Idaho Senate rejects diversion of Department of Water Resources funds

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Idaho Senate Monday turned back an attempt to siphon off part of $500,000 proposed for use by the Department of Water Resources.

By a vote of 19-15, senators then passed the bill adding that amount to the department's 1981-82 budget, which had been cut $400,000 below current spending by the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee.

A motion by Democrats to amend the measure failed, 13-23. Sen. Walter Yarbrough of Grand View was the only Republican to join with the Democrats.

That motion and the vote on the bill put most Republicans and Republican members of the joint committee on record for restoring their earlier budget cuts for the department.

Earlier Monday, the Senate Finance Committee voted, 9-1, to recommend passage.

The measure, Senate Bill 1236, now goes to the House, where Rep. Vard Chaburn, R-Albion, said he also expected attempts to reallocate the $500,000.

"Many budgets are short, not just water resources," Sen. Ronald Belletsbacher, D-Grangeville, said in arguing to amend the bill.

"It looks like we have plenty of money for canals and not enough for kids."

But Majority Leader James Risch, R-Boise, countered that there were probably "35 different proposals to divvy up" the money in the 35-member senate.

He argued agreement on how to amend the bill would be impossible and would cause a delay in adjourning the Legislature.

Sponsor Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, said senators should vote against the bill and return it to the finance committee if they wanted it changed.

The bill would use funds to be repaid to the state by the American Falls Reservoir District for part of a 1974 project at American Falls Dam.

Barker suggested the Legislature next January could use an additional $600,000 repayment due from Idaho Power Co. for needy programs mentioned by Democrats.

Belletsbacher noted higher education, public schools and public television were "still short" and that wood control, substance abuse, and state meat inspections "were eliminated."

"Water resources could get by on a little less. Everyone else has," he said.

The $500,000 additional for the department's budget would fund dam safety, engineering, resource analysts, stream channel protection and other programs.

"There is no better place to spend the money," Sen. Marsden Williams, R-Idaho Falls, said. "Water is our most vital resource and it is under threat from other states."

Barker said the federal government requires the reservoir district to close out its accounts for the $18.5 million reimbursed to the water users last year for reconstruction of the dam.

The money would be repaid to the state through the Transportation Department. Darrell Manning, director of the department, was scheduled Monday to address the finance committee on the bill but did not.

Exemption extension passes

BOISE (UPI) — An extension of the Homestead Exemption Act, which was adopted by the 1980 Legislature, was approved by the Idaho Senate Monday and now goes to the House.

The bill, which passed 22-11, would extend for one more year an exemption of the first $10,000 or 20 percent of market value of a residence from property tax.

Calling it a "simple extension" of the exemption, floor sponsor Edith Miller, R-Boise, said the homestead exemption was essential because of the "taxation flux we're in right now."

Proponents contended, however, it was not tax relief, but a tax shift and that it was destroying the tax base.

"This is not tax relief," said Sen. Leon Swenson, R-Nampa, "but a tax shift."

Sen. Veari Crystal, R-Idaho Falls, said with all the exemptions being adopted "we are eroding the tax base to a point where it's not taxation by evaluation."

But Sen. Norma Dobler, D-Moscow, argued "if the extension was not approved it will result in an increase in property taxes. She called passage of the measure "imperative."

Teacher contract bargaining curbs survive

BOISE (UPI) — Withstanding an attack against its constitutionality, a bill to curb the scope of teachers' contract bargaining survived 38-34 in the House Monday.

The measure was then submitted to the Senate.

Bill sponsor Rep. Michael Sharp, R-Nampa, said the measure was intended to give school boards more bargaining power so they could have more authority in the administration of Idaho's public schools.

The bill would limit contract talks to the issues of salaries and fringe benefits and prohibit supervisors from participating in negotiations on the teachers' side.

Union officials have launched vehement attacks against the proposal, saying it would severely restrict their ability to negotiate fair contract agreements.

Rep. Richard Adams, D-Grangeville, cited an attorney general's opinion — released just before debate began — that said the bill "would not likely pass constitutional scrutiny if reviewed by a court."

The attorney general's opinion said that a constitutional cloud "covered" the provision excluding school principals from negotiations because it would restrict the constitutional rights of freedom of assembly of those who belonged to a teachers' group.

The opinion also said, however, that exclusion might not be found unconstitutional if the bill outlined "compelling and legitimate governmental interests" to justify the exclusion. But the bill did not contain such language, the opinion said. Sharp said school boards were swamped with requests to negotiate "frivolous" contract items such as providing keys and telephones to all teachers. He said these items should be under the exclusive jurisdiction of elected school board members.

Reps. Marguerite McLaughlin, D-Orfino, and Dan Kelly, R-Mountain Home, criticized the bill because they believed that a teacher who acted one hour a day as a principal could be barred from bargaining with the teachers.

"The intent of this is to grossly limit negotiations," Kelly said. "It's way out of line, especially because it says who can and who can't belong to what."

Rep. T.W. Silvers, R-Twin Falls, complained that "bit by bit, year by year (teachers' groups) nibble away at the school boards' authority in the school district."

He said school boards have been crippled and now are "just an adjunct of the IEA (Idaho Education Association)."

Silvers said the measure would allow school boards to carry out their responsibilities "economically, expeditiously and without continuous hassling."

Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, rapping the IEA for poor "public relations philosophy," said the bill would help teachers because boards would be allowed to concentrate on salary and contract matters.

When they are required to discuss dozens of contract proposals, school boards "are just mad" by the time salary and benefits talks start, he said.

Despite new contract, strike certain in soft coal industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United Mine Workers and industry negotiators agreed tentatively to a new soft coal contract at dawn Monday.

The agreement came in time to head off a long coal strike but too late to prevent a short one starting Friday. Sam Church Jr., president of the 160,000-member union who forecast a long strike when talks broke off last week, announced the three-year settlement at a news conference shortly after dawn. He predicted it will be accepted by the members.

The agreement came after five hours of negotiations that began with a sudden post-11 p.m. truce at last week, announced the three-year settlement at a news conference shortly after dawn. He predicted it will be accepted by the members.

Both sides declined to discuss specific provisions of the contract, but Church said it provides an overall 36 percent boost in pay and benefits over three years. When the talks collapsed last week, Church said the industry was offering 20 percent.

A union source indicated the industry agreed to eliminate an Arbitration Review Board disliked by many miners, pulled back on a demand that miners could be forced to work on Sundays and dropped a demand for company-by-company pension plans instead of the current multi-employer plans.

Church also disclosed that an emotional, $1 million-a-month issue had been resolved involving operators' royalty payments on coal purchases from firms not part of the contract agreement. He did not explain the accord.

"We're satisfied. You never get all you want," Church said. "We worked all night and we worked very hard," he told reporters as he announced the settlement with chief industry negotiator P.R.

"Bobby" Brown, president of Consolidation Coal Co.

Church said his members will leave the mines when the current contract expires at 10:01 p.m. MST Friday, adhering to the union's "no contract, no work" tradition.

The union's bargaining council, comprised of 39 voting members, elected president, international executive board members and international officers — was called to a 10 a.m. meeting today to approve the agreement before it is sent to the rank-and-file for a vote.

The UMW still is bargaining with the Association of Bituminous Contractors for about 11,000 mine construction workers that could delay a return-to-work order.

In past years, construction workers — who bargain at the same time as the miners — have set up pickets preventing UMW miners from returning to work even though their contract was ratified.

A union spokesman said negotiation between the union and ABC will resume today. The construction workers build mine shafts and other facilities before miners are allowed in the mines.

Church predicted ratification, but those in the coal fields adopted a "wait and see" attitude. Most, however, expressed pleasure at hearing of the tentative settlement.

"There won't be any celebrating unless the rank-and-file agrees to it," said Jackie Slump, secretary-treasurer of a Virginia UMW organization. "You don't hardly celebrate until you see what you're looking at."

Teton appeal fails

Court backs immunity from suits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court refused Monday to hear an appeal of a ruling that the government cannot be sued for damages over the 1976 collapse of the Teton Dam in Idaho.

Without comment, the justices let stand a lower court decision against a group of insurance companies that the government is immune from liability for disaster-related damages caused by flood control projects.

The collapse of the 305-foot-high dam in southeast Idaho killed 11 people. More than 288,000 acre-feet of water exploded through its crumbling walls, inundating parts of five counties and destroying $40 million in property as far as 70 miles downstream.

The 17-mile-long reservoir behind the dam, constructed and operated by the Interior Department, was almost full when it failed.

Congress passed the Teton Dam Disaster Assistance Act, which provided full compensation for the deaths, personal injuries and losses of property. Insurance companies, however, were not entitled to compensation.

Two years later, more than 70 insurance firms filed a claim with the Interior Department's Bureau of Reclamation, charging government negligence. They were turned down and then brought 47 lawsuits seeking $12 million in reimbursement for claims paid to policyholders.

A federal district court in Idaho rejected a government move to dismiss the suit, but the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals threw out the case.

The appeals panel said the government is immune from flood damage liability when it is caused by a flood control project. The insurers had argued the purpose of the Teton Basin Project was not flood control but land reclamation.

Idaho Senate rejects diversion of Department of Water Resources funds

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Idaho Senate Monday turned back an attempt to siphon off part of $500,000 proposed for use by the Department of Water Resources.

By a vote of 19-15, senators then passed the bill adding that amount to the department's 1981-82 budget, which had been cut $400,000 below current spending by the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee.

A motion by Democrats to amend the measure failed, 19-23. Sen. Walter Yarbrough of Grand View was the only Republican to join with the Democrats.

That motion and the vote on the bill put most Republicans and Republican members of the joint committee on record for restoring their earlier budget cuts for the department.

Earlier Monday, the Senate Finance Committee voted, 9-1, to recommend passage.

The measure, Senate Bill 1236, now goes to the House, where Rep. Vard Chaburn, R-Albion, said he also expected attempts to reallocate the $500,000.

"Many budgets are short, not just water resources," Sen. Ronald Beltspacher, D-Grangeville, said in arguing to amend the bill.

"It looks like we have plenty of money for canals and not enough for kids."

But Majority Leader James Risch, R-Boise, countered that

He argued agreement on how to amend the bill would be impossible and would cause a delay in adjourning the Legislature.

Sponsor Sen. John Barkör, R-Buhl, said senators should vote against the bill and return it to the finance committee if they wanted it changed.

The bill would use funds to be repaid to the state by the American Falls Reservoir District for part of a 1974 project at American Falls Dam.

Barker suggested the Legislature next January could use an additional $600,000 payment due from Idaho Power Co. for newly programs mentioned by Democrats.

Beltspacher noted higher education, public schools and public television were "still short" and that weed control, substance abuse, and state meat inspections were eliminated.

"Water resources could get by on a little less. Everyone else has," he said.

The $500,000 additional for the department's budget would fund dam safety, engineering, resource analysis, stream channel protection and other programs.

"There is no better place to spend the money," Sen. Marsden Williams, R-Idaho Falls, said. "Water is our most vital resource and it is under threat from other states."

Barker said the federal government requires the reservoir district to close out its accounts for the $19.8 million reimbursed to the water users last year for reconstruction of the dam.

The money would be repaid to the state through the Transportation Department. Darrell Manning, director of the department, was scheduled Monday to address the finance committee on the bill but did not.

Exemption extension passes

BOISE (UPI) — An extension of the Homestead Exemption Act, which was adopted by the 1980 Legislature, was approved by the Idaho Senate Monday and now goes to the House.

The bill, which passed 22-11, would extend for one more year an exemption of the first $10,000 or 20 percent of market value of a residence from property tax.

Calling it a "simple extension"

But Sen. Norma Dobler, D-Moscow, argued if the extension was not approved "it will result in an increase in property taxes. She called passage of the measure imperative."

Teacher contract bargaining curbs survive

BOISE (UPI) — Withstanding an attack against its constitutionality, a bill to curb the scope of teachers' contract bargaining survived 36-34 in the House Monday.

The measure was then submitted to the Senate.

Bill sponsor Rep. Michael Sharp, R-Nampa, said the measure was intended to give school boards more bargaining power so they could have more authority in the administration of Idaho's public schools.

The bill would limit contract talks to the issues of salaries and fringe benefits and prohibit supervisors from participating in negotiations on the teachers' side.

Despite new contract, strike certain in soft coal industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United Mine Workers and industry negotiators agreed tentatively to a new soft coal contract on dawn Monday.

The agreement came in time to head off a long coal strike but too late to prevent a short one starting Friday.

Sam Church Jr., president of the 160,000-member union who forecast a long strike when talks broke off last week, announced the three-year settlement at a news conference shortly after dawn. He predicted it will be accepted by the members.

The agreement came after five hours of negotiations that began with a sudden post-midnight return to the bargaining table in a fourth-floor suite at the Capital Hilton Hotel.

last week, Church said the industry was offering 29 percent.

A union source indicated the industry "agreed" to eliminate an Arbitration Review Board disliked by many miners, pulled back on a demand that miners could be forced to work on Sundays and dropped a demand for company-by-company pension plans instead of the current multi-employer plans.

Church also disclosed that an emotional, $1 million-a-month issue had been resolved involving operators' royalty payments on coal purchases from firms not part of the contract agreement. He did not explain the accord.

"We're satisfied ... You never get all you want," Church said. "We worked all night and we worked very hard," he told reporters as he announced the settlement with chief industry negotiator B.R.

"Bobby" Brown, president of Consolidation Coal Co.

Church said his members will leave the mines when the current contract expires at 10:01 p.m. MST Friday, adhering to the union's "no contract, no work" tradition.

The limited strike would last until the new agreement is ratified by the membership, a process expected to take nine days.

The union's bargaining council, comprised of 39 voting members — district presidents, international executive board members and international officers — was called to a 10 a.m. meeting today to approve the agreement before it is sent to the rank-and-file for a vote.

The UMW still is bargaining with the Association of Bituminous Contractors for about 11,000 mine construction workers that could delay a return-to-work order.

In past years, construction workers — who bargain at the same time as the miners — have set up pickets preventing UMW miners from returning to work even though their contract was ratified.

A union spokesman said negotiation between the union and ABC will resume today. The construction workers build mine shafts and other facilities before miners are allowed in the mines.

Church predicted ratification, but those in the coal fields adopted a "wait and see" attitude. Most, however, expressed pleasure on hearing of the tentative settlement.

Defiant Polish union votes protest strike

BYDGOSZCZ, Poland (UPI) — In a union leader Lech Waleasa's warnings and the possibility of Soviet intervention, the Solidarity union early today voted to stage a national strike to protest police beatings of labor activists in Bydgoszcz.

Waleasa threw up his arms and stalked from the meeting hall after the vote to call the strike had passed. The other national leaders of Solidarity could not agree on a date for the action and instead postponed that vote until later in the day.

Some independent observers felt the interval could give time for the union leaders to cool down and re-evaluate the decision.

Waleasa had appealed for moderation to avoid "an open and possibly bloody confrontation with the government."

"Waleasa told the union delegates that 'unless they have reached me that a state of emergency could be introduced by the government' is whether or not we can avoid full-scale confrontation," said Waleasa, who has been at the helm of the workers movement since the strikes in August.

The union's national coordinating committee met in the early morning hours. Soviet-led Warsaw Pact forces apparently extended maneuvers in and around Poland until the end of the week.

At the same time, Deputy Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski warned the country's fate was in the balance.

The Solidarity meeting was called to formulate policy in the face of the regime's tough stance over last week's police beatings of union members in Bydgoszcz and came one day after union government negotiators held what Waleasa described as "very sharp" talks in Warsaw.

LECH WALESA
... warnings ignored

Solidarity leadership member Marian Jurczyk said the meeting, during which delegates got into shouting matches, would result in "life or death" decisions for the union.

A nationwide strike alert set after the police attack last Thursday injured at least 20 people and sparked the worst crisis since the strikes last August remained in effect.

A member of the union's presidium who asked not to be identified confirmed that Rakowski raised the possibility of Soviet intervention to restore order during the union-government meeting Sunday.

Waleasa, who won a promise there would be no protest strikes prior to the start of the crucial session by threatening to resign, called on the union for "full responsibility" and said "the time has come to make great decisions."

Still declaring faith in the intentions of Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski, Waleasa said, "Jaruzelski will not be able to introduce order unless we declare our help."

Waleasa had earlier said the police attack against unionists who refused to leave a local government building appeared to part of a campaign to discredit Jaruzelski.

Bydgoszcz Solidarity chief Jan Ruclewski, who was one of three people hospitalized with injuries suffered in the attack, said the incident "defeated" the union and "humiliated" the premier and his government.

Japan's Ito warns U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Japanese Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ito warned Monday that unilateral restriction by the United States on Japanese auto imports could trigger "rampant protectionism" and worldwide recession.

He made the comment at a news conference following separate talks with Secretary of State Alexander Haig, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and U.S. trade representative Bill Brock.

The unilateral action referred to by Ito has not been proposed by the administration, although there have been calls for such trade restrictions on Capitol Hill.

Several of President Reagan's advisers favor asking Japan to voluntarily limit its auto shipments to the United States to some number below the 1.8 million Japanese cars sold here last year.

Ito said the administration officials did not spell out the U.S. position in Monday's talks. He said he expects to learn more from Reagan when he meets with the president today.

But Ito said Brock expressed hope the auto issue could be resolved in the "spirit" of free trade,

"avoiding the pitfalls of protectionism."

Ito told reporters, "An imposition of unilateral import restrictions by the United States would in fact be a protectionist step."

Because of the big impact the U.S. economy has on the world, he said, such an action could have regional economic repercussions that would not necessarily be limited to automobiles.

"And if that is the case," Ito said, "it is feared we'll simply revert back to the old days when protectionism was rampant in the world."

"And it is further feared that under these circumstances the world economy as a whole might decline sharply and world-wide unemployment and recession might plague us."

Ito strongly fear the serious consequences such might have on the world economy as a whole.

He said he met with Brock, the Japanese government said it cannot agree to voluntary reductions in car exports to the United States unless London first makes a compromise proposal.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Andrew Mellon was born March 24, 1855.

On this date in history:

In 1902, one of the earliest advice to the Lovell columns received this question: "Can two people live as comfortably as one on $12 a week?"

The answer: "We do not approve of marriage on a financial basis."

In 1934, the United States granted the Philippine Islands independence to become effective July 4, 1946.

In 1965, white civil rights worker Viola Liuzzo of Detroit was shot and killed on a road near Selma, Ala. She had taken part in a "pyrrhic" march demanding equal voting rights for blacks.

In 1976, Argentine President Isabel Peron, widow of former strongman ruler Juan Peron, was removed from power and arrested in a military coup.

A thought for the day: British King George VI said: "The highest of distinctions is service to others."

Heavy lobbying today on canal system bill

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

BOISE—The Idaho Senate faces another day of heavy lobbying on a bill designed to increase the costs of condemning an irrigation system.

After passing the bill on Saturday, 17-15, the Senate Monday voted to reconsider, 22-12. However, an attempt to amend the bill failed, and a new vote on whether to pass the bill is scheduled today.

The unusual Senate action may be related to concerns about the fate of Senate tax legislation in the House of Representatives.

The turndown from Saturday was caused by six Democrats who changed their stand on the bill.

Sens. Lester Clemm, D-Troy, and Mike Mitchell, D-Lewisville, wanted to lower the rate of compensation in the measure.

They were joined by opponents of the bill and the three Republicans who were absent Saturday, Sens. William Moore, R-Hayden Lake, and William Floyd and Dane Watkins, both R-Idaho Falls.

But their attempt to place the bill up for amendment failed Monday, on a standing vote of about 15-19. Mitchell said he did not have a specific amendment in mind and that it would be the decision of Sen. Laird Noh, R-Timberly, whether to amend the bill to save it.

It was unclear why Democrats changed their positions, especially since several are from northern Idaho where irrigated agriculture is rare.

A number of them are concerned about tax legislation which has passed the Senate and has been sent to the House, including the homeowner's property tax exemption and a use tax on contractors at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, opposes a permanent homeowner's exemption and early this session buried one exemption bill in the House Ways and Means Committee.

Olmstead's brother, Tom, is a former chairman of the board of the Twin Falls Canal Co.

Noh argued against reconsideration saying there would be an opportunity for a further airing of the complex legal questions involved in the House. "We had a thorough discussion Saturday, the lobbying is heavy and it's late in the session," Noh said.

The Idaho Water Users Association, which strongly supports SB1196, and Vern Ravenscroft of Boise, who represents opposing agricultural developers, lobbied senators last week and Monday.

Clemm said he had received information that the bill was "out of line with reality."

Mitchell said he was bothered by a requirement to be a portion of "full replacement cost less depreciation."

He said an amendment would preserve what Noh is trying to do "repeating the provision with a 'floor' that would allow for negotiation for a higher amount."

Milner Dam to lands west of Castleford.

The high court said Canyon View would be required to pay only increased operating costs and costs of expanding the system.

An informal ruling by the Idaho Attorney General's office argued SB1196 would be unconstitutional because determining the level of compensation in condemnation suits is a judicial and not a legislative authority.

Senate Demos block override effort

BOISE (UPI)—Arguing the need for "loyalty and responsibility" to the governor, Senate Democrats blocked Monday the Republican majority's attempt to override Gov. John Evans' veto of a bill calling for bipartisan representation on the Pacific Northwest Power Council.

The 22-12 vote was strictly along party lines. A two-thirds majority was necessary. Senate Minority Leader Ron Twilgar, D-Boise, led the fight against sustaining the governor's action, saying the chief executive could not accept the legislation with "love and kisses" because of the provision calling for bipartisan Idaho membership on the council.

Evans already has appointed two Democrats to the council.

In opposing the Democratic efforts, Senate Majority Leader James Risch, R-Boise, said most commission appointees serve at the pleasure of the governor and it has been "a long-standing tradition" that they be bipartisan. He said this would be one of the most important commissions to be established, because it would be setting the future energy policies for Idaho, and it should not only be answerable to the governor, but to the Legislature and the people of the state.

Twilgar said of the four states involved in the council, Montana and Washington have passed legislation which allows for partisan membership from their states. He said it was expected that Oregon would adopt similar legislation.

The Democrat leader said that the Legislature should adopt a bill that "serves the broader interests of the governor" and the lawmakers should not go home before passing legislation dealing with the commission. Twilgar said that this was one of the most important pieces of legislation that the session would deal with.

He said the lawmakers should not leave this session without action on sometime of power commission legislation, which would leave "a potential cloud over the council and its appointees."

"These appointees serve at the pleasure of the governor and owe him loyalty and responsibility," Twilgar said.

He said legislation already was drafted that would allow for Senate confirmation, but which would provide for partisan membership. Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, was the only other senator to debate the issue. He said it was important that the council members were answerable to somebody in the state and the "only person to do that is the governor. Decisions will have to be made quickly and daily."

"This bill went too far," Peavey said.

House not impressed by thumping protest

BOISE (UPI)—Rep. Jack Kennevik, R-Boise, started the House Monday when he slammed a thick book of bills down on his desk during the 11th debate in protest of the flood of bills in the Legislature.

But the dramatic display wasn't enough to sway the lower chamber to pass Kennevik's bill to limit even-year regular legislative sessions to budget matters.

His proposal died on a 34-33 vote. Kennevik and House Minority Leader Melvin Hammond, D-Raxburg, sponsored the bill, which was sent to the House by the State Affairs Committee after the House killed a proposal to completely eliminate the even-year sessions.

"A lot of bills," Kennevik said after he slammed the bill book down, knocking a telephone off its hook and startling other House members. He contended his proposal would cut the flow of bills nearly in half by allowing only budget matters to be considered in the second regular session of each Legislature.

Under the bill, only the governor and two-thirds of either house could require consideration of non-budget material during the even-year session.

Hammond, closing debate after Kennevik talked, said he also had planned to slam down his bill book, "but I couldn't lift the book."

However, the proposed session limitation took severe flak from legislators concerned about possible technical problems and a loss of citizen participation in the legislative process.

Reps. Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer, and Tom Boyd, R-Genesee, members of the House Appropriations Committee said it first needed to be spelled out what involvement committee members would have in the budget process during the restricted sessions.

Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, said the bill was necessary because "we've got to learn to control ourselves" from considering the "same old dead issues" year after year.

"We've got to begin to put a handle on this travesty — this traveling road show," she said.

Gem employees start last bid for pay hike

BOISE (UPI)—The Idaho Public Employees Association launched a last-ditch campaign in the House State Affairs Committee Monday for a state workers' pay hike in fiscal year 1982.

Because previous resolutions outlining a pay raise have failed this session, state workers are left with the chance of a pay freeze next year. The Joint Finance Appropriations Committee allocated enough money for a three percent pay raise. But, without specific direction in a pay resolution, state agency directors can choose to use the money for other purposes.

IPEA Executive Director Steve Swadley showed the House committee three resolutions, individually calling for across-the-board pay hikes of six percent, seven percent, and eight percent. Swadley contended there was $38.4 million available to the Legislature to fund pay increases and boost state programs. He said revenue for fiscal year 1981 and 1982 would accumulate $27.4 million above the amount predicted by the Legislature and that a bill to remove a sales tax exemption from Idaho National Engineering Laboratory contractors would generate $11 million next year.

Swadley said his group could "live with" an eight percent pay hike, but that it would have to be funded so as not to require staff reductions to give remaining workers a raise.

Noting that the joint committee had chopped out 380 state jobs already, implementation of an eight percent pay hike without additional funding would cause the elimination of 339 more positions.

To grant the raise without also cutting out those additional jobs, the Legislature would have to plug in another $6.6 million. A seven percent raise would require $5.1 million and a six percent hike $3.6 million.

Steen hospitalized with lung problem

BOISE—State Sen. J. Wilson Steen, R-Glenns Ferry, was hospitalized Monday on doctor's orders for preliminary testing for a lung problem.

Contacted at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center in Boise, Steen said he was hospitalized after x-rays discovered spots in both lungs.

He said he was resting comfortably but had suffered from shortness of breath recently.

Tests and possibly a biopsy will be conducted, he said.

"I went to the doctor this morning. He didn't like what he saw on the x-ray," Steen said.

Committee holds bill limiting travel

BOISE (UPI)—On the recommendation of Sen. Dean Van Engelen, R-Burley, the Senate Finance Committee Monday unanimously held a bill to restrict out-of-state travel by state employees.

"I feel that at this point we made an error," Van Engelen said, referring to action by the committee last week to send the bill to the floor.

Van Engelen said in talking to the state auditor he found the bill would be impossible to administer and could cost more auditing money.

They need more self-discipline

If you think the Idaho Legislature wastes a lot of time each year dealing with frivolous bills, you aren't alone.

But the answer here is not in attempting to limit legislative sessions to specific matters, or, in the case of a bill debated Monday, to limit even-year regular sessions to budget matters.

The House turned down that proposal, 34-35, fearing such a restriction would limit public participation in government. Previously, the House also defeated a measure to limit sessions to odd-numbered years.

Is there a need for the Legislature to meet annually? Yes. Idaho was one of the fastest growing states in the past decade and the pressures on state government will increase, not decrease in the years ahead.

But while an annual session is needed, it also means the House and Senate must become more efficient in the way they operate.

Lawmakers get too bogged down in bills that are petty, represent too many special interests and are just plain silly. A bill mandating a moment of silence in the schools, as passed by the House but defeated in the Senate, is a perfect example of the latter.

While legislators are frustrated at the heavy bill load, we suggest they look to their leadership and own rules of procedure to resolve the problem. Why is it that certain bills keep popping up year after year? Why is that the number of bills continues to mount?

Part of the problem is that too many legislators believe that legislation is the answer to anything—and everything. They must be careful, of course, not to choke off participation but there also must be a reasonable approach to setting the docket for any legislative session.

One lawmaker says there is one bill that had come up and been shot down each of the 13 years he has been in the Legislature. Isn't this where the committee structure is supposed to be effective?

Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, who supports limiting sessions, says "we've got to learn to control ourselves." We agree — but lawmakers can do that without passing a law to do it for them.

WASHINGTON — Anyone who has been to the grocery store lately knows what a rare and expensive delicacy peanut butter has become.

Therefore, it came as a real surprise when the Brokaws brought out an entire jar of it for cocktails the other evening. The jar, which weighed at least a pound, contained the extra-crunchy kind that you can find in only the finest restaurants. It was sitting in a carved figure of ice surrounded by toast and pats of jelly.

"I didn't know this was a special occasion," one of the guests said.

Meredith Brokaw replied, "It isn't, but every once in a while Tom and I get the urge to splurge and we treat ourselves to a luxury."

"I whispered to my wife, 'There must be money on her side of the family, because I know Brokaw could never afford a jar of peanut butter on what he makes.'"

"She said, 'Hush; they'll hear you. Anyway, what difference does it make?' You only get to eat peanut butter once in your life. Let's make the most of it."

We all gathered around as Mrs. Brokaw started spreading the golden substance on toast and passing it to her guests.

Some people asked for jelly with peels, but a few purists-like myself wanted it without any condiments. We all "ooohed" and "ahhed" as we tasted it.

"This is the real stuff," I said. "Where on earth did you find it?"

"We have a connection at the United Nations," Brokaw said. "He gets it through the diplomatic pouch."

"Did you know it takes three pounds of peanuts to make one jar of peanut butter?"

"No wonder no one can afford it," I said.

One of the guests said, "I remember when I was a kid, my mother used to keep a jar in the closet and after school we used to spread it on bread like butter."

Another one said, "I recall those days, I didn't know what I had and used to trade my peanut butter and jelly sandwiches at lunch hour for ham on rye."

"Help yourselves," Meredith Brokaw said. "We don't want it to go to waste."

"We didn't need to be asked twice. I put two large teaspoons on a piece of toast."

"Don't make a pig of yourself," my wife whispered. "You act as if it's the first time you ever ate peanut butter."

"It's the first time in months," I whispered back. "If they're crazy enough to serve it, why shouldn't we get our share?"

"I was once on the Queen Elizabeth and they gave you all the peanut butter you could eat."

"They always make a big deal of that on luxury liners," someone else said.

We all laughed as we kept digging into the jar.

One of the guests said, "Does anyone here remember when we used to feed peanuts to the elephants at the zoo?"

"I recall when we used to eat them at baseball games."

Mrs. Brokaw brought out more toast and jelly.

"I went to a bar when I was in college and you'll never believe this, but there was a bowl of peanuts on each table," I said. "We used to throw the shells on the floor."

"By this time the jar was empty and the toast and jelly were gone."

"I tried to lick the inside of the top, but my wife stopped me."

It was an evening I'll never forget. I've been to houses recently where there have been a few samaras of peanut butter mixed in with the smoked salmon sandwiches. But I've never been in a home where someone actually brought out an entire jar of it, and passed it around like it was caviar.

TV cleanup campaign

© The Boston Globe Newspaper Co., Washington Post Writers Group

BOSTON — Sometimes I think there are dozens of coaches out there, all trying to recruit us to get us to root for their side of a social issue, by offering us a big chance to join the "pros."

On the abortion issue they're either Pro-life or Pro-choice. On the regulation issue, they're either Pro-free enterprise or Pro-consumer. On the pornography issue, they're either Pro-morality or Pro-First Amendment.

The latest grasp for our allegiance comes over sex on television. One group is encouraging us to join a boycott of advertisers and another group is enlisting us to fight censorship. It's hard to know the right team without a program.

Last month, something called the Coalition for Better Television (CBTV) opened up its recruitment drive in Washington. It declared a campaign to clean up the tube. It called its side Pro-morality.

For three months, the coalition announced, several hundred of its monitors would be rating prime-time shows on a scorecard of smuttiness.

They would list what Donald Wildmon, a CBTV leader and head of the National Federation for Decency, called "skin scenes, implied sexual intercourse, and sexually suggestive comments."

When a scoring was over, in June, he said the coalition would list the sponsors of the worst shows and call on people not to buy their products. This game plan is called a boycott.

Then, last week, at the annual meeting of 4,000 television executives in New York, the other team filed its defense. Panelists there talked about the dangerous tactics and motives of the CBTV and labeled themselves Pro-First Amendment. They said that the monitors were actually drawing up a hit list. They accused CBTV of "censorship."

So there was to be holding. One team claims to be holding up values and morality against the smut stream, and the other swears that it is protecting the Constitution against the censors: Who are we supposed to root for?

Well, I bow to no one in my scorn for the TV shows that come complete with a sucker track. I am appalled at the number of programs in which sex is the plot, the subplot, and the counterplot. I keep a private "top ten" collection of ads that broadcasters use to boost their own shows, and my latest favorites include:

"Blackmail in a Sex Clinic"; "Luscious Lady Truckers Behind Bars"; and "Hot Bikes and Cold Bikinis!"

So, I think Wildmon was right when he told the CBTV meeting that broadcasters are ignoring protests against the evening sexualization of the airwaves and have "rather displayed an arrogance and indifference rarely matched in the history of corporate America."

The networks have had a stunning lack of regard for their own long-term self-interest. They've let us frustrated and vulnerable to the first group that promises us a chance to "do something." It's no wonder that 200 groups are already following the CBTV cheerleaders.

Having said that, however, I still can't sign up. I have too many qualms about the CBTV plans and planders. Morality may or may not be in the eyes of the beholder, but I'm not all that comfortable leaving the "beholding" to someone else.

The top three for the Pro-morality crowd are Wildmon, Jerry Falwell of Moral Majority and Phyllis Schlafly of Stop ERA. I would probably agree with them about the content of "Flamingo Road," "Three's Company" or "Dallas" (J.R. has the moral perspective of a mushroom), but I suspect we would part company pretty quickly after that.

The anti-sex campaign looks to me like a farm-to-table channel people into the right-wing big leagues. I keep remembering all the people who joined the Moral Majority because they were "pro-family" only to discover they were now also being courted as pro-MX missiles.

One of the other things that bothers me about this campaign is the strategy. The CBTV is to put pressure on the advertisers to put pressure on the broadcasters. Well, I'm not convinced that the advertiser should be handed the star role. Some of the ads themselves are mini-X-rated features.

If you don't believe that I'll rerun my jeans recs for you.

The ad men are a big part of the problem. They'll kill for the privilege of sponsoring programs with the biggest ratings and never mind if the ratings has been "rigged" up a point or two. The CBTV plan would give the advertisers MORE power in programming and the results would be even worse for quality.

Does this mean we're impotent? I don't think so. There's room for an angry, non-aligned third team. I believe in boycotts when they're focused on the right targets. We should boycott the advertiser if we don't like the ads and boycott the program if we don't like the program. We should just plain turn them off.

Like it or not, the most effective way to change television and leave the Constitution intact is to play the broadcasters on their turf, and the old-time ratings game is the only one they watch.

Budget data

Editor, Times-News:

As a member of the Senate Budget Committee, I've received numerous calls and letters from Idaho requesting information on the budget process.

I am writing this letter in the hope that it will shed some light on an admittedly complex process.

The federal government's fiscal year runs from Oct. 1 through Sept. 30. By May 15, the Congress is required by law to pass the first concurrent budget resolution which sets targets for spending for the upcoming fiscal year. It is an instruction to the various Congressional committees to allocate funds for the federal departments and agencies under their jurisdiction.

By Sept. 15 Congress is required to have passed into law the second concurrent budget resolution which sets spending ceilings for the different agencies. That is two weeks prior to the beginning of the fiscal year.

Presently the Senate Budget Committee, and our counterparts in the House of Representatives are working on a "recession" or a cut in proposed spending for the 1981 fiscal year that began Oct. 1, 1980.

The president has proposed to cut $6 billion from President Carter's budget. Final action is expected by the end of March. I predict the president will get the lion's share of his request.

Shortly after that, the Budget Committee will turn to "mark up," or drafting into legislation, of the president's proposals for the fiscal year 1982 budget that begins Oct. 1, 1981. President Reagan has proposed spending $55 billion less than submitted by his predecessor, President Carter.

I will be supporting the president in the budget committee and on the floor of the Senate. Although I don't agree with all of the president's cuts, I am absolutely convinced that his package must be kept together if we are to bring federal spending under control.

America's national debt is approaching a trillion dollars; 25 years of government spending and borrowing has given us double-digit inflation and record interest rates. Our challenge here in Washington is to support the president in the face of the special interest groups that will fight the cuts affecting their interests.

We must succeed, and with your help, I am confident we will. STEVE SYMMS U.S. Senator Washington, D.C.

George Will

Better wear Smith's necktie than practice his theory

© The Washington Post Company

WASHINGTON — A reader, who may think I "would" write more sensibly if I dressed more ideologically, has given me one of those neckties—now fashionable in Washington—one embellished with little profiles of the man on whose tombstone in a British church I've inscribed the information that he lies the author of "The Wealth of Nations."

Fewer people in Washington have read Adam Smith's book than are wearing Adam Smith neckties. The book was launched in 1776, and the Republic's current problems are related to the sort of ideas expressed in that book.

Frequently, a new fashion in economics derives from a new book, such as Keynes' "General Theory" 40 years ago. There is no new text explaining "supply-side" economics, which may be one reason why there are so many more people who say they are "supply-siders" than there are people who say precisely what they mean. Adam Smith is revered by the people struggling with the nation's problems. He also may be a source of its problems.

Smith was an absentminded professor who "once" stepped into his garden wearing only a dressing gown, began daydreaming, and walked 15 miles away. He helped make the modern world. He lectured on "moral philosophy," of which economics was understood to be a part. He is famous as the philosopher of laissez-faire, and deserves the gratitude of subsequent generations for illuminating the merits of free markets as allocators of society's resources.

But he also was among the first modern political philosophers; he assumed that the aim of social life is to increase the consumption of goods and services. Furthermore, he argued that individual self-interestness, when given ample scope, can produce this result and guarantee social harmony.

To an age fascinated by physics and the laws of "ion" in planets and other bodies, Smith announced that men, and hence the body politic, obey laws of motion. He discovered orderliness beneath the turmoil of society — predictability based on the simplicity of man's unchanging desires and self-interestness. The uncoerced cooperation of people pursuing their private interests produces, through the mechanism of free markets, social betterment. This result is unplanned; indeed, no one aims to better society's condition, only himself. It is, Smith said, as though a "midway" game is in process whereby the public good, although unintended, results from the pursuit of private goals.

Unfortunately, implicit in Smith's theory is a sharp distinction between society and government, and the costs of hostility toward the government. The theory makes government seem merely coercive and barely necessary. Society is essentially independent of, and morally superior to, political institutions. Society is natural, spontaneous, cooperative and productive. Government is of marginal importance and negligible dignity.

This devaluing of government radically lowered the stature of the political vocation. Political philosophy was eclipsed by an economic theory which described society as a system of forces able to function well in equilibrium without the help of politics.

Before the modern age, at which Smith was a herald, political philosophers disagreed about what constituted the public good, but agreed that the public good was to be discovered by reason: the reasoning of the wisest. Modern political philosophy holds that the public good is rooted in, and produced by, the desires of the many — including desires for wealth, acquisition, consumption) generally considered low. The assumption is that the public good (defined by Smith and other moderns as increased consumption) is produced by the uninterfered pursuit of private goals.

Today in Washington, people wearing the Adam Smith neckties are grappling with some problems made, and made more difficult to solve, by the sort of ideas Smith helped make prevalent.

How did we get today's mishapen government? The problem is not so much that the government is "too big" as it is that the government is considered a low and hostile thing. Thus it is "too big" for a complete at capturing for the benefit of their consumption. People feel no compunctions about bending public power to private purposes when the public good is complacently defined as whatever results from the pursuit of private interests.

Given that definition, the concept of "public spiritedness" evaporates. The rhetoric of modern politics is such a watery soup of "interests" and "rights" and "entitlements" that the Reagan administration finds itself appearing "for" senators with "no strained argument" that all sacrifices are really in everyone's personal "interest."

Adam Smith was among the makers of the modern mind, with its impoverished sense of politics. That is why I find the Adam Smith necktie lovelier than his philosophy.

Twin Falls mayor warns of layoffs

BOISE — Twin Falls Mayor Henry "Hank" Woodall told legislators Monday the city will have to lay off firemen and policemen unless local budgets are thawed.

Speaking at a hearing before the Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee on this year's 1 percent bill, Woodall said Twin Falls faces a $72,000 general fund deficit in the next fiscal year.

"We're in a unique situation because we have been fiscally sound and conservative," he said.

The legislation, House Bill 389, would replace the three-year-old freeze on local property tax collections with a 5 percent growth factor. It would also lift the cap on annual increases in property valuation and partly equalize taxes for public schools.

As a property taxpayer, Woodall said, "I know it (the bill) will help me. But you have to take the good with the bad. I do not anticipate a great increase in taxes."

Twin Falls tax collections have been frozen at about $2.6 million, while purchasing power has decreased some 40 percent, Woodall said. In order to maintain current operations the city will need a $72,000 increase in the next fiscal year beginning in September.

HB389 would allow operations to continue on a "break-even basis," he said.

"If we don't get some source of funds, we'll have to reduce personnel."

The number of firemen and policemen would have to be reduced, or departments will have to be closed, he said.

"The rest of the departments are down so low, we might as well abandon the whole thing if we take more out."

House approves field toilet measure

BOISE (UPI) — A well-traveled bill that would require farm labor contractors to provide toilets for field crews passed the Idaho House 16-23 Monday and was returned to the Senate.

The bill was backed by Rep. Dan Kelly, R-Mountain Home, who said it would protect the health and dignity of field workers in Idaho.

The measure would require toilets to be provided for a crew of eight workers who labor for more than four hours a day. One toilet would be required for every 40 workers and it would have to be located within a quarter-mile of the work site.

The original version of the bill was killed early this session by the House Agricultural Affairs Committee. Another version eventually was passed by the Senate, but not after it was amended there.

In other actions Monday, the House:

- Torpedoed an attempt to appropriate enough money to keep the state Air Quality Bureau open during fiscal year 1982. After operating a motion by Rep. Christopher Hooper, R-Boise, to put the bill on the amendment calendar, the $983,000 scuttled a bill that would extend the homestead exemption for one year and boost its impact to 15 percent of $30,000 of a property's value whichever is less.

- Defeated 50-18 an attempt to resurrect — a similar Senate-passed homestead exemption bill from the Revenue and Taxation Committee. That measure is being held by the committee chairman, Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, until the Senate acts on the House's bill to amend the 1 percent property-tax initiative.
- Voted 47-18 to keep in committee a concurrent resolution that would set up an interim legislative committee to probe the issue of land-use planning in Idaho.

general fund appropriation for the Water Quality Bureau was passed 43-26 and sent to the governor. The vote on Hooper's amendment motion was 23-46.

- Reinstated by a 53-16 vote a property taxation practice identified by the 1980 Legislature as allowing a "loophole." The House voted to repeal last year's action that required county assessors to place property improvements on the tax rolls immediately upon occupancy. The bill now goes to the Senate.
- Passed 39-30 a bill that would restrict lenders from including "due on sale" clauses in real estate loans. Rep. James Golder, R-Boise, said in sponsoring the bill that the House had to decide whether to protect the profit margins of banks and savings and loan associations from varying economic conditions or improve a family's chance of owning a home.
- Voted 50-14 to uphold the Revenue and Taxation Committee's decision to committee chairman, Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, until the Senate acts on the House's bill to amend the 1 percent property-tax initiative.

- Voted 47-18 to keep in committee a concurrent resolution that would set up an interim legislative committee to probe the issue of land-use planning in Idaho.

Some 100 violinists will be playing Southwest tunes. Cowboy attire will be required. Ms. Wyatt says Europeans love Texas chic. "It's the Europeans who go all out for this cowboy-type party. Frank Mletr, the manager of the newly opened hotel, dismissed the accusations, commenting that the singer has

LEAKY BOAT BLUES

Country music singer Kenny Rogers is suing a south Florida developer for $700,000, accusing him of selling an unseaworthy luxury yacht. R. Joseph Mulhern, a wealthy Broward and Palm Beach County developer, terms the suit "trivial and groundless," and said his attorney is preparing a $10 million slender suit. Rogers' attorney, Ronald Strauss, said Rogers bought 75-foot "The Gambler's Lady" for $75,000, but on a cruise from Fort Lauderdale, California, fuel began leaking out of the tanks and into the cabin. But Mulhern's son, Richard, said the country-western star's staff checked the boat out before he bought it. "It's either his own people or he got ripped off by the boat yard," he said.

THE NEEDLE

Anti-ERA activist Phyllis Schlafly, who spends at least two days a week away from home and her lawyer husband, Fred, regularly opens her speeches with: "I want to thank my husband Fred for letting me come here." Asked by People magazine why she says opening every time she replied: "It's true, and it irritates the women's libbers more than anything."

RADNOR, Pa. (UPI) — The growing amount of sexy shows on pay television is worrying industry critics and angering anti-sex crusaders—but not stopping producers who claim they are already exercising restraint. TV Guide magazine reported Monday.

The first successful show to appear on late night pay television was "Midnight Blue," the brainchild of Al Goldstein, publisher of a counterculture newspaper.

Goldstein describes the program as "something like '60 Minutes' with frontal nudity and four-letter words." "Midnight Blue" features nude dancers, tours of nudist colonies and other adult entertainment.

The program began in New York and can now be seen in 14 other markets.

Another entry in the field is Private Screenings, a service of Satori Productions, Inc., providing the sexier rated movies to pay television via satellite or videocassette.

One of the first markets to sign up was Boston, where the distributor Universal Subscription Television, gives it a large share of the credit for more than doubling customers, from 23,000 to 52,000 in less than a year.

One of the more outspoken critics of this trend is James E. Duffy, president of ABC Television.

"Pay-TV should police itself the way free TV always has," he said. "We are very sensitive to the fact that we enter people's homes."

The National Cable Television Association says commercial television operates over the public airwaves, whereas cable television is provided only to those who want, and pay for it.

Pay television can be regulated by the localities that license it; and more and more often, says TV Guide.

But in some cases where the issue has come to a public vote, the result came down on the side of no regulation.

Purveyors of what Texas clergyman the Rev. George Fosser calls "TV Pornovision" say they may come close, but not cross the line between soft and hard core sex.

"Lots of Sex but No X," is Satori's slogan, bowing to an unwritten code of pay television that is decidedly more liberal than the written code of the Association of Broadcasters' code.

"It makes the whole sex business cleaner," says Satori president Ernest Sauer. "If you're in the mood for a sexy movie, isn't it nicer to see it at home than go downtown and skulk into the Pussyteat Theater?"

British freeway travelers warned of food

LONDON (UPI) — Eating places on British expressways continue to produce "a familiar pattern of gastronomic horror stories," says the latest survey of 57 establishments.

It lists nearly three-fourths of them as poor or appalling, and only one as good.

Restaurants appear to have ignored growing criticism by travelers during the past two or three years, critic Egon Ronay says in the 1981 guide. "Just a Bile," and suggests motorists should leave the motorways to eat.

"The preparation of good chips baffles motorway caterers," Ronay said, and the best coffee-on-tea they can offer is "mediocre."

"Virginia ham" almost always amounts to third-rate pressed shoulder, and even that only in miserly portions hidden in sandwiches," the report said.

"Much of the manufactured items bought in from mass suppliers is of very inferior quality, the worst of all being sausage rolls, with artificial tasting hamburgers and over-breaded sausages not far behind."

"Stale food that should really be thrown out is sold, whether pastries, vegetables, meat, to some extent even fish."

Of the 57 restaurants and cafeterias at the 43 service stations visited last summer the number offering acceptable food had declined from 37 percent in 1978 to 25 percent, the survey said. The proportion classed as poor or appalling had risen from 61 percent to 74 percent.

Only the café operated by Alan Pond at Harthill on the M8 Scottish motorway could be classified as good, the guide said.

Rita says she won't marry again

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Rita Jenrette, kicking off a two-year quest to peddle her just-published expose of life as a congressman's wife, vowed Monday she will never marry again or return to Washington.

"I don't have the best judgment when it comes to affairs of the heart," said the former Texas beauty queen at the first stop on a nationally publicized tour. "I may fall in love again, but I'm going to take my time. I really don't think marriage is in my future."

Mrs. Jenrette, 30, leaped into the limelight with recent disclosures about her five-year marriage to former Rep. John Jenrette, D-S.C., who was convicted of accepting bribes in the Abscam case.

At a news conference arranged by Bantam Books, publishers of her paperback "My Capitol Secrets," she talked about everything from world hunger to Hugh Hefner's Playboy mansion.

Many of the questions centered on her recent Playboy pictorial, which she said was done with the full cooperation of her husband. She denied his claims he was appalled at her decision to pose semi-nude for the magazine.

"He, not only accepted Hugh Hefner's hospitality in Los Angeles, but he tried to pick up a Playboy bunny at the mansion while I was at work," she said.

She said she last saw her husband in Washington a week ago when the two filed for divorce.

"I wish him no ill will. I hope he gets his life back together. I understand he's living with a woman in Miami. I wish him the best of luck," she said, adding she still feels deeply for him.

"A part of me will always be concerned about John," she said. "But loving him the way a man and a woman need to live together is not there anymore. It never was, except on my part."

Turning up noses

VINELAND, N.J. (UPI) — City councilmen are turning up their noses at Mayor Patrick Fiorilli's proposal to use goats to cut and fertilize overgrown lots in the city.

Council President Carlo Costantino and Councilman Gino Baruffi say the mayor's announcement that the city may set up a "goat patrol," with five females and one male goat "to stomp a herd" is making a laughingstock of the city.

"The whole thing is a publicity stunt," Costantino said.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress will not approve an Amtrak system that serves only the Northeast, the head of a Senate appropriations subcommittee said Monday.

Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., made the assertion following testimony by Amtrak President Al Boyd, who warned that President Reagan's budget will force elimination of all passenger trains outside the Boston-Washington corridor by Oct. 1.

"If it's not going to be a national system, support's going to erode very rapidly" in Congress, said Andrews, whose transportation subcommittee is considering the proposed cuts. "I'd rather try to keep Amtrak a national system."

But Federal Railroad Administrator Robert Blumhagen testified the government can no longer afford to subsidize Amtrak at the current rate of $35 per passenger, when the average federal subsidy is

ALAN BOYD
Oct. 1 cutoff date

two cents for bus passengers and 77 cents for air travelers.

He noted that federal and congressional guidelines call for Amtrak to collect half its operating costs by raising fares and eliminating lesser-used routes.

"If Congress refuses to approve the elimination of less efficient routes, I think you're loading the dice," said Blumhagen, whose agency oversees Amtrak and Conrail.

Boyd said eliminating Amtrak's long-distance routes would end service to 36 states. But if Congress adds only $20 million to Reagan's proposed $613 million budget, he said, most trains could be kept running.

"The $240 million difference between Amtrak's budget request and the administration's proposal will cost this nation 90 percent of its passenger train stops, 67 percent of Amtrak's route miles, 60 percent of its labor force, 50 percent of our ridership and 60 percent of revenues," Boyd said.

The new Amtrak budget was lower than the corporation had proposed just last month. Boyd testified that Amtrak, "by taking some rather difficult actions," lopped another $120 million off its "own" budget request, lowering it to $853 million.

Boyd did not say which routes might be dropped under the Amtrak budget plan. But the railway already has proposed ending service on lightly traveled routes between Washington and Cincinnati, and cutting back service to three days a week between Chicago and San Antonio, Texas.

Amtrak was formed May 1, 1971, to save the country's deteriorating passenger service. It was originally intended to be a "for profit" corporation, but federal subsidies have steadily grown year by year, despite increasing ridership.

Utah abortion notification law upheld

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday upheld Utah's law requiring a doctor to notify the parents of an underage girl who is seeking an abortion.

While the 6-3 ruling sustained the statute on grounds it serves "state interests," it left open the possibility of another challenge to it by minors who are mature and living away from home.

The decision does not block minors from receiving abortions, since the law involves only parental notification, not consent. In earlier rulings, the high court held states may not give parents veto power over a daughter's decision to have an abortion.

Utah is one of only a half-dozen states with such notification laws. Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, North Dakota and Tennessee have similar statutes with brief mandatory waiting periods.

In other action Monday, the court: "Unanimously ruled unconstitutional a Louisiana law, since amended, that allowed a husband to administer assets of a marriage without his wife's consent."

"Agreed to review, in a case from New York, what evidence the state must show before removing abused or neglected children from their parents.

Announced it will consider in a case involving a member of the Old Order Amish sect, whether the government may collect Social Security taxes from employers who object on religious grounds.

Refused to re-enter the landmark capital punishment case of Jerry Lane Jurek, sentenced to death for the 1973 slaying of a Texas policeman's daughter.

Agreed to consider the government's appeal of a case involving wage hikes for federal workers that could cost the government some $22 million in back pay.

Let stand a ruling that the Census Bureau was entitled to include illegal aliens in the 1980 population count.

Rape law not biased, Supreme Court rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Statutory rape laws that punish men for having sexual intercourse with underage females are constitutional, the Supreme Court ruled Monday, even though they do not impose similar restraints on women.

In a fragmented 5-4 ruling that involved five separate opinions, the court held that California's statutory rape law does not discriminate against men and is justified as a way of discouraging teen-age pregnancies.

The court majority rejected arguments the law is sexually biased because women having intercourse with under-age males cannot be prosecuted.

The law "is an attempt by a legislature to prevent illegitimate teen-age pregnancy by providing an additional deterrent for men," Justice William Rehnquist wrote for the majority. The decision upheld the 1978 conviction of a youth, identified in court records only as "Michael M.," who at age 17, had sexual intercourse with a girl identified as "Sharon," then 16½.

"The question boils down to whether a state may attack the problem of sexual intercourse and teen-age pregnancy directly by prohibiting a male from having sexual intercourse with a minor female," Rehnquist said. "The state has a strong interest in preventing such pregnancy."

In dissent, Justice William Brennan argued Rehnquist placed too much stress on preventing teen-age pregnancy "and not enough emphasis on the fundamental question of whether the sex-based discrimination (in the law) is substantially related to the achievement of that goal."

Skate until feet wear out

About 430 participants whirled around Skateland's rink Monday to raise money for the American Diabetes Association.

Skaters raise $16,150 for diabetes

TWIN FALLS — A skate-a-thon Monday raised $16,150 for the American Diabetes Association. About 430 people participated in the event at Skateland, said Donna Krueger, 4-H adult coordinator of the event.

The Potpourri 4-H Club of Kimberly and the Happy Go Lucky 4-H Club of Twin Falls worked with the Magic Valley Chapter of the American Diabetes Association to organize the event, which the two 4-H clubs called their "community pride project."

Dawn Noble, a diabetic participant, gathered about $330 in pledges.

The skate-a-thon lasted six hours and participants could take a 10-minute break each hour. "I'll skate until my feet wear out," Michelle Nelson, 12, a participant in the skate-a-thon, said.

Twenty-five percent of the money will be used for national diabetes research, said Linda Noble, president of the Magic Valley Chapter.

Most of the remaining money will be used in the Magic Valley to educate young diabetics and the public about diabetes, she said. Cost of using the Skateland rink was covered with a $375 grant from the cooperative extension service at the University of Idaho, said Will Huntsman, Happy Go Lucky 4-H leader.

Several area merchants donated prizes and refreshments for the skaters.

Most of the skaters were children ranging from preschool to high school age but some adults also participated in the skate-a-thon. About 20 children who have diabetes skated in the event, Nobles said.

Nobles said she expects this event to raise more money than other fund-raising events the Magic Valley Chapter of the American Diabetes Association will sponsor this year.

Hansen takes steps toward area of impact

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County and Hansen city officials agreed Monday to move ahead with establishing the city's area of impact.

In a brief session with commissioners, Hansen Mayor Galen Stimpson and Councilman Terry L. Burton tentatively agreed to pull the boundary of the proposed 2,560-acre area, including the Hansen city limits, back 300 feet to the section line.

The proposal now goes to public hearings before the Hansen City Council and the Twin Falls Board of County Commissioners.

County Zoning Administrator Ed Woods proposed amending the area of impact package, first drafted in 1976 though never ratified, for the following reasons:

• Placing the impact area's border on the section line eliminated pending property owners under city- and county zoning jurisdiction.

• Moving the area 300 feet inward eliminated the potential for placing the western edge of Hansen's impact zone within the eastern portion of Kimberly's area of impact.

A city has zoning jurisdiction over and contained within its area of impact. An exemption is property owned in parcels of 20 acres or larger, used for agricultural purposes. Those properties continue to be administered by the county zoning office.

• Since Hansen does not have a planning and zoning commission, negotiations are being conducted directly between the city representatives and the county commission.

However, the proposal will now go before the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission which will make a recommendation to the county commissioners.

Kimberly complains of irregular sewer bills

TWIN FALLS — Unanticipated jumps in Kimberly's monthly use of the Twin Falls sewer system should end, Kimberly officials said Monday.

"It's kind of tough to make a budget when all of a sudden, here comes the (bill increase) from Twin Falls that you didn't know was going to be there," Kimberly Mayor Ross Lea Whitehead said at a Twin Falls City Council work session.

Whitehead said fluctuations from one month to the next have included a difference of $1,700. Last June, she said, fees were $5,002. In July they were $3,300. Both the Twin Falls City Council and Kimberly representatives were at a loss to explain the disparity.

"A formula based on user equivalency fees which could be multiplied to reflect varying sewer system use by businesses would enhance Kimberly's cash flow," said Jim Coleman, substituting for Kimberly City Engineer Bill Block.

Presently, billing is based on how much total flow Kimberly discharges into the sewer system, according to Twin Falls City Engineer Gary Young.

Under an equivalency arrangement, a business such as a gas station might be charged the equivalent of two basic user fees, and a restaurant might be the equivalent of four basic users, Kimberly officials said.

Design Center's 'sister' in Elko destroyed by arson fire

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
 Times-News writer

ELKO, Nev. — Police say arson caused a March 1 fire at the Elko, Nev., Design Center, sister business of the Twin Falls Design Center destroyed by flames Friday.

Bob Kirby, Elko assistant police chief, said authorities have made no arrests on arson charges but are sure of the fire's cause.

"The building was torched," Kirby said. "It was definitely arson." Details of the Elko fire investigation were unavailable Monday night.

Elko police arrested Terry T. Artley, 20, of Elko, and a male juvenile March 16 on burglary charges in connection with theft of goods from the Design Center two hours before it burned.

Twin Falls Fire Chief Bobby Bopp said Monday his department has "nothing at this point to lead us to suspect arson is involved" in the Twin Falls blaze at 122 Fourth Ave. S.

Bopp said "fire officials" Monday interviewed tenants of the destroyed commercial building, owned by C.E. "Bud" Wadsworth Jr. of Twin Falls. Wadsworth was part-owner of the Elko building.

"Whether inspectors will examine the scene to determine a cause depends on the cost of such efforts versus the likelihood of a conclusive investigation," Bopp said. There's a possibility the fire was so destructive, it left inspectors nothing to work with in probing possible causes, he indicated.

Meanwhile, Nevada authorities are wondering what happened to the elderly occupant of an apartment above the Elko Design Center. Elko Fire Chief Bill Fogel said Richard Moden, 73, hasn't been seen in the community since the fire. A search of the rubble revealed no indication Moden perished in the fire, Fogel said, though the man's eyeglasses were found in the debris.

Fogel said there is speculation Moden suffered memory impairment because confused by destruction of the building and wandered off. Just prior to the fire, Fogel added, a New York relative of Moden's received correspondence from him stating he wanted to leave Elko.

"But he was a car buff," Fogel said, "and his car's still here. If he was leaving town, you would figure he'd want the car. We don't know what to think. We assume the man wasn't in the building, but we've got to prove that."

The Elko fire started shortly after 11 p.m., according to Fogel, who said city firemen and others from communities nearby battled the blaze about eight hours.

"We were lucky," he said. "If we had a pretty good east-west wind, and embers were flying as far as a block away, it could have started some other fires, but it didn't."

The fire caused about $300,000 damage, Fogel said. The cost of the fire in Twin Falls' warehouse district is undetermined, according to the Twin Falls Fire Department.

Evans may eliminate programs

By RON ZELLAR
 Times-News writer

BURLEY — Gov. John Evans said Monday he may eliminate programs by executive order if the Legislature does not fund them adequately.

Evans told members of the Burley Chamber of Commerce at a noon luncheon he does not believe in making feeble attempts to provide services to the public. "If (programs) don't have a chance to succeed they shouldn't be attempted," he said.

The governor said after the meeting he is still hopeful lawmakers will reverse some budget decisions before adjourning.

He did not rule out further use of his veto stamp, but conceded Republican funding veto makes it unlikely other vetoes would be sustained.

Evans said he would consider vetoing any of four appropriations bills for higher education, air quality monitoring, water research and senior citizens' programs.

Asked if he holds any hope the Legislature will veer from its $422 million revenue projection and raise some budgets, Evans said anything is possible under pressures that build toward the end of a legislative session.

"They have overspent projections in the past," he said, noting that only a resolution, or gentlemen's agreement, binds lawmakers to the present figure.

Evans repeated his contention state legislators have taken the wrong cue from President Ronald Reagan's landslide election last November. Voters are dissatisfied with federal not state programs, he said.

Citing proposed cuts in funding for tourism promotion, water research and senior citizens' health care, he said the Republican-dominated Legislature could "jeopardize future prosperity in Idaho" by not encouraging visitors and by discouraging companies that might otherwise locate or expand operations in the state.

Evans said he is sticking by his original appointments to the Northwest Power Council, established by Congress to oversee conservation and new electricity generating plants in the region.

Last week the governor vetoed a bill requiring the state's two power representatives to be from different political parties. He said he will sign legislation that deletes reference to party but requires legislative confirmation. (The veto was sustained — See Page A3.)

Evans appointed Democrats Robert Saxvik and Chris Carlson to the four-state council. He said the two will "in all likelihood" serve at least until the 1982 legislative session.

Minidoka school given spirited face-lift as students work to regain privileges

By LINDA CATES
 Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Several Minidoka students used a half day vacation Monday to give their school a face-lift.

The project was started last month after assembly privileges were taken away from the student body. Minidoka Principal Don Cameron said the privileges were revoked because of a "build up of irresponsible conduct during assemblies."

Deanna Tanner, student council president, said the council and home room representatives met and came up with the plan to help instill school spirit in students. After the plan was presented to Cameron he reinstated the assembly privileges.

To help with the project, Marvin Schow, Industrial arts instructor, had his students draw up plans for a parking area behind the school near the old school incinerator. Monte Weimer's drawing was selected for the project.

Tanner said the plan consisted of cleaning out the incinerators, hauling in dirt donated by two area businesses and planting shrubs in target areas. Industrial arts classes covered part of the incinerator with rock and will top it off with red wood strips. They will also put in curbing around parking spots for custodial parking, and build a redwood fence to screen off the kitchen area.

About $350 has been raised by school clubs and donations for the purchase of about 33 shrubs that the council and other students will plant in early April.

Cameron said he feels the general attitude of the students has been steadily improving over the past few years. It used to "take two large garbage cans to clean up the halls after lunch hour," he said, "and now it's just a small pile."

Minidoka County Superintendent Wayne Fagg said he wishes the project will improve what has been an eyesore for many years.

MVMH nurses, doctors change procedures

TWIN FALLS — A plan to reorganize Magic Valley Memorial Hospital's nursing services was unveiled at Monday night's board meeting.

Bill Chestnut, newly appointed director of nursing, discussed plans to add a new quality assurance supervisor and to change head nurses' duties.

Head nurses will be relieved of most direct patient care to devote more time to managerial duties so as to increase overall patient care, Chestnut told the board.

In other business, changes in medical procedures, decided by MVMH's doctors, were announced by Dr.

Wayne Wright. They include:

- Emergency patients who need follow-up care but do not have their own doctor, will themselves select a doctor. Previously, patients were assigned doctors from a rotating schedule. Emergency room physicians may be selected.
- Only doctors who live within 25 miles of MVMH will be allowed to perform surgery there, except in emergencies, Wright said. This would ensure doctors were within adequate traveling time in case post-surgery complications developed.
- Expectant fathers taking MVMH birthing classes will be asked to find out whether their physician will allow them in the delivery room with their wives. Wright said several fathers had been irate when doctors barred them from the room.

The board's building committee approved a $17,770 bid from Hampton Brothers Inc. of Firth to build a tunnel connecting the new power plant to the old hospital building as part of the hospital's expansion plan.

MVMH administrator William Burns said plans to enlarge the intensive Care Unit from 7 to 11 beds were proceeding. Wright noted the unit had another "crisis" Monday when staff "had to move a patient out who may not (have been) ready to move out" because of overcrowding.

Bargaining results in guilty plea to lesser sex charge

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man faces a maximum 10-year prison sentence after pleading guilty Monday to a sex charge involving a 10-year-old girl.

Greg Ward, 23, pleaded guilty in 5th District Court to a charge of assault with intent to commit lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor child. Ward had originally been charged with lewd conduct with a minor, a charge later reduced on Jan. 15 by the Twin Falls County Prosecutor's office.

In a statement filed with the court, Prosecutor Tom Gray said the plea negotiations would produce a conviction without going to trial, something he said would have been psychologically damaging to the victim.

According to the charge, Ward performed lascivious sex acts with the child between May 30 and July 15.

Fifth District Court Judge Daniel Meehl ordered a presentence investigation and released the defendant on a continuance of $2,000 bond.

In other matters, Meehl ordered 18-year-old Bartlett Blaine Livingston of Twin Falls to undergo a psychiatric evaluation at State Hospital South at Blackfoot prior to sentencing.

Livingston pleaded guilty Feb. 23 in 5th District Court to robbery in connection with the beating of a 76-year-old South Park area woman on Feb. 5. According to Twin Falls police, the woman was raped, beaten and threatened by assailants who stole her gold wedding band.

Livingston has agreed to cooperate in the prosecution of a co-defendant, David Rossi, 27, of Twin Falls, who is charged with aggravated assault with intent to commit murder, robbery, rape and first degree burglary. Rossi has pleaded not guilty to the four felony charges and is scheduled to stand trial in 5th District Court next month.

Livingston's lawyer, Golden R. Bennett of Twin Falls, requested the psychiatric evaluation.

Mevin Lynn Koch, 21, pleaded guilty to one felony charge and not guilty to a second felony in connection with the burglary of the Genex Co-op on Bannock Dec. 12, 1980.

Koch pleaded guilty to a charge of first-degree burglary, which carries a maximum 15-year prison sentence. He pleaded not guilty to receiving stolen property, a charge carrying a maximum 14-year prison sentence.

Meehl ordered a presentence investigation and released the defendant on his own recognizance.

According to the Twin Falls County Prosecutor's office, the second felony charge against Koch may be dropped after the defendant is sentenced.

Koch's 26-year-old brother, Jim, pleaded not guilty on March 9 to the same two felony charges arising from the Genex Co-op burglary. He now faces a jury trial in 5th District Court.

Meehl also ordered a 42-year-old Bills man to serve a two-year probation in lieu of a five-year suspended sentence for possession of stolen property.

Ronald Laib pleaded guilty to the felony charge Jan. 5. He was originally charged with grand larceny-auto and grand larceny. The charges were reduced by the prosecutor's office on Dec. 15, 1980.

The charges against Laib were made in connection with the theft of a motorcycle valued at more than $2,500 from a Buhl man.

As part of Laib's probation, Meehl ordered the defendant to abstain from alcoholic beverages and to repay $150 to the Twin Falls County Public Defender's office for legal services.

Nine Rupert juveniles taken into custody

RUPERT — Eight of nine Rupert youths taken into custody recently have been released to their guardians.

Last Thursday six male juveniles age 15 through 17 were charged with check forgery. Five were arrested by Rupert police and one was taken into custody in Paul by the Paul Police Department.

The charges involved "at least five checks" written within the "last few weeks in Cassia and Minidoka counties," according to Rupert police. All but one of the youths has been released; the sixth will receive a hearing today.

Three juveniles age 11, 12 and 13 were taken into custody Saturday and petitions were filed for second degree burglary.

Three Island closure irks local residents

GLENN'S FERRY — Officials at Three Island State Park near Glenns Ferry are receiving complaints from residents about plans to close the facility May 1.

State Sen. J. Wilson Steen, R-Glenns Ferry, in a press release Monday questioned why the park was selected for closure instead of Bruneau Sand Dunes state park.

Closure would be detrimental to the public and the economy of Glenns Ferry, Steen said. He said he hoped the State Park Board could be convinced to reconsider and possibly close Bruneau or another park or pursue another alternative.

Park Ranger Jim Kavajecz said a public hearing was scheduled for Monday night in Glenns Ferry to obtain information from residents about their protests concerning the closure.

The board closed Three Island and two other southern Idaho parks — Malad, George near Tuttle and Indian Rocks near McCammon, because of legislative budget cutbacks.

Parks and Recreation Department officials said the only response from the public they have received concerns the closure of Three Island.

Steen said it had been suggested to him that the city of Glenns Ferry could lease the park from the State.

Burglary charge reduced for plea

RUPERT — A Rupert man Monday pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of second degree burglary in 5th District Court.

Larry Bromenschenkel, 20, was originally charged with first degree burglary, following a March 10 break-in at Roper's in Rupert. A store window was broken and several items of clothing were taken including boots and hats, according to the Minidoka County Sheriff's Office.

Bromenschenkel had been held in Minidoka County Jail since his arrest March 17 on a $25,000 bond. He was released Monday on his own recognizance until sentencing, which is scheduled for April 5. The maximum penalty for second degree burglary is a five-year prison term.

Two life sentences cause Franklin to explode

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — White-supremacist Joseph Paul Franklin exploded in anger Monday at his sentencing for the ambush-slayings of two black loggers.

Franklin lunged across a courtroom table at prosecutors and screaming at the judge who ordered him jailed for consecutive life terms.

U.S. District Court Judge Bruce Jenkins who sentenced Franklin for violating the civil rights of Ted Fields, 20 and David Martin, 18.

At the hearing, the 200-pound defendant leaped toward Assistant U.S.

Attorneys Steven Snarr and Richard Roberts. Roberts is a black civil rights prosecutor from the Justice Department in Washington.

The outburst came as Snarr made a statement urging the judge to consider the fearsome nature of the crimes and the shattered families of the victims.

"Got any more lies about me, you little faggot?" interrupted Franklin in the center of the courtroom with his attorney, Robert Van Selver.

"You and that trained ape you've got lying for you," he said, referring to Roberts.

He then jumped toward the two men, knocking a pitcher of water into the air and dumping ice into the lap of FBI Agent Curt Jensen.

Ten U.S. Marshals pulled him from the prosecution table and wrestled him to the floor.

"Put him in irons," said the judge as the men rolled on the carpet in front of his bench for several minutes.

The marshals cuffed and shackled Franklin and held him upright in front of Jenkins, who attempted to pronounce sentence. But Franklin, 30, would not be silenced, protesting the cuffs were pinching off the circulation in his hands.

After the sentence was pronounced, Franklin yelled at the judge "You are nothing but an agent of the communist government, you bastards!"

Franklin, an avowed racist and former member of the Ku Klux Klan, and the American Nazi Party, was convicted March 4 of violating the civil rights of the two Salt Lake men by shooting them as they jogged out of a city park with two white teen-aged girls.

In state proceedings, he has been charged with first-degree murder for the shootings. Salt Lake County took legal custody of the defendant after his sentencing Monday so he could be arraigned on the local charges which carry the death penalty.

The consecutive life sentences will force Franklin to spend between 10 and 60 years in a federal prison. He will become eligible for his first parole hearing in 10 years.

Fundraiser almost doubles previous efforts at KAID

BOISE (UPI) — Boise's public television station concluded its fund-raising festival Sunday night, taking in nearly twice as many pledges as last year.

Those pledges, totaling $316,516, were $147,000 more than last year, but workers at KAID-TV still said they were worried about the future of their station.

The Legislature has threatened to cancel state funding for the state's public television stations this year, although one measure would provide token funding so the stations do not lose their licenses with the Federal Communications Commission. State funds last year provided KAID with $370,000 of its $950,000 budget.

Workers at KAID said they have been under more stress lately because of the legislative actions although the fund-raising effort fares well. They said they are uncertain if they will be kept on at the station after July 1 because of the funding dilemma.

Oregon NOW convention

Mormons, Moral Majority criticised

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — The Moral Majority and the Mormon Church were targets of criticism Sunday at the Oregon convention of the National Organization for Women.

The Mormon Church has funneled money and assistance to groups working for defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment, Harry Denarest, an ex-communicated Mormon, told one workshop.

She described the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints as "highly organized, high-motivated and directed by male leaders from Utah." She said Mormons for ERA has 2,000 members and many are jeopardizing their church memberships and jobs by supporting the women's movement.

The Moral Majority was described as "neither a moral, nor a majority" by Barbara Bauer, a delegate to the 1980 White House Conference on the Family. She added, "but we can't ignore them."

She urged NOW members to take part in organizations combating what she termed television censorship efforts by Moral Majority.

Delegates also were told, "The anti-abortion human life amendment has a better chance of passing in this Congress than the Equal Rights Amendment." Laura Aibelman, of Corvallis, an organization for the National Abortion Rights League, added, "That's something we're going to have to face."

District judge closes murder hearing

CALDWELL (UPI) — A preliminary hearing for two brothers charged with the slaying of Nampa grocer Rudy Salek was closed to the public and press Monday.

The hearing involved the media and defense and prosecution attorneys was held after two reporters objected to defense motions that the hearing be closed.

Third District Magistrate Jack D. Swafford ordered the hearing closed after discussing the problem with reporters and attorneys. He ruled that Idaho law calls for closure of a preliminary hearing upon the request of a defendant.

Brothers Kelly Brian Wilson, 19, and David Zynn Wilson, 25, both Nampa, are charged with shooting Salek in February during the armed robbery of his Lone Star market in Nampa.

Dear Abby

What is mom's fair share?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: I did it again. I invited my readers to express themselves, and did I get mail! Here's the original letter:

DEAR ABBY: My husband's father, who is in her 80s, has come to live with us. She's financially secure and draws a nice Social Security check every month. We have four teenagers at home and one in college, and with prices so high these days, we barely make ends meet. I added up all the household expenses and divided them by the number of people who live here, and it comes to $275 a month. (Not including clothing.)
Mother thinks $150 a month is adequate for her share. My husband agrees with her. This includes driving her to town to shop, to the doctor and anywhere else she wants to go. She watches TV all day long and we have to keep the furnace higher for her. I would like the opinion of your readers concerning what Mother's fair share should be. (What would she pay in a nursing home that doesn't offer all these extras?) Mother said she would abide by what Dear Abby's readers say.

WAITING IN WASHINGTON
DEAR WAITING: I'm waiting, too, readers?

DEAR WAITING: Thank God your mother-in-law is willing to take you. You should give her your entire Social Security check. You couldn't find a nursing home for under $1,000 a month. Personally, I wouldn't take my mother-in-law into my home for a million dollars a week! She's given me nothing but trouble since I married her son.

FONTANA, CALIF.
DEAR WAITING: May God forgive you. You "should" be satisfied of yourself. If I could only have my mother in my home, I would wait on her hand-and-foot. My mother died at 82, and I never got to pay her back.

DEAR ABBY: Tell Grandma to pry herself away from the tube long enough to sample the real world. Butler is now $2 a pound and so is round steak. I paid 39 cents for four small white potatoes and 16 cents for one sweet potato today. The old lady should keep $100 a month for her personal expenses and give the rest to the family she's living with. That won't even begin to pay for the inconvenience and adjustments they will have to make by her presence.

DEAR WAITING: Your mother-in-law should pay at least $400 a month. She can't take her money with her. Just make sure if she has anything left (after she dies), it will go to you and not to the other relatives. Some old folks are funny when it comes to relatives. It's always the ones who do the least for them while they're living who wind up getting the most.

DEAR WAITING: What kind of woman would charge an 80-year-old mother-in-law to live with her? Would you feel the same about your own mother? Did your mother-in-law change your husband for his food and shelter while he was growing up? Did she require compensation for all the hours of lost sleep and the sacrifices she made during the Depression years when times were really tough?
I would consider it a privilege to chauffer my mother-in-law around. Instead, I go to visit her under a marble slab on a hilltop shaded by a rhododendron bush. God bless all 80-year-olds. They've been through plenty and deserve to be rewarded.

DEAR WAITING: Take whatever amount you can get and be quiet! My mother is in a nursing home. It costs $4,000 a month for a private room, which she needs because she can't get along with anybody. Everything else is extra. Doctors, medicine, and $35 every time she gets her toenails trimmed. My brother and I pay the bills, and we aren't complaining. It beats having her live with us. Your mother-in-law must be the exception. No home is big enough for two families.

Floyd wins; earns $272,000

Raymond Floyd drives away after winning TPC in playoff

—PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (UPI) — When the stakes are high, and they were the highest Monday, Ray Floyd is usually playing for them.

Floyd, 39, who has won more than $100,000 on the PGA Tour every year since 1974, with the exception of 1978 when he dipped to $7,595. He proved he's a money-player again by winning the $72,000 first prize of the Tournament Players Championship plus a $200,000 bonus for winning the Doral and the TPC back-to-back.

And he won it with the pressure on in a sudden-death playoff against Barry Jaeckel and Curtis Strange by paring the par-three 15th hole while his competitors were bogeying.

"I feel Raymond shot a helluva score in rugged conditions," said Jaeckel. "I'm not going to hang my head, I'm going to have a few drinks tonight and smile; I don't think I choked."

Jaeckel, who led the tournament after the second and third rounds, could have won the tournament if he had made a seven-foot putt on the 18th for a birdie. Instead, he scuffed the green with his putter and the putt stopped inches short of the hole.

"It's frustrating. I wish we could have given Raymond a little more competition in the playoff," said Strange, who came from four strokes back to wind up in the playoff.

"I would be lying if I said the money didn't come into my mind," said Floyd, who finished behind Strange and Jaeckel. "I don't think I was ever really considered a threat in this tournament by the media. But I never was far off."

"When I birdied 11 and 12 I knew I could win," he said.

The bonus, put together by the sponsors of the last three tournaments, actually amounted to $250,000 but 20 percent of it goes to the PGA's Junior Golf program.

Tom Place, spokesman for the PGA tour, said it was the biggest purse ever paid a single winner on the tour.

Floyd jumped way ahead in the PGA Tour's money sweepstakes with a total of $362,912 so far this year.

The 39-year-old Miami resident also moved into ninth place on the Tour's career money list ahead of Miller Barber and Gene Littler with a total of $1,599,540.

Jaeckel went into the rain-delayed final round of the TPC with a three-stroke lead over John Mahoney, Don Halldorson and Jim Simons. But he squandered the advantage as Floyd and Strange, who began the round four strokes back, closed in.

On the 18th hole, Jaeckel missed a seven-foot birdie putt that would have given him the tournament.

Floyd had birdied the 15th during his final round to move into a tie with Jaeckel and Strange, who birdied the 13th hole at about the same time. Jaeckel had bogeyed the 12th. But Jaeckel chipped in from off the green on the 13th for a birdie, moving once again in to the lead by one stroke.

When Jaeckel bogeyed the 16th, the three-way deadlock was renewed. All three held their ground the rest of the way, remaining at three-under-par for the day.

Godby plays sports with a special breed

Gooding graduate enjoys life as boxer, cowboy

By MIKE PRATER
Times-News sports writer

TWIN FALLS — Dyrek Godby is among a special breed of people. He thrives on sports that offer pain.

When he's not pounding heads in the boxing ring, the 22-year-old College of Southern Idaho student rides bulls and wild horses for the school's rodeo team — the Aggies. Godby, the saddle bronc point leader in the Rocky Mountain Region, will put his lead on the line when CSI becomes host of the annual CSI Rodeo Friday at the Expo Center.

"They're both very painful sports, but after you compete around them for a long time, you get used to broken bones and cuts," he said. "Sure I've been hurt before. But I wouldn't quit what I do for anything. I love physical sports, and pain and injuries come along with them."

CSI rodeo Coach Shawn Davis says Godby is different that anyone he's met.

And Davis, a three-time world saddle bronc champion, has met a lot of people.

"The story behind Dyrek is a very impressive one," Davis said during a rodeo school at the CSI Expo Center last week. "He's by far one of the most talented people I know and although he's in such a he-man sport, he's a mild-mannered kid. He's something a lot of kids would love to grow up to be."

Godby, a third-year student at CSI who also paints in his small amount of spare time, has spent the last 10 years in a boxing ring,

CSI student Dyrek Godby works with his saddle as a warm-up before putting it and himself on a horse for a wild ride where he has won 91 of 104 amateur fights. He has been the Western Regional Golden Gloves champion three years and just last year he fought Davey Armstrong, a bronze medalist in the 1976 Olympics, to a split decision in Las Vegas. This year he qualified for the National Golden Gloves tournament in Cleveland, Ohio, but Godby refuses to attend because he says he's tired of the ring and wants to concentrate on his rodeo career. "I feel really satisfied with my boxing career right now, but I want to hang it up for a while so I can pursue my rodeo career," Godby, a graduate of Gooding High School, said. "I think I can become a national champion and I want to concentrate on that right now." The dream of a national championship could quickly turn into reality for Godby. In six years of roodeing, he has risen to the pro level and last year he picked up his professional rodeo card.

"When he came to me three years ago, he was just a rank beginner," Davis said about Godby, who also was a lead singer in a country-western band before it recently broke apart. "But the difference between now and then is like day and night. It's just unbelievable."

"The amount of dedication and training that it takes to be a good boxer is the reason for Godby's current lack of interest in the sport. He feels that 10 years of being loyal to the sport is plenty."

"I've dedicated my life to boxing and when you dedicate your life to a sport such as boxing, you give up a lot of things — especially when you are in high school," he said. "And I'm tired of all the hassles: Getting up and working out each day, giving up the fun things and your friends just so you can step in the ring for five rounds of hitting another fighter. I'm tired of it all for right now."

"But I'm not quitting boxing for good," Godby said. "After my kick in rodeo, I would turn pro. I'm done completely with amateur fighting."

And when Godby does turn pro, he says he will make him a pro athlete in two of the toughest sports around — a unique accomplishment for anyone.

But Godby has paid his dues and he thinks it's all going to pay off for him someday. "I've always wanted to be the best, and I think I can in rodeo. Just how long will it take me to climb to the top?" Godby asked. "Well, I don't know. Only the Lord knows that, I guess."

"But I'm going to have to work hard at whatever I do," he said. "Because if you want to sing the blues, you have to pay your dues."

Pressey gives Tulsa 89-87 win with fourth quarter charge

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tulsa guard Paul Pressey used the flashing form that made him a first-team member of the All-Missouri Valley Conference squad to the teams' advantage Monday.

He scored 11 of his team-high 20 points in the final eight minutes to lead the Golden Hurricane to an 89-87 victory over West Virginia and a berth in the final of the National Invitation Tournament.

Tulsa will meet the Syracuse Orangemen, which was a 70-63 winner over Purdue, in the NIT final Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden.

stretch and gave Tulsa its first lead of the second half, 80-79, on a three-point play with 4:25 remaining.

He hit a jumper to put Tulsa ahead 82-80 and then deflected a pass and hit David Brown, who was fouled.

Brown's free throw put the Golden Hurricane ahead 84-80 and each time the Mountaineers threatened, Pressey made the big play.

His steal with 1:08 remaining and a subsequent pair of foul shots gave Tulsa an 87-83 edge with 40 seconds left and two free throws by Phil Spradling helped offset two baskets by West Virginia's Diego McCoy.

McCoy, a sophomore guard averaging six points per game, tallied 19 of his career-high 30 points in the second half for the Mountaineers, 23-9, who were making their first NIT appearance since 1968.

Center Greg Stewart, a New York native, added 19 points for Tulsa, 25-7, and Mike Anderson chipped in with 17 in the first meeting ever between the two teams.

The Mountaineers led virtually the entire first half en route to a 44-40 advantage at intermission. Mountaineers forward Greg Nance scored 14 of his 22 points in the opening half, when West Virginia repeatedly beat Tulsa downcourt for easy layups off the fast break.

Tulsa stayed in the game over the first 20 minutes on the strength of their 24-19 rebounding edge over a Mountaineers squad that had been outscored only six times in the entire season.

Taiwan back in Games

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (UPI) — Taiwan Monday returned to Olympic movement after five years out in the cold by agreeing to a calling card, the Republic of China Olympic Games.

The International Olympic Committee said Taiwan agreed to change the name of its national Olympic committee, its flag and its team emblem.

It is now the "Chinese Taipei Olympic Committee" instead of the Republic of China Olympic Committee, the IOC said.

An agreement on Taiwan's return to the Games was signed at IOC headquarters at Lake Geneva Monday by IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch and Shen Chia-Ming, president of the Taiwan committee.

The IOC in a brief statement said Taiwan is now again entitled to take part in future Olympics as well as in other IOC-authorized activities, with the same status and rights as all other national Olympic committees.

Officials reached with Taiwan, Samaranich and IOC Director Monique Berlioux refused comment on the agreement and the IOC gave no advance notice that an accord had been reached to discuss the reasons for the secrecy, but IOC insiders said it "obviously" reflected reluctance to inspire any publicity which would anger Peking.

Syracuse surprises Purdue to gain second title game berth

NEW YORK (UPI) — Syracuse center Dan Schayes was both surprised and determined to show everyone in New York's Madison Square Garden he could do it.

Schayes, shuffling off an ankle injury that left him ineffective in the first half, scored three points in the final 1:01 Monday night to break a 61-61 tie and lead the Orangemen to a 70-63 triumph over Purdue and a berth in the NIT final against unheralded Tulsa.

Tulsa, a 89-87 surprise winner over

West Virginia, will be an underdog going into Wednesday's championship game against Syracuse.

The Orangemen, who won their seventh straight game, held a 52-43 lead with 12:50 remaining before the Bollermakers stormed back to forge ties at 55-55, 55-59 and 61-61, when Drake Morris hit a basket with 1:25 remaining.

Schayes, limited to two points and one rebound in the opening half, then hit a bank shot and Leo Rautins hit two free throws to put Syracuse ahead 65-61.

Purdue's Keith Edmonson then hit a jumper but Schayes followed with a free throw with 29 seconds left and after a Morris miss, Erich Santlifer and Rautins tied the game with breakaway baskets.

Rautins scored 19 points to lead the Orangemen, 22-11, who won the Big East tournament, after a disappointing 15-11 regular season.

Santlifer added 38 points and Tony Bruin chipped in with 16. Schayes — the son of former NBA great Doh-Schayes and Syracuse's leading scorer and rebounder — finished with nine points.

Mike Scarsie led the Bollermakers, 20-11, with 18 points but center Russell Cross — the Big Ten Freshman of the Year — scored just four of his 14 points in the second half.

Syracuse led by a small margin for most of the first half behind Bruin's 12 points and took a 37-32 lead at intermission behind a precise fast break.

Cavs' fate in NCAAs depend on Sampson

By United Press International

Can Rampson carry the weight of Virginia's NCAA championship hopes? The 7-foot-5 Sampson, who brought the school a National Invitation Tournament title last year, swept the Cavaliers to the threshold of an NCAA crown this week with a brilliant array of dunks, hooks and rebounding. Cavs meet North Carolina in the semifinals at Philadelphia Saturday.

Coach Bobby Knight's Indiana squad, perhaps the most authoritative team in the 1981 tournament, takes on Louisiana State in the semifinals. The survivors meet Monday night for the championship. Sampson scored 13 of his 22 points in the second-half of a 74-60 victory over Brigham Young Saturday as he showed tremendous improvement over the games he played against Tennessee and Villanova earlier in the tournament.

"People say Sampson doesn't move very well, and he's a poor server. That's not true. He's probably more mobile than other seven-footers who have played college basketball," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said he would have preferred to meet North Carolina in an 89-69 winner over Kansas State Saturday, in the finals "because then the Atlantic Coast Conference would have been assured of winning the national championship." Holland's team has beaten North Carolina twice this season. The Tar Heels, however, have won 10 of their last 11 games, including three so far in this tournament. The taciturn Knight, who played for Ohio State when the Buckeyes won the NCAA title in 1961, is never satisfied until he has won a title. All other games are tuneups for the big championship match. He coached Indiana to the 1976 NCAA title.

Indiana, tabbed co-favorite with LSU before the tournament started, walked past Cinderella St. Joseph's (Pa.) 78-46 Sunday. "Indiana is a terrific defensive team," says St. Joe's Coach Jim Lyman in praise of the Hoosiers. "They took us out of what we tried to do early. Teams have defended us well, but not as well as Indiana." The Hoosiers' tight defense held St. Joe's to 33 percent shooting from the floor (14-of-42 shots). Durand Macklin, who would love to duplicate his schoolboy friend Darrell Griffith's NCAA triumph with Louisville last year, dislocated a finger toward the fall end of LSU's 96-85 triumph over Wichita State Sunday, but vowed the injury would not hamper his performance in Philadelphia. "I can't let anything stop me from contributing to our team effort," said the 6-7 forward. "It might hinder me in dribbling, but I'll just have to get used to it." Macklin scored a game-high 21 points and 10 rebounds against Wichita State.

Blue Jays happy to have Ainge back at third, rumors, rookies and trades dominate baseball

By PETER GAMMONS
© 1981 Boston Globe

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. — Virtually the entire Blue Jays team gathered in a bar-Thursday night to watch their third baseman, Danny Ainge, play against Notre Dame.

"They knew that 36 hours after BYU's elimination from the NCAA basketball tournament, he'd be at Grand Field doing calisthenics.

Writers, broadcasters, players and particularly shark agents have tried to tell Ainge that he should ditch the long-term deal he signed with the Blue Jays and go into the NBA for big bucks.

But he says he won't.

The explanation most often used is that, in keeping with his Mormon religion, Ainge does not want to play on a team that is 65 percent black.

"I can't buy that, not when six Toronto starters are black or Latin and Ainge and his three fellow Mormon teammates (Jerry Garvin, Garth Iorg, Barry Bonnell) are trying to convert Damaso Garcia and Willie Upshaw.

Whatever, the Jays think that once Ainge concentrates on baseball, he will be a great player.

"He has unusual defensive quickness, instincts and actions, and he's going to hit," says manager Bobby Mattick. "And we know he's one thing that you can't teach — a winner."

If you don't believe that, just ask Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps.

The Yankees had three of their top scouts watching Toronto right-hander Jim Clancy (as if they don't know what he can do). With the interleague trading deadline approaching quickly, rumors keep flying around.

Ron Guldry for Montreal right-hander Steve Rogers; the Yankees dealing Ron Davis and kids for the Cubs' Rick Reuschel and catcher Barry Foote; Angel first baseman Jason Thompson for either Pittsburgh catcher Ed Ott or Montreal catcher John Stearns (apparently Brian Downing isn't doing as well as they like to say); Houston right-hander Ken Forsch to either California or Philly; Milwaukee picking up right-handed reliever from Philadelphia (who plans to go with rookie Jon Reelhorn, drafted out of Fresno State last June).

George Steinbrenner asked the Rangers for Ferguson Jenkins, but until the Rangers know for sure about Steve Comer and Jim Kern, they can't go trading Jenkins.

One of the Phils' kids, 22-year-old outfielder Wil Calmer, is Jim Rice's twin. The first time he was so informed, the Bahamian, Calmer replied, "Who's Jim Rice?"

Billy Martin is still talking Mike Norris for Guldry—but then the A's never did know what to expect from Norris.

Houston players are doing a lot of grumbling about the release of Joe Morgan, but manager Bill Vardon says it had to be done because Morgan wants to play every day and Vardon doesn't think he can anymore.

California is so desperate for pitching that former Dodger lefty Doug Rau, coming back from rotator cuff surgery, is working out a contract with them. Problem is, he wants his contract guaranteed.

Among the kids in the Red Sox minor league complex is 19-year-old right-hander Jose Mariel, who not only is Juan's cousin but has the same patented kick and delivery. Now, if he can only pitch as well.

Cardinal manager Whitey Herzog says not to worry about the lack of range in the Red Sox infield.

"Ralph Houk will do what he did in Detroit," says Herzog, "and keep the infield grass knee high."

Why is it every thing always goes wrong for the Indians?

Andre Thornton, coming off knee surgery, broke his hand. Toby Harrah, who fell off a roof in the off-season, re-injured himself this week trying to do too much and probably won't be ready to open the season. They don't know if Duane Kuiper can ever make the pivot at second again. And lefthanded reliever Sid Monge, whose comeback is a must, still is only throwing 81-83 m.p.h., far from what he brought in his good days.

Bobby Bonds keeps calling clubs trying to get a job, telling them that money is no problem, but no one's bitten yet.

One player certain to blossom into stardom this year: "White Sox" outfielder Harold Baines.

No one believed that rookie lefthander Fernando Valenzuela ("168 pounds — at birth" someone wrote) was only 20, so Dodger vice president Al Campanis got his birth certificate. X-rayed it and handed it out to the media.

Grinning Montreal third baseman Chris Smith ends up with the ball in his stomach as Baltimore's Jim Dwyer slides safely.

Chisox beat Reds, pick up encouragement

By United Press International

The Chicago White Sox, picked by some to unseat the Kansas City Royals this year in the American League West, got more encouragement Monday.

In an exhibition game at Sarasota, Fla., Bill Almon became the White Sox's latest hero when he hit a sacrifice fly in the bottom of the 11th inning for a 5-4 victory over a spill squad of Cincinnati Reds.

Wayne Nunez began the inning with a single, then pinch runner Leo Sutherland stole second and went to third on a sacrifice bunt by Marv Foley. That set the stage for Almon's game-winning fly off reliever Joe Kerrigan.

Cincinnati broke a 2-2 deadlock on Germain Barrera's RBI triple in the 10th against reliever Mike Proby. The Reds took a 4-2 lead when Barrera scored on a wild pitch, but Chicago came back to tie the score on Bob Molinaro's two-run single with two out in the bottom of the 10th.

The Reds took a 2-1 lead in the eighth on a two-run homer by Gary Redus. Chicago led 1-0 after a seventh-inning solo homer by Northagen off Paul Moskau.

Before the game, Chicago released veteran right-handed pitcher Dave Lemarczyk and Tom Johnson and sent seven players back to the minors for re-assignment, including three rostered players: left-handed pitcher Richard Barnes, outfielder Randy Johnson and catcher Ricky Sellmeier.

Lemarczyk was in camp as a non-roster player,

At Mesa, Ariz., relief pitcher Tom Brennan bailed Cleveland out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam by the fourth inning to spark the Indians.

At Cocoa, Fla., Nolan Ryan allowed one hit in four innings as Houston snapped a six-game losing streak. Terry Puhl's solo homer in the first inning off losing pitcher Frank Tanana gave Houston a 1-0 lead.

At Miami, Baltimore's Doug DeCinces and John Lowenstein drove in three runs each and Mike Flanagan picked up the win by allowing three runs over six innings. Montreal's Andre Dawson connected for a triple in the first and a two-run homer in the sixth.

At Phoenix, Ariz., San Francisco center fielder Bill North dropped Jeff Newman's fly ball for a three-run error with two out in the ninth.

At Palm Springs, Calif., Dan Ford and Don Baylor hit back-to-back home runs in the first inning and rookie John Harris added a solo blast in the eighth for the Angels.

In other camp news, the New York Mets announced that infielder Bob Balor will be lost for at least a week with a muscle strain of the lower left rib cage.

In later games, the other half of the Reds' squad played Detroit at Lakeland, Fla., the Mets matched up against the Dodgers in Ft. Pierce, Fla., and Texas and Kansas City traveled to San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Spring baseball roundup

trying to make the club at his own expense.

Johnson, a former Twins pitcher, has been trying to come back the last two years after rotator cuff surgery.

In other games, Toronto slugged Pittsburgh 12-6, Philadelphia topped St. Louis 5-4, Atlanta dominated the New York Yankees 7-5, Cleveland stomped the Chicago Cubs 6-2, Houston edged Boston 3-2, Baltimore routed Montreal 9-3, Oakland nipped San Francisco 4-0 and California strangled Seattle 11-3.

At Dunedin, Fla., Toronto hit six home runs, including three in the seventh inning. Rookie George Bell and veteran Otto Velez socked two each and "Ernie" Whitt and Barry Bonnell also homered in tiny Grand Field. The Pirates hit three homers, by Mike Easler, Gary Alexander and John Milner.

At Clearwater, Fla., Mike Schmidt lofted a sacrifice fly in the first inning to spark a three-run Phillies outburst.

At West Palm Beach, Fla., Terry Harper, the rookie handed a starting job by Atlanta owner Ted Turner three weeks ago, drove in three runs with three hits to lead the Braves. Earlier in the spring, Harper was named the Braves' starter in left field when Turner announced that veteran Gary Matlack, whose would be benched or traded, also had been optioned center fielder Bobby Brown and
