

Tough sledding

Pulling his sled home, Daniel Scott, 10, of Twin Falls, crosses the Singing Bridge Sunday afternoon after an unsuccessful search for a good run.

Most of the snow in the vicinity had already melted. Besides, Scott said, all of his friends were "inside watching television."

97th Congress convenes today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 97th Congress convenes at noon today.

It meets for the ritual opening of a new session and Senate hearings on President-elect Ronald Reagan's Cabinet nominees.

The swearing-in ceremonies in the Senate and House today, followed by a round of celebration parties on Capitol Hill and the formal counting of the electoral votes on Tuesday are the sole items on the agenda.

Both chambers will recess after Tuesday's session and do not plan to hold business sessions until the week of Reagan's Jan. 20 inauguration.

But Senate committees, beginning Tuesday, will open hearings on Reagan's nominees for the Cabinet in an effort to have them ready for confirmation the afternoon after the inaugural.

The Foreign Relations Committee will start four days of hearings Friday on the nomination of Alexander Haig, former NATO commander and President's Nixon's last White House chief of staff, as secretary of state.

Haig, by far the most controversial of Reagan's appointments, faces quizzing on his role in Watergate, the Nixon pardon, the Vietnam and the secret bombing of Cambodia.

In a rare action, Republicans and Democrats on the committee have each hired outside lawyers to research Haig's past and help with the interrogation.

However, the expectation — barring revelation of a "smoking gun" — is that Haig, with the others, will be confirmed. Only eight Cabinet appointments have ever been rejected by the Senate.

The 97th Congress is the first in exactly half a century to be divided politically. The last was the 72nd Congress which took office in 1931.

The Democrats retained control of the House, although with a reduced 243-192 margin.

The Senate, however, was captured by the Republicans for the first time in 26 years. The GOP will have a 53-46-1 (Independent Harry Byrd of Virginia) edge.

Almost all congressional leaders are the same, although Senate Republicans are now the majority and the Democrats the minority.

The House will be led by Speaker Thomas O'Neill, certain of re-election as the first order of business Monday. Democratic leader James Wright of Texas and GOP leader Robert Michel of Illinois, the only newcomers, up from deputy.

In the Senate, Howard Baker of Tennessee takes over as majority leader with Robert Byrd of West Virginia becoming the minority leader.

After O'Neill is elected, he will administer the oath to all House members en masse.

In the Senate, where the ritual is more elaborate and only 34 have to be sworn in, they take the oath of office four at a time after being escorted to the front of the chamber by the other senator from the same state. Vice President Walter Mondale, as president of the Senate, is expected to administer the oath.

Mondale, or possibly a substitute, will preside in the House Tuesday at the ritualistic counting of the electoral votes, the final step in the nation's election of Reagan.

Reagan; Portillo to confer

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (UPI) — Mexican leader Jose Lopez Portillo will greet President-elect Ronald Reagan today in the middle of a bridge over the Rio Grande.

After exchanging courtesies in midday ceremonies at the Cordova International Bridge, the pair travel by motorcade to the modern Museum of Art and History here, where they will hold an hour-long chat with the Mexican president setting the agenda.

Reagan will be accompanied by his national security adviser, Richard Allen, his chief of staff, Edwin Meese, and Texas Gov. Bill Clements.

Aides to both men are quick to point out that Reagan is not yet president — and neither side expects any substantial accord to come out of the meeting. But it may have determined the direction of U.S.-Mexican relations, at least until Lopez Portillo's term ends in December, 1982.

For Reagan, this will not only be his first major foray into foreign affairs since the November election, but also a personal challenge to allay widespread characterizations of him in Mexico as an aging, trigger-happy ex-actor.

Though the agenda was not announced in advance, such touchy subjects as Mexican illegal immigration, a fishing dispute, Mexico's oil export policy, and Reagan's plans for turbulent Central America were considered likely topics.

Evans' budget message on television tonight

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans' annual budget message will be broadcast this evening over both public and commercial television.

It will be carried on Idaho's three public television stations and the Boise area's three commercial television stations.

Evans confirmed last week he will recommend a state budget of about $440 million. He said he originally planned to recommend 9.5 percent wage increases for state employees and 10 percent boosts for public school teachers.

But faced with trimming about $10 million from the budget to make it balance with revenue projections, Evans cut those pay hikes to 6.5 percent for public workers and 7.5 percent for teachers.

The governor's address, to last about 20 minutes, will be broadcast at 7 p.m. Public television station KATV in Boise is received in the Twin Falls and Jerome areas on Channel 13.

U.S. defense industry losing vital strength

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. defense industry is in a serious decline and would find it "almost impossible" to expand weapons production quickly in the event of a war, a House Armed Services Committee report warned Sunday.

The 52-page report charges the Defense Department has failed to plan adequately for defense industry preparedness and says government procurement practices discourage high productivity and new capital investment by private defense companies.

"In the event of a war, the U.S. defense industry would find it almost impossible to expand its weapons production suddenly and dramatically in the numbers necessary to sustain a prolonged conflict," said chairman Melvin Price, D-Ill.

"The panel's findings reveal that the U.S. defense industrial base lacks the capacity, manpower, skills, and critical materials required to swing into crisis production."

The report is the result of an investigation conducted by a special 10-member panel headed by Rep.

Richard Ichord, D-Mo., who retired from Congress this year.

"A shocking picture" emerged from the hearings, Ichord said.

The nation's industrial base is "crippled" by declining productivity growth, aging facilities and machinery, shortages in critical materials, increasing lead times, skilled labor shortages, inflexible government contracting procedures, inadequate defense budgets and burdensome government regulations and paperwork, he said.

Testimony at committee hearings indicated lower-tier subcontractors in the defense industry are generally hit harder by instabilities in defense programs, have greater capital formation problems and suffer more from the burdensome paperwork associated with doing business with the government than the larger companies.

Ichord also charged the military is not buying "the required ammunition, equipment and weapon systems to fight even a short war."

Ichord's panel recommended changes in government contracting procedures as an immediate, short-term solution.

Sunbelt Power

GOP sees southward voter movement as chance to gain seats in Congress

By TOM HILLSTROM
United Press International

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — So many New Yorkers have moved to Florida that former Big Apple Mayor Abraham Beame once called Miami his city's "sixth borough."

Now, the transplanted Yankees have brought their political clout with them. New York State lost five congressional seats, according to 1980 census figures, and Florida gained four of them.

"Sunbelt Power" is how one Florida elected official described the shift in congressional strength brought about chiefly by population migration.

Census figures released last week showed 10 states, nearly all of them large industrial states in the Northeast and Midwest, will lose at least one congressional seat upon reapportionment. Eleven states, all either south of the Mason-Dixon Line or west of the Mississippi, will gain in congressional representation.

New York, whose population shrank by 4 percent, was the biggest loser in the congressional sweepstakes; Florida, with a 43 percent jump in population, was the biggest gainer.

The census results still could be altered as a result of court challenges that industrial areas were undercounted, but the shift in power is not likely to change significantly and could have a substantial impact on national political trends throughout the 1980s.

States gaining seats are traditionally conservative while most of the losing states have formed the power base for the liberal wings of both major parties.

Since elderly voters make up a large segment of the migrants to the Sunbelt, they will see their political power improved once congressional districts are redrawn.

Another potential winner is the Republican Party, whose Sunbelt leaders see the new seats as an excellent opportunity for gains in Congress, mainly because GOP candidates won't have to buck the entrenched power of veteran Democratic incumbents in the newly drawn districts.

"I think it's a fantastic opportunity for the Republican Party," said Florida Republican State Chairman Henry Sawyer, adding he believes the GOP will have a shot at winning all four of the Sunshine State's new seats.

Republicans occupy four of Florida's current 15 seats and the party has made substantial inroads in the state Legislature in recent years.

"The most impressive population gains are in those areas where the Republicans have a chance to win," said Curt Kiser, Florida House minority leader.

Whichever party grabs them, the additional seats will be more than a numerical victory for the states receiving them.

In Florida, elected leaders expect their larger congressional delegation to translate into more federal attention in the areas of interstate highway money, programs for the elderly, public works projects and help in handling the influx of refugees.

"This is additional recognition of the national importance of Florida," Gov. Bob Graham boasted.

Australian women expecting to bear 'test tube' twins

LONDON (UPI) — Two Australian women are expecting the first "test tube" twins conceived outside the womb through a new fertility technique, NewScientist magazine says.

Dr. Carl Wood of Melbourne's Monash University said his team of fertility experts used the new laboratory techniques to conceive nine embryos, including the two sets of twins, and implant them in the wombs of seven women.

Wood, whose work led to the birth of Australia's first "test tube" baby last year, said all the fetuses appear to be developing normally, the British publication reported in its last edition for 1980.

Wood, chairman of the university's Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, said in the article the two pairs of twin "test tube" fetuses — one pair then 14 weeks old, the other 10 weeks old — are non-identical.

Wood said with the agreement of mothers his team now likes to implant two fertilized eggs in the womb to enhance chances of pregnancy.

The twin fetuses were the first in the world ever conceived outside the womb, Wood said.

He said in carrying out the outside-the-womb fertilizations his team relied on two new developments — the use of fertility drugs to induce ovulation and improved methods to transfer the fertilized egg back into the mother's womb.

Dr. Patrick Steptoe and Dr. Robert Edwards of Britain relied on natural ovulation to achieve the conception of the world's first "test tube" baby, Louise Brown. She was born July 25, 1978.

Wood and his colleague, Alan Trounson of Melbourne's Queen Victoria Medical Center, said induction of ovulation means hospitals with limited facilities can arrange fertilization in advance and offer "routine" fertilizations.

Wood said the improved methods of transplanting the fertilized egg in the womb increased the rate of success in achieving pregnancies.

Wood said he treated 160 women in 1980. None of the 60 women he treated before he used the new methods became pregnant. After he made changes in the procedure, 13 Australian women became pregnant, but several aborted, he said.

Four babies conceived outside the womb are known to have been born to date.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The ratings awarded to senators by the liberal Americans for Democratic Action rose in 1980 because moderates were forced to vote with liberals to stop "harmful legislation," the group said Sunday.

Despite the shift, the ADA said conservatives killed welfare reform, aid to victims of domestic violence, youth unemployment legislation and a fair housing enforcement bill that supporters called the most important civil rights legislation of the decade.

The overall average for 1980 was 46 percent, compared to 38 percent in 1979. But ADA National Director Leon Shull said, "These figures do not indicate that the Senate has grown more liberal over the past year.

"Instead, they show that conservatives began to take the initiative in the Senate, and that moderates were forced to side with the liberals to prevent harmful legislation from passing," he said.

Indications are the next round of ADA ratings will be lower, since Republicans took control of the Senate, with conservative candidates knocking off a group of veteran liberals.

"In the future we may not have the necessary votes to fight off the right-wing legislative onslaught," Shull said.

Eight senators — all Democrats — scored more than 80 percent in the ADA ratings, which were based on votes on 18 topics.

The highest rating went to Michigan Sen. Carl Levin, who got 94 percent. The others were: Sens. Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin, 89, who was defeated by a conservative in November; Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts, 89; Alan Cranston of California, 83; Patrick Leahy of Vermont, 83; Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, 83; Donald Riegle of Michigan, 83, and Paul Sarbanes of Maryland, 83.

Three senators — all Republicans — scored below 10 percent: Barry Goldwater of Arizona got a zero rating, and Gordon Humphrey of New Hampshire and John Tower of Texas each got a 6 rating for voting the ADA position one time.

Three Republicans had scores of 72 percent: John Chafee of Rhode Island, Charles Mathias of Maryland and Lowell Welcker of Connecticut.

Eighteen Democrats had scores of 72 or above.

The ADA has been rating senators' legislative records since 1947. Its marking system counts absences as votes against the ADA position, and thus some prominent liberals such as Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who won the presidential campaign trail much of the year, did not get high ratings.

Here's how ADA rated senators on votes cast in 1980

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Here is the 1980 Senate voting record released by the Americans for Democratic Action. The numbers represent the percentage of times the senators voted in accordance with the ADA position on 18 issues. Failure to vote was considered a vote against the group's position.

Effort made to defuse Haig furor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's chief spokesman and a Republican senator both sought Sunday to defuse a dispute over congressional access to information about Secretary of State-designate Alexander Haig.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will begin hearings Friday on Haig's selection for the top diplomatic post by President-elect Ronald Reagan, and Democrats on the panel have requested White House materials to further the probe.

Press secretary Jody Powell said Sunday the administration will cooperate in providing appropriate information, but said the request presents "a complicated legal matter."

"It's premature to raise the specter of a constitutional clash over this matter," he said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Powell noted the request came from the minority side of the committee — the Democrats — and generally "the government responds to requests by the full committee."

Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., a member of the panel interviewed on ABC's "Issues and Answers," expressed no real concern about the initial White House refusal to provide the information on Haig.

Congress certainly has a right to the material, Mathias said, but added he believes the White House was simply awaiting a "formal request from the committee."

The dispute was touched off when Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., asked the White House for "all documents, records and other information that may be relevant to the committee's inquiry into General Haig's nomination."

Hatch fears Taiwan aid policy clash

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said Sunday any move by the Carter administration to phase out the program of providing defensive weapons to Taiwan could pose a "serious problem" for the incoming Reagan government.

On ABC's "Issues and Answers," Hatch was asked about reports that President Carter has given "private assurances" to Peking that the defensive weapons program provided for in the Taiwan Relations Act would be phased out. Hatch replied:

"There are indications the program would be phased out... If the outgoing administration has indicated to the mainland Chinese that it will phase out the program of providing the defensive weapons Taiwan must have for its national defense, then that may be one of the first real problems (for Reagan) in foreign policy."

Hatch said the law provides U.S. assistance in resisting any embargo of Taiwan, and authorizes the provision of defensive weapons to the island republic.

Asked if the Chinese leaders would not be aware that a new president would have to approve any such change of policy, Hatch said, "I would hope so."

Hatch said the issue now is "little more than rumor," but it could present a dilemma because of the need to maintain good relations with a strong mainland China.

Carter teaches class last time

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, teaching his Sunday School class at the First Baptist Church for the last time, said Sunday greatness lies not in being president or a behind-the-scenes manipulator — but in serving others.

"The grasping-for-things-that makes us look great in the eyes of other people is really a fruitless exercise," Carter said.

Attending Sunday School and worship were the only public events on Carter's schedule for the day. He brushed off reporters' questions about events in Iran.

You can learn darndest things from darndest things

© The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The 19th century mansion that looks down with altogether appropriate disdain on the boring 20th century buildings that are its neighbors around Dupont Circle, once was the home of "Blaine, Blaine-James G. Blaine, the continental liar from the state of Maine."

Today, within its sensibly thick, insulating walls, and beneath its 18-foot ceilings, Dr. Walter Patterson does all the occasionally inconvenient, but marvelously corrective, things that ophthalmologists do. Think of all the intimidating authority that can possibly be implied by the title "Doctor" and you begin to get an inkling of Dr. Patterson's capacity to command mere mortals like me.

That is why I "allowed" him (you might as well speak of "allowing" Zeus to work his will) to apply an eye-patch that virtually blinded me on the eve of the Georgia-Notre Dame football game. It is treatment for corneal erosion, which sounds serious but is no match for Dr. Patterson.

So here I sit in a darkened room, dictating this to a house guest, my father who, as is his wont, is being difficult. "Okay, Sonny," he says, "the Latin root of the word 'doctor' is 'docere.' What does that mean?"

Trust my father to make a sore eye an occasion for an oral examination.

I say, "How the devil should I know. It has been a long time since high school Latin and even if I could see, I could not look it up because I lost my Oxford English Dictionary in an election bet with a Reagan aide who said that Carter would carry less than eight states."

"Docere," my father says, unswervingly adhering to the subject (he is a doctor — not a real one, but of philosophy), means "to teach."

An few evenings spent behind Dr. Patterson's eye-patch is a learning experience. My idea of heaven is endless learning, and while this way is not heavenly, it does show you that you can learn the darndest things from the darndest things. For example, have you ever tried to listen to, rather than see, the television show "The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo," that "delightfully wacky, fun-filled program for children of all ages?" The episode I listened to featured women mud-wrestling. I don't know, and shrink from imagining, how it was to watch, but the sounds I heard confirm this axiom: Television is worse than it looks.

The second thing I learned from a night without sight, I learned from radio. I learned that the nation is wall-to-wall, standing-room-only, packed to the rafters, with sports nuts. Switch on the old family Philco, or Atwater Kent, and you will hear something like Washington's "Sports Talk," with Ken Kesler's no-nonsense drive questions like this: "Hi, Ken, this is Lou in Rockville. Everybody knows that Luigi Nitcheke batted .232 for Elmiria in 1956. But my Uncle Ralph says that Luigi's roommate was left-handed. I disagree. How about it?"

If all the American brain cells currently devoted to sports trivia were unleashed on the problem of discovering synthetic fuels, we would be independent of OPEC by next Tuesday. I expect that by next Tuesday my eye will be restored to its normal functions, principally glaring at my sons when they drink grape juice in the living room and gazing fondly at my daughter when she says clever things like "Coo." And I shall be able to write more feebly, about "our" as "the International Year of Disabled Persons" (in that regard, don't miss the movie "Inside Moves").

Meanwhile, I am feeling much as I understand Job to have felt, stricken in years and sore afflicted.

I know afflictions are sent to test us and make us more spiritual. But being afflicted in this way, at this time, on the eve of the Georgia-Notre Dame game seemed calculated to make me more spiritual than I really needed to be. When Job was suffering, he petitioned God for an interview. At length God appeared in the form of a whirlwind and Job addressed his question: "Why?"

God's answer, if such it can be called, was to ask Job if he could create anything as marvelous as a hippopotamus, a crocodile, or a lion who "saith among the trumpets, 'ha, ha.'"

Job may not have found God's reponse an altogether satisfactory explanation. But I know I have never created anything as marvelous as a horse like that, so perhaps I had a sore eye coming.

Important message from the governor

'An important message from the governor'

The 1981 Legislature's biggest single issue will be the state budget.

That is why the Times-News urges citizens to tune in Gov. John Evans's budget address, which will be broadcast on television this evening.

Although the Republicans, who control the Legislature, are bound to change the budget recommendations of a Democratic governor, the chief executive's speech is the opening chapter of a continuing story.

There are many possible endings to the story of the budget this year.

One ending could be a tax increase, something almost nobody wants. Other endings could be the elimination of a four-year college, of state supported kindergarten, of many smaller programs that many Idahoans rely on.

The reason the budget is so critical this year is that funding is critical.

Already, state spending has been cut back almost 4 percent from what the 1980 Legislature appropriated. A deeper recession than foreseen has reduced sales tax and income tax collections.

Emergencies, such as the state prison riot and volcanic ash fallout, must be paid for in spite of the recession.

For the next budget year, millions of dollars will have to be cut from what is needed to maintain programs at their present level of service.

The governor has trimmed the pay increases he will recommend for the state's 13,000 employees and 17,000 public school teachers. The Legislature will have the final say.

The decisions made in Boise in the coming months will have their ultimate impact on the citizens of every town.

It is important for Idahoans to pay close attention to the dollars-and-cents struggles, which will be previewed tonight by the governor.

McCarthy's 10 Commandments

By EUGENE J. MCCARTHY
Special to The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — New members of Congress usually get a lot of official advice upon arriving in the capital — most of it of little use in the real world of lawmaking. Those who are truly serious about accomplishing something might consider the following 10 commandments, which generally advise the opposite of what the newcomers will be told:

I. Vote against anything introduced with a "re" in it, especially "reform" reorganizations and "redecorations." This usually means going back to something that failed once and is likely to do so again.

II. Do not have a perfect attendance record. Any attendance record above 90 percent is evidence that you have been wasting time answering roll calls and quorum calls.

III. Do not master the rules of procedure. The Senate rules are simple enough to be learned, but they are seldom honored in practice. The House rules are usually applied, but they are too complicated to be mastered. Use the parliamentary.

IV. Honor seniority. You may have it before you want it. Having a member with seniority assume a position of power makes no reasonable sense, but as Gilbert Chesterton said of the practice of having the oldest son of a king succeed his father on the throne, "It saves a lot of trouble."

V. Never trust a staff member who regularly gets to the office before you do, and who stays after you leave.

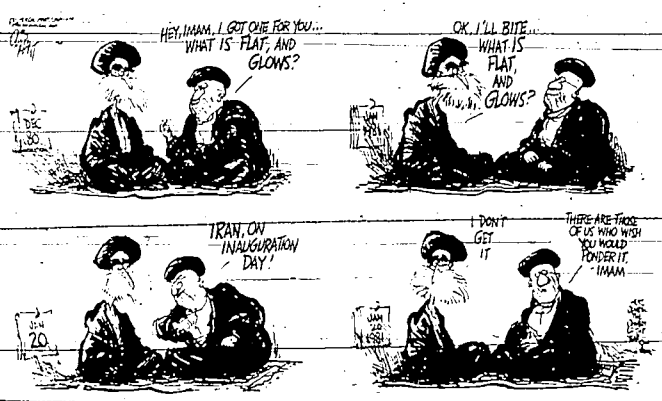

VI. In evaluating your colleagues, remember that politics is much like coaching professional football. Those who are most successful are smart enough to understand the game, but not smart enough to lose interest.

VII. Never be the only one, or one of a few, who are right on an issue (like a war) that will not go away. It is difficult to say to fellow members of Congress, "I am sorry I was right. Please forgive me." They won't.

VIII. Do not respond to an appeal to act in the name of "party loyalty."

IX. Remember that the worst accidents occur in the middle of the road.

X. As Ed Leahy, noted reporter for the Chicago Daily News, said to me soon after I came to Congress 30 years ago: "Never trust the press."

Not too eager for '81

body — somebodies — to be in charge. I don't know quite how to describe the symptoms. But they are legion and all around us.

In November we voted against weakness. We opted for the man who promised to take charge. By December his inner circle talked openly about the character they wanted in those hired for this new government. They were looking, they said, for the S.O.B. factor.

For 1981, yes, tough guys are in again; softness is out. Certainty is in; doubt is out. True or False Questions are in; essays are out. For better and for worse, the atmosphere is changing; the reins are being tightened.

In the past year, I saw three books sticking up for the power of parents. Some of the same people who supported children's rights in the 1970s are supporting parents' rights in the 1980s. Americans want to be in charge again, at least of their children.

The same urge for "order" and authority has struck at women's rights. The S.O.B. factor, if you will, can be seen in the blatant new macho spirit. At home, too, we are told by the pro-family movement, "Somebody" has to be in charge. That somebody is the husband, father, man.

The season is not ripe for negotiation, compromise and sharing. This is the year for authority, control and power.

In the trend world, it's the time of cowboys. In television, we cheer for J.R. In foreign policy, it is a moral majority for missiles. In the schools, it is cut-rate regulation. In crime, it is civilian patrols and juvenile sentences.

Even theologians who deal with the mysteries of eternity, the complexity of the world, and the ethical dilemmas of human life are now told to go by the Book.

The man of this new year is the one in the surreal Betamax ad. He sits in a cool armchair holding his remote-control tuner aloft under the motto: "Experience the freedom of total control."

It's no surprise that hard times breed hard lines. Under pressure we all retreat. We replace growing with coping. We react to the troubles outside by defending our own turf with dozens of rules and tens of commandments.

If we cannot create order in the world, we try to create its image at home. If we are afraid of the future, we assume some safety in tradition. Afraid of uncertainty, we give and take orders.

But there is a desperate age to this transitional winter. This 1981 comes in, middle-aged and worried, with its spine already stiffened and its posture defensive.

Its mind is fixed on survival. Its method is control. This is not the bubbly stuff of a happy new year.

Liberals struggle for survival, conservatives for power

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
UPI Political Writer

WASHINGTON — As Republicans struggle to run the country in 1981, the Democrats will be struggling to make a comeback, liberals will be struggling for survival and the New Right will be struggling for power.

January will bring the greatest shift in political power the nation's capital has seen in nearly three decades. Not since Dwight Eisenhower took power with a Republican Congress behind him in 1952 has the GOP been so powerful and the Democrats so weak.

Democrats will still control the new House of Representatives, but only in terms of numbers. While they have a 251-192 edge, there are at least 27 conservative Democrats who can and will jump the line on any given issue and vote with the Republicans to change the outcome.

Even though they control the White House and the Senate, and have the potential to win enough Democratic votes in the House to swing major issues their way, the Republicans will have a rough time in 1980 for at least three reasons:

• The Democrats are not going to roll over and play dead. It is just sound political sense that they will waste no time trying to shift the blame for the state of the economy to the GOP. If there is not a quick and dramatic improvement — and there is no indication such an improvement is in sight.

• Just as was the case four years ago when Jimmy Carter came to town, there will be a lot of outsiders coming to Washington to take over the government. It will take them time to learn the ropes and they will make some mistakes along the way.

• The Republicans in control will face criticism from the New Right that is likely to be as vocal as any they get from the Democrats. Already there are howls from the right that there are no true conservatives in the Reagan Cabinet.

The New Right believes it has earned a bigger role in the Reagan administration since they have stood by the California conservative over the years, fighting off attempts by Nelson Rockefeller and other moderates to take over the GOP.

One of the first tasks faced by both major political parties in the new year will be electing new national chairmen — and it could provoke fights in both camps.

As president, Reagan will name his own national chairman, but he will be under pressure to name a strong conservative to run the party. Frequently mentioned is former Utah state chairman Richard Richards. The right will argue — and may win — that if Reagan feels he needs to pursue a less conservative line in running the government, he owes it to them to pursue a more ideologically pure line in running the party.

Democrats, who fought bitterly even when they held power, will fight more than ever over who will have the right to try to lead them out of the 1980 election disasters.

Not only have Democrats lost at the polls, but the party is broke as well. No official counting has been done, but most likely they still have the same debts, dating back to Robert Kennedy's and Hubert Humphrey's 1968 presidential races; they had when Carter took office four years ago.

One thing Democrats do agree on is that the new chairman should be someone who will not take sides in the 1984 presidential contest when Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Vice President Walter Mondale and Gov. Edmund Brown of California are now the main contenders.

The two leading contenders at this point for Democratic national chairman are Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, one of the victims of the 1980 election, and Charles Mann of California, the party's finance chairman and its most successful fundraiser in recent years.

Some old political faces may be leading some new political charges in the nation in 1981.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., the party's 1972 presidential candidate and one of the most prominent liberal victims of the New Right attack in the 1980 election is fighting back. Nothing how good the night was at raising money to defeat liberals, he wants to lead a drive on the left to battle conservatives.

Rep. John Anderson, with a war-chest of at least $1 million lent from his 1980 independent presidential campaign, is thinking of starting a third party to serve as a rallying point for moderate Republicans and unhappy Democrats.

The new year will not provide the voters much of an opportunity at the polls to express their feelings about the new Republican administration. The only major races in 1981 are for governor in New Jersey and Virginia.

In New Jersey the Republicans have a chance to pick up a state house since Democratic Gov. Brendan Byrne cannot seek another term. There is a long list of candidates lining up on both sides and no clear favorites have yet emerged.

In Virginia the Democrats were counting on victory. Republican Gov. John Dalton cannot run again and the Democrats were counting on Lt. Gov. Charles Robb, Lynn Ann Johnson's son-in-law to carry their banner. But now Democrats, already outnumbered in registration, are feuding, while Republicans may unite behind Attorney General Marshall Coleman.

What's what

French dressing helped dispose of tree leaves

What's the most outrageous thing you'd be willing to do for a year's salary of $10,000? The answer was given by citizens in Illinois in the form of a contest. The winner was a fellow who volunteered to eat a tree. And he did so. An 11-foot sack of birch chips untreated in any way. Except for the leaves. He put french dressing on them.

Q. "What's the average sentence for a first offender, whatever the crime?"

A. If that first offender is sentenced at all, said sentence averages 36 months. But the actual time served only averages 19 months.

Birds, too, get tuberculosis.

Q. "Of all the new babies, what proportion are born to unwed mothers?"

A. About seven out of every 100.

SCORCHED BUTTER

In making toffee, the Scots scorched butter and added sugar, and that scorching came to be known as scotching. It's where we got the word butterscotch, roundabout. Roundabout? It'll do.

Q. "Where do you take the pulse on a dog?"

A. Inside the leg on the femoral artery. Large dogs have a pulse rate of 70 to 80 per minute, smaller dogs up to 120 per minute.

Q. "Has it been customary among any of the Africans to eat elephant meat?"

A. Among the Watveta tribes of East Africa, it has been. Understood it's pretty tough. The English colonists down that way developed a wayback: "You cook it from Monday morning to Friday night and chew it from Friday night to Monday morning."

MARSHMALLOWS

Q. Why are marshmallows called that?

A. Because the first of them were made from roots of mallows herbs that grew near marshes in France. In 1884, it was, incidentally, mostly you see that word misspelled "marshmallows," do you not?

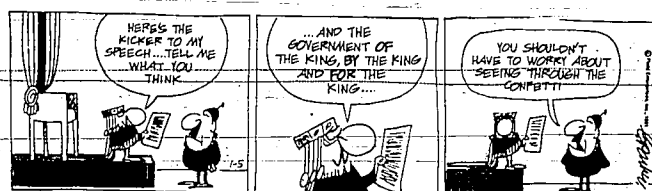

Q. "How often do you find a marriage in which the wife is more than 10 years older than the husband?"

A. About one marriage in every 100 around here.

Mini-Cassia area program aims to thin dropout ranks

By KARY MILLER

Times-News writer

RUPERT — High school dropouts in the Mini-Cassia area will soon have a new program centered around their special needs.

The Mini-Cassia Youth Diversion Committee has developed a program directed at "basic skills, life skills and employability skills."

The new program will have a trial run next summer according to Don Cameron, a committee member and Minico High School principal. He said the program will officially begin in the fall of 1981.

The committee plans to take about 40 dropouts or potential dropouts from the two areas who wish to salvage their high school education.

According to an outline the committee wrote, the "basic skills" they feel these students need are mathematics, language arts and study skills. The "life skills" studied will include values clarification, human relations, consumerism and effective living.

Employability skills "will include job preparedness, career education and exploration, on the job training, work study, apprenticeship and higher education including vocational-technical school."

Cameron said the committee feels with these skills the students can become "positive working members of our society" and that "these students can help reduce the unemployment rate and decrease the need for social service benefits in our area."

Committee members have outlined the "behavior, characteristics of their target group which adversely affects educational performance" and feel these problems can be reduced in the proposed program.

The classroom work will be in a building removed from the high schools which the committee feels are the sources of many of the problems.

The program calls for use of two classrooms in the Lincoln School in Rupert which is now unused except for a private kindergarten. Cameron said the funding "has not been finalized at this time." He said he feels there will be no problems as there are many government sources for funding this type of program.

Cameron said, "The school board is favorable toward this program, a fact that will aid any funding proposals."

The steering committee for this program includes John Billeze, vice principal at Burley High School; Lynn Call, senior social worker with the Department of Health and Welfare; Kevin Curmy, vocational special needs consultant with the Southeast Idaho Migrant Resource Council; Neal Croft, director of special education, Minidoka County Schools; John Eberline, editor of the South Idaho Press, and Cameron.

Ski conditions improved Storm leaves roads slippery

TWIN FALLS — A light snow Saturday night brightened the outlook for skiers but sent numerous motorists skidding from Magic Valley highways and streets.

The Twin Falls County sheriff's office reported numerous calls for assistance Sunday morning as vehicles skidded into borrow pits. County officers investigated many minor accidents due to ice and slush following the snowstorm.

City police in Twin Falls investigated about a dozen accidents Saturday night and Sunday morning, but reported no serious injuries. State police also reported many minor accidents and numerous calls regarding road and weather conditions.

Although only about an inch of snow was reported in Twin Falls, snow-hungry ski resorts received as much as six to eight inches.

Pompeyville, south of Twin Falls, received between four and five inches of snow, according to resort owners.

Mrs. Woody Anderson said skies cleared Sunday and skiers were enjoying the new snow covering in bright sunny weather.

Everyone is smiling. It certainly helps improve the mood as well as sking conditions to get a few inches of new snow," she said.

All lifts and runs were open Sunday at Pompeyville.

Sun Valley reported skiing still good with the large holiday crowds now on their way home and less crowded slopes.

Soldier Mountain reported runs served by snowmakers in good condition Sunday and other runs still fair with a few bare spots.

The Bogus Basin Ski Resort near Boise closed temporarily Sunday because of a lack of snow. Reports from the area did not indicate enough new snow to help conditions.

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls residents held police Saturday they have been victimized by burglars.

Terry Boss, 1544 Poplar St., said sometime between late November and Friday someone took a pair of diamond earrings from his wife's jewelry box. He said they were valued at $250. Officers said there had apparently been no break-in at the Boss home.

Glenn Brown of 170 Jackson St. reported someone broke into a camper shell in the driveway of his home sometime between New Year's Eve and Friday. He said about $470 worth of items including fishing equipment were taken.

Dear Abby

Facelifts leave noses out of joint

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: What does a person do when she comes face to face for the first time with a friend (or acquaintance) who has had cosmetic surgery — like a nose job or a face-lift?

I recently ran into a woman who had just had a face-lift, and with absolute sincerity, I said, "Your recent surgery has improved your appearance 100 percent!"

She gave me an icy stare and walked away without even saying thank you. I felt like 2 cents.

Another time, I pretended I didn't notice that a friend had recently had a nose job. It was obvious, but I said nothing.

Finally, she said, "Don't you notice anything different about me?" I felt foolish. Of course I'd noticed, but after having learned my lesson with the face-lift lady, I didn't want to mention it.

So tell me, Dear Abby, what is a person supposed to do?

—STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: Since Vanity prompts most people to have cosmetic surgery, to ignore it would be unkind. But to comment too enthusiastically may give the impression that her (or his) former appearance was dreadful.

If the improvement is conspicuous, say, "You look great!" They'll get the message without having to decode it.

DEAR ABBY: While our 29-year-old daughter is no raving beauty, she is better looking than most of the girls whose pictures you see in bridal veils in Sunday papers. She is very intelligent and has lots of dates, and I know she has turned down several good marriage proposals.

When I ask her what she is waiting for, she says, "Don't rush me, Mom."

Is there any way I can get her to hurry up and think seriously of marrying and settling down? I am 55 years old and would like to see a few grandchildren before I leave this earth.

—IMPATIENT IN ILLINOIS

DEAR IMPATIENT: Many moms who have rushed their daughters into children than they expected to — they're RAISING them because the marriage didn't work out. If you're eager to see things hatch, raise chickens.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letters from readers who insisted that dogs could "heal" wounds (theirs and others) by licking. As a veterinarian I can tell you that dogs and cats are frequently their own worst enemies when they lick their wounds.

The skin serves as one of the most important components of the immune system by providing a physical barrier to disease-causing organisms. When the skin is broken and the animal licks the open wound, it literally seeds the wound with potentially dangerous organisms from the animal's mouth. Thus, the healing is contaminated.

It has long been assumed that wounds on animals have healed because of the licking, but our profession in general feels that wounds heal IN SPITE of the licking.

—D.V.M. IN MARSHALL, MICH.

DEAR D.V.M.: Thanks for a professional opinion — straight from the doctor's mouth.

White, Pearson combine to ice Cowboy charge

ATLANTA (UPI) — Just when it looked like the ranch house was about to go up in smoke, fireman Drew Pearson came to the Dallas Cowboys' rescue.

With Dallas down by 10 points with less than seven minutes to play, Danny White threw touchdown passes of 14 and 23 yards to Pearson, the second one with only 42 seconds left to play, to pull out a 30-27 victory over the Atlanta Falcons and send the Cowboys into the NFC title game for the eighth time in 11 years. The Cowboys will be in Philadelphia Sunday against their bitter Eastern Division rivals.

"We know Drew will come up with the big play," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said. "We'll throw to him when we wouldn't throw the same pass to anyone else with the same confidence."

Landry has often been accused of not showing emotion during a ball game, but he said he smiled at the end of this one.

"When Drew Pearson caught that pass," Landry said, "you know I smiled."

Pearson, who caught five passes for 90 yards, four of them during the Cowboys' final two TD drives, said he'd rate Sunday's victory "No. 1 in great Dallas comebacks."

"We never lost our composure, never panicked, kept plugging along," he said. "We knew we could move the ball if we gave Danny time to throw. When Danny looked at me and cocked his arm (on winning TD) I moved to the ball and shielded my body between the ball and the defenders."

"We know if we work to get open Danny will find us, but when I caught that pass, it didn't seem real at the time. I didn't really relish it until the ball game was over."

White said his only thought before throwing was "don't throw an interception."

"When I turned it loose I didn't think Drew would get to it—but he did."

The Falcons, ahead by 14 points midway through the third quarter, were disappointed they had let the Cowboys beat them twice in their only two playoff losses in their 15-year history.

"We thought we played well enough to win, but I didn't turn out that well," Atlanta Coach Leeman Bennett said. "You have to give Dallas credit for hanging in there and coming back from two touchdowns behind. Dallas' playoff experience lets them believe they can come back and win."

Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski said the Falcons "are a young team with a lot of future."

"We'll be back. This was one of those games you felt slipping away. We tried to stop it and we couldn't."

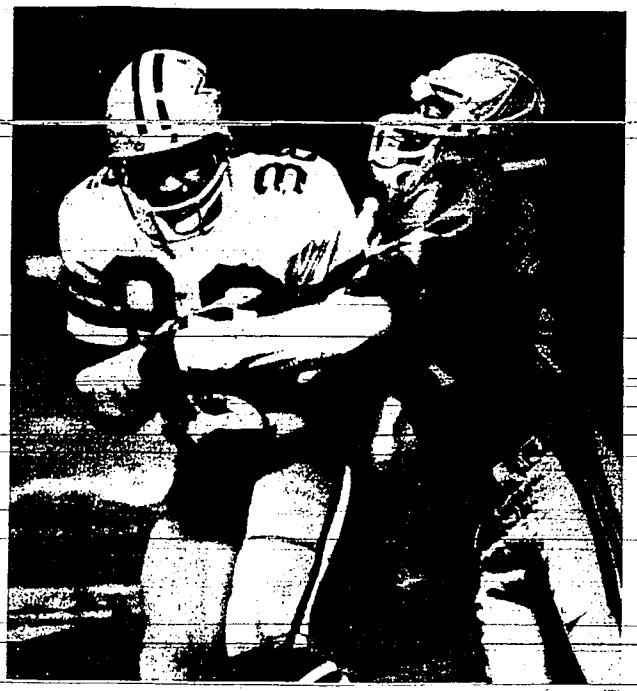

The Cowboys, who made the playoffs as a wild card entry, had the same 12-4 record as the Eagles in the regular season, but were edged for the East title on the basis of best net points in division games.

The Falcons, who also lost to Dallas two years ago in their first NFC semifinal game, made one last effort to pull out the game on Bartkowski's passing. But the All-Pro quarterback, who rattled the Cowboys for more than 300 yards and two touchdowns, was sacked for nine yards and completed only one of the next three passes before turning the ball over to Dallas.

Bartkowski teamed with wide receiver Alfred Jenkins on a 68-yard touchdown bomb with 4:50 left in the first quarter, set up a 1-yard TD run by Lynn Cain late in the first half with a 50-yard pass to Jenkins and threw a 12-yard TD pass to running back William Andrews with 7:10 left in the third period.

White completed nine passes for 140 yards and two TDs in the final quarter, leading Dallas on drives of 85, 62 and 70 yards for the Cowboys' final three touchdowns.

Atlanta, which also had a 12-4 regular-season record, entered the game as a three-point favorite.

Bennett happy with Falcons

ATLANTA (UPI) — Atlanta Coach Leeman Bennett said the Falcons played well enough to win Sunday — "but it didn't quite turn out that way."

The Falcons raced to a 10-0 lead in the first quarter, were ahead 24-10 midway through the third period and held a 27-17 edge with only 6:37 left before the Dallas Cowboys stormed back for a 30-27 victory.

"I can't do anything now but give Dallas credit for hanging in there and coming back after being two touchdowns down," said Bennett. "Dallas' playoff experience let them believe they could come back and win — and they did. Despite the loss, the experience of playing in the playoffs will help in the years to come."

Bennett said the Falcons went into the game hoping to be able to sack Dallas quarterback Danny White.

But the Falcons, playing with a three-man defensive front, only got to White once all afternoon and Bennett said White's passing to wide receiver Drew Pearson "was what got them back into the game."

"I did not feel comfortable with a 14-point lead so their coming back was not that surprising," said Bennett. "As the game went along in the second half, you could feel Dallas applying more pressure. When you lose in the playoffs, you feel very empty. Right now I feel more empty than I've ever felt in my life. It's a terrible feeling."

Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski, who completed 18-of-33 passes for 320 yards and two touchdowns, said the Falcons are "still a young team with a lot of future."

Oakland halts 'Kardiac Kids' with 14-12 win

Raiders' Mike Davis and Matt Millen rejoice after 14-12 win

CLEVELAND (UPI) — It was another cardiac finish for the Cleveland Browns — only the patient didn't make it this time.

The "Kardiac Kids," who made the dramatic victory their trademark in winning the AFC Central title, nearly managed to do it again Sunday, but a dramatic interception by Mike Davis in the end zone with 41 seconds to go enabled the Oakland Raiders to hang on for a 14-12 victory in a playoff game played in arctic conditions.

Jim Plunkett, stealing a page from Cleveland's come-from-behind book, set up Mark van Eeghen's tie-breaking one-yard touchdown run with 9:22 left and the Raiders hung on doggedly to set up an AFC title showdown at San Diego Sunday.

The Raiders will face the AFC rival Chargers — the third straight year that teams from the same division have met for the AFC title. The winner will face the NFC champion in the Super Bowl Jan. 25 in New Orleans.

Brian Sipe, the ringleader of Cleveland's "Kardiac Kids," took the Browns to Oakland's 14 with 56 seconds to go. Mike Pruitt blasted into the line for one yard and the Browns apparently were setting up for a game-winning field goal attempt. But it was not to be.

Sipe threw to tight end Ozzie Newsome in the left corner of the end zone and Davis, reacting quickly, stepped in front of Newsome and picked off Oakland's third interception of the game.

"I'm surprised he threw it," Davis said. "They ran the ball on the play before and I figured they were going for the winning field goal. They were right in the middle of the field. I guess they wanted to take no chances and go for it."

"I think Sipe thought Newsome was open but I was on him. As soon as he let go of the ball, I knew I could pick it off. I knew all I had to do was catch it and we had it. I just worried about catching the ball. It was so cold out there — God, I've never played in weather like that and I just wanted to hold on to the ball."

The temperature at the 10:30 a.m. kickoff was only one degree and it never went over three degrees during the game. It was the coldest playoff game since the famed Dallas-Green Bay game in 1956, which began at 13 degrees below zero.

Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano, whose strategy backfired, defended the call.

"At that point, we had decided to throw the ball, got them to use their last time out, and kick the field goal if we hadn't made it," Rutigliano said. "Don't forget, it was no gut cinch for a field goal with those field conditions. It was bad all day. We weren't really sure that it was a dead on shot."

"We depended on Brian's arm all year to takes us here and we went with it again. It just happens. Mike Davis made a great play. We didn't want to sit on the ball and the field goal wasn't just a cinch — we weren't getting the good snaps and the good holds with the field in that condition."

"If we could have scored some touchdowns or field goals earlier in the game when we had the opportunities, it would have come down to the last play. But we didn't do it and that's it."

Both offenses had trouble operating with any real consistency over the rock-hard surface at Municipal Stadium.

With Cleveland ahead 12-7 in third period field goals of 30 and 29 yards by Don Cockroft, Plunkett marched the Raiders 80 yards in 12 plays for the go-ahead score.

He hit van Eeghen with a 13-yard shovel pass on a 3rd-and-four from Oakland's 26 and threw 27 yards to Raymond Chester to the Browns' 15 to highlight the drive.

A six-yard pass to Kenny King after a Browns' offside penalty wiped out a third down sack, put the ball on the three and three-plays later, van Eeghen plowed across the goal line to put Oakland ahead to stay.

PGA head worried about game as 1981 Tour tees off

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — The 1981 PGA Tour, with 42 events offering more than $13 million in purses, starts this week with the $300,000 Tucson Open and while Commissioner Deane Beman expects the Tour to be another record setter, he's worried about the general state of the game.

"Our product is great," said Beman in an interview with UPI. "I'm satisfied with the way our Tour is going and with our sponsors. Golf today is absolutely outstanding. It would seem we have a never ending trough of gold and glitter, but from where I stand there will be great challenges to our game in the 80s."

"The Tour is successful, but the game itself is in slow growth or negative growth. We've got to get it back to the way it was in the 60s. Realistically, we are living on past performances. The leadership in golf has to recognize these needs. It has to look at the long range problems of golf."

"Our biggest challenge today is developing golf into a spectator sport watched by people who don't play the game. To this point, golf has been unable to do that, and that's why golf has a narrow base (of fan interest). We have to take a pragmatic and realistic view of our game."

Beman said the PGA has made a modest pilot project I can see the interest is there, so we in golf have to go out and make the game available to all young people. We have to come up with the ideas that will generate interest."

Starting at the Bob Hope Desert

Classic, which follows the Tucson Open on the Western circuit swing, the Tour will be sponsoring youth golf similar to programs initiated by baseball and pro football. Youngsters will be encouraged to take part in the age-group competition which will include three shots — driving, pitching and putting, with the winners advancing eventually to a final competition later in the year.

In last year's rain-delayed Tucson Open, Jim Colbert ended a six-year stretch without a victory. He will be back to defend his title against a solid field, including 1980 No. 2 money-winner Les Trevino, No. 3 Curtis Strange, No. 5 Ben Crenshaw, No. 8 Craig Stadler and No. 9 Mike Reid.

Tom Watson, who won the money title and PGA Player of the Year honors the last four years, will make his 1981 debut at the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, fourth event on this year's schedule. He also will play in the San Diego Open, the Hawaiian Open and the Los Angeles Open on the winter Tour. He won six events last year, including the San Diego and Los Angeles events, plus the British Open. Trevino had his best year in 1980 and prevented Watson from winning the Vardon Trophy for low stroke.

CSI starts road week in Walla Walla today

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News sports writer

TWIN FALLS — It isn't exactly a death march but if College of Southern Idaho survives this week, it might deserve a medal.

It could well be the toughest week in Golden Eagle history — not particularly from a competitive standpoint but definitely from the travel point of view.

Coach Dave Campbell and his crew took a look at the snow deposited over the Magic Valley Saturday night and took off for Walla Walla, Wash. Sunday morning. They go against Walla Walla at 8:30 p.m. (MST) today and travel 50 mile farther north Tuesday for a rematch with the Columbia Basin Hawks in Pasco, Wash.

They hope to get back in time for a practice and change of laundry Wednesday because Thursday they take off in the opposite direction for the Dixie Tournament in St. George, Utah.

CSI will go against either Weber or Utah State Jayvees Friday night and play the host Rebels Saturday.

What it amounts to is that CSI will travel 1,000 miles Wednesday and Thursday between games. The Eagles leave Jan. 10 to travel home on, rest Jan. 11 and then get ready for an invasion by College of Eastern Utah here Jan. 12. The next night they'll be in Pullman, Wash., losing the WSU Jayvees.

CSI takes an 11-1 record into the second half of the season but there are pitfalls enough this week, regardless of the travel enervation.

Columbia Basin may well have been the strongest of the Northwest teams CSI faced in pre-holiday games.

Coach Frank Tevabough and his charges gave the Eagles trouble through most of the first half and although they finally bowed by 17, took the Eagles well into the second half before falling out of contention.

Walla Walla was an easier home opponent for CSI, largely because it didn't have the size of the other teams on the schedule.

CSI Coach Dave Campbell acknowledged his Eagles would face a tough battle at Pasco.

"It was only their second game and their second night on the road. We'll be looking at nearly the same situation up there. It could make a lot of difference. We expect that we'll have to play well to win against Columbia Basin. But they're all tough on the road," he said, including Walla Walla in that statement.

The coach said he was quite satisfied with the condition and promptness his charges showed in returning to the campus after the holidays.

"I think they played some basketball while they were home, at least a few times. Generally I thought they still were in pretty good condition. I've had them come back from the Christmas break in a lot worse," he said.

To help that situation, the coach had a practice at 6 p.m. New Year's Eve and at 8 a.m. New Year's Day.

"We think that type of schedule helps them concentrate more on basketball than the other aspects of the New Year," he said smiling.

Falcons Easterners beat local bowlers

"We'll be back in the future years," said Bartkowski. "But this was one of those games you felt slipping away. We tried to stop it but we couldn't. Dallas just knows how to handle themselves in the final minutes of a game."

Falcon running back Lynn Cain said Atlanta was able to move the ball early because the Dallas defense began the game playing "straight up."

When they couldn't beat us that way, they started stunting on us. They came with even more stunts in the second half and it was effective for them," he said. "I knew going into the locker room at halftime that they were going to change. (Tom) Laundry (Dallas' coach) is just too smart of a person to let something like that keep on going. I think we would have been a lot more successful in the second half if they hadn't changed."

Falcons defensive lineman Jeff Yeates said his team threw some blitzes at the Cowboys late in the game. "But while picked up on them and completed passes. We were executing well early in the game but Dallas didn't crack. In the second half, they simply out-executed us. I guess that's experience for you, huh."

Bartkowski said he felt sorry "for the older guys who may not get another playoff opportunity again. As for the young ones, they still have a lot of football ahead of them. We're down over this loss but this team shouldn't hold its head down because we've had our best season and we've even got better ones for us for the upcoming seasons."

Wide receiver Alfred Jenkins, who caught four passes for 155 yards, including a 60-yarder for Atlanta's first touchdown, said "Dallas is the kind of team that will not lay down when behind 14 points. We felt we needed to make either a big defensive or offensive play in the fourth quarter to protect our lead and we didn't do it. They just outplayed us in the second half."

The Falcons, the NFC West Champion, jumped out in front 10-0 in the first period on Tim Mazzetti's first field goal and Bartkowski's long TD pass to Jenkins. The Cowboys retaliated with a 38-yard field goal by Rafael Septien with 65 seconds left in the first quarter and then, after recovering Bartkowski's fumble at the Atlanta 44, tied the game with 8:51 gone in the second period on a five-yard touchdown pass to Billy Joe DuPree from White.

White's three touchdown passes Sunday gives him 10 in the past three games. He threw four against the Eagles and three last week against the Rams.

TWIN FALLS — Three Twin Falls bowlers tried their best to turn the Idaho-Scratch-Bowlers Association tournament into a local event over the weekend before two eastern Idaho bowlers spoiled their fun.

Craig Goodwin of Idaho Falls won the championship rolloff and $545 to boot by defeating Dave John of Pocatello in the final game 2-1 to 229. John earned $344.90 for the tourney.

It was Goodwin who ended Magic Valley's hopes in the tourney as he turned back Rick Smyth, manager of Magic Bowl, in the third game of the rolloff. Smyth had defeated Dick Guymon of Boise and Twin Falls' Jerry Miller.

After Sunday's fifth and final group of bowlers were done with qualifying, five bowlers had topped the 1,800-pin mark for their eight qualification games — a healthy 25 average. The five were John at 1838, Goodwin at 1818, Guymon at 1814, Miller at 1804 and Smyth at 1802. ISBA officials said having all five bowlers over 1800 is very rare — during their monthly tournaments held across the state.

Miller faced Smyth in the all-Twin Falls first match. Smyth started with three strikes to put the pressure on Miller, who had strikes in his two opening frames. Miller failed to convert a 4-6 split in the third frame and Smyth was able to take a lead and hold it.

Miller returned to form in the fifth and sixth with back-to-back strikes, but both bowlers hit for three strikes in the 10th frame and Smyth kept his lead for a 223-214 win.

Smyth then faced Guymon in the next match. Both have been on the professional tour for short time, but neither could consistently find the strikes in their game. Smyth opened with four strikes while Guymon had but one strike in his first four frames. Each had an open frame late in the game and Smyth managed a spare and a strike in the 10th for a 202-178 win.

Smyth advanced to meet Goodwin, but the manager of Magic Bowl could muster just a 190 and Smyth hit two strikes and nine pins in the 10th for a 205.

Goodwin, who recently qualified along with Smyth for next month's U.S. Open in Houston, slipped past John in the finals. John hit three strikes in the 10th, but Goodwin didn't fail to the pressure and gained his five-pin victory to win his first ISBA event.

Rick Smyth raises a fist in triumph after edging Boise's Dick Guymon during Sunday's finals.

average a fourth straight time, shading Tom 68.73 to 69.55.

Watson has won 22 Tour events in the last four years and now has career earnings of $2,202,241. He won a record $330,808 last year. Trevino won three events and $385,814. His career earnings stand at $2,473,992.

Jack Nicklaus, the slightly tarnished Golden Bear, also had a big season in 1980, winning the U.S. Open and PGA Championships and pushing his career earnings to $3,581,213.

Still another "old" star had a comeback of sorts in 1980. That was Arnold Palmer, who won the PGA Seniors title. Arnie will make his 1981 debut at the Hope Classic, as will Nicklaus. Both also will play in the Crosby.

The Tucson Open has an old-new home this year — Randolph Park. The event was played at Tucson National in 15 of the last 16 years, switching to Randolph in 1979 while National was undergoing renovation.

The sponsoring Conquistadores had a year left on their National contract but after being released from it, they quickly moved to Randolph, a municipal course in the middle of town. The 1979 Open at Randolph drew the biggest crowds in the tournament's 35-year history.

For the first time in many years, the Tucson tournament will not be televised. That's because of a conflict with the NFL playoffs. The remaining six events on the winter tour, though, all will be televised.

Except for the winter events plus the Masters, Open and PGA Championships, Tour events have not made much headway in television ratings. That also has Berman worried.

"There has been no appreciable change in the ratings in recent years," said Berman. "Obviously, we'd like the ratings to be higher and maybe they will be once some of these other projects we talked about take hold."

Jabbar's tired of 'hectic' schedule

The 12-year veteran is happy with the present, but he's preparing himself for his future years

By MARCUS PRATER
Times-News sports writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the most dominant force in the history of modern basketball, is getting tired of the "hectic" pace the sport has set.

Although the six-time NBA Most Valuable Player has no date set for his retirement, he let it be known that he is tired of the 82 game schedule and the travel from game to game.

"We just play too many games," the 12-year veteran told the Times-News in an interview prior to last Tuesday's game with the Utah Jazz. "The game is over exposed, but really because of media hype, but because we play too many games. We play 82 of them to get down to 10 teams for the playoffs and that is just too many. I don't know how many we should actually play, the number just needs to be reduced."

"I'm getting tired of traveling so much, but I still enjoy making my living playing basketball," he said hesitantly while getting ready for the Jazz.

However, Jabbar is slowly preparing himself for the time when he does have to hang up his basketball shoes.

The UCLA graduate has made two motion pictures (Airplane! and Game of Death) the past two years.

"I wouldn't mind pursuing this kind of thing after my career is over with. Right now I just kind of use it as a tool to break up the monotony of the basketball season," he said as the rest of the Los Angeles team made fun of his movie career in the locker room. "But actually, I have a career as a lawyer in mind. It isn't something I really wanted to do, but I would like to give law school a try."

Twelve years ago when Abdul-Jabbar broke into the NBA as Lew Alcindor, he was just another kid with a dream of becoming a star in the big leagues. Today he is the most talked about figure on the court.

"It used to be hard for me to believe that people accepted me as the greatest player ever to participate in the game. But I think of myself as a player trying to become the greatest," Jabbar, a former member of the Milwaukee Bucks, said. "That way I never shuff off and I'm always trying to improve my game. I'll never be satisfied with the way I play. I could always improve. That is something John Wooden, his coach at UCLA, always taught his teams. Never to be satisfied."

Since his days with Wooden, Abdul-Jabbar has changed his name from Lew Alcindor because of religious beliefs, became Rookie of the Year, won six

Most Valuable Player honors — more than any player — and he recently became only the fifth player in NBA history to score 25,000 points.

Despite all the honors and changes in his life, Abdul-Jabbar says he couldn't be happier with his present lifestyle.

The Lakers are the defending World Champions and they were pre-season picks to repeat. However, this year's team isn't faling as well as last year's.

Los Angeles is 26-16 and seven games behind the Phoenix Suns in the Pacific Division of the Western Conference. Jabbar, who is averaging 24 points per game, is pulling the majority of the team along with the league's leading assist maker — Norm Nixon.

"We are doing pretty good this year despite our record. We're not doing as well as expected, but we've had the injury to Magic (Johnson) which is crucial," Abdul-Jabbar said.

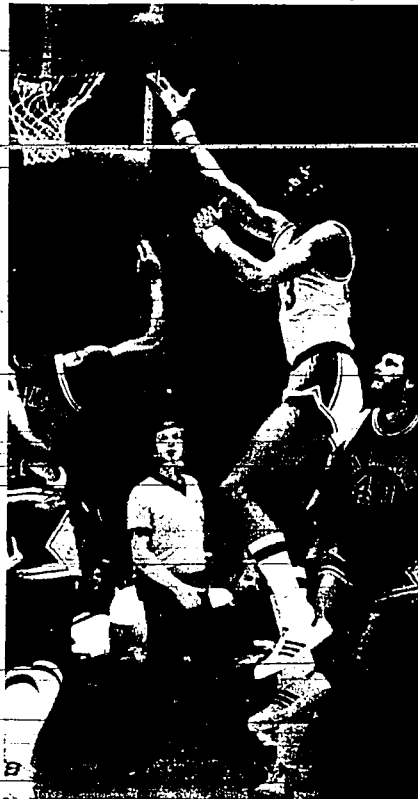

Johnson, the hero of the Laker's championship drive last year, suffered a knee injury which required surgery six weeks ago. He is not expected back until early February.

"I think when he comes back it will help the team a lot. He is our leader on the court and I believe he'll set us back in the right direction," the 7-2 center said. "Magic does a lot for this team on and off the court and we need him during the last two months of the season. However, we're not going to give up and die without him."

"This is a team game and I feel that we are learning to win without Magic's talent. Basketball is a game of little things and there is always something you can learn about the game. When to do certain things and when not to. That is the type of game basketball is, very fundamental," he said. "You don't get involved in a lot of elaborate strategy. It is just a lot of little things that happen that can turn any kind of a game the other direction."

Abdul-Jabbar feels that the Lakers and the sport of basketball has changed since he joined Los Angeles in 1973.

"The league has gotten bigger and the overall talent is steadily improving which is extremely good for the game," he said while pulling on his jersey. "It is a fact that basketball is an American game and everybody plays it. This is evident by all the talent that has come out of the college ranks. Not only is the overall talent good for the game, but all the kids coming out of college who contribute adds a lot for the fans also. I've always believed that the sport of basketball is the greatest and I hope it will continue to grow long after I have retired."

Abdul-Jabbar scores the 25,000 point of his 12-year career

Ram owner taping calls

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — Los Angeles Rams owner Georgia Frontiere covertly recorded telephone calls and personal conversations in her home, according to the deposition of a former employee of the NFL franchise, the Riverside Press Enterprise has reported.

Mel Irwin, director of community relations for one year until July, said Mrs. Frontiere had sophisticated electronic equipment to tap telephones and record conversations anywhere in her home, the paper reported.

"Wires went from the basement into every room in the house," Irwin said in his deposition, according to the newspaper story published Saturday.

Irwin's statement was taken by attorney Howard Daniels, who represents the Los Angeles County Coliseum Commission in its antitrust suit against the NFL. The suit stems from the NFL's refusal to allow the Oakland Raiders to move to Los Angeles.

In a deposition last month, Mrs. Frontiere said she had electronic equipment in her home that was used only to record music, the newspaper said.

Orlainsky wins first ski race

EBNAT-KAPPEL — Switzerland (UPI) — Turning a rare mishap to his advantage, 18-year-old Christian Orlainsky of Austria Sunday won his first World Cup ski race ever by capturing the season's second giant slalom.

On two snow-cemented and partially slushy 48-gate courses, Orlainsky produced a devastating second run to deny his compatriot Hans Enn victory.

Enn, the 1980 Olympic bronze medalist in giant slalom, was fastest in the first leg, covering the course in 1:20.45 while Orlainsky held ninth spot on 1:21.63.

On the second run, Enn seemingly had the race wrapped up until Orlainsky bolted out of the starting gate. The former European junior champion attacked the gates furiously, clocked the best intermediate and course times and finished way ahead of everyone else in 1:19.78. His aggregate time was 2:41.41, nine hundredths of a second faster than Enn.

After a string of 32 World Cup giant slaloms in which he had always completed the course and won 25 races, Stenmark crashed out of the first run just after he had posted the best time at the halfway mark. Rounding a gate, the Swedish double Olympic champion got his left ski entangled with a flag pole and fell.

Enn, who finished second behind Andreas Wenzel of Liechtenstein in the combined, picked up a total of 40 World Cup points to move into second spot in the overall standings behind Swiss downhiller Peter Mueller.

Mueller, who missed two gates Sunday and was disqualified, is leading with 80 points, followed by Enn with 63. Steve Podborski of Canada with 61 and Wenzel with 57.

The combined standings were figured on the basis of Sunday's giant slalom and the downhill at Val d'Isere, France, in early December.

Olympic silver medalist Phil Mahre of White Pass, Wash., amassed 30 points for third place finishes in both the giant slalom and the combined. This moved him into ninth spot in the World Cup standings.

For Mahre, this was his best race so far this season. Bugged down in several places after the first run, he lost his balance for a crucial moment when he swept around a gate with his right ski high in the air, he came back strongly the second time down when only Orlainsky and Switzerland's three-poled jumper Luc Fournier managed to outspeed him.

Mahre's teammates fared rather poorly. Michael Frost was next best in 44th spot, while Canada only managed to put its top racer, Peter Monod, in 57th.

Of 102 racers starting, 43 dropped out after spills or were disqualified.

BRIDGE

Oswald Jacoby and Alan Santag

Sensational defense play shows today's hand in an article called "Theatre of the Absurd" to show a really unusual play.

Alan: "Actually, it is two unusual plays. West decides to underbid his ace-king-queen-jack-ten of clubs to put his partner in. Then East, who must be a real clown, plays his seven of clubs which holds the trick. Then he gives West a diamond ruff. Now East's nine of clubs is a second entry to give West a second diamond ruff and South a chance to moan and groan."

Oswald: "Actually that play of the seven at trick one is most logical. It just requires that East do a trick of high-powered thinking. He starts by assuming that his three-level preempt. Then East thinks further. Obviously West can't ruff diamonds. Thus, the four spot is his lowest club. That leaves South with specifically the three and two. Now it is easy for a man who has figured all this out to play his seven to keep a second entry to his hand."

Alan: "An amazing play of this hand!"

Soviets say Carter weakened U.S.

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union said Sunday President Carter weakened the position of the United States around the world. It also said he was leaving the "grim heritage" of an arms race to the incoming Reagan administration.

"As a result of an unprecedented build-up and perfection of weapons and the refusal to ratify the SALT II treaty, the national security of the U.S.A. has not been strengthened while its relations with its allies have deteriorated," the Soviet army newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda said.

This led to instability around the world, the paper said, and "the Carter administration is now trying to shift this grim heritage onto the shoulders of the incoming Republican administration."

The paper said the economic and political positions of the United States have weakened and that "anti-American sentiments have become manifest everywhere."

Other newspapers also featured articles denying the existence of a Soviet threat to peace and blaming the Carter administration for creating fears to justify an arms buildup.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said the "nervous, often unforeseen zigzags of course" of the Carter administration is threatening to harm the West.

This was a reference to the trade embargo, the Olympic boycott and the freeze on cultural and scientific exchanges imposed by the United States after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan just over a year ago.

Pravda said what it called a U.S. attempt "to fan up a military psychosis" has had little success beyond causing "some New York philistines to beat bottles of Russian vodka against the pavement in a state of ecstasy."

Some Western European countries have agreed to accept new U.S. missiles on their soil, Pravda said. The Russian federation daily Sovetskaya Rossiya made a similar point.

"While stepping up the psychological warfare against the Soviet Union and whipping up the arms race, Washington at the same time hopes to consolidate the domination in NATO," the Sovetskaya Rossiya said.

JERUSALEM (UPI) — The Israeli cabinet temporarily averted a crisis that endangered Prime Minister Menachem Begin's fragile coalition Sunday by naming a special commission to work out a compromise in a teachers' wage dispute.

Two ministers who threatened to resign over the wage issue were named to the panel.

Added to charges by dismissed Police Chief Harel Shar that Interior Minister Josef Burg stopped a financial probe of his ministry, the teachers' pay dispute threatened to bring down Begin's 3 1/2-year-old government.

"A government crisis was averted today, but I don't know for how long," Burg said after the cabinet meeting. He declined to predict whether national elections would be moved up from their scheduled Nov. 17 date.

Finance Minister Yigal Hurvitz has insisted on strict spending limitations to fight inflation, now running at world record 135 percent a year, and threatened to resign of the teachers were given a recommended raise.

The nation's 60,000 teachers demanded the government endorse another commission's recommendations to give them an immediate 17 percent increase.

Alaska's Stevens hints U.S. might sell arms to China

PEKING (UPI) — Senate deputy Republican leader Theodore F. Stevens met with Chinese strongman Deng Xiaoping Sunday.

He said the United States might sell weapons to China in response to Soviet aggression around the world.

The Alaska senator, accompanied by Anna Chan Chennault, GOP supporter and widow of Gen. Claire Chennault, commander of the famed "Flying Tigers", also admitted there were problems between Peking and the incoming Reagan administration over Taiwan.

Deng has threatened to sever Peking's relations with Washington if Reagan pursues a "two-China" policy and reopens "official" links with Taiwan, which Peking recognizes as a part of China.

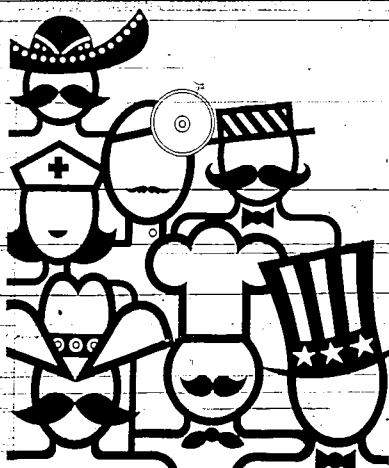

Stevens and Mrs. Chennault are scheduled to fly to Taiwan today for talks with Chinese nationalist leaders.

Stevens emphasized he was not an envoy for Reagan and was "neither bringing any message or carrying one back," but acknowledged that the Chinese had pumped him on Reagan, that the question of Taiwan had been raised "frequently" and that Peking was not budging its tough position on the issue.

The senator hinted broadly at a news conference that the incoming government might be prepared to sell China weapons in response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and its "military aggressiveness elsewhere."

Asked if Washington "sooner or later" would sell weapons, Stevens responded, "I certainly don't rule it out — in terms of the apparent aggressiveness of the Soviet Union and its leaders."
