WIESBADEN, West Germany (UPI) — Embittered and in some cases depressed, the freed American hostages will fly home Sunday to their families and the heroes' welcome doctors hope will help ease the haunting memories of their deprivation and abuse in Iran.

One former hostage was asked to reveal the first thing he plans to do when he gets home to his wife.

"You mean the second thing?" he replied.

The State Department said all but one of the 52 former hostages will hold a private reunion with their relatives at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., then meet with President Reagan in Washington on Tuesday.

Sgt. 1st Class Donald Hohman, 38, already has been reunited with his wife, Anna, a nurse in Frankfurt, and will remain with her in West Germany.

Hohman, a Marine medic from West Sacramento, Calif., said he once met Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and spoke up to him, telling him Iranians had no respect for human rights.

"The man is a pig," Hohman said. "He's a person who sits on a ladder or a fence and watches somebody else do his dirty work."

In the first report of firing on a hostage, former captive William E. Belk said Iranian militants opened fired on him when he tried to escape and then shot his injured leg as he was caught.

That some of the hostages and otherwise in Iran, are suffering from depression and some of the anti-American bias they were forced to endure during their 444-day ordeal.

One doctor said they showed signs of "varying states of medical and psychological ailments" such as nightmarish flashbacks brought on by simple noises like a closing door.

Doctors cautioned relatives that many of the former hostages would not want to talk about their ordeal and needed to be coaxed into getting it out of their systems.

"They have a need to be listened to," said Dr. Jerome Korcak, leader of the State Department medical and psychological team evaluating the Americans.

He said after two days of interviews and mental tests, the former hostages "show varying states of medical and psychological ailments," with some suffering "post traumatic stress syndrome."

As far as possible, those ugly memories were being put to rest by care, attention and food such as no hospital kitchen has ever served up before.

Dinner Friday night, planned as a homecoming bash, consisted of 250 pounds of lobster freshly flown in from Maine, champagne, beer and the best local white wine that the mayor of Wiesbaden could find.

"Some of them were waving their hands and smiling ear to ear," said one person who witnessed the party.

"There was plenty of beer and every so often they start shouting. They were feeling good."

The mental state of the hostages — and yet more details of the terror they endured in Iran — came out in briefings given reporters.

Some of the former hostages were unable to sleep or talk to people and were haunted by nightmarish flashbacks brought on by something as simple as the sound of a door slamming.

Others were so depressed they would not leave their rooms at the hospital, where they have been "decompressing" from their ordeal for the past two days.

While some of the former hostages tried to defy their Iranian captors, clinging to a fierce patriotism for

In first interview, hostage describes his life as captive

(Editor's note: Former hostage Bruce German says, in the first extensive interview by any of the returnees in Wiesbaden, Germany, his Iranian captors were not students but rather "terrorists, pure and simple" and he describes the night of "total terror" when masked Iranian guards staged a mock execution. The former embassy budget officer says he would return to Iran on assignment "Only in a B-52." The following are excerpts from the UPI interview.)

Q: How were your captors?

A: There were a few that were slightly human. That's about as far as I'll go.

Q: Was the food good?

A: No, in the beginning it wasn't because we had the ambassador's cook. He of course knew how to make American meals. And then once we were dispersed in April we were forced to eat their food — a lot of rice, a lot of bread, goat cheese.

Q: Where were you held after the captors dispersed you in April following the aborted rescue mission?

A: From what I understand, in the whole country, from the smallest to the largest villages. I was in a room with one other gentleman. There were three others in the building, though.

Q: Did you know what was going on in the efforts to get you free?

A: We got little bits and pieces and we put it together. It was helpful for us moral-wise to know that it was going on.

Q: Were you involved for the aborted rescue mission?

A: No, we were dispersed. That was the immediate reaction.

Q: Some White House officials have described the meeting you had with Carter here as tense. Was it tense?

A: Not really. "Subdued" I think is a better word.

Q: What did you feel when you did the Christmas message on television?

A: It was the most difficult thing I have ever done. Q: Did you have the feeling it would be used as propaganda by the Iranians?

A: Some of us talked about that. But we figured the American people would be smart enough to see through that.

Q: Were you held in isolation at any point?

A: No, I was never in isolation personally.

Q: How and when did you find out about the Iraq-Iran war?

A: In September we had a blackout and we had to sit and read by candlelight. We suspected something was

More school funding sought

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's public schools need $36 million more in state funds next year because money from local and federal sources is declining or stagnating, state Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans said today.

In asking the Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee for $228 million from the state's general account for fiscal year 1982 (roughly a 10 percent increase), Evans said he doubted the additional revenue even would allow local districts to keep pace with inflation.

"Our request represents the financial needs of our schools — not what they ought to be but what they are today," Evans said. "This request is nothing more than what we think are necessary funds to keep our system together."

"The increase may not even keep up with inflation. When I get to the bottom line, you may not think so, but it is a reasonable and responsible bare-bones request."

Evans said local property tax freezes, the difficulty in gaining voter approval for override levies, the holdback in state funding this year, and expected declines in federal funding force public school administrators to seek more money from the state for the coming fiscal year.

"The state funds would be fairly even in our request if we could take each of the pieces (in the funding pie) and have a 10 percent increase in each piece," Evans said. "But each piece isn't growing, and some are getting smaller... So, the state's general account has to grow its 10 percent and make up the 10 percent increases the other pieces can't grow."

Idaho School Boards Association representative Mary Ann Blik said she urged lawmakers to boost funding, saying the group would support legislators if they decided a tax increase was needed to come up with additional public-school funding.

"This may sound corny but it's true," Mrs. Blik said. "A child is the only resource from which a responsible adult can be made, and education is the only tool we have to reach this goal."

Idaho Education Association Executive Director Don Rolfe also spoke in favor of the funding increase, saying, "The erosion of the funding levels of Idaho's schools must be halted and turned before quality begins to suffer. That's the message all of us are trying to leave you with today."

Funds would repair dams, canals

Canal companies cool to IDWR bonding plan

TWIN FALLS — Several Magic Valley canal companies reacted coolly to an Idaho Department of Water Resources proposal designed to help them.

The proposed legislation would allow the department to sell bonds and use the money for low-interest loans to canal companies and irrigation districts. Department officials say there are about 20 dams owned by irrigation districts and canal companies in need of major repairs that the companies will have difficulty financing.

"But it is the Department of Water Resources, not any canal company I know of that is pushing the proposal," said Ted Quigley, a Castleford farmer and member of the Twin Falls Canal Co. board of directors.

He said he doesn't know of anyone eager to give the department authority over individual canal systems it would gain once it had the power to fund certain repair projects.

According to a Department of Water Resources list, two Magic Valley dams — Oakley Dam and Salmon Falls Reservoir — are in need of repairs so major that the canal companies that own them might not be able to afford the repairs. Two other nearby dams also on the list are Fish Creek Reservoir near Carey and St. Johns near Malad.

However, Larry Ragain, manager of the Salmon River Canal Co., said it is the Department of Water Resources, not Salmon tract farmers or the canal company, that is concerned about the condition of Salmon Falls Reservoir.

"The dam is getting quite old," he said. The only problem is normal deterioration on the outside of the dam, though, he added. "As far as I'm concerned, our reservoir is fine."

Leon Grieve, manager of the Big Wood Canal Co., doesn't think his company needs the funds the Department of Water Resources would make available through the proposed bill.

"None of our repairs are all that extensive that we have to borrow that much money. When we have work to do on the canal we just start at it and keep at it until we're done," he said.

The Idaho Water Users Association, which speaks for many of the canal companies in the state, supported a bill similar to the current Department of Water Resources proposal when it was before the Legislature last year. Sheri Chapman, director of the association, said the association will meet next week to see if the new proposal is significantly different from the old one before taking a stand on the bill.

He said he supports the principal of the bill and used Fish Creek Reservoir as an example of what the bill could help accomplish.

The 56-year-old reservoir needs extensive renovation, but the farmers in the small Irrigation district that owns the structure are having difficulty financing the project, he said.

"It would probably take a $250,000 to $500,000 to do it right," Chapman said. But if the Carey Valley Reservoir Co. has to borrow that money, they'll have to pay commercial rates, which would make it hard for the company to avoid bankruptcy.

Girl Scouts launch door-to-door campaign

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — More than 100 Twin Falls Girl Scouts and Brownies will begin to canvass the city's neighborhoods this week.

"They'll be looking to sell their famous cookies to adults who can't resist either cookies or the shining eyes and smiling faces that go with the sales pitch."

But don't be fooled by their informality. Much work has gone into it, including preparing the girls for the rejections that inevitably come their way.

For one thing, many adults in the local Girl Scout council were unfamiliar with the cookie sale and required some training. Silver Sage Council field adviser Sally Unrau said.

As a result, each of the adult leaders held one or two mock sessions with the girls, acting out potentially difficult situations.

Girls are taught to remain courteous toward customers, how to explain the cookie sale and to avoid entering the houses of strangers.

"It gives them some self-confidence in themselves and it also teaches the dangers that can possibly happen," Unrau said.

"I hate to say it and I would hate to think in Twin Falls that it would happen — but the girls need to be aware that there are some dangers involved in stepping inside someone's house."

In Twin Falls, the girls are simply filling orders for the cookies which will arrive in four to six weeks. Unrau said taking orders in advance avoids problems when the cookies arrive.

Girl Scouts are also taught to break down where the funds from the cookie sales go, a new feature required in some states such as California but optional in Idaho.

Of the $1.50 per box price, 64¢ pays for the cost of the cookies, 6¢ goes to the Silver Sage Council, 15¢ to the individual Scout troop, 8¢ for bonuses to the girls and 2¢ for sales expenses.

Other changes in the Girl Scout tradition become apparent as one watches several girls under Unrau's direction begin ringing doorbells.

They soon discover the two-income family has made after-school selling difficult.

More than half of the houses the girls approached Friday afternoon were empty.

But they braved on, moving from house to house over a course of an hour that saw less than a dozen boxes sold.

Three Brownies in the group, Monica Unrau, 9, Lisa Watkins, 7, and Dee Dee Jenkins, 6, approached three houses before making a sale — to one of the girls' bus driver.

Across the street, Girl Scouts Kirsten Cazeau and Ali Arndt were having better luck, selling six boxes.

All, who has three years experience in selling the cookies, explained the secret in their success.

"I smile," she said, with an air of caution about revealing trade secrets.

Walesa strike call heightens tension

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Polish labor union leader Lech Walesa followed up another day of strikes Friday with an unprecedented appeal to the 10 million workers in his Solidarity union to stay off the job Saturday.

His appeal amounted to a general strike call although Solidarity refused to characterize it as such, and union spokesmen said local chapters would be meeting to decide whether to call a one-hour general strike in their regions Feb. 3.

Prime Minister Jozef Pankowski held urgent talks with his Cabinet ministers, a spokesman said, and the Soviet Union kept up its attack on Poland's labor movement, saying the strike threats were "an attempt to aggravate the situation." A Soviet newspaper also printed photographs of recent Polish-Soviet military maneuvers in Poland.

The actions were a follow-up to warning strikes in 10 cities Thursday. State-run television said strikes Friday were also reported in several other cities and that in Szczecin, managers began to dock the pay of workers who stayed off the job Jan. 10 — designated a working Saturday but boycotted by an estimated million workers.

A government spokesman earlier described the threat of mass walkouts Saturday to press Solidarity's demands as an "ultimatum" and declared that attempts to force negotiations by strikes were "inadmissible."

The appeal was an extraordinary act by Walesa who risked his prestige as leader of Solidarity and chief negotiator during last summer's labor crisis which ended in a historic accord with the government.

It was his first nationwide appeal to the union rank and file and it is the toughest stand he has taken since the end of the summer labor crisis.

"It looks like the government has made him angry," said a Polish journalist who followed the labor revolt from the start.

Up to now, Walesa has represented a conciliatory, unifying figure and he was overruled during the Solidarity national commission meeting Tuesday by militants when he counseled against further strikes.

His appeal puts the union in even clearer confrontation with the government on the 5-day work issue, at a time of increased tension over the escalating unrest.

Those tensions led former U.N. Ambassador William Scranton to declare there was more of a likelihood than not the Soviet Union would use its armed forces to intervene in Poland.

"The likelihood of the use of Soviet forces in Poland is great. Sooner or later, they will have to take some sort of internal action" in Poland.

Libya demands pullout

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Libya and Chad Friday demanded an immediate pullout of French army units from the Central African Republic, calling them a threat to the security and unity of neighboring Chad.

A joint communique, issued by Libya and Chad made no mention of previously announced plans to merge the two states — which prompted France to rush its army to its former colony which borders Chad also has airlifted tanks and troops to its northwestern frontier where the threat of war hangs.

In Egypt, President Anwar Sadat warned he would send Egyptian troops to help defend Sudan against any Libyan attack "from the first moment."

Nicaraguan aid cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department said Friday it has indefinitely suspended $15 million in economic aid to Nicaragua until the program is reviewed.

Officials said there will be a pause in distribution of the loan program until they determine that 60 percent of the Nicaraguan aid program is going to small businesses.

The program provides that only 40 percent of the assistance may go to the government of Nicaragua for public projects.

"This is a technical pause," said one official.

"This has no political connotations. This pause will give us a chance to evaluate the use of the first disbursement of funds.

Hostage's life threatened

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Colombian leftist guerrillas Friday threatened to execute captured American linguist Chester Bitterman if the language institute he works for does not close down by February 19.

The U.S. Summer Institute of Linguistics, Bitterman's company, must abandon Colombia by February 19, 1981 and all its property must be removed. The guerrillas believe the firm is a CIA front.

The letter was sent by the April 19th movement, the same group that last year seized the Dominican Embassy in Bogota and held twenty diplomatic hostages for 61 days.

Colombian Interior Minister Germa Zea Hernandez said the government will not negotiate with the guerrillas.

Quakes jolt orient

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan was jolted Friday by three earthquakes, including one that registered 6.9 on the Richter scale and shook high-rise buildings in Tokyo. There were no reports of injuries and only minor damages.

The three quakes, occurring within a 20-hour period, shook Japan as far north as the Kurile Islands in the northern Pacific and as far south as Tokyo in the largest main island of Honshu.

The destructive force of the strongest quake was restricted by the fact its epicenter was located 50 miles underground, the agency said.

A strong earthquake also rocked south central China Saturday, but missed all major population centers and apparently caused only slight damage.

The quake's focus was in the rugged, heavily forested mountains in western Sichuan province and missed the heavily populated centers in the eastern part of the state where the bulk of the area's 100 million people live.

Court orders birth

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Georgia Supreme Court unanimously refused late Friday to interfere with a lower court's ruling that Jessie Mae Jefferson must submit, despite her religious objections, to an operation to save the life of her unborn child.

The high court's ruling cleared the way for surgeons to perform a cesarean section on Mrs. Jefferson, of rural Butts County, Saturday morning if tests continue to show the child cannot survive natural birth.

The state claimed that the religious faith of the parent should not be permitted to cause the death of the fetus, which is 39 weeks old and due to be born Monday.

A hero's homecoming set

By United Press International

The dream homecoming is set to go.

Even in their wildest fantasies during the 44-day ordeal the hostages couldn't have imagined it.

It starts with two days of absolute privacy with their families at West Point amid the quiet serenity of the Hudson Valley.

It moves to a special White House welcome by their new president.

Then there's the "biggest ticker tape parade in history" up Broadway — the famed street of heroes.

And finally comes the trip home to family, friends and neighbors amid a time American welcome home bashes of tooting horns and pealing church bells — and miles and miles and yellow ribbon tied around everything that will stand still.

The 51 Americans — the 52nd, Marine Sgt. Donald Hohman planned to stay behind in Germany where his wife, Anna, works as a nurse — will be flown Sunday from the military hospital at Wiesbaden to Stewart Airfield, a public airport north of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

They will meet their families at the airport where the media will be allowed to record the event, but not get close enough to interview anyone.

From there the reunited families will be taken to the military academy's Thayer Hotel, a fortress-like building with 170 rooms and a spectacular view of snow blanketed hills rolling back from the frozen Hudson. Officials promised absolute privacy.

The official plans reflected the rapidity of unfolding events. Friday was only the hostages' third day of freedom.

According to officials, the Donald Hohman is hugged by his wife, a nurse in Germany.

"present plan" is for the hostages and their families to be flown to Washington on Tuesday where President Reagan will greet them at the White House.

Details of their visit were still being worked out, but White House chief of staff James Baker said, "We feel that whatever ceremony there is should be dignified, should be quiet — not a gala."

But quiet was far from New York Mayor Edward Koch's mind when he sent invitations to the hostages for the "biggest ticker tape parade in history" — a tradition of welcome for heroes that stretches back to the days of Lindbergh.

Koch also has asked the Reagan administration to designate New York as the official host city. He said the city's welcome would include "ecumenical services" conducted by Cardinal Terence Cooke at City Hall.

For frosting on the cake, the Waldorf-Astoria hotel invited the hostages and their families to stay at the famous Park Avenue watering spot.

"We will put aside 52 double rooms for the eve and day of the greatest ticker tape parade ever," said Waldorf Manager Eugene R. Seaman.

The next days for the hostages will be filled with individual welcomes spread across the United States.

They include a parade down the middle of Phoenix, Ariz., for the homecoming of Jimmy Lopez and Robert Ode, and a hero's welcome in Seaford, Del., for Marine Sgt. Gregory Persinger, where the Ladies Auxiliary was busy fixing refreshments for a party at the fire station.

Other communities like Rockville, Md., and Columbia, S.C., Houston, Texas, Pueblo, Colo., Memphis, Tenn., and Washington, Mo., were busy getting it all together.

But maybe the West Point reunion will be the best of all.

In San Diego before she left for the reunion, Dorothy Morefield, the wife of former embassy counsel general Richard Morefield, was asked if she and her husband might watch the Superbowl on Sunday.

"No," she replied emphatically. "We have other things to do."

Hostages' restrictions at hospital leave them unwilling captives still

WIESBADEN, West Germany (UPI) — They may be out of Tehran but the 52 Americans still have a way to go before they are fully free.

Instead of Iranian militants with machine guns, the Americans wake up to psychiatrists with notebooks and nurses with bed pans.

Instead of chanting Moslem militants outside the gates of the U.S. Embassy, the Americans now hear frustrated reporters calling for interviews from the gate of Wiesbaden's U.S. Air Force Hospital.

But the effect is the same.

"These guys are still hostages," said one former serviceman who went to the hospital Friday. "Everything they do is controlled."

State Department officials and medical experts, concerned about the physical and mental well-being of the former hostages, have laid down a rigid daily schedule. Even their sleep is monitored.

The 52 are free to call whomever they want day or night and to roam the snow-covered hospital grounds but the State Department has made no secret it controls what the hostages see and do.

The 1300 reporters, photographers and broadcasters in Wiesbaden are being kept away as far as possible.

"We are holding a big pile of interview requests, and we will not turn them over to the returnees until they leave the hospital," a State Department spokesman told UPI.

"Obviously, we are dealing with free American citizens," spokesman Jack Cannon said Friday. "However, our view continues to be this is a time set aside for rest and relaxation."

"Some of them are beginning to wonder if they really are free," said one visitor. "They're ready to go home. They thought the stop in Algiers on their way out of Iran was a waste of time and now they want to get back to the States."

Family used code to pass by censors of mail to son

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — The family of former hostage Donald Cooke devised their own codes to bypass the Iranian censors and get news from home to their isolated son.

Susan Cooke, mother of the 25-year-old former vice consul, said Friday the only message in a letter that Cooke wasn't able to decode was "the Queen's husband is home."

Roughly translated, that meant that Richard Queen, the first hostage released, was back in the United States.

The same message was sent again, in a personal way Cooke was able to understand. Mrs. Cooke said her son had once printed business cards for a Queen relative.

"I asked him if he remembered the friends who he'd made business cards for," she recalled. "I said, 'he's back home. He's sick, but he's getting better.'"

Queen was released after 250 days of captivity because he was suffering from multiple sclerosis.

The mother of eight children also for help, using the term, "Curtis LeMay stoneware."

LeMay, the former Air Force general, once said the United States would bomb North Vietnam until they were back in the "stone age."

Mrs. Cooke said the family wrote that the stoneware had been sent, but was broken en route. Her message was in reference to the failed rescue mission in April.

Hostages raid PX on shopping spree

WIESBADEN, West Germany (UPI) — Following a top-secret plan, the freed American hostages "raided" the military exchange before dawn Friday, spending $15,000 in 90 minutes.

"They just didn't know where to begin," said one cashier. "Some were apprehensive about buying things and some had long shopping lists."

With many still wearing the clothes they were captured in more than 14 months ago, the Americans scooped up watches, cameras and tailor-made clothes during the frenzied shopping spree.

Then they bought the luggage to take it all home in.

"They just went crazy shopping," said a clerk at the huge military PX.

Most of the hostages took care of one problem immediately — they bought wallets to hold the crisp $20 bills they received in their back pay.

Employees at the exchange were rousted out of bed at 5 a.m. on an hour's notice to open the store for the freed hostages, who arrived in two buses. The shopping trip was arranged under top-secret conditions to keep the Americans away from the crowd and the press.

The shoppers were on a tight 90-minute schedule.

A clerk said one of the former hostages came out of a fitting room with a pair of dirty and stained jeans.

"These were the pair I was captured in," he told them. "I'm going to take them back to the States with me."

Others abandoned their plastic Iranian sandals, after buying new shoes. Most of the servicemen bought both street shoes and military footwear.

The former hostages spent most of their money on personal items. They bought sport coats, suits, underwear, dress slacks, blue jeans, socks, plus garment bags, hand luggage, attaché cases, pocket calculators, wallets, sunglasses, watches and blow dryers.

which they were punished, others agonized over the confessions they signed.

In group and individual therapy sessions, doctors were trying to make them realize "they have no reason to feel guilty because these so-called confessions were brought under duress."

In telephone conversations with their families and remarks to visitors, most of the former hostages have painted a terrifying picture of deprivation, of mock executions and forced games of Russian roulette, of worm infested food, beatings and long months in solitary confinement.

"There is universal hostility among the returnees toward the Iranians," a spokesman said, adding that 22 servicemen among the hostages received the harshest treatment.

The rest of Day 3 of freedom was spent undergoing medical tests, relaxing and comparing their brand new coats, watches and clothes.

At their disposal were 14 1/2 months of video tapes of Walter Cronkite and the CBS Evening News, a course on the history they missed but were so much a part of.

Between medical tests and meals, there was also a continuous showing of the "The Empire Strikes Back."

Back home, preparations for the official celebrations, starting in Washington with a meeting with Reagan, were well under way.

In New York, Mayor Edward Koch said he was planning the biggest ticker tape parade in the city's history — bigger even than the one for the astronauts who returned from the moon.

Interview

was amiss. They kept saying it was a celebration and I said the hostages celebrate really well.

Q: Did you hear about Richard Queen's release?

A: Yes, we did. The Sporting News was sent regularly and you'd be amazed at the bits and pieces we were able to pick up. Little subtle things and comments, we used to read it from cover to cover.

Q: The Iranians have called you ungrateful for having said you were tortured and mistreated?

A: If it happened, I think it should be told.

Q: How were the students?

A: Let it be known that they were not students. They may have been students at one time but two years out of school doesn't make you a student. They were pure and simple terrorists.

Q: Richard Queen has talked about the night of the Gestapo when you were all harassed in the embassy. Were you part of that?

A: Absolutely, on the wrong end of the gun. It's kind of touchy. It was the closest thing I ever came to total terror, that particular night.

It was what they call a security shakedown. They had reports that we were passing notes and communicating and that some of the guys had weapons. It may have been possible, but I don't know what weapons — a spoon?

So they brought in these guys with Uzis (Israeli submachine guns) and G-3s (submachine guns used by the Iranian army) and shook the place down. (We) assumed the classic position against the wall with our blindfolds and they coked the guns in our ears. We experienced total terror.

Q: Were the people who searched you that night your usual guards?

A: They related, but the faces became familiar, unfortunately.

Q: But they were wearing masks that night?

A: Yes. But they didn't escape our attention. We knew who they were.

Q: What was your feeling when you came here?

A: The first night I woke up and I wasn't sure it was real. I looked around for the guards to ask permission to go to the toilet.

Q: Would you return to Iran on assignment?

A: Only in a B-52.

Q: What is your impression about Carter's efforts to get you free?

A: I think the man did as much as he could.

Q: Please tell us about that November when the embassy was seized.

A: I was doing my job as budget officer in the basement of the building. Sunday was a normal workday in Tehran. And then all of a sudden we heard the racket and the crowd cheering and yelling and screaming and were told to leave upstairs to a safer location. And — a few minutes later we moved up to the top floor.

They were let in. They had to be. It was either that or they would probably have destroyed the building. We had no choice.

Q: Do you think they had "somebody inside"?

A: Some of us suspected that some of the disgruntled local employees may have had something to do with it. They knew a lot about the inside of the building. They knew where the tear gas was located and so forth. And that's not common knowledge.

Q: What are your feelings about returning to the United States?

A: I just want to see my country again. I have never been prouder to be an American as I am now.

Q: You have been given videotapes, with news clips on the time you have been locked away. Have you been watching those?

A: Yes, I am sure we are in for a culture shock. We heard about the volcano eruption. That was quite a topic.

Q: Have you also seen tapes on the embassy situation?

A: Some of us preferred not to watch it. It's like reliving the horror. And I don't think we are ready for that yet. If you got a wound, why pour salt on it?

Q: Some of your friends were apparently mistreated. How was captivity, your guards?

A: I'm thankful I'm still intact, mentally and physically. Like I said, some of them were rather humane, and some of them were kind of belligerent. And it seemed that if you dealt with them one on one you were able to at least communicate.

Q: Did you ever understand what was behind the behavior of the students, why they took you hostage?

A: In the beginning we felt that their motives were sound. We just didn't agree with their methods.

Q: Describe your thoughts when that plane landed in Algiers.

A: We felt like it was semi-home. It was a friendly country, I don't know very exhilarating. We can't say enough good things about the Algerians.

Q: And what is the first thing you are going to do when you get home?

A: I think I'm going to kiss the ground when we land.

Praise given kindergartens

BOISE (UPI) — Public school superintendents from Moscow, Pocatello and Emmett sang praises for their districts' kindergarten programs Friday, calling the additional year of schooling "unique and necessary to children's development."

The educators spoke to the Legislature's Joint Finance Appropriations Committee, bringing their districts' financial woes, labor disputes and views on education quality to the attention of the budget-setting committee.

But proposals surfacing in the Legislature to eliminate kindergarten programs in the public schools sparked most concern from the educators, who said they would prefer lawmakers solve budget problems by cutting elsewhere.

Dr. Rulon Ellis, Pocatello's school chief, urged legislators not to eliminate kindergarten as a cost-saving measure, saying schooling before the first grade is "too important an asset for our most valuable resource — children — to consider anything but improving the program."

Ellis and Moscow School Superintendent Dr. Aletha Fasolino said children who attend kindergarten perform better than their counterparts when they advance to higher grades. Ellis, for example, said nearly 18 percent of his district's fourth-graders who attended kindergarten were in the high achievement section on tests, while less than 13 percent of those who did not go to kindergarten were in the high-performance sector.

Emmett Superintendent Dick Morgan said his district had no reliable test scores to show higher performance levels for children who attend kindergarten, but he said his teachers and administrators strongly believe the additional schooling is an asset.

But, Morgan said, disagreeing with his colleagues, kindergarten is not needed as much as the regular first-through-12th-grade programs because children can obtain most skills at home during the early years.

kindergarten as stacked up to other programs in the public schools," Morgan said. "I believe kindergarten comes in second."

Dr. Fasolino, however, urged legislators to order elimination of kindergarten — not leave it up to local school districts — if adequate financing can't be appropriated for the coming fiscal year. If local school boards are required to make the decision, she said, officials will be faced with factions of parents and taxpayers, creating a politically volatile situation.

But Ellis disagreed, saying he would prefer any decision regarding kindergartens be left to local school board members, who are closer to their communities and capable of assessing needs better than legislators in Boise.

$377-million for fiscal 1981

House approves revenue projections

By The Times-News and United Press International

BOISE — The House of Representatives Friday passed concurrent resolutions projecting $322.2 million in state revenue in fiscal year 1982 and $377 million in FY 1981.

Once approved by the Senate, the projections will be used by the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee in setting state agency budgets.

Representatives debated for more than 30 minutes on the $422.2 million projection, with the Legislature's Revenue Projection Committee defending its estimate against conservative Republicans who felt it was too high. Some Democrats said it was too low.

The 1982 resolution was passed on a 52-17 vote after the lawmakers rejected, 42-20, a motion to refer the resolution to general orders for amendment.

The measure for 1981, a revision of the original annual projected last year, passed 59-9. It is $3 million less than the governor's estimate.

Rep. T.W. "Tom" Silvers, R-Twin Falls, was the only member of the Magic Valley delegation who voted against the resolutions.

He explained he opposed the 1982 resolution because he does not foresee the economy turning around "that fast," especially for small businesses.

He said he was more comfortable with a figure of $415 million.

The resolution predicts revenue growth of 45 million, or 12 percent, more than the 1981 figure of $377. Gov. John Evans forecast growth of $58 million, or 15 percent.

Freshman Rep. Rachel-Gilbert, R-Boise, said Idaho was in a "deep recession" and that the Legislature was not accustomed to this problem. Property owners would again "take it in the shorts" if the Legislature was wrong, she said, referring to last year's spending holdback.

Reading headlines and excerpts from the Wall Street Journal, Rep. James Golder, R-Boise, warned of a possible $30 million state revenue shortfall in fiscal year 1982 if the resolution was adopted.

"Let's be realistic," he said. "They're not selling cars anymore."

But Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, chairman of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, blasted the protesters for second-guessing the revenue projections panel without enough evidence.

"None of these overnight experts were at the committee meetings," Antone said. "They were open to everybody, but none of them showed up."

Dam oxygen content control disputed

By LARRY SWISHER and RON ZELLAR Times-News writers

BOISE — The federal government is enforcing a dissolved oxygen standard at American Falls Dam higher than that set by the Idaho Legislature, Rep. Gordon Hoffield, R-Jerome, charged Friday.

Federal officials who monitor water quality at the dam, however, said Friday they are required to maintain the present standard by a contract between the water users, Idaho Power Co. and the U.S. Department of the Interior.

Hoffield said Idaho Power Co. and the American Falls Reservoir District spilled water worth $31.12 in lost power generation at the dam.

"The federal government ought to be liable," he said.

Aeration equipment, or blowers, can maintain a dissolved oxygen level of 5 parts per million in water below the dam, Hoffield said. That is the standard set by the Legislature in early 1980.

But the equipment cannot meet the 6-ppm standard that the Legislature rejected.

Hoffield said he attributed the spill to the U.S. Water and Power Resources Service (WPRS) enforcing the higher standard. "That's a violation of state's rights," he said.

He argued the state standard is the one to be followed, because no other regulations are in effect and the falling water contract between the reservoir district and the federal government calls for following the state standard.

According to a report on operation of the water quality facilities at the dam sent by Idaho Power to the reservoir district Dec. 9, 1980, the operation of the air injection equipment cost $10,227 and $12,740 in labor and the spilled water cost $31,121.

Idaho Power had to purchase power to make up for the lost generation, Hoffield said.

"That was in an extremely good year for generation," he said. "In a dry, not year it could be hundreds of thousands."

The district waterusers are to pay half the cost of the water quality operation up to a maximum of $62,500, under a contract with Idaho Power.

The state representative carried the measure that passed the Legislature last year lowering the dissolved oxygen requirement below all hydroelectric plants to 5 ppm.

Don Tracy, WPRS project supervisor in Burley, said his office instructs operators at American Falls Dam to spill water past the turbines whenever monitors indicate the dissolved oxygen level has dropped below 6 ppm.

Tracy said he was instructed by former Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus to abide by a written contract that specifies Idaho Power will operate the dam "in accord with" amended State of Idaho water quality dissolved oxygen standards as approved April 17, 1975.

Environmental Protection Agency officials had sought a 90 percent oxygen saturation standard, which varies with water temperature and other factors. But the agency settled for a 6 ppm guarantee, which is specified in the contract, Tracy said. The WPRS supervisor said he doesn't care which standard he enforces, but will adhere to the contract until instructed otherwise.

"I can operate it however I am told to operate it," he said, adding that he assumes the contract will have to be changed before the WPRS can legally enforce a lower dissolved oxygen standard.

In a related note, directors of the Minidoka Irrigation District have written a letter to Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, saying they approve of the 6 ppm standard and believe the 1980 Legislature erred in attempting to reduce the standards.

The $62,000 maximum works out to about 4 cents an acre for MID waterusers, which is "a small price to pay to assure insure the continued minimum dissolved oxygen concentration to preserve water quality of the Snake River below American Falls," the directors wrote.

The letter adds MID members make extensive use of the river below the dam for fishing and other recreation.

Committee chairman says

Budget cut panel 'doesn't know its subject'

BOISE (UPI) — A House committee chairman says a group studying potential state government budget cuts has several members "who don't really know much about" their main subject — the Idaho Health and Welfare Department.

Rep. Elaine Kearnes, R-Idaho

Falls, Health and Welfare Committee chairman, also said formation of the Citizens' Advisory Volunteer Effort committee (CAVE) was unnecessary because the Governor's Management Task Force in 1979 did an adequate job of finding ways to help streamline H&W and other agencies.

CAVE, or Citizens' Advisory Volunteer Effort, was formed late last year by House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, and turned over to the leadership of Rep. Jack Kennevick, R-Boise.

Other members include former Republican state Sen. Lyle Cobbs, former GOP gubernatorial candidate Vern Ravenscroft and Northwest Health Care Inc. President Donald Berglin.

Kearnes added that it "bothered" her that CAVE has held at least one meeting not publicized by its leaders.

Evans promises veto if kindergartens killed

By ROBERT VAN BUSKIRK United Press International

BOISE — Gov. John Evans told Idaho publishers Friday he would avoid using his veto power, but "I will not hesitate to veto a bill to eliminate the kindergarten program."

"It's proven effective," the governor said, and should be maintained.

Speaking to the Idaho Newspaper Association meeting in Boise, Evans also said Idaho's economic slump was only temporary and there was no reason for legislative cutbacks or elimination of state programs.

"The problems we have today are only temporary and we can squeeze through somehow."

But he said the lawmakers would have to adopt some of his recommendations, such as imposing user fees and going to quarterly tax collections or there could be $30 million in cutbacks in state programs.

The governor said it was imperative that the state provide basic services.

Evans said he presented the Legislature with what he felt was a "bare bones budget" that would maintain present programs and not result in cutbacks.

Evans noted that Idaho was the seventh fastest growing state in the nation and said that all indications were that the economy of Idaho would improve later in the year.

Names top economic adviser

Reagan battles economy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan concentrated on the economy Friday and made plans to welcome the 52 freed American hostages to the White House on Tuesday.

White House press secretary James Brady said Reagan wants to permit the hostages and their families a day of privacy on Sunday when they return to the United States. On Monday, Brady said, press interviews with the hostages will be permitted, and on Tuesday, they will be welcomed to the White House.

Zeroing in on the economy, Reagan appointed Murry Weidenbaum chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, met with Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker and assured Republican congressional leaders his austerity plans will not threaten needed social programs.

Weidenbaum, an academician who advised Reagan during the presidential campaign, is a strong supporter of the Kemp-Roth proposal for a three-year, 30 percent income tax cut.

Although there is some debate within the administration about the timing of such a tax cut, Weidenbaum said he believes it should take effect "the sooner the better."

"I can assure you the Reagan administration will stick to its course until the inflation battle is won," he said.

Top aides indicated Reagan will make a nationally televised speech to spell out his economic recovery plan some time in the next two weeks.

Reagan discussed the nation's economic ills during a one-hour lunch with Volcker, Weidenbaum, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and other advisers, but Reagan said the meeting was largely designed for the participants to get acquainted with each other.

Reporters overheard him discussing the price of gold with Volcker, predicting at one point the price is "going to nosedive."

"I would love to see that," Volcker replied. There was no discussion of Volcker's role as head of the Federal Reserve, Weidenbaum said. He was appointed in 1979 and has been criticized for favoring high interest rates.

At his breakfast with congressional Republican leaders, Reagan made it clear "he is not going to endanger the recipients of Social Security," House GOP leader Bob Michel said.

"In talking to the president, my personal view is that Social Security recipients as such have no fear of gutting the Social Security program or tailoring it back to some point where it would be injurious to their well-being," added Michel.

Brady said Reagan will hold a Cabinet meeting Saturday, and may hold his first news conference sometime next week.

Even if social programs hurt

Symms vows to support cutbacks

By JEANNE WRIGHT
States News Service

WASHINGTON — True to his campaign promise, Idaho Sen. Steven D. Symms said he will support massive cuts, even if it means forsaking critical social and welfare programs.

The Idaho Republican issued a press release last week expressing support for the $43 billion worth of spending cut "proposals" prepared by the Senate Budget Committee but has refused to date to elaborate on what the committee has proposed to cut.

An aide to the Idaho Republican explained that Symms, a member of the Senate Budget Committee, was given the document only on the basis that he not reveal what the mammoth cuts were.

The document was forwarded to Office of Budget and Management Director Dave Stockman, but committee aide Robert E. Euland emphasized its importance and said public release might unduly alarm people.

An aide to Symms said welfare programs like food stamp grants are undoubtedly prime targets on the list. And with $27.8 million worth of food stamps going to 66,000 Idaho residents during the 1980 fiscal year, severe cuts in the food stamp program could prove devastating to the poor, according to supporters of the current plan.

Obviously the senator realizes there will be hardships if there are major cutbacks in the federal budget, Andrew Schirmermeister, Symms' press secretary said.

"He's concerned," the aide emphasized, adding that Symms is concerned about everything that affects his constituents.

"But the cuts will affect the entire country," Idaho won't bear the burden alone, Symms' aide stressed.

The suggested cuts are across-the-board, Schirmermeister said. Earlier reports indicated that several of the suggested trims were in the Medicaid and Medicare programs with projected savings of $1.2 billion in 1981, rising to as much as $2.6 billion in 1983. Many, if not most of the proposed cuts by the Senate committee, would shift the burden of payments for doctors' services and some hospital care from the federal government to the patients. If adopted, proposed reforms like these would have a crucial impact on the elderly and poor in Idaho and across the nation.

Symms appears to have joined other conservative Republicans who plan on waging a war against some of their favorite welfare targets under the banner of fighting for fiscal restraint. In testimony before the budget committee Wednesday, Symms urged his fellow senators to get moving on making what he believes will be difficult, yet necessary reductions in government spending. Concurring with statements made by Dr. Arthur Burns, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Symms said inflation and the federal budget could be brought under control if Congress had the will to do so.

The Republican senator also called upon the committee and Congress to provide meaningful tax relief for individuals and business. He also suggested approaches toward amending the Budget Act so continued deficits would be unlikely in the future.

Abscam trial goes to jury

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 12-week Abscam trial of former Florida Rep. Richard Kelly and two other men entered its final stages Friday with lawyers for all three aggressively claiming the defendants are innocent.

Kelly, accountant Stanley Weisz of Smithtown, N.Y., and Eugene Cuzlow, a Longwood, Fla. businessman, are on trial for conspiring to receive $250,000 in exchange for Kelly's promise to introduce private immigration legislation for ill-fated Arab sheikhs.

Kelly was videotaped on Jan. 8, 1980, at a Washington townhouse as he stuffed $25,000 in cash in his pockets.

U.S. District Judge William Bryant was to send the case to the jury following closing arguments by the prosecution.

Weisz's lawyer, Michael Dennis, told the jury Friday that Weisz thought he was getting a $50,000 "fee" for introducing the Florida Republican to Arab representatives, and that he was not participating in an alleged bribe deal.

Bills flood Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration bragged it was going to hit the ground running. But the 97th Congress is flat-out sprinting with almost 1,500 bills introduced already, records showed Friday.

A compilation of measures introduced through Thursday showed there were 241 bills and 49 resolutions produced in nine days of Senate sessions, and 1,241 bills and 198 resolutions created in eight days of House meetings.

Perhaps reflecting Republican conservatism, the number of measures introduced so far is fewer than the 368 Senate measures and 1,769 House measures introduced in a comparable time at the start of the 96th Congress.

On the other hand, while there are few if any bills detailing how to cut spending, some of the most prominent Republican budget-cutters have introduced measures to increase federal spending.

Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, John Warner of Virginia, and William Armstrong of Colorado introduced a new GI bill carrying increased education and other benefits for service personnel; Thurmond has a bill to increase military pensions; Larry Pressler, R-S.D., wants to spend more on Vietnam veterans.

Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., introduced a bill to give $750 in tax credits to anyone buying an American-made car.

Many of the bills and resolutions introduced in the first few days of the session dealt with death and taxes. House liberals introduced measures for registration of handguns, and Senate conservatives dropped dozens of tax relief bills into the hopper.

The most popular tax measure is one to do away with "the marriage penalty," the provision that causes married couples with similar incomes to pay much higher taxes than if they earned the same amounts but were single.

There are dozens of resolutions proposing constitutional amendments to ban abortion, balance the federal budget, restore prayer in schools, prohibit busing and elect the president by popular vote.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was quick with one of his pet projects, putting into legislation a GOP platform plank that would return the United States to the old standard.

And, reflecting the election results, there were several bills in both houses to prevent publication of presidential election returns before all state polls are closed.

Four candidates vie for Democratic chair

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four candidates for Democratic national chairman addressed a meeting of state party chairmen Friday, proposing nearly identical programs for party fundraising and pledging to stay neutral in the 1984 primaries.

Patrick Cunningham of New York City, Joseph Grangle of Buffalo, N.Y., Charles Manatt of Los Angeles and Charles Curry of Kansas City spent nearly two hours addressing the meeting and answering their questions.

A chairman-to-replace John White of Texas will be elected by the Democratic National Committee at its meeting in late February. Manatt, the current Democratic finance chairman, is considered the frontrunner in the race, which the other three contenders entered only recently.

Manatt and the others agreed that delegate selection rules should be changed to permit governors, mayors, members of Congress and other elected officials to attend and vote at conventions.

Wanted in Memphis: Flashers to join in study of problem

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Dr. William Murphy needs a few good men — all of them flashers.

Murphy, a clinical psychologist at the University of Tennessee Center for the Health Sciences, and four other researchers have a $176,000 federal grant to study the problems of the exhibitionist.

"We want people out there who are exposing themselves to know that we exist," Murphy said Thursday. "It's free of charge and fully confidential."

Murphy said the study, for which he needs about 40 volunteers, will try to identify common characteristics in exhibitionists as well as successful methods of treatment.

So far there don't seem to be any common bonds among those men with the problem, he said. Some flash to children, some to women. Some may be releasing anger, others trying to express masculinity.

There's one overriding reason these individuals need treatment, Murphy said. Some move on to more serious sexual offenses.

"Most of them don't have any violent tendencies, but some do go on to rape and molesting children," he said. "Perhaps 5 percent go on to rape."

Surprisingly, Murphy said, 60 to 70 percent of exhibitionists have normal sexual outlets. But some 30 to 40 percent either have difficulty meeting or talking to women or have a desire to release anger or prove their sexual prowess.

There is a big difference in the male exhibitionist and a female stripper, Murphy said. He said there's no such thing as a female exhibitionist.

"The majority of women that strip on stage or pose nude don't get any sexual satisfaction," said Murphy. "It's a job, for the majority."

Exhibitionists are not all dirty old men in trenchcoats as the stereotype suggests.

"We've seen executives and we've seen blue-collar workers" at the clinic, he said. "We've had people who are unemployed, we've seen Ph.D.'s. It's hard for me to think of any level of people we haven't seen."

Murphy said one of the biggest goals of his research is to get the sex offenders into the clinic.

"The majority of exhibitionists realize that what they're doing is wrong and if they continue doing it they're going to cause problems for themselves or their families. It's the embarrassment of coming to someone that keeps them away."

Murphy said no one will be turned over to the police and there is no reason to fear disclosure.

"We're not trying to protect sex offenders but prevent people from being offended," he said.

Those who volunteer for the program will be subjected to about two days of tests, he said. There are personality and sexual questionnaires, including a study of the man's relationship with women.

'Hulk' was a ringer, park owner says

By United Press International

"HULK" WAS RINGER

Owners of a safari zoo outside San Juan are pushing a $5 million suit against the star of "The Incredible Hulk," Lou Ferrigno and his studio for sending them a ringer instead of the real green monster. Animal World, Inc. claims in the suit is contracted with Universal Studios, Ferrigno and a local TV station to have the Hulk appear at a special Jan. 6 performance at the park. Instead of Ferrigno, his double stuntman showed up and park officials claim they were stuck with thousands of tickets. Nobody asked the gorillas what they thought.

CHARLIE SKIING ALONE?

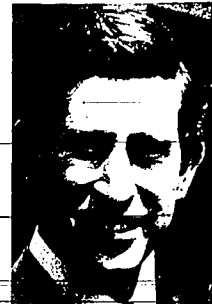

Britain's Prince Charles is in Switzerland for his annual ski vacation, but disappointed the British press by not taking Lady Diana Spencer along. The 19-year-old Lady Diana, the latest candidate for royal bride, was seen buying a ski suit last week. But she denied she was headed for the Alps, telling reporters that Charles needed a rest and her presence would only attract nosy newshounds.

MOON OVER POTOMAC?

Former New Orleans Mayor Moon Landrieu, who just finished a term as secretary of Housing and Urban Development, says he is considering a run for president in 1984. "I recognize that if I decide to run for the

HEAVENLY BODY FOR REV

An asteroid has been named in honor of the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of the University of Notre Dame. The "Hesburgh" is five to 10 miles in diameter and located about halfway between Mars and Jupiter. The asteroid was discovered by a team of astronomers at Indiana University in Bloomington headed by Frank K. Edmondson. He proposed the name to the International Astronomical Union and its Minor Planet Center went along, noting that during Hesburgh's 12 years on the National Science Board, "he played a very important role in the founding of both the Kitt Peak National Observatory and the Cerro Tololo Inter-American Observatory."

QUEEN NOOR EXPECTING

King Hussein of Jordan and his American-born wife Noor say they are expecting their second child in June. Queen Noor, formerly Lisa Halaby, is the daughter of former Pan American President Najeeb E. Halaby. The 29-year-old Queen and the 46-year-old Jordanian monarch had their first child last year — Prince Hamzah.

Users of treated pot could face long trip

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (UPI) — A Michigan drug dealer has come up with a processing trick that makes his marijuana out of this world — and could leave smokers in the same state.

Police said Friday one drug dealer in Calhoun County apparently is treating marijuana with stolen embalming fluid to give it added strength. The treated marijuana can cause dizziness, blindness and severe respiratory problems.

The Battle Creek Police Department and Calhoun County Sheriff's Department said several persons have become ill from smoking the tainted marijuana, including some who required hospitalization.

The source of the contamination was believed to be a number of cases of embalming fluid stolen from a Battle Creek funeral home.

"It's rather new to me," a police spokesman said, "but what they are doing is spraying it. The reasoning for it is that this would give you a higher high."

"We know four or five people got violently sick. The primary hazard is to the central nervous system. It could cause blindness or respiratory convulsions," he said.

The gas produced by smoking embalming fluid also may produce dizziness and vomiting. It affects the central nervous system and harms the mucous membrane in the throat and lungs, officials said.

When they meet the pet 'shrink'

People laugh, then ask questions

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The owner of an Old English sheepdog which would dash around in panic during thunderstorms felt silly about taking her pet to an animal shrink — until she was trapped with the frantic dog in her small sports car during a downpour.

Dr. Victoria Voith, an animal behaviorist who cured the sheepdog's phobia, said Friday she is accustomed to jokes about her unusual profession.

"Invariably, when I meet a group of people who laugh at the idea, either at a cocktail party or a veterinary conference, after two or three hours of talking with them they start asking me about behavior problems of their own animals," she said.

If a cherished family dog snaps and growls without apparent reason or tears up the house when left alone, or if the family cat can't find its way to the litter box, Dr. Voith says it makes more sense to correct the problem than to put the animal to sleep.

"I look for neurological correlations or physiological problems that might be causing the animal's behavior problems," Dr. Voith said. An early experience also can trigger erratic actions, she said.

"Sometimes I use drug therapy, changes of environment or behavior modification techniques to treat a behavior problem," said Dr. Voith, director of the University of Pennsylvania's Animal Behavior Clinic.

To cure the sheepdog of its ad dashes, Dr. Voith recommended that the owner play tape recordings of thunderstorms of gradually increasing intensity, while rewarding the animal for calm behavior.

The reward, Dr. Voith said, must be something for which the animal will sell its soul. The sheepdog received its favorite treat, Swiss chocolate.

Clients are usually referred to the Leavitt Clinic by their veterinarians. The cost is $25 an Ex-Panther a Mormon?

Eldridge Cleaver exploring possibility with church officials

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Former Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver is exploring the possibility of becoming a Mormon, church officials say.

They said Thursday that Cleaver has received lessons in the Mormon religion from missionaries in Menlo Park, Calif., and has talked privately with Elder Paul Dunn, a member of the church's leadership body — the Quorum of the Seventy.

Dunn said he had met with Cleaver to discuss church teachings and membership. But the church leader said Cleaver would have to make his own statements about his feelings regarding the Mormons.

Cleaver could not be reached for comment.

It was only recently that the Mormon Church granted full membership status to blacks by allowing them to hold the priesthood, which is given to all worthy males at the age of 12.

Cleaver spent several years in prison on drug and assault charges. While in prison he wrote the book "Soul on Ice."

When he was released, he became "minister of information" for the Panthers and was involved in a shootout with the Oakland police on April 6, 1968, during which Panther founder Bobby Hutton was killed.

Cleaver was charged with attempted murder and assault but fled the country and lived as a fugitive in Cuba, Algeria and France.

He voluntarily returned to the United States in 1975, saying the political climate had changed and he had been converted to religion.

A dollar a soul

NEW YORK (UPI) — A prominent

Lutheran theologian has compared the fund-raising techniques of members of the "electronic church" to that of the medieval indulgence sellers that sparked the Protestant Reformation.

The Rev. Richard-John Neuhaus said the appeals for money by the electronic preachers were similar to those used in the 16th century and encourage a "black-market business" rejected by Martin Luther and other Reformers.

"One television program I heard," Neuhaus said, "claimed a soul would be saved for every dollar sent in."

First woman minister in Lutheran church has all her credentials

By MARIANNE BERNHARD
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Beth Platz, who became the first woman minister in the Lutheran church in America 10 years ago, has all the credentials of her male colleagues and more.

Along with the diplomas and certificates, the 40-year-old University of Maryland campus minister has a box of hate mail.

Three are crinkly, yellowed letters and fresh crisp ones all bearing similar messages: that she's "a disgrace to the church," an "instrument of the anti-christ," that her "defiance" of the Lord will send her straight to hell.

But now that her female Lutheran colleagues number about 200, the letters only trickle in. And by far, most of the people she hears from are supportive.

Unlike some of her peers, Platz never campaigned for ordination. Although she'd completed Lutheran seminary training in 1965, she was content to work as a lay assistant with the university campus ministry. However, after five years of "doing everything I do now except preach and administer the sacraments," Platz said she felt a call to the ministry.

A short time later — the day after the Lutheran church in America voted to ordain women, Platz's bishop called to tell her she was fully qualified to be a minister and invited her to apply.

Four months later, before a crowd of 1,200 and a large contingent of media representatives, Platz was ordained.

Today, she is an upbeat minister who is popular with students for her sense of humor and her knack for applying the gospel to daily life. She quotes "Peanuts" comic-strip characters as freely as she does the Bible in her sermons.

"I find her sermons very powerful," said Terry Scott, a 22-year-old university senior. "She draws theology into your everyday life, and not many people do that anymore. Her ministry has affected me a great deal."

Scott met Platz through the university's counseling program. After attending services and other religious functions, he converted from Methodism to the Lutheran faith.

After counseling troubled students for more than 15 years, Platz has become privy to their needs, hopes and fears.

A decade ago, she said, students were concerned with social issues — civil rights, the Vietnam War and abortion. Today, she said, their concern is survival. "How can I get a good job?"

"Some students are confused over what they see as two competing value systems, others have no value systems at all — which is in itself a value system."

A student faculty said, "I don't believe common value systems among the young are gone ... and that is scary," Platz said.

She believes this search for values has contributed to the rising popularity of "very judgmental and exclusive" fundamentalist groups afloat on campuses, as well as Nazi and Ku Klux Klan groups there.

"People who join the Klan and the Nazis," said Platz, "are looking for security. They see these groups with common beliefs and end up retreating and becoming rigid."

But Platz believes that today's young people also are rebelling more against peer pressure "that dictates that they must be sexually active."

For the first time in her counseling career, Platz said, she is also encountering students who are questioning what it is to be a man or a woman. "Before, the young had strict role models to follow and never had to contemplate what it meant to be a man or a woman," she said.

Platz has fun challenging the sex-role stereotypes of her audiences. "Sometimes," she said, "I'll tell them, 'I bet I fooled you. I don't wear combat boots and I don't talk out of the side of my mouth.'"

Platz's sense of humor is reflected in her office, which is decorated with cartoons and overflowing with frogs. Carved frogs, stuffed frogs, glass frogs and even a monstrous blow-up frog spill from Platz's office into her outer office. The frogs are gifts from students over the years who've heard her sermon on the meaning of Christianity.

"A good Christian," said Platz, "should like kissing frogs. The job of the Christian is to love the unlovely, the ignored, which, by the way, is very appropriate in campus life where we can get caught up in the lovely."

Frogs are now the motif of Platz's ministry.

shows that as a church struggles, so do its members; its youth and its pastor.

It presents in a realistic, biblical and sometimes humorous fashion, a practical answers for all involved.

Divinity student scorns abuse stories

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Reports that U.S. hostages in Iran were physically and mentally abused are being "blown out of proportion and sensationalized" by the media, claims a Harvard Divinity School student who visited Tehran twice last year.

The Rev. Charles Kimball was one of several Americans allowed to fly to Tehran while the Americans were held captive. He never met with the hostages, but said Thursday that reports from those who did were inconsistent "with the horror stories now emerging."

"I'm not saying some of these things didn't happen," Kimball said about reports of beatings, Russian roulette and solitary confinement.

"But I don't think they happened to everyone as we're led to believe in the media."

Carters begin unpacking, sorting out lives

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — In between unpacking cartons, Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter went logging in a field behind their home Friday.

On his first full day at home since leaving office, the former president put on dungarees and a blue jacket bearing the presidential seal and got to work putting his new office in his mother's house in order.

The Carters toured the two-story, four-bedroom brick house that the president's father built in 1950. They checked the downstairs room that will serve as his office and the small room upstairs that will be his office.

As they did so, their aides unloaded boxes from a station wagon backed up to the front door. A semi-truck and taller pulled up and unloaded a small building that will serve as a Secret Service guardhouse in front.

Mrs. Carter said it felt good to be home, but added, "It's going to feel better when I get my house straightened."

She laughed and denied that she planned to go into politics herself.

"No, I'm not going to do that," she said. "Only if there was something that really interested me and running for office was the only way to do it, that's what I would do."

The president also has a suite of offices on the 12th floor of the new federal office building in Atlanta.

Spokesman Jody Powell said the Carters plan to spend two or three days a week in Atlanta, staying in a hotel suite rather than taking an apartment or house.

Carter said his middle son, Chip, would help him take care of private business, including the management of his farms.

The Carters will leave Tuesday for a long vacation at Caneel Bay on St. John Island in the Virgin Islands.

Another child's body found in Atlanta, but no new clues

ATLANTA (UPI) — The body of a young black boy was found Friday about 25 miles southeast of Atlanta, triggering an intensive search by officers who have been trying for months to solve the disappearance of 16 Atlanta black children.

Thirteen of the children have been found slain and the three others are officially listed as missing.

It was not immediately determined whether the body found Friday was one of the missing, but the body was believed to be that of a 13 or 14 year old black male — about the same age as the missing children.

The remains were moved to the Rockdale County Hospital for examination by two forensic experts from the state Crime Laboratory.

Swarms of FBI, State Bureau of Investigation agents, members of an Atlanta special police task force and State Crime Laboratory experts converged on the area. Roadblocks were set up and reporters and sightseers were kept out at a distance.

Rockdale County Sheriff's Assistant Wendell Whitmore said police discovered the body after receiving a call from a motorist, identified as Mike Abbott, saying he thought he'd seen a body lying about 10 yards off Sigman Road, a dead-end street.

Whitmore declined to discuss the condition of the body but said it apparently had been in the area for only a short time. Whitmore said he drove along the road about midnight Thursday and saw nothing suspicious.

The children still unaccounted for include Jeffrey L. Mathis, 11; Darron Glass, 10; and Lubie Geter, 14. Mathis disappeared last March, Glass in September and Geter last December.

"At this time, we're not able to determine whether it was Geter, the last reported missing child, or possibly one not yet reported," Whitmore said. But he said the clothes on the body did not match those worn by Geter when he was last seen.

Residents said they received a letter from Rockdale authorities only a few days ago telling of an anonymous caller who said a child would be kidnapped. They said the warning had resulted in their keeping a closer watch on their children.

All of the children who have disappeared have been black, only two were females and they ranged in age from 8 to 15 years.

In these cases where cause-of-death of the victim has been established, the children have been either asphyxiated, strangled or stabbed.

Influenza kills 2,000 in 2 weeks

ATLANTA (UPI) — Deaths from influenza and pneumonia topped the 1,000 mark for the second consecutive week with flu outbreaks reported in 37 states, the national Center for Disease Control said Friday.

The impact of the respiratory illness was reflected by school closings and high absentee rates in several states.

In central Florida, a Winter Park hospital reported its beds were filled with influenza patients, with a waiting list for admission.

The number of deaths in 121 major U.S. cities attributed to the current wave of influenza was above the so-called "epidemic threshold" for the sixth consecutive week.

Deaths from influenza and pneumonia for the week ended Jan. 17 totaled 1,080, and for the preceding week, the figure was 1,050.

Spokesmen for Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, the Twin Falls Clinic and Mindoka Memorial Hospital in Rupert report an average or slightly above average number of flu patients.

However, Cassia County Memorial Hospital in Burley has a unusually high number of flu victims, particularly those suffering from respiratory problems. Emergency room spokesmen also said an unusually high number of young adults and children were affected.

St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome has had "a surge of utilization in the last two weeks, a fourth of which can be attributed to the flu or related symptoms," St. Benedict's Administrator Bob Campbell reported Friday.

However, Campbell said this involves no more than 9 patients.

Spokesmen for Gooding County Memorial, Blaine County and Moritz Community hospitals all said no flu patients were admitted to their hospitals during the last two weeks.

Although no figures were available on the number of fatalities directly attributable to the influenza epidemics and outbreaks in the 37 states, CDC flu researcher Dr. Timothy Nolan said "certainly there are significant amounts of influenza activity."

He declined to use the word "epidemic" because, he said, "some people are frightened by that word."

But Tennessee health authorities said it was the worst flu epidemic in six years, with 12,397 cases reported last week alone. Rhode Island health official Robert Mullan estimated 100,000 of the state's 947,000 residents will get sick with the flu before the winter ends.

School officials in Nebraska reported three school systems closed because of influenza outbreaks.

The CDC said most of the flu was being caused by a comparatively new virus strain, A-Bangkok. Because of changes in its genetic structure, many people resistant to previous types of the ailment have little natural immunity to the new strain. A protective vaccine is available but it was reported in short supply.

New York City and 13 states were listed by the CDC as having widespread influenza outbreaks. Those states include Maine, Massachusetts, New York, Virginia, North Carolina, Indiana, Minnesota, Arkansas, Colorado, North Dakota, Utah, Alaska and Oregon.

The CDC said 24 other states reported regional outbreaks. They were Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont, New Jersey, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, Tennessee, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin, Louisiana, Texas, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Montana, South Dakota, California, Nevada, and Idaho. Other states had sporadic or no cases.

Which siamese twin to save?

Mother ready for choice

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — A prayerful teen-age mother, anxious to see her Siamese twin daughters for the first time, said Friday she was prepared to choose between the two if the lives of both could not be saved.

Doctors have said the girls can expect little more than a "circus freak" existence if they remain joined, but have doubts both will survive if surgery is undertaken to separate them.

"I have prayed about this thing," said 18-year-old Katherine Self. "If there is no way they can save both of them, I will choose."

"But I want them both. If I had to choose — the only thing I can see to do is pick the healthier one. People may think I am awful — but this seems to me to be the thing to do."

The twins were born Sunday at a Knoxville hospital and were immediately transferred to Vanderbilt University Hospital in Nashville. Mrs. Self, who stayed in Knoxville after the birth, was preparing to join her husband, Roger, 19, a recent high school graduate, in Nashville.

The twins, Marie Lynn and Samantha Dawn, are joined from the top of the sternum to the navel. They have been hooked to respirators since birth are reported in guarded condition. "Even the doctors say they can't live a normal life any other way," Mrs. Self said, referring to the planned surgery. She said her husband had stressed that doctors had "led him to believe they can save both of them."

"The doctors haven't given us what the odds are," she said. "They haven't told us what the chances are."

She said she was not even thinking about the possibility that both twins might die.

The babies, which have a combined weight of just over 11 pounds, were delivered by Caesarean section. Doctors say they have separate hearts, kidneys, stomachs and reproductive organs but share a liver and numerous blood connections.

The parents have no insurance and little money. Mrs. Self said donations by Maryville churches and friends of the family have helped some with the expenses.

"If it wasn't for the community, I guess we wouldn't get to see them," she said.

Judge rules deaths equal punishment

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (UPI) — An unmarried welfare mother who pleaded guilty to child neglect in the fire deaths of 11 of her children has suffered enough, the judge and prosecutor in the case said.

"Whatever else might be said about you, you are a mother," said St. Clair County Associate Judge Kenneth Juhan in placing Virginia A. Williams on one year's probation.

"The court is not unkindful that any parent's loss of one child might be unbearable; multiplied by 11, it is more than unbearable."

Miss Williams, who is 28 and three months pregnant, was riding in a car in St. Louis with a friend the night of Jan. 11 when a fire at her East St. Louis home killed all but one of her 12 children.

"There's nothing I want to say, except I'm glad I'm not going to have to spend any time in prison," Miss Williams said Thursday after entering a negotiated plea of guilty to the charge of child neglect.

Miss Williams "could" have been sentenced to 364 days in jail and fined $1,000.

Kim wins reprieve from death

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — President Chun Doo Hwan, under fire abroad for alleged human rights abuses by his military regime, Friday commuted the death sentence of dissident Kim Dae Jung. Sources said Chun would lift martial law Saturday.

The United States welcomed the decision to reduce Kim's sentence. State Department spokesman William Dyess said, "We believe it will contribute positively to relations between South Korea and the United States."

But in London, the human rights group Amnesty International appealed to Chun to free Kim and alleged the opposition leader and 23 codefendants did not get a fair trial on charges of sedition stemming from last May's anti-government riots.

Official sources said the decision to lift 15 months of martial law at midnight tonight was made at the same cabinet meeting where the government apparently bowed to international pressure to save Kim from the hangman's noose.

Both moves came one day after Chun announced a state visit to the United States next week that will include a meeting with President Reagan Feb. 2.

Hours earlier, the nation's Supreme Court rejected Kim's final appeal of the death sentence handed down in September and the judges also upheld sentences of seven to 20 years for the other defendants.

The president's action reduced their sentences to five to 15 years.

The clemency order and lifting of martial law were seen as aimed to improve the atmosphere for Chun's visit to Washington and to blunt criticism by the United States and Japan of his regime's human rights record.

Both countries had appealed for clemency for Kim, who was a leading presidential candidate until his arrest.

Limited martial law has been in force since Oct. 27, 1979 following the assassination of President Park Chung Hee. The entire nation was placed under military rule May 17 during bloody anti-government demonstrations, centered in Kwangju.

Japanese file charges over dolphins case

TOKYO (UPI) — Public prosecutors Friday filed formal charges against a Canadian environmentalist for releasing about 150 dolphins destined for slaughter by Japanese fishermen.

Patrick Wall, 35, a member of the U.S.-based Greenpeace Foundation, could receive a maximum penalty of three years in jail or a fine of up to $1,000 if convicted.

The Scarborough, Ontario native was accused of "obstructing business" by releasing the doomed mammals from nets in a pre-dawn raid Dec. 23 at Futo, a fishing village on the Izu peninsula about 60 miles southwest of Tokyo.

The dolphins, estimated to be worth about $5,000, were part of about 650 rounded up by Futo fishermen for sale as food. Their release triggered angry reaction by the fishermen in addition to formal protests to authorities.

"We are going to kill you if you do it again," Jay McManus, an American friend, quoted the fishermen as telling Wall, whose home is in San Francisco.

"Pat doesn't feel he has done anything wrong," said McManus, the environmental group's U.S. representative.

Public prosecutors in Shizuoka province did not say when court hearings will begin. But McManus said Wall would be held in jail for about two months pending trial. There is no ball in Japan before trial.

Wall and McManus came to Japan in November on a Greenpeace mission to protest the killing of dolphins in Japan.

About 20,000 dolphins are caught and slaughtered in the country each year. Some are killed for food and other destroyed for intruding into fishing grounds and competing with fishermen for tuna and other fish.

Supertanker testing is disrupted

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (UPI) — The Coast Guard Friday arrested six persons believed to be members of the Greenpeace Foundation for interfering with the testing of the supertanker B.T. San Diego in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

A Coast Guard spokesman said several small inflatable boats, called Zodiacs, were seized in the arrest of the six protesters who invaded the restricted safety zone around the supertanker a few hours after the scheduled four-day test was underway.

The small boats forced the 288,000-ton, 1,080-foot long tanker to come to a halt.

A Canadian newsman who witnessed the arrest of one protester and a picture of his boat said it appeared the boats violating the safety zone came from the Canadian side while American Greenpeace members were abiding by the restrictions set by the Coast Guard.

Third worst since WWII

1980 inflation rate at 12.4%

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The rise in consumer prices accelerated slightly in December, making the 1980 inflation rate 12.4 percent — the third worst since World War II, the Labor Department reported Friday.

The 1979 inflation rate was 13.3 percent, the worst inflation year since 1946 when wartime economic controls were removed and prices rose 18.2 percent. Another bad inflation year was 1974, when the rate hit 12.2 percent.

In a separate report, the Labor Department said the spendable earnings — after taxes and inflation — of a typical urban blue-collar worker with a non-working wife and two children fell 0.6 percent in December, and declined 4.8 percent during 1980 as a whole.

That followed a 5.3 percent decline in this measure of workers' purchasing power during 1979.

The Consumer Price Index in December stood at 258.4 percent, which means goods and services that cost $100 in 1967 cost $258.40 in December. Put another way, a 1967 dollar was worth a little less than 39 cents.

Rising food, energy and home financing costs combined to push the monthly inflation rate in December to 1.1 percent, compared to percent increases during each of the previous three months.

A panel of economists told Congress' Joint Economic Committee Friday inflation will continue to accelerate in 1981, with food costs maintaining their rise and gasoline perhaps hitting $1.50 a gallon by year's end.

But members of the panel said the price index may not be the best measurement, since it exaggerates inflation during periods of rising mortgage interest rates.

James Clifton, director of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's anti-inflation program, called the CPI the "world's most politicized number" because cost-of-living increases in government benefits and thousands of wage contracts are indexed to it. Social Security raises will be geared to the CPI's rise in the first three months of this year.

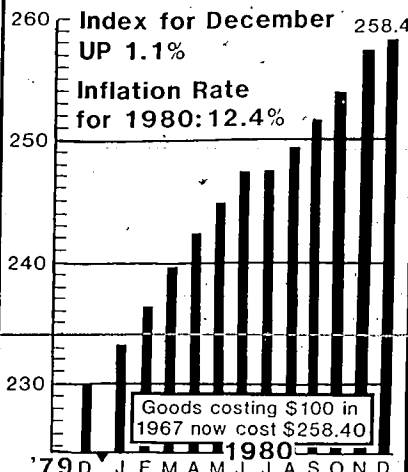

The index is supposed to measure the current cost of hundreds of items consumers buy. But it computes the cost of buying a home during a given month as though the entire purchase price and all interest charges were paid during that month. Actually, these usually are spread over many years.

Rising mortgage rates during the first part of 1980 pushed the CPI to an unrealistic 18 percent rate. Falling mortgage rates last summer caused it to give a zero inflation reading in July. Now, mortgage rates are again pushing the index up.

Before leaving office, President Carter urged the CPI be replaced by an experimental index the Labor Department already keeps, which uses rental values to approximate housing costs. That index shows inflation of only 0.8 percent for 1980 as a whole.

During 1980, the CPI showed, energy prices rose 18.1 percent; food and beverage prices, 10.1 percent; overall housing costs, 13.7 percent; medical care, 10 percent; entertainment, 9.6 percent; new car prices, 7.5 percent; used car prices, 16.3 percent.

California tops defense contractors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — California topped all other states as the biggest beneficiary of defense procurement contracts in fiscal 1980, capturing $13.8 billion or 20.9 percent of the total, the Defense Department said Friday.

And California's share of defense contracts grew faster than that of any other state's, going up from 19.6 percent in fiscal 1978.

Georgia, a former President Carter's home state — lost ground during those same years, dropping from 1.5 percent of the share to 1.3 percent though in dollar terms spending was higher.

New York State was the runner-up to California with $5.6 billion or 8.5 percent of the share of the $76.4 billion spent by the Pentagon for the purchase of new weapons in the fiscal year that began Oct. 1, 1979.

Texas ran a close third, garnering $5.3 billion, or 8.1 percent of the procurement pie.

States where defense contractors got more than $3 billion included Connecticut, Michigan, Missouri and Virginia. South Dakota received less than any other state — $16.9 million.

Nation's oil companies report unexpected dip in 4th quarter profits

By United Press International

Texaco Inc., the nation's third largest refiner, Friday reported an unexpected 6 percent drop in fourth-quarter profits.

Ashland Oil Co. had a 73 percent slump in first-quarter earnings because of reduced U.S. fuel demand.

Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), the No. 6 refiner announced a 9 percent rise in fourth-quarter profits in line with analysts' projections that domestic oil companies would show gains of about 10 percent.

In the fourth quarter Texaco earned $500.3 million, or $1.86 a share, down from $534 million, or $1.97 a share, a year earlier. Revenues rose 17 percent to $14.1 billion versus $12 billion.

Texaco attributed the profit decline to Saudi Arabia's latest $2-a-barrel oil price increase, retroactive to Nov. 1, and a special charge to cover natural gas deliveries to customers following a downward revision in its Louisiana gas reserves.

Analysts had predicted Texaco and the three other U.S. partners in the Arabian-American Oil Co. would have fourth-quarter gains of 15 to 20 percent because of their access to Saudi Arabia's relatively low-priced oil. Saudi crude remained OPEC's cheapest oil even after the retroactive price move.

Among the other Aramco partners, Mobil Thursday reported its fourth-quarter earnings rose only 5 percent.

Exxon Corp. and Standard Oil Co. of California have not yet announced their results.

Texaco's 1980 operating earnings were up 22 percent to $2.2 billion, or $8.31 a share, from $1.8 billion, or $6.48 a share, in 1979. An extraordinary gain of $402.3 million from the sale of its stake in Belridge Oil Co. boosted Texaco's 1980 net profits to $2.6 billion, or $9.79 a share. Revenues rose to $32.5 billion versus $39.1 billion.

Texaco's 1980 petroleum profits averaged 34 cents a gallon worldwide.

Ashland, the 17th largest U.S. refiner, reported earnings for its first quarter ended Dec. 31 fell to $20.2 million, or 55 cents a share, on revenues of $2.07 billion from $7.9 million, or $2.44 a share, on revenues of $2.03 billion a year earlier.

Indiana Standard had a fourth-quarter profit of $402.2 million, or $1.38 a share, up from $38.7 million, or $1.23 a share. Revenues rose to $7.7 billion from $6.1 billion.

In 1980 Indiana Standard earned $1.9 billion, or $6.54 a share, up 27 percent from $1.5 billion, or $5.12 a share, in 1979. Revenues advanced to $27.8 billion from $20.2 billion.

Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), the 13th largest refiner, Thursday reported a 5.4 percent gain in fourth-quarter profits and Getty Oil Co., No. 19, a 16 percent gain.

Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), the 13th largest refiner, Thursday reported a 5.4 percent gain in fourth-quarter profits and Getty Oil Co., No. 19, a 16 percent gain.

Severe winter weather keys oil stock decline

NEW YORK (UPI) — The severe winter weather caused the nation's heating oil stocks to drop by 9.6 million barrels last week — the biggest decline so far this season, the American Petroleum Institute says.

Nevertheless, U.S. inventories of distillate, used primarily for home-heating oil, remain within the Energy Department's average range for this time of year.

Analysts said it is normal for distillate stocks to plunge by as much as 10 million or 12 million barrels during an exceptionally cold week.

In the week ended Jan. 16, U.S. distillate supplies fell to 188.2 million barrels from 197.8 million barrels, the previous week and were well below the 202 million barrels on hand last year, the API said Thursday.

Distillate production held steady last week at 3 million barrels, unchanged from the prior week and year-ago output, according to the oil industry trade association.

Gasoline stocks rose last week to 269.3 million barrels from 268.5 million barrels the week before and stood more than 20 million barrels ahead of the 248.7 million barrels in storage a year earlier.

The increase in gasoline supplies occurred despite a decline in use to 6.3 million barrels a day last week vs. 6.6 million barrels daily the previous week and 7.1 million barrels a day last year, the API said.

Crude oil inventories went down only slightly last week to 362.6 million barrels from 364.7 million barrels the prior week and were substantially higher than the 349.3-million-barrel level recorded a year ago.

Crude oil imports climbed sharply to 5.9 million barrels a day last week from 5.5 million barrels a day the week before, but trailed the year-earlier rate of 6.4 million barrels a day reaching U.S. shores, the API said.

U.S. refiners operated at 72.1 percent of capacity last week, down from 72.6 percent a week earlier and 82.4 percent a year ago.

U.S. files suit over oil spill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter administration has quietly sued a private Mexican oil-drilling firm for damages in the world's worst oil spill — the 1979 blowout in the Gulf of Mexico, officials disclosed Friday.

Filing of the suit Jan. 16 against the Mexican firm known as Pemargo followed months of discussions between the Justice and State departments over whether the government should sue a Mexican company and risk hurting U.S.-Mexican relations.

Although the suit was one of the last acts of Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti, it was filed without fanfare in U.S. District Court in Houston, John Wilson, a Justice Department spokesman, said the suit was not publicized earlier because of an internal slip-up.

The suit stems from the June 3, 1979, blowout of the Ixtoc I drilling platform, operated by two Mexican companies, in the Gulf of Mexico.

The offshore well spouted more than 100 million gallons of oil, damaging the Texas coast and threatening Louisiana, and leaving a slick over fishing waters before it was controlled some three months later.

Last spring, the Justice Department sued Sedco Inc., the Dallas company that supplied the drilling platform, for $6 million plus unspecified additional damages for the blowout.

Sedco promptly took steps to draw Pemex, the Mexican national oil company, and Pemargo, hired to operate the drilling rig, into court as defendants in claims totaling $375 million. The Justice Department did not oppose Sedco's move, which also affected claims by fishermen, resort owners and the state of Texas.

Wilson said no decision has been made on whether to sue Pemex, which hired Pemargo to operate the drilling rig.

The Pemargo suit was filed "to ensure the fullest protection of the rights of the United States government," Wilson said.

The suit charged the "oil well blowout, gusher, spill and discharge were caused by the negligence and other faults of Pemargo and its officers, agents and employees, jointly with Sedco."

Fire safety ordinance alarms Ketchum residents

By STEVE LATAROP
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Numerous objections were voiced by Ketchum residents Thursday over an ordinance requiring fire alarm systems throughout the city.

Heard by the Ketchum City Council, the attacks on the ordinance focused on three points: The likelihood of false alarms, the inadequacy of the city's dispatching system, and the cost of the alarm systems.

The ordinance hearing in City Hall was held to hear residents' suggestions on possible revisions before the measure goes into effect Dec. 31. It requires all buildings in the commercial core of Ketchum to be equipped with smoke-detector alarm systems, and to connect them to a continuously monitored central dispatching system. In addition, new non-residential buildings over 5,000 square feet, and all buildings over 10,000 square feet must have the continuously monitored systems. This applies even to buildings outside the commercial core.

The ordinance, which goes into effect Dec. 31, 1981, requires all Ketchum residential buildings to install smoke-detector alarm systems, but does not require these to have the expensive connection to the central dispatcher.

Opening Thursday's hearing, Ketchum Fire Chief William McCullough explained the purpose of the ordinance to about 30 people. McCullough said, "Smoke detectors give better fire protection without expanding the fire department. Everything will be reported while it is a really small fire."

Ted Phillips, a representative of the Simplex Fire Alarm Co., told the gathering that the cost of the continuously monitored alarms would start at $1,702, not including installation. "You can go from that price on up as far as you can go," Phillips said. Phillips said he could not estimate installation cost, because the amount of work required varied from system to system.

Phillips said the cost of residential smoke-detector alarms, which do not connect to the dispatching system, would be $32.70 each. He said installation cost for these would be low.

Ketchum businessman Paul

Bosted objected to the ordinance. Bosted said he owns a business in a building which already has the kind of alarm system required by the ordinance. He described two false alarms he had experienced. "It goes for 10 minutes of absolutely nerve-shattering panic-producing clamor. To have this is not only counter-productive and excessively expensive, but also potentially dangerous."

William Miller, a private consultant to fire departments, conceded the kind of system called for in the Police suspect teen linked to jewelry thefts

TWIN FALLS — Police detained Friday a youth in their custody allegedly involved in burglaries at two Twin Falls jewelry stores.

Twin Falls Police Chief Tim Qualls said a 17-year-old male arrested Thursday in connection with the Dec. 31 burglary of Jensen's Jewelers allegedly is linked to the Wednesday burglary of Herrett's Manufacturing Jewelers.

Friday's edition of The Times-News inaccurately reported the Herrett's burglary occurred Thursday.

Qualls said Friday police have recovered part of the estimated $18,000 worth of jewelry taken from Herrett's, 1220 Kimberly Road. Thursday police recovered some of the jewelry taken from Jensen's, 109 Main Ave. E. That burglary resulted in the loss of jewelry valued at about $3,800.

Entry to both buildings was achieved by kicking in front doors, Qualls said. Both burglaries occurred late at night.

Qualls made no comment Friday on whether another man arrested in connection with the Jensen's burglary has been connected to the Herrett's case. John Meyers, 18, of Twin Falls, was arrested Thursday for allegedly serving as an accessory in the Jensen's incident.

Decision pending on clinic funding

SEATTLE — A decision on funding for Idaho's five rural health clinics is still pending from the U.S. Public Health Service's regional office.

Patricia Walker, director of grants management, said the four applicants for $1.2 million in federal rural health funds were reviewed Thursday. A regional recommendation will be issued in two to three weeks and the final decision should be made by March, she said.

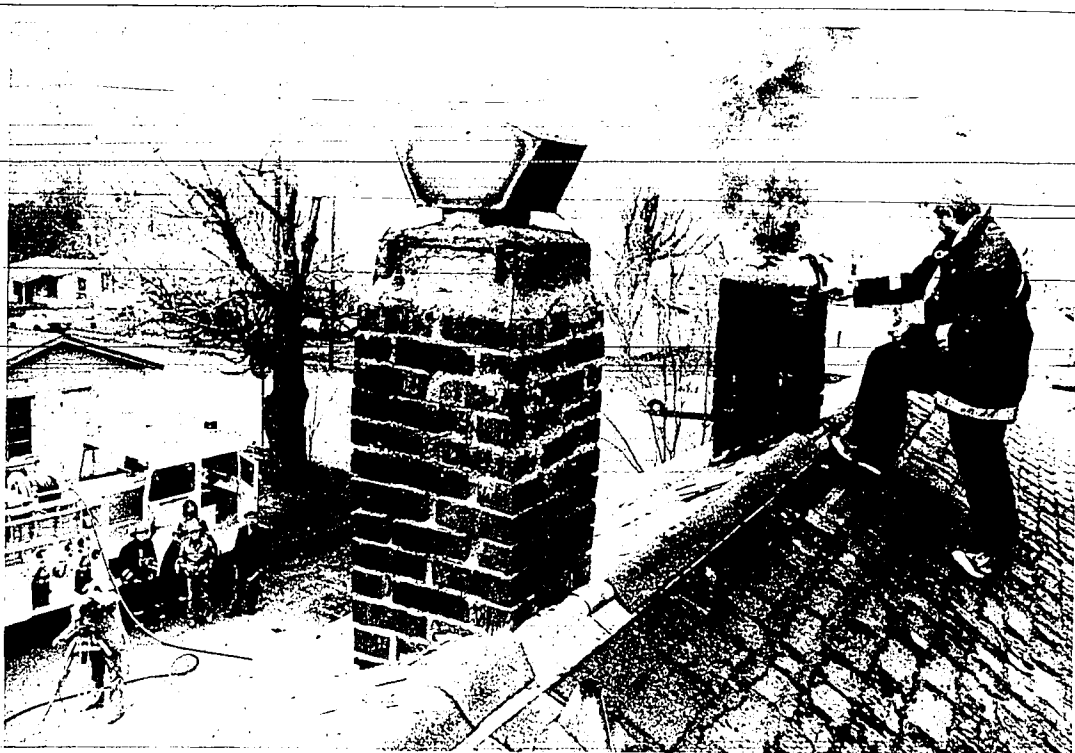

Clinics in Twin Falls, Burley, Payette, Caldwell and Blackfoot are presently run by the Idaho Migrant Clinic.

SCCAA to meet

TWIN FALLS — The County Council of the South Central Community Action Agency will meet Monday at 2 p.m.

Randy Robinson of Idaho Legal Aid Services, Inc. will speak at the meeting, scheduled for the SCCAA office at 129 Second St. E. Robinson will discuss small claims courts and consumers' rights and responsibilities.

Persons who wish to attend and need child care or transportation should contact Janice Stone at the SCCAA office, 733-9351.

Fire on film

Twin Falls Fire Inspector Gary Earl ignited combustible materials in a chimney Friday as KMTV cameraman Tom Frank filmed the smoky result and other firemen watched. The chimney, located at 171 Blue Lakes Blvd. S., was used as part of a public service announcement warning against dirty or unsafe chimneys connected to fireplaces or wood stoves.

Gooding continues to fight designated flood hazard area

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

GOODING — City leaders are continuing to challenge U.S. Army Corps of Engineers designated flood hazard area that covers 90 percent of Gooding.

Meanwhile, the corps released revised cost estimates this week for two floodwater diversions proposed east of Shoshone to relieve Little Wood River flooding.

"CH2M Engineers (Boise) have been doing a topography study of the area that seems to be supporting much of the Gooding people's objection to their 100-year flood designation," Wood River Resource Council Chairman Everett Ward said Friday.

The Gooding City Council is asking that the size of the town's floodplain, based on the worst possible flood in any 100-year period, be reduced.

A Corps of Engineers study was used by the Federal Emergency Management Administration in 1980 to designate floodplains in Gooding and Shoshone as a basis for determining federally subsidized flood insurance rates. Under this program, landowners in participating cities can receive the subsidized insurance to fulfill Farmers Home Administration and Veteran Administration loan requirements.

Floodplains covering about 90 percent of both Gooding and Shoshone were outlined in the study. This has forced both towns to greatly increase their flood hazard zones while requiring stiffer building standards, or be excluded from the federal subsidy program.

For example, a low-income senior citizens project under construction in Gooding is being built on a four-foot-high foundation, even though the site is in more than a mile from the Little Wood River in the southern part of the city.

Members of the Gooding City Council and the Gooding Chamber of Commerce have constantly challenged this wide flood hazard area. At a WRRRA meeting Tuesday, the groups were informed that preliminary findings by CH2M may offer support in their challenge. CH2M is doing the topography study for the emergency management administration.

"CH2M seems to agree with the Corps about the amount of water that could come down in a flood, but that it would go slower than the Corps says because of a spreading effect, significantly reducing the amount of area flooded," Ward said.

CH2M spokesmen have refused to make any hard statements to this effect, however, because they say their topography study is far from conclusive.

Because of this, CH2M is seeking additional money from the emergency management administration to conduct a more accurate floodplain study. To date, however, no money has been appropriated for additional study.

Since last summer, when Gooding and Shoshone rezoned for larger floodplains in accordance with a federal order, WRRRA members have been pursuing a

New commissioner works fast

Hempleman makes presence felt after just two minutes

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Marvin Hempleman, Twin Falls County's newest commissioner, wasted little time making his presence on the board felt.

Hempleman, a retired dairyman, had been on the job, his first venture into politics, only a few minutes when he put his support behind Commissioner Ann Cover for chairman of the commission over Commissioner Merl Leonard. Leonard had held the post for six years.

Hempleman said the move has not caused hard feelings and that the commission members have continued to function as a team.

"We all get along very well. We have no animosities toward anyone," he said. "It's being a very smooth operation, except for the first two minutes."

Although Hempleman's first few minutes on the job brought him considerable attention, he says he intends to spend most of the next few months quietly learning the intricacies of county operations.

Hempleman acknowledges he still has a considerable amount to learn about county operations, adding the experience is already changing his perceptions about government.

"No one on the outside can even realize what goes on in this office unless he's been there," Hempleman said.

So far, he has found the county commission to be much more involved in individual problems than he expected, Hempleman said.

As an example, he pointed to the number of indigent relief requests the board receives. Hempleman said 90 percent of his time on the commission has been spent dealing with people who request some form of aid.

Faced with frozen property tax revenues under the 1 percent initiative and double digit inflation, the commission is hard pressed to grant all the requests it receives, he said. Instead, the commission must review each indigency case with ever-increasing scrutiny, he said.

"We're just going to have to get calous to the point of saying 'no,'" he said. "People come in asking for large sums and leave with $5 and the board expects repayment. It's not a matter of not wanting to help. It's just that (the money) is not there."

Hempleman's impact on the operation of the county will be more greatly felt when the commissioners draw up the 1981-1982 budget. Uncertainties about what action the Legislature will take with the 1 percent initiative make it difficult to forecast how that budget will turn out. But Hempleman said he will place a high priority on maintaining present service levels in the sheriff's office, the judicial system and the assessor and clerk offices.

Hempleman also said he favors establishing a district attorney's office as a way to upgrade criminal prosecutions throughout several counties in this area. Such a move would require approval by the Legislature, he said.

"But, it looks to me, that way the county could afford to hire an experienced, capable lawyer to handle these extremely complicated criminal cases," he said, adding the county prosecutor's office would continue to handle routine cases.

Hempleman said he supports county zoning restrictions on development of agricultural land, including a prohibition of divisions below 20 acres. But the county must maintain some flexibility in allowing the division of some parcels that can not be used for agricultural pursuits, he said.

"For myself, that's a two-edge sword. I'm a landowner and I might want to divide up some of my land. On the other hand, there needs to be some protection," he said. "You've got to have guidelines and work for that. Twenty acres is a place to start."

Two burglaries in Hansen

HANSEN — Two Hansen firms were burglarized late Thursday night or early Friday morning.

About $75 in cash and some cigarettes were taken from Mill-Barr Automotive Co. between the firm's closure Thursday and the start of business Friday, owner Janice Miller said. Entry was gained by breaking a rear window.

Change was taken from the soft drink machine at L.W. Moore Warehouse during the same period, according to an employee, who said there was no sign the locked building was entered forcibly. A burglary in December also involved removal of money from the warehouse's beverage machine.

Police recover goods

TWIN FALLS — Police Wednesday arrested two men and recovered goods valued at $1,300 to $1,400 in connection with the Dec. 12 burglary of a Buhl firm.

Arrested on a charge of first degree burglary was Melvin L. Koch, 21. His brother, Jim L. Koch, 26, was charged with possessing stolen property. Twin Falls and Buhl police cooperated in the arrest of the men at their home at 226 Blue Lakes Blvd. S.

Sgt. Ron Supp of the Buhl Police Department said the arrests are related to the burglary of Buhl Cooperative Supply Inc.

A search of the Koch home revealed most of the tools, tires and other goods stolen, Supp said. The burglary resulted in loss of merchandise worth an estimated $1,600. The sergeant said goods valued at $1,300 to $1,400 were recovered.

Melvin Koch was lodged in Twin Falls County Jail in lieu of $1,500 bond. Jim Koch was released on his own recognizance.

Hitchhiker faces charges

TWIN FALLS — A male juvenile was arrested in Twin Falls Friday afternoon for allegedly threatening a motorist with a knife and robbing him.

According to the Gooding County Sheriff's Department, Robert L. Thomas, age unknown, of Boise, reported a hitchhiker he picked up on Interstate 84 near Mountain Home drove a knife on him near Boise. Thomas said the hitchhiker then robbed him of $25 and a knife.

The youth, whose age was not disclosed, demanded Thomas proceed to Twin Falls, a deputy said. In the area of North Fire Points, Thomas shifted his vehicle into "park," leaped out and fled to summon Twin Falls police by phone.

Police later placed the youth in the custody of the Gooding County Sheriff.

Nursing director resigns

TWIN FALLS — Diane Snodgrass, director of nursing at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, has resigned.

MVMH administrator William Burns attributed the resignation to a "difference in management philosophy" between him and her. Snodgrass had worked at the hospital for about a year.

Registered Nurse Jill Chestnut is serving as director of nursing, and the hospital is seeking applicants for the job, Burns said.

LA balloon lands in Buhl

BUHL — Susan Hayes thought there was something unusual about a balloon she found Friday in her yard.

Although it appeared to be nothing more than a helium-filled balloon that had cooled and fallen to earth, she had good reason to be curious.

The balloon traveled 625 air miles from Los Angeles before dropping to earth at her home, located about six miles west of Buhl.

"The balloon was still bouncing in the yard," she said. "It still has a little bit of helium in it."

The balloon, on which had been printed the words: "Ride Share Fair, L.A. Triflorim, Ride Sharing Works," had been launched during a Los Angeles promotion Thursday afternoon.

The promotion was staged by Computer Computer, a non-profit private corporation which specializes in arranging car pooling, mass transit, and other forms of transportation alternatives to the automobile.

Apparently Tom Grigo, a company employee, launched the balloon to see how far it would go. He identified it from 1,000 other balloons released that day by leaving off the string.

When told where the balloon ended up, company employees were flabbergasted.

"I can't believe it. I wish I'd been in it," services coordinator Lisa Kirk said. "I was just standing there and he decided to let it go, fill it as far as he could and we had no idea that we would get a response."

Sun Valley looking for bus ads

SUN VALLEY — Media and advertising agents will be asked to submit proposals for managing advertising on Sun Valley buses.

Members of the Ketchum-Sun Valley Transit Authority Board voted Friday to publish a request for proposals to handle advertising on the four buses the authority operates. Advertising has not previously appeared on the buses.

In deciding to publish, the board rejected a proposal that the advertising be managed by the Ketchum-Sun Valley Chamber of Commerce. The board acted after Pamela Morris, the editor of the Idaho Mountain Express, a local weekly, objected to the chamber as an ad manager. Morris said the chamber would be in competition with some of its own members, including the Express, if it sold transit ads.

In other business, the board voted to accept the bid of TMC Corporation to supply two new buses. The 30-passenger buses will be purchased at a cost of $107,071 each.

The federal government will pay 80 percent of the cost of the new buses under the terms of an Urban Mass Transit Act grant. According to Transit Authority staff member James Jaquet, the authority will use money already raised by local option taxes on liquor and hotel rooms to supply the balance.

McDermott: pay freeze cosmetic

BOISE (UPI) — Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, won a split decision Friday in a verbal slugfest over a bill she said would apply actual monetary effect to legislative refusal to accept pay raises this year.

Miss McDermott's trading charges of political grandstanding with her opponents, said the rejection of pay increases was "cosmetic" and that the Legislature's continuous appropriation ought to be reduced to reflect the savings.

Her bill to slash about $115,000 from the current yearly House-Senate appropriation of $1.8 million was sent to the printer on a narrow voice vote by the House State Affairs Committee.

A resolution to reject the pay raise was passed by the Senate last week and breezed through the House State Affairs Committee. The full House is expected to approve that resolution overwhelmingly.

"We should at least take a stiletto to ourselves when we're treating state agencies with a meat ax," Miss McDermott said. "Let's set a true example and not a cosmetic one."

"All we've done is make a few nice headlines."

Rep. Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, argued that the measure would require a supplemental appropriation for the Legislature if it stayed in session longer than usual or needed to convene for a special session.

"We're being accused of grandstanding, but I think this is a grandstanding measure," said Rep. Lyman Winchester, R-Kuna. "I think we should turn this down and get on to serious business."

"I'm very serious about this," Miss McDermott responded.

She then got support from a Republican, Rep. Linden Bateman of Idaho Falls, who said, "I don't think the Legislature is beyond reproach. Look at all the money we spend on meetings and sending people to conventions."

Flood

plan for two additional flood diversions on the Little Wood River system.

The biggest confusion about this Corps of Engineers proposal to exhaust floodwaters onto lava wasteland has centered around what the diversions would cost.

A cost estimate made for the proposed diversion system in 1976 called for about $2 million in both federal and local funding.

The new estimate, released this week, is about $3.5 million, according to Corps of Engineers Economist Bob Rook of Walla Walla, Wash.

"Of this amount, approximately $3.2 million would be federally funded with about $300,000 to be paid by local taxpayers," Rook said Friday. "Most of this local expense has to do with land values — acquisitions that probably can be completed for less than what we've estimated."

The largest proposed diversion would be located just east of Richfield, where floodwaters would be diverted to a 300-acre waste area three miles away. The second diversion would be a mile east of Shoshone where water would be diverted several miles through a concrete flume to 35 acres of porous lava rock.

"A large portion of the land to be acquired belongs to the BLM with some land belonging to the state," Ward said. "It's very possible that some sort of lease agreement could be drawn to use these lands, reducing the projected $200,000 cost estimate for land acquisition."

"After all, why should we purchase the land if we're only going to use it two or three weeks out of the year," Ward said.

Two other conditions must also be met to make the floodwater diversions possible. A short stretch of Idaho Power Co. power lines would probably have to be relocated and the Idaho Fish and Game Department would have to be reimbursed for fish loss through the diversions.

"We were told this week that the Fish and Game Department would accept a $20,000 payment to cover their losses over the lifetime of the project," Ward said. "Idaho Power also doesn't seem to object to a justified relocation of their lines, but of course all this is tentative at this time."

Alarm

ordinance produces false alarms. "There is a lot of false alarms, but they would far better go to the false alarms," he said.

Several citizens said the present city dispatching system, handled by an answering service, might be swamped by the new alarms. Bruce Exner, president of the city of Alpine Villa condominiums, said, "We have the car before the horse. We need to upgrade the response system."

Bosted said, "If we start multiplying these alarms by a factor of 100 or better, the system is going to collapse."

Bradford Rook, a bar owner, objected to the ordinance on the basis of cost. Citing high interest rates and the generally bad state of the economy, Rook said, "If I have to write a check tomorrow for $4,000, I can't do it."

Councilman Thomas Held replied to Rook, saying, "It really boogies my mind to see people passing the buck to somebody else for their responsibility."

At the conclusion of the hearing, Mayor Gerald Seifert said the council would take the testimony under advisement.

Seifert indicated, however, that the council felt special urgency in dealing with the residential part of the ordinance. Seifert told the group: "If you had properties that you were renting to the public at night, and they are staying at night, you better be looking at a system. Because the council is going to be moving on that."

GOODING COUNTY — An accident resulting in $800 damage to a vehicle driven by Virginia Ruth Crane, 28, of Gooding, occurred Jan. 15. Gooding police officer Randall White reports Crane was apparently driving through the Safeway parking lot in Gooding when she saw a car backing out of a parking space; she honked but the driver of the car Kervan R. Varvin, 31, of Gooding did not hear the horn. Damage to the Varin vehicle is $50.

ACCIDENT — Pat Bernstach of Shoshone reported to Gooding police that a car pulled out of the Lincoln inn parking lot and struck his car while he was driving on Main St. Jan. 15. Driver of the other vehicle is not known.

ACCIDENT — Aden Lauritzen of Gooding reported to Gooding police that his vehicle was struck by a unknown vehicle Jan. 15. Lauritzen was attempting to make a left hand turn when the other vehicle speeded up to pass, striking the Lauritzen vehicle on the left front fender. Neither Lauritzen nor his passenger Vena Lauritzen were injured.

ACCIDENT — Gooding City Police Officer, Sergeant Paul Brown reports an accident Jan. 15. Mark Darrin Crowe, 18, of Gooding was stopped on Idaho Street walking to turn onto Seventh Ave., W. His windows were frosted over so he opened the driver's door to see, oncoming traffic. Crowe apparently saw a vehicle driven by Jose Martin Elezupura, 40, of Gooding approaching on Seventh but misjudged the speed of the vehicle. Crowe pulled out, attempting to turn and collided with the Elezupura vehicle. Elezupura attempted to stop but could not avoid the collision.

Blaine I. Scott, 23, of Wendell was cited for inattention and his vehicle totaled as the result of an accident Jan. 17. Gooding Sheriff's Deputy James Jax reports Scott lost control of his vehicle on East Main in Wendell and veered off the road. The vehicle traveled through a fence and struck a calf doing $2,000 damage to the property of Guy Callan of Wendell.

ACCIDENT — A car owned by Charles-Albert Daniels of Buhl was damaged Jan. 17, while it was legally parked in Bliss. Gooding County Sheriff's Deputy Gayland Edwards reports a vehicle owned by Twin-V Ranches of Gooding backed out of a parking space and struck the Daniels vehicle; it then pulled forward and backed into Daniels car again.

LINCOLN COUNTY — Jeffery Alan Draper of Twin Falls was charged with Driving While Intoxicated following a one-car rollover on U.S. Highway 93 south of Shoshone. Idaho State Trooper Gaston reports Draper was traveling 70 mph Jan. 16, when he crossed the center line and at an upcoming car. Draper attempted to return to the South bound lane, swerved and the car skidded off the pavement. According to Trooper Gaston, the car rolled twice. Draper and his passenger Steven J. McDonald, 21, of Elido Nevada were treated at Magic Valley Hospital.

QUESTION...

I am receiving a Civil Service annuity based on my deceased husband's wages. If I remarry, will I lose this?

ANSWER...

If you are under age 60 and remarry, you will lose your Civil Service survivor annuity. If you are over age 60 and remarry, your annuity will continue.

If you lose your annuity because you remarried before you became 60, this annuity will be restored when your husband dies. It will also be restored if your marriage is dissolved by annulment or divorce.

What's what

Built-in mind barrier limits number memory

Memory experts say you have a built-in barrier in your mind that makes it difficult to remember more than seven digits in a number. Habit, maybe. You get used to handling nothing bigger than telephone numbers, so the mental machinery simply stops at seven.

Quick, which of the United States, besides Texas, was once an independent republic? Say Vermont. It was so declared in 1777 under the name of New Connecticut.

If you were to ask all the people who go to public libraries what they're doing there, only one out of 100 would say, "I'm a researcher." Or words to that effect.

Remember, you can't taste anything right in the center of your tongue.

HATE CHILDREN

Q: What's "misopedia"?
 A: A dislike of children. Comes to mind you never see an adult-only apartment house called Misopedia Manor. Odd.

If it's water you want to save, raise chickens. Twenty-five hens altogether only need a gallon a day. Just the opposite with cattle. One cow needs 25 gallons.

Q: What sort of living thing in all the animal kingdom has the largest brain in proportion to its size?
 A: The ant.

Claim is there has never been a tribe of people who didn't in some way decorate their bodies. With clothes, mostly. Or with stain. Or both. Or bones and stones.

PHILIPPINE MAHOGANY

If it's Philippine mahogany, it's one of seven different woods that look a lot like genuine mahogany.

Surgeons now at Ohio State University are stapling across the stomachs of obese patients in such a manner so as to create two compartments almost but not quite closed off from one another. This prevents the heavyweights from eating too much at one sitting. Report is they are losing about 15 pounds a month—down to the desired point. The operation is said to be easily reversible.

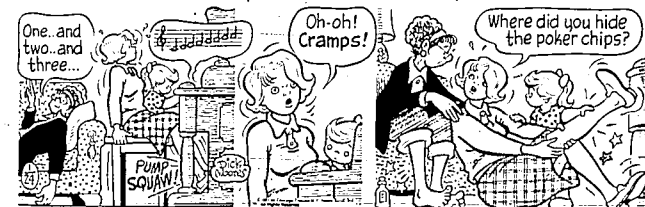

Said Christopher Morley: "There is only one success—to be able to live your life your own way."

If you want to get your goshes on real easy, my dear, first put plastic baggies over your shoes.

18-foot waves batter California coastline

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Heavy surf, with waves that peaked at 18 feet, battered the California coastline for the third straight day Friday from Oceanside to Rosarito, Mexico, where 50 families fled beach homes.

Waves dropped to a relatively low seven to nine feet after high tide Friday morning when the Pacific storm which spawned them moved inland.

A Marine on leave from Camp Pendleton, watching the breakers crash from atop Sunset Cliffs at San Diego's Ocean Beach, was suddenly swept away by a giant wave Thursday. No trace of him was found.

Gunnery Sgt. Peggy Cauley of the Camp Pendleton Public Information Office said positive identification of the missing Marine had not been established. Oceanside police tentatively identified him as Matthew Ray, hometown unknown.

In Rosarito, a tourist and fishing village south of the border city of Tijuana, Red Cross spokeswoman Margarita Jimenez said about 50 families totaling some 350 persons had to evacuate flooded shoredside homes in three "barrios" Thursday. About 60 people were being cared for in a Red Cross center and the rest were staying with relatives.

The waves tore off the T-section end of the ancient fishing pier at Imperial Beach, just south of San Diego. Water, mud and wave-hurled debris pounded beach condominiums.

Imperial Beach city employee Gregg Carver, who was on a city truck setting up barricades, said that after one big wave, a crippled man "came floating by... sitting on his butt with his crutch in the air, eyes bugging out and just riding it. He looked to be doing 15 miles per hour."

Carver and his partners rescued Joseph Schoeder, 77, of Lakeside, who, sputtered, "It must have been a helluva large wave. It just took me, and there was nothing I could do about it. It carried me back at least a half block... I think I lost my car keys."

Water two-feet deep rolled a couple of blocks inland, flooding restaurants and condominium units the length of the county. A piece of the Ocean Beach fishing pier in San Diego was also pounded away.

MX study: no advantages to split

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Air Force study has found "no overriding advantages or disadvantages" of splitting up the MX missile system, Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., said Thursday.

The Air Force conducted the study to see if the system should be confined to Nevada and Utah, or split up into Texas and New Mexico as well, as some critics contend should be done.

Cannon, who authored the study, said it predicted split basing would cost $3.5 billion more, including $500,000 for land acquisition. In addition, he said, the report says split basing would cost about $19 million more per year for operations support than if the entire system were based in Nevada and Utah.

"It is impossible to say at this point how Congress and the Reagan administration might react to the prospect of spending an additional $3.5 billion on MX," Cannon said.

"I am pleased the Air Force has completed this study in a timely fashion, however, so we on the Armed Services Committee and others concerned with this question can make an objective determination."

Cannon favors the MX for Nevada and Utah, partly because of the impact it will have on Nevada's economy, but there is considerable opposition from others who fear its impact on the land. The Reagan administration has promised a full review of basing plans.

Cannon said if split basing is adopted, an operating base would still be preferred in the Coyote Spring Valley north of Las Vegas. Instead of a second base in Utah, however, Cannon Air Force Base in New Mexico could be expanded to provide a second base, he said.

He said split basing would reduce the percentage of the MX system in Nevada from about 65 percent to 35 percent. Utah's share would be 15 percent, while New Mexico would receive 32.5 percent and Texas 17.5 percent.

Iranian files claim against North Idaho

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — A former Iranian student has filed a legal claim, reportedly seeking more than $1 million from North Idaho College over an admissions dispute.

The claim was received and acknowledged Jan. 15 by the NIC board of trustees. The action was taken by Mokhtar Mollai, an NIC Iranian student of four semesters, through his attorney Kim J. Grosch.

Mollai, who recently expressed an interest in registering for the spring semester at the college, allegedly was denied re-admission for the fall term last year. The legal dispute apparently concerns his loss of student status and the resulting repercussions in his home country.

The NIC board chose not to act on Mollai's demands last week, but recognized that they had received the letter.

A formal decision on the claim is likely at the Feb. 19 board meeting. Should the board reject the claim, a lawsuit may be filed by Mollai.

While enrolled as a student in November 1979, Mollai was interviewed by the Coeur d'Alene Press on the issue of the hostage crisis. Mollai said he supported the action of the students in Tehran and did not view the Americans as hostages.

"We do not call them hostages," he said. "We call them criminals, they are part of a community that have been spying on the Iranian people."

Representatives of both sides have said little about the claim because of the likelihood that it will go to court.

"I really have nothing to say about that," said Grosch Thursday, admitting only that the claim is for a "substantial amount."

Other sources indicated that its more than $1 million.

NIC President Barry Schuler declined to comment until the college's attorney, James Knudsen, returns from a trip to Washington, D.C.

Despite several attempts, Mollai could not be reached for comment.

Cascade president has crash theory

SPOKANE (UPI) — The president of Cascade Airways said Thursday he has an idea what may have caused the crash of a Cascade commuter plane in Spokane Tuesday.

Mark Chestnut said the last minute switch in runway assignments may have confused the pilot, leading him to believe the craft was closer to the airport than it actually was.

The National Transportation Safety Board team investigating the accident said it could find no evidence of equipment malfunction at the crash site.

A survivor blamed pilot error for the crash, which claimed the lives of seven of the nine persons aboard.

Incompleted divorce halts husband's forgery trial

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — A Coeur d'Alene woman's plans to testify against her ex-husband in a forgery trial went awry Tuesday when she discovered she was still married to him.

First District Judge Gary Haman agreed to postpone 29-year-old Thomas Ankrum's trial until April 13 by which time Deputy Prosecutor Peter Erbland predicted Mrs. Beverly Ankrum will be single and ready to testify.

Idaho law prohibits a wife from testifying against her husband.

Mrs. Ankrum was granted a divorce in Feb. 1980, Erbland said. But Tuesday, a magistrate set it aside after learning the divorce petition had been published in a newspaper only three times instead of the necessary four.

Erbland asked for postponement on the grounds that his main witness abruptly had been taken out of the picture.

Haman agreed and ordered Ankrum released from Wallace Jail in the meantime — a development which may irritate the defendant, he pointed out. Erbland argued against releasing Ankrum on his own recognizance because he said the defendant apparently had enough money to post bail but preferred to remain in jail.

"What?" the judge said. "I'm kind of puzzled me to." Deputy Public Defender Fred Loats said, "If he likes jail that's his problem, but it's easier for me to contact him (if he is out)."

Loats said Ankrum may have felt it would have taken him so long to raise bail money, he may as well stayed in jail. Erbland said releasing Ankrum would be a mistake because the defendant, a former California man, had no real family ties in Kootenai County.

"Sounds like he might have one," Haman said with a smile.

Pilots plan work stoppage to expose safety problems

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Airlines Pilots Association Friday announced it was planning a nationwide work stoppage to force major changes in the Federal Aviation Administration and air safety regulations.

At a news conference, spokesman H. Ray Lahr said the work action might take place in late February or early March.

"The work stoppage is intended to bring to the attention of the American public the very real concerns which professional airline pilots have for air safety," he said.

"We hope we do not have to call a suspension of service, but the nation's pilots fully believe such action is fully warranted."

Lahr said the concerns included deficiencies in air traffic control systems, aircraft certification processes and the alleged incompetence of the FAA.

Last October, 400 pilots demonstrated in front of the White House to protest FAA practices, he said.

The APA also has targeted 15 major cities, including Los Angeles, for a 60-day information campaign, Lahr said.

He said it would include releases to news media and explanations to the public to explain the problems of air safety.

"The FAA is concentrating more on the economic interests of aircraft manufacturers and airlines than on conducting research on human factors and their effects on safety," he said.

He said the association also hopes to persuade the Reagan administration it should reform the FAA.

Man pleads not guilty to shooting

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — Bruce Leo Grob pleaded innocent Thursday in 1st District Court to shooting a 23-year-old Rathrum woman in the face Dec. 19, kidnapping her with the intent to rape her and abducting her girlfriend.

Grob, 26, of Cheney, Wash., may rely on a defense of "mental disease and defect." Public Defender Eric Nordli said he has filed a motion to that effect with the court and requested the court appoint a psychiatrist to examine Grob.

Judge Gary Haman did so. If convicted Grob faces a maximum penalty of life imprisonment for first-degree kidnapping (Deputy Prosecutor Marc Haws says his office will not seek the death penalty) plus 25 years in prison for second-degree kidnapping and 15 years for aggravated battery.

Haman did not set a date for the trial. He will not try the case, he said, and Judge James Towles probably will.

Grob is being held in Wallace Jail with bail set at $25,000. Sheriff's deputies said the victim, Ellen Wright, and 25-year-old Maxine Hellstuman of Rathrum, were driving along Idaho 53 near Hauser at about 1:15 a.m. when the vehicle came up behind them, rammed them, and ran them off the road. A man shot Mrs. Wright in the face then forced her into his car.

Mrs. Wright told the Coeur d'Alene Press she "slipped on the accelerator" of the man's car, forced it off the road into a telephone pole and escaped.

Her husband, Kerry, said he discovered Mrs. Wright lying bleeding in the bathroom of an empty house after sheriff's deputies refused to break in without a search warrant.

Investors wait on sidelines; market skids

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
United Press International

NEW YORK — Stock prices fell for the fifth consecutive session Friday. The market, which had looked forward to Ronald Reagan's presidency, wrapped up its worst week in a month with slow trading.

Analysts said many big investors want to get a clearer picture of the course of interest rates, inflation and the economy before they commit their money to stocks.

As a result, the Dow Jones industrial average, up and down in a narrow range throughout the day following Thursday's 5.81-point loss, finally shed 0.26 point to 940.19.

For the week, the closely watched average skidded 33.10 points, the worst setback since it plunged 38.68 points the period ended Dec. 12, 1980.

The New York Stock Exchange index eased 0.04 to 74.72 and the price of an average share decreased one cent. Declines topped advances, 776.67, among the 1,359 issues traded at 4 p.m. EST.

Big Board volume totaled only 37,220,000 shares, down from the 39,880,000 traded Thursday in an indication that many big investors retreated to the sidelines.

Brokers said many investors abstained from action to await the Federal Reserve report released after the NYSE closed, showing that the nation's money supply plunged $8.7 billion in the latest statistical week.

That report could help interest rates and the stock market next week. Trendsetting Citicorp encouraged some traders when it kept its prime lending rate at the prevailing 20 percent level even though the Fed maintained a tight credit policy.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 41,562,600 shares, down from the 46,010,900 traded Thursday.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 0.58 to 341.36 and the price of a share increased 3 cents. The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ index of OTC issues gained 0.40 to 197.52.

At 4 p.m., Gulf Oil was the most active NYSE-listed issue, off 1/4 to 40 1/2 in trading that included blocks of 1 million shares at 40 and 100,000 shares at 40 1/2. Gulf said it had discovered natural gas in a Norwegian North Sea field.

Texas International, which soared 9 1/2 points Thursday, was the second most active issue, rising 3/4 to 37 1/2 following block trades of 141,000 shares and 100,000 shares, both at 38.

Surplus aircraft on block in February

ODGEN — The Ogden regional office of the Defense Property Disposal Service will sell 153 propeller-driven transport aircraft during February.

Bids on the planes will be opened Feb. 11.

The sale will involve 148 planes declared surplus at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base in Arizona; single planes at Sheppard AFB, Texas, and Elmendorf AFB, Alaska; and 3 craft at Fort Eustis, Va.

Complete information on condition, location, and potential airworthiness certification may be obtained from the agency's Ogden office at P.O. Box 53, Defense Depot Ogden Station, Ogden, Utah, 84407, requesting IFB 41-1100.

Among types of aircraft to be sold are Lockheed C-121s, Convair C-131s, Grumman HU-16s, C-52s, Ensigns and OV-10s; Beechcraft T-34s; a Convair T-29; and a Cessna 172B.

Shoshone man tells experiences

Caution advised on futures markets

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Futures contracts are a powerful tool for farmers and ranchers, but be careful with them, a Shoshone cattle feeder warns.

Marvin Huser told about 130 people attending a commodity futures trading seminar in Twin Falls last week about his successes and failures with futures. The seminar was sponsored by the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

If a farmer has patience, guts, a marketing plan and the discipline to stick to it, the futures market can work for him, Huser said.

For example, a cattlemen who sells cattle on the futures market when prices are good can lock in a profit, he said. The wisdom of that is obvious. "You can't go broke making a profit," Huser said.

Sometimes the guaranteed profit is hard to come by, though. Selling cattle on the futures market protects a cattlemen if cash prices for cattle drop. But when he sold the futures contract, he locked in his price for a down payment only a fraction of what the contract is worth. If prices go up instead of down, he has to deposit more money to protect his contract. That can amount to thousands of dollars a day on one contract.

If he can't put up the money, he loses the contract. If cattle prices then turn around and drop as he expected, he has not only lost what money he put into the futures contract, he doubles his loss because his cattle are worth less.

Those are the horror stories — and they're true, Huser said. He recalled a time when prices were moving against him and he had to put $10,000 into the futures market to hold his contracts. "I'm sure my banker doesn't know I was there," he said.

"I was praying," he said. He was also lucky, he said, because he was almost to the point where he would have had to give up his contracts and the $10,000 when prices turned around.

"The pressure is tremendous," Huser said. But for those with the nerves to handle it, the proper financing and patience to stay with a hedge and let it work, the market can be profitable.

The worst thing that happened to him is that he made some fast money when he first entered the futures market about four years ago, Huser said.

"I became an instant expert." Instead of being a prudent hedger, Huser said, he started speculating. It was a rude awakening after his early success. He quickly gave back everything he had made and more.

"Ever since, I've done nothing but hedge," he said.

Two representatives from the Chicago Mercantile Exchange set the stage for Huser's afternoon talk during a morning session when they explained some of the fundamentals of commodity trading.

John Carpenter told the audience that "basis" is the hardest concept they would have to master. Simply put, he said, it is the price difference between cattle on the futures market and cattle at a local livestock exchange. The basis can change, but it moves in a narrow range compared to the fluctuations in cattle prices, he said.

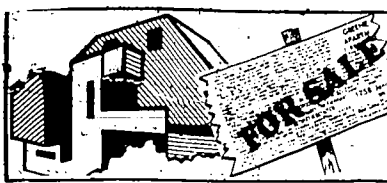

When the price offered in the futures market, minus a normal basis, adds up to a profitable price, that's the time for a cattlemen to think of selling some cattle on the futures market, Carpenter said.

"We're not pushing futures," said Ron Frost of the Chicago exchange. But in agriculture "the profits don't come until marketing time," he said.

The futures market is an effective marketing tool.

Third hand high? Not always

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The third hand high rule of play goes back to whist. It is one to follow most of the time but there are notable exceptions.

The most common one is the bracket situation. Your partner leads the deuce which appears to be fourth best.

1. Dummy plays 3 from A 10 3. You hold Q 9 7. You should play nine! If partner has led from the king, declarer will get a trick with the jack right then but he will still only make two tricks in the suit that he would score anyway by finessing against your partner's king later on. If partner has led from the jack, the play of the queen will give declarer three tricks in the suit; the play of the nine will hold him to two.

2. Dummy plays 4 from Q 6 4. You hold K 10 7. The 10 is correct here. It is far more likely to gain than to lose.

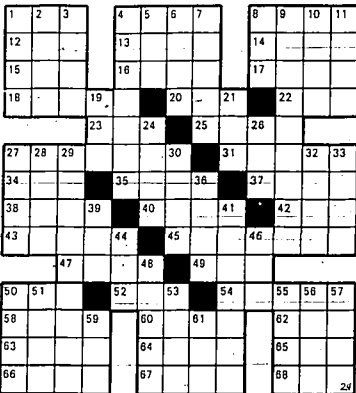

3. Dummy holds J 10 9. You hold Q 7 5 4. Unless you see a distinct possibility that partner holds both ace and king, you should duck entirely. Sometimes declarer holds ace-king and no small card in the suit.

Another time to duck is when the play of a high card is just going to sacrifice it. Your partner leads the 3 of hearts against a spade contract. Declarer "jumps" (jumps from dummy's Q J 10 7 4. You hold K 9 8 6 5. Declarer holds either the singleton ace or ace-deuce. You must play low. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

One 'expert' pulling for Falcons

By MIKE PRATER
Times-News sports writer

TWIN FALLS — Who's going to win Super Bowl XV? While the professional Nevada bookies claim the Philadelphia Eagles as the victors by three points, citizens of Twin Falls have mixed emotions on the favorite in the annual grid classic.

Some pick the Oakland Raiders, others Philadelphia — even picked the Atlanta Falcons. Yes, out of the several football fans approached, one predicted the Falcons to handily knock off the streaking Raiders Sunday afternoon in the New Orleans Superdome.

"I think the Falcons will win 21-17," he said seriously Friday afternoon. "If the Falcons can beat Philadelphia to get to the Super Bowl, I think they can beat Oakland to take the whole ball of wax. But, you never know what could happen in a game such as the Super Bowl. They're both good teams."

Atlanta may be a good team, but somehow the chances of them beating Oakland look grim at this point in the season.

Super Bowl XV is different than last years' between Pittsburgh and Los Angeles. In that one, nearly everyone placed their hard-earned money on the Steelers, but deep inside many fans were rooting for the underdog Rams. They wanted to see new blood win the Lombardi Trophy for a change. But it was an easy one for people to predict — Pittsburgh was a clear favorite.

However, this years' lineup proves to be a big test even for the most knowledgeable prognosticators.

Which defense is the toughest? Can the Eagles overcome key injuries one more game? Can Jim Plunkett, after 10 struggling years in the NFL, complete an amazing comeback and guide the Raiders to their second Super Bowl win? Will NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle have to hand Oakland owner Al Davis the Lombardi Trophy after the game?

Red Barth, who works at Buttery's in the Blue Lakes Mall, thinks he has an answer to these questions. He's going for the Raiders' 100 percent, all the way.

"I think (Lester) Hayes can handle Harold Carmichael and Ted Hendricks and John Matuzak can take care of Wilbert Montgomery. That's all it's going to take to beat the Eagles, shut down their weapons and the Raiders have the men to do that. Oakland will overcome all obstacles to win, 26-21."

A majority of the people questioned said the games outcome would depend entirely on the success of Oakland's defense — which led the National Football League with 35 interceptions.

"If Oakland can shut down Philadelphia's offense for the entire game, Oakland will win the game," said Todd Rude. "But they have to do it for the entire outing. Philadelphia — with Montgomery and Carmichael — is explosive and they can shoot from anywhere at any time. I don't think Oakland can do it. Philadelphia will win 21-7."

"Oakland by two," said Bill Miller, a salesman at Donnelly's Sporting Goods. "They are stronger and much more healthier than the Eagles are. Carmichael is the only real healthy one and Oakland's secondary will shut him down for the most part."

And now for the Eagle fans. The ones who have watched Coach Dick Vermeil slowly bring his hungry troops to the top after several frustrating years of losing to the Dallas Cowboys.

"Philadelphia will convincingly crush Oakland," said Dave Clark, a freshman at the College of Southern Idaho. "His defense is going to stop Plunkett completely and its offense is too much for the Raiders' to handle. I think Philadelphia will win, 21-10."

Bob Williams also wants Philadelphia — but for a different reason.

"I can't stand the Oakland-Raiders," he said. "And besides, we need to get some new winners in the Super Bowl. It's always the same ones and if Philadelphia wins, it will be good for the game."

"Who do I think will win," Williams said. "I want Chicago to, but I guess I'll have to settle for Philadelphia by four. The Harold Carmichael-Ron Jaworski tandem is too much for Oakland to stop."

Lynn to Angels in swap

BOSTON (UPI) — All-Star outfielder Fred Lynn, his contract status in doubt, and pitcher Steve Renko Friday were traded by the Boston Red Sox to the California Angels for pitchers Frank Tanana and Jim Dorey and outfielder Joe Rudi.

The five-player swap came just one month after the two American League teams completed a trade which sent Red Sox shortstop Rick Burleson and third baseman Butch Hobson to the Angels for third baseman Carney Lansford, relief pitcher Mark Clear and outfielder Rick Miller.

Lynn's contract with the Angels was for four years, UPI learned.

The trade was seen as an 11th-hour move by Red Sox General Manager Haywood Sullivan who was faced with getting nothing for Lynn, who along with catcher Carlton Fisk had claimed free agent status.

Sullivan, who made the trade announcement in New York simultaneously with Angels vice president Buzzy Bavasi in Anaheim, scheduled a news conference for 9 p.m. Friday at Fenway Park to explain the trade and also the latest information on what has been called the Lynn-Fisk situation.

By late Friday afternoon, no announcement had been made in the Lynn-Fisk arbitration, but it was apparent from the trade disclosure that Lynn was still Red Sox property as of Friday.

Lynn and Fisk filed for free agent status when Sullivan didn't mail out contracts to them by the league-mandated Dec. 20 deadline.

Both players were entering their option years and the Players' Association felt that contracts had to be extended to them both. The Red Sox had stated all along that there was no need to extend contracts because they were covered by the option year.

There also was the possibility of Lynn going to salary arbitration, but that avenue was superseded by the free agency route.

In Anaheim, Calif., Bavasi talked about how delighted he was to get both Lynn and Renko.

"We've had our eye on Fred Lynn for a long time. The impetus behind the whole thing ... was Lynn and Fisk applying for their free agency from the Red Sox," he said.

"We had to get permission from the Players' Association and the Players Relations Committee for Lynn to withdraw his grievance on his free agency claim. Marvin Miller said that he (Lynn) would do that only if Lynn's contract was assigned to a club of his liking."

Bavasi said "Renko should fit in very well as a spot starter for us. His record was comparable to anyone on our club last season."

Tanana, 27, one of the leading lefthanders in the majors from 1974 through 1979, was sidelined with tendinitis from July 9 through Sept. 4 of the 1979 season. He came back last year to start 31 games for California and finished with an 11-12 record. In eight major league seasons, Tanana has an overall record of 102-78.

Rams hold TF from Gem tie

TWIN FALLS — A chance to tie for the Gem State Conference crown slipped away from the Twin Falls Bruins Friday night.

Highland's Tracy Carpenter hit nine points in the final three minutes to give the Rams a 40-32 win and the first-ever Gem State title.

Before Carpenter's game-winning spree, Highland led 29-23. But the Rams switched into a 1-3-1 zone defense and Carpenter hit three field goals and three from the line to pull the Rams away from the turnover-plagued Bruins.

Kelly Krahn and Marcia Depew hit the only Twin Falls field goals in the final 6 1/2 minutes of the fourth period.

Highland, 17-3, goes into the record book as the first-ever Gem State girls basketball champions with a 11-1 league slate. Twin Falls ends its regular season with a 14-5 overall mark and 9-3 conference record for second. A win would have given the Bruins a share of the title.

"We've looked better on many occasions this year," said Highland Coach Randy Rehner. "We played well in spurts, but we also played poorly in spurts."

Although Twin Falls Coach Kathy Anderson knew it was the biggest game of the season, she wasn't disappointed at the way he unit played.

"Yes, we played costly basketball, but you could tell the girls were trying. They tried to produce all night, but they just couldn't pull it all together," she said.

Highland controlled the contest, but never led by more than four points until the waning minutes.

The lead changed hands eight times in the first three quarters and Twin Falls made it nine when Cass Herbst hit a field goal with 7:40 left to make it 26-25. Highland's Lissa Christensen put the Rams out in front to stay at 27-25 seconds later to set things up for Carpenter who ended the night with a game-high 17 points.

The Bruins open their bid for a state tournament berth Thursday when they travel to Rupert to play the Minico Spartans. That winner will go to Burley Saturday night for a second round game. Games both nights begin at 6:30 with the junior varsity contest.

The Twin Falls junior varsity team ended its regular season with a 29-27 win — its 18th in 20 starts.

'Serious' time for Eagles

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News sports writer

REXBURG — After 21 games, the College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles get down to serious basketball business tonight.

CSI will take a 17-4 record into the fray while host Ricks, boasting perhaps its strongest overall team in years, is 14-4.

It is the first game that helps determine the regional playoffs field and the site. CSI, Ricks, defending champion Treasure Valley and North Idaho play a home-and-home schedule with the best two records moving to the post-season tournament. The one with the best record receives the host designation. In case of tie hereafter, however, the team having had the tournament least recently will be the host. All three teams have had it since Ricks.

Coach Dave Campbell said he anticipates no problem in getting the team up for the battle.

"If they don't know how big this game is, they'll never be ready to play," he said.

It is the one we've been waiting for," said swingman Frank Baines, who couldn't help adding "other than Dixie. They (Dixie) did it to us bad down there."

"We'll be ready," said top gun Michael Ingram. "People have been talking to us about this game since we got here."

But being ready mightn't be enough. Ricks is a powerful team with three strong guards and is a solid four and sometimes five deep in big men.

The biggest is 6-10 center Tom Heywood who has good bulk. He is a big rebounding factor, an inside defensive intimidator and can score well from close in.

At the guard line Ricks generally starts 6-2 Tony Smith and 6-4 Scott Packer. They are backed by 5-11 Gordon Kerbs of Burley who has won a couple games for the Vikings in a fireman's role.

Inside, Coach Glenn Dalling can mix Boise sharpshooter Craig Spjut, 6-5; 6-6 Bryce Thornberge and 6-7 Mark Gambelin.

"The thing you worry about when you're playing Ricks is their maturity," Campbell said. "They have fine sophomores and a lot of those are really matured because they are return missionaries."

"When you consider we start only one sophomore and Ricks usually has 5,000 wild fans backing them, you get the idea this is going to be a tough game for us."

"But you have to go into games like this feeling that you can win. If you go in there with any win in your mind, you'll get blown out. We know that Ricks is a very talented, deep team. But we have some pluses on our side and I just believe we had a good chance of beating them there."

CSI appears to be at full strength for the battle. From point guard Mark Owen, who missed last week's game due to a tendon problem in a foot, returned to practice Wednesday.

Bruins host Poky tonight to start second Gem State round

By LARRY HOVEY

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruins start the "rematch" portion of the schedule tonight when they host the Pocatello Indians.

It marks the first time Twin Falls has met a team for a second time and that portion of the season usually is a good indicator of the improvement that has occurred. However, the rest of the year is all rematches.

Pocatello dumped the Bruins by 11 in their first rematch after the New Year. The Indians, taking the lead on follow shots in the first half of the game, nailed down with eight straight free throws in the closing two minutes after Twin Falls had pulled to within a pair.

To that point it had been Twin Falls' poorest shooting night of the year.

"I understand Pocatello has made a couple of changes since we played them," said Coach John Astorquia. "I guess they are starting Shawn Standley at guard and are going with Dave Romasko in the middle. Steve Rackard and fourth-quarter bursts is coming off the bench."

"With Romasko in there they are quite a big more physical," he said of the 6-3, 210-pound junior. "And Standley gives them a little more quickness at the guard line."

"But it's down to the same old thing for us. We have to rebound much better than we did down there to beat them. The other thing I hope is they aren't as hot as they were against us."

In the first meeting, the size and quickness of guard Curt Day hurt the Bruins and Jerry Collins dealt them misery with jump shooting off the baseline.

"Both of those guys present us with some matchup problems," Astorquia said. "They have good size and mobility. I think we'll probably go with (Lester) Hovey on Collins (6-2 to 6-4) to see if a size factor will help."

Twin Falls takes a 5-7 record into the Gem State Conference game. The Bruins are averaging 57.6 points per outing and allowing 55.5. They are still hitting 49 percent from the field as a team but the free throw percentage remains a modest 61.

Clay Mecham continues to pace Bruin scorers with 156 points and a 13.0 average while Hovey jumped his average to 12.1 last week and now has 146.

Bill Atkinson, drawing praise from Astorquia for his defensive play last week, leads the rebounding with 54 while Hovey is second at 43.

Flathead drops CSI

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho women's hopes for post-season play run out of any margin for error Friday night.

Flathead Junior College of Kalspel, Mont., riding the playmaking-shooting of Tani Converse and the inside dominating-free throw shooting of Cindy Brunton and Judy Vanetta, dropped the Eagles 72-67.

The Mountaineers, who don't have a school gymnasium to practice or play home games in, won the game with a 10-point spree late in the first half. Over the final four minutes, however, it was the foul shooting of Vanetta (four straight) and Brunton (three of four) that nailed it down.

It marked the second straight regional defeat for CSI which remains in action this afternoon. The Eagles will host non-conference Snow College in a 3 p.m. start.

For the night Flathead hit a sharp 25-of-32 from the foul line while CSI was equally as solid in percentage with 14-of-18.

It was a bitter loss for Coach Lloyd Hardesty.

"It just means we can't lose another game," the coach said of the round-robin seasonal schedule in the regionals for this spring.

"Emotions," he said when asked what he considered the major reason for the loss. "Our emotions ran away with us. The girls wanted to win so badly they just didn't control themselves."

"We've got four or five girls on this team with 3.6 and 3.7 (grade point) averages. And then we come out, letting them take the baseline, letting them post up low and make all those stupid passes and shots. It was just emotions."

There were nine ties over the first 17 minutes of the game, the last time when Lori Garrison tied it at 29 for CSI. Mary Makovich then picked up five straight points and Converse added a field goal to send Flathead ahead to 14-12.

But with 10:34 left in the game, Michel Durkin hit twice, Tammy Jarolimsek added a long shot and Garrison scored on the back end of the press to cut the game to four.

Brunton then freed F.Lathard with four free throws and CSI didn't make another run until 4:32 remained when Cheryl Brotherton cut the deficit to two. At that point, Kay Davis hit a free throw and Vanetta added four straight from the line to clinch things.

Wolves top Oakley to finish at 12-0

Girls basketball roundup

CASTLEFORD — Laurie Gandiaga and Rae Ann Schlund combined for 27 points Friday night as Castleford topped Oakley 32-15 in Magic Valley Conference play.

The win secures an undefeated regular season for the Wolves, 12-0. The Wolves took the Magic Valley crown with a 1-0 ledger and will enter tournament play at Hansen next week.

Gandiaga led the Wolves with 15 and Schlund notched 12.

No Oakley player scored more than four points. Oakley will also be in district tournament play at Hansen.

Hagerman 37, Raft River 30

MALTA — Sherri Millican led 10 first-quarter points for the hit and foul shooting coming down the wire let the Hagerman girls trim Raft River 37-30 Friday night.

Millican, who missed several games early in the season with a sprained ankle, reentered the ankle in the second quarter. She tested it briefly in the second half but came out after one transition.

It leaves her availability for the district tournament, opening in Hansen Monday afternoon, up in the air.

When Millican left, the Pirates held an eight-point advantage. Raft River was never able to catch up. But Hagerman put down a late rally attempt by the Trojans by hitting five straight from the foul line while the Trojans missed five straight. Hagerman ended the night hitting 11 of 13 free throws.

Hagerman secured second in the conference and will go against either Oakley or Hansen in the district opener. Castleford will draw the other team in the coin-flip for fourth place. Raft River wound up third in the league and will meet Murtaugh to open the tournament.

Richfield 43, Carey 27

CAREY — Richfield overcame Carey's 9-2 first quarter lead Friday night to score a 43-27 Northside Conference victory over the Panthers.

The Tigers hit double figures in each quarter after the slow start. The Tigers limited host Carey to just 18 points over the last three periods.

Reather O'Crowley, a freshman, led the Panthers with eight points. Richfield, 6-6 overall and in second place in the Northside at 4-2, plays at Dietrich tonight. Carey ends its regular season with a 4-7 ledger. Both teams play in the district tournament starting Monday at Richfield.

There was no junior varsity game Friday night.

Lye assumes Phoenix lead by one stroke

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — A relaxed Mark Lye, playing the course for a change instead of the opposition, forged a 6-under-par 65 Friday for a one-stroke lead after two rounds of the $300,000 Phoenix Open.

David Graham and Jim Nelford are tied for second.

The lanky Californian was among the early starters on a cool, overcast day at the Phoenix Country Club and played the course as if he were playing for fun instead of a challenging for a $54,000 prize.

Having gained exempt status this year after finishing 39th on the money list in 1980, Lye says he feels abashed to pressure these days.

His play here in two rounds indicates that may be so.

Lye shot 67 in the opening round to trail Graham and Larry Nelson by two shots. Friday, his 65 stood up as the best round of the day as Graham came back with a 68 and Nelson with a 69.

Thus, after two rounds Lye had a score of 10-under-par 132, while Graham and Nelford, who shot 67 Friday, were at 133 and Nelson at 134.

Barney Thompson, Mike Reid, Scott Simpson, Jerry Pate and George Cadle were another two strokes back at 136, while Bruce Lietzke, winner of the Bob Hope Desert Classic last week, and Andy Bean headed a group of nine tied at 137.

Defending champion Jeff Mitchell was at 138, while Tucson Open winner Johnny Miller was at 140 and Arnold Palmer 141.

The cut for the final two rounds was set at 141, with 79 players surviving.

Lye had six birdies on a card of 32-39, but what pleased him more was that he did not have a single bogey. Lye attributed his improved play this week to better concentration and a couple of tips from veteran Doug Sanders and former San Jose State teammate Don Lewin.

"They showed me how to slow down my swing," said Lye of Sanders and Levin. "I'm not as jumpy right now and I'd guess that has something to do with my fine scores this week."

Lye sank a 40-foot putt from the fringe on the 17th hole for his longest birdie. He also had a 30-footer on the 13th and a 15-footer on the third.

"Being exempt has made a big difference, my mental approach this year," said Lye.
