

Reagan survives lung wound; Brady 'grave' after operation

Agents aid wounded policeman, left, Press Secretary James Brady, on ground at right, as others swarm over suspected assailant

Gunman held; agent, officer hit in ambush

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A young gunman ambushed President Reagan at close range Monday.

One of the half dozen shots he fired pierced the president's lung inches from his heart. Doctors removed the bullet in a two-hour operation and said Reagan would recover.

The would-be assassin, identified as John Warnock Hinckley Jr., 25, of Evergreen, Colo., was tackled and pinned to the pavement, whisked away in a squad car and charged with attempted murder. Officials said that last fall during the presidential campaign Hinckley had been arrested for carrying three guns.

The shots outside a Washington hotel, crackling through a dismal rainfall like balloons bursting at a child's birthday party, gravely wounded presidential press secretary James Brady and left a Secret Service agent and a police officer in serious condition.

The shooting stunned the world and a nation whose citizens seem unable to shake the stigma of seemingly mindless murder of public figures.

But Reagan himself took the event in stride, joking with bystanders as he walked into the hospital under his own power. At 6:50 p.m. MST he handed doctors in the recovery room a hand written note paraphrasing W.C. Fields: "All in all, I'd rather be in Philadelphia."

Doctors at George Washington University Hospital said the 70-year-old Reagan is an excellent physical specimen with the body of a young man and his survival never was in doubt.

The prognosis for complete recovery is "excellent," and Reagan should be able to resume presidential duties this morning from his hospital bed.

Vice President George Bush, ordered back to Washington from Texas, said "I can reassure this nation and a watching world that this nation is functioning fully and normally."

The stunning murder attempt occurred outside the sprawling Washington Hilton Hotel, one mile from the White House, where Reagan had just delivered a speech to a union convention.

Waving and smiling, Reagan neared the bulletproof presidential limousine when the gunfire cracked. The assassin's face turned to frozen horror as a Secret Service agent shoved him into the car.

Pandemonium erupted. Bystanders screamed in horror. Guns were drawn in an instant. Hinckley was buried immediately under a mass of agents.

And the bloody bodies of Brady, Secret Service agent Timothy McCarthy and District of Columbia police officer Thomas Delahanty were sprawled on the rain-swept pavement.

There was no immediate indication how a person once so detested by authorities could have placed himself — without detection and carrying a .22 caliber handgun — 10 feet from Reagan.

Brady's prognosis was grim. Doctors said the bullet had entered his skull over his right eye and passed through his brain, and Dr. Dennis O'Leary said even if the 40-year-old press secretary lives, permanent brain damage is likely.

Reagan, who never lost consciousness, walked into the hospital's emergency room leaning for support on Secret Service agents.

Even with blood seeping from his wound and soaking his shirt, even with his left lung collapsed, even with what doctors later called a "really mangled" slug lodged inches from his heart, his chin and spirits were high.

"Don't worry," he reassured worried onlookers.

"Honey, I forgot to duck," he joked to his wife Nancy, who had rushed to the hospital to be at his side.

And as he was wheeled into the operating room for two hours of "painful surgery," Reagan looked up at his doctors and prayed they were "good Republicans."

Hospital room becomes center of power President maintains control of government

BY LOYE MILLER JR.
Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Despite his serious wound and subsequent surgery, President Reagan will remain in full control of the executive branch unless his condition becomes substantially worse.

That became clear quickly, even though stunned White House aides and Cabinet officers swayed and stumbled a bit beneath the weight of the assassination attempt.

While Vice President Bush cut short a trip to Texas and sped back to Washington, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. walked unannounced into the White House press room and pronounced, "As of now, I am in control at the White House."

"Should the president decide he wants to transfer the helm to the vice president, he will do so," Haig added.

But White House staff director David Gergen said before Reagan underwent surgery that there were no plans for such a transfer of power.

That meant that the powers of the presidency remain in Reagan's room at George Washington University Hospital, and will stay there unless there should be a drastic worsening of the president's condition.

Security improved over years. Page A7.

The legal guidepost for this situation is the 25th Amendment to the Constitution, entitled, "Presidential Disability and Succession."

Under the amendment, if Reagan felt that he could not discharge his duties while recovering, he could state that in writing to the speaker of the House and the president pro tempore of the Senate.

If the president were to do that, Bush would then become acting president until Reagan sent another written declaration stating that he was able to perform presidential duties once again.

That appears to be the only way in which power might change hands under the current circumstances.

A separate section of the 25th Amendment states that if the president could not or would not declare himself unable to continue in office (if he were in a coma, for instance), the vice president could take over if he and a majority of the "principal officers of the executive departments" declare that the president is unable to continue in office.

In case a president wanted to challenge this, Congress would then have to decide whether the president was competent.

But at this point, with the president's condition serious but stable, there seems to be no likelihood that Bush will be asked to formally become acting president.

Thus, the interesting question is how the government will be run from the president's hospital bed.

Will the senior White House staff take over, dealing with Cabinet officers and other officials on Reagan's behalf?

Or will Bush be moved forward unofficially to stand in for Reagan to conduct meetings and perform other functions normally the role of the president?

It seems probable that both of these things may happen, at least in part, after the shock of the traumatic day is absorbed.

But in the first hours after Reagan was shot Monday, the president's principal aides simply dropped everything and stood by at the hospital while Reagan underwent surgery.

Record shows Hinckley arrested on gun charge during campaign

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John W. "Jack" Hinckley Jr., 25, the man accused of trying to assassinate President Reagan, was arrested last fall for trying to board an airliner with firearms in Nashville, Tenn., when President Carter was in town.

The husky, blond-haired Hinckley, described by acquaintances as quiet and friendly, has a history of psychiatric care.

Hinckley, the son of "top-drawer" conservative Republicans who live in affluent Evergreen, Colo., was charged with attempting to assassinate a president and assault with intent to kill a police officer. Other charges were pending.

William Brissett, captain of the Nashville, Tenn., Airport security police, said Hinckley had been arrested in Nashville on Oct. 9 — the same day President Carter was in town — for trying to board an American Airlines plane with three handguns and 50 rounds of ammunition in a suitcase.

A source close to the Reagan shooting investigation said Hinckley had been in Nashville a couple of days before his arrest and was heard to note Reagan had canceled a campaign appearance there scheduled for Oct. 7.

Federal law enforcement sources said the guns included two .22-caliber revolvers and a .38-caliber revolver. Hinckley was charged with carrying a weapon on city property, a misdemeanor. He was fined $50 plus $12.50 in court costs, turned loose and the guns were confiscated.

Secret Service spokesman John Warner said the service had no previous knowledge of Hinckley before Monday's shooting.

Jim Robinson, an attorney for John W. Hinckley Sr. of Evergreen, Colo., Hinckley's father, issued a statement saying the younger Hinckley "had been under psychiatric care. However, the evaluations do not alert anyone to the seriousness of his condition."

Robinson refused to answer any questions about the nature of Hinckley's condition or his treatment.

The Hinckleys, described by friends as religious and holding conservative public and political beliefs, are "grieved and heartbroken by this tragedy," Robinson said.

Five or six shots were fired at Reagan, as he walked out of the Washington Hilton Hotel, by a white male in his 20s, authorities said. The assailant hit Reagan in the chest, White House press secretary Jim Brady in the head, and also wounded a Secret Service agent and a police officer.

A man later identified as Hinckley was wrestled to the ground by Secret Service agents and police officers and initially taken to Metropolitan Police headquarters for questioning, before being transferred to the FBI field office.

Polish union leaders delay today's strike

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Solidarity union leaders Monday suspended today's nationwide general strike.

They acted after reaching a wide-ranging compromise agreement with the government on several controversial issues.

But it appeared government negotiators led by Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski gave up more than the union — including concessions to farmers attempting to increase the settlement and avert the strike that threatened to paralyze Poland and provoke Soviet intervention.

The agreement capped seven hours of last-minute talks and came after the Communist Party Central Committee ended a stormy 16-hour crisis session at dawn with a vote of confidence for the beleaguered government.

Solidarity chief Lech Walesa called the agreement a "great achievement." Ranking union negotiator Andrzej Gwiazda, standing next to him, appeared on Polish television and read a communique to the applause announcing an agreement was reached and the strike suspended.

The communique said Solidarity's national commission would meet in Gdansk today to discuss the settlement and "decide on the general strike's fate" and if it should be postponed to another date or canceled outright.

The agreement marked the first easing of tensions since police-attacked unionists who refused to leave the local council building in Bydgoszcz on March 19, sparking Poland's worst crisis since last summer's labor unrest.

Both sides agreed to "negotiate on level relations so that new conflicts will not lead to catastrophic results."

Oscar award show goes on air tonight

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences postponed the annual Oscar presentations because of the shooting of President Reagan, who had been scheduled to open the ceremony with a videotaped speech.

The ceremony was put off for 24 hours until tonight, ABC-TV announced.

It was the third time the ceremony had been postponed. It was postponed in 1938 for a week because of disastrous flooding and for two days in 1963 because of the assassination of black civil rights leader Martin Luther King.

The Academy Award show is being postponed for 24 hours in deference to the tragedy in Washington, Norman Jewison, the show's producer, said.

"The show will go on tomorrow night, Tuesday, at 8 p.m. MST from the Dorothy Chandler pavilion as planned."

He said there was still a possibility that Reagan's videotaped remarks would be part of the ceremony.

"The decision whether to use the videotape will be made tomorrow by the White House," Jewison said. Reagan videotaped the address in the White House several weeks ago, noting the worldwide impact of the Oscar ceremony.

The actor-turned-president had been invited to take part in the ceremony "as a former member of the industry."

Secret Service Agent Timothy J. McCarthy was one of those wounded in the assassination attempt on President Ronald Reagan Monday. McCarthy was listed in serious condition. Policeman Thomas K. Delahanty also was wounded in the attack (see story and photo A5).

Commandos storm jet, kill 3 fanatic hijackers

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — A Joint Thai-Indonesian commando force stormed an Indonesian jetliner early Tuesday, killing three of the fanatic Moslem hijackers who held 50 people hostage for three days.

The youngest passenger, a child of 4 or 5, also was killed in the gun battle that erupted between the six hijackers and the nearly 90 commandos.

At least 10 people were wounded, including the pilot who was shot in the head, the Indonesian lieutenant colonel who led the raid and a foreigner believed to be among the passengers.

Two Americans on board were unhurt in the operation, which started at 2:30 a.m. and was over in eight minutes.

GM wants exhaust rules eased

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. called Monday for thorough revisions in auto exhaust emission rules and compliance procedures, including relaxation of some tailpipe pollution standards it already is able to meet.

GM said it wants the government to stop testing individual cars and instead measure anti-pollution compliance by the quality of the air.

It proposed that exhaust emission standards be imposed on a fleet-wide average basis — like the current gas mileage standards — instead of on each car.

And it asked that emission standards for carbon monoxide and oxides of nitrogen be rolled back to 1980 levels — even though it declared it can meet the more stringent 1981 standards and is doing so on cars that haven't been granted waivers.

Abscam trial of senator starts

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jury selection began Monday in the trial of Sen. Harrison Williams Jr. (D-N.J.), on bribery and conspiracy charges arising from the Abscam political corruption scandal.

Williams is the only senator to be indicted as a result of the investigation.

Six other congressmen — one current and five former representatives — have been convicted on a variety of charges.

Seven jurors — three women and four men — were selected Monday in the trial before Judge George Pratt in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn.

Gunmen shoot up NBC truck

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Unidentified gunmen blasted an NBC television van in a spray of bullets but its two Salvadoran passengers escaped uninjured, NBC employees said Monday.

Journalists counted seven bullet holes in the windshield of the van, marked with several "foreign press" posters, following the attack late Sunday.

Six other U.S.-based military-cyberjournalists has repeatedly accused foreign journalists of fomenting the Marxist-led guerrillas trying to overthrow the government.

German terrorists bomb office

FRANKFURT, West Germany (UPI) — Baader-Meinhof terrorists, proclaiming "Death to U.S. Imperialism," Monday firebombed a U.S. Army office in the second attack against an American target in 24 hours. No one was injured.

Police said the Red Army Faction, known as the Baader-Meinhof band, hurled three firebombs into the personnel office of the army's Fifth Corps, opposite the corps headquarters in Frankfurt.

Delays in cleanup bring attack

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress, the State of Pennsylvania and utility companies are playing a high-stakes "game of chicken" to see who finally picks up the $1 billion Three Mile Island cleanup tab, several congressmen hinted Monday.

"What you seem to be suggesting is we have a game of chicken going on between the Pennsylvania Public Utilities Commission and the federal government," Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt told Rep. Allen Ertel, D-Pa., during a hearing on financing the accident cleanup.

Democrats' pleas for nought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite impassioned pleas from some Democrats, the Republican-controlled Senate Monday refused to restore the minimum monthly benefit for Social Security recipients.

President Reagan has proposed eliminating the minimum benefit, which amounts to $122 a month and is paid to those who have not worked long enough under the Social Security system to qualify for regular payments.

The Senate rejected, 53-39, an amendment to restore the minimum benefit, as it worked for the third day on a package containing $8.4 billion in fiscal 1982 budget reductions — the bulk of them proposed by Reagan.

Press secretary 'fighting for life'

Jim Brady felled by first shot in fusillade.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House press secretary Jim Brady, shot through the brain in a presidential assassination attempt Monday, emerged from successful 4½-hour surgery with a "certainly better" outlook than believed earlier.

Lyn Nofziger, President Reagan's political director, returned to the White House from the hospital to brief reporters on his discussion with Brady's surgeon, Dr. Arthur Koberne, professor of neurosurgery at George Washington University Medical Center.

The prognosis is certainly better at this moment than it was earlier this afternoon," Nofziger said.

"Jim came out of surgery at about 8:15 p.m. His vital signs are stable. His pupillary reflexes — that's the reflexes of his pupils in his eyes — are normal. Dr. Koberne feels there may be some impairment, but he doesn't know how much at this time, nor will he be able to know for quite some time."

Pupillary activity is an indicator of brain activity, Sally McElroy, Brady's secretary, also said that while Brady's condition remains "guarded," he is "doing very well and the outlook is now more optimistic."

"She also said: 'He's doing really good. They (the surgeons) were pleased with the way the surgery went. They are really pleased.'

"They were able to remove the bullet and all the fragments."

Nofziger said he took the opportunity to speak because of "a lot of bad rumors going around about Brady's outlook."

He said Brady's condition remains critical, but the doctor "feels better about" his chances. Dr. Dennis O'Leary, dean of clinical affairs at the George Washington University Hospital, had told a news conference while the surgery was still under way that the bullet had gone through Brady's brain and "obviously caused a significant brain injury."

"This is not a good injury," said O'Leary. "Any time a patient is in critical condition he is fighting for his life."

Brady's surgery was performed by a team headed by Dr. Koberne, a professor of neurosurgery.

Brady was standing beside President Reagan when would-be assassin John Warner Hinckley Jr. opened fire and wounded the president, the press secretary, a Secret Service agent and a Washington policeman.

Mutual Broadcasting reporter Ross Simpson said he had been on the third floor of the hospital and had been told by a doctor that the bullet "entered Brady's brain above the eye and did extensive damage to the brain. The prognosis is not good."

He said the source told him "few people survive such a wound."

The president, O'Leary said, had not been advised of Brady's extremely critical condition. Reagan had himself emerged from surgery to remove a bullet from his lung only minutes before.

Medical officials were giving Brady's wife Sarah a report, and Simpson said, "She began crying very lightly."

Earlier, the three television networks quoted White House official David Propper as saying Brady was dead. Shortly thereafter, spokesman Larry Spokes told reporters that report was wrong.

The 40-year-old Brady was standing at the president's side when the shots rang out. He was felled immediately, and lay face down on the sidewalk in a cool, light rain until the ambulance arrived.

Brady and his wife have a 2-year-old son, Scotty. Brady also has a daughter, Melissa, 8, by a previous marriage. Melissa lives in Chicago with her mother and stepfather.

Brady is the round-faced, portly man who fields most of the questions at White House press briefings.

A veteran of Washington government service and politics, he spent the first two months of the new administration successfully walking the tightrope of closeness to the president.

Reporter's description sketches tragic events

Editor's note: UPI White House reporter Dean Reynolds was with the president when the shooting began Monday. Here is his eyewitness account.

By DEAN REYNOLDS
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan had just completed his speech, one of his many defenses of his economic program, when he headed as always to his awaiting motorcade.

Outside the Washington Hilton Hotel on Florida Avenue, the president was greeted by the cheers of several hundred bystanders.

Reagan waved in his good-natured fashion and smiled to the crowd as he walked from a service entrance the 25 steps to the presidential limousine. As the president stepped off the curb onto the driveway where his limousine was parked, something attracted his attention and he turned, facing the curb and the hotel wall where his assailant was standing somewhere among the bystanders.

Suddenly, there were four or five loud bursts, sounding like firecrackers, and the smell of gunsmoke hung in the air. The crowd recoiled in horror. There were screams. Handguns and automatic weapons were suddenly visible in the hands of police and Secret Service agents.

I dropped into a crouch but kept my eyes on the president. He appeared to have a frightened, almost bewildered look, just after the shots rang out.

Secret Service agents spun him around and shoved him head first into the limousine, all the while the agents kept shouting "Get back! Get back!" to the crowd.

The shots, fired in rapid succession, could not have been fired from more than 10 or 15 feet from the president.

The limousine pulled away seconds after the president was pushed inside.

A scuffle to right of the limousine then caught my attention. A young blond man was being subdued on his back by several agents and policemen. There was a mob of lawmen on the ground and the tops of two legs, clad in dark trousers, were visible, sticking out from the pile.

I saw no one hit and learned only later the president had been wounded along with White House press secretary Jim Brady, a policeman and a Secret Service agent.

The gunman had been on the sidewalk, standing close to the hotel wall. Reporters were on the other side of the limousine, the top of a triangle from the president and the gunman.

Reagan

"I think he knew he had been shot," O'Leary told reporter at a news conference after the two-hour surgery. "I gather he felt a little light headed, but I gather he was cracking jokes and was in good spirits at the time."

"He at no time was in any serious danger," O'Leary said, adding that removing the bullet which entered Reagan's chest and "ricocheted" off a rib into his lung was "a relatively simple procedure."

At that range, and with that sort of wound, it seemed clear Reagan would not have been in as good a position if the gunman has used a higher caliber weapon.

Reagan's chief political aide Lyn Nofziger quoted Reagan telling Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., "Don't worry about me, I'll make it."

And when the president saw his top

White House aides at the hospital he cracked: "Who's minding the store?" George Bush was minding the store. And, while Bush was en route back to Washington from a trip to Texas, Secretary of State Alexander Haig told a news conference, "As of now, I am in control here at the White House."

McCarthy, 32, the wounded Secret Service agent, was shot in the back — the bullet also lodging in his lung. He was in serious condition.

Delahanty, the 45-year-old district police officer shot in the neck, threw a flying tackle at Hinckley despite his grave wound. Delahanty was in serious condition at Washington Hospital Center.

The presidential limousine, a veritable fortress on wheels, had bullet dents and a windshield cracked and pockmarked.

Time to end curse

The picture above is last week's cover of Time magazine. The feature story detailed how violent crime is increasing in America; included was a story on the role guns are playing in that "curse." Monday, the curse struck again and another generation of Americans viewed the horror of the attempted assassination of their president. This time it is alleged to be a young man who unloaded his .22 calibre handgun into President Reagan's entourage as it left a Washington hotel. The president, Press Secretary James Brady, a police officer and a

Phil Batt

Taking bite out of crime

WILDER — A frightening, ugly, disgusting, soul-debasing increase in violent crime has permeated our society. Personal safety is the number one concern of most people, surpassing even pocketbook items in importance. Much of the country has surrendered sovereignty of the streets during night time hours to raving teenage thugs, who prey on the helpless and the unwary, sometimes killing on the whim of the moment. The taxpayer, through the federal government, has made a valiant effort to stem this tide over the last couple of decades: Juvenile Justice grants, which demanded cooperative efforts in order to qualify, have grown like the proverbial Topsy. Drug-abuse programs, teen-age counseling, anti-child abuse laws, school dropout prevention and a host of other efforts have been put forth by state and local jurisdictions. But the all-encompassing blanket which has set the tone for the treatment of juvenile offenders is the Youth Rehabilitation Act. This Idaho statute has its counterparts in every state. Generally, these laws mandate that an offender under 18 years of age will be tried for his crime without publicity, and that every effort will be made to erase past offenses from the record. The object is to rehabilitate the youthful criminal and return him to society without the yoke of shame being hung around his neck. Theoretically, this will not only salvage young lives, but also will reduce crime. These are noble goals. Unfortunately, an intolerable side effect has occurred. The protection given to some hardened juvenile criminals has emboldened them to the point that they blatantly disregard all norms of human decency. Slurring, murdering, raping and pillaging, they have become a plague upon society. State Sen. Mike Mitchell, a democrat from Lewiston, could best be described as a practical liberal. His heart is as big as a watermelon, but he is no patsy when tough action is needed. A few days ago, Senator Mitchell rose of his feet to address his colleagues. His chore was not a happy one. The author of most of our state child protective acts was now asking that some of the protection be stripped from teen-age hoodlums. Under Mitchell's proposal, offenders over 14 years of age who commit murder, rape, mayhem, or robbery will be tried as adults. The diminutive lawmaker was heavy-laden by his task. His debate was concise and deliberate. The strain of considerable soul-searching was obvious. Mike Mitchell concluded his debate as follows: "I regret the necessity of bringing this proposal before you. I regret even more, asking you to vote for it. We all share the senator's agony. But we have to do it. We can't let the law of the jungle prevail." Philip E. Batt is Idaho's lieutenant governor.

Precisely 40 years ago this week, I presented myself to the city editor of the Richmond (Va.) News Leader, a 20-year-old cub fresh caught from the University of Missouri. I have been a working newspaperman ever since. These have been 40 wonderful years. It is a familiar problem for many young persons, I believe, that they go through a long period of uncertainty about their careers. In the pop phrase, they have to "find themselves." In my own case there never was the slightest doubt. By 4 or 5 my parents knew that I had a bookish little boy on their hands. At 6 I wrote a poem hailing Lindbergh's flight to Paris; my mother sent it off to a children's magazine, and back came a note of acceptance "with a shiny new dime in payment. I had lost my amateur status. Then came a copy of the magazine itself. Byline! It was a thrill that comes once in a lifetime. This destiny knocked. In my monage, as a baseball nut, I dreamed of becoming a sportswriter. At 9 or 10 I stumbled upon the books of Richard Halliburton and Richard Harding Davis; I would become a foreign correspondent instead. What I became, the summer I was 13, was a copy boy for the Oklahoma City Times. First chore of the morning: cleaning out the paste pots. To this day I can smell the sour smell of the dirty pots of the night before. But there was a more intoxicating smell — the smell of printer's ink. As a high school editor I learned my way around a job shop, learned to set type by hand, learned to run a proof press. And all the time I was writing, writing, writing. Gibbon, et cetera, remarked upon the universal tendency of men to exalt the past and to deprecate the present. I yielded to the tendency long enough to say that the public schools were better in those days. At least they were better for a youngster who wanted to write for a living. Two years of Latin were required; I took four, and that investment has been bearing interest ever since. We had to diagram sentences. We had to commit to memory long passages from Shakespeare and the major poets. My impression is that nowadays such disciplines are not widely demanded. Anyway, in early March of 1941 it occurred to me that I had accumulated sufficient credits for a bachelor's degree. As a Southerner by inheritance, I wanted to work in the South. I am "day people," and wanted to get on an afternoon paper. I had heard of Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, legendary editor of the News Leader. My letter of application brought a tentative response from Charles Henry Hamilton, then the city editor. "Would you be interested in job as reporter starting $35 a week?" I rushed to Western Union. "Will report Monday, March 31, Kilpatrick." For years Ham complained that he never had really offered me a job; I had just grabbed one. So it began, and I swiftly discovered what all my brothers and sisters of the newsroom come eventually to know — that if you love newspapering, nothing in the world beats the business of going out on a story in the morning and covering that story, and writing against the deadline, and seeing your work still warm and smudgy from the press. Nothing even comes close. The years have taken me away from the excitement — and often the tedium — of a daily newsroom. These days I write from an office close by our home in the Blue Ridge Mountains, 80 miles west of Washington, but the hurly-burly of the news is still there for me. I am in the capital most of the time, doing what every reporter does — watching the play in the grand arena from his catbird seat in the press box. People sometimes ask how a newsman manages to write every day against the clock. Dr. Freeman's blunt answer will suffice: "Just put your belly against the typewriter, son, and start writing." I have had my belly against a typewriter Underwood for 40 years. Ten million words ago I came to love this crazy, demanding, frustrating, rewarding craft; and God knows I still do.

Editor, Times-News: How many of the present legislators would be re-elected, do you suppose, if the state held the election for these lawmakers within one month after the Legislature goes home? And while their dastardly deeds are still fresh in the minds of the voters... I'll bet not many would be wintering in Boise next year. That's where the politicians have it all over the voters, not only here, but in every state. They know that voters' memories are short and from one election to another the voters tend to forget just what our elected officials did, and did not do, at their last session of the Legislature. So, we continue to get the same run-around year after year. And, of course, as long as the elected officials have the votes, they will continue to do what they have for the last 200 years, or thereabouts. I opt for holding state elections the third week in April. Called "Spring Housecleaning." EARL E. ETTERS, JR. Jerome

Bush in charge during crisis subject to second-guessing

By LOVE MILLER JR., Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — As Ronald Reagan was flying to Detroit last July to be nominated for the presidency, he still was uneasy about his choice of a running mate. Almost unanimously, Reagan's campaign staff and advisers were urging him to choose his vanquished rival, George Bush. They cited a litany of reasons which added up to the argument that Bush would bring strength to the ticket in areas where Reagan did not provide it. Reagan, then still 69, was old and known to tire easily. Jogger Bush, 50, was much younger and more vigorous. Bush had great depth of governmental experience. In Congress, the executive branch and particularly in foreign affairs, Reagan never had served in Washington and was particularly inexperienced in international matters. While a conservative, Bush was far more moderate than Reagan both in philosophy and manner. This would make the ticket more attractive both to Republican moderates and to the crucial majority of the voting public who consider themselves independent. But in the face of this impressive array of positive arguments, Reagan remained deeply troubled. As his chartered Boeing 727 winged toward the Republican convention, the former California governor confided to one longtime friend that he simply feared that Bush wasn't strong and tough enough to handle the presidency if something should happen to a President Reagan. His previous doubts on this point had crystallized on a memorable night back in February at a Reagan-Bush debate in Nashville, N.H., three days before the Granite State's crucial primary. Though originally scheduled as a face-to-face debate between the two presidential candidates, the affair began in pandemonium as several other Republican hopefuls including Sens. Howard Baker of Tennessee and Robert Dole of Kansas trooped onto the stage and demanded to be included.

Reagan, whose campaign was financially underwriting the debate, sided with the others and did so with impressive grace presence. When the moderator then ordered that his microphone be cut off, Reagan waived it with a flourish and delivered the most effective punchline of the 1980 presidential campaign: "I am paying for this microphone, Mr. Green." The crowd went wild. It was as if the macho Ronnie Reagan of his old Western movie days had ridden in with both guns blazing. Through all this uproar, Bush sat silent and aloof, appearing unable to cope, while Reagan ran away with the support of the audience, including those watching television.

The result was disastrous for Bush. Going into the debate, most polls showed Reagan leading, but only narrowly. Three days later Bush's campaign was irreversibly smashed as Reagan won New Hampshire in a landslide. And three months later, as he headed for Detroit, Reagan was fretting about Bush's failure to stand up under pressure in a rather uncomplimentary controversy back in Nashville. Those who heard his comments on the plane that day knew that when Reagan finally put Bush on the ticket about 36 hours later, he did so with grave misgivings. Considered against that background, it is mind-boggling to find now that Reagan has put Vice President Bush in charge of directing the U.S. response to any crisis up to and including an attack by a hostile power. Reagan has loyally praised Bush ever since choosing him as a running mate, but there is absolutely no evidence that he has changed his mind since the problem of toughness. It seems clear the vice president received the crisis assignment by default. He was seized upon as a compromise by a White House staff detente of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who wanted the job, down to size. If a dangerous international crisis arises, Bush probably will have plenty of powerful presidential aides looking over his shoulder there in the White House situation room.

Son says Reagan will recover quickly

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Michael Reagan, the president's older son, said Monday his father is a strong person who will probably recover quickly from his gunshot wound and will be chopping wood at his California ranch next month.

Speaking to reporters on the lawn of his Sherman Oaks home, Reagan said he had been receiving optimistic reports on his father's condition every hour or less.

"I have heard from the people in Washington that he is out of surgery and in good condition," he said.

Reagan said an attempt on his father's life was something the family has dealt with for years, but they had "put it in the back of their minds."

"It's a sad situation but lucky for my father and the people of the country that he was put in the limousine with only a superficial wound," Reagan said.

Reagan said he did not plan to talk to his father by telephone, but would wait to see him in person. He said he had no immediate plans to fly to Washington, however.

"My father is a strong person and is in good shape," Reagan said. "He'll probably come out here at the end of April, go to my sister's wedding and go to the Yacht Club and cut some wood and put this thing behind him."

Reagan also expressed hope that White House press Secretary Jim Brady and the Secret Service agent and Washington police officer wounded in the attack would recover from their wounds.

In Lincoln, Neb., Ronald Prescott Reagan, the president's 22-year-old son, was whisked out of Lincoln's Hilton Hotel shortly after 3 p.m. and boarded a chartered flight for Washington.

Reagan, dressed in blue jeans and a red T-shirt with the letters USA emblazoned in white, was accompanied by his wife, Doria. He ignored reporters' questions about his father.

Ronald was to have danced Monday night with the Joffrey II Dancers, who are performing this week at the University of Nebraska.

Maureen Reagan, 40, was described as "in shock and upset" by a spokeswoman for KABC radio in Los Angeles, where she works as a talk show host.

She said Miss Reagan had been "surrounded by Secret Service agents and moved to a safe location" and planned to fly to Washington.

Patil Reagan Davis, 28, was at home in her Santa Monica apartment when the Secret Service informed her that her father had been shot, her personal manager said.

Larry Thompson said Miss Davis, an actress who uses her mother's maiden name, was "shocked, deeply concerned and praying" for her father's recovery. He said she planned to fly to Washington to be near her father and mother.

Kennedy calls for end to violence

SEN. TED KENNEDY recalls tragedies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., recalling the deaths of his two brothers, urged his political colleagues Monday "to commit ourselves to do everything we can" to rid society of violence and hate.

In remarks on the Senate floor, Kennedy rose to express his "sadness" at the shooting of press secretary Jim Brady and President Ronald Reagan.

"My family has been touched by violence," he said to a hushed gallery of tourists and school children. "Year after year you read about it. My brothers John and Robert Kennedy, Martin Luther King, Medgar Evers, Al Lowenstein, Vernon Jordan, President Ford and now the attempt on President Reagan.

"I think all of us understand that all these good individuals had a common purpose — to make this a better country."

"Violence and hatred have no place in our society," the surviving Kennedy brother said.

"Nonetheless, we see it continue in our society and in our country. I think all of us who care about our country — bear an important responsibility — in whatever way we possibly can to rid this society of the kind of violence and hatred we have seen.

"Violence is contrary to everything this country is about. It doesn't bring about a change in policy. It is our responsibility to rid our society of violence and to commit ourselves to doing everything we can."

Wounded officer 'serious'

THOMAS DELAHANTY offers apologies

scribed as being alert and talkative.

Officer Thomas K. Delahanty, 45, was in serious condition with a bullet wound in the neck and shoulder, said a spokesman at the Washington Hospital Center.

A spokesman for Washington Mayor Marlon Barry said the mayor spent about 15 minutes with the wounded officer and described him as "alert and talkative."

The spokesman said Delahanty kept apologizing to Barry for not being able to do more during the gunfire.

A Metropolitan Police official said Delahanty — an "exemplary officer" — was one of those who tackled Reagan's assailant, even after he had been shot.

A police spokesman said Delahanty, a 17½ year veteran of the force and a K-9 officer, was assigned early Monday for a one-day stint in the special operations division to cover the president's appearance at the Washington Hilton Hotel.

A native of Pittsburgh, Delahanty and his wife live in suburban Maryland. They have no children.

Ford expresses 'concern' at shooting

TOKYO (UPI) — Former President Gerald Ford, who was the target of two assassination attempts, expressed "grave concern" Tuesday over the shooting of President Reagan.

An aide to Ford, in Tokyo on the final day of an 11-nation, month-long trip, said the former president was informed of the shooting of Reagan at 5:45 a.m. (1:45 p.m. MST Monday) in his hotel.

The aide said Ford was about to call Washington when a White House staff member reached him.

"The former president expressed his grave concern and our personal support for Mrs. Reagan," the Ford aide said.

Ford twice was the target of assassination attempts, both by women, during trips to California while in office.

Entertainer Hope 'shocked' by attack

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Entertainer Bob Hope, a long-time friend of President Reagan, said Monday he was "as shocked as anybody else to hear the news" of the attempted assassination of the president.

Hope recalled an incident during the presidential campaign, while he was with Reagan in Peoria, Ill.

"We were in the car going to the hotel and I commented on his Taincoat. He'd worn it in Detroit," Hope said. "He said, 'Feel it.'"

Hope said he did not know that a bullet proof jacket had been built into the coat. "I wish he'd been wearing that today," the comedian said. Hope said he has known President Reagan for about 40 years.

President Reagan grimaces as he is pushed into his car by Secret Service agents after being hit by a bullet in the chest Monday

Americans pray for President's recovery

By MARCELLA S. KREITER
United Press International

A shocked America bowed its head in prayer Monday following the shooting of President Reagan, his news secretary and two others.

State legislatures observed moments of silence and governors across the country called on their citizens to pray for the survival of Reagan, news secretary James Brady, Secret Service Agent Timothy J. McCarthy and Washington, D.C., police officer Thomas K. Delahanty.

Former President Jimmy Carter, who was defeated by Reagan last November, said he and his wife, Rosalynn, would "join the entire nation in prayer for the well being of all those wounded and for their families."

In downtown Detroit, the site of the 1980 GOP national convention where Reagan was nominated, three churches immediately scheduled prayers for Reagan and the others during late afternoon masses.

"We are hopeful that President Reagan and all the others injured will recover," Detroit Bishop Walter Schoenherr said.

Special services also were scheduled in New York and St. Louis.

The Iowa House stood for a minute of prayer. Rep. Horace Daggett led the prayer session, asking for the "complete recovery of all of them. Let people realize the importance of life and freedom." The House then adjourned.

The Kansas Senate convened one hour after the Reagan shooting, opening with a prayer by Senate Chaplin Fred Hollomon.

"Just an hour ago an attempt was made on the life of President Reagan," Hollomon said. "We pray for him as he lies in George Washington University Hospital with a gunshot wound."

"Such an occurrence as this reminds us that our leaders and their associates are almost constantly exposed as human targets for every deranged mind resorting to violence and destruction," he said.

The Texas Legislature unanimously adopted a resolution denouncing the attempt on Reagan's life and expressing hope for the president's recovery.

In his remarks, Gov. Bill Clements called the assassination attempt "a terrible thing. It's a tragic thing in our country that we have people of unstable mind that create this sort of situation."

His sentiments were echoed by Gov. James R.

Thompson of Illinois who urged Americans to pray for the president.

"My prayers go out to the president and Mrs. Reagan and to each of the other shooting victims and the members of their families," Chicago Mayor Jane M. Byrne said in a statement.

New Jersey Gov. Brendan Byrne asked residents of his state to "join in prayers" for the recovery of Reagan and the others.

Louisiana Gov. Dave Treen said, "I know that I speak for all in Louisiana when I say we pray and wish for a very speedy recovery for the president. I suggest we all do some praying right now."

"I'm shocked that this kind of thing continues to go on in this country," Utah Gov. Scott Matheson said. "I'm praying that the president will recover without any complications."

Around the world: Shock and horror

By STEVEN R. REED
United Press International

World leaders expressed shock and horror at the news President Reagan had been wounded in an assassination attempt and conveyed their concern and wishes for a speedy recovery in personal messages to the White House.

But in Moscow, the shooting was given runnerup mention on Moscow Radio behind a report two cosmonauts had returned to Earth and the Soviet news agency Tass moved a nine-line story on the assassination attempt 75 minutes after the news was flashed elsewhere.

At the United Nations, Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim expressed "shock and dismay" and condemned "this act of terrorism."

Spanish King Juan Carlos telephoned the White House immediately to determine Reagan's condition and expressed his "full solidarity ... against the criminal attack which disgracefully proved that terrorist violence today is generalized."

Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo also sent a telegram to the White House expressing the Spanish government's regrets and hopes for Reagan's quick recovery.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, who spoke to Reagan by telephone earlier in the day, sent a telegram to the White House that said:

"With deep horror I have just learned of an assassination attempt on you. I hope very much that the news that you are not seriously hurt is accurate. At the same time as giving you my sincere, deep-felt wishes for a quick recovery and for your personal well-being, I extend good wishes to your colleagues who also were hurt."

White House Press Secretary James Brady, a secret service agent and a police officer, was wounded in the assassination attempt against Reagan.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said she was shocked and distressed to hear about the attempt on Reagan's life. "I have prayed that your injuries are not serious," she said in a message to Reagan.

Aminoro Enafani, president of the Senate and acting president of Italy in the absence of Sandro Pertini, sent a telegram to Reagan expressing "a sincere wish for a prompt recovery."

At the White House: Quiet, then shambles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For a few minutes Monday afternoon, the White House appeared to know little more than the rest of the nation about the fate of its occupant. Staff members, like millions of others, were watching television.

The White House itself did not seem to be under unusual security less than an hour after the attack on President Reagan outside a Washington hotel.

Guards at the press gate waved reporters with White House passes through the gates without extra scrutiny, and there seemed no extraordinary busting was apparent on the grounds or in the building.

But the press room was a shambles. Reporters and camera people jostled for views of the two big color television sets in the cluttered room.

A short, worried-looking man identified as Frank Ursomastro, a deputy assistant to the president, stepped to the lectern and announced that the president and his chief aides — Edwin Meese and James Baker and deputy press secretary Larry Speakes — were at George Washington University hospital and would issue statements there. He had nothing else to add.

into the press secretary's office suite, pleading for information.

They were told, "What Lynn Nofziger said over at the hospital was correct. The president was hit in the left chest. His condition is stable."

The milling in the press room resumed and at 3:37 p.m. David Gergen, deputy chief of staff, arrived to brief the reporters.

Tall and grave, Gergen softly declared he had no more information to impart than had been given out at the hospital. But he said Vice President George Bush was enroute to Washington and the secretaries of state, defense, and treasury and the attorney general were in the White House.

In a calm and very grave voice, Gergen said he could add nothing to the sketchy details.

Forty minutes later, Speakes returned from the hospital but said he was just going to be a conduit for statements issued there. Reporters shouted questions at him about Reagan's condition and other details, but he had little to add.

Then Secretary of State Alexander Haig appeared. He went over much of the same information, indicated it would be evening before Bush returned to the city, and said, "As of now, I am in control at the White House."

Suddenly, someone heard on that Reagan had, contrary to the initial reports, been shot. Reporters stormed out of the press room, up a long ramp

Stunned union leaders view shooting scene

By DREW VON BERGEN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Hundreds of blue-collar labor leaders, many of whom opposed President Reagan's election, watched in shocked horror Monday under a steady rain as police and FBI agents examined the scene of the attempted assassination of the president.

Some of the delegates to a conference of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department recalled that about six years ago, President Gerald Ford was shot as he left one of their conventions in San Francisco.

Former Labor Secretary Peter Brennan, now head of the New York branch of the union, said all the officials were "just appalled by it... regardless of their political persuasions."

"It's terrible, just terrible," he said.

Robert Georgine, president of the 4.1-million-member organization who had introduced Reagan, asked delegates to stand in prayer for the injured.

"It's hard to express my utter horror at an incident like this," Georgine said on watching videotape replays of the shooting.

The scene of the shooting, on one of Washington's busiest thoroughfares outside the Washington Hilton Hotel, is on the edge of a mostly black and Hispanic area called Adams-Morgan, the target of rapid urban development in recent years.

The hotel, with its 1,200 rooms, is one of the largest in the nation's capital and a frequent place for presidents to address large gatherings. Reagan has made several appearances there.

Several hundred people had stopped to see the president come out of the hotel, many watching from across the street, which is on a steep incline.

"I thought it was a motorcycle backfire, because the motorcycles started," said Alonzo Taylor of Washington, a courier-making-a-delivery nearby. "I heard bang, bang, bang, bang. I think I heard four shots."

Taylor said someone shouted "Go, go, go," and "the limousine (carrying the president) shot up the street."

Ramone Flores, who identified himself as a worker for the Agency for International Development at the State Department, said Reagan "was in a cheerful mood, waving his right hand."

"The limousine door opened. Four shots were fired, they were consecutive," he said. "The knees of the president buckled down."

"I decided to hide under the car over here," Flores said, pointing to a nearby vehicle.

FBI agents set up a portable command post at the 10-story, white-fronted facade hotel as they took over investigation from District of Columbia police.

The conference delegates were subdued, and continued to watch replays of the shooting over and over on two television sets outside the grand ballroom where Reagan had addressed them hours before.

As darkness began to fall, a number of people continued to stand by the glass doors to the side entrance of the hotel, staring out at the scene as FBI investigators continued to examine the area.

Others sipped on drinks in the Point Lounge, on the hotel's main level, listening to a pianist.

As the shooting began, many of the labor leaders, unaware of the incident, were expressing disappointment at the president's speech.

"He didn't tell me nothing," said Glover Hampton of Louisville, a member of the laborers' union.

Gov. Evans, Idaho congressmen express grief, worry

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

BOISE — The attempted assassination of President Reagan shocked and worried Idaho's top elected officials Monday, with one congressman also expressing concern about the national security ramifications of the shooting.

"Thank God President Reagan was not fatally shot," Gov. John Evans said shortly after hearing of the incident, which left 70-year-old Reagan with a chest wound requiring emergency surgery.

Evans and members of Idaho's congressional delegation said they were praying for Reagan's recovery, and the recovery of the nation's top elected officials in the afternoon attack in front of a Washington hotel.

Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, said he was under especially harsh emotional pressure because he had a long friendship with Reagan and James Brady, White House press secretary, who was shot in the head.

Sens. James McClure and Steve Symms and Rep. Larry Craig, all R-Idaho, echoed the comments of the governor and Hansen, saying they hoped Reagan would recover quickly.

But Hansen said he also was very worried about whether the assailant apprehended at the scene possibly was involved with Cuba or the Soviet Union and did not act on his own.

Evans, who had just returned to his Statehouse office when the news reached him, said the incident was a tragic example of the danger U.S. public officials run when they mix with the public.

"I know I speak for every citizen when I say Thank God President Reagan was not fatally shot and hopefully not seriously injured," Evans said. "It is just short of a miracle that the assailant, as close as he was to the president, did not fire a fatal shot," Evans said.

"This is another tragic illustration that no matter what precautions are taken to protect the president or a public figure in our democratic lifestyle of mixing with the people that no one is completely safe from the twisted mind of an extremist who is determined to commit such a crime."

McClure, R-Idaho, was engaged in a debate on the Senate floor when the news reached the chamber. Soon afterward, McClure, who headed Reagan's campaign effort in Idaho last year, said, "I am shocked, stunned and saddened at the events of this afternoon."

"I join with all Americans in hoping and praying for President Reagan's complete and rapid recovery from his wound."

Hansen said that with Reagan's call for "strong action with the economy and foreign policy," "It's tempting for some people to come out of the woodwork."

The Idaho Republican said he had been hearing rumors that since Reagan's election, "Fidel Castro's hit squads are running around again."

"You don't know what some of this means," Hansen said. "The fact that we're on the eve of some major decisions involving the Soviet Union, to have a president immobilized is of the utmost serious nature."

"All of this has to be taken into perspective. It's of immense importance to know whether this man was just a single individual or some part of some international force. That could be very damaging to our national security."

Craig, a freshman congressman from Idaho's 1st District, said he was answering letters in his Washington office when he telephoned his home.

"We are supposed to be a peaceful nation, a loving nation and a caring nation," Craig said. "Violence and hate has no place in our country. I cannot understand why some individuals take such intolerable acts as the one that occurred today."

Craig said he was confident that Reagan's cabinet officers and Vice President Bush were watching out for the nation's security in the wake of the shooting.

Hansen agreed, saying, "From everything I can tell, the situation seems to be well in hand. The president has given the nation a dose of the 'courage he's always exhibited. He stayed on his feet, walked in the hospital and seems to be retaining command of his faculties.'"

Symms, a first-term senator, urged other officials and all Americans to remain calm.

"The best thing we can do now is direct our prayers to the victims and remain calm," Symms said. "The president is still in full command. Calm, thoughtful consideration is the best thing."

Symms said the constitution provided for the continuation of the responsibilities and powers of the president in the event he is disabled, so there was little reason to worry of a power gap while Reagan was recuperating.

"Ballots, not bullets, must shape the fate of presidents here," Idaho Attorney General David LeRoy said in Boise.

He said "sympathy for the families of those staffs and officers gravely injured or lost and warm support for the president are common to all Idahoans in this moment."

Haig says he was in control

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig took charge of the government Monday shortly after President Reagan was shot and wounded outside a Washington hotel.

"As of now, I am in control here in the White House pending return of the vice president, and in close touch with him. If something came up, I would check with him, of course," Haig told reporters at the White House about two hours after Reagan was shot.

Vice President George Bush, next in line for the presidency, was in Texas on a speaking tour when Reagan was shot. He immediately returned to Washington.

Haig also made a mistake in outlining the line of presidential succession, putting himself after Bush.

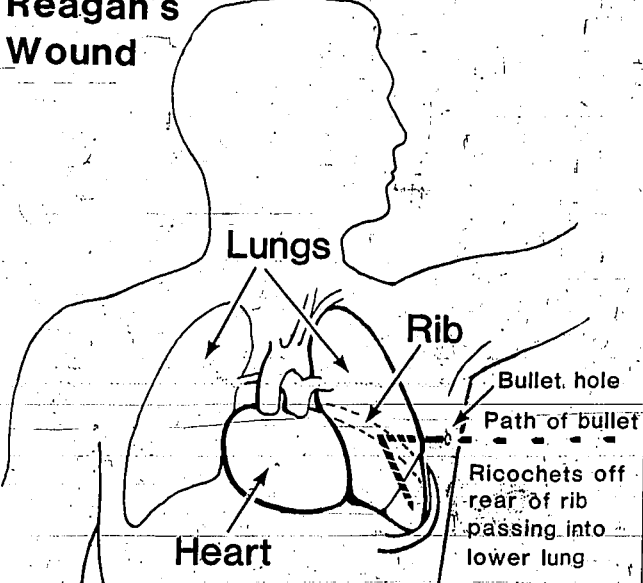

"Constitutionally, gentlemen, you have the president, the vice president and the secretary of state in that order. And should the president die, he is transferred to the helm to the vice president, he will do so."

In fact, Bush is followed by House Speaker Thomas O'Neill and the president pro tem of the Senate, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., in the line of succession.

Last week, Haig was reported to have come to the brink of resignation when Bush was designated by Reagan to head the administration's "crisis management" team in the event of a crisis.

Before that decision was officially announced, Haig told a congressional committee he had read reports of it with "less than enthusiasm." But he and Reagan said later they were both "happy" with the decision.

Reagan's Wound

Bullet that struck Reagan ended up in his left lung, several inches from his heart

Secret Service said protection improved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secret Service Director H. Stuart Knight said only last week that since President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in 1963, presidential protection has improved considerably.

In an interview with UPI reporter Clay F. Richards, Knight said all the recommendations of the Warren Commission, which investigated Kennedy's assassination, have been carried out.

He declined to elaborate on the changes. But he said improved Secret Service procedures today make it much less likely a sniper could get a clear shot at a president, as Kennedy's assassin did in Dallas.

He also said the agency now is more likely to know about a Lee Harvey Oswald in advance of a presidential visit.

The Secret Service says a president is hardest to protect when he is making a well publicized visit to a large arena where he is exposed to the public.

"There was a lot of talk that President Johnson's habit of stopping and jumping into campaign crowds caused us a lot of concern," Knight said in the interview. "But actually they caused us less concern because they weren't announced."

Including letters, direct threats and information received from other law enforcement and government agencies, the Secret Service receives about 5,000 communications each month that could be interpreted as dangerous to an incumbent president.

From these, it keeps a general list of about 20,000 people, whose threat may have been something as casual as an overheard barroom oath against the president. Those names are kept for five years and if nothing develops, they are expunged.

Individuals are put on the list because "at one time or another they have exhibited an interest in people we protect that might be regarded as a threat," Knight said.

There also is another, more serious list of 400 names — people the Secret Service feels are a very real threat to the president. The Secret Service or other law enforcement agencies keep track of them when the president travels, sometimes even detaining them.

Those on the list of 400 get there by a number of factors in addition to threatening the president, including access to weapons and a history of mental illness, Knight said.

"The best weapon I have is to know what someone is going to do beforehand, although that involves a nasty word in this town — 'intelligence,'" he said.

Prophecy, Knight said last week, there is no way the Secret Service can guarantee the president's safety. But he expressed confidence he had the money and the tools to do the job.

With an annual budget of $175 million, the Secret Service has about 3,600 employees, including 1,550 special agents assigned to protection and 200 uniformed officers at the White House and embassies around Washington.

BACALL'S BOYS
When Lauren Bacall opened on Broadway in "Woman of the Year," Steve Bogart was in the audience applauding. Son Sam Bogarda, 19, whose father is Jason Bogarda, missed the show because he was working — in his own first pro acting job at the off-Broadway Cherry Lane Theater. "It's the greatest profession in the world. I couldn't do anything else," Sam said.

HOT STUFF
There'll be a hot time in Hot Springs when Maxine Jones' autobiography is published in June. Mrs. Jones, 63, has written a book called "Maxine: Call Me Madame," in which she tells about her two decades running a house of prostitution in the Arkansas resort community. She names no names, but said, "Honey, everybody who knows Hot Springs will know who I'm talking about."

Plain English wanted London campaign fights gobbledygook

LONDON (UPI) — Optimists waging the Plain English Campaign distributed a teaching kit Monday to train people not to use language like this:

"In consequence of the non-payment of the above-noted account and your failure to avail yourself of the facilities afforded to you in our Reminder Notice already sent to you, an employee of the Board will call at your premises for the purpose of obtaining a meter reading and disconnecting the supply on the 10th March 1981."

In other words:
"Our records show that you still have not paid your electricity bill. If you do not pay in the next seven days, we will have to come on March 10 to cut off the electricity."

Said Joan Macintosh of the National Consumer Council, "It is high time that government departments and others stop producing that sort of appalling rubbish."

Gobbledygook, she said, costs the taxpayer millions in time spent explaining convoluted official language and in correcting mistakes "that need never have occurred if only people were simply."

Her organization teamed with the 2-year-old Plain English Campaign to produce a three-part teachers' kit for training up to 15 people at a time to use plain language and design clear documents.

"I pity the poor accountant or wages clerk," said Ms. Macintosh, chief Department of Health and Social Security leaflet NP29, "who has to plow through this:"

"Where a person in contracted-out employment attains state pensionable age or dies leaving a widow, or his contracted-out employment ends in the tax year in which he reaches state pensionable age, the last order taken into account is the order in the employee's final relevant year (i.e. the last complete tax year before that in which death occurred or state pensionable age was reached.) This order revalues earnings factors in years prior to the final relevant year."

That paragraph, Ms. Macintosh said, "is what is laughably described as 'gobbledygook' in which many paragraphs have been redrafted 'in the interests of clarity and brevity.'"

"Isn't it ridiculous that public money is spent on producing this sort of appalling rubbish which simply baffles the very people it is intended to help?" she asked.

Despite five marriages, Wynette still standing by

NEW YORK (UPI) — Since Tammy Wynette currently is standing by her fifth, the title of her autobiography "Stand By Your Man" is bound to inspire snide comment, but last week the "first lady of country music" filed deftly and with dignity.

"At least I make mine legal," she told television writers assembled in New York from all over the country by CBS to pre-screen the film version of her story. "I made a lot of mistakes, but at least I never lived with a man I want to be married. I like to be married. I always wanted someone to lean on."

The CBS movie, to be aired today at 8 p.m., covers two of her efforts to stay married and audiences can only sympathize with the failure.

Annette O'Toole portrays Miss Wynette, singing so skillfully that she might expect to find her own name in the envelope at the next Country Music Awards presentation. The film covers Miss Wynette's first marriage to Euple Byrd, before she found stardom at Nashville's Grand Ole Opry, and her second, to country music great George Jones.

Country hooker plays Byrd in a fashion that might better label him "homo euphis" — an unregenerate, knuckle-walking cave man with all the sensitivity of a stone axe. The real Byrd doesn't care much for the portrayal. He's suing Miss Wynette and the production for many millions.

But it is Tim McIntire who steals the show as husband No. 2 — the great-hearted Jones who gives Miss Wynette the first-real love she ever knew, leading her into a life of wealth, fame and opulence before finally succumbing to a sea of booze, smashing his life, his marriage and his career along with most of the furniture.

Kidnapped to Barbados.

Great Train Robbery fugitive faces extradition

BRIDGETOWN Barbados (UPI) — Barbados initiated proceedings Monday on Britain's request for the extradition of Ronald Biggs, the "Great Train Robbery" fugitive who was kidnapped from his refuge in Brazil.

Barbadian authorities, acting less than 24 hours after British diplomats filed the extradition request, issued a warrant for Biggs' arrest, the first step in the complex proceedings involved in returning him to Britain.

But Biggs' lawyers immediately went to court and argued to Chief Magistrate Frank King that the warrant was not valid because it did not show the fugitive committed any crime in the Caribbean island.

Wearing a beige shirt and brown pants supplied by police, Biggs, 51, appeared composed and remained calm and at ease during the 30-minute hearing.

King recessed the hearing to consider the arguments.

The prompt action on Britain's extradition request was seen as an indication of Barbados' willingness to meet the British request.

Biggs was kidnapped two weeks ago from a restaurant in Rio de Janeiro and taken to Barbados in a yacht chartered by a group of British ex-soldiers who said were paid to bring Biggs to a country from which he could be extradited.

Barbados is a former British colony which gained independence in 1966 but has kept close ties to London.

One of Biggs' lawyers, Brendan Smith, said the start of the formal extradition sidled the legal team's plan to request a second hearing to ask for his release.

At a first hearing last week, an acting chief justice ruled Biggs' detention was legal.

Biggs escaped from a British jail after serving less than two years of a 30-year prison sentence for his part in the 1963 Great Train Robbery, which netted what was then worth $7 million. Biggs later found refuge in Brazil and was allowed to remain in Rio de Janeiro when he fathered a child, Michael, now 6, by a Brazilian woman.

While Brazil has requested Biggs' return, Brazilian Charge D'Affaires Romeu Zero has not indicated if his country planned to go court to fight Britain's extradition bid.

What's what

Alda, O'Connor, Hagman top TV money-makers

Q. Who's the top money-maker on television now?
 A. Alan Alda, I'm told. He reportedly gets $125,000 for each "M*A*S*H" episode plus writing and directing pay. Totals about $5.6 million a year. Nobody has ever beat that on TV. Carroll O'Connor comes in second at $5.4 million annually with his Archie Bunker character. Larry Hagman runs third with $2.4 million yearly from "Dallas" plus profits from J.R. novellas.

So you thought soccer was Great Britain's most popular sport among grownups, did you? Likewise. That's wrong, though. Dart throwing is.

Q. World's smallest independent state is not permitted to sign the United Nations' Declaration of Human Rights. Can you figure out why?
 A. Believe you refer to Vatican City. It reportedly doesn't choose to debate the Declaration's Freedom of Religion clause.

PHARMACOLOGY

It is from the Greek word for "science of poisons" that we get our word "pharmacology."

Q. What are the most widely used first names for 24-year-old men and women in this country?
 A. John and Linda. Michael and Mary are second.

Women get two and a half times as many gifts as men do. No, not just for Mother's Day. At Christmas, for birthdays, whenever.

Q. Do deaf people ever talk in their sleep with sign language?
 A. Happens all the time.

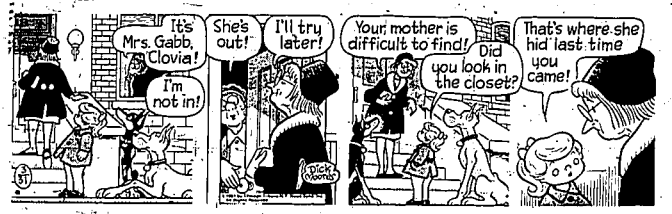

QUIET CARS

Claim is pedestrians are so used to hearing at least some noise from moving cars that the quiet electric autos of the future may have to be made noisier to keep from killing people.

Q. What's the biggest animal, besides man, in New Guinea?
 A. The cassowary bird. Dangerous beast. Stands up to 6 feet tall. A toothy fighter. Hunters go after it for food and trade, but it can kill a hunter, if it gets in a kick or two.

Supreme Court to settle dock protest

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to settle a controversy sparked by the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan over whether longshoremen may protest international subsidizing by refusing to handle Soviet cargo.

The justices will hear an argument by shippers and protest by lower courts that the continuing boycott of Soviet trade by the International Longshoremen's Association violates labor contracts.

The union began the boycott in support of President Jimmy Carter's January, 1980, announcement of anti-Soviet trade sanctions, including the grain embargo. In a resolution, the union told its members not to handle any cargo bound for or coming from the Soviet Union.

One possible argument against their refusal to continue a business-as-usual policy as long as the Russians insist on being international bully boys, declared IILA President Thomas Gleason when the action was announced.

The high court also announced Monday it will review Kentucky's Corrupt Practices Act, which forbids politicians from promising they will cut their salaries if elected.

The appeal was brought by a candidate whose election as county commissioner was nullified by a state court of grounds he violated the law when he pledged he would serve for $3,000 less than the salary set by law. The candidate argues the law violates free speech rights.

In other actions, the justices refused to hear an appeal by Black Panther Party founder Huey Newton from a California ruling upholding his conviction for possessing illegal weapons. Newton now faces sentencing Wednesday.

Cleared the way for extradition of a Swiss woman who was involved in the murder of her father, escaped to the United States and helped American authorities break up an international narcotics operation.

Rebuffed a Minneapolis woman's attempt to gain a new trial on her charges that her father's effort to "deprogram" her from a religious cult violated her religious freedom.

Refused to consider a state appeal from dismissal of criminal indictments against the Warner-Lambert Co. for negligence and manslaughter in connection with a fatal explosion at a New York chewing gum factory.

The longshoremen's controversy involved two suits brought by shipping companies against the union.

The high court Monday agreed to hear one of the cases, involving Jacksonville (Fla.) Bulk Terminals and the union's refusal to load superphosphoric acid on a Russian-bound ship. The acid was not included in the Carter-trade restrictions.

Hazardous turbine fuel aboard shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Hazardous hydrazine turbine fuel was pumped into the space shuttle Columbia Monday for the April 10 test flight of the winged ship commander John Young says America needs "very badly."

Technicians wearing fully enclosed protective suits and breathing apparatus carried out the hydrazine loading operation. The substance is highly corrosive and emits poisonous fumes.

All other launch pad work was suspended during the hydrazine loading. The fuel is used to drive turbines which in turn power hydraulic system pumps in the Columbia itself and in its twin solid propellant booster rockets.

While that work was going on, Kennedy Space Center officials reviewed launch site preparations for the long-awaited mission. A final readiness review meeting with top National Aeronautics and Space Administration leaders was set for today.

That meeting was expected to give the launch crew the formal go-ahead to start the countdown Sunday night.

Young and co-pilot Robert Crippen remained at the Johnson Space Center in Houston to go over their flight plan, a thick pile of documents outlining every flight procedure along with actions to take in every conceivable emergency.

The Columbia is more than 21 years behind schedule and Young said recently that he and Crippen hope to help get it operational as soon as possible.

"The country needs this vehicle very badly," Young said. "It's going to provide a tremendous capability."

Not only will the shuttle launch virtually all of the space agency's satellites, but it will be the main space workhorse for the Defense Department, carrying up a variety of surveillance, communications and "space war" research payloads.

Federal probe starts into collapse of condo

COCOA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Federal officials took concrete samples and reviewed construction company records Monday in a search for clues to the collapse of a congested, multi-story project that killed 11 workers and injured 23.

Investigators from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration sealed off the Harbour Cay building site as workers packed up acetylene torches and removed heavy equipment used in the body recovery effort.

Local ministers planned a memorial service Sunday for the workers who were crushed when the half-finished, five-story building came tumbling down like a house of cards about an hour before quitting time Friday.

An army of volunteer rescuers — many of them construction workers — fanned through the weekend, digging through tons of concrete rubble to recover bodies buried in the worst construction accident in Florida's history. They finished the grim task

Sunday night.

"We're really starting to open the investigation fully right now," said William Demery, OSHA official in charge of the inquiry. "We don't have any idea what started the event."

Demery met with officials from Univel Construction Co., the general contractor, and subcontractors on the Harbour Cay project for about an hour behind closed doors.

He said four to seven investigators will survey materials and records ranging from engineering specifications of the building's foundation pilings to the water used to mix the concrete at the riverfront construction site. The investigation could take weeks.

Michael Mervis, a Univel spokesman, said the company would cooperate fully with OSHA and turn over copies of construction contracts, building specifications, work logs, concrete pouring schedules, test records and other data needed in the investigation.

Close coal vote seen

By United Press International

On the eve of voting on the proposed national soft coal contract, United Mine Workers officials Monday predicted a close outcome.

Union President Sami Church Jr. pushed for ratification in crucial West Virginia.

"From what I heard at local meetings it's pretty well split up," said Paul Gormish, vice president of UMW District 2, Ebensburg, Pa. "If it's ratified it will be very, very close. You know it's one of those 50-50 things."

Charleston, W.Va., before union members prior to today's vote.

UMW sources said ratification hinges on 26,000-miner District 17 and another in West Virginia, 24,000-miner District 23, in Beckley, the union's two biggest regions. One source said if the contract is approved in either district, officials believe it will be approved nationwide.

After hearing Church, miner Kenny Saiter said, "There are some good points in the contract but they are overshadowed by the bad. If they vote for this, they're voting it (the union) away."

Shooting angers, stuns curious residents

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Monday was a day in which radios and televisions stayed on in Twin Falls homes and businesses.

"Wires called husbands to say 'Have you heard.' Waitresses in restaurants shared information gleaned from other tables. Customers in banks, shops and offices were queried on the latest reports. Friends shared theories and bewilderment over coffee.

Many Twin Falls residents reacted with shock to news of the attempt on President Reagan's life. Some reacted with anger. Others sadly reflected on how often assassination attempts on public officials have been made in the last 15 years.

"It's hard to realize that even in America, these things can and do happen," said Twin Falls Mayor Hank Woodall.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Chairman Ann Cover noted with dismay that "even with all our sophisticated security systems, someone could get to the president."

Commissioner Merl Leonard said "The tragedy of this whole situation is people's minds have deteriorated to the point where they vent their feelings on a public official and especially the leader of our country."

Many persons were vividly reminded of Nov. 22, 1963, when President John F. Kennedy was shot. That day, Twin Falls Sheriff James Munn had gone home for lunch when his wife told him the president had been shot. Monday, he found the situation repeated.

Others recalled the two attempts on Ford's life. Police Chief Tim Qualls was reminded of the close-range attempt on presidential candidate George Wallace.

Sharon McKenna of Twin Falls marveled at the media coverage of the shooting, observing how the general public has witnessed similar events almost as they happened via TV. In 1963, she saw Jack Ruby shoot Lee Harvey Oswald; in 1968 she "heard the shots" that killed candidate Bobby Kennedy while watching a live report.

Video tapes of the attempt, which left three others wounded, reminded Qualls of VIP protection training films.

Watching the films of the Secret Service agents rushing the president into his car and speeding from the scene, "I saw their training come to life," Qualls said.

He noted "It's next to impossible to stop" attempts such as this "where the president walks freely."

Other persons interviewed by the Times-News expressed frustration at how difficult it is for the president to appear in public.

"I just feel it's a sad day when the president of the United States can't move around in the national capital without being subjected to this kind of behavior," said Marie Statten, former Twin Falls Democratic chairman.

Health District Board Chairman William Chancey, an active Republican, was appalled that "this could happen to our president. Regardless of what party he belongs to, he is the president of the people and he should be treated as such."

Yet, "I can't say I'm really surprised at the attempt. These days it's not all that surprising," said Cheri Lingenfelter of Twin Falls. Like other residents, she said past attempts had prepared her for Monday's events.

An employee of Frederickson's Fine Candies said customers were coming in angry "that it could happen again."

"That makes me so mad, I'm shaking," she heard one person say after hearing the news.

The employee said much of the anger was directed at the suspect, with several persons expressing fears he would be considered a "mental case," and "get off" after a few years "in a mental institution. Others expressed frustration at the conflicting and confusing news reports.

Assassination lesson brought to life for sixth grade history class

By BONNIE BAIRD-JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sixth graders in Karin Ewen's class at Lincoln School won't soon forget Monday's attempt on the life of President Reagan.

Just before the shooting they had a history lesson about the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

"It's spooky," said Alexandra Barker.

"We didn't believe it. It's like watching history happen," said Regina Collins.

"This is unreal. We were just talking this morning about how it could happen," said Dawn Bulgin.

The students spent most of the morning talking about the Kennedy killing. During the discussion it was mentioned that every 20 years a president has been killed or died in office.

They speculated on what would happen if President Reagan was the victim of an assassination attempt.

"We came back in class (after lunch) and our teacher told us someone had shot the president," said 12-year-old Mike Andrews.

"We thought she was just saying that to see how we would take it. She had told us this morning how she felt when President Kennedy was shot."

Ms. Ewen said she has to agree with her students, it is a little "unreal."

"We're at the point in our reader where the story of the Kennedy assassination (is) and we devoted the morning to the subject.

"I was a sixth-grader, myself, when Kennedy was killed and I can see a lot of similarity in my reaction and that of the children in my class today. I was very shocked and anxious to know all I could about the details. My students felt that way today. Naturally we haven't covered any other subjects today," she said.

Lincoln School Principal William Stover said he did not announce the incident to all of the students.

"We are interested in maintaining the school program first and felt the smaller children would only be distracted and would not understand," he said.

Harrison Elementary School Prinicipal Frances Anderson said no special effort was made to advise the students of the events.

Buhl High School Principal Dale Thornsberry said the shooting was announced in all high school classes. He said students' comments ranged from wondering why "nuts like that are allowed to run around" to "how a country could protect its leaders against such acts."

At Kimberly, high school government classes watched on TV and the program was recorded for other classes.

At Twin Falls High School, all classes were informed.

"We are making every effort to keep the students up to date on developments," said Richard Baun, vice principal.

Some College of Southern Idaho students including Vietnam veterans, can recall the Kennedy incident.

"There is a similarity," said Jim Southern, 29, of Burley, a microbiology student. "President Reagan is and President Kennedy was very popular with the people. Both prescribed to changes. President Reagan has probably made some people unhappy with his cuts in health care and welfare programs, but I think he has been a good president and a strong leader."

Vietnam veteran Jay Blakley, 28, of Twin Falls, said if reports he heard were true about the gun being a .22 caliber pistol, he didn't believe the attempt was well planned.

"We need a lot better control of the 'Saturday night specials' and I think we have to make it more difficult for people to obtain hand guns," he said.

Kerry Cantrell, a 19-year-old CSI student from Twin Falls, said gun control laws would not prevent someone like the would-be assassin from getting a gun. Cantrell also questioned the planning of the Monday incident. He said he fails to see why the attempt was made within the crowd where the assailant would have little chance to escape.

"I knew it would happen. I felt people would be upset with the changes and something like this would result," Cantrell said.

Blakley said he can recall Kennedy's shooting, although he was young at the time.

New mall

Development proposal opposed by Green Acres Subdivision residents

TWIN FALLS — Opposition to a proposed shopping mall runs six to one among surveyed residents of the Green Acres subdivision, the Twin Falls City Council was told Monday.

Green Acres residents David Dellett and Emery Petersen told council members most homeowners near property proposed for an enclosed mall believe the shopping facility would force residential property values downward.

Price Development Corp. of Salt Lake City has received preliminary approval to build a mall on Blue Lakes Boulevard North. The proposed site includes property occupied by the Roy Workman Ford dealership, and seven acres of residential property abutting Green Acres.

Petersen, who is a member of the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission, and Dellett Monday urged the City Council to deny a request that the seven-acre residential parcel be rezoned for commercial use.

Petersen said there are 25 Green Acres property owners, 18 of whom oppose the mall. Three favor the development and four are neutral, he said.

"What this really gets down to is pure and simple money," Petersen said at the council's weekly work session. The market value of the disputed seven acres would rise and the value of homes would fall if the Price proposal materializes, Petersen said.

He estimated Bill Workman, who controls the seven-acre parcel, stands to sell the property for $1 per square foot, or about $30,000. If it is rezoned for commercial use, Petersen said the former Green Acres property east of Blue Lakes Boulevard North and North of Pole Line Road sold for about $1 per square foot when an Iowa developer targeted it for a mall. The city authorized that and another mall last year. Neither is under construction.

Camden Meyer, Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce acting manager, signed the property owners' petition, against the mall. He said prospective mall tenants include ZCMI, J.C. Penney Co. and Sears Roebuck Co., and Sears and Penney's apparently would cease their existing downtown operations if they opened at the mall.

Magic Valley cleans up after weekend storm whips area

By BONNIE BAIRD-JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Property owners in a wide area of Magic Valley were assessing wind damages Monday and continuing repairs to homes, business buildings and utilities.

At about 2 p.m. Sunday winds hit the Twin Falls area with gusts of up to 57 miles per hour, according to the U. S. Weather Service.

Several property owners in the path of what appeared to be a mini-tornado in the Hazelton and Murtaugh areas said clean-up efforts were under way Monday. Two of the hardest hit residents said losses would range in the $10,000 area.

In Twin Falls, Jerry Nielson, division electrical superintendent for Idaho Power, said downed lines, poles and other damage from the high winds Sunday would cost the utility about $50,000 to $60,000.

Cloyce Edwards, Twin Falls County Civil Defense director, said he did not have a full report on damages aside from broken windows, downed power lines and fallen trees littered with various law enforcement agencies.

"I don't think the damage will be great, and in our area at least it was not an emergency requiring a civil defense maneuver," Edwards said.

Roy Brown, whose 12 by 22 foot mobile home east of Hazelton was destroyed, said his losses would run between $10,000 and $12,000. He and his wife, Jennifer, were in the home when the twister lifted it from supporting blocks and dropped it upside down a short distance away. Both escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

Brown said Monday he believed most of the furnishings would be a loss along with the $7,500 mobile home.

"There's a 2 x 2 board all the way through the television set and somebody told me the washer and dryer looked like fish smashed aluminum cans," Brown said.

"Of course we lost all of the dishes and things like that, but we hope some of our clothes, bedding and maybe

Roy and Jennifer Brown stand in the wreckage left by twister that destroyed their mobile home Sunday, causing as much as $12,000 damage mattresses can be salvaged," he said. The family is staying with Mrs. Brown's parents in Twin Falls and Brown said he thought they would get by with the help of friends and relatives.

The Gene Standlee family, residing in the same area, estimated at least a $10,000 loss from the twister. Standlee said the winds lifted the roof of their two-year-old home but did not carry it away. He said it will be necessary to have a carpenter anchor it down again.

The family also lost the roof of a machine shop, had two large hay stacks scattered over the yard and fields and two gasoline tanks blown over. A large tree in front of the home was uprooted. Standlee said there were actually two twisters, one passing in front of their home and another at the rear of the buildings simultaneously. He said the one behind the home was the closest and caused the damage.

Several eight-inch irrigation pipes on the Standlee farm were twisted and scattered across fields. They had been stored near the farm buildings.

Several other residents in the Hazelton, Eden and Murtaugh areas reported downed trees, coral fences and small buildings. Doug Stanger of Murtaugh lost two machine sheds. One was picked-up and dropped into an adjoining field while the other lost a roof.

Nielson said a number of tired linemen were catching some well-earned rest Monday and two Pocatello crews were in the area to continue repairs. Some remote customers were still without service, he said, but all should've been back on the lines Monday night.

Crews were still working to replace the 18 power poles in the Milner to Oakley area that toppled in the storm. Another nine poles north of Richfield were replaced by late Monday.

Nielson said it was possible to get power to most customers in those areas by other means.

Nielson said the storm was probably one of the most damaging to his firm in many years. Last July 3 a storm in the Oakley area took out more line, but it was a more localized storm.

Dear Abby

Past tests couple's future

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old girl who needs your help.

In my teens I did a lot of drugs and drank alcohol because I was never at peace with myself unless I was sleeping or stoned.

I'm straight now and have accepted Jesus as my personal savior. I still live with my parents, but I feel like a prisoner because I'm not allowed to make my own decisions.

Three months ago I met a wonderful Christian man who also had his problems with drugs and alcohol. (I'll call him Tom.) Tom is on parole now. We are very much in love and plan to marry. He says he will not have sex with me until after we are married. He is kind and good and treats me with respect. Abby, this love is true. I know we can make it together.

My parents have never met Tom. I'm afraid to introduce him because I know they won't approve of him. Tom wants to meet them, but I've been putting it off because I'm afraid they will make him feel uncomfortable and hurt his feelings. I plan to marry Tom with or without my parents' approval. Tom's father is the only one who knows about our plans.

Should I risk causing a family fight by introducing Tom and telling my parents of our plans? Or should I go ahead and marry him and prove afterward that we can make it together?

—TORMENTED

DEAR TORMENTED: Introduce Tom to your parents. (If you don't, he will think you are ashamed of him.)

Feeling "tormented" as you do, please consult your clergyman and let him counsel you. It would be a mistake to marry Tom while so many doubts and fears exist. If your love is "true," marriage can wait until you are absolutely sure. Please heed this advice and write again soon. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I am expecting a baby in about three months and have been very careful not to smoke, drink or even consume caffeine during my pregnancy. I hope to continue to give our baby the most healthful environment possible after he (or she) is born.

The problem is my mother-in-law. She is a heavy smoker, and I would prefer that she not subject our baby to her secondhand smoke. Studies have confirmed the theory that babies who have been exposed to secondhand smoke have a higher incidence of respiratory illness.

My mother-in-law smokes one cigarette after another and she's anything but gracious when she's told her smoke is bothersome or irritating.

After our baby comes, my husband and I intend to ask her to please step outside if she wants to smoke. But what if it's raining or dark outside?

—MRS. S., PARKDALE, ORE

DEAR MRS. S.: If it's raining, give her an umbrella. And if it's dark, give her a flashlight.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the 17-year-old sitter who complained that her $1 per hour baby-sitting wage was the same as her mother made when she was a girl.

I'm 33, and 17 years ago I sat for 25 cents an hour and was glad to get the job. One family had five children from 9 years old to a year. I changed diapers, fed them all dinner, bathed them, and put them to bed, all for the same 25 cents an hour. It was part of my job.

I now, have a 6-year-old son for whom I need sitters. I pay $1.50 an hour, and when the sitter comes my son has already had his dinner and bath and is ready for bed.

I've had some sitters who have eaten up a week's supply of groceries — with some help from their friends who have visited without my consent. Others have gone through my drawers, used my cosmetics, tried on my clothes, gabbed for hours on my phone, entertained their boyfriends (on my bed), smoked pot and scratched my albums.

I once had a sitter ask me not to call her again because I didn't have a color television!

—HAD IT WITH SITTERS

Branching out of an old Pennsylvania Dutch tradition is the Easter egg tree.

Eggs have long history

NEW YORK — When Peter Cottontail steps up to make his Easter rounds, the hippest folks in town — next to the kids, of course — are the egg merchants.

After all, what would Easter be without a landscape graced by eggs colored every shade of the rainbow? Tucked away in baskets and bowers, scattered across lawns and under living room furniture, the egg comes out of its shell at this time of the year. Nobody knows for sure just how many of the 75 million or so eggs this country's poultry produces are destined for decoration. But the number is large enough that the egg industry is able to sell out Easter as the egg extravaganza of the year.

When you're up to your elbows in eggs this Easter — and the knee-high set is egging you on to color more — you may not be inclined to give a hoot about history.

The fact remains, however, that you're honoring a tradition that is older than Easter. Though coloring eggs is one of the most popular Easter customs in America — a custom that traces its root back to the early Dutch settlers in New York and Pennsylvania — the tradition of coloring eggs goes back much further in history, predating the Christian era and the celebration of Easter by several thousand years.

Poached Persian
Some 5,000 years ago the Persians celebrated the return of spring by exchanging colored eggs as tokens of good will. The custom was also followed in Egypt during Cleopatra's reign, with the eggs usually being colored a bright red to signify blood and the force of life.

The Persians and Egyptians were not alone in viewing the eggs as a symbol of creation and resurrection. Many ancient cultures believed that the earth was produced by the hatching of an enormous egg. And the early Greeks colored and ate eggs during the spring festivals as a sign of fertility and the regenerative power of nature.

With the dawn of the Christian era, the coloring of eggs was a carry-over from the celebration of Easter. The egg, which has been renewed in the past as a symbol of the renewal of life in spring, now represented the resurrection of Christ.

The customs of Lent strengthened the association of eggs and Easter, since eggs were one of the foods forbidden during the 40 days of fasting. Following the scarcity of winter and the self-denial of Lent, people were more inclined than ever to look at eggs as prized possessions and proof-positive that spring had come at last.

English Mandate
Such was the status of the egg in those pre-supermarket days, especially in England. Edward I, during his rule of Britannia in the late 13th century, took enough stock of the egg to include notice in his account book of the purchase of 400 eggs to be boiled, stained or covered with gold as gifts for the royal household.

On a less lofty level, it was once the custom in parts of England for children to dress-up at Easter and canvas their neighborhoods in search of colored eggs — "pace eggs" as they were called.

As the centuries rolled on, the eggs were not ignored on the other bank of the channel. Egg-dyeing was developed into a fine art in Eastern Europe, especially in the Ukraine. In the meantime, the rabbit continued to usurp the chicken in Germany, where the myth that the Easter Hare laid colored eggs flourished.

Basic biology notwithstanding, the hare and egg liaison proved so winning that the Easter Hare rivaled Santa Claus in popularity with German children: They believed that a large white rabbit with a basket of colored eggs on his back visited the homes of all good children on Easter Eve to hide the eggs for them to find in the morning.

Like the colored egg, the tradition of the egg-bearing bunny extends back into the dusty corridors of history. In the past these small animals were symbolically connected with the moon. Since both spring festivals and Easter are based on phases of the moon, the bunny has remained, through the years undebunked.

Tireless Rabbit

The Easter rabbit made his first appearance in the New World when the Pennsylvania Dutch settlers celebrated PAAS, their word for Easter. As these pioneers settled across Pennsylvania and New York they spread the custom of celebrating Easter by coloring eggs as tokens of better times to come.

The Pennsylvania Dutch also livened up what had become a rather austere holiday in this country, observed mostly in churches. In addition to coloring eggs, the Easter merrymen included egg rolling contests and other games involving egg mayhem.

The most popular of these was egg cracking. Two opponents knocked eggs together to see whose egg would crack first. Bumpy Dumphy would have taken a much kinder view of another egg custom introduced by the Pennsylvania Dutch: the Easter egg tree.

Each year they brought a large branch or small tree into the house and decorated it with colorful eggs, the most elaborate of which they saved from year to year.

Before the advent of commercial coloring kits, egg coloring was a messy process. Most eggs were colored by boiling with onion skins, elder catkins, hickory bark, madder root, coffee, walnut hulls and other natural ingredients. Occasionally commercial dyes were sold by druggists from bulk packages in small quantities for individual use. But the powders left fairly strong stains.

Thanks to William M. Townley, a druggist in Newark, N. J., coloring eggs now can be done easily. When Townley was serving the Easter egg trade in the late 1870s he spilled some indigo on his new suit.

The suit was ruined, but it occurred to him to let a delivery boy take a bulk package of dye in the back yard and make up small packages to be used for egg coloring.

The idea of packaging colors caught on and the PAAS Easter Egg Coloring kits was founded. The name was taken from the old Dutch word for Easter.

Indiana captures 2nd NCAA title

Thomas leads Hoosiers to win in a game that almost never happened

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — On a night that should have belonged to Indiana, basketball was the least of the nation's concerns.

In a game nearly postponed because of an assassination attempt on President Reagan, All-America guard Isiah Thomas scored 23 points and Indiana — a team toughened to tournament look good. I thought we might get blown out right there. But they hung in there the way they have all year.

"I told them at the half they had put themselves in position to win the halfgame and they went out there the first two minutes of the second half just the way they did Saturday."

The Tar Heels, yet to win a championship for Coach Dean Smith, now have fallen short six times in the Final Four since Smith took over the team 20 years ago.

"Thomas' second-half performance (7-of-10 from the field) was just too much," Smith said. "Indiana's defense was very active. I don't think we played as well as we could but I'm very proud of this year's team. Indiana was better tonight."

In light of the shooting in Washington, Smith said he was unsure of the status of the game.

"We didn't know we were going to play for sure until we took the court," he said. "It was tragic — a real tragedy."

Reagan, recovering in a Washington hospital and in good spirits after surgery, reportedly handed a note to one of his doctors which read: "All in all, I'd rather be in Philadelphia."

Indiana, as it did in the semifinals against LSU, changed the entire texture of the game in the second half. The Hoosiers were up by just a point at the half before Thomas and Randy Wittman, who finished with 14 points, took over in the final 20 minutes.

In the second half against LSU, the Hoosiers limited the opposition to just 19 points. Against North Carolina it was 24, with the Tar Heels scoring just 15 points in the last 17:50.

Indiana went on a 10-2 burst — with Thomas hitting three baskets — early in the second half to help send the Hoosiers to a 39-30 lead and they extended their lead to 49-38 on a layup by Thomas with just over six minutes remaining, virtually putting North Carolina out of contention.

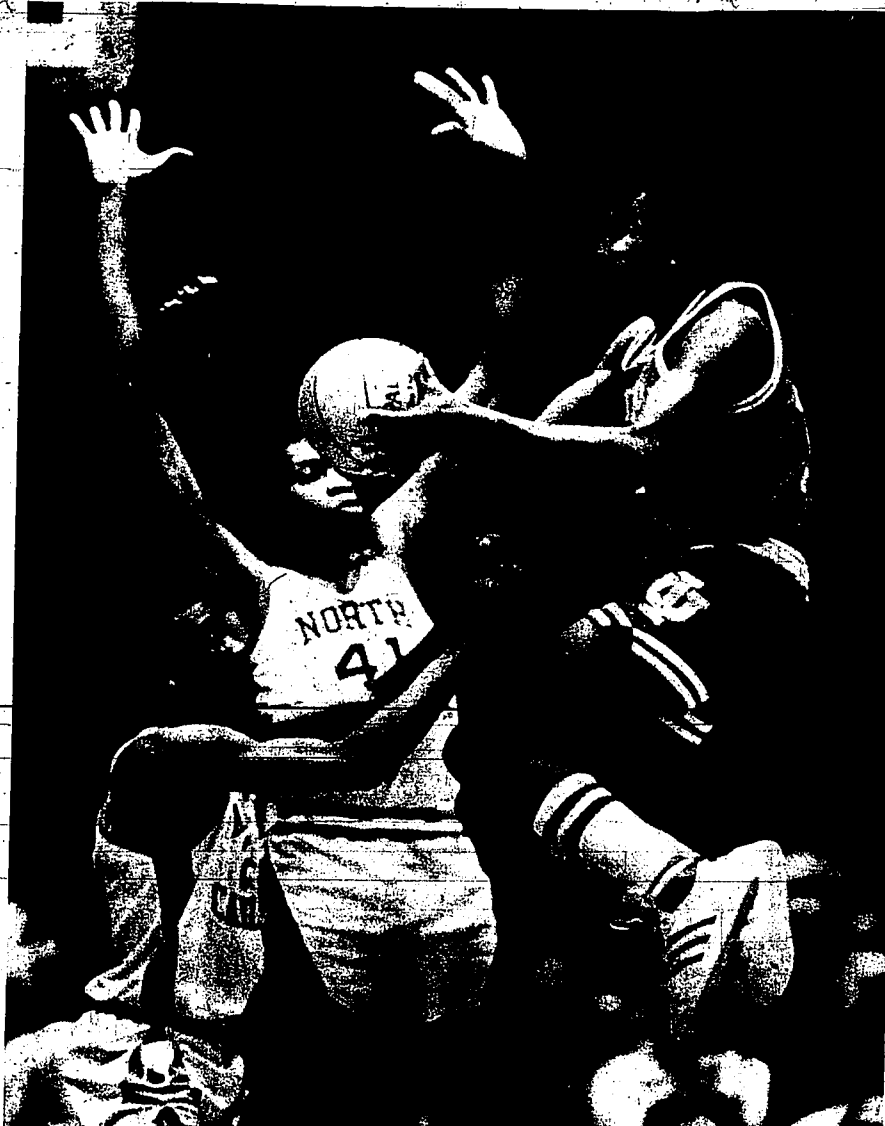

The Tar Heels ran off six straight points late in the game to cut the deficit to 55-47, but by then they were out of time. The Hoosiers took their biggest lead at 63-48 with 41 seconds to go.

pressure — won the NCAA championship Monday night with a 63-50 victory over North Carolina. Thomas, who scored 19 points in the second half, was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player.

Ordinarily the premier spectacle in college sports, the title game lost much of its edge in light of the shooting of President Reagan.

The start of the game was in doubt until 30 minutes before tipoff. Wayne Duke, Chairman of the NCAA Basketball Committee, then announced the game would proceed as scheduled.

"Based upon reports we have obtained in the past several minutes," Wayne said, "we have decided to proceed as planned with the championship game. The two coaches of the competing teams were consulted separately."

Duke met with NCAA President Jim Frank, NCAA Secretary-Treasurer John Toner, and the presidents, athletic directors and faculty representatives of both schools as well as Athletic Coast Conference Commissioner, Bob James.

Duke said NBC, which televised the game to a viewing audience of about 50 million, did not take part in the final decision.

Before the start of the game, Dr. Donald Fulton gave a prayer before the sellout crowd at the Spectrum. A moment of silence followed. In the consolation game, Jeff Lamp scored 25 points and Les Raker added 21 to carry Virginia to a 78-74 victory over Louisiana State.

Duke said the consolation game was staged as usual because early reports indicated the President was not hurt.

The Hoosiers, in a successful return to the site of their previous championship, have now won two titles in the last six years. Their title seasons were 1940, '53 and '76, the last coming in Philadelphia.

"I never thought we couldn't get here," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight. "When it was 16-8 I didn't

Thomas was responsible for North Carolina defeat, says Smith

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Basketball is supposed to be a team sport.

But North Carolina Coach Dean Smith says two young men named Thomas were almost single-handedly responsible for Indiana's 63-50 victory over his Tar Heels in the NCAA basketball championship Monday night.

Isiah Thomas, the Hoosiers' All-America 6-foot-1 point guard, administered the killing blows in the second half, but Smith says Jim Thomas, the sixth man off the bench, did a good job setting up the target.

After taking an early 16-8 lead, North Carolina failed to press its advantage when Indiana was suffering through a cold shooting spell. As a result, the Tar Heels saw their lead diminish and then dissolve to a 27-25 deficit at the half.

"I felt good at halftime; I really did," Smith said.

He figured the Tar Heels could just go out there and pick up where they had left off midway through the first half.

But Isiah Thomas had different ideas, and his stronger will won out — earning him MVP honors for the Tournament.

"Isiah really went to work on us and hurt us throughout the game," Smith said. "His two steals were the turning point in the game. We intended to get off to a good start and we did get the ball inside but then he made those steals and converted them into layups. Those were real killers."

"He really broke it open, although I thought we still had a chance to come back."

Isiah Thomas' two layups, sandwiched around his own pass to Landon Turner for another easy score, gave IU a 33-28 lead.

Jim Thomas then set up three baskets with passes — two of them to Isiah — for a 39-30 advantage.

Early in the first half, the Tar Heels thought they were in perfect position to widen their lead when Indiana forward Ted Kitchel picked up his third foul just 4:12 into the game, but that's when Jim Thomas became a factor.

"I guess that might have been bad for us when Kitchel picked up that third foul because that's when Jim Thomas really started playing against us," said Smith. "He just about deserves a spot on the All-Tournament team for the way he played against us and against LSU."

Informed Jim Thomas had been accorded that very honor, Smith nodded and said, "He deserved it."

Smith might just be the most gracious loser in college basketball.

Although this marked the sixth time he will have gone home from the Final Four empty-handed, he claimed to be neither frustrated nor bitter. He was, in fact, almost buoyant. In his postgame comments — standing in stark contrast to his players, who sat motionless on the bench, their heads hung in dejection for several minutes after the contest.

"I guess we're just like Penn State is in football," Smith said. "You know how they finish second in football every once in a while, but never get the top spot. But I'm thrilled to be No. 2. Sure you'd like to get the big trophy but our boys have a lot to be proud of. Just the thought that we are the second best team in the country is good enough for me."

Twin Falls hitters bombard Mountain Home with 23 runs

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News sports writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls exploded for 10 and 11-run innings to coast to a 14-0 header sweep of Mountain Home Monday afternoon.

Junior Todd Wigington tamed the Tigers on four hits for a 12-9 opener and senior Lars Hovey threw a two-hitter in claiming the nightcap 11-1. Both games were terminated after five innings.

The sweep carried Twin Falls to an 11-1 record. After the Bruins scored two unearned runs in the first — Gary Krumm and Hovey scoring on throwing errors, Twin Falls led it with the help of three Mountain Home miscues in the second.

However, Twin Falls came up with eight hits in the inning, sending 13 men to the plate. Twin Falls had 14 men bat in the 11-run third inning of the second game, pounding out seven hits including a grand slam homer by Junior Mike Black.

Twin Falls hammered four Tiger pitchers during the afternoon, hitting a lot of live drives and pulling everything.

"I was very happy with the way we stayed back and waited for the slower pitches we were seeing today," Watson said. "We're fast ball hitters but today we showed some patience and discipline up there."

Mountain Home put its first two men on base in the opener before Wigington started alarming the door. The Bruin defense came up with a couple of good defensive plays which picked off runners at second base. Only one reached that position against the righthander.

The big Bruin inning started with the one way when singles by Brock Brodeen and Jose Salinas and an error on Krumm's bounce loaded the bases. Hovey plated the first run with single and Greg Kravitz followed with another RBI hit. After Curt Thieman walked, Greg Tate drove in a run with a hit; Wigington lived on an error before Lance Sellers chased two more across with a single.

Brodeen walked and Salinas singled to set up an inning-capping three-run double by Krumm.

When he led off by drilling an 0-2 pitch out of the park, Hovey then retired the next 10 in a row as the Bruins fed things.

Brock Miller and Krumm opened the Bruin third with singles and Hovey lived on a fielder's choice that retired no one. Kravitz, Thieman and Tate followed with hits that, coupled with an error, plated four runs and sent starter Wilson to the shower. Reliever Mike McFarland didn't escape the bases-loaded situation until Black lofted his four-run homer three batters later.

After that Miller collected his second hit of the inning and Krumm and Hovey lived on an error and walk, respectively. After Wigington grounded into a fielder's choice, Thieman batted one to the fence. The left fielder's hand got caught under the cyclone fence and all the runners scored with Thieman winding up at third.

Twin Falls plays Burley Thursday in what Watson termed "an important game because a win would put us in an excellent position for the first-round bye in the district tournament. We're not looking that far ahead but we have to take care of those things as they come up," he said.

First Game

NBA playoffs

Sunday's loss forces one of NBA's best to today's mini-series

By United Press International

Julius Erving had hoped to be on vacation the next few days taking in some sun in Florida. Instead, the All-Star forward of the Philadelphia 76ers will be back at work in his "office" tonight at the Spectrum in Philadelphia.

Oh, the agony of defeat. The 76ers blew a chance to win the NBA's Atlantic Division Sunday when they lost to the Boston Celtics and thus they must play in the first round of the NBA playoffs, beginning tonight with the first game of a best-of-three Eastern Conference series against the Indiana Pacers.

By virtue of winning the Atlantic Division, the Celtics get a first round bye in the playoffs.

"I would have liked the extra few days' rest. I was planning to go to Florida," said Erving. "But now we'll have to get ready for the Pacers and take it from there."

Philadelphia, which played very poorly against Boston in Sunday's regular season finale, will have to sharpen its game against Indiana, which lost its final regular season game Sunday to finish in third place in the Central Division.

However, if the 76ers regain their shooting touch, they should have little trouble advancing past Indiana into the second round of the playoffs. The second game in the 76ers-Pacers series will be played at Indiana on Thursday night with the third game, if necessary, scheduled for Philadelphia on Sunday.

The Pacers, playing in their first NBA playoff, don't appear to have enough strength up front to compete with the 76ers. Billy Knight and James Edwards are the only Indiana players who are likely to hold their own with the 76ers' front line of Erving, Caldwell Jones, Darryl Dawkins and their All-Star sixth man, Bobby Jones.

In another Eastern Conference best-of-three playoff series beginning tonight, the New York Knicks host the Chicago Bulls.

The Bulls are on a hot streak, having won their last eight regular season games. But the Knicks think they can beat them if they are able to get a big lead because Chicago has not shown an ability to come from behind. That was the pattern in the three victories the Knicks had over the Bulls this year in their six meetings.

"Everytime we got them down, they just stayed there," said Knicks' All-Star guard Michael Ray Richardson. "You've got to respect them because they have a lot of talent, but when things aren't going well for them, they start playing a lot of one-on-one. And it's hard to come back when you don't play your game."

Philly couldn't keep Boston's pace

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Breezing along with a 32-4 record around Christmas, the last thing the Philadelphia 76ers expected was having to compete in the NBA's dreaded best-of-three mini-series.

But the Sixers couldn't quite keep up the pace. Although they finished tied for the league's best record at 62-20, they'll have to come back right away for a first round NBA playoff game tonight against the Indiana Pacers at the Spectrum.

Game two is scheduled for Market Square Arena in Indianapolis Thursday night with a third game, if necessary, set for Sunday back here.

A major factor in the opener will be if the 76ers can rebound from Sunday's emotional 90-94 loss to Boston, a loss that enabled the 62-20 Celtics to win the Atlantic Division title, the league's best record and a week's rest before entering post-season play.

"We don't have any time to worry or get upset about winning 62 games in the regular season and finishing in second place," Philadelphia coach Billy Cunningham said. "It's over, it's done."

"Now we've got the Indiana Pacers on Tuesday night and we've got to get right to work preparing for them. We can't afford now to put our heads between our legs."

The Sixers fell behind by 22 points against Boston before their furious finish cut the deficit to the final margin.

The Pacers also are going into the playoffs in less than a terrific frame of mind. Indiana dropped a 101-97 decision to the Chicago Bulls to finish third in the Central Division and sixth in the overall Eastern Conference standings with a record of 44-38.

Indiana Coach Jack McKinney, a native of Philadelphia, said his team was "depressed" after its loss at home to the Bulls.

"I haven't even thought about the playoffs yet," he said following the game. "I'll think about them when I get over this loss. We'll be ready. It's a short series and you just have to get hot to win two games."

There are two things in the Sixers favor. The team competed in a mini-series last year — sweeping the Washington Bullets in two straight — and went all the way to the league finals, losing in six games to the Los Angeles Lakers.

In addition, Philadelphia defeated the Pacers six consecutive times this season.

"We might have won all the games against them, but a lot of them were close," 76er center Darryl Dawkins said. "Indiana is a team that has been coming off and getting stronger late in the season, and we're — certainly not in a position now to toot past them."

In their last meeting, the Sixers rolled to a 107-95 victory over Indiana at the Spectrum.

Knicks aren't impressed with Bulls

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Knicks don't think the Chicago Bulls have very much team character.

Moreover, the Knicks figure that factor will work to their advantage in their best-of-three first round NBA playoff series which begins tonight at Madison Square Garden.

Although the Bulls won their last eight games to beat Indiana out for second place in the Central Division, the Knicks are convinced that if they get a substantial lead on Chicago the Bulls will fold up like a pup tent.

The Knicks and Bulls split their season series at three games each, but New York likes to point to the fact that every time it built a big lead on Chicago, the Bulls didn't have the character it takes to come from behind.

"Everytime we got them down, they just stayed there," said Knicks' All-Star guard Michael Ray Richardson. "You've got to respect them because they have a lot of talent, but when things aren't going well for them, they start playing a lot of one-on-one. And it's hard to come back when you don't play your game."

The Bulls are a very strong rebounding club with a dominating center in Paul Silvers. "What they lack, the Knicks believe, is good ball-handling."

"They don't have the good ball-handlers," said forward Campy Russell. "And when you're trying to come from behind, you can't afford turnovers. If we can get up on them defensively, we can pressure them into mistakes."

The Knicks, however, would have preferred to face Indiana in the playoffs. The Bulls rebound a lot better than Indiana and rebounding has been a major weakness of the Knicks this year.

Chicago also has quite a bit of playoff experience, which gives it another edge over the young and inexperienced Knicks.

"Almost all the guys on Chicago have had playoff experience and that makes a difference," says forward Maurice Lucas of the New Jersey Nets. "Artis Gilmore won a championship in the ABA. David Greenwood went to UCLA, and that is playoff experience enough. Larry Kenon was on a championship team (in the ABA), Reggie Theus was in the playoffs, and so was Rickey Sobers."

Reserve center Marvin Webster is one of the few Knicks with playoff experience and he figures to see a lot of action against Gilmore.

The second game of the series will be played at Chicago Friday night, the if necessary third game scheduled for New York on Sunday.

Can the spectacular moves of Julius Erving guide the 76ers to an NBA championship? (UPI)

Luzinski becomes property of Chisox

By United Press International

After a week of speculation, it became official Monday when the Chicago White Sox purchased veteran outfielder Greg Luzinski from the Philadelphia Phillies for an undisclosed sum.

It had been rumored that Luzinski, 30, would be dealt after the Phillies acquired outfielder Gary Matthews from the Atlanta Braves last Wednesday.

Luzinski had been the property of the Phillies since they chose him on the first round of the June 1968 draft, and he had been their regular left fielder since 1972. He has a career .281 average with 223 homers and 811 RBI, ranking fourth on the Phillies' all-time home run list behind Chuck Klein, Del Ennis and leader Mike Schmidt.

In another deal, the Minnesota Twins traded center fielder Ken Landreaux to the Los Angeles Dodgers for infielder Mickey Hatcher and two minor league players.

Landreaux, who came to the Twins after missing several games last season with leg injury, Woods earned All-League honors, at safety

Spring roundup

Twins but last year slipped to .281.
 Another slugging outfielder making news Monday was Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees.

Remaining in the outfield before an exhibition at Fort Lauderdale against the Dodgers, Jackson pulled up lame and had to be helped off the field with a pulled tendon in his right leg. He walked to his car with the aid of crutches and drove himself to the office of a local doctor.

The injury may force Jackson to miss several games at the start of the season.

The Yankees, after being held scoreless with one hit over the first five innings by Bert Hooton, exploded for five straight hits and five runs in the sixth inning to defeat the Dodgers 6-4.

Dave Winfield provided the big blow with a two-run triple. Solo homers by Pedro Guerrero and Steve Garvey helped the Dodgers build a 2-0 lead.

Claudell Washington's 10th-inning pinch-single gave Atlanta a 4-3 victory over Houston, the Braves eighth exhibition win in their last 10 games. Larry Bradford, obtained in the Matthews deal, pitched two innings of scoreless relief to gain the victory.

Dwight Evans drove in four runs with a pair of homers — including a three-run, game-winning blow in the ninth inning — to power the Boston Red Sox to an 8-6 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Evans had three hits and scored three runs. His first homer came in the eighth inning to start Boston's comeback after the Tigers had scored three runs in the top of the inning to take a 6-3 lead.

The Cincinnati Reds scored five runs, two coming off rookie catcher Dave Van Gorder's home run in the fifth inning, en route to an 8-3 victory over the White Sox. Van Gorder's non-first of four hits in the top of six hits the Reds pounded out of White Sox left-hander Ross Baumgarten in the fifth.

One inning earlier, George Foster had nailed the White Sox lefty for his fourth homer.

Mike Easler hit two home runs and a double to lead a 17-hit attack that gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 9-8 victory over the Minnesota Twins. The Pirates hit seven doubles on a windy afternoon with the wind blowing toward the outfield.

The Twins had 14 hits with second baseman Bob Wilfong getting four singles in four times at bat. Designated hitter Glenn Adams had a home run and a single, driving in four runs for Minnesota.

Philadelphia pounded out 21 hits and the St. Louis Cardinals made five errors as the Phillies rolled to a 15-3 victory. Philadelphia starter Steve Carlton hurled six innings, allowing one run.

The Baltimore Orioles collected 16 hits to rally for an 8-7 victory over the Texas Rangers. Reliever Jim Kern gave up a pair of walks, an infield out and a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning before Gary Roenicke stroked a ground ball single to give the Orioles the win.

Jerry White went 5-for-6, including a two-run home run in the 10th inning, to lead the Montreal Expos to an 8-6 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

 the defensive unit were lost, including Dan Williams, the team's leading tackler.

However, one of the best defensive tackles in the country returns to fill his own shoes.

All-American Randy Trautman, a 6-3, 245-pound tight tackle, was named first team All-State player in the earned All-America honors in both the Associated Press and Kodak teams.

Rick Woods returns at safety and Buhl High School graduate Chris-Bell is back in the lineup at cornerback after missing several games last season with leg injury. Woods earned All-League honors, at safety the past two seasons and was selected on the second team as a punt return specialist. He was also named to the AP second team as a safety the past two seasons.

Larry Alder and Canadian Michel Bourquea round out the returning starters.

The Broncos will continue to operate out of a 5-2 defense. The Bronco defense finished second in the Big Sky (total defense 194.5 yards a game), fourth in rushing (185.6), third in passing (147.6) and second in scoring defense (12.8).

After opening with Northwest Sept. 5 and playing Rhode Island Sept. 12, Boise State will host Idaho State and Northern Arizona — both Big Sky schools. The Broncos will then travel to University of Montana before returning to play Montana State in Boise Oct. 10. The remaining Bronco schedule includes four road games and one home game against CalifPoly, San Luis Obispo — the Division II national champions. The Broncos will close their regular season Nov. 21 at the University of Idaho.

"The Big Sky Conference will be as well balanced as ever and tougher than any previous year. Nevada, Reno, Idaho State, and Idaho should all be early season favorites based on the number of returning quality players," Criner said. "Northern Arizona, Montana State, Weber State and Boise State will have to play very good football to compete with the rest of the league."

"All of the teams in the conference return many fine athletes and appear to have had an outstanding recruiting season, which should make the league very interesting. Early momentum will be very important to league success and with continued emphasis by more teams on the passing game, 1981 should be an exciting year," Criner said.

Interest was approved during a telephone conference meeting of the nine CFL clubs and is subject to receipt by the league "of certain covenants" recommended by Commissioner Jake Gaudaur.

Skalbanta had originally purchased 50 percent of the club, but had been unable to work out a suitable partnership with former owner Sam Berger. The 81-year-old patriarch of the CFL then sold Skalbanta the other half of the team on March 9.

Jerome to host golf tournament Friday

JEROME — At least 16 teams will compete in the Jerome High School Golf Invitational Friday.

Country Club Professional John Peterson said nine class A and seven class B will participate for sure.

Peterson said it was the club's intention to make the event an annual affair, sponsors providing team champion and runner-up and medalist and runner-up trophies.

The tournament will draw teams from throughout southern Idaho and could well be the only match up of Gem State Conference and Boise area class A schools prior to the state finals.

Florida State gridders plead innocent

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Five Florida State University football players — including All-America noseguard Ron Simmons — pleaded innocent Monday to knowingly accepting television sets stolen from a department store.

A former player, Robert Harris, 19, of Tallahassee, also pleaded innocent to a felony charge of dealing in stolen merchandise. A sixth player accused of accepting stolen goods got a one-week postponement of his arraignment.

Harris appeared before Circuit Judge Charlie Miner, who set his trial for June 24. Also appearing before Miner was tailback Sam Platt, 22, of Jacksonville, who was scheduled for trial July 21.

Entering written innocent pleas were Simmons, 21, of Warner Robins, Ga., sophomore tackle Herbert Harp, 19, of Winter Garden, junior fullback Tommy Young, 20, of Lake City, and freshman wide receiver Eric Riley, 19, of Fort Myers.

Yanks' Jackson suffers pulled tendon

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — New York Yankee slugger Reggie Jackson suffered a pulled tendon in his right leg before Monday's exhibition with the Los Angeles Dodgers and left the park on crutches.

The injury may force Jackson to miss several games at the start of the season.

Jackson was running in the outfield before the game, as is his custom, when he pulled up lame and had to be helped off the field. He walked to his car with the aid of crutches and drove himself to the office of a local doctor.

Millionaire makes bid for CFL team

TORONTO (UPI) — Vancouver millionaire Nelson Skalbania, adding another franchise to his already burgeoning empire, had his bid for 100 percent ownership of the Montreal Alouettes unanimously approved Monday by the Canadian Football League.

The request was approved during a telephone conference meeting of the nine CFL clubs and is subject to receipt by the league "of certain covenants" recommended by Commissioner Jake Gaudaur.

Skalbanta had originally purchased 50 percent of the club, but had been unable to work out a suitable partnership with former owner Sam Berger. The 81-year-old patriarch of the CFL then sold Skalbanta the other half of the team on March 9.

Hockey race is 'crazy'

TORONTO (UPI) — It's the upside down season in the National Hockey League.

The small stakes seem big, the blunders made 790 games ago come home to roost, the good teams are easier to beat, the bad ones play with the frenzy of giant killers, and the number 13 is lucky.

With but a handful of games remaining, the purpose of the NHL's marathon 80th game regular season is bearing its dubious fruit — the elimination of five of the 21 teams for the Stanley Cup playoffs. To be one of the teams fighting for the last three of 16 available playoff berths is to see the world in reverse order.

Your 75th game of the season on a balmy spring night against the lowly Hartford Whalers in Connecticut can be a charged struggle between champions, if you are Washington Capitals' Coach Gary Green and fighting for 16th place. Even the war-like language is more belittling conquerors.

"Now it's on to another very important game," said Green after his team recently defeated the Detroit Red Wings. "When you get into the last 10 games, it doesn't matter who you play, you still have to work for it. Nobody will give you two points."

Your life can be as uncertain as the spring weather and just as exciting as a Stanley Cup final, if you are Glen Sattler, Coach of the Edmonton Oilers, who are finally "hot" after being inept the rest of the year.

"It's a crazy race," he said. "One day we are in 15th place, the next we are 17th. We are in the playoffs on Monday and on Tuesday and back in on Wednesday, it's crazy."

And, should you be Oiler captain Lee Fogolin you can rattle off as many 1fs as Rudyard Kipling.

"If we had a 500 record the whole season, we could be fighting for 10th place instead of 16th."

Remember that game way back in, what was it October? "Yes, it was October. If we hadn't lost those first two games agai Quebec and Colorado we would have it all locked up now," Fogolin said.

For no team is the epic endeavor to be 16th more grueling and humiliating than the Toronto Maple Leafs, whose hockey past is steeped in winning tradition. The Leafs hover in 16th place, at Ignoble war with upstart Edmonton and the Washington Capitals.

The Leafs have done everything backwards this year. They have, for example, won better on the road than at home. They have made trades in reverse fashion. They traded Mike Palmateer to the Caps to get a better defenseman in Robert Picard, then dealt Picard away to Montreal to get goalie Banny Laroque as a replacement for Palmateer.

They have often played brilliantly against the likes of Philadelphia and the New York Islanders only to lose to the cellar dwelling neighbors like the Winnipeg Jets, Oilers and Pittsburgh Penguins.

After suffering a dispirited loss to the Penguins to fall into 17th place last week, the Leafs edged the Bruins 3-2 last week, marking their first win over Boston in 13 games since 1979.

Leaf captain Darryl Sittler cautiously ventured that the cellar-war makes black seem white and the lucky seem unlucky.

"I guess the number 13 is lucky," he said.

After struggling through a two-year string of feuds between players and management, three coaching changes, and a defense that rates as one of the worst in the NHL, the Leafs admit that the playoff race is more a rescue mission to salvage a lustered pride than a march toward the impossible dream of a Stanley Cup.

"It is not a good feeling at all to be in this position," said Leafs' captain Darryl Sittler. "At the start of the season, I thought we'd be up there with the best teams. We've had some trouble. But right now, we're desperate for wins. Maybe we can salvage something if we just make the playoffs."

For the Oilers and the Caps impossible dreams may be realized by simply making the playoffs.

The Caps are looking for their first playoff berth in team history and the Oilers are chasing their second berth in post season play since they joined the league from the defunct World Hockey Association two years ago.

Of course there are those such as the Red Wings of Detroit who have no hope of even making the playoffs in the final week. To such as the Red Wings these are the dark days of hockey.

Detroit Coach Wayne Maxner, whose team is buried only one spot up from the bottom of the heap, has had the misfortune to be fodder for both Washington and Edmonton in recent days. Maxner is not impressed by this day's "red hot race" in the NHL underground.

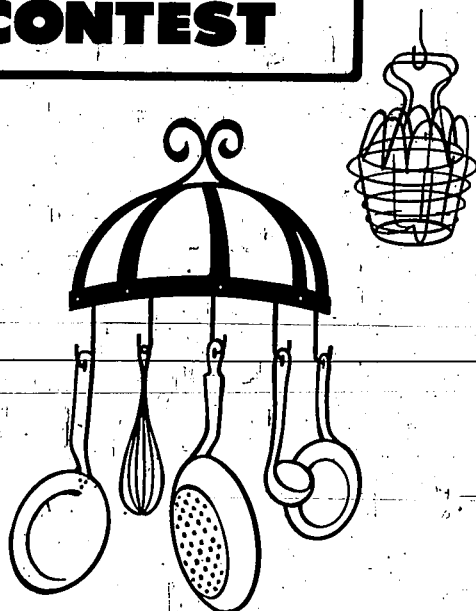

"They do a lot of clutching and grabbing. If the rest of the teams played like this we would have trouble filling the arena. It isn't very exciting hockey."

should make. I have lots of ways to play it and will really be embarrassed if I go down.

West's ace of diamonds held the first trick. He continued to his partner's king. South ruffed and promptly led four rounds of trumps to discard two hearts and a spade from dummy. Then South led the ace of spades, continued with a spade to dummy's king and ruffed a spade.

Everyone was down four cards at this point. South held his three hearts and the last trump. North held one spade, one diamond and ace-nine of hearts. West held the top spade and Q 10 5 of hearts. East held the top diamond and three useless hearts.

South led his last trump and West had to chuck a heart to retain the good spade. The last spade in dummy had done its work. South threw it away.

Now East was forced to let South play. If he had any, they weren't any good anyway. A double squeeze had been made.
