

Hatchery sale price raises questions

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The pending sale of Crystal Springs fish hatchery could mark the highest price ever paid for Idaho water.

It's a price that "caught" many trout growers off guard.

The price tag for the 80-cub-foot per-second (cfs) trout farm is "in the ballpark" of $3.2 million, according to U.S.

Army Corps of Engineers' spokesman Orel Dugger.

Located on the south side of the Snake River about five miles north of Buhl, the 38-pond hatchery has been tentatively sold by owner Ken Ellis to the Corps for raising steelhead in the Lower Snake River Fish Mitigation Program.

Neither side will release details of the sale until after real estate legalities are settled, Dugger said.

Several other Magic Valley trout producers say they are stumped by the price offered by Ellis.

"We were contacted by the company doing the appraisal (of Crystal Springs) for the Corps of Engineers and asked what we believed the property was worth," said Glen Springs Grant Co. Manager Larry Cope. "We tried to give them a totally honest answer, and our feeling at that time, using fish propagation as a measure, the high end of the scale was about $500,000."

"We added that it was doubtful that we would give that much, considering the depressed trout market, if the sale was presented to us," Cope said. "We're not in the business of selling our business, but if someone came to us with an offer like this, we'd have to change our minds."

Thorleif Rangen, head of Rangen Inc., echoed Cope's view that Ellis' Crystal Springs property, operated as Valley Trout

Farms Inc., should be appraised on the basis of its most profitable use.

"I'd say a piece of property is worth only what you can make from it, and right now, with the trout industry the way it is, that's not much," Rangen said.

Most trout growers agree an average of about 10,000 pounds of trout can be produced per cfs of flow. The current market price for trout is hovering around 60 to 65 cents per pound.

Said Percy Greene, head of Blue Lakes Trout Farm Inc., "There isn't a thing you can do to pay that kind of price today and make it pay out over the long term."

Curtis Wilkins, Twin Falls manager for the Idaho Production Credit Association said that until this pending sale, $6,000 per cfs was used as a general appraisal value for Snake River Canyon springs of constant temperature.

Water rights plan will set priorities

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

BOISE — A state program to set and prioritize water rights on the middle Snake River in case of future shortages is off and running.

The Department of Water Resources Wednesday obtained a court order allowing the department to proceed with its water rights adjudication program.

DWR plans to investigate and return to the court by 1983 with a list of water rights and their dates on the Snake River from the base of Milner Dam to the Oregon border.

The landowners in Elmore, Twin Falls, Gooding and Jerome counties will then have 60 days to file claims to water rights, either already recorded or not recorded.

After those claims are processed DWR will send summons to waterusers in Ada, Owyhee and Canyon counties.

"The Department went to the courts for this authority after 74 Snake River waterusers submitted their petition to the director, C. Stephen Allred," Shaw said. "After appraising their petition the director instructed his staff to go to court."

Shaw said claims will spell out the priority date, the amount of water, the point of diversion and the where the water is used.

After waterusers have filed their claims, adjudication staff will review the claims and the claimants, he said.

"Following these steps the department will: proposed water rights back to the court."

David Shaw, DWR western region supervisor, said 4th District Judge Robert Newhouse signed the order to proceed when no wateruser appeared to object to the department's petition in a court hearing Wednesday in the Ada County Courthouse at Boise.

"After the water rights are decreed by the court, water can be delivered in time of short supply on the basis of priority date," Shaw said. "The diversions would be regulated by a watermaster according to the western water-law principle of first in time, first in right."

The first 398 of up to 1,000 Snake River waterusers will receive a summons, instructions and filing forms in the mail from DWR about mid-February.

"When the entire process is completed in 1984 a watermaster can be appointed if this part of the Snake River cannot supply all of the waterusers who hold rights to its use," Shaw said.

"For now the water supply is adequate for the present needs."

Failure to file a claim within 60 days of receiving a summons could mean the loss of a wateruser's right to his claim.

Study sought to halve districts School consolidation blasted

BOISE — Two trustees of small school districts Wednesday urged the Idaho Legislature to reject a proposed school consolidation and reorganization project.

The project would spark the first major reorganization since the late 1940s, when the number of Idaho school districts was reduced from about 400 to near the current 115.

School board chairmen from Hansen and Kuna took strong exception to State Board of Education members' arguments that creation of a commission to study and implement consolidation would improve education and save money.

Appearing before the Legislature's two education committees, State board Chairman Janet Hay of Nampa predicted action would never come "from the grass-roots level."

"We're asking you as elected representatives and leaders to prod the districts into moving along and looking at this issue," Hay said.

"Many of us feel the biggest advantage would be the quality of the educational programs that could be offered," Hay said. She cited specialized vocational classes, handicapped education and advanced mathematics, science and language.

Hansen School Board Chairman Robert Pettigrove countered that the benefits of consolidation are myths and that small school districts give their students a better education than larger districts.

For example, at Hansen half the male high school students play on the varsity football squad. Such participation helps keep students in school later, he said.

"A perfect figure isn't necessary for the drill team, nor is being a near professional musician to play in the band," Pettigrove said. "These opportunities bring students to us every year because they felt lost and would have quit rather than continue in a large school."

"We don't know how to place a dollar value on this kind of improved human development."

"Administrative consolidation is a subterfuge to con people into actual consolidation," he charged. "Quality is not improved, equality was not."

Ex-hostages begin trips to joyous homecomings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The "Freedom 52" disbanded Wednesday.

One by one, its members broke away, leaving Washington for home and a return to private lives.

The former American hostages in Iran left their hotel as they wished, some going before daybreak to catch cross-country flights at nearby National Airport. For others, the trip home was just a short drive to the Washington suburbs.

What was the commandant's reaction?

"He loved it," McKeel said.

For those whose hometowns were not in the Washington area, the return home was every bit as emotional as it was during their trip to West Point and later to the White House.

Bells rang and kisses were planted by the thousands during rousing down-home yellow-ribbon welcomes.

There was no structure to the leave-taking, no formal checking out of the Crystal City Marriott Hotel. The hotel, for 3 1/2 days declared off-limits to the press and public, belonged exclusively to the hostages and their families.

"I've kissed so many women today, I don't know if I could kiss more," said a weary but jubilant Marine Sgt. Rodney "Rocky" Siskinn back home in Krakow, Mo., swiftly making up for 444 days' lost time.

But after 1 p.m. Wednesday, a State Department spokesman said, the hostages were "on their own."

He smiled and waved a clenched fist in triumph before climbing into a black limousine for the short trip to his Bethesda, Md., home.

Only the faces changing in cities and hamlets from New York to California as the national outpouring of affection continued.

When Bruce Laingen, ranking diplomat among the hostages, came out, there were shouts of "God bless you." He smiled and waved a clenched fist in triumph before climbing into a black limousine for the short trip to his Bethesda, Md., home.

New York City planned the biggest celebration, a ticker-tape parade Friday for 21 of the returning hostages. Other celebrations were planned across the country in the next few weeks.

Although most of the former hostages departed without comment, a few talked with reporters.

Joy was tempered in Michigan by an unsubstantiated newspaper report — denied by Washington — that Army Staff Sgt. Joseph Subie Jr., 24, was under investigation by the Army for his conduct during the siege.

Marine Sgt. John McKeel, a 27-year-old Texan, was told that he caused a national stir with his comment Tuesday that the former hostages' psychological problems would be eased "as soon as they let us ... get back to chasing girls."

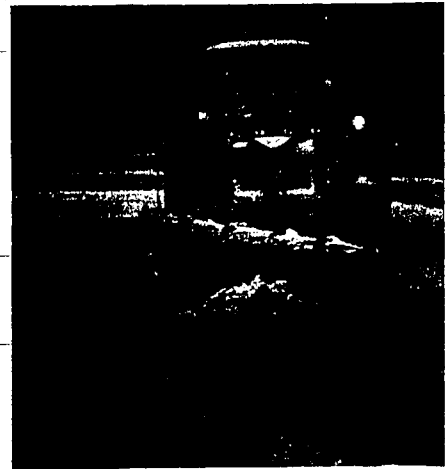

Subie, in letters home and in two television appearances arranged by the Iranians, was openly critical of the United States, its foreign policy and its handling of the hostage crisis.

"So the commandant of the Marine Corps informed me last night on the phone," McKeel said sheepishly.

But in Washington, an Army spokesman at the Pentagon told UPI the report was "not true" and said the story was "doing a great disservice to Subie."

Up to 3 feet of snow falls in California Biggest storm of season rolls over Rockies

By United Press International

The biggest storm of this season dumped 3 feet of snow and nearly a foot of rain on moisture-starved California Wednesday, cheering farmers and opening up many ski resorts for the first time this season.

Resort operators say the recent snows are providing the best skiing of the year.

The storm pushed eastward into the Rockies, dumping a creditable mantle of snow on barren slopes. Eastern states got a sprinkling of snow.

Accompanied by 60 mph winds, the Pacific-born, rain-brought, needed water to the northern California area, easing fears a potential water shortage could develop by summer.

Up to 3 feet of snow stacked up in the mountains of California and Nevada. Heavy snows also were forecast for southeastern Oregon, the Oregon Cascades and Siskiyou, the northern two thirds of Nevada, portions of eastern central California

Sun Valley rejoices at snowfall

SUN VALLEY — Skiers took to the streets here Wednesday as 10 inches of new snow brought this sun-worn ski resort back to life.

The first major storm since Dec. 6 continued at presstime, with another 12 inches of snow predicted for the next 24 hours.

The 10 inches dropped today were added to accumulations from lighter falls over the weekend. According to Kathy Hoy, publicity director for the Sun Valley Co., there have been 15 inches of new snow here since Friday.

"We needed it," said Hoy, "and it's good timing for us, since we are now going into our high season in February." Our biggest problem now is people being scared there isn't any snow." Hoy said that easterners, particularly, have a hard time believing that one western ski resort can have snow when others are dry.

The snow structure was weakening.

Butch Harper said the new storm may raise back-country avalanche danger. Harper said that inspection of the snow pack at Gatena Summit last weekend indicated the underlying snow structure was weakening.

"We may put an avalanche warning out Thursday morning," Harper said Wednesday.

The storm swept inland to the west coast and put everybody back to work," said Kay Jones, spokeswoman for California's famed Squaw Valley ski resort.

Heavily Valley also will finally open Thursday morning — the latest start in the resort's 25-year history, said marketing director Brady Hodge.

Tor rental rains deluged the lower elevations, with up to 11 inches drenching sections of west-central California.

Gale warnings were posted along the northern California coast.

The storm raised havoc for travelers on rain-slicked San Francisco Bay Area highways and downed lines, knocking out power to several thousand people. But forecasters said there was no danger of flooding on northern coastal rivers.

The storm swept inland to the snow-thirsty Rockies.

Up to 2 feet of fresh snow has fallen on some Montana resorts since last weekend. Bridger Bowl, near Bozeman, Mont., opened for the first time this season.

against back country or wilderness excursions.

Korean strongman opens U.S. visit

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — South Korea's President Chun Doo Hwan arrived in Los Angeles Wednesday on a trip, which will include a meeting with President Reagan to improve the strained relationship between the two allies.

As a chilly, foggy drizzle fell, about 200 anti-Chun protesters carrying signs and a coffin-shaped wooden box draped with a South Korean flag, staged a noisy demonstration some distance away.

Chun, surrounded by heavy security, did not see them.

Chun and his entourage were greeted at Los Angeles International Airport by Mayor Tom Bradley, his wife Ethel, several Korean diplomats and 2,000 flag-waving Koreans, including women dressed in brightly colored native costumes and a girl's chorus.

"I am happy to visit your country," Chun said through an interpreter. "This is a time of great renewal in this country." He offered thanks to Reagan for the invitation and said he was honored to be the first foreign head of state to visit the newly inaugurated American president.

The meeting between the two presidents is planned for Monday in Washington.

A small crowd of protesters and supporters of the Korean regime clashed near the airport improved, and there was no economy. The money was spent in other ways."

If the Hansen, Murlbaugh and Kimberly districts merged, he predicted higher total transportation costs and doubted a compromise on facilities could be reached.

Hay argued consolidation could lead to improved education in smaller schools.

"We could have the best of both worlds," she said.

Hay and State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans both acknowledged the state would probably not save much money. Hay said any savings should be "plowed back into the system."

The state board suggested $50,000 be appropriated to fund a commission to hold hearings around the state and work with the board under guidelines from the Legislature.

Hay said it was up to legislators to set the direction for the commission. She suggested giving the commission up to five years to reduce the number of school districts to perhaps 60.

To allay the fears of local school patrons, Hay suggested legislative provisions prohibiting the closure of a school unless approved by voters and enlarging the size of a reorganized district's school board to preserve representation.

Evans said those parts of the state that were probably be targeted by any study were Canyon County, with nine districts, the communities of Midvale and Cambridge, and Twin Falls County, with eight districts.

Peru says Ecuador invades

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — Peru charged Wednesday that Ecuadorian troops invaded up to eight miles into Peruvian territory.

Ecuador promptly claimed combat planes and helicopters from Peru attacked one of its military border posts.

Both sides said they were rushing troops to the disputed border region, located in the high Andes.

Ecuador immediately called for an urgent meeting of the Organization of American States in Washington.

The Peruvian armed forces charged Ecuador had mobilized its ground troops to a point "threatening the tranquility and peace between both nations."

Peru said Ecuadorian troops penetrated 6 to 8 miles into the northeastern part of the country, in

More witness mishaps plague Miami riot trial

MIAMI (UPI) — Three white motorists beaten to death during last May's race riots had their skulls smashed by large objects while their heads were held still, a medical expert testified Wednesday at the murder trial of four Miami blacks.

Joseph H. Davis, Dade County medical examiner, said Benny Higdon, 21, and Robert Owens and Charles Barcea, both 15, died as a result of "depressed skull fractures inflicted by large, broad objects." He added the injuries were sustained "while their heads were immobilized" against the ground.

Davis testified in the first-degree murder trial of Lawrence Capers, 24, his brother Leonard, 20, and Samuel Lightsey Jr. and Patrick Moore, both 16. The four are accused of dragging Higdon and his two companions from their car and beating them to death last May 17, on the first night of Miami's Liberty City riots.

He said the fatal injuries could have been inflicted with several large, blood-spattered chunks of concrete which the prosecution has introduced into evidence.

The medical examiner also revealed Higdon's body contained about 200 milligrams of methamphetamine.

Earlier Wednesday, a fingerprint expert testified he found Lightsey's prints on the car in which the three victims rode the night they were killed.

Ivan Almeida told the racially mixed jury he found 15 points of similarity between the fingerprints of the 16-year-old defendant and a print lifted from the 1969 Dodge.

"I find they were made by the same person," Almeida said.

Before Almeida linked Lightsey to the victims' car, prosecutor Robert Kaye called fingerprint expert James Veller to the stand only to discover Veller hadn't examined the victims' car.

After a hasty bench conference with Judge Mario Gorderich, the embarrassed prosecutor hustled Veller out of the courtroom.

It was the second time prosecutors ran into problems with their witnesses.

Tuesday, the state's star witness Doris Jones — told the jury she saw the Capers brothers in the mob but did not see them participate in the beating of Higdon, Owens and Barcea.

Before Ms. Jones took the stand, prosecutors told the jury Ms. Jones would "positively identify" the Capers brothers as participants in the fatal beating.

Crystal Springs

Ellis has not responded to Times-News phone calls this week.

Contacted by both Magic Valley trout farmers — and Idaho congressmen concerning the pending sale, Corps of Engineers project coordinator Joe McMichael said he again reviewed the sales process this week.

"Our appraisal has to stand up in court," McMichael said Wednesday. "If we have to go to condemnation court, we'd have to show this is a fair price."

"I would not say an error (in the appraisal) is impossible, but it's unlikely," McMichael continued.

"We had Idaho Lands and Appraisal Co. redo it twice and our real estate people, down the line all the way to Washington, D.C., reviewed the appraisal. So far, I've not heard a single objection."

Dugger also supported the Corps' appraisal, reported to be significantly higher than the price agreed to by Ellis.

"In our study, we know that local lenders had liens on the property in excess of $2 million, so obviously people in that area also think the property is worth more than $500,000," Dugger stressed.

Twin Falls County Court mortgage records support Dugger's statement.

"We are going to stand by that appraisal," Dugger said. "We think it's proper, accurate and has been reviewed several times, including by our chief engineer in D.C."

The Idaho Fish and Game Department is in agreement with its offer at the price and the site," Dugger stressed.

The Corps of Engineers isn't the only target of complaints about the pending sale.

Sen. James McClure's Washington aide Frank Cushman said Wednesday, "We have received several complaints and complaints concerning this (sale). I have not gotten a satisfactory response from the Corps, but they say they get back to me shortly."

"I do have to admit that the price sounds suspicious," Cushing said.

Following Monday's announcement of the pending sale, several other Magic Valley trout growers are apparently now interested in selling hatcheries to the Corps of Engineers for steelhead mitigation sites.

Steelhead hatcheries are being constructed by the Corps to replace steelhead lost when four dams — Ice Harbor, Little Goose, Lower Monumental and Lower Granite — were built on the lower Snake River in the 1960s.

Corps representatives are meeting with Innant Inc. officials who control the Thousand Springs hatchery north of Buhl. However, Dugger said an additional consideration will not affect the proposed purchase of Crystal Springs.

The idea had some offers from other hatcheries, but they were not for sale when we went down there looking," McMichael said.

"When you don't have a willing seller you have to look elsewhere, but when they now see the price, other people want to sell," McMichael continued.

McMichael stressed that any sale price considered by the Corps must be based on a comprehensive appraisal, a fact he said several prospective owners were told during the search for mitigation sites started in October 1979.

The Fish and Game Department did most of the leg work looking for sites in the Magic Valley," McMichael said. "They were fairly familiar with the trout farms down there and we did approach some farms that weren't for sale."

The Fish and Game Department's preferred site recommendation to the Corps was for the Rim View hatchery owned by Earl Hardy.

Hardy, who did not return Times-News phone calls, refused to sell, according to Dugger.

"The Rim View hatchery was appraised at a higher value than the Ellis property," Dugger said.

"The Jones and Sandy hatchery (on upper Billingsley Creek) was never fully appraised because it was determined there wasn't a dependable water supply — that the water flow had decreased over the past 10 years, probably due to local irrigation pumping."

Malad Springs, at the mouth of the Malad River that would have resulted in dewatering harmful to the protected Shoshone sculpin, surrounding vegetation and unique geological factors, according to the Corps study.

Questions have also been raised about the water source reliability of Valley Trout's Crystal Springs site. Since the hatchery is located across the Snake River from the actual springs, the water is piped through a tube that is exposed during low-water months.

"If the pipe goes, they're in serious trouble," Rangen said, declining to elaborate.

When asked about the pipe, Dugger responded, "We figure we are going to use that pipe. It is a fairly new pipe."

In addition to demanding a dependable water supply, the Corps also set minimum requirements for water quality, temperature, social factors and cost of building a steelhead facility, including moving dirt to provide a proper incline.

Since the Malad Springs site was dropped, the Corps followed public requests to purchase an existing hatchery and snow floor, snowing and chains advised.

State worker wage battle heats up

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Public Employees Association director topped legislative news Wednesday by saying his group may sue if lawmakers carry out their plan to freeze state workers' salaries next year.

Steve Swadley, who made the comment before speaking to the Legislature's Joint Finance Appropriations Committee, said a 1978 law requires the Legislature to pay state workers the equivalent of average wages paid in private industry. By passing that bill, he said, lawmakers entered into "a binding contract" with state employees.

But if legislators freeze salaries, he said, state workers will earn about 22 percent less than private industry employees in fiscal year 1982.

Sen. Mike Mitchell promptly unveiled a plan to give state employees 9.5 percent wage hikes next year, but the salary increases would be awarded at the middle — not the beginning — of the fiscal year.

Calling his proposal "The Mitchell Plan," the Lewiston Democrat said Idaho taxpayers could save nearly $7 million if lawmakers delayed awarding the salary increases until Jan. 1, 1982.

The 6.5 percent salary hike proposed by Gov. John Evans would go into effect at the beginning of the fiscal year, costing more than $25 million, Mitchell said. He said his proposal would provide the 9.5 percent across-the-board pay hike for half the year, costing the state about $16 million.

"It isn't what the state employees want completely," Mitchell said. "And, it doesn't cut as much money out of the budget as the Republicans would like."

"But I think, if we're going to keep our promise to increase state workers' salaries, this is a solution." In other action:

•College presidents sought to convince Idaho legislators that intercollegiate sports programs are too valuable to be sacrificed in the drive to solve the state's budget problems.

•A group of Kuna fourth-graders could not persuade a House committee to approve a measure calling for designation of the rainbow trout as Idaho's state fish.

•A bill requiring motorists to use chains when snowy conditions exist on certain highways was introduced in the Senate.

•A bill to levy a 2 percent hotel tax in Idaho to fund a state Travel and Convention Industry Committee was introduced by the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

•House Speaker Ralph Olmstead said a permanent "homestead exemption" property-tax relief measure, desired by Gov. John Evans, might be implemented by the Legislature this year after all. But it would not be in the form proposed by Evans.

•Rep. Cameron Fullmer, R-Post Falls, began an effort aimed at overthrowing what he said was an effort to destroy the U.S. Constitution and "sovietize" the nation.

Hollifield introduces 2 bills in Legislature

BOISE — Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, will try to introduce two bills in the Legislature today, including one to allow counties to withdraw from a regional airport authority.

Hollifield's second proposal to the House Revenue and Taxation Committee would remove a protection for public schools from state revenue shortfalls through property tax increases.

"The schools should not be able to enjoy preferential treatment," he said, referring to last year's 3.85-percent hold back of state funds.

More than $7 million, the public schools' share of the shortfall, was automatically made up by property taxpayers under the current law.

Hollifield said he wants to repeal that law.

"The schools have to tolerate some increase in their spending," he said.

"The school board may have to take out some programs that are not the most significant."

He said school boards should be able to "take care of their contracts" with teachers through such means.

He said the airport measure is the same as one passed by the Legislature last year and vetoed by Gov. John Evans.

Among other things, it would allow a county to withdraw from a regional airport authority upon majority approval of those voting in that county.

The law now requires additional approval from the voters in other counties in an authority.

Hollifield explained he does not anticipate a veto this year and noted the election of an opponent of the Southern Idaho Regional Airport Authority to that authority's board of directors last year.

CSI's displaced homemaker program defended by Larom

BOISE — The state's pilot displaced homemakers program at the College of Southern Idaho has served 110 people in its first six months, legislators were told Wednesday.

Rita Larom, director of the pilot program, the Center for New Directions at CSI, described the two-year project begun last July to the Legislature's two education committees.

Under the Displaced Homemakers Act passed last session, the center plans to hold a workshop at Twin Falls this spring for representatives from each of the state's area vocational schools.

"We do everything we can to help these people succeed and find a direction, as our name indicates," Larom said.

She said a displaced homemaker is usually a female, in her middle years, who is unemployed or underemployed or has outdated skills.

"She is frightened, unaware of the competition in the job market, insecure and frequently facing personal and financial crisis," Larom said.

Of the 110 helped, 19 were separated and 54 divorced and 15 widowed. Of those 54 received one-to-one counseling and 35 entered school or are now employed.

Larom said the center wants to do more in the most important part of the program, job training and placement.

Sen. Norma Dohler, D-Moscow, author of the act, said she expects funding from the Legislature this session for the second year of the program despite a tight state budget.

Bill would eliminate state meat inspectors

BOISE — A bill to eliminate most state meat inspections and leave it to federal inspectors was introduced by the House Agricultural Affairs Committee Wednesday.

Gov. John Evans, in supporting the elimination for the third year in a row in his budget recommendation, said the state could save $500,000 annually.

The Legislature has kept the program the last two years. This year's bill from the state Department of Agriculture retains state inspections of mobile and custom butchers.

Committee members Wednesday said they wanted more information on the bill's effects and support among meat packers. But they agreed to introduce it so the contents could be made public.

Jim Croft, a state agriculture department administrator, said the bill might force some small, part-time slaughter houses in rural areas out of business.

Those are ones which the federal government would probably not inspect and could not afford to make capital improvements to meet federal standards, Croft said.

But he said other small slaughterhouses support the bill because they would be able to ship meat out of state under federal inspection.

Rep. Dan Emery, R-Boise, said "if we force out the small plants, as it sounds like," beef producers would be limited to dealing with large packers. "I'd like to hear more," he said.

"We need to get both sides in here," Rep. Harold Reid, D-Craigmont, said in arguing for introduction.

Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer, agreed with the changes in the proposal but asked for a department survey that found one-third of the slaughterhouses opposed.

Bill seeking control over state publications rejected

BOISE — A proposal to put controls on publications of state agencies was rejected by the House State Affairs Committee Wednesday.

Legislators told the sponsor, John Luthy, administrator of General Services, the measure gave him too much power over other agencies and could lead to censorship.

"If we're trying to save printing, why go to the expense of printing something that's finished," Rep. C.A. "Skip" Smyser, R-Barma, asked.

The committee did approve introduction and printing of Luthy's second proposal, a request for $500,000 to pay for unanticipated increases in the telephone and postage bills of state agencies.

Rep. James Stoicheff, D-Standpoint, said the supplemental appropriation would not increase state spending since agencies would have to find the money in their current budgets.

Luthy noted government, like private business, is traveling less and using the telephone more to save on expenses.

Luthy said his printing proposal was intended to allow the Department of Administration to set guidelines on how materials are printed, not what is printed. The state could save by substituting less expensive printing methods for high-cost, full-color glossy brochures, he said.

Rep. Larry Harris, R-Boise, argued tight budgets will put pressure on agencies to reduce spending for such items.

Many members of the committee unsuccessfully tried to introduce the measure in order to send a message to agencies.

Free parking bill for entire state offered

BOISE — Amid the feud between the Legislature and the city of Boise over the legislators' loss of free parking, Rep. Dan Kelly, R-Mountain Home, has come up with a free-parking bill for the whole state.

"It's not a self-serving bill. I wouldn't support that," said Kelly, who has collected five parking tickets.

His bill to prohibit parking meters within 150 feet of a public building was introduced in the House of Representatives Monday.

Kelly said if enacted the bill would still not prevent Boise from limiting legislators' parking.

"They could slap on a 30-minute limit if they wanted," he said. But he added, if he were a member of the Boise City Council he would "get the message."

Still the legislation is not aimed at the Legislature's problem, Kelly maintained.

"The public should not have to pay any government for the privilege of doing business with them."

Kelly added he will pay his parking tickets as soon as the legislative leadership tells him they are finished negotiating with the city.

The Mountain Home Republican has rented a parking space in the state garage a block from the Capitol but said the garage has since been oversold.

Another free-parking advocate, Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, reported to the House Tuesday there were 142 empty parking spaces on the streets around the State house.

Block will push for end

Grain embargo review set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary John Block, who continues to believe the Soviet grain embargo should be lifted, said Wednesday the embargo will be reviewed by the full Cabinet as early as next week.

A decision will not be made that soon, Block said, but "this one (issue) will be dealt with swiftly."

Block also indicated he would be reviewing the need for farm support target prices.

JOHN BLOCK
...feels it's ineffective

At his first news conference since taking office, Block revealed that presidential aide Edwin Meese suggested at Tuesday's Cabinet meeting that the embargo be reviewed by the National Security Council, which handled the issue in the previous administration.

"I didn't feel that that was a proper forum and I recommended to the president that it be reviewed by a much broader forum than that since there are many other interests at stake here," Block said, adding that Reagan agreed and scheduled it for review by the full Cabinet, probably next week.

Block said he still opposes the embargo—last summer, candidate Ronald Reagan said it should be lifted, but he said more recently it needs a great deal of study.

Soviet troops invaded Afghanistan. The sale of 8 million tons a year for two years was allowed to meet the minimum terms of a trade agreement.

Any future embargoes, Block said, should be imposed only under extreme circumstances and, "I would say that the next one will include a lot more than grain."

On other issues, Block said: "Agriculture and food programs are in line for cuts, as are programs in every part of government, with costly farm programs, like dairy supports getting the closest scrutiny. He said Farmers Home Administration and Rural Electrification Administration programs are being looked at closely.

The administration is looking at a proposal to skip an April 1 increase in dairy price supports.

Food programs will be directed at the "truly needy."

"He will attempt an enormous task" of proposing a four-year farm bill this year. Target prices, direct payments to farmers if prices fall below certain levels, might be discontinued.

"He does not foresee restoration of normal crop acreage" limits on production, which were lifted for this year.

Hike in debt sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary Donald Regan announced Wednesday the new administration is asking Congress to increase the national debt ceiling by nearly $50 billion.

Regan said the budget-conscious Republican administration was making the request with "great regret."

But he said "conditions of the economy and government commitments that you inherited leave us no choice in this matter."

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., said President Reagan on Tuesday had "solicited my aid and assistance" in passing the debt limit extension, a step necessary to keep the government operating.

The House was expected to take up the debt limit bill next week after committee action. O'Neill said if the House passes the bill quickly, members will be able to get an early start on the Lincoln's birthday recess, possibly starting Feb. 7 and returning Feb. 17.

In a statement issued by the Treasury, Regan said the new administration specifically is asking Congress to raise the present $95.1 billion debt limit, which runs through Sept. 30, to $95.5 billion.

Regan said that is $5 billion less than the economic program of the last administration would have required — $99 billion. The $99 billion figure, he said, included $97.7 billion for expected debt plus $3 billion for contingencies.

The current $95.1 billion debt limit was adopted by Congress last year.

"Since that time, however," Regan said, "economic conditions, high inflation levels, high interest rates, and both on-budget and off-budget financing by the federal government have touched off a virtual explosion in federal borrowing."

"We now estimate that the nation will exceed the current limit in mid-February, so that swift congressional action has become imperative."

Regan said the economic plan being drafted by the new administration, "if promptly enacted, will significantly reduce the future rate of growth in federal borrowing."

Because that plan is not finished, he said, the new administration is not ready to make a formal request to Congress on the debt limit, but he said the administration and Congress should begin working on the problem together.

Watt seeks reform ideas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary James Watt asked government, business, industry and environmental leaders Wednesday for ideas on how to reform federal regulations.

"Because of the need for quick action, I ask that you send us your initial proposals for regulatory reform by Feb. 12," he wrote.

He asked for "specific ideas for changing regulatory provisions which you believe are excessive, burdensome or counterproductive."

Union files lawsuit against Reagan's fed hiring freeze

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the first court challenge to President Reagan's freeze on federal hiring, the National Treasury Employees Union filed suit Wednesday to block the administration's move to make the order retroactive.

In a class action suit, the union asked the U.S. District Court in Washington to declare unconstitutional Reagan's first official act just after his inauguration Jan. 20.

Reagan used the President's Room at the Capitol, where he was sworn in only minutes earlier, to sign an order to the director of the Office of Management and Budget to draft regulations for a hiring freeze.

Four days later, the OMB issued a bulletin prohibiting the hiring of civilian employees in executive branch agencies retroactive to last Nov. 5 — the day after Reagan's landslide election victory.

The union, representing 120,000 federal employees nationwide, charged in its suit that Reagan had no authority to impose a freeze on hiring commitments made before he took office.

"Reagan unlawfully exceeded his authority" under the Constitution of the United States by ordering a retroactive application of his directive to the executive branch during a period when he was not the president of the United States," the complaint said.

The union said it filed suit on behalf of all individuals who had received written job commitments between last Nov. 6 and Jan. 20 from executive branch agencies.

Each of these individuals, the suit said, "accepted the job offer and took action relying on a commitment of a job." The union said it did not know of anyone who actually began work in the promised post before Jan. 20.

However, union spokeswoman Laura Negin said, "These people who have been promised jobs have left former jobs, have moved, sold houses, and made other sacrifices assuming they had jobs."

Several actually reported to work but were told within a few hours to go home and look for another job.

The suit asks the federal court to declare the retroactive hiring freeze unlawful and to pay monetary compensation to the individuals affected by it.

Rep. Spellman said improving

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Gladys Noon Spellman, D-Md., who has been in a semi-comatose state since an Oct. 21 heart attack, is showing some improvement and has been moved to Walter Reed Army Medical Center, an aide said Wednesday.

Mrs. Spellman, 62, was re-elected Nov. 4 while hospitalized, but there has been almost daily speculation since about her status.

She was moved to Walter Reed Tuesday to "participate in treatment and therapy," said Art Jaeger, a spokesman for Mrs. Spellman.

Jaeger said the move was made at the request of her family.

"The physicians there are currently evaluating her condition," he said. "She seems to be increasingly aware of her surroundings—they (her relatives) hope she recognizes her relatives and those who come in to see her, but she cannot communicate."

The House voted Tuesday to continue to pay Mrs. Spellman and her staff although she has not taken the oath of office. The housekeeping resolution will provide her with "compensation" for her salary because current law does not provide a salary to a member who has not been sworn in.

Loss of patience curtails robbery

SEATTLE (UPI) — A masked robber held eight people in a North Seattle restaurant for two hours before finally giving up his attempt to get into a safe and escaping with about $50.

The robber reportedly managed to get into the Far East Restaurant by confronting the janitor with a gun early Monday morning.

Reggie Jackson to play Chopin

By United Press International

ADUET
New York Yankee outfielder Reggie Jackson will attempt to play Chopin at Carnegie Hall this Thursday. He will play a strongly coached duet with acclaimed pianist Byron Janis at a news conference to promote a benefit concert for Lou Gehrig's disease. Jackson is honorary national chairman for the foundation. Janis is married to Maria Cooper, whose father, the late Gary Cooper, starred in the "Lou Gehrig Story" and has offered a portion of the proceeds from his own Carnegie Hall recital.

COURT COSTS
An argument over a parking space will cost racing car driver Stirling Moss $480. A magistrate in London fined Moss Wednesday and ordered him to pay damages and court costs for scraping the side of a car with his keys after arguing with its driver about a parking space. Moss, 51, who began a racing comeback last year, was ordered to pay $265 in compensation for causing criminal damage to the other car and $180 in court costs.

Block to take aim at coyotes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary John Block said Wednesday Westerners who want coyote control moved from Interior to Agriculture might find the new administration at Interior will handle the issue more to their liking. Coyotes, once a problem in the West, have moved East, even to his farm in Illinois. "Now the coyotes are getting my little pigs and they've been doing it the last three or four years," he said.

A HAIRCUT

"I'd do whatever the role requires," said German actress Nastassja Kinski, and she did. The 29-year-old German actress, who starred in the Roman Polanski film "Tess," is now making "One from the Heart," by Francis Ford Coppola. The role requires she have her hair cut very short. So she did, at Maurice Jose in Beverly Hills, which also handles such affairs for Ali McGraw, Farrah Fawcett and Valerie Perrine. Kinski's haircut was unveiled this week.

DRUGS

Donald Henley, singer-drummer for the Eagles rock group, has asked a judge in Santa Monica to put him in a drug diversion program rather than send him to jail for allegedly giving drugs to a girl. Superior Court Judge Edward Rafanelli ordered probation officers to inform him Feb. 24 whether Henley is eligible. Henley, 33, was arrested in November at his home in Hollywood Hills by police who found him with a 16-year-old girl. Officers also confiscated cocaine, marijuana and Quaaludes.

ON: THE DISABLED

At the opening of the International Year of Disabled Persons in New York City, violinist Itzhak Perlman, said most disabled persons adjust well to their disabilities. Perlman's legs have been paralyzed by polio since he was five. "Ask many of us what we would like most in life and we might say, 'to be a better father' or 'to be promoted in my job.' You would be surprised how few would say, 'not to be disabled.' We accept our limitations. It is others who have problems understanding that and accepting us." Perlman is a member of the U.S. Council for IYDP.

X-ray didn't show twins' heart was fused

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Samantha Dawn and Marie Lynn Self, Siamese twins who died during surgery to separate them, were so tiny X-rays failed to reveal their hearts were fused, doctors said Wednesday.

The medical team performing the surgery struggled through a nine-hour operation Tuesday only to learn when they were nearing completion that they had tackled an "unbearable problem," Dr. James O'Neill, head of the team said.

O'Neill said there is no record in medical literature of Siamese twins with connected hearts surviving surgery to separate them. He said an autopsy would be performed on the infants "to try to help someone in the future."

O'Neill said tests performed before the operation indicated the babies had separate hearts, stomachs, and reproductive organs, but failed to reveal the fusion of the hearts "because they were such little babies it didn't show."

Roger and Katherine Self, the teen-age parents of the twins, made plans Wednesday for the infants' funeral at their hometown of Maryville, Tenn. A funeral home spokesman said the twins, who died at 4 p.m. Tuesday, would be buried in a single 24-inch-long casket which resembles a cradle.

Joined from the sternum to the navel, the infants were delivered by Caesarean section Jan. 18 at a Knoxville hospital and rushed to Vanderbilt Children's Hospital in Nashville the same day. The parents gave permission for the surgery after a conference with doctors Saturday.

"There was no question that this was the only alternative we had,"

O'Neill said. "They (the twins) were beginning to go downhill. If we had waited much longer, we would have had no chance of separating them." Surgery began at 7 a.m. Tuesday with doctors beginning the separation from the abdomen up. A laser — a focused beam of light that cuts tissue without bleeding — sliced apart a large, fused liver.

Haig rejects Iran arms deal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig said Wednesday Iran will receive no U.S. military equipment.

And, during his first State Department news conference, he made it clear the new administration will shift foreign policy emphasis from promoting human rights to fighting terrorism.

Haig said while the administration has not yet completed its review of the hostage agreement signed by President Carter, "I anticipate the United States will fulfill its obligations," adding, after a pause, "within the context of domestic law and international practice."

However, he said, it already has been decided to change one policy of the Carter administration: that Iran would not be permitted to take delivery of U.S. arms previously paid for.

"I state categorically today that there will be no military equipment provided the government of Iran, either under earlier obligations or contractual arrangements or as yet unstated requests," Haig said.

Haig refused to specify what President Reagan meant Tuesday when he talked of "swift and effective retribution" against future acts of terrorism.

The phrase, Haig said, was "consciously ambiguous" and any country or terrorist group contemplating such action "knows clearly" what they are risking.

Haig told the news conference that in the present administration the emphasis on fighting international terrorism "will take the place of human rights" because it is the greater problem now and protection from such acts of violence is an obligation of all governments.

"Human rights are an essential aspect of foreign policy but when you give it an extraordinary role, you put the rights in jeopardy."

Haig also told reporters:

"We are witnessing an unprecedented risk-taking made by the Soviet Union, in the Western Hemisphere as well as Afghanistan. He classed some of the actions as international terrorism, and said countering them "will be of the utmost concern to this administration."

In that context, he said the United States also is "looking very carefully" at Libya's military intervention in Chad.

"The level of Soviet military force around Poland has dropped somewhat, but the Soviet forces are still capable of moving quickly if it is decided to do so. The United States, he said, is giving "sympathetic consideration" to a program of economic assistance to Poland although the core of Poland's problem is "internal reform."

"I indicated the administration probably will maintain the grain embargo against the Soviet Union following of the Afghanistan invasion, even though he personally has reservations about future actions "that place a selective burden on some sectors of our economy."

Said, on the Middle East, he does not want to "inject any sense of urgency" into the resumption of the Egypt-Israel talks on Palestinian autonomy, and repeated that the new administration subscribes to the Camp David Accords which led to the negotiations.

Policeman's strike has merchants up in arms for protection

STUEBENVILLE, Ohio (UPI) — Downtown merchants hired security guards or planned to stay overnight in their stores Wednesday in an effort to thwart vandalism and looting touched off by a strike by police and firefighters.

"When the cat's away, the mice will play," said Jeff Kirk, assistant manager of a music store that was broken into during the six-day strike by city workers that began last Friday. "It's easy to go steal something when you know you won't get caught."

All of Steubenville's 260 municipal employees, including police and firefighters, were off the job in a contract dispute — the second such strike in two years.

"A community can turn into a free-for-all because they're aware that there is no police protection," said Curtis Greenberg, owner of a jewelry store that was vandalized. "It's a sad situation."

Many store owners in the community of 30,000 said they were sleeping in their shops or staying well into the morning hours. Some had hired private, armed security guards, and others had guard dogs watching their stores.

There also were reports of merchants arming themselves for protection.

"I wouldn't blame them one bit if they did arm themselves," said Police Chief George Mavromatis. "If they want to keep a weapon in their store, they have my blessing."

Window-smashings, break-ins, purse-snatchings and other such incidents were becoming "a nightly occurrence," said Mavromatis, adding that although the crime rate was up an estimated 50 percent, the situation had not reached the point of "utter chaos" yet.

"I won't have vigilantes marching up and down the street with guns," he said.

There have been no major fires or injuries since the protest began officially, and no water or sewage problems. Garbage was piling up in a few alleys but did not appear to be a big problem.

A 4 1/2-hour bargaining session recessed early Wednesday with no apparent progress toward ending the contract dispute.

Weinberger warns U.S. may war

Defense called top U.S. priority

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger warned Wednesday a deteriorating international political climate may force the United States to use military power to protect its interests.

He said the administration's defense spending will cut into social programs.

Weinberger said defense "is the highest priority of the nation. We have to recognize that it will mean a slowdown in growth or a reduction in programs that are going to have to re-examine the whole priority of the nation."

Weinberger and Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, both took a tough stance in testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee apparently designed to reassure America's allies about the Reagan administration's commitment to defend Western interests.

"Spending more on defense while still balancing the budget will mean a reduction in programs that have been sacrosanct," he said. "Are anti-poverty programs really reducing poverty? That's one of the examinations that will have to be made."

Men warned that the 1980s will be unstable and Weinberger said it "will surely be a dangerous decade for this nation and the world, and we must be prepared to cope with it."

Weinberger, who got a sympathetic reception in his first appearance before the hawkish committee as defense secretary, said he will seek "substantial additional funds" to the defense budget — more than the $196.3 billion sought by the previous administration for defense in fiscal 1982.

Weinberger left no doubt that he was prepared to raise defense spending above 5 percent a year, the benchmark of the Carter administration.

"We will spend whatever is necessary to improve our capabilities as expeditiously as possible," he said.

Pressed on the extent of the military power gap between the United States and the Soviet Union, Jones said the Soviet Union enjoys "substantial advantages over us because it is 100 miles from the Soviet border," Jones said.

He said the Soviet Union "could put in more firepower" than the United States if it decided to invade Iran, "but it shouldn't mean we shouldn't go in there. I think we should. I think we should respond there and respond elsewhere where they may not have so many advantages."

"The Soviet Union," Weinberger said, "has embarked upon a military buildup unprecedented in world history. Our commitment to build is the best way to get the Soviets to stop

Feminists denounced New York for poor welfare payment level

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bitter about meager welfare benefits, feminist celebrities joined destitute mothers Wednesday to denounce government spending priorities.

Actress Mary Tyler Moore, former congresswoman Bella Abzug and writer-activist Gloria Steinem angrily called on the state government to increase welfare benefits — still pegged to a 1972 minimal "standard of need" despite the decade's double-digit inflation.

"If Mary Richards was making the same money and had three children, she would be on welfare," said Miss Moore, recalling her television role as the single-working woman.

Ms. Steinem said welfare is a "basic feminist issue" since 87 percent of New York residents on welfare are women and dependent children.

Welfare works out to $2.08 per person per day for virtually all needs except rent, she said. This proves the government considers a mother's work of raising children as nearly worthless, she said.

"We intend to literally put New York on trial," she declared. "The money is there, the money is being misused."

Big business receives tax abatements while welfare mothers struggle to survive, Ms. Steinem told a news conference.

Welfare concerns all kinds of women, she said, recounting the story of a college-educated suburban woman and her children who were forced to go on welfare when her husband died. Ms. Steinem concluded: "Most women in America are only one man away from welfare."

Reagan plans major policy statements over economy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is revving up a campaign to win public support for his "can do" economic recovery program by holding his first news conference Thursday, preceded by a statement "of substance" on the economy.

The president also plans a nationally broadcast speech next week as part of what he calls his "can do" approach to curing the nation's economic ills.

Press secretary Jim Brady refused Wednesday to offer details of the opening statement.

The economy and Reagan's future policies toward Iran and terrorism are expected to dominate the news conference at 2 p.m. MST Thursday in the auditorium of the Old Executive Building. It will be his "first formal session with reporters since he was inaugurated."

Late next week, he will deliver a major speech on what he plans to do to reduce inflation and pare the "out-of-control" federal budget.

"He continues to be optimistic" he can solve the problems, a top aide said.

The aide said Reagan has his told his Cabinet: "You can cut layers and layers without hitting muscle fiber.

Keep trying. That's what we were sent here for."

He also has argued that to effect "real saving" they should prepare their budgets as though they had only 80 percent of the funding allotted to their departments, the aide said.

Then Reagan has urged a close look at the remaining 20 percent to determine the priority of cuts.

The president also has urged his Cabinet "to get a handle" on the departments and not be fooled by the bureaucrats, the aide said.

Reagan also is consulting extensively with congressional leaders to win converts to his economic proposals which center on a 10 percent tax cut and hefty reductions in federal programs.

Soviets hit NATO 'sabotage'

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet army newspaper Wednesday renewed sharp charges of NATO interference in Poland, accusing the alliance of "political sabotage" and trying to split Poland from the Warsaw Pact.

The article in Red Star was written by Igancy Krasicki, a news analyst for Poland's leading Communist Party newspaper Trybuna Ludu.

"The crude interference of the West, above all of the NATO member countries, in Poland's home affairs is a carefully pre-planned political campaign of political sabotage against the Socialist community," he wrote.

"They are pressing for Poland's gradual pullout from the Warsaw treaty organization."

The charges are similar to those used prior to the Soviet invasions of Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968, and those heard often in the periods of extreme tension during the December crisis.

The article did not criticize the present Polish government, indicating First Secretary Stanislaw Kania still had the backing of the Kremlin. But it did point out "former leadership errors... have led to a credibility gap between workers and government authority."

One diplomat noted that it has been a long time since such criticism has been leveled against the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. "It may not mean much in itself," he added, "but it is certainly worth watching as perhaps the beginning of something."

The article came at a time when Poland was again experiencing a widespread wave of strikes.

Krasicki accused NATO's "psychological warfare centers" of working "to weaken the bonds of alliance between Poland and the other states of the socialist community."

The "ideological subversion" was the brainchild of former U.S. national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, the article said, adding he favored "flexible tactics of softening socialism from inside" to direct confrontation.

The article said NATO was behind KOR, the leading Polish dissident group, and the Federation for Polish Independence.

"Anti-socialist forces inside Poland are inseparably linked with outside imperialist subversion," it said in another attempt to discredit the dissidents.

"Disturbances of public order, work stoppages, forceful takeovers of public offices are, all manifestations of anti-Socialist escalation," it said.

"Communists are taking the necessary steps to contain the forces that seek to gradually erode socialist statehood."

Captain of sunken ship blames firm

JAKARTA, Indonesian (UPI) — The captain of the Indonesian ship that sank in the Java Sea, apparently taking more than 500 people to their deaths, Wednesday accused the state-run shipping company of poor maintenance on the Tampomas-2.

Searchlight-equipped rescue ships plucked 21 more bodies from the choppy sea, bringing to 55 the number known and dead, and one more survivor — the 616th. But officials said there was little chance some 465 missing persons, including 75 children and many women, were still alive.

There were some 1,100 people

El Salvador commission cites abuses

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — El Salvador's Human Rights Commission Wednesday charged security forces have seriously abused its members because of government allegations the group helps leftist guerrillas.

Most of the violence-torn Central American nation was reported quiet Wednesday — but authorities said guerrillas killed four soldiers and one policeman in an attack Tuesday on the town of Chirilagua, 85 miles east of San Salvador.

The violence also has shut down 170 of about 2,000 elementary and high schools around the nation, only three days into the 1981 school year, Education Ministry officials said.

Four persons shot to death were found around the capital at the end of a dusk-to-dawn curfew imposed by the ruling military-Christian Democratic junta. The attack was triggered Jan. 10 offensive that claimed at least 1,200 lives in five days of fighting in the country of 4.8 million.

The Human Rights Commission sent Junta President Jose Napoleon Duarte an open letter saying his attacks on the panel had triggered "serious moral and physical abuses against commission members by army and security forces."

Duarte, a Christian Democrat, charged at a recent news conference that the commission was "infiltrated by leftist organizations" and was a propaganda arm of the guerrillas fighting to topple the junta.

"Our mission is to safeguard the human rights of the Salvadoran people," said the commission, a self-appointed group that has no ties with the International Human Rights Commission.

Right-wing death squads, which operate with tacit armed forces approval, have assassinated two commission members and bombed the panel's headquarters several times in the past year.

Commission members have steadfastly blamed government forces and "right-wing death squads" for the kidnappings, tortures and assassinations of most of the more than 10,000 people killed last year in political violence.

The junta has insisted it does prosecute troops who violate human rights, and on Tuesday announced the arrests of eight soldiers accused of raping a girl and then killing three friends who tried to investigate the crime.

The government in the past year is known to have either dismissed or arrested at least 70 policemen and national guardsmen, accused of common-crimes such as holding up stores and shooting people to death in drunken brawls.

aboard the ship when it exploded, burned and sank Tuesday. With the possibility of the death toll exceeding 500, the disaster on the inter-island liner 700 miles east of Jakarta would rank among the worst in recent years.

An Indonesian newspaper, the Sinar Harapan, quoted Captain Rivali, who commanded the ill-fated vessel, saying the state-owned Peln company ran the ship too hard, with too little maintenance.

"There were some trips where we would go from Sumatra to Jakarta and then to Sulawesi in just eight days, with not more than a four-day halt in each port," the captain said. "That's not enough. Although I complained, Peln management kept on pushing to have the journey completed in eight days," he said.

Peln officials said the ship was "in perfect condition at the moment the accident occurred." The sinking was preceded by an engine room explosion on Monday that started a fire.

Opposition parliamentarians said the ship was not seaworthy but pro-government Golkar Party members said the government should decide what caused the disaster.

When the explosion and fire rocked the 8,000-ton ship, the passengers huddled on deck, hoping a nearby ship could save them.

But fire, fog and rough seas prevented other ships from coming closer than 200 yards and Tuesday a second blast jarred the Tampomas-2 and it sank, leaving hundreds in the choppy sea.

The first survivors arrived late Wednesday in Ujungpandang, Sulawesi, their original destination on a voyage that began in Jakarta. Anxious families waited for news, witnesses said.

Peln said the actual death toll may never be known because many passengers boarded without tickets. One search official said 1136 persons were on board, including 82 crew members, but Peln sources said 1,140 people may have been on board. Peln put the crew figure at 85.

Peln officials, who wished to remain anonymous, said they could not rule out the possibility that many more people were on the 10-year-old ship, bought last year for $8.5 million from Japan's Komodo Marine Co.

An Indonesian reporter who flew over the vessel as it was sinking said he saw "over 500 people still trapped on the deck of the ship, hanging at the rail, obviously unable to swim."

Land board questions erroneous sale

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Land Board members admitted a mistake when they authorized sale of a state building in Idaho Falls to a health district.

Members, however, hesitated Wednesday before deciding to turn over the deed to the purchaser.

They said they wanted additional time to study the matter.

William Arnsell of the District 7 Health Department said he made the purchase in good faith and shouldn't be penalized because the state statutes prohibit it and the state made the mistake.

Last year the board authorized the Department of Employment to sell its surplus building in Idaho Falls, only later to find that the District 7 Health Department was not a state agency.

Under Idaho law the building cannot be sold to local entities without first advertising it for sale.

Arnsell said he originally purchased the building to move his department into it, but since has agreed to sell it to his present landlord for purchase of the building currently housing the health facility.

Gov. John Evans noted that Arnsell was selling the building for $12,000 more than he paid the state. He said he hesitated to let the health department have the building without the state getting the gain.

"Maybe we should repeal the contract and advertise for bids," Evans said. "Maybe we should back away and take another look at this deal."

Secretary of State Pete Cenarrussa said if the state backs out of the contract now, "it may be ground-for a lawsuit." He said the state was morally obligated.

Attorney General David Leroy agreed he felt the state should benefit from the profit, but also said he believed the state had an obligation to provide Arnsell with clear title.

"The fact we inadvertently did not comply with the statutes shouldn't void this deal," Leroy said.

Finally, board members said they wanted a little more time to study the matter and would get back to Arnsell shortly.

Court tells judge to explain tape lockup

BOISE (UPI) — Fourth District Judge Robert Rowell has been ordered by the Idaho Supreme to explain why tapes filmed by a Boise television station of the Idaho State Prison riot last July should not be released to Ada County Prosecutor Jim Harris.

An attorney for KBCI TV said the station will fight the order, which requests Rowell to show why the tapes should not be given to Harris or surrender them to him by Feb. 12. Rowell, who has had possession of the tapes since August, denied a motion by the state and Ada County to view and reproduce the original tapes on Dec. 22.

Harris said the original tapes are needed to help prosecute inmates charged with rioting and destroying the prison last July. Criminal charges have been filed against 24 inmates.

Lawmen help raise money for rewards

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — The Kootenai County Deputy Sheriff's Association is helping several state agencies to raise reward money for the capture of the man accused of killing two Idaho Fish and Game wardens in Owyhee County on Jan. 5.

New association President Terry Morgan said Wednesday the group has raised $400 so far — $5 per deputy — and members plan to contact law enforcement organizations throughout North Idaho.

Morgan said deputies hope to pool their money with that collected by Fish and Game officials and trappers' organizations and eventually boost the $10,000 offer approved by the Idaho Senate to a total of $25,000.

"Policemen have to stick together," Morgan said. "If one of us was killed up here we'd like to think officers all over Idaho would help find who ever did it."

Morgan said the man authorities believe killed conservation officers Conley Elms and William Pogue is Claude Lafayette Dallas, a trapper and "fast draw artist" now believed to be traveling alone through the Northwest back country.

Police last week learned that Dallas had bought equipment in Sandpoint several months before the murder, said Jack A. Neal, chief of the Coeur d'Alene office of the Fish and Game.

Judge: suit lacks grounds for relief

BOISE (UPI) — A federal judge has ruled that a suit brought on behalf of the Idaho Wildlife Federation in a dispute over plans to increase logging in two Idaho forests does not state any grounds on which relief could be granted.

U.S. District Court Judge Fred M. Taylor said Wednesday he had given the plaintiff 20 days in which to file an amended complaint.

John Bonine, of Eugene, Ore., co-director of the University of Oregon Environmental Law Clinic, which represents the federation, said an amended complaint would be filed probably in less than 20 days. "It's no problem," Bonine said. "We just have to add a couple of sentences to the complaint."

Taylor said, "I ruled that the complaint didn't state a claim sufficient to grant relief. The Idaho Wildlife Federation did not allege any injury, in fact, to any individual member."

Taylor said he also denied a plaintiff's motion seeking to prohibit the defendants' "positive defense." The defendants, the U.S. Forest Service and various officials, and Evergreen Forest Products Inc., which intervened on behalf of the defendants, seek to use as a defense allegations that the National Wildlife Federation and University of Oregon Environmental Law Clinic are the "real parties of interest" in the suit instead of the Idaho organization.

The Idaho Wildlife Federation and Nez Perce Indian Tribe claim in the complaint the Forest Service did not adequately assess potential environmental impacts before deciding to increase logging in portions of the Payette and Boise national forests of Central Idaho.

Taylor said his ruling on the motions was preliminary action needed to bring the case to trial.

More prisoners return

BOISE (UPI) — Fourteen more Idaho State Penitentiary inmates housed out-of-state since the riot at the Idaho facilities last July have been returned.

They arrived in Idaho by a chartered airplane Tuesday from a Colorado prison. Penitentiary security chief Larry Wright said another 35 inmates will be returned in the next two weeks.

Group seeks to repeal 'sagebrush' law

PHOENIX (UPI) — A coalition of conservation and environmental groups intends to circulate petitions in an attempt to repeal Arizona's Sagebrush Rebellion law which was passed last year over the governor's veto.

An organization known as the Save Our Public Lands Committee informed the secretary of state's office that it planned to circulate petitions seeking a vote of the people in the 1982 general election.

The organization has until July 1982 to gather 53,856 valid signatures. If approved by the voters, the initiative would repeal a law allowing Arizona to join the State of Nevada in a lawsuit aimed at gaining control of Bureau of Land Management lands.

There are 12.5 million acres of BLM land in Arizona.

Besides repealing the state law, the public vote would inform Congress and James Watt, the new interior secretary in the Reagan Administration, that Arizona is not interested in getting BLM lands, said Mary Jane Shoun of Phoenix, secretary of the committee circulating the petitions.

Mrs. Shoun said the committee included the Audubon Society, the Defenders of Wildlife, the Arizona Wildlife Federation and the Sierra Club. Eventually, the committee hopes to have nearly two dozen members, she said.

"One of our main concerns is that the Legislature has never appropriated enough money for the state Land Department to adequately manage the nine million-plus acres that is now under its control," she said.

There also are concerns that if the BLM land is turned over to Arizona,

"mining interests, ranchers, developers and so forth will be trying to get their hands [in]."

"The lands will then not be public lands — they will not belong to the public anymore," she said. "It would be a matter of public domain versus private looting."

Chief Assistant Attorney General Rod McDougall said his office has "worked up a couple of different pleadings" but the suit authorized by the Legislature has not been filed.

McDougall said his office was trying to work out technicalities with the State of Nevada over who would be primarily responsible for the suit. At the same time, the attorneys are waiting to see what transpires in Washington, he said.

Two bills dealing with the Sagebrush Rebellion died in the last congressional session but may be revived in the more conservative atmosphere of the present Congress, McDougall said.

"Also, we have a new cabinet member (Watt) whom I think will be more favorable than in the past," he said. "Watt is more in sympathy than the former director, as I think, is the new president."

McDougall said there also was a practical matter of deciding how and where the Sagebrush suit should be filed.

Nevada wants Arizona to join in its suit but the Arizona attorney general's office is leaning to the position that two separate suits should be filed, he said.

Also, if it's decided there will be only one suit, the state where it is filed will have more authority over the suit than the other state, McDougall said.

Environment impact study filed on BPA

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The final environmental impact statement on Bonneville Power Administration's role in the Pacific Northwest power supply system was filed Jan. 23 after five years of work, BPA reported Wednesday.

BPA Administrator Sterling Munro said although the statement was prepared before the Pacific Northwest Power Planning and Conservation Act was passed last year BPA's expanded role under the act is similar to one of the alternatives cited in the impact statement.

The statement was ordered in connection with a lawsuit over plans for an aluminum plant in Oregon.

"This is the most comprehensive examination of the Pacific Northwest's power supply arrangements ever done," Munro said. "I think it will become a valuable resource document for anyone interested in how the many government and utility institutions of the region work together to provide electricity and the environmental impacts of regional energy programs."

Iranians short tuition money

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — Weber State College officials say about 20 Iranian students have not yet received money from home to pay their tuition this quarter.

Anthony Spanos, international student advisor, said the students are having the same problems they have had for the past several months, since the war between Iraq and Iran started.

"The Iranian government is making it difficult for the students' parents to send money out of the country," said Spanos. Some American banks have upheld payments because of an "anti-Iranian sentiment," he added.

"We've had cases where it's proven the banks had the money there and hadn't alerted the students," he said.

Weber State gives the students until the fourth week of the quarter to scrape together the tuition money.

Spanos said most of the Iranians have been able to make the payments in the past. But five or six per quarter have had to cancel their registration.

Those students are reported to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, Spanos said.

"But Immigration has been quite lenient because they understand the problem," he said. The students usually just miss a quarter of school. Weber has about 150 Iranian students. But that number will drop this summer when many graduate. The school also has a new quota that permits only 75 foreign students of any nationality.

Pound kills dog, woman files suit

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A Salt Lake County woman whose registered St. Bernard was killed at an animal pound has filed a $5,500 suit.

The suit names the county, County Commissioner Bill Dunn and Animal Control Officer Shelby Dowell.

The dog was picked up last October. But Edith Marie Shafer couldn't reach anyone at the pound until the next day, a Sunday. She was told the pound was not open for animals kept on Sunday, but to call back the next day.

The next day, Monday, was Columbus Day and she was told to call back on Tuesday. Mrs. Shafer said instead of calling, she drove to the pound where she discovered her St. Bernard had been killed just two hours earlier.

The woman's suit Tuesday seeks $500, the value of the dog, and $5,000 in punitive damages.

Nile Cox recalls early days near Buhl

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

BUHL — When Nile Cox was 9 years old he and another boy spent a week riding inside a railroad freight car.

While being virtually locked inside anything that long (there was no way they could get out) might seem a little gruesome, Cox considered it "a lark."

Placing the two children in the immigrant car which was carrying the family's worldly goods to Buhl was based on simple economics; riding there, in a corner among the livestock, furniture and implements, the boys did not need a passenger ticket.

Cox's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Cox, early Buhl area pioneers, moved here from Fairview, Utah, in 1914. The town, where Cox was born April 9, 1905, is about 100 miles south of Salt Lake City. The many stops along the 350-mile route caused the journey to take an entire week.

Cox said his mother had packed a cache of food and water so the boys had plenty to eat. His father took care of the livestock at each stop.

"We had a little cubby hole in one end of the car," Cox said. His companion was coming to Buhl to join a brother already here.

Cox's mother and the younger children remained in Utah until his father and an uncle built a house on 38 acres the elder Cox had purchased from Hadley Barker, father of State Sen. John Barker.

This farm, west of Buhl in the Deep Creek community, is now owned by the third generation of Coxes. It has been in the family ever since it was taken out of sagebrush more than 65 years ago. Only seven acres were seeded to grass when his father bought the place.

Each successive owner has purchased additional land so now Cox's son has more than 200 acres and purchased the home place from his father in 1944. Ten years ago he sold it to his son, Evan Cox. But Cox and his wife retain a life-estate-ownership on the corner property where their house and garage stand. When they are through with it, the lot will then revert to whoever owns the rest of the farm at that time.

Although he lived on a nearby place when he was first married and farmed near Castletford for three years, Cox has lived in the home place so many years now he laughingly accepts the unofficial title of "mayor of Deep Creek."

A few years ago Cox received a

Cox, who has lived most of his life on the family farm along Deep Creek, recalls when ice-jam tore out bridge in 1916 letter this addressed from an Indian student wanting information about the area.

"My mailman just left it with me," Cox laughed.

While it would be difficult for anyone driving through the farming area now to see anything resembling a community center, let alone a "town," when Cox arrived here as a boy there was a real "settlement" consisting of a store, pool hall and dance hall, south of the Cox farm.

And a schoolhouse, on two acres taken out of the original Cox 40, had been built only two years previous to their arrival. The former Deep Creek school house, where Cox got his education, still stands, but has been remodeled into a private residence.

Although the small stream is scarcely noticeable now when crossed on the high paved road, Deep Creek made local history back in 1916 when an ice-jam tore out the bridge. A heavy snow followed by a chinook wind caused "water to go everywhere," Cole said.

Chunks-of-ice "four-feet-thick and as big as this room" soon demolished the small bridge. Fortunately, it occurred late in the afternoon and most all the school children were already home.

The next morning, Cole and his siblings got to school by jumping across the ice.

The canal company was then paying a 20-cent bounty on muskrat tails. Since many of the rats were killed in the ice jam, Nile and other youngsters scoured the banks for dead muskrats to earn extra money.

"He remembers" having a tough time "at first at school since he was not only a newcomer, but the only Mormon student then in the community."

But other Mormons soon moved to the area, and the first LDS Sunday School was held in a home four miles south of the Cox place. Later, classes were held in the old stone dance hall owned by Ernest Molander.

Cox said these three buildings, which served as a real gathering place for the farming area, had the square false fronts similar to the kind always pictured in Western movies.

"In those horse-and-buggy days, the six miles into Buhl was a long way to go," he said. But within a few years improved roads—and more—automobiles made the distance disappear, and the old rock buildings fell into disuse.

Cox and another boy had the job of sweeping out the beer bottles and other debris left from the Saturday night dances each Sunday morning.

In addition to helping his father farm, when he was 14 Cox drove a milk wagon, picking up milk in the area for the old Kunze cheese factory located on the Sandmever place a mile south of the Cedar beet dump. In 1923, he worked on a mousing crew with a team of horses on the high line canal.

He met his future wife while serving a mission for his church in Rapid City, S.D. After they met she moved to Racine, Wis., but the courtship continued by mail. He and Anna Potter were married Oct. 27, 1927 in the LDS temple at Mantli, Utah.

For 13 years the couple farmed a mile and a half southeast of the home place and then spent three years at Castletford. When his father retired Cox returned to the home place.

The couple has six children, Anila Allred of Wendell, Belmont

Creative dramatics successful in nursing home

By ELLEN MAY GOLDBERG
Chicago Sun-Times

Playing games when you're elderly is not only fun, it's also a way of getting to know each other.

And getting to know each other is very important when your life is within the walls of a nursing home. Feelings of inadequacy, loneliness and loss of the purpose of life are bound to overcome you. Little by little you give up your independence, your humanity, your reason for being alive.

Melvin "Toddy" Richman, Anne Thurman and Molly Grabeman have found an antidote to the passive and destructive effects of merely existing. They play theater games with the residents of nursing homes.

Actually, what they do is far more purposeful than just game-playing. It is a carefully planned program of creative-dramatics-and-body-movements to help residents of nursing homes express themselves and get to know each other.

What is creative dramatics? Using her eyes, face, hands, every part of herself, Richman explained: "Creative dramatics is a way of heightening perception. It uses both hemispheres of the brain. Drama is particularly useful because it elevates the sense of being alive.

Through dance movement or guided improvisations based on the person's own life experiences, vitality is partially restored because memories are revived and everything in the whole person is used. This way the person is better able to talk to himself and others."

All three women have sound backgrounds in either therapeutic training, dramatics and/or education. Richman has a master's degree in education and a certificate in mental health education. She has studied at the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis. Thurman is a faculty member in the theater department at Northwestern University and has given courses on drama for the elderly. Grabeman is a professional actress on stage and TV, and is a director in both children's and seniors' theaters.

Having seen the loss of self-esteem residents of nursing homes experience, I was excited by the goals these lively, dedicated women are achieving—I viewed—the colored slides Richman showed me of residents, most of them in wheelchairs, acting out improvisations from their own life experiences.

"Show me not life to be angry," "You and your friend are making a bed. Let's see how you'd do it," "Feel beautiful—all over," "What does the color pink remind you of?"

The answers are all different.

Each person reveals a side of himself or herself that no one else knew.

Before the classes start, a training session is held for everyone who works in the nursing home, from the professional staff to the aides, cleaning and custodial help. After that, all sessions are private, with just the residents and teachers present. This establishes a sense of trust and unity that provides therapy rather than just recreation.

For the first time in his two-year stay, 62-year-old Robert sang a song. Harriet, crippled from a stroke, had never said more than a few words—but she laughed out loud at one of Robert's funny remarks. Imagine what a release of feelings that must have been. And when Mary, who usually sat like a stone, began telling an incident from her childhood, everyone sat spellbound. With the telling, Mary became a real person — one of them — not just another lump of humanity in a wheel chair.

Listening to Richman tell about her goals, I was aware of her enthusiasm and joyfulness. Her eyes danced with pleasure; her arms and hands are all part of her story.

"While our work is a professional undertaking with stated goals and purpose, it's hardly a one-way provision of service. We truly enjoy our sessions. We've come to know each member as a real person; we're involved with each one — witty, cranky, shy, loquacious, lovable. We get as much as we give."

If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write to Heartline, 114 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a self addressed, stamped envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

that could assist me with this problem. However, I have no idea who to call or contact about it. The people at the nursing home where I receive the therapy said they didn't know either, and that transportation is my responsibility. Could you tell me who to contact for any information available on transportation?—L.Y.

Answer: Every state has an Office on Aging. Commission on Aging, Bureau on Aging, Department of Elder Affairs or agency by some similar name, that can offer you all the information you need. One of their main functions is to provide valuable information on programs and services in your state. Since you live in a larger city, there might well be a more local branch of this agency in your own town, called the Area Agency on Aging. Also your city might have its own department on aging—in your local city government. You can call or write to your state office on aging to find out if there is an Area Agency on Aging or a city office near you. Or you can look in your telephone directory under state government listings, or call your city hall or mayor's office to find out the information number.

State and Area Agencies on Aging can offer you information on home health services, transportation services, health services and screening programs, counseling services for personal problems, nursing home and how to pick one, food and nutrition programs, and telephone reassurance projects such as "dial-a-friend," etc. They can also refer you to a particular agency or office to help you deal with a specific problem concerning any benefits you may receive.

Answer: In definition, a trust is a relationship with respect to property, where a person or company is given responsibility over the property, and any profit or income from such property is paid to a beneficiary for whom the trust was originally created to benefit. A trust allows one person (the trustee) to hold legal title to property, and another (the beneficiary) to have an equal title.

All trusts have certain vital and common characteristics. These characteristics are essential to the validity of the trust. • A trust must have a creator. • A trust must have a trustee, or one who is given the responsibility of executing the trust. The trustee can be an individual or a corporation (trust company) and there can be more than one trustee (co-trustees). • All trusts must have a beneficiary, or one who will benefit from the trust. The beneficiary may Cox of Kuna, Glenda Berry of Balise, Evan Cox of Deep Creek, Emma Kolsky of Kuna and Jay Cox of Kuna. There are 12 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren. This last number, soon will be 13, Mrs. Cox said.

Cox still helps his son with some farm tasks at times, expressing his enjoyment of his lifetime occupation. Through the years, the Cox farming operation has been a diversified one, raising hay, grain, beans as well as dairy and beef cattle.

"His hobby is to grab a pair of beer boots and shovel or do a little tractor work," Mrs. Cox said of her husband.

"About the only one I ever had to answer to was the banker," Cox said, referring to one of the traditional advantages farmers have in being their own boss.

In his earlier years before the days of combine and custom farming businesses, Cox said all the farmers in the neighborhood would help each other during the harvest. The women often would help each other also in providing the hearty meals needed by threshing crews.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Cox have been active in their church. He has served as president of the Sunday school, Young Men's MIA and as a high priest. His father was the presiding elder of the first LDS branch before there were enough members to constitute a ward.

According to his wife, Cox has become the "patriarch" of his clan, with not only their own children and grandchildren, but nieces and nephews gathering often at the Cox place.

The children usually all come for his birthday, and two years ago a reunion of the descendants of the Horatio Cox's nine children drew 16 persons. The Coxes had 83 of them at their home for lunch.

But Cox is glad to no longer be tied to daily responsibility.

"Now if there's a funeral in Utah or a golden wedding somewhere, we're free to go," he said.

Dear Abby

Patients should walk out on doctor

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday I took my 16-year-old daughter, whom I'll call Sally, for her first visit to a gynecologist, and I am still in shock at what happened in his office.

Sally had a very painful lump in her abdomen, and it took me three days to convince her that doctors were nice guys, concerned with helping people feel better, and that she must trust me and get help.

Well, the nurse led Sally into the examining room to prepare her for the examination. Sally was scared to death and had big tears in her eyes when she went in. The doctor came in, looked Sally in the eye, registered disgust and impatience, then he turned around and walked out. He then came to the front office and told the receptionist within my hearing to cancel the appointment! I heard this, I approached him and asked for an explanation. The doctor replied, "I am not about to see a grown girl who is crying!"

I couldn't believe my ears. The doctor stalked out and I asked the receptionist if I had heard right. She said, "Yes, he is the boss and can do anything he wants." I stood there, stunned. The doctor then returned and told me to get another doctor for "the child," then abruptly walked away.

This same doctor is supposed to perform surgery on me in the near future for a female problem. I had met him only once before, but was not aware that he is a man of so little patience and compassion. He has been practicing for many years, and certainly should have had experience with frightened young girls. Now Sally is more afraid than ever to trust doctors, or my word, and I am equally afraid to have this doctor treat me. Suppose a tear or two should stain my face? Will he also walk out on me?"

DEAR CLARKSVILLE: A considerate woman considers a man's wallet. So if you're considering seeing him again, be considerate.

DEAR ABBY: Just another example of how the man always gets the dirty end of the stick: When I ask a woman what she would do if she caught her husband in bed with another woman, she invariably replies, "I'd kill him."

Abby, why does the guy always get the blame when it takes two to tango?
—WONDERING
DEAR WONDERING: Because it is usually assumed that the guy asked the lady to tango, which is no longer a fair assumption.

Dr. Lamb

Hiatal hernia troublesome

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

Dear Dr. Lamb,

I have a hiatal hernia, and it has caused me a lot of misery and pain.

I'm not overweight so I'm wondering what caused the problem. The doctor told me to do situps and try to push my stomach down again when I got a stomach attack.

Are situps okay, or what kind of exercise could I do? What about wearing a girdle? Is there something that can be done to heal the hernia?

Dear Reader,

A hiatal hernia is caused from an overstretched opening in the diaphragm where the esophagus (food tube) passes through to connect to your stomach. The enlarged hole allows part of your stomach to slide through, or herniate, into the chest cavity. Usually, the stomach slides in and out. It may be in the normal position when you are standing up, but if you lie down a part slides through the enlarged hole.

The hole will enlarge because of too much pressure inside the abdominal cavity. That is why many women develop such a hernia during pregnancy. And it disappears after pregnancy. Obesity with increased pressure inside the abdomen also contributes to hiatal hernia. Such a hernia is more common as you get older.

That means you do not want to do things that contribute to the stomach sliding through the hole: A girdle simply squeezes the abdomen and may squeeze the stomach through the hole. Situps, since they contract your abdominal muscles, may not be such a good idea either. Better just stand up and relax and contract your abdominal muscles alternately to exercise your abdomen. Of course, there is no reason why a person can't do the many exercises done in the upright position, including walking, jogging, cycling or playing tennis.

I doubt you can really heal the hernia. The hole may shrink if it is not continually overstretched. That is why weight control is important.

The various things to do to avoid symptoms from a hernia are discussed in The Health Letter, number 4-8, Hiatal Hernia, Esophageal Reflux, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Incidentally, many people have a hiatal hernia and have no symptoms at all. The usual treatment is really to prevent the leakage of acid stomach contents backward into the lower esophagus.

I was born without oil glands in my nose. Consequently, I am constantly bothered with large dry crusts forming. It is difficult and nerve racking to get them loose. Can you advise me how to get relief from this affliction?

Dear Reader,

A dry nasal lining is rather common, but evidently you have a worse problem than usual.

The secretions from the nose are soluble. You can use a small piece of cotton and soak it in warm (not hot) water, then insert the wet cotton into the nose and leave it there for 15 to 30 minutes. When you remove it you should be able to swab out the crusts with a warmly moist cotton swab.

After cleaning the nose you may get some help by coating the inside of your nose with a liquid petroleum (Vaseline). Just swab it over the lining. This will preserve the moisture and keep crusts from sticking to the nose. This can help prevent nose bleeds in people who have local irritation from removing crusts.

In addition, samples of the applicant's work (no more than five) and one to three letters of recommendation from qualified individuals should accompany the application. One letter must be from a communications instructor or department chairman.

The winning applicant will be announced at the IPW state convention April 10 through 12 in Boise, and the scholarship funds deposited with the bursar of the appropriate university before fall semester. Verification of registration as a full-time student will be required before funds are released.

Vet is 106

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — The nation's second oldest veteran is 106 today and relatives say the reason for his longevity is his immunity to several infectious diseases.

But James Wylie Mahaffey did have to give up some favorite pastimes enjoyed in his younger days. After all, he can't smoke four pipefuls a day and drink scotch forever. He quit the nasty habits in his late 90s, said his daughter, Sybil Payne.

In 1898, Army doctors noticed Mahaffey seemed to have a built-in immunity to yellow fever, so they used the 22-year-old enlisted man to minister to yellow fever victims during the Spanish-American War.

Mrs. Payne of Columbia, S.C., said "back during the big flu epidemic in South Carolina in 1918, everybody seemed to have the flu but him." She said he has exhibited a life-long immunity to most infectious diseases, even the common cold.

Oldest documented living American dies at age of 113 years

SAN GABRIEL, Calif. (UPI)—On her 113th birthday, Fanny Thomas said the secrets of her long life were applause three times a day and no husband to bother her.

Listed in the Guinness Book of World Records as the oldest documented living American, the retired businesswoman and former suf-fragee died last Thursday at Alderwood Convalescent Hospital following a bout with pneumonia.

Her death was disclosed during the weekend by Miss Thomas' niece, Ruth Eastman, one of three surviving nieces, a nephew, 13 grandnieces and grandnephews, 45 greatnieces and greatnephews, and 16 great-greatnieces and greatnephews.

In a birthday interview last April, Miss Thomas said her one of her longevity secrets was applause three times a day.

"I eat ordinary food," she said. "I have three meals a day and I don't eat what I don't like."

And being a spinster was another of her secrets.

"She told me she never married, and so she never had a man to bother her," said Margaret Perry, director of nurses at the nursing home.

Miss Thomas was born April 24, 1867, in the small town of Denver, Ill., according to an entry in a family Bible. Further documentation came from a Colorado census report in 1900 that recorded the 32-year-old woman as a millinery store owner.

The Social Security Administration acknowledged former slave Charlie Smith as the oldest living American at 137 years of age at the time of his death in 1979, but the Guinness people said their research showed the Liberton-born Smith to have been only 104.

Mrs. Eastman said her aunt was never impressed with being the oldest living American, despite birthday greetings from presidents during the years.

Actress, 82, marks her 60th anniversary as star

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eva Le Gallienne is celebrating her 60th anniversary as a full-blooded star in "To Grandmother's House We Go."
The play, a comedy about the relationships between generations in an old Connecticut family, opened on Broadway Jan. 15 at the Biltmore Theater.
It's long on talk and short on action, and adds little to the reputations of the formidable, 82-year-old Miss Le Gallienne or Canadian playwright Joanna M. Glass.

The first act of "Grandmother's House" is all exposition, establishing the characters through an awful lot of chit-chat about nothing. When the plot unrolls in the second act, it's so thin and quickly over with that one realizes why the author had to pad out the first half.

Widowed Emma Braithwaite (Le Gallienne), "Grandle" to her three grown-up grandchildren, lives with her widowed daughter Harriet and an aging family servant in a too-big country house near Hartford, Conn. Harriet's son and two daughters, all divorced or about to be divorced, ask separately if they can come and stay temporarily.

According to the play, Grandle, with little money to spare, reluctantly says "Yes," then dies. Harriet, made of stronger stuff, says "No." She plans to sell the house and buy a small apartment for herself and her Uncle Paul.

"I went at noon to bathe in Martin's saltwater-bath, and floating on my back, fell asleep, and slept near an hour by my watch, without sinking or turning over. I never did before, and should hardly have thought it possible. Water is the easiest bed that can be." The foregoing describes the sort of relaxation therapy now for sale in several metropolitan salons. Rest at zero gravity in a saline solution. Abandon worry. Eliminate outer perceptions. Let go, completely. Omit the page. But not now. The lines at the beginning of this paragraph were written in his diary by Benjamin Franklin.

Birds may be sparse, but Idaho has turkey season

By STUMURRELL
Special to The Times-News

The Commission sets turkey seasons, but where are the birds? How do you hunt turkeys in Idaho? These are some of the questions hunters ask when they see the news that a spring turkey season has been established. The 1981 spring gobbler season will run from April 25 through May 3 in Units 11, 13, 14, 18, 19A, 22, 23, 32A and Unit 39. Only bearded turkeys are legal, and a $5.50 turkey tag is required in addition to a hunting license.

A brief history and discussion of turkey habitat requirements will help the sportsman to better understand the status of our present turkey populations. Wild turkeys are not native to Idaho, probably because the habitat is marginal.

The western, or Merriam's turkey, requires a minimum of 10,000 acres in its range because of its great wandering abilities. In better areas, such as the Black Hills of South Dakota, winter feed is abundant in the form of acorns and pine nuts. Idaho is lacking in this type of habitat but does have mild winters with green grass available for grazing at some of the lower elevations.

In the early 1960s, biologists decided to try introducing Merriam's turkeys to areas that might be suitable. The first release of 17 birds occurred near Whitebird on Jan. 14, 1961, with turkeys live-trapped from wild flocks in Colorado. An additional 22 birds were placed along the lower Salmon River by 1963. The turkeys did well and spread along both sides of the drainage from Riggins to Whitebird. They reached an estimated 2,500 birds by 1967 when the first 150 hunting permits were issued, and 17 turkeys were harvested.

All turkey hunting is presently on a general basis. A number of birds were live-trapped from these existing populations and transferred to other areas of the state. The population in Unit 39 along the Boise River came from such a transplant.

About 1971, the turkeys began experiencing a general drop in populations and also moved to new areas from their usual haunts. The reasons for the decline are unknown. That has been the status in recent years and local turkey hunters are not sure why. Last year, 1980, permits were issued and 33 birds harvested. More than half the harvest occurs during the spring season, probably because there are fewer other hunting seasons to tempt the sportsmen. We do not feel the hunter has been a factor in the decline since there is usually about a 50 percent dieoff each year whether or not they are hunted.

In an attempt to bolster the turkeys in Idaho, we agreed to a trade of 120 Merriam turkeys from South Dakota for 40 pine martens. It was thought this genetic strain of Black Hills bird might be more adaptable to our habitat. We have presently traded 20 pine martens and received 30 turkeys. More birds are due for Unit 39 this year, but lack of snow has prevented successful trapping operations in the Black Hills. If they are transplanted, Unit 39 will be removed from the spring gobbler hunt this year.

How do you hunt turkeys? The first and most important step is to locate the flock. One of the best ways is know a local person who knows of their haunts. Many of these birds are on private land, and permission to hunt is usually difficult to obtain. I hunted turkeys for five years in the 70s, and the two birds I bagged were the results of information obtained from local people. Good turkey habitat consists of open cheatgrass hillsides with some big ponderosa pines interspersed with Douglas fir stands on the north-facing slopes. Dense thickets of shrubs that produce a berry crop are also important. Turkeys require free water and springs are a favorite loafing site. The two birds I killed in the fall were stuffed with grasshoppers. Turkeys are great grazers and green vegetation makes up much of their annual diet.

Hunting techniques include glassing feeding areas during morning and late afternoon hours, sneaking into draws where springs are located in mid-day and calling. Turkeys are extremely tough birds and heavy goose loads in a 12-gauge shotgun are the accepted rule, although a rifle is also legal during the fall hunt. They are large birds and difficult to judge whether or not they are in a range. A gobbler must have a visible beard, these are modified feathers that look like a horse tail emerging from the center of their breast, to be legal in the spring. Any bird that is seen strutting with their tail spread in a fan shape is also a gobbler.

Torchlight parade honors ex-hostages

By KAREN LITTLE PRESSMAN
Special to The Times-News

The former U.S. hostages were honored Tuesday evening with a torchlight parade down Sun Valley's Mt. Baldy.

During heavy snows, a procession of 52 ski patrol members and mountain personnel carried torches down Baldy to welcome home the former hostages.

The procession skied down College Run to Graduate and then crossed over to Mid and Lower Warm Springs.

"It was the first torchlight parade down Baldy we've had in years," Kathy Hoy, Sun Valley's publicity director, said. "The last time we had one down Baldy was sometime in the early 50's."

Seeding continues
When Sun-Valley Company found out another good storm was brewing this week, it asked Colorado International Corporation (CIC) to return to the Wood River Valley.

CIC spent much of December in Sun Valley and has been rehired by the Sun Valley Company on a week-to-week basis to cloud seed to help increase Baldy's snowpack according to Hoy.

With headquarters in Boulder, Colo., CIC has set up temporary base at Friedman Memorial Airport in Halley and is waiting for the right conditions to cloud seed.

Cloud seeders don't make snow, they just help Mother Nature a bit.

In order to seed clouds, the pilot needs something to seed. Clouds, a good temperature profile and some moisture are the desired ingredients.

"The optimal temperature to seed clouds is minus 15 degrees Celsius," Hoy said.

When conditions are right, the pilot, flying a Cessna 170, disperses flares filled with silver iodide into the clouds from a cartridge rack housed on the bottom of the plane.

When the flare, which resembles a Roman candle, is fired into the clouds, it looks like smoke. Hoy explained.

"It's not anything you can reach right out and grab a handful of," she said.

"When ejected, the silver iodide forms an artificial nucleus for water to form around in order to make a snowflake," Hoy said. "This gives the water droplets in the air something to form on and the natural process begins."

Mother Nature provides dust for snowflake nuclei. Cloud seeders use silver iodide.

However, only small amounts of silver iodide are used in cloud seeding. In an hour of seeding, about 400 grams (less than a pound) of silver iodide are used per 1,000 to 2,000 tons of air.

Although the cloud seeding target is Baldy, pilots seed some distance from the mountain.

"How far out depends really on how fast the storm is moving," Hoy said. "It's a fast moving storm, they'll probably seed closer to Baldy because it will come in quickly and dump."

No one can say for sure if cloud seeding is a successful effort. But one wonders when Sun Valley reported nine inches on Baldy from last weekend's snowstorm (with cloud seeding efforts in operation) and nearby towns received just a few inches. Skiers were happily enjoying a major snowfall Wednesday.

'Coin' ski racing

Now is your chance to win tickets to a Joe Cannon show or to an evening performance at the Elkhorn Saloon.

Skiers will have a chance to win these tickets racing on Elkhorn Mt. using the Coin Operated Racing System provided by Reliable Racing Supply of New York.

This new concept is ski racing debuts on Elkhorn Mt. Feb. 3-6 from 1:30 p.m. to 3 p.m.

"It's a racing system that you set up on a hill," said Doug Woodcock, Elkhorn-ski director. "You get in the starting gate and put a token in a box. The system gives you a countdown then the racer skis the course and when you finish your time is flashed on a big board. It's all automatic."

Woodcock will run the course at 1:30 p.m. each of the four days.

"Anyone skiing who comes within 10 percent of my time will get free tickets to Joe Cannon and anyone coming within five percent will get complimentary tickets to the evening show of their choice at the Elkhorn Saloon," Woodcock said.

In addition, Mick Mickelson will be videotaping all the skiers participating. Everyone who runs the course will have a chance to see themselves on tape at no charge.

Mickelson will replay the tapes at Godfrey's on the Elkhorn Mall every afternoon after the racing session.

For more information, contact the Elkhorn Sports Center at 622-4511, extension 1111.

Nationwide outdoors poll to be conducted soon

BOISE — More than 100,000 households will get telephone calls and about 40,000 individuals will be interviewed this year during a national survey of fishing, hunting and wildlife activities.

The survey has been conducted every five years since 1955 by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to gather information about participation in hunting and fishing activities.

According to Lynn Greenwalt, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service director, the results of the study will help federal and state resource managers meet the growing demand for fishing, hunting and other similar recreation opportunities.

He said the 1975 survey showed that almost 96 million Americans nine years of age and older were involved in one or more types of wildlife-related recreation. The total included 20.6 million hunters, 53.9 million anglers and more than 40 million persons who observed wildlife.

The 1980 survey will be conducted in two phases — the first starting this month when the households, randomly selected throughout the nation, will be polled by telephone.

Phase two starts in March and April, when individuals will be interviewed by the U.S. Census Bureau.

The survey is financed with proceeds from excise taxes on sporting arms, ammunition, archery equipment and fishing tackle, as authorized by the Federal Aid in Fish and Wildlife Restoration Acts. The report is scheduled for release early in 1982, Greenwalt said.

New snow improves skiing conditions

Magic Mountain re-opened its doors to anxious skiers Wednesday, thus bringing all southern Idaho ski resorts back to life.

Magic, the last of the southern Idaho resorts to re-open after closing because of lack of snow, received eight inches Tuesday afternoon.

Pomerelle also received eight inches of the white stuff and is also operating at top condition. Sun Valley and Soldier Mountain were unable to be reached Wednesday.

"Everything is covered up and the skiing is superb," said an official at Magic Mountain. "We have a good base and it looks like it's going to stay snowed in."

Idea growing for public lands interspaced with ag lands

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News sports writer

TWIN FALLS — The idea of keeping public lands interspaced in agricultural reclamation projects is about 20 years old but still growing.

The idea of Game Department, along with landowners and the Bureau of Land Management, is knee deep in the isolated tract projects. These usually sagebrush tracts can be found in the new tracts, some in the North Fork area and about 217, ranging from a couple of acres to 40 acres, in the Belle Rapids project.

The isolated tracts are intended for the enhancement of wildlife — in this case basically pheasants but in periphery for dozens of species. They are nesting and winter cover for wildlife on these sprinkler irrigated agricultural project which are usual denude of all cover from harvest time to the following growing season.

The combination of agricultural land and wildlife is considered the best possible habitat for pheasants, described as "products of the fringe."

The birds are offered the escape from civilization, particularly in the key areas of reproduction and winter cover they survive by eating what the farmer plants and/or leaves.

That these tracts have prevented the complete demise of pheasants in sprinkler irrigated and clean-farmer practice lands is amply shown. A 40-acre tract of sagebrush in the west of Burley provides the winter cover for pheasant populations in a 16-square mile area. With aid of a boy scout troop, a BLM "flushing survey" flushed over 500 birds from that one patch. Without it, the birds would not have survived the winter.

But the isolated tract project has some detractors, basically landowners who decry the spread of noxious weeds and debris from these unutilized lands. Additionally, the BLM and Fish and Game Department have discovered hundreds of instances of trespass that further reduce the desirability of having these tract abutting private property.

There are instances of farmer killing these 40 acre tracts although they have neither the deed nor the license to do so. Some landowners use the tracts for storing their equipment when not in use. The public doesn't help by trying to convert these lands into garbage dumps. Beekeepers put hives — and add frequent harassment by visiting them — on the lands.

Some aren't fenced. There are many, many instances where the farmer's plow has over-reached by 10 to 50 feet into these unmarked tracts. Clear profit for the farmer, in one sense, but perhaps equitable considering he's been feeding the wildlife these many years.

The major problem, of course, is money. Funding for management, fencing, etc. is scarce.

The Magic Valley area, with well over 200 tracts, the department can afford just two overseers.

Now you know
By United Press International

By weight, the average adult is 43 percent muscle, 26 percent skin, 17.5 percent bone, 7 percent blood, 2.7 percent liver, 2.2 percent brain, 2.2 percent intestines, 1.5 percent lungs, 0.5 percent kidneys, 0.2 percent spleen and 0.1 percent pancreas.

The plans are ambitious. Fencing and signing — as open to public hunting — are considered musts for all these tracts. Additionally, the department, through research here and other states, has a thorough knowledge of the blend of trees, shrubs, grasses, etc., that combine best for providing protection against heat in the summer, cold in the winter, cover for nesting and even some diet.

In most cases a major problem is water. All the new land is cultivated by a water source either well underground or piped long distances. It would be economically unfeasible for the department to dig wells at each site to water vegetation enhancement. For that reason, the department enters into cooperative agreements with landowner-farmers. They will allow a farmer to till perhaps half a tract provided he agrees to water any vegetation the department is putting on the other half for wildlife use.

In some instances a farmer may be granted the right to plant all of a tract under provision that he leaves half of the crop unharvested at year's end so wildlife will have a food and cover supply for wintering.

The number of give and take agreements between farmers and the department might be as varied as the number of tracts. All are designed to accommodate a need for wildlife. While the isolated tract projects do have pluses and minuses, it appears that owners, wildlife biologists and irrigators see a more malleable prospect on the horizon.

Officials of the Idaho Water Resources Board met with the Idaho Fish and Game Commission in Boise earlier in the month to discuss the new proposals.

The IWRB members noted irrigators viewed the new series of ideas as a definite step ahead, prompting Commission Chairman Steve Herrell, Twin Falls, to note "that's the most encouraging news I've heard since I've been on this commission."

Under the new proposals, more land would be set aside for wildlife enhancement than in any past projects. One of the stipulations for granting deeds requiring the land from public to private ownership would be compliance with the wildlife agreement — upon pain of losing total ownership.

As an example, a land applicant could be granted a total of 200 acres against a law-restricted 150 for private ownership. He would be charged with keeping those other 40 acres available for wildlife. However, in this instance, that 40 acres could be rotated every year.

Farmers saw this as a definite advantage, noting it would be an important tool allowing him to control weeds and growth that, left intact under the isolated tract idea, could infect the rest of the farm.

However, this idea could not be uniform throughout a project for two reasons. The first being that annual rotation would defeat the intent of many cases. Second, some portions of the reclaimed lands would never lend themselves to cultivation due to severe pitch or rock outcroppings. These would be left in permanent cover, much as the isolated tract projects of today.

Another of the new suggestions probably is the least liked among prospective landowners but not as drastically as one might think.

That would stipulate that any applicant obtaining land would agree not only to some type of tract enhancement but also that 70 percent of the total land area be open to public hunting — by permission.

The percentage would allow the landowner to post critical areas, such as unharvested crops and building areas. But the remaining 70 percent of his deeded land plus the enhancement property would be available to the public.
