

U.S. lifts embargo, Israel gets jets

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — President Reagan ended the two-month embargo on U.S. warplanes for Israel Monday.

He acted without an official finding on whether the Jewish state had violated an agreement to use American weaponry only for defense.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig, who made the announcement, said deliveries will resume "at the earliest possible moment."

He said a "judicial decision" on whether a violation occurred is not necessary at this time. At the time of the suspension, the administration notified Congress there may have been a "substantial violation" of U.S. law.

Shipment of the first two sophisticated jet aircraft was suspended June 10, three days after similar U.S. planes were used to wipe out a nuclear power plant in Iraq. The suspension was extended when Israel used American planes to attack Palestinian Liberation Organization installations in civilian sections of Beirut, Lebanon, in July.

Altogether, 14 F-16s and two F-15s await delivery.

Haig made the announcement to reporters following a National Security Council meeting with the president. Reagan convened the session after flying by helicopter to Los Angeles from his ranch in the mountains near Santa Barbara early Monday.

In Washington, Israeli Ambassador Ephraim Evron welcomed the news that what he called the "unhelpful and unjust" suspension had been lifted, and expressed his conviction that "the traditional close bonds of friendship between Israel and the United States will deepen and get even stronger."

There was no immediate reaction from Arab capitals. But a spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization's Washington office called the decision "an affront to the Palestinian people, the entire Arab world and to all peace-loving people."

Haig said the decision came only after "an intensive review of the Israel actions," including conversations with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Evron.

Calling the decision "timely and appropriate" in light of current conditions in the Middle East, Haig cited the "very positive" cease-fire in Lebanon.

The suspension, he said, had been made under "unusual circumstances" and he saw no reason for it to signal "any change in our long-standing relationship with Israel."

As to whether or not Israel has assured the United States it will use the warplanes for defensive purposes only, in accordance with the arms sale agreement, Haig said. "The understanding of the arrangements under which we provide military assistance to Israel are clearly understood, are recognized on both sides."

He said he expects Israel to abide by the conditions of the sale.

On the specific point of whether or not the review concluded that the Israel action was offensive or defensive, Haig said. "It wasn't necessary to make a legal or juridical decision of that kind, either by law or the circumstances of the situation."

Sons' account breaks casino bombing case

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — A detailed account from two sons of a luckless gambler suspected of rigging a sophisticated bomb led to their father's arrest, the FBI said Monday.

The bomb, planted in a botched $3-million extortion attempt, exploded while being disarmed, causing $12 million damage to Harvey's at the Lake Tahoe gambling spa in Stateline, Nev.

Harvey's offered a $500,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the would-be extortionist.

FBI documents filed at the arraignment of four suspects Monday revealed that the sons of John Birges Sr., 59, were the "mystery citizens" who led the FBI to their father.

Birges Sr., a Hungarian immigrant who was a successful businessman but who gambled frequently and was a heavy loser at the casinos, was jailed on $2 million bail and charged with the others with commercial extortion and conspiracy. The charges each carry maximum penalties of 20 years in jail and $10,000 fines on conviction.

According to FBI documents, John Birges Jr. and James William Birges were picked up on Saturday and waived their Miranda rights before detailing the series of events that led to the casino bombing.

The sons also led agents to a cache of 600 pounds of dynamite buried by their father. They said the explosives were going to be used in making another bomb to be placed again at Harvey's Casino in Stateline, Nev.

at the main office of the Bank of America Branch in San Francisco.

Birges Sr., Ella Joan Williams, 47, Terry Lee Hall, 25, and Willis "Bill" Brown, 50, all arrested during the weekend, were arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Alan Christensen shortly after the news conference and a preliminary hearing was set for Aug. 26. Bail of $1 million each was set for the other three suspects.

Phillip Cronin of the U.S. Attorney's office said John Jr. could face a perjury charge as a result of his appearance before a Reno, Nev., grand jury investigating the bombing but he was not in custody. Cronin said he was considered "a government witness." He added that James faced no charges but would not elaborate on his status.

The affidavit filed by FBI agent William Earl O'Reilly said the two sons told agents that on June 11, 1980, they and their father stole 800 to 900 pounds of dynamite from the Helms Creek Hydroelectric Project at Wilson, Calif.

The sons went on to tell agents that Birges Sr., a former landscape contractor and restaurant owner, built the bomb from June to August of 1980 in a shop at the back of his residence in Clovis, a community near Fresno.

Miss Williams, a Fresno County probation officer who has lived with Birges Sr. for at least three years, is accused of typing the three-page extortion note left with the bomb on Aug. 26, 1980. The note instructed casino officials to deliver $3 million to an unspecified location. Authorities said they tried to deliver the money but no one showed up. The bomb exploded Aug. 27 when demolition experts tried to move it.

The Birges brothers, according to the agent's affidavit, refused two days before Aug. 26, 1980, to participate in placing the bomb but did agree to participate in the money drop.

Farmers use powerful insecticide

Japan bars California fruit as war on Medfly expands

MODESTO, Calif. (UPI) — Japan has decided to quarantine all California fruits and vegetables at midnight Wednesday.

It acted because of Mediterranean fruit fly infestations in the Santa Clara and San Joaquin valleys. It was disclosed Monday night.

Richard E. Rominger, director of the California Department of Food and Agriculture, said this would be a "big blow" to the state's growers because Japan is "our biggest agricultural customer."

California at this point in the harvest season is shipping citrus fruit into Japan, Rominger told UPI in San Francisco.

However, the director said representatives of the U.S. Department of Agriculture were negotiating with officials in the Japanese consulate in Washington, D.C., seeking a modification of the quarantine order.

For example, Rominger said, the quarantine could be applied to just the areas already quarantined by the federal-state Medfly eradication project officials.

Rominger said the Japanese action could be a response from Japanese growers themselves seeking to reduce the amount of California fruit and vegetables imported into their nation.

In a related development, farmers in the San Joaquin Valley took the initiative in the "war against the Medfly" by sending up private crop-duster planes spraying insecticides more powerful than those being used by project choppers.

Four yellow crop-dusters dropped the pesticide diphos over 900 acres in the core of a 254-square mile quarantined area where a swarm of Medflies was found last weekend.

With their livelihood at stake, growers decided to act on their own, local officials noted, and have promised to do away with the destructive pest, now posing its most serious threat to California's $14 billion a year agricultural industry.

"Now that the growers have a chance to do something on their own, they're doing it," said Stanislaus County deputy agricultural commissioner Walt Heimgartner. "We're not talking about a holding pattern or controlling the Medfly. We're eradicating it."

The air assault by growers Sunday followed the dropping of the less powerful malathion bait over 78 square miles by state officials who have been battling the bug for more than a year and last week lost the fight to keep it out of the farm-rich valley.

LeBaron's wife claims body of sect's leader

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — One of Ervil LeBaron's 13 wives claimed his body Monday while authorities awaited results of chemical tests to determine if the cause of his death.

Officers were unsure whether the fanatic polygamist leader committed suicide in his prison cell or died of an unexplained seizure.

LeBaron, 56, was serving a life term for ordering the murders of rival polygamist leaders. He was found dead on the floor of his maximum security cell Sunday beside letters telling his followers he was going to see his Heavenly Father.

Anna Mae Marston, identified as one of LeBaron's wives, was given permission to claim the body from the medical examiner. Authorities said the woman indicated a funeral would be held somewhere in Texas, possibly Houston.

Salt Lake County sheriff's office Sgt. Ben Forbes said an autopsy was inconclusive and he was awaiting the results of drug tests on LeBaron's body before concluding the death was suicide.

"He may have just had some kind of seizure," the homicide detective said. "The tests could take several days."

"There were several letters in his cell and he wrote in them that he would be with his Heavenly Father," added Forbes. "But they didn't say it was to be today, or next week, or next year or 50 years from now."

City Council passes ordinance effective on Friday

Twin Falls slaps 11 p.m. curfew on Harmon, other parks

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Curfew aren't just for kids, the Twin Falls City Council decided Monday after hearing complaints about Harmon Park.

The council, its collective ear bent with testimony about drunkenness, fast driving, foul language, noise and litter at Harmon Park, imposed an 11 p.m. curfew on all city parks, effective Friday.

Mayor Hank Woodall also said he will request the Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Commission study problems at Harmon Park and give the council recommendations concerning further action to curb them. Woodall said commissioners will receive a transcript of testimony presented Monday.

"We're sick and tired of (Harmon Park), and I don't think we should have it be a Denali Chem, 1648 Harmon Park Ave., told the council. Christian, 50, said he's a lifetime Twin Falls resident who remembers that "you could run barefoot through that park when I was a kid, but I dare you to do that now," because broken glass is part of the landscape.

Heavy use of Harmon Park merits the presence of police patrol "at all times," Christian said. But city officials maintain police are responsible for about 8 square miles inside the city limits, and staffing prohibits constant supervision of Harmon Park.

Christian's neighbor, Steve Lutes, 1704 Harmon Park Ave., told the council his family, including his young daughters, returned home from church recently only to find someone urinating in the street nearby.

"This is a little tacky for little girls to have to watch," said Lutes, who claimed police have disregarded some types of offensive activity brought to their attention.

Other testimony included recommendations that the city post 15 mph signs around the park. Robert Johnson, 1624 Harmon Park Ave., advocated elimination of city-sanctioned camping in the park.

Camping should be one of the first issues addressed in efforts to reduce problems at Harmon Park, Councilman Bud Cheney said at a work session before Monday's regular meeting.

"The park is no place for camping," claimed Cheney, who said travelers can be accommodated in commercial campgrounds near town.

City officials say they hope the late-night occurrence of various offenses can be controlled through the curfew, which is expected to give police some leverage in clearing the park of troublesome users.

Until now, they said, the enforcement problem has rested heavily on the fact that police, either must observe violations in order to make arrests, or have complaints filed by residents who observe offenses.

One resident said a common problem with citizens filing complaints lies in the fact that they usually don't know the names of offenders. Another man said residents shouldn't have to do the enforcing.

"What is our police department for?" asked a Madrona Street home owner who advocated police "stakeouts" to apprehend wrongdoers.

Having a police car cruise around the park periodically, residents said, only results in offenders' behaving themselves while authorities are present, and then resuming errant merry making when police leave.

Pan Am 727 jetliner sprayed with foam after skidding off Florida airport runway

Airliner skids off runway as wheels collapse

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — The main landing gear of a Pan American World Airways jet collapsed as it accelerated for takeoff Monday.

The plane skidded off a runway, forcing the passengers to evacuate on emergency slides and injuring four people.

Pan American's Flight 953 was taking off at Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood Airport for Boston with a crew of seven and 58 passengers when the gear collapsed with a series of loud bangs.

Three passengers were treated for minor injuries. A fourth, an unidentified woman, complained of a sore neck and was being observed at Broward General Hospital.

Ken Wallace, tower chief for the Federal Aviation Administration at the airport, said the Boeing 727 jet skidded off a runway after its main landing gear collapsed. It settled into a muddy area on its belly, its nose stuck in the air.

A Pan American spokesman confirmed the problem was with the jet's main landing gear, indicating the incident was not linked with the air traffic controller's strike.

OPEC price accord forecast

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Both conservative Saudi Arabia and hard-line Libya Monday predicted OPEC would reach agreement on unified prices at the oil cartel's emergency ministerial conference opening Wednesday.

"I expect agreement on reunified prices on Wednesday," said Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani after chalking a closed-door meeting the Long-term Planning Committee.

Yamani's optimism was shared by Libyan Oil Minister Abdusalam Mohammed Zagar, who said, "I think there will be a compromise."

Judge rules out confession

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A judge ruled Monday that former Peoples Temple aide Larry Layton's confession to Guyanese police in the slaying of Rep. Leo J. Ryan could be used in a conspiracy trial.

"I find the statement was voluntary, that I don't believe there were any guns, knives or beatings," U.S. District Judge Robert Peckham said. "Any minor discrepancies in the testimony of Guyanese police officers at a hearing Friday were minor."

Defense and prosecution attorneys were to make opening statements to the jury today.

Ailing Nelson in hospital

WAILUKU, Hawaii (UPI) — Country western singer Willie Nelson was reported in good condition at Maui Memorial Hospital Monday, under treatment for a collapsed lung.

Hospital authorities said Nelson was swimming near the Kihei resort area Thursday afternoon when he suffered the lung collapse. He was brought to the emergency room, then admitted, and a chest tube was inserted.

Today's weather

A few clouds expected but it'll stay dry, hot

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:

Occasional cloudiness through Wednesday with widely scattered late afternoon and nighttime thundershowers. Highs today middle to upper 90s and low to middle 90s on Wednesday. Lows in the 60s.

Campa Prairie, Halley, Wood River valley:

Occasional cloudiness today and Wednesday with scattered late afternoon and evening thundershowers. Highs today near 90 and Wednesday in the middle to upper 80s. Lows in the 40s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:

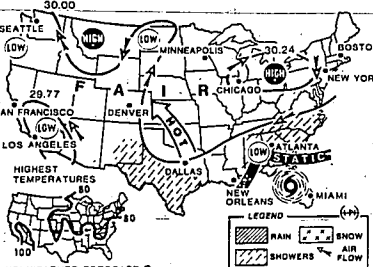

Mostly fair and warmer over Utah through Wednesday. Partly cloudy with scattered thundershowers over Nevada through Wednesday. Highs in the 90s. Lows in the 50s.

Synopsis: There are hints of showers for the Magic Valley the next few days but temperatures will remain hot.

A few more clouds dotted Idaho skies Monday but there was little change in temperature and no appreciable moisture reported.

The clouds were created by moisture moving slowly northward out of California and Nevada, and while continuing today the flow will do little more than create some scattered thundershowers. Monday afternoon temperatures were generally in the 90s across southern Idaho and in some northern sections as well. The hot spot was Mountain Home, with a

NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE FORECAST TO 7 PM EST 8-18-81 30.00

reading of 100 degrees. Elk City and Stanley shared the morning's low at 35.

The extended forecast calls for a chance of showers over northern mountain areas Thursday through Saturday while southern areas remain dry. Temperatures will continue to range from highs in the 90s to lows in the 50s.

Although the prevailing high pressure system is moving slowly eastward and the air flow swings more to the southwest, little moisture is expected to move into Idaho in the next few days. Above normal temperatures and dry weather should continue through Friday.

In the Magic Valley, hot weather should keep the demand for irrigation water high through the week. Conditions for outside farm work including grain and pea harvest and hay drying should remain good through Friday.

Pan evaporation is forecast at 35 inch today and Wednesday. Spraying conditions will be generally good today with winds mostly 3 to 8 mph, although winds will increase to 8 to 12 mph in the afternoons, causing conditions to deteriorate somewhat locally.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Monday was 75 per cubic meter of air.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the hottest temperature was 112 degrees at Palm Springs, Calif., while the coldest was 33 at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

Storm soaks arid Florida; floods hit Maine spud belt

By United Press International

Tropical Storm Dennis brought heavy rain to drought-stricken Florida Monday, storms in Texas and Arkansas flooded streets and forced some evacuations and in Maine, a flash flood swept a house down a rain-swollen river.

In Maine, pounding rainstorms touched off flash flooding, washing out streets, forcing the evacuation of at least 70 homes and sweeping a house down the Aroostook River in Caribou.

"The house that went down the Aroostook River was flooded right off its foundation," Nancy Benn, director of civil emergency preparedness for Aroostook County said. "We're not even sure yet how far it went."

"There have been mudslides, streets flooded, there have been cars floating in the streets," Benn said.

The flooding primarily affected four communities in Maine's potato-packing heartland — Caribou, Washburn, Fort Fairfield and Limestone — where there was also scattered power outages.

The National Weather Service said five inches of rain fell in a six-hour period, with 6.1 inches falling over a 24-hour period.

The town of Washburn was without water after a 4-foot water main was washed out.

Texas officials prepared for the second straight day of flooding Monday. Potter County officials evacuated 10 families from Valley Door, a small community near the banks of the Sweet LaCruz creek in the Panhandle.

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood watch for most of the Panhandle.

"We had a couple homes under water," said Wallace Stevens of the Potter County Fire Department.

Flooding was also reported in Amarillo, where police said cars were stalled in high water, and in the Panhandle county of Randall.

A Harrison, Ark., family was forced out of its home near Crooked Creek as the stream inched toward flood stage. A dying tropical storm Dennis brought the heavy rains — nearly 5 inches — to Florida.

Hospitals clear in vet's death

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two veterans hospitals were exonerated Monday by an investigation into the suicide of a Vietnam veteran whose death last spring triggered a two-month hunger strike and sit-in by fellow veterans.

Four doctors, two from the VA and two outside medical investigators, found that the psychiatric care provided former Sgt. James Hopkins at the Wadsworth and Brentwood VA Medical Centers in Los Angeles was "adequate and satisfactory."

In a report that veteran activists immediately labeled a "whitewash — a total farce," Dr. Robert S. Wallers, dean of the University of California at San Francisco and Dr. Joseph Matrazzo of the University of Oregon praised the VA's treatment of the Vietnam veteran, who apparently took his own life last May.

Fires in area put out

By United Press International

Fires over the weekend consumed more acreage administered by the U.S. Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management.

Shoshone District BLM crews extinguished a fire northwest of Fairfield that ignited Sunday during harvest of a grain field.

Shoshone BLM dispatcher Dale Chatterlain said the fire started on private land but threatened no other farms or ranches in the area.

Bush says 'Nuts' to Soviet criticism

Tuesday, August 18, 1981 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-3

Vice President Bush greets VFW

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Vice President George Bush, borrowing a word from a World War I slogan, said "Nuts" to the Soviet Union Monday for criticizing the U.S. decision to produce the neutron bomb.

In a speech at the 82nd national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Bush also said the Reagan administration's decision to add $32 billion to the defense budget for fiscal 1981 and 1982 was necessary to preserve peace.

"I've been mulling over the things that the Soviets said about us last week," regarding the decision to go ahead with the production of this neutron warhead," Bush told about 6,000 delegates.

"I'm going to quote you some of what they said," Bush continued. "They said that we're 'inhuman.' They said that we're 'barbaric.' They said that we're 'criminal.' And they said we're 'cannibalistic.'"

"But I've given it some thought, and I think I've found the best way to answer them, and that's to quote something Gen. (Anthony) McAuliffe once said — you remember it and I remember it — 'Nuts.'"

"Nuts" was McAuliffe's response on Dec. 23, 1944, to a German demand for the surrender of Americans besieged at Bastogne, Belgium.

"Since when have we had anything to learn about peace from the Soviet Union?" asked Bush, a member of the VFW. "If they're so in favor of peace, let them pull out of Afghanistan. If they're so in favor of peace, let them get Vietnam to pull out of Kampuchea. If they're for peace, why do they assist terrorists around the world?"

Bush called the neutron bomb "a weapon developed to deter war."

At the same time that "Moscow talks of peace," Bush said, "it not only builds up its own strength, but encourages Cuba's export of terrorism in our own hemisphere. If Moscow wants peace, then why not restrain Fidel Castro?"

In discussing the boost in U.S. defense spending, Bush asked, "How many billions would we have gladly paid to avoid Pearl Harbor? Ten billion? Twenty billion? Thirty-five billion dollars? Who's going to step forward and say, 'My children's lives are not worth that much?'"

Delegates to the VFW convention this week will be asked to support resumption of the draft for men only and speeding federal action on studies of the effect of Agent Orange. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger is scheduled to address the convention Wednesday.

Portuguese boycott delays rerouted Atlantic travelers

By United Press International

About 45 U.S.-European flights were rerouted across the North Atlantic Monday because of a 48-hour boycott by Portuguese air-traffic controllers.

They were acting in sympathy with 12,000 fired American counterparts. The longer northern routing caused arrival delays two hours at many European airports and one hour in New York.

Dennis Feldman, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration, said the trans-Atlantic air situation was "very normal" despite the boycott. About 45 flights that normally use Portuguese air space were diverted north overnight and "handled very expeditiously," he said.

The two-day boycott by approximately 300 Portuguese controllers began at 6 p.m. MDT Sunday. Affected planes immediately began using the alternative track through Canadian and British airspace, which was mapped out Saturday by U.S. authorities in preparation for the protest.

The effect of the Portuguese action was minimal compared with last week's trans-Atlantic logjam, caused by a two-day boycott by Canadian controllers on the more heavily travofficial trade union newspaper expressed support of the U.S. Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization Monday and accused the Reagan administration of using oppressive measures against the strikers.

China backs striking union

PEKING (UPI) — China's

The Workers Daily said the jailing and firing of PATCO union leaders and the firing of striking controllers are "severe oppression methods."

eled northern route.

Normally, about 20 percent of the 250 daily flights between the United States and Europe pass through Portuguese-controlled air space, which is monitored at Santa Maria in the Azores Islands. About 13,000 of the United States' 17,000 civilian controllers walked off the job Aug. 3. Only about 1,000 heeded an ultimatum by President Reagan to return to work in two days or be fired.

Portuguese and Spanish controllers scheduled a meeting Tuesday in Madrid to discuss a joint proposal of "international response" to the U.S. labor dispute for presentation at an Aug. 22 session of the world controllers organization.

The striking Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization also picked up support from two unlikely sources: China and Iran.

Iran's air traffic controllers announced support for their striking American counterparts, and one prayer leader even proposed opening a bank account to aid them, Pars news agency reported Monday.

PATCO President Robert Poli, meanwhile, accused the government of practicing "intimidation" by requiring controllers hired as replacements not to "mention the word 'PATCO,' 'union' or anything else for their employment in the FAA."

Poli made the charge during an appearance Monday on ABC's "Good Morning America."

He also charged airlines are "using PATCO as the excuse" to lay off employees they intended to fire anyway.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said at least 75 percent of scheduled domestic flights and all foreign flights will be in the air this week, and 85 percent of normal flights took off during the weekend.

Task force sets out 64 ways to combat crime

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With a declaration the American people are willing to pay the cost, a federal task force Monday proposed 64 ways to combat violent crimes — with the emphasis on putting more criminals behind bars.

"People are tired of barricading themselves from criminals," said Griffin Bell, former attorney general and co-chairman of the bipartisan task force.

The Attorney General's Task Force on Violent Crime wrapped up four months of hearings by unanimously adopting a final report that includes recommendations to build more prisons, allow judges to deny bail for certain suspects, relax evidence rules and modify the insanity plea used in criminal defenses.

Illinois Gov. James Thompson, Bell's co-chairman, said one recommendation — $2 billion in federal funds to help states build more penitentiaries over the next four years — is the "linchpin" of the task force's blueprint against crime.

The recommendations, like those of several similar crime task forces in past administrations, are merely suggestions to be acted on by the president, Congress or the attorney general.

Attorney General William French Smith, who was in California Monday, is "delighted" with the quality of work contained in the task force report, said Associate Attorney General Rudolph Gulliani.

Bell conceded many of the proposals are "symbolic" to restore the public's faith in the criminal justice system — some merely outline the need for more resources, others propose unspecified additional money for state and local law enforcement and prosecution programs.

Other specific recommendations, however, would amend existing laws pertaining to criminals and would tighten Justice Department and FBI regulations.

American Civil Liberties Union spokesman Bruce Ennis said his group probably will oppose "virtually all" the recommendations because they could undermine democracy.

The ACLU is concerned about the proposed no-bail provision — called "preventive detention" — which would allow judges to deny bail to suspects in serious crimes who previously broke the law while on bail.

Another task force recommendation that has been under fire is a proposal to modify the "exclusionary rule," which bars illegally obtained evidence from a trial.

Road maintenance should be priority

Sen. Steve Symms believes maintenance of America's existing highway network should have priority over new road construction.

We agree with him.

Symms, in Boise to hold hearings on the question of road construction and maintenance, was given plenty of data and support for re-establishing federal highway spending priorities. It would make little sense for Washington to authorize completion of the federal highway system and allow those portions already built to fall apart.

But the costs of either alternative are staggering: $53.8 billion to build the remaining 5 percent of the system versus $33 billion in estimated repairs the system in place needs.

The Reagan administration would just about assure the destruction of urban and secondary roads in a bill that would end federal funding in 1983. Symms has introduced a bill that would extend funding through 1990.

In Idaho, two-thirds of the highway network is federally-owned. There is no way Idaho can take over construction and maintenance of the system with current budget revenues. The alternative is to hike gasoline taxes, something the state has done four times in the past 10 years.

This clearly will be an urban-rural battle in Congress.

Urban forces will want the highway net completed, particularly those unfinished, complicated and costly projects in and around the major cities.

But Symms argues, and rightfully so, that the cities have mass transportation alternatives — alternatives Western rural states don't and won't have. The highway system here is the most logical, convenient and cost-effective means of transportation available.

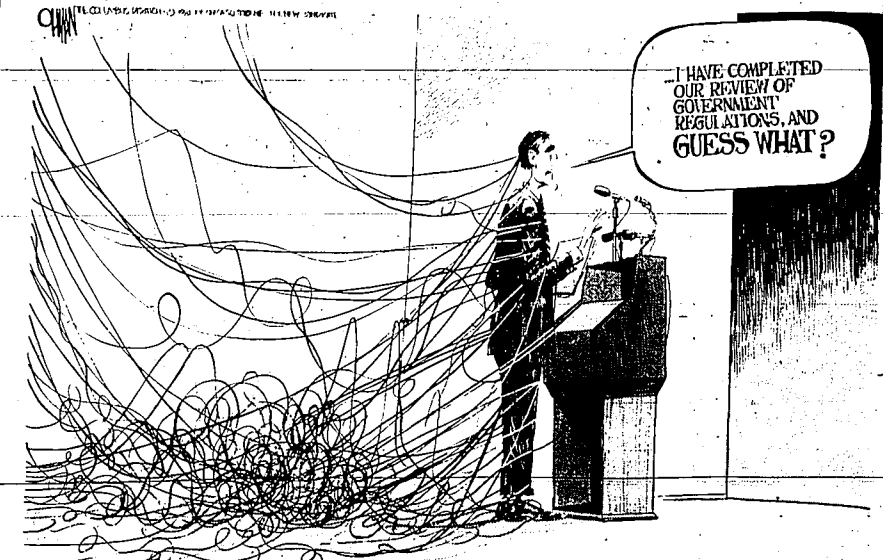

Thus, maintenance of the road system is critical to the rural West and Idaho in particular.

Idaho has a hard enough time trying to maintain its state road system, let alone take over federal highways as well.

Blue Lakes Boulevard in Twin Falls is the best testament to a road that needs to be expanded and improved because it is on the state's worst road list. Yet the only plans for improvement concern constructing turn lanes at Falls Avenue in 1982, which could cost as much as $700,000. Although the state is looking at major construction work on Blue Lakes, it won't come before 1984-5 and then only if money is available.

Symms and the rest of the Idaho delegation should push their colleagues to recognize the importance of maintaining and upgrading existing roads. If federal aid does end, not only will fuel taxes go up but we may see toll booths spring up all over the Western landscape.

We need better roads, not more of them.

America's high-fashion hustlers

© Washington Post Writers Group

Boston — This column comes to you courtesy, or discourtesy, of a lawyer from Dallas, Tex., who shall remain nameless lest I hear from him again.

This man — let us call him Rant Enrave — harangued me at long-distance rates the other day for no less than 20 minutes on the subject of how powerless and abused men were in this country.

One thing you learn as a newspaper reporter is that some callers aren't truly interested in a fruitful exchange of personal feelings on the merits of an issue. Mr. Enrave, for example, had difficulty with the half of the human dialogue which involves listening. Our relationship ended, alas and alack, when I put the receiver back on the hook.

Nevertheless, Mr. Enrave gave me a tip. The thing that had pushed his button (I would say "pulled his hair trigger," but he told me he doesn't own a gun) were pictures in the August Vogue magazine.

His call just happened to follow that of an old friend from New York, who was outraged by another fashionable treatment. Her text was an ad in the Sunday New York Times Magazine.

I thought briefly and mischievously of fixing them up with each other. Then I related to the library for the Times and to the newstand for $2.50 worth of Vogue.

Filpping through the never-never land of Vogue, I finally came across The Spread. Under the headline, NEW LOOK — MAKERS were pictures featuring a real Sadie (as in Sadist), involved in various aspects of modeling and mayhem. She began by holding a gray-pin-striped man in a hammerlock. In sequence she then proceeded to smother him in a $295 muffler, whack him with a $50 pocketbook, push him in the puss with her $148 Geoffrey Beene shoes and then muzzle him.

She was definitely not getting in touch with his feelings, if you receive my meaning. I could understand how it upset old Rant Enrave.

The ad in the New York Times Magazine might have come closer to his heart. At least geographically. The ad was for Texas Brand Boots.

It showed a scantily dressed model astride a man's leg, dutifully pulling off his black urban cowboy boot. The headline, "Treat Em' Good and They'll Treat You Good," was matched only by the caption: "In the Old West, it's said, some men took better care of their boots than their women." Not altogether admirable, but certainly understandable.

Well. Most of us have, by now, been repeatedly inoculated by the fashion merchandisers. I, for one, have lived through other various permutations and combinations of sex and violence. I remember the fad a couple of years back for women to be photographed with dog collars around their necks. I lived through last year's Hooker look and this year's Kiddie Porn look.

Even so, this is pretty gruesome stuff. There is a sort of can-you-out-thrust this competition in the ninky. But this time, I can't follow my old friend in New York or my new friend in Dallas in dire analyses about what these photos "say about American society." All they say about American society is that we have high-fashion hustlers.

The fashion advertisers and their fellow-travelers, the fashion editors, are not selling groceries and washing machines to the average citizen. They are selling pointy-toed, high-heeled stitched boots and $205 scarves.

Objects. Unnecessary objects. In order to sell an object, especially an expensive and trendy one, you have to convince customers that objects per se are important.

It's helpful if you can make them believe that objects are more important than people. It's best if you make them believe that people are objects. At the end of all this we have a few men who take better care of their boots than of women. And photos of women who step all over men, but with rather elegant shoes.

Maybe this says something about the $148-shoe crowd. But if you buy that as a theory on the general state of the sexes, I've got a guy in Dallas who's dying to hear from you.

Art Buchwald

On vacation? We'll teach him

© 1981 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

It may be my imagination but every summer the syndicate bosses hold a briefing just as I'm about to go on vacation.

The intelligence briefing officer is standing in front of the map of the island.

He has a pointer. "Our agents inform us that Buchwald will be vacationing here in this house. His bedroom is located up here. Our objective is to see that he gets no sleep. Any suggestions?"

"The roof next to the house needs repair. I was going to do it in the fall, but I could start pounding away at 7 in the morning as soon as Buchwald arrives."

"Good thinking, Tashetoge. That should take care of the morning. Now what do we do once he's awake and about?"

"Depends on what he does during the day."

"Our information is he lines up a tennis game if he possibly can."

"Well, then what do you say if we start cutting down a tree next to the court as soon as he tries to hit the ball?"

"Are you certain your tree saw can make enough noise to disturb his game?"

"No sweat. I took the muffler off it this morning."

"Anybody got any ideas for lunch? He usually has a sandwich at the snack bar on the beach."

"I could start up the water skiing motorboat. If I run it close enough to the shore you can't hear yourself think."

The man with the pointer said, "Good. Now we have discovered that Buchwald plans to work in the afternoon from 2 to 4. How do we take care of that?"

"Send a team over to cut his lawn as soon as he starts typing."

"We can't cut his lawn everyday."

"We can cut all the lawns around him. That should take a month."

"What does he do after he types?" someone asked.

"He takes a nap."

"We could have all the airplanes that land and take off at the airport buzz his house first," someone suggested.

"All right. We'll have low-level flights from 4 to 6, no more than 500 feet off the ground at irregular intervals. Now this is most important. Our source says when Buchwald is on the island, the hour that means the most to him is from 6 to 7 when he can sit on the porch with a cold glass of beer and look out to sea. How do we ruin that moment?"

"Cut his lawn again?"

"That's not very imaginative, Edgerton."

"I've got it. We send the garbage truck around at 6 o'clock at night."

"Won't we have to pay overtime to the truck drivers?"

"What's money if we can ruin the guy's holiday?"

"What time does he go to sleep?"

"Usually around 11."

"Belong to a motorcycle club. We could come over and rev up our engines in front of his house for three hours."

"Excellent. You've all done your homework. Are there any questions?"

"I have one. Why are we going to all this trouble to drive a guy on vacation up the wall?"

The leader said, "Because he's there."

What right do former controllers have to be bitter?

© Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — One day last week the Washington Post let its front page with coverage of developments in the air controllers' strike.

There was a photo of passengers stranded in Montreal by the disruption of traffic through Canada. In an adjoining column was a human interest story headed, "Controllers on Brink of Bitterness."

Question: Who has a right to be bitter? The airline passengers? Or the air controllers?

The passengers are the absolutely innocent victims of the controllers' strike. They have done nothing to deserve the delay, the inconvenience, the out-of-pocket expense, the missed engagements and the lost business opportunities imposed upon them.

The controllers, by contrast, brought personal disaster upon themselves. They knew, when they went on strike, that they were violating both their own personal oaths and the law of the land. They knew they risked dismissal because of their conduct. Through their union leaders they deliberately engaged in extortion against the government and the traveling public: Your money or your flight.

Tell me, pray, what right do the controllers have to be "bitter"? They bet their chips on a pair of worthless deuces and they lost to the government's full house. Under these circumstances, bitterness has no place.

The Post's human interest story dealt with local controller who was earning $37,800 on a Thursday. John E. Jacobs, the controller, is possessed of a wife, a 16-month-old daughter, a suburban home, a two-car garage and a mortgage. Why had he taken so great a gamble? He was sure that what he was doing was right, and more than this:

"Jacobs shares with almost all of the fired controllers... a strong conviction that the air traffic system cannot function effectively without them... Jacobs and many of the controllers think it is only a matter of time before the system comes crumbling down and the government is forced to negotiate a settlement with them."

With deference to this personable and educated gentlemen, this has to be said: At any cost — literally, at any cost — he and his associates must be proved wrong. The government must demonstrate beyond the shadow of a doubt that the former controllers are not indispensable, that no union can hold the people and their government as hostages to union demands.

This is a crossroads point, not only for Mr. Reagan's administration but also for the administrations that will follow after him. A precedent must be established now, once and for all, that strikes against society will not be condoned and will not be tolerated. On that bedrock principle the president cannot temporize. The controllers were given full and fair warning that they would be fired if they failed to return to work. They defied that warning, and they were fired. What more remains to be said?

There is much to be done. The former controllers may be left to look after their own wives, babies and mortgages. Good luck to them. The government's responsibility is to rebuild a cadre of trained controllers as swiftly as this may be achieved. The task is by no means impossible, especially if former military controllers are actively recruited. New training schools may have to be established. The best brains in the fields of electronics and computers should be put to redoubled work of new devices, already under development, to improve control of all traffic.

All this may cost millions of dollars, but the tax dollars could not possibly be better spent. By their reckless contempt for the public interest, the controllers have provided an opportunity for the federal government to set an example of firmness that cannot be lost on other public employee unions. A line has been drawn with unmistakable clarity between strikes in the private sector, which a free society must tolerate, and strikes in the public sector, which a free society — if it would remain free — cannot possibly accept.

Nader group says Reagan breaks 14 address pledges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan broke at least 14 promises made in his State of the Union address last February, a Ralph Nader group said in a six-month report released Monday.

The report by Congress Watch compares Reagan's words in his Feb. 18 message — with the action — that followed — particularly provisions of the economic package of tax and budget cuts he pushed through Congress.

"Six months later, the 'safety net' that President Reagan promised would protect millions of Americans lives lattered under a heap of legislation benefiting special interests," the report said.

The list of 14 "promises" that Congress Watch says President Reagan made Feb. 18 and since has broken:

"Those, who through no fault of their own, must depend on the rest of us, the poverty stricken, the disabled, the elderly, all those with true need, can rest assured that the social safety net of programs they depend on are exempt from any cuts."

"The full retirement benefits of more than 31 million Social Security recipients will be continued."

"Medicare will not be cut. . . nor will supplemental income for the blind, the aged and the disabled."

"School breakfasts and lunches for the children of low income families will continue."

"The Food Stamp program will be restored to its original purpose. . . We will . . . save $1.8 billion in FY 1982 by removing from eligibility those who are not in real need or who are abusing the program."

"Government will not continue to subsidize individuals or particular business interest where real need cannot be demonstrated."

"There are a number of subsidies to business and industry I believe are unnecessary. . . One such subsidy is the Department of Energy's synthetic fuels program."

"We're asking that . . . the Export-Import Bank loan authority, be reduced by one-third in 1982."

"And I'm asking that you join me in reducing direct Federal spending by $41.4 billion in fiscal year 1982 — and this goes along with another $7.7 billion in user fees and off budget savings."

"This 30 percent reduction will leave the taxpayers with $500 billion more in their pockets over the next five years."

Confidence in economy improving

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Americans believe the economy is improving but are not yet confident enough to increase their spending, a survey of consumer attitudes showed Monday.

Before a sustained recovery is seen in consumer sales, survey Director Richard Curtin of the University of Michigan said the economy as a whole must show real improvement.

The latest survey of consumer attitudes by the U-M Institute for Social Research indicate Americans are more confident about the economy than they were a year ago.

"The second quarter 1981 surveys indicate that consumer sentiment was at a much improved level by mid-1981 compared with one year earlier, although little net improvement has been recorded during the past six months," Curtin said.

"Despite widespread unfavorable evaluations of current economic conditions, he said the proportion that expected future improvement has grown substantially — mainly due to the anticipated impact of Reagan administration economic policies."

Survey figures involving the housing and automobile markets indicated high interest rates stifle buying intentions.

"Attitudes toward buying conditions for houses remained near record unfavorable levels. Among all families, only 23 percent viewed buying conditions for houses favorable, slightly above the 20 percent recorded in the first quarter of 1981 and 22 percent a year ago."

"Attitudes toward market conditions for cars remained largely unchanged at low levels since mid-1980. The proportion holding favorable views of buying conditions for autos ranged from 38 to 40 percent while, the number holding unfavorable attitudes ranged from 47 to 52 percent."

Tests start on shuttle equipment

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Technicians at Kennedy Space Center began testing equipment aboard the space shuttle Columbia Monday preparing the craft for its second mission this fall.

The shuttle's interface test began three days behind schedule, further threatening to delay the Sept. 30 launch. Space agency spokesman Dick Young said he could not say if the launch would be delayed.

The test is behind schedule because of a number of minor problems that have cropped up with the shuttle this summer. It was hit by a forklift while being rolled to the Vehicle Assembly Building earlier this month and once there problems with ground support equipment delayed testing.

The new series of tests will include dress rehearsals by astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly and their backups, Thomas Mattingly and Henry Hartfield. They will board the shuttle next Monday for orbital maneuvers and a dry run of re-entry into the atmosphere.

Harrier costs top $9 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Defense Department estimated Monday that it will cost more than $9.1 billion to equip the U.S. Marine Corps with an updated version of the British Harrier jet combat aircraft.

Defense sources said the figure — included in a routine Pentagon report on military procurement costs — will be used to acquire 338 Harriers of the AV-8B type, to be built under license in the United States by McDonnell-Douglas.

The Harrier, the West's first fully operational combat aircraft capable of vertical and short take-offs and landings, was first built by Britain's Hawker Siddeley in 1967 and entered the U.S. Marine Corps arsenal in 1972.

'Not guilty,' says suspect Williams

Wayne Williams on way to court

ATLANTA (UPI) — Wayne B. Williams, whisked in and out of the court house under stringent security precautions, pleaded innocent Monday to charges of murdering two of Atlanta's 28 slain young blacks.

Judge Clarence Cooper set a tentative trial date of Oct. 5 and sternly warned lawyers for both sides not to "test the will of the court" by making "extrajudicial statements" about the case to reporters.

The jammed courtroom stifled as Williams, with lawyer Mary Welcome at his side, rose and said: "I plead not guilty to both counts."

He is accused of killing Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, the 26th victim, and Nathaniel Cater, 27, the 28th and oldest of those who died between July, 1979, and last May.

Williams, 23, himself a black, is the only person who has been arrested in the bizarre string of 28 murders and one disappearance. A bachelor who lived with his parents, Williams had worked as a free-lance news photographer. At the time of his arrest, he described himself as a music promoter.

A special task force still is investigating the other cases, but the intensity of the probe prior to Williams' arrest in June is gone. There have been no murder cases added to the task force's case load since Williams was first questioned.

Williams was moved the five miles from the Fulton County Jail to the courthouse in a two-car motorcade accompanied by four deputies. He was in the courtroom only 10 minutes.

He smiled broadly and managed to wave to reporters and photographers with both hand-cuffed hands when he was moved to the downtown courthouse about an hour before the hearing began at 9 a.m. The manacles were removed when he entered the courtroom.

Spectators and reporters seeking entry to Cooper's courtroom were subjected to a rigorous search and the hearing began within seconds of Williams' entry, with a phalanx of deputies who stood between him and the courtroom.

Cooper scheduled a Sept. 3 hearing on a series of 29 defense motions filed by Ms. Welcome, including one seeking separate trials on each of the murder charges.

Cooper also gave lawyers until Sept. 15 to submit questions for prospective jurors, and until a week before trial begins to formulate the questions they may ask experts about "scientific data" involved in the case.

During a preliminary hearing shortly after Williams' arrest June 21, the state said, the main link between Williams and Cater consisted of carpet fibers and dog hairs found on the body that showed "no significant difference" from similar material taken from Williams' home and car.

Cooper also received a request from the Atlanta Press Club for live television and still camera coverage of the eventual trial.

Mother, 102, believes son harmed

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Security check. Joseph Horowitz has run away from home again, his mother says, and this time she fears he might have been harmed.

Joseph, 74, has often left home to go fishing; his 102-year-old mother, Etta, said. But the former New York City cab driver always came back to his parents' apartment in Miami's South Beach section to pick up his Social Security check.

But now, he has been missing for nearly a month.

"He didn't even take a valise," Mrs. Horowitz said.

"He's a very sick boy and he doesn't want to take his pills," said Mrs. Horowitz. "My husband cries. I cry."

When Joseph vanished, Mrs. Horowitz said, he had at least $900 pinned inside his trousers.

Shah halted marriage of star, ex-son-in-law

NEW YORK (UPI) — Elizabeth Taylor had a love affair with the shah Iran's former sovereign, but the late monarch forbade the two to marry, a soon-to-be published biography of the actress revealed Monday.

In the unauthorized biography, excerpts of which were published in Ladies Home Journal, author Kitty Kelley said Miss Taylor met the present husband John Warner a few months later on a blind date. She said Warner had previously proposed to "TV personality" Barbara Walters.

Miss Kelley said the actress met Ardeshir Zahedi, then Iranian ambassador to the United States, in 1975 at a gala ball in Washington.

In Zahedi, "Elizabeth found a sophisticated, 48-year-old man accustomed to wealth and opulence," Miss Kelley said. "Since his divorce from the shah's eldest daughter, the ambassador had enjoyed a luxurious lifestyle as one of America's most sought-after bachelors."

According to Miss Kelley, the actress told a Washington socialite, "When I fall in love, I fall in love." The socialite added, "And when she wants something she moves fast."

"I found out later that she wanted to marry Ardeshir but he shah had forbidden it," the socialite said. "He informed Ardeshir that he could not remarry during the shah's lifetime, and he certainly couldn't marry a commoner converted to Judaism and make her the stepmother of the shah's grandchildren."

Miss Taylor met former Secretary of the Navy Warner on a later trip to Washington where she had been invited to a dinner at the British Embassy that Queen Elizabeth was giving for President Nixon.

When the embassy found out that Miss Taylor was planning on bringing her Hollywood hairdresser, the British ambassador stepped in and asked Warner to be her escort.

"Stick to her like a leech," the ambassador is quoted as telling Warner. "She can be quite willful. Keep a tight hold on her because I don't want anyone to detract from the queen or the president."

Abby aided Ann during early years

NEW YORK (UPI) — Abby Van Buren, "Deer Abby" — says she ghostwrote many of her twin sister Ann Landers' first columns in 1956 before she started her own, the Ladies Home Journal reported Monday.

"Sis got that job and shot those letters to me," Miss Van Buren said. "I provided the sharp answers. I'd say, 'You're writing too long (she still does), and this is the way I'd say it.'"

"My stuff was published — and it looked awfully good in print. I guess she felt good because she said, 'I'm not sending any more letters; my editors don't want me to, and she yanked them away. So I thought, I can do this.'"

Soon after both columns were running, and a Dear Abby-Ann Landers feud started that lasted eight years.

"I didn't hurt her," Miss Van Buren said. "I helped her. I didn't set out to compete. I simply took the opportunity. She may think that if it were not for Dear Abby, she could have had the whole world."

She added, however, that nowadays, "We are each other's best friend. I'd fight like a tiger for my sister and she'd do the same for me."

Miss Van Buren also revealed that her sister had had a face lift.

"You see, I always got what Sis wanted. She has been hurt more in her life than I and she suffered a heck of a lot. If she looked old, if she needed a face lift, believe me, it's because she needed it," Miss Van Buren said.

"I'm quite opposed to chopping myself up but it was her right. Why not? When you cry a lot, it's got to show," she said, referring to Ann Landers' divorce from Jules Lederer in 1975 after 26 years of marriage.

Miss Van Buren said the competition between the two "began a long, long time ago. A psychiatrist could have a field day with this. You see, our values are a little bit different. She was going to marry for money and I was going to marry for love."

"Well, I married for both and she married a heck of a nice guy, but he didn't have a quarter. In Ear Claire, she had a little tiny place, while I lived in a lovely home with loads of help. Her husband worked for me. I drove a luxury car; she drove a low-priced model."

"And that had to hurt. Look, she needs a lot of reinforcement."

Geminis should carry through on promises, avoid tough problems

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day and evening to tune into the new modes of expression which you have decided you want to be allied with in the days ahead. Seek the most practical way to gain your goals.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Wait for a better time to make changes you have planned. Be patient in the face of conditions you can do nothing about.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Put those new ideas across to higher-ups that will help you advance in your line of endeavor. Think constructively.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure you carry through with promises you have made. Not a good day for probing an associate about a puzzling problem.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Use a spirit of cooperation when dealing with an associate today. Concentrate more on a public matter.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handle those duties ahead of you quietly and efficiently, and don't expect too much from a co-worker. Control your temper.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Although having fun is on your mind, it would be best for you to show more kindness to an ally who is in trouble now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Being more objective at home is wise. Try not to criticize anyone or there could be arguments. Show that you have wisdom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to exercise much care in making to avoid accident now. Be more understanding of a friend's problem.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try not to spend beyond you means for something you don't really need. Save your money for more important things.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't upset present security until you are sure that you can improve your position. Steer clear of any arguments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Think of ways to get ahead faster in your line of endeavor. Show others that you are a humanitarian. Be happy.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Listen to what well-informed individuals have to suggest and be grateful for their advice. Strive to gain personal aims.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be capable of solving almost any kind of problem. Direct the education along lines that will help humanity. Give good spiritual training early in life and be sure to encourage where sports are concerned.

What's what

Dependence on meat determined dominance

In any given society, the more the people have relied on meat for food, the more dominant the men have been over the women. Or so say the scholars. Any hunter can tell you the why of that, but rarely do you see most mentioned to show who's winning the war between the sexes.

Why the Gemini woman tends to be more flirtatious than most is not explained by the stargazers, but such is their claim. The Gemini is less interested in housework than in intellectual action, they say. The Gemini likes variety.

You've read that the Australian koala never drinks water, but were you aware that the name "koala" in aboriginal lingo means "no drink"?

"Unmitigated seriousness is always out of place in human affairs." Plato said that, too.

SCOTCH DRINKERS

Q. Don't the people of Great Britain drink the most scotch whisky per capita?

A. Next to the people of the Vatican City, most probably. However, the Vatican's scotch consumption per capita is 18 times greater than Britain's.

Q. My grandma brags about her elder quidn. What's an elder?

A. A sea duck. Brag she might. Nothing man-made has a higher warmth-to-weight ratio than bird down.

Q. How many eggs does a female alligator lay?

A. About 40 maybe 60. They're as big as goose eggs. She buries them six inches deep in a mud nest. Did you know an alligator embryo will drown if its egg is turned over? More about alligator eggs as demand warrants stand-by.

BEST-SELLERS

Howell-Rodgers

GLENN'S FERRY — Kathryn Marie Howell and Daniel Rodgers were married June 30 at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Auburn Howell, in Hemet, Calif. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Margaret Howell of Glenns Ferry and William Howell of Boise. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J.H. Rodgers of Vinemont, Ala. The bride wore a floor-length gown with short sleeves and a round neck. She carried a bouquet of roses and baby's breath. The reception was held in the park with the bride's table featuring a three-tiered cake. Mrs. Lorraine Powell of Pocatello, aunt of the bride, was in charge of arrangements. The bride, a graduate of Glenns Ferry High School, attended Bolje State University. The couple is residing in Vinemont, Ala., where the bridegroom is employed at a trailer factory.

Readers sink teeth in denture clash

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the senior citizen in Maine, whose dentist refused to make her a set of sparkling white dentures because they wouldn't look natural, prompts this letter.

All my life (thanks to caps at 18) I have enjoyed narrow, even white teeth. Years later, when I needed an upper denture, four dentists absolutely refused to give me beautiful white teeth like the kind I had worn for over 40 years! They all insisted that big, horse, yellow teeth are "natural."

The poor fit is another story, but in my bathroom cabinet is the proof that dentists are "yellow happy." (Four sets of dentures!)

Finally, however, I found a young, sympathetic dentist who said, "I'll give you whatever you want." So today, and thousands of dollars later, I have dentures with narrow, even white teeth.

Tell that unhappy, senior citizen simply to go from one dentist to another until she finds one who will give her what she wants. Otherwise there is a lot left in this world to smile about.

— POORER BUT WISER IN PHOENIX
DEAR POORER: My mail is running 2 to 1 in favor of giving patients what they want instead of what the dentist thinks they need. One generous dentist in Bellflower, Calif., wrote to say that if the lady from Maine was willing to fly out to California, he'd give her a Hollywood smile absolutely free!

DEAR ABBY: In 1928 I made a set of teeth for an elderly woman. She insisted I use a shade that was much too white for a natural look. Against my better judgment I gave her what she wanted. In two weeks she returned, saying that all her friends thought her teeth were terrible. I made her a new set free. It was my mistake in the first place.

— RETIRED DENTIST IN CALIF.
DEAR RETIRED: Now that's what

I call putting the bite on the dentist with his own teeth.

DEAR ABBY: I think you missed the boat when you sided with the patient who wanted snow-white teeth. The dentist's professional obligation was to give his patient what she NEEDED, not what she WANTED. He should try to be receptive to her wants, but she has no right to order him to do a bad job. Let's take it one step further, Abby. If YOU were the dentist, what would you have done if she had insisted on PURPLE teeth?

— DOGGY DENTIST IN FLORIDA
DEAR DOGGY: Aw, come on. I'd have given her white teeth, and told her to eat blueberries and drink grape juice.

DEAR ABBY: I'm not a dentist. I'm a plastic surgeon. A middle-aged woman came to me for breast-enlargement surgery. The size she wanted would have made her look like a top-heavy freak and I told her so, but she insisted she wanted a pair of 44s. I refused to give them to her.

I later learned she went to three other doctors before she found one who agreed to do the job. But he talked her down to 42.

— WITHHOLD MY NAME IN L.A.

DEAR ABBY: I'm another dentist whose patient insisted on having snow-white dentures, so I made them. I thought they looked terrible, but he loved them. I made them on the condition that he'd never tell anyone who his dentist was.

— PALM SPRINGS DENTIST
DEAR ABBY: Some old lady up in Maine who needed dentures asked her dentist to make her sparkling white teeth — "like the movie stars" — and he refused, saying they wouldn't look "natural." You said the dentist should give the lady what she wanted — not what he thinks she should have. Wrong! You are just as ignorant as the old lady.

As a dental assistant, I can tell you that the majority of denture wearers don't know anything about selecting the proper color teeth.

Dentists are doctors of dentistry.

Just as physicians are doctors of medicine, they are paid for their expertise and should use it unconditionally. You wouldn't tell a physician what kind of medicine to prescribe, would you? So why should a patient tell a dentist what color teeth to make?

The dentist I work for doesn't give his patients a choice. He selects the color HE thinks they should have.

GM wants to end quarterly price increases for its autos

DETROIT (UPI)—General Motors Corp. wants to abandon its old policy of raising car prices every three months, GM President F. James McDonald said Monday.

The company, which set introductory prices on 1982 models an average of $617 or 6 percent above this year's models, will hold at that level as long as possible, McDonald said.

"All we're saying right now is that we'd like to get away from quarterly increases," he said. "That's really our intention."

For the past several years, GM has led the auto industry in boosting prices on a quarterly basis. That pattern was broken earlier this year when GM fixed its final 1981 model prices in April in the face of price resistance from consumers and dealers.

The timing of GM's introductory 1982 prices — and the unusually large amount of the increase — prompted widespread speculation that a change is taking place in the No. 1 automaker's pricing policies.

McDonald denied that the large price hike was designed to frighten consumers into buying leftover 1981 cars and that the company plans a price rollback when they are sold off.

"We have no intention of changing that," he said.

Other automakers haven't yet responded to the action by GM, the industry's pricing leader.

McDonald also said the company will wait until dealers have adequate stocks of its new 1982 models before it begins expensive and large-scale campaigns to advertise them.

When the company began a heavy advertising campaign this spring on its new subcompact J cars, very few of the models were in dealers' hands — a situation he said GM doesn't want to repeat.

Conoco bid by du Pont receives OK

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI)—Shareholders of E.I. du Pont de Nemours and Co. voted overwhelmingly Monday to purchase Conoco Inc. for $7.4 billion.

It is the largest corporate takeover in the nation's history.

At a special meeting at du Pont headquarters, the shareholders approved an offer of $38 per share for 45 percent of Conoco's outstanding stock. Du Pont also offered 1.7 shares of its common stock for each remaining share of Conoco.

Du Pont's bid to take over Conoco came after an offer from Seagram Ltd., a Canadian liquor distributor that Conoco management opposed. Mobil Oil Corp. also entered the bidding war but stumbled over antitrust questions and other problems.

Shareholders representing 74.1 percent of du Pont's outstanding stock voted in favor of the merger, while those holding 4.8 percent opposed the step.

"My fellow board members and I firmly believe that the merger with Conoco will result in a stronger, more competitive company far into the future," said a delighted Edward C. Jefferson, du Pont's board chairman.

Jefferson said the merger was desirable because it represented an exceptional opportunity to obtain a strong energy resource position at a very substantial discount, including major holdings in oil, gas and coal.

Jefferson said Conoco, the nation's second largest coal company and ninth largest oil company, would continue to operate autonomously.

Salmon shut down

SALMON, (UPI)—Champion International's Salmon sawmill closed down its operations Monday for an indefinite period of time.

The company attributed the curtailment to a continuing slow down in demand for building materials. Also curtailed was the Conner, Mont. lumber mill. The two mills employ approximately 55 persons including 20 in Salmon.

Conditions are to be monitored on a week to week basis which will determine when and if the Salmon mill can reopen.

Exporters sell Soviets more grain

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Private exporters have sold another 300,000 tons of grain to the Soviet Union, half corn and half wheat, to the Soviet Union, the Agriculture Department announced Monday.

Moscow has been active in U.S. markets over the past week, buying grain for quick delivery before Sept. 30. The purchases were made after the Agriculture Department reduced its estimate of the Russian grain crop by 15 million tons to 185 million tons, which would be the third poor crop in row.

New grain purchases to be counted against the U.S.-Soviet grain agreement's fifth year, which expires at the end of next month, now total 1.55 million tons, including 90,000 tons of corn and 650,000 tons of wheat.

Dealers' car stocks hit peak in August

DETROIT (UPI)—U.S. automakers started August with a record 87.5-day supply of cars, the highest ever recorded at that time, Automotive News said Monday.

The trade journal said the Aug. 1 inventory was up from 83.5 days a month earlier and compared with an inventory good for 72 days a year ago.

Automakers consider a 60-day supply ideal.

The bloated inventories reveal why the industry started a variety of sales promotions this month, ranging from reduced car financing rates to cash incentives for dealers to direct cash rebates to car and truck buyers.

The promotions were an initial success, boosting sales in early Aug. 29 percent above last year's levels, and could help bring inventories down to a more manageable level.

Automotive News said General Motors Corp. recorded the biggest gain in inventories between July 1 and Aug. 1. In that time, GM's car supplies went from 85 days to 89 days.

Ford Motor Co. inventories increased to 83 days from 81 days and Chrysler Corp. stockpiles increased to 90 days from 86 days.

Volkswagen of America jumped to a 113-day supply on Aug. 1 from 90 days a month earlier.

American Motors Corp. was the only domestic automaker to reduce inventories on a day-to-day basis, Automotive News said. AMC said its stocks to 66 days from 75.5 days.

Medicare cuts in works as well

© Universal Press Syndicate

In the uproar over threatened cuts in Social Security benefits, most of you have missed the fact that more than $350 million in health care costs will be shifted from the Medicare program into the wallets of our older citizens.

Medicare now pays something less than 40 percent of the health care costs of the elderly. With the cutbacks incorporated in the new budget, the health insurance program for the aged will pay even less.

An older person who goes to the hospital this year is responsible for a deductible of $204. It had been estimated that this deductible would rise to $228 in 1982. Instead, it will jump to $256, a 25 percent increase over 1981's deductible.

Tied to the deductible are the co-payments required when a Medicare beneficiary stays in the hospital more than 60 days, or in a skilled nursing facility for more than 20 days. These co-payments also will go up 25 percent. The resulting "savings" to the Medicare program will total about $185 million next year. Another $5 million will be "saved" by basing a beneficiary's co-payments on the current higher deductible when the illness began one or two calendar years earlier — at a time when a lower deductible was in effect.

The deductible for Part B of Medicare (the part that mainly covers doctor bills) will increase in 1982, too. Under Part B, there is a fixed annual deductible. The Medicare beneficiary is responsible for the first $50 of covered expenses in the year, and Medicare pays 80 percent of the reasonable charges over and above that $50. Starting in 1982, the annual deductible will be raised from $50 to $75, also a 25 percent hike in one year.

In addition, it no longer will be possible for a Medicare beneficiary to take advantage of the so-called "carry-over" provision — under which medical expenses incurred in the last three months of the year could be counted toward the deductible for the following calendar year. No more.

These changes in the Part B deductible will shift an estimated $175 million from the Medicare program next year. About $13 million may be picked up by Medicaid. The balance will come out of the pockets of the elderly — either directly or through increased premiums for the Medicaid protection they have bought to supplement Medicare.

If you are now on Medicare (or have parents or friends who are), find out now whether you (or they) have a supplementary insurance policy that covers the deductibles and co-pay amounts that will rise under the new law. The rates for this insurance, almost certainly will rise as the insurer is hit with larger and larger payouts.

But the whole concept of insurance is to get together with others and share the risks. In buying insurance to supplement Medicare (obviously more and more appropriate), keep these additional points in mind:

1) Make sure you are fully aware of what you're buying and don't permit yourself to be intimidated into buying coverage you don't need.

2) Look for a basic plan that fills as many of Medicare's gaps as possible. One plan with wide coverage is better than several plans to cover only certain dread diseases.

3) Study the policies so that you know that an indemnity policy that pays a flat amount per period, say, does not give you as much protection as a policy that pays a percentage of the costs of services.

4) Don't be fast-talked into buying more policies than you need (a national scandal). The National Insurance Consumer Organization, founded earlier this year, gives this advice. In its newly published "Buyer's Guide to Insurance: What the Companies Won't Tell You":

"Everyone whose coverage at work is not extended upon retirement to supplement Medicare should buy the best Blue Cross/Blue Shield Medicare supplement available. For most people, we think this is enough coverage. You are probably better off resisting the temptation to buy one or more other plans. Grind it out. If you do need more insurance, try one of the senior citizens' organizations."

Valley grain

Soft white wheat 3.30, barley 5.10, mixed grain 5.

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat was lower, corn higher and oats and soybeans mixed at the close Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat futures on the board were up 1/4 to 1/2 cents a bushel to 5 1/2 to 5 3/4 cents.

Soybeans were under hedge pressure from increased sales to the export market.

The soybean basis at the Gulf eased, prompting speculative liquidation of 650,000 bushels.

Soybeans recovered late in the session on firmer prices, however, near the day's highs a few sales of corn values occurred and soybeans lost a few points.

Export inspections figures released after the close but were higher than for soybeans and wheat but lower than traders had anticipated.

The market received some support from grain sales to the Soviet Union.

The dollar was weaker on foreign exchanges.

The outside markets were lower.

CSI trustees approve budgetary tax hike

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Board of Trustees of the College of Southern Idaho Monday approved 1981 county tax levies for the junior college district in Jerome and Twin Falls counties.

A levy of $1,052,106 from Twin Falls County and $372,894 from Jerome County was approved, for a total of $1,425,000. That is an increase of about 13 percent over the 1980 levy of $1,260,000.

The levy amounts were based on a 1981 estimate of $1,374,958,472 in total assessed valuations in the two counties and an 8 percent growth factor (new construction).

CSI secretary-treasurer Karl Black said the county levies represent about 20 percent of the college's total budget.

According to figures provided at Monday's regular board meeting, the estimated 1981 county valuations are $1,015,165,729 for Twin Falls County and $359,792,743 for Jerome County. In 1980, valuations totaled $939,968,268 for Twin Falls and $333,141,429 for Jerome County.

The 1981 maintenance and operations levy for CSI was set at $933,975 for Twin Falls and $331,025 for Jerome County. The bond and interest levy was set at $118,131 and $41,869 for Twin Falls and Jerome counties respectively.

CSI levies should run about 106 percent of assessed market value, but that percentage may change when final valuations are made, Black said. Following the board meeting, Black explained that the 13 percent increase does not necessarily mean an individual's property taxes for the junior college district will go up 13 percent. Rather, because of new growth and construction, costs will be spread over a larger base.

For example, last year the owner of a $100,000 piece of property paid about $92 for the maintenance and operation levy. Because of the 8 percent growth factor, the 13 percent increase means the owner will pay only about a 5 percent increase in taxes, according to Black.

For an owner of a $50,000 piece of property, this means the tax will increase by about $2.50, Black estimated.

Black said the levy figures will be submitted to the county commissioners by Sept. 15.

In other business, CSI President James Taylor told the board the college's enrollment is about 8 percent higher than at this time last year.

He also reported the college's new vocational education building, the third such building on the campus, was nearly ready for occupation.

The new building is heated from geothermal sources and Taylor said he hoped to also heat the Shields Building geothermally in the future.

Taylor also briefly discussed the recent decision by the state Board of Education to cut in half CSI's request for a 30 percent increase in state revenues.

"You might say we had a heck of a week up there," he said.

The budget requests will be now forwarded to Gov. John Evans, who prescribes state agency funding proposals to the 1982 Legislature.

Idaho women in retrospect

New booklet tells the tales of the state's female pioneers

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As the saying goes, the history of the world is but the biography of great men.

And great women, one might add.

Biographical sketches of the women who made Idaho history — from pioneer wives to suffragettes to dance hall girls — have been compiled in an unusual booklet published by the Idaho Commission on Women's Programs.

Written by Betty Penon Ward of Twin Falls, Who's Who of Idaho Women of the Past provides brief glimpses into the lives of famous and infamous Idaho females.

Details on more than 70 women are presented in encyclopedia format, and though the details are brief, they give the reader the flavor of Idaho's colorful past. Only 3,000 copies of the booklet have been printed. It is meant as a reference work, primarily for Idaho libraries. It is the forerunner of a later, more extensive project on Idaho women which Ward is compiling.

Idaho's women have been a mixture of missionaries, political activists, state wives and rough-riding hell-raisers. The pamphlet not only includes prominent figures, such as the wives of governors and senators, it includes lesser known but influential women.

Like Annie Pike Greenwood, her book, "We Sagebrush Folks," was a personal and historic saga of the pioneer farmers' struggles in Magic Valley. She taught in Jerome County and a school established there in 1916 was named after her.

Flamboyant Katie Prado, known as "Diamond-Tooth Lily," called herself the common-law wife of Diamondfield Jack Davis. She sported a gold front tooth with a diamond embedded in its center.

Despite the sparseness of the entries, the bare facts of a person's life often tell a poignant tale. Annie McIntyre Morrow, a well-known dance hall girl and rooming house operator in Rocky Bar and Atlantic, became known as Peg-Leg Annie when both her legs were amputated below the knee in 1896, after she nearly froze to death in an Elmore County blizzard. She had been orphaned, married and widowed in her teens and in 1894, her gambler companion of 20 years disappeared with all her savings. During Prohibition years, she sold moonshine near Feathererville before dying in Boise in 1934.

History treated some women roughly. Lucie Abelard, the first black child to be born in Idaho, (1877-78) died by age 7. Polly Bemis, a Chinese woman supposedly won in a poker game by an Idaho gambler, Charles Bemis, was born in China in 1852 and sold into slavery by her farmer father. Smuggled into the U.S., she became a dance hall girl in the gold boom camp of Warrens, Idaho Territory.

And there are the women who wrestled success from the western land. Emma Yearlan, "The Sheep Queen of Idaho" began with two lambs in the early 1900s and built the largest sheep spread then owned by a western woman. She later served in the Idaho Legislature.

Veto halts council attempt to reduce Burley mayor post

BURLEY — Mayor Chuck Shaduck vetoed Monday a Burley City Council proposal to remove the full-time requirement for mayor.

Four members of the council voted to open the mayor position to candidates with outside employment and raise the mayor's salary from $17,800 a year to $20,000 a year. Councilman Garth Payne explained the two measures were designed as a compromise on the issue. The four councilmen had initially proposed that the pay be reduced to reflect part-time status.

Shaduck vetoed both measures, stating "the people of Burley do not want a part-time mayor" and the increased salary would be inappropriate if the council intended to allow outside employment.

During a discussion following the veto, Councilmember Frances McDonald, who opposed changing the position, offered a motion to override the veto, stating she did so only to bring the matter to a vote. The motion died for lack of a second.

Councilman Jim Parker, who at first proposed removing the office's full-time requirement, said after the meeting he did not second the motion because he did not believe it would receive the necessary four votes to override. He did not elaborate.

The motions, on identical votes, were supported by Payne, Jim Parker, Dale Doman, and Dr. Walter Peterson. Both were opposed by councilmembers Frances McDonald and Leonard King.

A newspaper poll of Burley residents last week showed 80 percent opposing the concept of a part-time mayor. Doman, however, said the proposal had not been adequately explained and that the requirement of signatures inhibited broader participation in the poll.

The four councilmen had proposed restructuring city government at some point in the future, reducing the number of departments and adding an administrative assistant under the mayor.

Shaduck and three Burley councilmen face re-election Nov. 3.

Carey accident kills 1

CAREY — A California man was killed Monday afternoon in a one-car accident west of Carey.

Idaho State Police said Charles A. Berwald, 71, of Newbury Park, Calif., died at the scene after the car he was driving left the pavement of U.S. 20 1 1 miles west of Carey and went over an embankment.

Police said Berwald's wife, whose name and age were unavailable Monday night, was listed in good condition at Blaine County Hospital with injuries suffered in the accident. Inattentive driving by Berwald apparently caused the car to veer off the pavement, police said.

Artists open show at CSI

TWIN FALLS — Seven artists are displaying their work in a show "Idaho 3-D" which opened Tuesday at the College of Southern Idaho.

The exhibition will remain open to the public through Sept. 25 in the Museum Gallery in the new Herrett Museum on the campus.

Featured in the displays are jewelry, sculpture and metalworking by seven Idaho artists.

The public is invited to a preview opening for the artists at 7:30 p.m. today in the museum.

Artists featured in the exhibit are Don Brown and Gail Larson, both of Pocatello; Donald Douglass, Mary Stephens Nelson and Al Kober, all of Boise; John Powell of Bliss and George Roberts of Moscow. Brown, Kober, Powell and Roberts will display sculpture. Douglass, Larson and Nelson will exhibit jewelry and metals work.

The museum is open from 9:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday; from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and 1 to 4:30 p.m. Saturday. Additional information is available from Mike Green, chairman of art exhibits at CSI, 733-9554, extensions 260 and 356.

GOV. JOHN EVANS
accepts responsibilities

Local tax increases possible

Evans: fed fund loss hurts

SUN VALLEY (UPI) — Idaho Gov. John Evans said Monday he was going to accept the responsibilities the Reagan administration is handing over to local governments.

But he added the loss of federal funds is complicating the situation.

Evans told reporters at a Sun Valley news conference that Idaho faces a 25 percent cutback in federal funds under the Reagan administration's block-grant program.

He said white state and local governments are ready to assume local control, "where we are going to get the resources" to fund those programs is a major problem unless local taxes are raised "substantially."

Evans said Vice President George Bush assured those attending the National Governor's Conference in Atlantic City, N.J., recently that Reagan still intended to follow through on a campaign promise to turn over a percentage of federal income-tax revenues to the states to help fund the local programs.

"We're taking the administration at their word that they are going to (follow through) on the proposed (tax-revenue) transfers" to the states.

In addition, Evans said, no one from the administration has mentioned when states can expect to receive the federal funds. He said if the federal money isn't distributed to the states "every city and county are going to be suffering severe problems as a result of the shortage of money."

He said the state and local governments could consider financing programs on a 50-50 funding split, but he said he didn't know where agencies would find such money locally.

One possible method of raising additional funds, he said, would be to raise the state sales tax. But he said he would favor allowing cities and counties to boost their sales taxes locally, rather than increasing the tax on a statewide basis and redistributing the funds to local governments.

Dalling formally gets Jerome prosecutor job

JEROME — William R. Dalling was formally named Jerome County prosecutor Monday morning.

His appointment to the part-time position was made by the county commissioners.

"I would be willing to go along on the part-time basis for a year and see how it works out," County Commission Chairman Mel Grindstaff said.

Grindstaff said he believes a full-time prosecutor plan would save the county about $4,000 a year. But, he said, he favors one full-time prosecutor largely because he believes as the private practice of a part-time prosecutor grows, the county suffers.

"I think over the years we have seen this happen. The county has been coming in second," Grindstaff said.

"It is my feeling one man with full-time responsibility to the county would eliminate this problem."

The county is paying about $50,000 a year for the prosecutor services and secretaries. I think for that we can expect to get good county legal coverage," Grindstaff said.

Dalling told the commissioners he and his deputy, law partner Dan Adamson, would spend much more time in the courthouse than has been the case in the past.

He said he would not promise one or the other would be in the courthouse at all times, but he said one of them will be there nearly all of the time. Dalling replaces Roger Burdick, who becomes 5th District Magistrate Court judge for Jerome County on Sept. 1.

Dalling said he and Burdick feel they will be able to clear up nearly all cases where a conflict might exist and be ready for the complete transition at that time.

Burdick cannot judge cases he has worked on as prosecutor, and Dalling, now Jerome County Public Defender, will have a similar conflict. Dalling said only about five cases are involved — and most of those "can be cleared by Sept. 1."

Grindstaff said only Deputy Prosecutor John J. Heizer has asked for the public defender contract. He said the appointment will need to be made by Sept. 1 to fill in Dalling's present duties.

The present pay is $18,000 per year but Grindstaff said the commissioners are budgeting $20,000 for the next year. The public defender provides his own secretarial help under the county contract but has a small office available part time in the courthouse.

Jones admits he will seek AG post

JEROME — Word slipped on Monday that Jerome lawyer James Jones has decided to run for Idaho attorney general in 1982.

"I really wasn't ready for this to get out yet," Jones laughed, "since I'm only planning to make a statement Thursday to let people know I will formally submit myself as a candidate sometime this fall."

Jones said he has decided to run for attorney general because he believes he is not only qualified for the job, but has broad-based voter support throughout the state.

A recently completed statewide survey conducted for a group supporting Jones indicates the 32-year-old Republican is favored 2-to-1 over other likely attorney general candidates.

"Overall results of the statewide poll showed 31 percent for Jones, 14 percent for the Ada County prosecutor (Jim Harris) and 55 percent undecided," said Jones supporter Eugene Frederickson.

Jones plans to announce his candidacy at speeches in both Twin Falls and Boise on Thursday. A location has not been established for his 9 a.m. talk in Twin Falls, but he will hold a press conference at the statehouse in Boise at noon.

Of his decision to seek office, Jones said, "We need someone who is going to give sound legal advice for the state and the state agencies in the years to come."

"I also believe the person who fills the attorney general's spot on the State Land Board should be familiar with public land issues."

management and uses," Jones said. "I believe I can do a good job in that role."

"One thing I intend to do immediately is meet with all the department heads and statehouse leaders to see how they feel the attorney general's office could be improved and be more useful to them," Jones said. "After that, I will begin deciding on specific goals I would have for the office."

Jones said earlier this year he would not seek the attorney general post being vacated by David LeRoy, a Lieutenant governor candidate, unless he was convinced there was wide voter support for such a campaign. Jones has run twice unsuccessfully against George Hansen for Idaho's 2nd Congressional District seat.

Ketchum council approves $1,821,972 budget

KETCHUM — The Ketchum City Council approved a $1,821,972 budget for 1982 after an uneven public hearing Monday.

Ketchum City Administrator Jim Jaquet told the council the emphasis in the new budget was to bring city salaries into line with those paid by surrounding government agencies.

Jaquet said there was particular concern that Ketchum police department salaries had fallen behind those paid by the Blaine County Sheriff Department.

Jaquet said the new budget, which takes effect Oct. 1, was only $42,218 larger than last year, an increase of 2.6 percent.

Increased salaries will come partially at the expense of road maintenance. Police and fire department salary increases, averaging approximately 20 percent, will be offset by a street department cut of $41,591, down from $277,636 last year.

Jaquet said the lower street department budget would allow the city to perform adequate maintenance on existing streets, but not to pave any of the many Ketchum streets which remain unpaved.

If residents on those streets want paving, they will have to form local improvement districts to tax themselves or contribute money to the city to pay asphalt, Jaquet said.

Another major cut came in the budget line for miscellaneous items. That was reduced from $429,580 to $365,750, a decrease of 14.6 percent.

An unusual expenditure this year was $150,000 for the acquisition of a new city hall. That amount claimed 44 percent of the $430,000 projected receipts from Ketchum's local option tax on liquor-by-the-drink and hotel and motel accommodations.

Bengals clawing to open '81 football season

POCATELLO (UPI)—The quarterback's knee apparently is healed, season ticket sales are up, and Idaho State looks like a Big Sky Conference title contender.

Senior signal-caller, Mike Machurek, perhaps the most effective passer in the league last year, injured his knee in a spring softball game and needed surgery.

But Coach Dave Kragthorpe said Machurek's knee probably will be fully healed by the time Idaho State opens the season Sept. 12 against Eastern Washington at the Minidome in Pocatello.

Machurek is the key to the Bengals' veteran offense, which blossomed into a powerful unit last year. He led the Big Sky in several categories, including total offense, passes attempted and completed, passing yardage and average yards per pass completion.

If Machurek's knee fails to respond as predicted and he is forced to sit on the bench, seniors Dirk Koetter and Keith Simons are in a "toss up" category for the No. 2 spot, according to Kragthorpe.

Kragthorpe, a former assistant coach at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah and now in his second year at Idaho State, said in some ways there's more pressure on him this year than before the 1980 season.

Kragthorpe took over a squad that had finished 0-11 in 1979. With fans, coaches and players not expecting a miracle, they almost got one last year. If the Bengals could have beaten Boise State late in the season, it might have given Idaho State a berth in the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs.

However, the 6-5 record the Bengals achieved was a pleasant surprise to most everyone, including Kragthorpe.

"There might have been less pressure last year because the team had a long way to go," Kragthorpe said. "But this year, after we did comparatively well last year, everyone will expect more."

Barbara Hart, ticket-sales manager at the Minidome, said the winning season spurred season ticket sales from 1,800 last year to a projected 2,400 this year.

Games against conference rival Nevada-Reno and nearby Utah State are expected to draw crowds of 11,000 or more to bolster the Idaho State program further, she said.

Kragthorpe said he expects to treat the fans with the same passing-dominated game the Bengals employed in 1980.

"We're going in with the same idea as last year," he said. "We'll have a passing team that people will like to watch. It's fun and exciting and very productive."

Returning to the Bengals are 12 players on offense who started at least a few games last season, meaning the offense will be experienced.

Supporting the quarterback will be four running backs who had experience carrying the ball last year: tailbacks Lamar Fite and Dwayne Wilson and fullbacks Rick Ambrosi and Cliff Baxter.

Another plus for Idaho State should be kicker-punter Case deBruijn, who will close his prolific Idaho State career this season. deBruijn was among the nation's leading punters last season and should do so again this year.

Although the Bengals have four offensive linemen as returning starters, Kragthorpe admits to be concerned about the line's depth. The absence of a deep bench also might harm the Bengals on the defensive line and among the linebacker corps. But Kragthorpe said only a rash of injuries could cause severe trouble.

Kragthorpe has marked Boise State as the conference favorite, even though the Broncos have lost several key starters — especially on offense.

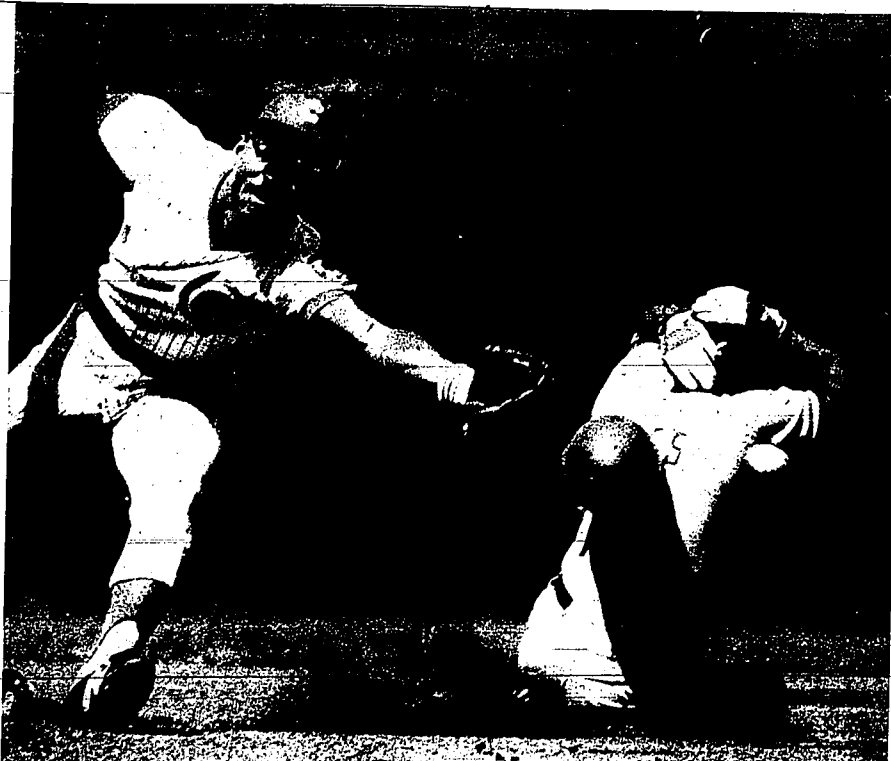

"Once a program is on top it usually remains strong, sort of in perpetual motion," he said.

The Idaho State coach, however, rated the Bengals as one of three or four other Big Sky teams that could claim the trophy. The first big test will be at Boise State Sept. 19.

"We're going in with the same idea as last year. We'll have a passing team that people will like to watch. It's fun and exciting and very productive."

Baseball officials could announce new plans today

Playoff format faces change

NEW YORK (UPI) — Major league baseball executives, embarrassed by a gimmick playoff procedure that was hailed just two weeks ago as a panacea for a strike-plagued season, are expected to announce today the framework for a new playoff format.

Following "revelations" last week that some teams might intentionally lose games to qualify for post-season play, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn Monday met with American League President Lee MacPhail and National League President Chub Feeney to review the present playoff structure and the options for a new one.

According to spokesman Chuck Adams, a decision will be made "probably tomorrow (today)."

Any proposal to change the approved format for a split season and playoff series between first-half and second-half winners would have to be approved by the Major League Players Association, which represents baseball's 650 players.

"They can't revise it unless we agree to it," said Don Fehr, an associate counsel for the association. "We'll wait to see what they come up with. It's something that they're evidently working on."

The problem with the current split-season format, approved by the owners Aug. 5, is simple. Some teams theoretically could lose games on purpose late in the season to help their chances of making the playoffs.

Managers Tony LaRussa of the Chicago White Sox and Whitey Herzog of the St. Louis Cardinals — whose teams finished just off the pace in the first half of the season — ridiculed the system and said they would either forfeit games or ask their players to lose if that meant a possible playoff berth.

Under the current plan, the winners of the first half of the season —

Philadelphia and Los Angeles in the National League and New York and Oakland in the American — are assured of spots in a "mini-series" against the second-half winners.

A possible second-half scenario could have Oakland and Kansas City battling for the second-half championship — with the White Sox in third substantially ahead of Texas and still comfortably ahead of Kansas City in overall records.

By throwing the four-game series against the A's in late September, the White Sox could help Oakland to the second-half title and get themselves a playoff berth as the team with the second-best overall record.

"If it turns out you have to lose a game to get in there," LaRussa said, "I would not tolerate nor would I ask my players to lose a ballgame; so the best way to do it is to refuse to take the field. You accept a loss that way."

"I think maybe what's going to happen is there will be so much attention placed on this, everyone will see that it's potentially very dangerous to baseball and there should be a solution to all of this."

Several ideas possibly under consideration would be to give a team winning both halves a bye into the league playoffs. Another would be to pit a double winner against the team finishing second in the second half — not the team with the second-best overall record.

Another possible format is to pick up the season from where it left off June 12 and play out the year as if there had been no players strike. But that would eliminate the "mini-series" and, along with it, revenue for the players.

Under the contract, the players are supposed to get 60 percent of the gate receipts from the first three playoff games, plus an additional five days pay.

Judge announces date for second NFL trial

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The re-trial between the Oakland Raiders and the National Football League will begin Sept. 30, a federal judge announced Monday.

U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson, who declared a mistrial last Thursday in the antitrust suit, had set Sept. 21 as the date for the start of the re-trial. But Monday he said pre-trial motions would be heard on that date with the trial beginning seven days later.

The NFL will ask for a change of venue for the new trial, charging that enormous publicity during the 55-day trial has made it impossible to find an impartial jury in Los Angeles.

The Raiders filed the suit against the NFL after the league blocked the team's proposed move to the Los Angeles Coliseum, which was vacated that would eliminate the "mini-series" and, along with it, revenue for the players.

Pregerson declared the mistrial after questioning the 10 jurors individually and deciding they were hopelessly deadlocked.

Morgan blasts Giants to win over Bucs

By United Press International

Joe Morgan may be getting up there in years, but he can still swing his bat. Morgan hit a three-run double with two outs in the 11th inning and Enos Cabell followed with an RBI single Monday night to power the San Francisco Giants to a 5-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Morgan's double came off reliever and loser Rod Scurry, 24. Leadoff batter Larry Herndon began the rally with a triple to center and pinch-hitters Jeff Leonard and Jim Wolford each walked with one out to load the bases. After pinch-hitter Bob Brenly popped out, Morgan followed with his bases base-clearing hit.

The victory went to Greg Minton, 33, who pitched one-third of an inning in relief of starter Vida Blue. Blue, who went 9 2-3 innings, allowed six hits, struck out four and walked four.

National

The Giants tied it 1-1 in the seventh. Darrell Evans led off with a single off Pirates' starter Eddie Solomon, went to second on Larry Herndon's sacrifice and scored on Milt May's double to left.

Chicago 3, Los Angeles 1
At Chicago, Doug Bird pitched a six-inning and Ken Reitz' fourth-inning sacrifice fly snapped a 1-1 tie to give the Cubs the victory.

Bird, 2-0, struck out five and walked two in pitching only the third complete game by a Chicago pitcher this year. The victory also lifted the Cubs to the .500 mark for the first time since the second game of the year last April.

With the score tied at 1-1 in the fourth, Bobby Bonds led off with a single and went to third on Jody Davis' hit-and-run single. Reitz' fly ball to center scored Bonds with the tie-breaking run.

The Cubs added insurance run in the fifth. Bonds led off with a walk and went to third on Davis' single and scored when second baseman Pepe Frias bobbled the relay throw from the outfield.

Montreal 6, Houston 2
At Houston, Andre Dawson drove in three runs and Tim Lincecum and Ray Burris had an RBI each, leading Montreal.

The Expos took a 1-0 first-inning lead when Raines walked, stole second, went to third on a groundout and scored on Dawson's grounder to short. The Astros tied it in the bottom of the inning when Craig Reynolds doubled down the right field line and came in on Denny Walling's single. Vern Ruhle, 1-2, was the loser.

St. Louis 2, San Diego 1

Tommy Herr scored from third base on Glenn Brummer's fielder's choice grounder with one out in the 13th inning to lead St. Louis to victory. With one out, losing pitcher Gary Lucas, 3-6, walked Herr and he took third on Ken Oberkell's soft fly single to right-center. George Hendrick was walked intentionally to load the bases, bringing up Brummer.

The Cardinals tried a suicide squeeze with Herr charging home but Brummer bunted foul. Brummer took Lucas to 2-2 before grounding to the hole at short and the Padres attempt at an inning ending double play fell short when Brummer beat the relay to first base as Herr scored.

The triumph went to Jim Kaat, 4-2, who pitched the 13th inning.

Rose

With Musial's record tucked away, NL's hit leader shooting for more

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — He was a cocky crew-cut kid of 19 when he signed with his hometown team, the Cincinnati Reds, in 1960.

He was a brash man approaching the age of 22 when he touched off a wave of resentment from some veterans by unseating the Reds' incumbent second baseman and going on to win the 1963 National League Rookie of the Year award.

Pete Rose is now a gray-haired veteran of 40, but with the body of a 30-year-old and the enthusiasm of a 20-year-old. And in his 19th major league season, he remains one of the very best at his profession.

Earlier this week, the Philadelphia Phillies' first baseman became the National League's all-time baseliest champion by stroking his 3,631st hit off St. Louis' pitcher Mark Little.

Everyone knew Rose would break the record; because of the players' strike, the only question was when. As a result, his latest accomplishment touched off a number of questions regarding his chances to top the seemingly insurmountable all-time mark of 4,191 set by Ty Cobb.

But he answered all the queries, punctuating his replies with his amazing capacity for statistics.

"I can't talk about Ty Cobb, because I can't do it this year or next," he replied to one question.

"I'd like to catch him, but the thing I have to work on now is catching Musial in doubles. I have more singles than anybody so I may as well get more doubles. Musial has 725 and I have 666. Since I've led the league in doubles four of the last six years, getting 59 more is conceivable."

Replying to a later question about Cobb: "I'm sure five or seven years from now I'll look back and regret the fact we lost 50 days (because of the players' strike) but not in a bitter way. If I get close to a record that big, I'll do something to keep myself going."

And to yet another: "I look at things from an easy standpoint. Do it that way and it's not hard to reach. I could finish this year with 140 hits if I hit .330. Say I play three

Detroit hits early; romps Twins 12-2

By United Press International

The Detroit Tigers are still riding an emotional high from Sunday's dramatic ninth-inning victory over the New York Yankees.

The Tigers, who rallied for four runs in the ninth inning to defeat New York Sunday, had that momentum carry over to Monday night when they scored eight runs in the first inning against the Minnesota Twins en route to a 12-2 romp.

Lou Whitaker's two-run single and a three-run double by Alan Trammell keyed the first-inning uprising against Jerry Koosman, 3-0. Lance Parrish and Kirk Gibson singled in runs and Al Cowens knocked in one with a sacrifice fly before Whitaker and Trammell unleashed their big hits. Trammell's double was a pop fly that center fielder Mickey Hatcher lost in the lights.

Dan Petry went the first six innings and gave up only four hits in raising his record to 5-6. Dave Rozema earned his first save for pitching the last three innings and made it 29-13 in the ninth when he struck out the side without allowing an earned run since a pop resumed following the strike.

Minnesota got its runs off Petry in the sixth when Chuck Baker pinch hit a two-run single.

Gibson, who hit a three-run homer in the ninth inning to defeat the New York Yankees Sunday, had three hits and knocked in a pair of runs and now has six hits in his last seven times at bat. Whitaker singled in his third run of the game in the fifth inning and Stan Papi singled in a run when Detroit scored twice in the sixth.

more years and hit .250 each year, that's a hit a day. Three times 162 is 486 so I'd be close."

Of course, it remains to be seen how much longer Rose will be able to play regularly. Since being signed by the Phillies to a celebrated four-year, $3.2 million contract before the 1979 season, Rose has not missed a game.

411 straight by Aug. 13 — and figures to play them all in 1981, barring injury.

But what about 1982, and 1983, and beyond? Will Rose be able to reach Coors? Will he get the chance to play regularly at 42 or 43? If so, will it be with the Phillies, who have bright minor league prospects waiting in the wings?

There has been much speculation, but Rose is realistic about one thing — some day, his hitting skills will diminish.

"When your reflexes decide to go downhill, there's nothing you can do about it," he said. "Sparky (Anderson, his former manager at Cincinnati) said it doesn't matter how much money you have, or how strong you are, or how big you are, or what color you are. When your reflexes go, there's not a damn thing you can do about it."

Still, in his 22nd year of organized baseball, Rose still has the enthusiasm to play the game, to keep himself ready at all times. Even during the strike, he worked out daily in Cincinnati to keep in shape so his hitting eye would be sharp once the season resumed.

"The man is amazing," said teammate Mike Schmidt. "He always talks about taking care of his body and eating the right things. He carries a terrific message to youngsters about working hard and giving 100 percent all the time. He doesn't smoke or drink. His message is clean."

And Rose has proven to be an adaptable player. On the night of Aug. 9, he became the first player in major league history to start an All-Star game at five positions — first, second and third base and left and right field. In fact, last season he committed just five errors in 1,353 chances, only his second year at first base.

He now has the hit record, but Rose will be anything but bored for the rest of the season.

"I have three things in mind right now — another world championship, winning the batting title and leading the league in hits," he said. "I've got to have things to keep pushing for. People get mad at me when I mention statistics but they're important to me. Certain statistics keep me going."

Rose, who led the National League in hitting on Aug. 13, should he stay atop the pack, he would become the first player to win hitting championships in three decades, having taken the crown in 1968, 1969 and 1973. The strike deprived him a shot at his 11th 200-hit season, which would have extended his major league record.

dropped a foul pop up by Willie Aikens for an error and the Kansas City first baseman followed with a single off starter Jim Clancy, 3-0.

Clancy took second when third baseman Danny Ainge booted a grounder by Frank White and he scored on a single by Jamie Quirk. White taking third. Second baseman Damaso Garcia then nudged a potential double play ball by Darryl Motley, allowing White to score and Quirk to take third.

Quirk tallied the final run of the inning on a fielder's choice by U.L. Washington.

John Mayberry put the Blue Jays in front 2-0 with his 10th homer in the first and the Blue Jays also scored in the fourth on back-to-back singles by Lloyd Moseby and Mayberry and a double-play grounder by Greg Wells.

Chicago 4, New York 1

At New York, Greg Luzinski singled in a run in the first inning and slammed his 11th homer in the sixth and Carlton Fisk and Bill Almon had sacrifice flies to win it for the White Sox. Britt Burns, 7-2, pitched seven shutout innings for the White Sox. Rick Reuschel, 0-1, absorbed his first AL loss.

Kansas City 5, Toronto 3

At Kansas City, Mo., George Brett, belted a two-run homer and Toronto chipped in three errors during a five-run fourth inning to help the Royals.

Rich Gale scattered six hits over 7 2/3 innings, walking none and striking out three to even his record at 5-5. Dan Quisenberry got his 11th save with 1-3 innings of hitless relief.

Hai Mekka opened the fourth with a walk and Brett followed with his third homer of the year to cut Toronto's lead to 3-2. Catcher Ernie Whitton then dropped a foul pop up by Willie Aikens for an error and the Kansas City first baseman followed with a single off starter Jim Clancy, 3-0.

Clancy took second when third baseman Danny Ainge booted a grounder by Frank White and he scored on a single by Jamie Quirk. White taking third. Second baseman Damaso Garcia then nudged a potential double play ball by Darryl Motley, allowing White to score and Quirk to take third.

Lendl captures second Canadian Open crown

MONTREAL (UPI) — Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia defeated American Elliot Teltscher 6-3, 6-2 Monday to win the rain-plagued Canadian Open Tennis Championships for the second straight year.

Most of the 90-minute match was played in a cat-and-mouse style, with neither player anxious to take the offensive.

Teltscher said Lendl played closer to the baseline than he did, and consequently was not forced to run as hard to make returns.

"I didn't do that purposely," Lendl said. "I just play my type of game and don't worry about what the other guy is doing."

Both men have a strong array of passing shots and seemed unwilling to test one another at the net. They displayed quickness in retrieving difficult shots despite having played rain-delayed semifinal matches earlier in the day.

Lendl, 21, broke Teltscher's service three times in the first set, and once in the second. The fourth-seeded Czechoslovak won $32,000 for the victory, while sixth-seeded Teltscher collected $16,000.

Earlier in the day, Lendl rallied back from a first-set loss to defeat Shlomo Glickstein of Israel 5-7, 6-2, 6-4 in a semifinal postponed by rain after one set Sunday, but showed no sign of fatigue despite the day's long outing.

"I was feeling great," he said, "and I told myself I wouldn't mind if I had to run for 10 hours."

Lendl, who moves into fourth place ahead of Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina in the world rankings, played a much stronger match against Teltscher than in his semifinal against Glickstein.

'Big Daddy'

After years of racing dragsters, Garlits may retire

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — "Big Daddy" Don Garlits is a quiet man who makes more noise in six seconds than many can tolerate in a lifetime.

Garlits — a slight, balding 49-year-old man — has been chasing perfection at quarter-mile dragstrips across the nation for 31 years. The Seaford, Fla., resident has earned more than $4 million and has set more records than he can remember.

"I've run 5,000 times at more than 200 miles per hour," Garlits said Sunday before moving up to the starting grid for eliminations in the American Hot Rod Association Western Nationals at Bonneville Raceway.

"This could be my last go-round here," he said while reading his car for the races.

"In January, I'll be 50," said Garlits. "There aren't too many 50-year-old men who climb into one of those things to make a living. I've been thinking about retiring."

The "thing" is an AA-fuel dragster, an awesome machine that churns out more than 2,000 horsepower and is capable of running the 1,320 feet of a dragstrip in less than six seconds, while attaining a top speed near 250 mph.

Founding noise from a supercharged "fueler" — so named because the engines burn nitromethane instead of gasoline — is painfully loud. Spectators lining the Bonneville track automatically clapped hands over their ears in response to the intense wall of sound the machines generated.

"In January, I'll be 50. There aren't too many 50-year-old men who climb into one of those things (AA-fuel dragster) to make a living. I've been thinking about retiring."

"Big Daddy" Don Garlits

Garlits dragsters over the years have been prototypes of the sport, and all have been entirely his creation, including the present monster.

"I designed it and built it. All of it, from the ground up," he said nodding toward the long, black vehicle. "I did the welding, made the panels, built the engine — everything."

"The only thing on this car that I didn't do is the chrome plating, the anodizing and cutting out the letters," Garlits said. "I put the lettering on, but a sign shop made them."

Sunday, Garlits and his pit crew, which includes his brother Ed, rebuilt the dragster engine in about three hours. During the operation, Garlits performed most of the work himself and supervised every detail that he did not personally attend to, right down to testing the 17-inch-wide racing tires — called slicks — and packing the parachute that slows the machine after the run.

Garlits started drag racing in 1950, when technology had little to offer and speeds were below 150 mph for the quarter mile.

Over the years, he has pioneered advances that have pushed speeds higher and times lower. He was the first AA-fuel racer to successfully put the engine behind the driver, an innovation that transformed the sport and made 200 mph possible.

Garlits said he decided to make the drastic change, which had previously been scoffed at by top racers, because of an injury he suffered when the front-mounted engine on his old dragster exploded during a run in 1962. While recuperating, Garlits decided that the front engine dragster was obsolete, for himself anyway.

The extra weight over the rear wheels gave Garlits' machine better traction and allowed for a lighter front end and improved handling. Within a year, Garlits was winning every race he entered, and other racers responded by moving their engines to the rear in order to remain competitive.

"We didn't win with it right away," he said. "It took some refinement and adjustment."

Most of Garlits' winnings have been put back into the cars he races, or have been eaten up by travel expenses.

"I've kept about $1 million," he said. "I put a lot in investments, some real estate and other things."

Garlits' prime competition recently has been Shirley Muldowney, who was last year's drag racing world champion. But when the rubber and nitromethane smoke cleared Sunday, Muldowney and Garlits had both fallen victim to Jerry Ruth of Seattle.

Ruth eliminated Garlits in the second round Sunday by anticipating the electronic starting lights to get a lead that he held despite his slower time through the quarter mile. In drag racing, the car that crosses the finish line first wins, even though the loser may have had a higher speed and a faster time, as happened to Garlits Sunday.

After losing to Ruth, Garlits and crew wasted no time in packing up the dragster, tools, crew and accessories. He was on the way out of Utah before the final race, which came long after midnight.

Garlits will be at the 1981 Nationals, beginning later this week in Spokane, Wash.

Before leaving Utah, Garlits managed to become the first drag racer to break six seconds at Bonneville (5.96 seconds), a feat that earned him $1,000. And even though he lost, his final run set a track speed record.

Sugar Ray begins training for Hearns battle

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Sugar Ray Leonard began preparing Monday in preparation for his $50 million showdown with Thomas Hearns in the welterweight unification bout Sept. 16 in Las Vegas, Nev.

Leonard, the World Boxing Council welterweight champion, sparred four rounds of five minutes each. The first two were against Ray Kates of New Jersey and the second two rounds were against Victor Abraham of Los Angeles. There was brisk action in all four rounds, with Leonard flashing combinations and landing dozens of solid right hands.

Leonard's workout lasted only 35 minutes. He skipped rope and worked briefly on the light bag before leaving Sugar's Gym. More than 300 people jammed the small gym to watch the workout.

Leonard, who also holds the World Boxing Association's junior middleweight crown, said he would knock out Hearns — the WBA welterweight champion — "whenver he decides to cooperate with me."

The workouts will take place daily for the next two weeks before Leonard departs for Las Vegas, where he will train for two more weeks.

Leonard has been guaranteed $8 million for the fight with Hearns guaranteed $6 million. But the purses could go as high as $13 million for Leonard and more than $10 million for Hearns in what will be the richest fight in the history of boxing, with the total take from closed circuit television and the live gate approaching $40 million.

'Snake's' return doubtful If Stabler came back, Biles would consider it

HOUSTON (UPI) — Houston Coach Ed Biles said Monday he is not putting out the welcome mat for Kenny Stabler to return from retirement as the team's quarterback, but he hasn't shut the door on him either.

"I would have to have a long talk with him," Biles said. "Under the right conditions — him wanting to come back — then I would like him to come back to play football."

Stabler, 35, announced through his agent on July 24 that he planned to end his 12-year career and retire from his $320,000 per year job. He never appeared at the Oilers' training camp in San Antonio, Texas, and no one in the front office has spoken to him since before his retirement was announced.

"If it's a situation where someone wants to come back because he financially needs money and his heart isn't into the game, then, under those conditions I would not be interested in anybody (like that) on this football team," Biles said. "But if the situation were that he still has a desire to play and wants to win a championship and compete for the No. 1 quarterback position, then I'd have to talk to him."

"Right now, Gifford (Nelms) is the No. 1 quarterback and I don't see anything that would make me change my mind who will be No. 1 quarterback," Biles said during his weekly press conference. "There has to be a reason why he decided not to come back, but I haven't spoken to him."

Biles said he plans to put Stabler on the retired reserve list Tuesday by 2 p.m. MDT, when he cuts the team from the present 62 players to 60.

Biles said he has spoken to Stabler's agent, Henry Pitts of Selma, Ala., and Pitts asked him "very leading questions."

"He asked me 'how long can you wait?' and 'what is the last possible minute?' I'm not sure if he's asking for his sake or the Snake's sake," Biles said.

"I think the agent wants something to happen, but no one here has talked to Kenny," he said.

Pitts has refused to give Oilers officials Stabler's phone number in Gulf Shores, where he is said to be fishing.

Although Biles said he has new first, second and third-string quarterbacks, he credited Stabler with having a top-notch arm.

Beer group starts ownership of Busch

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Anheuser-Busch Cos. Inc. Monday took ownership of Busch Stadium and other properties, assuring control of parking fees and concessions the company said it needs to bolster the brewery-owned St. Louis Cardinals baseball team.

Brewery officials elected a new six-member board of Civic Center Redevelopment Corp., from which Anheuser-Busch wrested control of the stadium, four parking garages, Stouffer's Riverfront Towers hotel and other downtown properties.

Civic Center stockholders ousted Charles J. Dougherty, who used his position as corporation chairman in an unsuccessful fight against the takeover. Dougherty is chairman of Union Electric Co.

Dougherty had fostered a bidding competition that forced Anheuser-Busch to pay about $15 million more for Civic Center than it originally offered. Fred L. Kuhlmann, Anheuser-Busch vice chairman, was elected Civic Center chairman.

The brewery's takeover was approved by a nearly unanimous vote of Civic Center stockholders, officials said.

Darrell Porter may return Wednesday

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Catcher Darrell Porter, who has been out of action since May 7 with a potentially career-ending shoulder injury, may return to the St. Louis Cardinals' lineup as early as Wednesday, Manager Whitey Herzog said Monday.

"I didn't think I'd be anywhere close this soon," Porter said.

"When we left before the strike, I felt pretty bad."

Porter, 29, was forced to leave the lineup May 7 with a torn rotator cuff in his right shoulder that caused severe pain and prohibited throwing. Doctors prescribed rest, rather than surgery, for the injury.

Throwing from home plate to second base causes "absolutely no pain at all, not even the normal spring training stuff," Porter said.

"I'm OK if I can get into the proper throwing position," he said. "What scares you is a pitch out of your normal area. You have to throw the ball wherever you get it. What I'd have to do is be ready and expect a guy to run on every pitch."

Trainer Gene Giesemann said Porter has "good strength and a good range of motion" in his throwing arm.

"He's still apprehensive, and he should be," Giesemann said of Porter. "We went through a great deal of pain. Any twinge is a psychological factor to overcome."

NL picks Rose as top weekly player

NEW YORK (UPI) — Philadelphia's Pete Rose, the new National League all-time hit leader, Monday was named NL Player of the Week, edging slugging teammate Mike Schmidt.

Rose, who broke Stan Musial's record with his 3,631st hit last Monday night, also moved into a first for seventh place with Tris Speaker on the all-time list for runs scored with 1,881. Rose had nine hits for the week to maintain his league-leading pace.

Schmidt, who leads the majors with 18 homers, hit .370 with four home runs and six RBI for the week. The top pitcher considered for the week was Atlanta reliever Rick Camp, who had a win and a save and has not allowed a run in his last 23 innings.

Seattle's Paciorek tops AL players

NEW YORK (UPI) — Torrid Seattle All-Star Tom Paciorek, whose .429 batting average helped vault him to first place in the Western Division, Monday was named American League Player of the Week.

The veteran outfielder went 15-for-35 as Seattle improved to 6-2 to take over first place in the second half of the resumed season. Paciorek raised his average from .328 to a league-leading .343 and collected 29 total bases, scored eight runs, slugged .429 and had an on-base percentage of .429. He notched two game-winning RBI to raise his season total to nine.

Other prime candidates included California's Bobby Grich, who hit .500 with five home runs and Milwaukee's Cecil Cooper, who batted .406 with five doubles and four homers.

Couple wins Jerome club tournament

JEROME — Kent White and Mike Thompson recorded a 131 two-day total to win a two-man best ball golf tournament at the Jerome Country Club Sunday.

White and Thompson had a 64 Saturday and followed with a 67 to win the championship flight low greens title.

Ed Peterson and Jerry Dellinger recorded a 58-61-119 to win the championship net event. Rod Gano and Bill Koch combined for a 68-70-138 to win the first flight gross division while Steve Grupe and Greg Haler won the net honors with a 68-57-119.

The tourney consisted of a two-man scramble on Saturday and a two-man best ball on Sunday. Eighty teams participated.

Jerome Country Club will hold a four-man scramble Sept. 12-13.

The results:

Championship gross — Kent White and Mike Thompson 64-67-131, net — Ed Peterson and Jerry Dellinger 58-61-119.

First flight gross — Rod Gano and Bill Koch 68-70-138, net — Steve Grupe and Greg Haler 62-57-119.

Second flight gross — Chuck Litterman and Al Schmidt 68-71-139, net — Bill Toot and Chuck Schmidt 64-68-118.

Third flight gross — Randy Hesterman and Hedy Treder 70-77-147, net — Wally Kelly and Larry Harnack 63-73-136.

Fourth flight gross — John Conover and Larry Higgins 72-76-148, net — Ernie Hesterman and Ryan Robertson 64-64-118.

Midair crash dumps planes in downtown

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Two small planes collided in flight Monday and crashed in downtown San Jose.

One hit a parked car in a parking lot, the other smashed into a patch of shrubbery.

One person was killed and two were reported injured in the planes, officials said.

No one was reported hit or injured on the ground in the busy downtown district near the city's main library.

Witnesses told reporters at the scene the two planes were on landing approaches to San Jose Municipal Airport, one flying directly above the other, when they collided.

First reports said the two planes were under visual flight rules. It was not known immediately if they were under guidance of the strike-bound air traffic control system.

One plane crashed about 50 feet from the city's main library, apparently clipping a corner of the building as it came down, witnesses said.

The other plunged to earth about 25 feet from a two-story apartment house, landing on the parked car in a city employees' parking lot.

Assistant Fire Chief Bob Delgado said at the scene an air crash in the vicinity had been feared for some time since it lies directly below one of the airport's approaches.

One of our concerns is the flight path does go directly through the downtown area," he said. "It was predicted that at one time we would end up with this type of crash. Fortunately, it happened in such a way that the wreckage did not land on buildings."

"I thought they were awfully close together so I kept watching," one fire official said. "I watched until they actually collided."

Kleindienst perjury trial begins today

PHOENIX (UPI) — Former U.S. Attorney General Richard Kleindienst goes on trial today on perjury charges.

The jury that will be screened to determine if any are prejudiced against ex-President Richard Nixon or his cabinet members.

Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Gerald Strick, who will preside over the trial, said Monday the court wanted to select jurors "who are unblemished by opinions they cannot shake."

Among the questions considered by Strick for inclusion in a written questionnaire to be given the 75 members of the jury panel were, "What is your opinion of Richard Milhous Nixon and what is the basis of that opinion?" and "What is your opinion of those who served in Richard Milhous Nixon's cabinet or served as his advisers?"

A key witness in the case is expected to be Joseph Hauser, a twice-convicted swindler involved in the theft of $7 million from the Teamsters union's health and welfare fund.

Kleindienst allegedly lied about his relationship with Hauser during a State Bar of Arizona investigation into his legal representation of Hauser's corporate dealings. Hauser currently is serving a 30-month sentence federal prison sentence.

Kleindienst, now practicing law in Tucson, Ariz., was indicted by a state grand jury in April on charges of lying when questioned by State Bar investigators in 1978 and in December of 1980.

Kleindienst, 57, has repeatedly denied any wrongdoing in his relations with Hauser and has denied he lied to the state bar investigators. He blamed the allegations on the personal vindictiveness of a bar counsel, David Brauer, who headed the organization's investigation of Kleindienst.

A year after resigning as attorney general, Kleindienst pleaded guilty in federal court in Washington to a misdemeanor charge of failing to testify "fully and accurately" before the Senate Judiciary Committee during his confirmation hearings on his nomination as attorney general. The violation occurred when he was questioned about a payoff scandal involving International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

Kleindienst was fined $100 and was given a one-month suspended jail sentence on that charge. He also was censured by the state bar.

As a result of the latest investigation, the state bar asked the Arizona Supreme Court to suspend Kleindienst from the practice of law for one year, but the court has not acted. Conviction of Kleindienst on the perjury charges would subject him to disbarment.

Man finds child's body in headgate near river

RIGBY (UPI) — Jefferson County sheriff's deputies examined dental records and clothing Monday in an attempt to identify the body of a boy found Sunday evening at the Burgess headgates of the Snake River.

Sgt. Blair Olsen said officials were certain the boy was one of two brothers who drowned in a rafting accident July 2 near the Big Feeder Canal. He said Gabriel Tyler, 5, and his 3-year-old brother, Eben, were unable to swim to shore although other family members survived the accident.

Olsen said officials had contacted the boys' parents, Tina and Richard Tyler, in Pennsylvania. Tyler had been stationed with the U.S. Navy at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, but transferred to the East after the accident, he said.

He said officials were hoping the parents could identify the body by being given a description of dental work and clothing in a telephone call with Jefferson County authorities.

The body was found six miles downstream from the site of the accident by Harold T. Barnes. Barnes was fishing near the Burgess headgates when he discovered the body at about 7 p.m. Sunday, Olsen said.

Search intensifies for man missing near Brownlee Dam

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. intensified its ground and air search near the Hoot's Canyon National Recreation Area Monday in hopes of locating a Meridian man missing since Friday.

Bureau of Land Management officials said they also dispatched volunteers into the recreation area to hike 40 miles along the Brownlee Reservoir in search of Art Zimmerman, 62, while a boat search of the reservoir also was ordered.

Law enforcement authorities, meanwhile, issued an 11-state alert for the missing man, and a posse organized by the Baker County, Ore., Sheriff's Department moved through rugged mountains in the area.

The Idaho Power consultant and former director of the BLM in New Mexico met with mining officials at the BLM's Baker office Friday, and left the office, saying he might drive along Brownlee Reservoir recreation area, said Idaho BLM Director Bob Ruffington.

But he said Zimmerman did not return to his Meridian home by 5 p.m. Friday as he had planned.

Idaho Power officials said two retired utility night-owl agents, Doug Farley and Darrel Smith, left Boise Monday to talk with long-time residents in the remote area in hopes of finding someone who had seen Zimmerman.

Logan-Lanham, the utility's vice president for public affairs, vowed a "relentless" effort to locate Zimmerman "as long as necessary."

He said Zimmerman was scheduled to drive his car from Baker to Brownlee on Friday as part of his consulting assignment to develop a land-use policy and management plan for Idaho Power.

Boise Interagency Fire Center chief Jack Wilson said about 40 BLM rangers and a troop of Explorer Scouts from Nampa were bused to Brownlee Reservoir Monday and hiked from Huntington, Ore., to Richland, Ore. Workers in a boat from the BLM's Baker river patrol also scanned the shores, he said.

"They tell me there's about 500 places (along the roadway beside the reservoir) where a car could go off and never be seen again," Wilson said. "They're looking for signs that somebody might have gone off."

LT. Gary Carr with the Ada County Sheriff's Department said his agency had issued an alert to law enforcement authorities in 11 western states and had assigned a detective to the case Monday.

Rapist given life sentence

SPOKANE (UPI) — Frederick Hill rapist, who terrorized the city's women for more than two years, was sentenced to life in prison Monday for the rape of four women.

Judge George Shields imposed the sentence on Coe, a dapper former real estate salesman and disc jockey.

The husky, square-jawed Coe stood erect and stared straight ahead as the judge handed him sentences totaling 77 years (20-25, 30 and life minimum 12).

Shields ordered that the sentences run consecutively.

He further ordered Coe jailed immediately without bond. Coe had been free on his own recognizance.

The actual time Coe will spend in prison is up to the State Board of Prison Terms and Paroles.

In denying bond, Shields said research taught him that rapists "were violent people who tended to escalate their activity, beginning with the element of surprise, progressing to intimidation, threats and ending with intentional or unintentional killing."

"Mr. Coe's problems fit this pattern, dating back to as far as 1971 when, during the course of a second degree robbery, he rubbed the body of the woman whose apartment was being burglarized. That led to peeping-tom behavior, involvement with a young boy, second degree rape and finally first degree rape."

At the time of his arrest police believed they were looking for two men who committed 20 or more assaults on women over a two-year period.

When Coe was arrested in March and the trial got underway, six women pointed to Coe as their assailant and the jury returned guilty verdicts on four of those attacks.

Shields, in a concession to the defense, said he would recommend to the parole board that Coe undergo tests to determine if he is a sexual psychopath.

The judge's recommendation came after he denied a proposal to use his judicial discretion to unilaterally commit Coe for treatment instead of to prison. Shields said such a recommendation had to come from the Prosecutor's office.

Defense attorney Carl Maxey brought a psychiatrist to the stand who testified Coe, in his opinion, was a sexual psychopath.

Dr. Robert Wetzler testified that Coe admitted one of the rapes to him. Some observers believe the admission could place his legal appeal in jeopardy.

After the sentencing, Defense attorney Roger Giger, who was main counsel, termed the sentencing as "harsh."

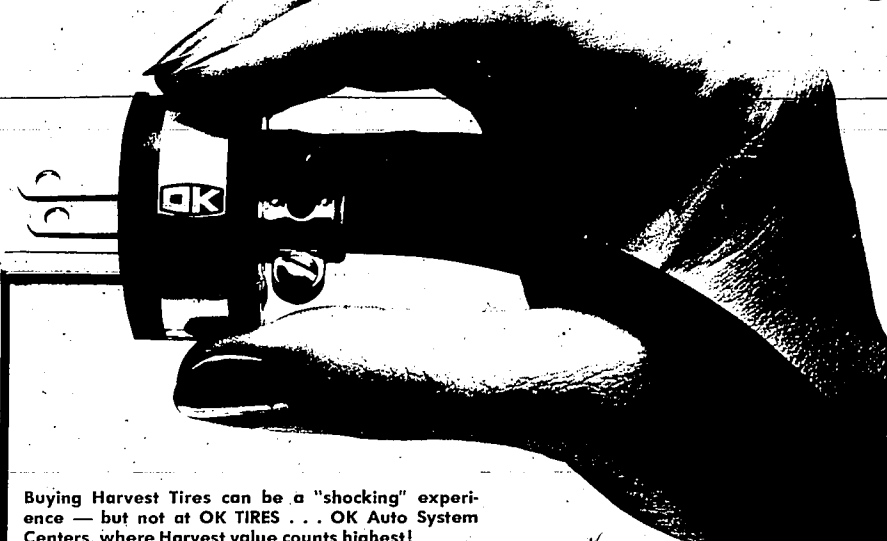

Police raid shops for paraphernalia

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — Ogden Police detectives have raided two stores where they seized a large quantity of what officers said was drug paraphernalia under Utah's new statutes outlawing the sale of any items that can be considered for use with controlled substances.

Detective Joe O'Keefe said the department wants the courts to make a decision on whether the law is enforceable.

Bani-Sadr claims America instigated the hostage crisis

PARIS (UPI) — The United States instigated the American hostage crisis former Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said Monday.

Bani-Sadr charged the move was made in a bid to return a dictatorship to Iran and destroy the Islamic revolution.

Bani-Sadr also said in an interview with the newspaper Le Monde he believed it is eventually possible for the monarchy to return to power in Iran because of present unstable conditions there.

"The hostage affair was used by the Americans to refloat dictatorship in Iran," the newspaper quoted him as saying. Bani-Sadr apparently was referring to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini as dictator, although he did not mention the religious leader by name.

Bani-Sadr, ousted from office by Khomeini in June, said he is writing a book explaining "how the Americans have succeeded from the time the hostage affair began to change things in Iran, and to create from revolution a counter-revolution.

"I consider it is this same policy which has installed dictatorship in Iran and helped the election of (President) Reagan in the United States," he said.

Bani-Sadr, granted political asylum in France after his July 29 escape from Tehran, said he had always been against the hostages' seizure "because I believed it had been instigated by the American administration for its own ends, to destroy our revolution."

But he said he had also opposed release of the 52 hostages, who were finally freed last Jan. 20 after 444 days in captivity when the United States provided financial and political guarantees.

He said his criticism of the release agreement was one of the reasons he was ousted.

Bomb stirs anti-U.S. feeling

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The neutron weapons issue has increased anti-American sentiment among the ruling Social Democrats.

And it has placed a new strain on Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's coalition with the Free Democrats as a result.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the Free Democratic leader, is so concerned about the growing anti-American movement that he openly criticized the Social Democratic reaction to President Reagan's decision to manufacture the neutron weapon.

"One should be able among partners and friends to express an opinion over decisions without taking an anti-American attitude," he said in a West German radio interview Sunday.

"In this connection I wish that some of the tones I heard recently — mainly from the Social Democrats — had had more objectivity."

On the same day, Social Democrat official Egon Bahr in a speech in West Berlin accused U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger of having "arrogance of power" for saying the United States alone would decide what arms American troops should have.

Bahr, a confidant of former Chancellor Willy Brandt, the Social Democratic chairman, is editor of the party weekly newspaper and is the party's disarmament expert.

Bahr demanded that West Germany be consulted on arms questions, saying, "If America can decide what its interests can demand, we can decide what our interests demand."

Helmut Kohl, the chairman of the opposition Christian Democrats, told a party meeting Monday Bahr and some other Social Democrats are trying to change West Germany's foreign policy.

He called on Schmidt and Brandt to take measures to halt the "open or barely veiled hostility toward the United States and its president."

The Free Democrats were so concerned over the anti-American campaign and disputes with the Social Democrats over the 1982 austerity budget that over the weekend they leaked a public opinion poll on the possibility of a coalition between themselves and the Christian Democrats.

The poll showed the percentage of Free Democratic voters who favor a coalition with the Social Democrats had fallen from 80 percent to 50 percent.

Needs U.S. understanding

Israel hopes to be arms merchant

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel hopes to double its arms sales to more than $3 billion in the next four years.

But that is contingent on getting U.S. approval to act as its "proxy" in dealing with politically sensitive areas, Economic Affairs Minister Yacov Meridor said Monday.

Meridor, a confidante of Prime Minister Menachem Begin, repeatedly stressed in a 35-minute speech to Israel Bond organization officials the need for Israel to become independent of U.S. aid through increased investments, productivity and exports — especially high technology items such as weapons.

He said Israel sold about $1.25 billion worth of weapons in 1980, including about $35 million worth of anti-tank weapons to Switzerland.

"We consider that on the road to our economic independence, we can increase in the next four years the weaponry exports by an additional $2 billion," he said.

Meridor emphasized that much would depend on Washington's attitude since many Israeli weapons have vital U.S.-made components. The Israeli-manufactured Kfir jet-fighter, for example, is powered by a General Electric engine.

"We are going to ask you, the United States government, not to compete with us in arms," Meridor said. "We are very strong in arms production — not like the United States but for the Third World and even for Europe, we are starting to be strong."

"We are going to say to them, the Americans, 'Don't compete with us in Taiwan. Don't compete with us in South Africa. Don't compete with us in the Caribbean or in other countries where you couldn't directly do it... Let us do it,'" he said. "I ever use the expression 'You sell the ammunition and equipment by proxy. Israel will be your proxy.' And this would be worked out with a certain agreement with the United States where we will have certain markets... which will be left for us."

In an interview with an Israeli newspaper a year ago, former Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zippori said Israel increased its arms exports from $250 million in 1977 to $750 million in 1979.

While Israel has found no buyers for the Kfir jetfighter to date, its sales in sophisticated arms include the Shafrir air-to-air missile, the Gabriel sea-to-air missile, high velocity artillery shells and cluster bombs, targeting radar and small arms.

Salvador troops launch offensive

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — About 3,000 government troops backed by fighter planes and helicopters attacked Monday on a chunk of northeastern El Salvador reportedly seized by leftist guerrillas.

Guerrilla saboteurs blacked out San Salvador and all other towns in the central part of the country by blowing up a bridge on the Pan American Highway that shut off traffic on the nation's main east-west road, authorities said.

The Defense Ministry continued to refuse all comments on the fighting in northeastern El Salvador province where leftist rebels, bent on overthrowing the U.S.-backed military-junta, reportedly launched a major offensive last week.

But residents of the provincial capital of San Francisco Gotera reported thousands of troops aboard trucks and jeeps left the city Saturday on the road to the rebel-claimed town of Perquin, about 16 miles north of Gotera.

The residents, who estimated the army's strength at about 3,000 men, said U.S.-made UH-1 "Huey" helicopter troop carriers and French-made Fouga Magistere fighter-bombers flew cover on the column as it left Gotera.

The guerrillas' Perquin offensive, their biggest since an unsuccessful January insurrection, appeared to be part of a plan to set up a "liberated zone" in the mountainous northern sector of Morazan province, observers said.

While the army controls most large villages and towns in Morazan, the Peoples Revolutionary Army, one of five guerrilla groups battling the junta, moves freely through the countryside and often ambushes army patrols on roads.

Officials at the government-owned electricity company said guerrilla sappers blew up two high-voltage towers Monday morning and blacked out San Salvador as well as 10 other cities and towns in central El Salvador.

The blackout, which had not been repaired more than five hours later, forced a total shutdown of the capital's industrial zone and triggered major traffic jams because of the lack of traffic signals, witnesses said.

Police said a car carrying guerrilla bombs exploded, apparently identically, in downtown San Salvador Sunday night, shattering windows in several nearby businesses. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

Judicial authorities reported another 22 deaths and 100 injuries in the political violence that Catholic church officials estimate have claimed 22,000 lives in the past 20 months.

*Private Polish vendors threaten new strike

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Poland's private fruit and vegetable vendors Monday announced a wildcat strike to protest government price restrictions.

Meanwhile, Solidarity leaders called their second emergency session in a week.

The strike by the nation's estimated 10,000 greengrocers and the meeting of the union's 10-member presidium in the southern region capital of Katowice both were set for today.

The union meeting was called to discuss plans for a two-day nationwide newspaper strike beginning Wednesday to protest a recent anti-Solidarity media campaign.

The fruit and vegetable vendors without would force shorted-out weary Poles to buy fruits and vegetables from state shops, which generally have inferior products.

The private vendors are forbidden by law from selling their goods above certain levels and unlicensed militiamen check markets for price violators, who can be sentenced to up to five years imprisonment.

But the price limits often are too low for the merchants to make any profit. Apples, for example, have a price limit of 50 cents per pound while the average wholesale price farmers charge is 69 cents per pound.

The emergency Solidarity meeting in Katowice will be the union's second extraordinary session in a week. The union leadership ended three days of meetings in Gdansk last week by urging greater unity to solve the nation's problems.

But the vendors dispute and the threatened nationwide newspaper strike were two major exceptions to a trend toward a political truce in Poland.

Since Solidarity's leadership appealed to the nation last week for unity, tensions between the government and union has eased.

Solidarity and the Catholic church played a key role in persuading a student group to call off a series of week-long protest marches that had been scheduled to begin Monday.

The marches were called to protest the arrests of five anti-Soviet activists.

Trials for three of the five, accused of anti-state activities, resumed in Warsaw Monday just hours after the protest marches were suspended.

About 50 supporters of the outlawed Confederation of Independent Poland were in court for the resumption of the trial and applauded defendant Leszek Moculski when he said the authorities should be the ones on trial.

"I accuse you," he said to the court. "We are not accused, but someone else is accused and we shall prove who is guilty."

The trial is expected to last several weeks, perhaps several months.

Another IRA inmate joins Maze Prison hunger strike

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — An Irish Republican Army inmate Monday joined six other convicts in the hunger strike at the Maze jail that has already claimed nine lives in a campaign for political prisoner status.

Britain's Northern Ireland Office said Jackie McMullan, 25, refused breakfast as the condition of hunger striker Michael Devine deteriorated in the 57th day of his fast.

McMullan, who joined the outlawed

IRA in 1971 and is in fifth year of a life sentence for the attempted murder of policemen and possession of firearms, replaced Tom McElwee who starved to death Aug. 8 after refusing food for 62 days.
