to Raff.

But since the Forest Service goal was merely to thin deteriorating stands and increase natural regeneration, no clear-cutting has been done on Barker Gulch.

Instead, Forest Service employees individually tagged each tree to be removed by the Columbia Helicopters crew.

Because of the high cost of helicopter logging — Columbia rents its helicopters for $1,000 an hour — and the relatively low value of many stands in the Sawtooth, no more helicopter sales are being planned in the next five years, according to Raff.

Expectations are divorce factor

Editor's Note: This is the 12th in a series of 15 articles exploring "American Families in Transition." In this article, sociologist Robert S. Weiss discusses the causes and implications of our high divorce rate. This series, written for Courses by Newspaper, a program of University Extension, University of California, San Diego, was funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

ABOUT the Author
ROBERT S. WEISS

Robert S. Weiss is Professor of Sociology at the University of Massachusetts, Boston, and Lecturer in Sociology in the Department of Psychiatry at the Harvard Medical School, where he has been a member of the faculty since 1964. The recipient of the National Institute for Mental Health's Research Scientist Development Award, he formerly taught at Brandeis University and the University of Chicago. His many books include "Loneliness: The Experience of Emotional and Social Isolation," "Marital Separation," and "Going It Alone: The Family Life and Social Situation of Single Parents."

Questions for Newspaper Articles
Article XII: Robert S. Weiss: Signs of Strain

Questions:
(1) What is the ratio of divorce to marriage in the United States today?
(2) Approximately what percentage of American children born today will spend part of their growing-up years in a single-parent family?
(3) In what way was the high divorce rate of the 1960s and 1970s self-fueling?
(4) What is "shared custody"?

Answers:
(1) One divorce for every two marriages.

(2) Almost 50 percent (one-half).
(3) As the number of divorces increased, social pressure against divorce eased.

(4) An arrangement in which both divorced parents retain the rights and responsibilities toward their children that they had before they separated.

In the United States today there is a divorce for every two marriages; married in 1979; almost exactly half that number divorced.

Ours is now the highest divorce rate the industrialized world has ever known. And because 50 percent of the couples getting divorced each year have children under 18, millions of youngsters experience what once were termed "broken homes."

These figures help explain the frequently voiced fear that the modern American family is falling apart. There is no question that the high frequency of divorce has changed the character of American family life.

Almost half of American children born today will spend part of their growing-up years in a single-parent family, according to Census Bureau estimates. Remarriage will become increasingly common, already one-tenth of American children live with a stepparent.

All divorce is nothing new for Americans. The divorce rate in the United States has always been higher than that in Europe and has been increasing at least since 1867, when American divorce statistics were first collected.

Except for a brief period of decline during the Depression of the 1930s and again during the later 1940s and the 1950s, the rate of divorce has risen an average of 2.3 percent per year.

In the 1960s, however, the divorce rate began increasing rapidly, doubling between 1963 and 1975. By 1978 it had leveled off again, and has been increasing only slowly since.

Causes of divorce
The gradual long-term increase in the divorce rate could have resulted from a number of factors: increased urbanization, bringing with it greater freedom from social pressures; increased acceptance of women's rights to independent lives, including their rights to leave intolerable marriages; and increased affluence and opportunity, together with smaller families, which may have made it easier for men and women to begin new lives.

To some extent the dramatic increase in the divorce rate in the 1960s and 1970s was self-fueling. As there were more divorces, social pressures against divorce eased. Judges no longer insisted that a couple remain married only because neither husband nor wife could demonstrate legal grounds for divorce.

Divorce statutes themselves were liberalized by state legislatures. Unhappily married individuals no longer had to resign themselves to making the best of their unwanted marriages or to living permanently in the uncomfortable situation of the informally separated.

At the same time, profound changes were taking place in our social lives. We no longer believed so strongly that a woman's aspirations should be limited to her roles as wife and mother. Increasingly, we expected women working outside their homes because they wanted to, not just because they needed to. Increasingly, too, we respected men's and women's desires for happiness and personal growth, even if these desires conflicted with marital obligations.

Paradoxically, our high divorce rate can be seen as testimony to the importance in our lives of our marriages. Surveys show that it is harder for us to be happy when we are dissatisfied with our marriages and our family lives than if we are dissatisfied with our jobs, our friends, or incomes.

It may be because we Americans so often move far from the families in which we grew up and from the friends we had then made that we look to our marriages for satisfaction of so many of our emotional needs. But because we expect so much of our marriages, an unhappy marriage becomes difficult to tolerate.

Problems after separation
Although marital separation provides an escape from the tensions and silences of a bad marriage, it brings major new problems. The first year after separation tends to be a time of upset, uncertainty, loneliness and depression, sometimes relieved by the excitement of experiment with new ways of living.

Married friends often drift away as the absence of common concerns becomes evident. Many among the separated and divorced remain for a time emotionally linked to their former partners even though they no longer are socially linked.

Until the mid-19th century, judges generally awarded custody of the children of divorcing parents to the fathers, who were thought to be better able to provide for the needs of the children.

However, as fathers' work separated them from their homes and mothers were seen as the sources of the nurturance and understanding children required, judges increasingly adopted "the doctrine of tender years": a child too young to fend for itself belongs with its mother.

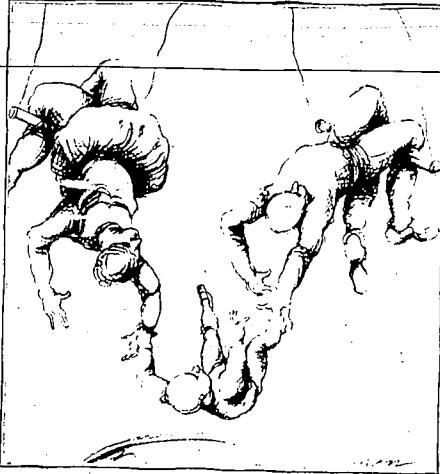

By the beginning of the 20th century mothers were almost always given custody of preadolescent children, and of adolescent girls as well, unless the mothers were shown to be immoral, alcoholic, or mentally ill.

In the past decade judges have begun to consider fathers as potential custodians of small children even when the mothers are also "fit" parents. Nevertheless, over 90 percent of children whose parents are divorced continue to live with their mothers.

Both custodial and noncustodial parents often tend to be dissatisfied. The parents who have custody often feel overwhelmed by the double responsibility of raising children and obtaining an adequate income. The parents without custody often feel bitter at having lost home and children, along with their marriage, yet still being required to provide regular payment to the former spouse who retains them.

Most important for children who were close to both parents is that the children continue to be able to see or talk with either parent whenever they want to. Children find unsatisfactory the traditional arrangement in which one parent has the custody and the other is allowed only "reasonable visitation", because the visiting parent seems unavailable most of the time.

Some divorcing parents are now exploring "shared custody", in which both parents retain the rights and responsibilities they would have had if they had not separated. Some of these parents also have their children alternate residences on a split week basis or another basis. Although adolescents sometimes complain that these arrangements interfere with their social lives, younger children often prefer them to alternatives in which they would have less access to the noncustodial parent.

New families, new concerns
For the woman who becomes a single parent, money is a constant worry. Nearly one-third of separated and divorced mothers initially receive some public financial assistance.

However, within a very few years, most of these no longer receive any public aid; some have remarried; others live on their own earnings, perhaps augmented by support payments from their former husbands.

For single parents, remarriage often restores both feelings of well-being and an adequate household income. About four out of five divorced Americans eventually remarry; further testimony to the importance to us of marriage.

Yet the stepparent family has tensions of its own. Conflicts may develop over parents' loyalties as well as over responsibilities and authority in relation to children not their own. The children may continue to feel loyal to a parent outside the home. Although divorced parents may well have happy second marriages, they did not have to deal with their first marriages.

In our marriages, more than in most areas of our lives, we Americans are experiencing fundamental changes. The acceptability of divorce as a solution to marital difficulty is among the foremost of these. We have all become like immigrants to a new society, even the majority of us for whom this is the country of our birth, in that we must cope with family forms and family understandings different in important ways from those with which we grew up.

The views expressed in Courses by Newspaper are those of the authors only and do not necessarily reflect those of the University of California, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the distributing agency, or the participating newspapers and colleges.

Cover roses as late as possible in fall

Times-News Correspondent

Should roses be protected over winter or not? Roses do very well uncovered. If a good snow cover arrives and remains during severely cold weather. But who can count on a timely snow cover? No one can, so it's best to cover roses as late as possible in the fall. Why? Because roses bushes need light and low temperatures to properly acclimate to cold weather. If covered too early, these light and temperature conditions may not be met.

We're convinced that many rose bushes actually die from covering before they get a chance to harden or toughen up in fall. Let the wood become exposed to a few good freezes in fall, then cover with rose cones, or hill them up around the base, using soil. Note: If your rose bushes dropped all their leaves due to black spot disease, rake up the leaves and burn them. Then drench the plants and area around them with Benlate or Captan, 1 tablespoon per gallon of water, protecting for winter.

MINIATURE AFRICAN VIOLETS
More gardeners are growing miniature violets for several reasons: they take less space on stands, you get more flowers per stem, constantly produced, strong stems, even on trailers, fancy flowers on manageable foliage and plants that blossom easier and quicker, eliminating the problem of removing sucker growth. Here are some tips for growing mini-violets: 1) Use 2 1/2- to 2 3/4-inch pots. Larger ones encourage rot, because soil stays too wet. Smaller than 2 1/2-inch restricts root growth. Repot every three months. 2) Use soil mix that's light and porous.

As with regular violets, watering and feeding can be done from the bottom, the top, by wicking, or a capillary mat system (using a piece of acrylic blanket or indoor-outdoor carpeting. They need 14 to 16 hours of light to produce blossoms. This can be had by using one cool white fluorescent tube combined with one warm white fluorescent light. Violets grown on a window still prefer morning light or filtered afternoon sun. Too much light causes pale or yellow leaves and centers of the plants become bunched and hard.

PONY TAIL PALM

The pony tail palm (or elephant's foot tree) is one of the toughest house plants you can grow. Beaucarnea or pony tail palm, can grow for a month or more without watering, needs feeding once a year and takes a wide range of light and temperature conditions, protruding above the soil, its swollen spherical base (resembles a big bulb covered with elephant hide) is water storage organ. This Mexican succulent in the century-plant family is a slow grower and needs a light feeding each spring. No need to repot it, except once every six years or so. As for insects, it has none that we know of.

JADE PLANT

When the Jade Plant starts blossoming it creates quite a stir. But how do you get it to bloom? First, it needs a bright window, even full sun; for flower formation. In the winter, some gardeners put aluminum foil under the plant to get bouncing light all around it. Give the plant a day temperature of 70 degrees F. and around 55 degrees at night.

Allow the Jade to approach dryness between waterings. It likes good drainage. Give a soil mixture of one part each of sand, peatmoss and garden loam and grow it in a clay pot. It will grow in a plastic pot, if you don't overwater it. Too much water or poor drainage will cause leaves to shrivel and drop. Apply a light feeding about once a month until it starts to bloom in midwinter.

Note: The Jade is very susceptible to pesticides so do not use any on it. Malathion will cause the leaves to drop. If scale or mealybugs are found, wash them off with soapy water (liquid detergent is okay); then wash with clean water. Or use a one-part each solution of rubbing alcohol and water as a spray or for direct application to buds and stems.

VINEGAR FOR HARD WATER

One reason why pesticides are ineffective on plants is because the pH (measure of acidity or alkalinity) of the water is too high — that is too "sweet" or alkaline, due to the calcium in the water. Such water is called "hard water" and you used to see it inside grandmother's kitchen kettle. The ideal pH reading for spray material is between 5 and 6, meaning the water should be slightly acid. Anything above this can cause the insecticides to give poor control. A simple litmus paper test will give you an indication of how sweet or sour the water is. If your water is "hard" add some vinegar (about a cup to a gallon of tap water) and use this mixture for your pesticides. If you're growing acid-loving plants such as azaleas and gardenias, you can make the vinegar solution stronger, since they love the acidity for green leaves. You can't overdo vinegar for acid-loving plants.

SWEET SCENTED GLADS

We're surprised more people don't grow the sweet-scented glad (Acidenthera). It's not a true gladiolus but it produces bulbs and is one of the most delightful summer flowers you can grow.

After blooming, dry off the bulbs and store in a basement, just as you would glads. Flowers in summer are white, with purple throats on stiff 2-foot wily stems. You can buy the bulbs from most nurseries for around six for $1.95.

QUESTION BOX

Question of the week: D.E. of Mountain Home, "Every year we say we're going to make a pomander ball, but never do it. Do you need a lot of different materials for Pomanders?"

No. Your kitchen has all the materials for making a pomander ball (grandma called them Pomanders), and they make wonderful gifts, tucked in pillow cases, towels, sheets and blankets. Here's a simple way to make a pomander:

1) Select a firm apple or a navel orange (apples so prepared are called "clove apples"). Wipe with a greased cloth before cloves are inserted. Push whole cloves into the orange or apple's skin so that they touch each other with no skin showing. Combine 2 teaspoons of orris root (found in drug stores) with 2 teaspoons of ground cinnamon. Roll the completed studded orange (or apple) into the mixture of cinnamon and orris root, patting the powder in. Wrap in cleansing tissues or paper towels, and place in a cool dry place for striking and drying.

After several weeks, look at your pomander. They may feel like a head-hunter when you see the shrunken fruit, but not when you smell the sweet fragrance. Now it's ready to be popped into a gift box. If you use apples, decorate with a bow of fancy ribbon tied onto its stem. When firm, hard and dry it can be wrapped in a piece of net and hung in clothes closet, cupboard or dresser drawer.

If lemon is used, substitute ground cloves for the cinnamon. For a lime, use ground nutmeg. If in a hurry, the drying can be done by putting the pomander in a shallow pan and baking at 300 degrees F. for about four hours. Note: If the odor grows faint after months of use, add a few drops of oil of cloves. This old-fashioned method of perfuming is a good one for kids interested in making a unique Christmas gift.

R.F. of Twin Falls: "I'm about to give up on growing the Hoya or wax plant. How do you make it bloom?" Anyone can grow the wax plant (Hoya) but getting it to blossom is a trick. It likes a bright window, high humidity and a plant food high in phosphorus. Also they like good drainage and a soil that remains moist but not soggy. Hoya's native habitats are India, Asia and Australia — where they grow in cracks in barks or crevices of limbs, or in cracks in rocks where there's not much for the roots to anchor on. That's why the Hoya likes a small pot. Too large a pot will cause all foliage and no flowers.

and that 90 percent have storm windows or double-pane glass. In both cases, the percentage is much higher for homes constructed during the past two years, according to Veronica A. Gearhart, the company's economics analyst.

The General Public Utilities Corp. said a survey of its 1.3 million residential customers in New Jersey and Pennsylvania revealed that about half of them now have at least six inches of insulation in the attics of their homes added insulation during the past two years and one-third said they added storm windows.

Dr. Lamb

Patient must cooperate with doctor

LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

Dear Dr. Lamb,
Six months ago my husband came down with five symptoms of being a diabetic.
He weighed 226, and the doctor asked him to lose weight so he wouldn't have to put him on pills or shots. I kept him on a strict diet, and he lost to 187. Well, he's gained back to 190 and won't stay on a diet and won't return to the doctor.
He piles on the sweets and fried foods and fusses when I try to exchange foods and measures. At one time he had an ulcer and now he lives on soda, belches a lot, and does lots of vomiting by sticking his fingers down his throat. During a 24-hour period he takes between two and eight doses of soda. I'm so afraid it could be a heart attack instead of indigestion. He also drinks lots of coffee and is a chain smoker.
He told the doctor about his gaining weight and eating sweets. She told him she would have to put him on shots and he won't even go back to her now. His kidneys act all the time, and his legs and feet stay cold. Sometimes he can't feel his feet.

He tests his urine which shows negative, but I feel he needs blood tests every so often but he listens to no one and seems to be digging his own grave. He's only 58 years old. What do you think?
Dear Reader,
I think your letter is an excellent example of how impossible it is for a doctor to do anything for a patient who doesn't want to do anything for himself. Modern medicine can often do almost miraculous things for people, but it takes two to tango. If your husband has to get up at night because he urinates a lot because of his diabetes, he is a reasonably advanced case.
He certainly does need blood glucose tests to determine his status. He certainly does need to get as thin as he can and stay that way. If things are progressing in the manner your letter suggests, this won't be a problem for him too long because he will start losing so much sugar through his kidneys that he will not be able to maintain his weight. That's a little late in the game.

Diabetics are more inclined to have heart disease than non-diabetics so you have reason to be concerned about whether he has indigestion or heart disease. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 3-11, Diabetes: Diagnosis, Prevention and Management. It will give you a lot more information about how diabetes produces symptoms and what your husband should be doing. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

As long as a person's diabetes is mild enough to be controlled without medicines, weight control is the most important aspect of a diet. For a person who requires insulin, the meals have to be regulated in a very strict manner to maintain proper balance for insulin and blood glucose.
Your husband's weight, diabetes and being a chain smoker all indicate that he has a very high risk of having serious problems. Complications, such as a heart attack, can occur suddenly and in an unpredictable manner. The results, as you know, can be fatal. If your husband wants to improve his health, he must cooperate to the fullest extent with his doctor.

Swiss life program is available

KIMBERLY—Carolyn Jesser, who recently returned from a six-month International-4-H Youth Exchange in Switzerland, will be available to give programs on her experience until Jan. 1.
The daughter of Roy and Jean Jesser of Kimberly, she was one of three delegates selected from the United States to participate in the International Exchange program, a cultural learning experience for persons 19 to 25 years.
Delegates live and work with host families in one of 33 different countries around the world, she said.
During the six months, Jesser lived with seven farm families in six different regions of Switzerland. The country has three national languages and Jesser had host families who spoke Swiss-German, Italian and French.
She said her hosts were very hard working, arising early and usually not finishing their chores till about 8 p.m. Women quickly complete their household duties, then hurry to the barn or field to assist the men.
The exchange program is funded by the National 4-H Council, private donors and friends of 4-H in Idaho. While Jesser was in Switzerland, a Swiss man was sponsored through 4-H in Idaho.
In January Jesser plans to complete studies for a master's degree in guidance and counseling.
Anyone interested in having a program for their group may contact her at Route 2, Kimberly, 83341 or 733-1267.

Waitress in Jerome sells most buttons

TWIN FALLS—A Jerome waitress sold the most buttons for the recent Buck a Cup campaign to raise funds for the Easter Seal Society.
Meri Stoddard, director of the Magic Valley Easter Seal Center, said Della Wilson of the Fireside Cafe in Jerome was first. The buttons entitled the owner to drink all the coffee he or she wanted with the dollar going to the Easter Seal Society which provides therapy for handicapped children.
Dorothy Moody of Colonel's Kitchen in Twin Falls was second. Nancy Simonds sold buttons to friends and was third highest. Fourth was Cindy Schlund of the Longhorn Cafe at the Twin Falls Livestock Commission. Pat Olsen of the Food Tree in Halley was fifth and Carey Sheldon of J.B.'s Big Boy was sixth.
The staff at the Magic Valley Easter Seal Center would like to thank everyone who helped sell buttons, Stoddard said.
