

Twin Falls' mayor won't seek new term

TWIN FALLS — Mayor Hank Woodall announced Monday that he will not seek re-election to the Twin Falls City Council.

Woodall is one of three Twin Falls City Council members whose terms expire this year. The other two members, Emery Felt and Mary McCuskey, have announced they will run for election in November.

"I've been here 9½ years," said Monday. "I've enjoyed it, but I realize you can't be here forever."

He was appointed to the council in 1972, won election to two four-year terms and was elected mayor by the council in January, 1980. The City Council will name one of its seven members mayor on Jan. 1.

Woodall said highlights during his term have included sewage treatment plant expansion of the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Airport and signing of an agreement for the city to begin widening of Blue Lakes Boulevard north of the airport.

Senate may oust Williams

Ethics committee says Democrat's Abscam involvement 'repugnant'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Ethics Committee unanimously voted Monday to expel Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J.

If he is ousted by the full Senate, Williams would be the first senator expelled since the Civil War.

The committee said he should lose his seat because his Abscam involvement was "ethically repugnant."

Williams vowed to fight expulsion. Meeting with reporters after the recommendation was made, Williams, the only senator involved in Abscam and the only convicted participant remaining in Congress, said:

"I certainly feel in my heart and I know in my heart I have not done anything that warrants resignation or expulsion from the U.S. Senate."

"I have indicated I am not going to resign. I am going to advance every opportunity that is before me to show clearly my innocence. This is a significant step in furtherance of my opportunity," Williams said.

Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., chairman of the panel, said none of the committee members enjoyed the task of voting to expel their colleague, but he declared, "This committee has made a fair judgment."

The vote followed seven hours of arguments by lawyers for Williams and the committee behind closed doors, and followed the conviction of Williams on bribery and conspiracy charges.

Wallop, surrounded by reporters, read aloud the statement approved by the committee, which said in part:

"The Ethics Committee unanimously finds, based on the evidence before it, that Senator Williams' conduct was ethically repugnant to the point of warranting his expulsion from the U.S. Senate.

"The Ethics Committee incorporates the findings of the special counsel... that does recommend that Senator Williams be expelled."

The committee also recommended that the full Senate proceed toward final disposition of its resolution only after rulings are made on the appeals, not before October.

Williams called it a victory that the panel recommended postponing the Senate debate until after his appeal.

His wife, Jeanette, sat by the side of the 23-year Senate veteran. Both were dry-eyed.

The last member expelled from the Senate was Benjamin Stark, a Democrat from Oregon. He was ousted in 1862 on grounds of disloyalty.

Williams, former chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, was found guilty May 1 on nine counts of bribery and conspiracy.

Since then, Williams has taken little part in the Senate. He has avoided floor debate, walking quietly and quickly into the chamber to vote, then departing.

Reporters had asked Wallop if he thought Williams should resign. "That is a matter that only Senator Williams can come to grips with," he replied.

He said the committee is "in no way hanging its recommendation" on Pratt's ruling in the appeal, but that it could provide the Senate "with matters of mitigation it may want to consider."

Whatever the ruling, he said, "it does not change what the committee is recommending to the Senate," but might change how the Senate votes on the committee recommendation.

Voyager snaps Saturn moonlet during approach

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Voyager 2, speeding toward its closest encounter with Saturn, photographed a hockey puck-shaped moon Monday, but it found no sign of any moonlets within the planet's rings.

The unmanned, explorer spacecraft was scheduled to come closest to Saturn at 9:24 p.m. MDT today.

Scientists had theorized that an route, it would find that some of the gaps in the planet's spectacular rings — formed by bands of icy chunks orbiting the planet — were created by moonlets, sweeping clear paths like cosmic snowplows.

"We now find ourselves at a point where we had hoped not to be and are looking desperately for some other explanation," said Dr. Bradford Smith, head of the spacecraft imaging team.

The spacecraft's cameras have completed surveys of two of the gaps, including the 300-mile wide Cassini division, visible through telescopes from Earth, and found no moonlet big enough to cause such a gap, Smith said.

"For the moment, we have to rule out the possibility that those two gaps are created by a single embedded satellite," Smith said.

Voyager 2 Monday returned the first good pictures of Hyperion, one of Saturn's 17 known moons, discovering an object that looked at first like an irregular cylinder, a lumpy potato or a battered beer can, measuring 220 miles long by 130 miles wide.

Smith said later photos showed it "starting to look more like a hockey puck." But he added "if there is a long axis, it's not oriented in the direction of either Saturn or the orbital plane — so we are dealing with a peculiar object which may have some rather peculiar mechanics associated with it."

Scientists were wondering how Hyperion could assume such an unstable shape without breaking up, speculating perhaps it had been knocked askew by a large and relatively recent impact.

Voyager 2 crossed Saturn's bow shock, the point where the solar wind pressure against the planet's magnetic field, at 9:08 a.m. MDT Monday, said Dr. Edward C. Stone, project scientist.

If the rings are not separated by the orbits of the unfound moonlets, they may be self-separating, Stone said. Researchers were looking into a theory that under some circumstances the ring particles may bounce against each other every five to 10 hours, thinning out gaps that way.

The spacecraft, which was launched four years ago, was scheduled to come within 656,507 miles at a speed of 30,177 mph at 6 a.m. MDT today. At its closest, the Voyager 2 will strike past Saturn at more than 43,000 mph at a distance of 63,000 miles.

Pay too low

Twin Falls County deputy sheriff hands in his badge

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Monday brought the first casualty of the Twin Falls County Commission's rejection of sheriff deputies' requests for higher salaries.

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Deputy Alan Bradley has tendered his resignation effective Sept. 4. Bradley cited as reasons the sheriff's department salaries being 30 percent to 40 percent below wage scales offered by comparably-sized departments and an "unacceptable" retirement program.

Bradley, a two-year veteran of the sheriff's office, said he plans to leave law enforcement entirely and will begin work as a salesman for a Twin Falls car dealership. The deputy, who also worked two years for the Kimberly Police Department until moving to the sheriff's office in 1979, said his decision to leave law enforcement reflects difficulties facing many of his co-workers.

For many, earning a "reasonable wage" in law enforcement requires moving to another city, something the deputies are reluctant to do, he said.

"To get a decent wage in law enforcement, you have to go to another city like Pocatello or Boise and I don't want to move," Bradley said, adding the choice was not an easy one. "Four years in law enforcement was just about everything I had."

Deputies had asked the county commissioners to increase their salaries by at least 20 percent in order to bring them up to par with similar-sized departments in the state. But the commissioners, citing fiscal restraints, declined to give the deputies more than the 7-percent salary increase being proposed for all county employees.

In light of inflationary pressures, deputies say they can't make it on their present salaries. Instead, they are required to rely on additional income from their spouses or seek secondary employment themselves, deputies say.

Bradley said his salary "just won't stretch that far, $700 and some odd dollars a month."

Sheriff James Munn said he was disappointed to lose a fully-trained officer. He noted Bradley just recently completed a diving certification class thereby giving him skills that would have been useful in the sheriff's search and rescue operations.

"The sheriff's office is not only losing a good officer but the whole law enforcement field in Magic Valley is losing a good officer," Munn said.

But Munn added he wasn't surprised about Bradley's resignation in light of the low pay. "The sheriff said he believes several of his more experienced deputies are also thinking about leaving the department for the same reasons."

"I think this is leading to what I've been talking about."

White House, Congress ready to fight over Saudi arms deal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration, facing strong opposition on Capitol Hill and a defiant Israel, announced Monday it will notify Congress Sept. 9 of the planned sale of a controversial arms package to Saudi Arabia. James Buckley, undersecretary of state for security assistance, said the package of six advanced surveillance aircraft — AWACS — and other arms poses no danger to Israel.

The Israelis charged the surveillance aircraft will strip it bare of its military secrets and pledged to defeat the entire arms package, estimated at $8.5 billion.

The entire package — of which $5.8 billion is the cost of the AWACS — will begin to be delivered to Saudi Arabia within 48 months after it gets past Congress. The planes will be maintained by U.S. personnel stationed in Saudi Arabia to avoid "unauthorized" use of the aircraft.

"The president believes that this sale is essential to the protection of vital U.S. interests," Buckley said. "The arrangement under which it will be made will enhance the security of all friendly states without jeopardizing the interests of any of them."

After Sept. 9, Congress will have 50 days to disapprove the sale. If both houses don't veto it, the package will go through. But Republicans and Democrats in the House and Senate have warned the administration the package will have a rough time.

The sophisticated, computer-laden $127 million Airborne Warning and Control System aircraft is a flying radar station that can detect hostile aircraft at a range of 250 miles and, direct interceptors against them.

The Saudis also are buying training for personnel to run the planes, maintenance and spare parts, and technical data, bringing the cost of each plane to $1.16 billion.

The administration said the E-3A Sentry aircraft is vital to protect the vast oilfields of Saudi Arabia, the chief petroleum exporter to the United States. But congressional opponents say it could threaten the security of Israel, which will employ its immense political clout in an effort to kill the package.

A senior administration official, briefing reporters on the requirement he not be identified further, said there were clear restrictions on the use of the AWACS — no third country may have access to the data it collects but the United States will have such access; the physical security of the planes is required; and there are "operational restrictions" on their use.

The official would not disclose the operational restrictions but said it would be foolish for the Saudis to fly them close to the Israeli border.

"The longevity of the aircraft would be particularly short-lived," the official said. Despite the sophistication of the aircraft, he said they could not overwhelm Israel.

"To say that it will strip Israel bare is frankly a little exaggerated," the official said. "It will do nothing of the sort."

The administration told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that on Sept. 9 it will begin the 30-day informal notification period to Congress of the arms package sale. This is immediately followed by a 30-day period in which both houses may kill the package by a majority vote.

A majority vote in both houses is necessary to kill the proposal — something Congress has never done.

Spokesmen for the Senate and House warned President Reagan in June that a majority of both houses oppose the sale of the AWACS, extra fuel tanks and air-to-air missiles for 62 F-15s the Saudis have already bought.

Reps. Clarence Long, D-Md., and Norman Lent, R-N.Y., said 224 members of the House have cosponsored a resolution stating their opposition to the sale.

"At least another 75 members tell me there is no way they would vote for the package," Long said on June 24.

Grand jury indicts Reagan's assailant

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John W. Hinckley Jr., the 26-year-old drifter who may have been motivated by a crush on a teenage actress, was indicted Monday on charges of trying to kill President Reagan and wounding three others.

If convicted, Hinckley could face up to life imprisonment for attempting to kill the president and assault with intent to kill while armed.

A federal grand jury returned a 13-count indictment against Hinckley on charges he tried to assassinate Reagan nearly five months ago as the president left a Washington hotel.

"On March 30, 1981, within the District of Columbia, John W. Hinckley Jr. did attempt to kill Ronald Reagan by shooting him with a pistol," the indictment said.

Hinckley, the son of a wealthy Colorado oilman, also was charged with assault with the intent to kill Secret Service Agent Timothy McCarthy. White House press secretary James Brady and District of Columbia police officer Thomas Delahanty.

A Justice Department spokesman said Hinckley will be arraigned at 8 a.m. MDT Friday, when he will enter a plea before U.S. District Judge baughton Parker.

The White House had no comment on the indictment. The president is vacationing at his California ranch. Hinckley's family has hired the prestigious Washington law firm headed by Edward Bennett Williams to represent him. His mental state at the time of the shooting and the question of his sanity are expected to play a key role in his case.

Reagan was hit in the lung and the other three men suffered wounds of varying severity in the hall of 22-caliber bullets.

Brady remains hospitalized recovering from a massive head wound. He has undergone four operations to repair the destruction caused by the explosive-type "Devastator" bullet that ripped through his brain. A hospital spokesman said Brady was in good condition Monday.

Law enforcement officials believe that Hinckley may have been driven by an obsession for teenage movie star Jodie Foster, who played a young prostitute in the movie "Taxi Driver." Its plot involves a spurned lover who stalks a political candidate.

Authorities said they found a letter indicating he was trying to impress the young actress.

Fallen crane lies across construction site

Crane collapses, injures 5

NEW YORK (UPI) — A giant 125-ton crane quivered, then toppled over "slow motion-like," crashing into a luxury building under construction on Manhattan's East Side and injuring five workers.

But the crane narrowly missed smashing into a nearby occupied apartment building and dozens of other laborers escaped harm because of warning shouts from a colleague and the skillful manipulations of the truck-crane operator.

The injured were taken to Bellevue Hospital. The worst injury suffered was a broken leg.

Electricians on the ground and several carpenters jumped from the first floor of the uncompleted building as the massive crane silently descended.

The operator, who was unidentified, and another man on the crane jumped off seconds before it crashed into the wood-encased concrete foundation of what is to be a 32-story luxury condominium. They were not injured.

Polish official assails U.S.

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — A Polish security official Monday charged U.S. and other Western spies are infiltrating the country in an attempt to bring down communist rule and a defiant Solidarity union branch called two new strikes.

State television said the one-hour transport strike set for today in the city of Radom and a one-hour general warning strike throughout the central province on Friday signaled a new "rise in tension."

Additional labor unrest came from the continuation of a week-long newspaper strike in the city of Olsztyn and a decision by workers at the nation's largest steel mill to hold a referendum to decide whether to oust a manager.

U.S. experts join in probe

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — Two U.S. aircraft experts Monday joined officials probing Taiwan's worst aviation disaster — an in-flight domestic jetliner crash that killed 110.

Officials identified the body of a fourth American killed in the crash of the Boeing 737 as Richard Clowes, but his home was not immediately known. Three other Americans were found earlier among the 110 bodies scattered across a five-mile area in the hills of Miaoli, 60 miles south of Taipei.

Boeing Co. investigators James Thurmond and C. Furne arrived Sunday night from the United States and went Monday to the disaster site.

A Civil Aeronautics official said, "So far we have not ruled out anything, including the possibility of sabotage."

Journalist Watkins, 62, dies

"BOISE (UPI) — Don Watkins, press secretary to Democrat Gov. John Evans, died Monday at age 62.

The long-time, respected journalist and confidant to members of both political parties, died about 7 a.m. after undergoing triple by-pass heart surgery last week. He had suffered a heart attack during the 1980 Idaho Legislative session.

Watkins, who once owned his own public relations firm in Pocatello, worked for candidates for both political parties and was a member of the staff when former Idaho U.S. Sen. Frank Church ran for U.S. President in 1976.

Prior to that, Watkins also worked closely with former Republican Gov. Robert E. Smylie, as well as being involved in political races from city council to Congress.

Watkins, who was active in media organizations, became press secretary to Gov. Evans in July 1979. He also wrote for Time and Newsweek magazines.

He is survived by his wife Ann and six children. Memorial services will be at 1 p.m. Wednesday in the State Capitol. Burial will be in Boise.

Postal unions approve pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some 420,000 members of two postal unions Monday night approved a new $4.8 billion contract by margins greater than 5-1, and one union president declared the pact ratified by his members.

"It's ratified," Vincent Sombrotto, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, said with 65 percent of the votes of his union counted.

Joe Miller, general president of the American Postal Workers Union, said "It should be quite obvious" that his union would follow suit.

Astronauts rehearse launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly rehearsed a simulated launch of the space shuttle Columbia Monday night, eight hours behind schedule because of a computer foul-up.

The simulated launch test, originally scheduled for 8 a.m. EDT, was completed at 4:55 p.m. EDT. The problem was traced to a computer program that was designed to fold the shuttle into thinking it was flying. The shuttle is scheduled to fly into space for real Sept. 30.

Experts see deeper red ink

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration projects a $42.5 billion budget deficit next year and a balanced budget by 1984, but congressional budget experts said Monday future deficits could be well above those projections.

For fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1, Senate Budget Committee director Steve Bell said, in-house estimates show a $58 billion deficit.

Greek elections on Oct. 18

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — The Greek parliament will be dissolved next month and new elections held Oct. 18, President Constantine Karamanlis said Monday.

National elections normally are held every four years, within 30 days after dissolution of parliament, which in this case ends its mandate on Nov. 20.

Premier George Rallis, however, and Andreas Papandrou, leader of the main opposition Panhellenic Socialist Movement Party, consulted with Karamanlis last week and urged elections in mid-October.

Fire in Australia kills 10

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — A fire swept through a four-story apartment building early Tuesday in Sydney's red-light and topless bar district, killing at least 10 people, authorities said.

"There's no fire escapes or anything in that building," said Leon Blackman, 17, a resident of the building in King's Cross, a district known for its night life and girls bars.

Firemen fought the blaze for more than three hours as they rescued people hanging on the ledge of windows.

FAA extends air traffic cutback

By United Press International

In move designed to bolster the airline industry, the government Monday extended until April 25 a 25 percent cut in commercial air traffic imposed when nearly 12,000 federal controllers went on strike.

The Federal Aviation Administration notified air carriers it will continue to allow about three-quarters of the normal daily scheduled flights flown before Aug. 3, the day the walkout began.

That will allow airlines to establish firm schedules for the next eight months, seen as a key to restoring public confidence in air travel.

The strikers, members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization who have been fired by President Reagan, got a boost Monday from some of their union brethren. Leaders of the Communication Workers of America authorized use of up to $1 million of its defense fund to support the PATCO strike.

The CWA sent an immediate $100,000 check to an AFL-CIO fund to help families of strikers. The union's executive board will determine whether and how further allotments from the commitment will be used.

"This is what solidarity is all about," said a CWA union official.

Today's weather

There's a chance it may cool off a little soon

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:

Partly cloudy through Wednesday with slight cooling. Slight chance of showers or thunderstorms, mainly afternoons and evenings. Highs today 90 to 95 degrees and near 90 Wednesday. Lows in the 50s.

Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River valley:

Partly cloudy through Wednesday with slight cooling. Slight chance of thunderstorms, mainly afternoons and evenings. Highs in the 80s both days; Lows in the 40s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:

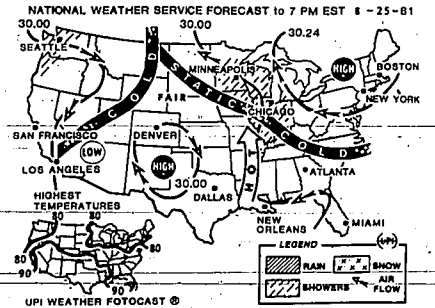

Mostly sunny in Nevada through Wednesday with afternoon cooling. Highs 85 to 95. Lows near 50. In Utah, partly cloudy through Wednesday with scattered thunderstorms at times. Highs in the 90s. Lows in the 50s.

Synopsis:

A cooling trend appears possible for southern Idaho late this week as a low pressure system moves inland from the Pacific coast.

The system will bring a gradual increase in moisture and may produce a few thunderstorms by late in the week over agricultural areas.

On Monday, temperatures were in the 90s over much of Idaho with the hottest reading 98 degrees at Caldwell. Morning minimums were generally in the 50s and 60s although in some higher valleys readings dipped into the 30s. Deadwood's 33 was the coolest.

A band of thunderstorms moved out of Utah early Monday, producing showers at Grace and Soda Springs and in the Pocatello area.

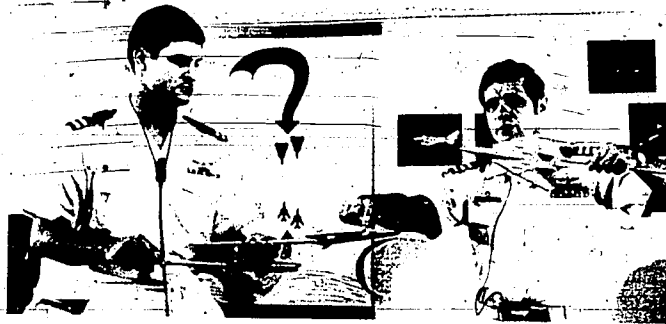

The extended forecast for Idaho calls for a chance of showers and thunderstorms Thursday through Saturday with highs in the 80s and lows in the 40s and 50s.

In the Magic Valley, the need for irrigation water should be near normal through midweek, decreasing later in the week. Condi-

American officers say Navy jets flew 25 miles off Libya

Tuesday, August 25, 1981 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-3

Lt. David Venlet, left, Cmdr. Henry Kleeman use models to illustrate air flight description

ABOARD THE USS NIMITZ (UPI) — American F-14 fighters came as close as 25 miles to the Libyan coast prior to the dogfight last week, in which two Soviet-built Libyan planes were shot down, U.S. 6th Fleet officers said Monday.

The officers said the encounter between two Libyan Su-22 jets and two F-14 Tomcats from the aircraft carrier Nimitz's crack "Black Aces" squadron came after at least 45 Libyan aerial incursions into the fleet's maneuver area in the Gulf of Sidra.

Libya claims the gulf is in its territorial waters, but the United States and other nations do not recognize that claim. The 6th Fleet officers also stressed their maneuvers were in international waters.

"We know that it was not a no-risk operation. We thought it was a low-risk operation," fleet commander Vice Admiral William H. Rowden told reporters aboard the Nimitz, which anchored six miles off Naples early Monday.

The two F-14s involved in the dogfight took off from the 91,000-ton nuclear-powered aircraft carrier.

Both Rowden and his second in command, Rear Admiral James Service, described the downing of the Libyan jets Wednesday as unremarkable, given the clear superiority of the F-14s over the Soviet-made Sukhois.

Service said U.S. pilots noted at least 45 incursions into the maneuver zone in the northwestern Gulf of Sidra during the exercises last Tuesday and Wednesday and that American jets escorted them back toward the Libyan coast.

"Twenty-five miles off their coast was the closest we came, on the afternoon of the 18th," Service said when asked how close the U.S. jets came to the Libyan shore.

Rowden and Service said the patrolling U.S. fighters were "between 50 and 60 miles" off the Libyan coast when they were attacked by the Libyan aircraft.

The area was at the southern extremity of the maneuver zone.

The leader of the "Black Aces" F-14 squadron that downed the two Libyan jets was Cmdr. Henry Kleeman, 38, of Clinton, Ill., a veteran pilot who flew combat missions in Vietnam.

Kleeman said the two Sukhois first appeared on his plane's radar screens, then came into view flying straight toward them.

"We saw the two Libyan jets flying toward us in a 'wedged wing' format about 500 feet apart," Kleeman said. "Obviously, they were headed for us."

The pilot said a Sukhoi fired one of its Soviet-made Atoll air-to-air missiles and missed. The two American pilots then did hard turns and came up behind the Libyan jets.

"Since they were likely to fire again, the only acceptable action was to fire," Kleeman said.

SEATTLE (UPI) — Fugitive spy Christopher Boyce, showing no emotion and answering questions through his lawyers, appeared before a federal magistrate Monday while FBI agents tried to tie him to a series of bank robberies.

U.S. Magistrate Philip Sweigert set bail at $500,000 on the escape charge and set a hearing Sept. 3 to establish that Boyce, 28, is the spy who escaped 15 months ago from the federal prison at Jomopo, Calif.

Boyce, convicted of selling vital secrets to the Soviet Union, was only a week away from getting a pilot's license that would have enabled him to fly away from his remote hideout on the "Olympic Peninsula" when agents captured him at a drive-in cafe last Friday night.

FBI agents said they were investigating Boyce as a suspect in a series of robberies in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. They believe he used loot from the holdups to buy cars, a commercial fishing boat and flying lessons.

"We are looking at him regarding possible involvement in a series of bank robberies in the Pacific Northwest," said FBI spokesman George Fisher in Seattle.

He declined comment on reports Boyce is a suspect in 16 robberies, but

Fugitive spy in court in Seattle

SEATTLE (UPI) — Fugitive spy Christopher Boyce, showing no emotion and answering questions through his lawyers, appeared before a federal magistrate Monday while FBI agents tried to tie him to a series of bank robberies.

U.S. Magistrate Philip Sweigert set bail at $500,000 on the escape charge and set a hearing Sept. 3 to establish that Boyce, 28, is the spy who escaped 15 months ago from the federal prison at Jomopo, Calif.

Boyce, convicted of selling vital secrets to the Soviet Union, was only a week away from getting a pilot's license that would have enabled him to fly away from his remote hideout on the "Olympic Peninsula" when agents captured him at a drive-in cafe last Friday night.

FBI agents said they were investigating Boyce as a suspect in a series of robberies in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. They believe he used loot from the holdups to buy cars, a commercial fishing boat and flying lessons.

"We are looking at him regarding possible involvement in a series of bank robberies in the Pacific Northwest," said FBI spokesman George Fisher in Seattle.

He declined comment on reports Boyce is a suspect in 16 robberies, but the FBI's top man in Montana and Idaho, Jay E. Bailey, said he was considered a suspect in six holdups in those two states.

Boyce was represented by California attorneys George L. Chellus of Newport Beach and William Dougherty of Tucson — the same attorneys who defended him at his spy trial and when he was sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Wearing a three-piece gray business suit, Boyce entered the magistrate's small and crowded hearing room with his hands manacled behind him and escorted by four U.S. marshals.

The blue-eyed Boyce, whose brown hair was closely cropped, showed no emotion as Sweigert advised him of his rights and the federal escape charge.

For All U.S. Citizens

Wyoming Oil Lottery Reopens in September

BELLA VISTA, CALIF. (Special) — Hundreds of average citizens will win oil lease rights in upcoming public drawings conducted by the State of Wyoming. Some may achieve overnight wealth by selling their rights to oil companies and retaining lifelong royalties on any oil or gas production.

Incredibly, most will risk no more than $25 and a minimal filing fee to enter the little-known program that offers every American the opportunity to compete on an equal basis with giant oil companies for leases of public lands.

Information and entry details are available from The Dexam Company, Inc. (Public Lands Division), 1621 Livona Lane, Post Office Box P, Bella Vista, CA 96008, Dept. 344. Please enclose $1 for postage and handling.

Official entry cards will be rushed by return mail to permit you to meet the September filing deadline.

Libya provoked air dogfight with U.S.

There now can be no doubt that Libya was responsible for an unprovoked attack on American forces last week.

In his typical style of twisting facts to fit a warped view of the world, Libyan dictator Moammar Khadafy presented several falsified versions of the air battle over the Mediterranean. But as of Monday, Khadafy was admitting the two Libyan pilots fired first, but only because they believed their nation was being invaded.

The U.S. has plenty of evidence to support its case, including taped Libyan radio transmissions. There is no evidence to suggest one American F14 was shot down in the battle, as Khadafy so fervently claims.

Libyans, unfortunately, have been led to believe its nation had defeated America in the skirmish. Such is the power of propaganda in a nation where the press is controlled by the government.

The Reagan administration has been quick to seize on this incident and do some of its own sabre-rattling. The obvious target is the Soviet Union, supplier of arms and munitions to Libya and others bent on terrorism.

While the U.S. has clearly demonstrated its ability in airpower, and in its will to respond if attacked, it might be foolish to taunt the Russians too much.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig, for instance, used the occasion of a television interview Sunday to rub it in the Soviets' noses again, and actually blamed the incident on the Kremlin.

The air battle proved the superiority of America's weapons and skill. That in itself is message enough to future foes.

Final time for levy?

Glenns Ferry School District residents today are being asked for the third time to approve a plant facilities levy.

It should be third time and out.

In the two previous elections, the number of those approving of the levy has increased from 58 percent to 64 percent. But it takes a two-thirds vote to pass the proposal.

If the proposal passes, it will mean Glenns Ferry can buy new school buses plus use the extra money for building maintenance and operation.

But if the electorate again fails to reach the two-thirds ratio, the district should refrain from bringing the proposal to a fourth vote. A three-time vote on the same question is a fair enough test of the electorate's wishes.

Her suffrage awards for 1981

Washington Post Writers Group

BOSTON — For the past four years, I have chosen to celebrate August 26, the anniversary of women's suffrage, by fondly acknowledging those Americans who have done the most to uphold Jimmy Carter's campaign pledge to the women of America: Life Isn't Fair.

How was I to know that it would take Ronald Reagan to finally fulfill the promise of his predecessor. In the past months, with a golly-gee-whizz and a gosh, he has gallantly put women and children first: First through the holes in the safety net.

So out of all fairness I must dedicate the Fifth Annual Life Isn't Fair Awards to the president of the United States. In the spirit of the Reagan times then, may I call for The Envelopes, please.

The first prize, The Woman (Far) Behind the Man Award, goes through the laws of nepotism to Nancy Reagan, whose wifely duties know no bounds. When it's bedtime for Bonzo, and Nancy has the midnight munchies, she rejects the noisy apple in favor of the quiet banana. This particular award is a gold-plated box of Snapple-crackers. There's one hubby who needs to be woken up.

The "Wicked" Warlock of the East Award goes to the senator by the same name. This spring Sen. John P. East (R-N.C.) interrupted his hearings on a bill to "protect human life from the moment of conception" in order to support the controversial sale of infant formula for Third World children. To Sen. East, we send an embossed Oath of Hypocrisy.

The Little Prince Award, named for a short aviator of other planets, goes this year to Our Guy Charles. He and Lady Di proved their egalitarian love story by scratching "obey" from the marriage ceremony. But as the stamp photos show, 5'10" Charlie still wants 5'9". Di to look up to him. To Charles goes an elevator crown. To Lady Di go the glass slippers, flats of course.

The Pig-male-on of the Year Award goes for the first time in recent memory to a man of the arts, violinist Yehudi Menuhin for his thoughts on the different creative urges of men and women. Woman, he said, is "compelled to plough and till over and over again the same plot of earth, from time to time attracting a male to ensure fertility." Play it again, Yehudi!

The Sex and the Simple Man Prize this year is awarded jointly to Sens. Jeremiah Denton (R-Ala.) and Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), who co-sponsored the so-called Chastity Bill. This bill, as originally written, proposed research to discover "the causes of adolescent pregnancy." To the senators we offer a fully paid high-school-level primer on The Birds and the Bees.

The Designer Genes Prize, a full set of single-sex blues, goes to all those who have struggled this year to revive the notion of biological male superiority. One special mention goes to the founding father, Lionel Tiger, who told an eager public about the male fish which would only mate when the female fish expressed awe. How, asked feminist Andrea Dworkin, did he measure awe in a fish?

The Subtlety in Advertising Award, complete with sledgehammer, is being sent immediately to the people who produced the James Bond movie ads. The photo was a long view of Bond aiming his weapon between the legs of a woman. Got it?

The Old Boys Will Be Old Boys Prize, much coveted and competed for coast-to-coast, this year goes to all the guests who have attended Richard Nixon's cozy little male soirees in Manhattan. To each will be sent immediately a tutu straight from a production of the Bohemian Club.

The Superwoman of the Year Prize goes to the much-married Evangelist Gouletas, current bride of New York Gov. Hugh Carey. Says our Supergirl: "When I take a shower, I listen to tapes and learn French. When I'm having my hair done at the beauty salon, I'm also conducting business by phone. I'm so organized you can walk into my closet with your eyes closed and get dressed. I'm never without a briefcase." To Evangeline, a cape, to Hugh, our sympathies.

And finally, last but not least, The Sweetheart of the Gosh-Wee-Wahs Prize. When-Silent Majority Pin, goes, as it does every year, to that virtuous hawk, Phyllis Schlafly. "When a woman walks across the room," she told a Senate committee on sexual harassment, "she speaks with a universal body language." This pin is to be used to prick nonsense.

Save the YFCA

Editor, Times-News:

The closing possibility of losing the YFCA has upset me greatly.

I worked at the Y as both a volunteer and employee during my four years of high school. I worked as a life guard, swim instructor, taught some water exercise classes and helped in the Adoptive Aquatics program.

I am now spending a year in another country as an exchange student and with each article my mother sends me, I realize how important this Christian organization is. I hope our community will come through and save that beautiful indoor pool, the building, and the organization itself. Changes need to be made and it sounds like they will be. There is so much more good than bad, but somehow people like to talk about the bad.

As a young person I'd like to elaborate on the good — the happy children I remember, encouraging a very depressed overweight lady to continue her water exercise class and how happy and enthused she became, how excited one cute little handicapped child was to be able to go for the first time in his life, in the water, working with my family putting together Christmas baskets, helping with Learn-to-Swim Week, and so much more. I've received far more than I'll ever be able to give.

This community has so much to gain from this organization, and so much to lose if the goal is not met by the 31st of August. I know how sad I'll be when I return and drive down Elizabeth Boulevard and see six new apartment buildings where our YFCA building used to stand.

FAA's 'supervisors'

Editor, Times-News:

FAA officials have stated that supervisory personnel plus the 2,500 working controllers are safely controlling nearly normal amounts of the air traffic in this country.

In view of this fact, they stated they have too many controllers and could eliminate thousands of these positions and continue to control this large percentage of traffic safely.

Controllers do not determine the number of positions required to staff an FAA facility. This is accomplished by the FAA management according to FAA standards. Immediately after inauguration President Reagan instituted a hiring freeze on all government employees except the Air Traffic Controllers.

At many large facilities, the management consists of: a chief, deputy chief, assistant chiefs, team supervisors, area officers, an evaluation and proficiency development officer plus evaluation and proficiency development specialists, data systems officers plus data systems specialists.

If this large supervisory staff can control most of the traffic, what we have is too many supervisors, not too many controllers. If the supervisors are controlling the traffic, they should be receiving controllers' wages, thus saving our government and the taxpayers thousands and thousands of dollars annually.

As a final note, FAA officials have continually failed to address the general aviation industry and its economic importance to this country.

How government failed the Teamsters rank and file

© Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — If you want to read a sad story — indeed, an infuriating story — dip into a report just filed by the Senate's permanent subcommittee on investigations.

The report deals with the Department of Labor and the Teamsters Union.

This is no light summer reading. It is a chronicle of misjudgments so sequential as to raise a question the subcommittee did not answer: Were the actions of top Labor bureaucrats merely misjudgments, or did they reflect a deliberate unwillingness to investigate ties between the Teamsters and the mob?

The story goes back to February of 1955, when the Central States Pension

Fund came into being. Twenty-five years later the fund had assets of $2.2 billion; it had 500,000 active participants; it was collecting $386 million a year from employers, and it was paying out $323 million a year in benefits. And during most of this time the trustees were making questionable loans to persons closely connected to organized crime.

Nothing much was done about this — or could have been done about this — until Congress in 1974 passed the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA). This vested authority in the Labor Department to investigate both civil and criminal wrongdoing on the part of trustees charged with prudent management of ERISA fund assets.

In December of 1975, while John T.

Dunlop was still secretary of labor in the Ford administration, a Special Investigations Staff (SIS) was created. Its broad mission was to seize the opportunity provided by ERISA to attack the involvement of organized crime in the Teamsters fund. The SIS was to have a staff of 45 top-notch investigators; it was to work closely with the Department of Justice and the Internal Revenue Service; it was to do a comprehensive job.

In February of 1976 William Uesey succeeded Dunlop as Ford's secretary of labor. The SIS went to work. Investigators focused upon 82 suspicious loans amounting to $18 million and began to accumulate evidence. It proved a frustrating task. The director of SIS was told he could not issue subpoenas without approval from the department's solicitor; and the solicitor's office let it be known that it would issue few subpoenas.

This meant that the SIS had to beg the voluntary assistance of Teamsters officials. Said the subcommittee: "The investigation came to depend for its success upon the cooperation of its target." After a while the Central States trustees ceased to cooperate.

Matters were made worse in June 1976 when Secretary Uesey made a friendly speech before the Teamsters' convention in Las Vegas. "Let me assure you," he said, "that even though I don't have a Teamsters card, I belong to this club because I believe in it." Twelve days later, without consulting anyone, the Internal Revenue Service abruptly revoked the Central States Fund's tax-exempt status.

The premature IRS decree deprived the SIS of its potentially most useful weapon, but there were other troubles also. Relations between Labor and Justice steadily deteriorated. The SIS found itself locked in combat with its own solicitor's office. Things got worse, not better, as the Carter administration brought in Secretary Ray Marshall. He became "obsessed" with a limited civil proceeding against the Teamsters. Any thought of criminal prosecution was abandoned. In 1977 Marshall made a five-year deal: He got the resignations of the Central States trustees, but the new trustees proved as pliable as the old ones. It was "business as usual."

The SIS is gone now. It never had more than 28 investigators. Its director and deputy director resigned in disgust in the fall of 1977; a new director docilely accepted a passive role. Next year the Teamsters will regain full control of the Central States Fund. The opportunity for timely reform has been squandered. The mob still hangs around.

That is the situation Teamsters Union members must tolerate," says the committee report. "They may know or suspect that their retirement and other benefit plans are controlled by persons who are themselves controlled or influenced by organized criminals... but they are unable or unwilling to unseat the present leadership of their union." The government that should have protected them failed to do so.

Oswald's widow stops grave opening

DALLAS (UPI) — The widow of accused presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald said Monday a British author reneged on a secret agreement to open Oswald's grave in May, so she withdrew her permission for him to conduct an exhumation.

Marina Oswald Porter told UPI the plan was to open the grave May 15, but author Michael Eddowes withdrew financial backing until the plan had to be canceled. She said she would pursue her own efforts to open the grave.

Mrs. Porter said she believed Eddowes reneged on the agreement because he was more interested in the grave not being opened so his theory that Oswald was replaced by a Soviet agent could not be disproven and he would continue to garner publicity.

Soviets purchase more U.S. grain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department Monday announced a Soviet purchase of 200,000 tons of U.S. grain, which will be counted toward the sixth year of the newly extended U.S.-U.S.S.R. grain agreement.

The sale — half wheat and half corn — was made within the past few days and reported to the department by private exporters.

The Kremlin has now purchased 1,150,000 tons of American corn and 700,000 tons of wheat for the agreement's sixth year, which began Oct. 1. Earlier this month, U.S. and Russian negotiators extended the five-year agreement for another year.

Hughes estate fight in court starts

HOUSTON (UPI) — Lawyers for Howard Hughes' two step-children and three daughters of a first cousin Monday confronted more than 300 descendants of his great-grandparents in a court fight for half his multimillion-dollar estate.

Probate Judge Pat Gregory, who has ruled Hughes a Texan, already has found Hughes left no wives, children, brothers or sisters when he died in 1976. His parents were dead when he died aboard a flight from Mexico to Houston.

Gregory earlier found 14 relatives of Hughes' mother are legitimate heirs to half the estate estimated at $163 million to $1.2 billion. He now begins addressing claims of persons who say they are relatives of Hughes' father.

Power — then 60 — of the 300 distant paternal claimants showed up, but it was enough to crowd the tiny courtroom.

Carter arrives for visit to China

PEKING (UPI) — Former President Jimmy Carter Monday began a 10-day visit to China, a country he had never seen but one that remembers him as the U.S. leader who restored relations with the communist nation after a 30-year break.

Carter flashed his famous smile as he stepped from the plane with his wife Rosalyn and daughter Amy. Children handed them bouquets of flowers.

First MX decisions tentative

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — President Reagan has made tentative decisions on deploying the MX missile system, an aide said Monday.

There were strong indications of a return to the idea of basing it on land in Western states.

"The president certainly has made some tentative decisions," deputy press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters. "He knows what direction he wants to go on this."

During the campaign the president strongly opposed the idea of basing the experimental missile on trucks in Nevada and Utah — two states where the idea is highly unpopular.

Reagan met with his top advisers on the matter last week, and counselor Edwin Meese said he expects a decision about mid-September.

From all indications, the president has been dissuaded from basing the missile on specially equipped aircraft — an idea most recently espoused by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

The airborne concept has drawn almost unanimous criticism from Congress, and some members of Reagan's Cabinet oppose it.

Last week, after meeting with Reagan in Los Angeles, Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the airborne concept no longer is under serious consideration.

Speakes said Monday he would not dispute Tower's comment.

Little talk has centered on the third option — basing the missile on submarines.

The MX, with a price tag of roughly $50 billion, is seen as a counter to the big Soviet missiles and is designed to thwart attempts by enemies to wipe out the U.S. nuclear arsenal in one massive strike.

Deal set up on Harriers

LONDON (UPI) — The United States and Britain have agreed to co-produce 400 British-designed Harrier jets.

The planes are valued at over $2 billion in one of the biggest defense deals ever concluded between the United States and a foreign country.

The two countries have finished negotiations and await expiration this week of the 30-day certification to Congress required under the Arms Export Control Act.

The deal caps the success of a unique aircraft, known in the United States as the AV-8B, that can take off and land vertically; turn on a dime and even fly backwards. It has been delaying conventional wisdom since it emerged from the drawing board nearly a quarter of a century ago.

The agreement between the McDonnell Douglas Aircraft Corporation and British Aerospace will give Britain more than 40 percent of the airframe work for the 400 planes and any subsequent orders.

THE BEST RETREADS ARE MADE JUST LIKE THE BEST NEW TIRES.

The two most common modern retreading processes are called process and conventional. Both processes begin with a worn tire casing, which is thoroughly inspected to make sure it has no flaws that make it unretreadable. The casing is then buffed down to an optimum point safely above the body plies, and the buffed surface is prepared for application of new tread rubber. Automated application of uncured strip rubber and subsequent mold-curing are the some processes used in the manufacture of new tires.

As a people person I'd like to elaborate on the good — the happy children I remember, encouraging a very depressed overweight lady to continue her water exercise class and how happy and enthusiastic she became. I excited one cute little handicapped child was to be able to move for the first time in his life, in the water, working with my family putting together Christmas baskets, helping with Learn to Swim Week, and so much more. I've received far more than I'll ever be able to give.

This community has so much to gain from this organization, and so much to lose if the goal is not met by the 31st of August. I know how and I'll be when I return and drive down Elizabeth Boulevard and see six new apartment buildings where our YFCA building used to stand.

FAA's 'supervisors'

Editor, Times-News:

FAA officials have stated that supervisory personnel plus the 2,500 working controllers are safely controlling nearly normal amounts of the air traffic in this country.

In view of this fact, they stated they have too many controllers and could eliminate thousands of these positions and continue to control this large percentage of traffic safely.

Controllers do not determine the number of positions required to staff an FAA facility. This is accomplished by the FAA management according to FAA standards. Immediately after inauguration, President Reagan instituted a hiring freeze on all government employees except the Air Traffic Controllers.

At many large facilities, the management consists of: a chief, deputy chief, assistant chiefs, team supervisors, area officers, an evaluation and proficiency development officer plus evaluation and proficiency development specialists, data systems officers plus data systems specialists.

If this large supervisory staff can control most of the traffic, what have is too many supervisors, not too many controllers. If the supervisors are controlling the traffic, they should be receiving controllers' wages, thus saving our government and the taxpayers thousands and thousands of dollars annually.

As a final note, FAA officials have continually failed to address the general aviation industry and its economic importance to this country.

How government failed the Teamsters rank and file

© Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — If you want to read a sad story — indeed, an infuriating story — dip into a report just filed by the Senate's permanent subcommittee on investigations.

The report deals with the Department of Labor and the Teamsters Union.

This is no light summer reading. It is a chronicle of misjudgments so sequential as to raise a question the subcommittee did not answer: Were the actions of top Labor bureaucrats merely misjudgments, or did they reflect a deliberate unwillingness to investigate ties between the Teamsters and the mob?

Fund came into being. Twenty-five years later the fund had assets of $2.2 billion; it had 500,000 active participants; it was collecting $588 million a year from employers, and it was paying out $323 million a year in benefits. And during most of this time the trustees were making questionable loans to persons closely connected to organized crime.

Nothing much was done about this — or could have been done about this — until Congress in 1974 passed the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA). This vested authority in the Labor Department to investigate both civil and criminal wrongdoing on the part of trustees charged with prudent management of ERISA fund assets.

In December of 1975, while John T.

Dunlop was still secretary of labor in the Ford administration, a Special Investigations Staff (SIS) was created. Its broad mission was to seize the opportunity provided by ERISA to attack the involvement of organized crime in the Teamsters fund. The SIS was to have a staff of 45 top-notch investigators; it was to work closely with the Department of Justice and the Internal Revenue Service; it was to do a comprehensive job.

In February of 1976 William Usery succeeded Dunlop as Ford's secretary of labor. The SIS went to work. Investigators focused upon 82 suspicious loans, amounting to $518 million, and began to accumulate evidence. It proved a frustrating task. The director of SIS was told he could not issue subpoenas without approval from the department's solicitor; and the solicitor's office let it be known that it would issue few subpoenas.

This meant that the SIS had to beg the voluntary assistance of Teamsters' officials. Said the subcommittee: "The investigation came to depend for its success upon the cooperation of its target." After a while the Central States trustees ceased to cooperate.

Matters were made worse in June 1976 when Secretary Usery made a friendly speech before the Teamsters' convention in Las Vegas. "Let me assure you," he said, "that even though I don't have a Teamsters card, I belong to this club because I believe in it." Twelve days later, without consulting anyone, the Internal Revenue Service abruptly revoked the Central States Fund's tax-exempt status.

The premature IRS decree deprived the SIS of its potentially most useful weapon, but there were other troubles also. Relations between Labor and Justice steadily deteriorated. The SIS found itself locked in combat with its own solicitor's office. Things got worse, not better, as the Carter administration brought in Secretary Ray Marshall. He became, "obsessed" with a limited civil proceeding against the Teamsters. Any thought of criminal prosecution was abandoned. In 1977 Marshall made a five-year deal: He got the resignations of the Central States trustees, but the new trustees proved as pliable as the old ones. It was "business as usual."

The SIS is gone now. It never had more than 28 investigators. Its director and deputy director resigned in disgust in the fall of 1977; a new director docilely accepted a passive role. Next year the Teamsters will regain full control of the Central States Fund. The opportunity for timely reform has been squandered. The mob still hangs around.

"That is the situation Teamsters Union members must tolerate," says the committee report. "They may know or suspect that their retirement and other benefit plans are controlled by persons who are themselves controlled or influenced by organized criminals... but they are unable or unwilling to upset the present leadership of their union." The government that should have protected them failed to do so.

News briefs

Oswald's widow stops grave opening

DALLAS (UPI) — The widow of accused presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald said Monday a British author reneged on a secret agreement to open Oswald's grave in May, so she withdrew her permission for him to conduct an exhumation.

Marina Oswald Porter told UPI the plan was to open the grave May 15, but author Michael Eddowes withdrew financial backing until the plan had to be canceled. She said she would pursue her own efforts to open the grave.

Mrs. Porter said she believed Eddowes reneged on the agreement because he was more interested in the grave not being opened so his theory that Oswald was replaced by a Soviet agent could not be disproven and he would continue to garner publicity.

Soviets purchase more U.S. grain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department Monday announced a Soviet purchase of 200,000 tons of U.S. grain, which will be counted toward the sixth year of the newly extended U.S.-U.S.S.R. grain agreement.

The sale — half wheat and half corn — was made within the past few days and reported to the department by private exporters.

The Kremlin has now purchased 1,150,000 tons of American corn and 100,000 tons of wheat for the agreement's sixth year, which began Oct. 1. Earlier this month, U.S. and Russian negotiators extended the five-year agreement for another year.

Hughes estate fight in court starts

HOUSTON (UPI) — Lawyers for Howard Hughes' two stepsons and three daughters of a first cousin Monday confronted more than 500 descendants of his great-grandparents in a court fight for half his multimillion-dollar estate.

Probate Judge Pat Gregory, who has ruled Hughes a Texan, already has found Hughes left no wives, children, brothers or sisters when he died in 1976. His parents were dead when he died aboard a flight from Mexico to Houston.

Gregory earlier found 14 relatives of Hughes' mother are legitimate heirs to half the estate estimated at $163 million to $1.2 billion. He now begins addressing claims of persons who say they are relatives of Hughes' father.

Fewer than 50 of the 500 distant paternal claimants showed up, but it was enough to crowd the tiny courtroom.

Carter arrives for visit to China

BEIJING (UPI) — Former President Jimmy Carter Monday began a 10-day visit to China, a country he had never seen but one that remembers him as the U.S. leader who restored relations with the communist nation after a 30-year break.

Carter flashed his famous smile as he stepped from the plane with his wife Rosalyn and daughter Amy. Children handed them bouquets of flowers.

First MX decisions tentative

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — President Reagan has made tentative decisions on deploying the MX missile system, an aide said Monday.

There were strong indications of a return to the idea of basing it on land in Western states.

"The president certainly has made some tentative decisions," deputy press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters. "He knows what direction he wants to go on this."

During the campaign the president strongly opposed the idea of basing the experimental missile on tracks in Nevada and Utah — two states where the idea is highly unpopular.

Reagan met with his top advisers on the matter last week, and counselor Edwin Meese said he expects a decision about mid-September.

From all indications, the president has been dissuaded from basing the missile on specially equipped aircraft — an idea most recently espoused by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

The airborne concept has drawn almost unanimous criticism from Congress, and some members of Reagan's Cabinet oppose it.

Last week, after meeting with Reagan in Los Angeles, Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the airborne concept no longer is under serious consideration.

Speakes said Monday he would not dispute Tower's comment.

Little talk has centered on the third option — basing the missile on submarines.

The MX, with a price tag of roughly $50 billion, is seen as a counter to the big Soviet missiles and is designed to thwart attempts by enemies to wipe out the U.S. nuclear arsenal in one massive strike.

Deal set up on Harriers

LONDON (UPI) — The United States and Britain have agreed to co-produce 400 British-designed Harrier jets.

The planes are valued at over $2 billion in one of the biggest defense deals ever concluded between the United States and a foreign country.

The two countries have finished negotiations and await expiration this week of the 30-day certification to Congress required under the Arms Export Control Act.

The deal caps the success of a unique aircraft, known in the United States as the AV-8B, that can take off and land vertically, turn on a dime and even fly backwards. It has been defying conventional wisdom since it emerged from the drawing board nearly a quarter of a century ago.

The agreement between the McDonnell Douglas Aircraft Corporation and British Aerospace will give Britain more than 40 percent of the airframe work for the 400 planes and any subsequent orders.

THE BEST RETREADS ARE MADE JUST LIKE THE BEST NEW TIRES.

The most common modern retreading processes are called pressure and conventional. Both processes begin with a worn tire casing, which is thoroughly inspected to make sure it has no flaws that make it unretreadable. The casing is then buffed down to an optimum point solely above the body plies, and the buffed surface is prepared for application of new tread rubber. Automated application of uncured strip rubber and subsequent vulcanizing are the same processes used in the manufacture of new tires.

Lennon's slayer draws 20-year term

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mark David Chapman, the self-proclaimed "Catcher in the Rye," was sentenced Monday to a prison term of 20 years to life for killing Beatle John Lennon in an "ambush" his attorney called a "monstrously irrational" act.

A young woman wearing a Beatles T-shirt in the crowd of 120 courtroom spectators and reporters wept softly and murmured, "John, John" as sentence was handed down.

Chapman, 26, who pleaded guilty to the slaying in June after announcing that God had ordered him to confess, clutched a copy of "The Catcher in the Rye" throughout the court proceeding and read a passage from the novel as his "final spoken words."

When asked if he had anything to say, the guitar-playing rock music fanatic stood pale white in the hushed Manhattan courtroom and calmly read a passage from J.D. Salinger's classic novel of a young man trying to cope with adolescence.

MARK DAVID CHAPMAN
...reads from book

"I keep picturing all these little kids playing some game in this big field of rye and all," Chapman read from the book. "Thousands of little kids, and nobody's around — nobody big, I mean — except me."

"And I'm standing on the edge of some crazy cliff. What I have to do, I have to catch everybody if they start to go over the cliff — I mean if they're running and they don't look where they're going, I have to come out from somewhere and catch them. That's all I'd do all day. I'd just be the catcher in the rye."

Earlier, defense psychiatrist Daniel Schwartz testified that Chapman believed he was the ruler of a kingdom of "little people."

"I had control over their lives. They worshipped me like a king," Schwartz quoted Chapman as saying. He said if any of his subjects angered him, Chapman would "wreak havoc on them by pushing an imaginary destruct button."

Flanked by armed guards, Chapman remained impassive as state Supreme Court Justice Dennis Edwards ordered him to serve a minimum of 20 years in jail.

Earlier, Edwards rejected defense motions to throw out Chapman's guilty plea and a request for a new psychiatric hearing.

"There is no doubt in the court's mind that he is accountable, responsible," Edwards said. He described Lennon's slaying as a "knowing, voluntary act" on Chapman's part.

The judge also said there was "no question that the defendant would benefit from psychiatric treatment."

Prosecutor Allen Sullivan said Chapman was a publicity-seeking opportunist who killed Lennon to gain fame.

"He selected John Lennon solely because Lennon would bring him the most attention, the most fame," Sullivan said.

Teamster official denies kickback tale

JACKIE PRESSER
...no informer, either

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Teamsters International Vice President Jackie Presser Monday denied allegations he took $300,000 in cash kickbacks and served as an informer for the federal government.

Presser, vice president of the Ohio Conference of Teamsters and a member of President Reagan's transition team, said the sources of the charges in the copyright stories in The Cleveland Plain Dealer "have no credibility."

The Plain Dealer, in a Sunday story, quoted federal sources and court documents as saying Presser took the kickbacks from a public relations firm hired by the Teamsters to upgrade its scandal-ridden image.

She has to be that training under the most horrifying of circumstances.

Mrs. McCalls, 29, was heading home from work Friday when she noticed people beginning to gather at the scene of a traffic accident two blocks from her home. She parked her car and hurried to help with the injured.

All she could tell at first was that at least one young boy was hurt, hit by a pickup truck. What she could not tell was that another youngster also lay seriously injured — her son, David, 7.

Police said the two boys had run directly into the path of the truck on U.S. Route 22, one of this central Pennsylvania community's main streets.

"I saw it was a little boy. He was yelling," Mrs. McCalls said. "Then I saw another little boy. His face was already starting to swell. I hardly recognized him. Then I saw his red shirt and I knew it was Dave."

Someone had already called for an ambulance, and David appeared to be in worse shape than his friend, so she went right to work.

"He wasn't breathing right," she said. "When we got him in the ambulance, I suctioned him out. He had his jaws clenched. There wasn't anything more I could do for him."

Both boys were taken to Geisinger Medical Center in nearby Danville.

The Plain Dealer said federal officials were aware of allegations by Halter that he passed or arranged to pass along the payments, in monthly installments of $16,500, to the younger Presser.

The bribes were described by Halter as the price the public relations firm, Hoover-Gorin & Associates, had to pay to do business with the Teamsters, The Plain Dealer said.

But Presser, in a statement issued through his attorney, John R. Climaco, rejected the allegations, as well as The Plain Dealer's statement that the union official "declined to be interviewed."

"We have examined The Plain Dealer story and find the accusations concerning Jackie Presser have absolutely no merit; that the sources of these accusations have no credibility whatsoever," the statement said.

Fatal plunge

NEW YORK (UPI) — A man climbed a barrier around the Empire State Building's 86th floor observation deck Monday, lowered himself one floor, stripped naked and jumped to his death, police said.

It was the second time this year a man jumped to his death from the 102-story landmark.

Police were unable to identify the man, who did not leave a note or carry identification in his wallet or clothes.

Clear unfinished business; be with cheerful friends

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to wind up unfinished tasks before launching into any new projects. Be sure to be with cheerful persons who can help you to keep your spirits high. Be optimistic.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Home conditions should be handled cleverly during your spare time. Try not to be overly critical of others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take extra time to get caught up with routines that have been piling up. Avoid trouble by being wary of outsiders.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take care of matters which you have been neglecting lately. Use your own good judgment now for best results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may feel a little despondent today, so take it easy and rebuild your energies. Be happy with yourself.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Use tact in the handling of a private matter and all works out to your satisfaction. Take no risks in travel.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Not a good day to expect help from friends who have problems of their own at this time. Show kindness to others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) Taking any risks where your good reputation is at stake today is unwise. Make an effort to alleviate a personal problem.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study new outlets for increasing your income. Use your own good judgment in making an important business decision.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't postpone routine duties at this time because you have an urge to go on a fun spree. Be more cheerful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A good day to settle a dispute of long standing with an associate. Strive for more harmony with close ties.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make plans now to handle the work ahead of you more efficiently. Take time to improve your appearance. Be thoughtful.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan sensible recreational activities for the days ahead. A business matter should be handled promptly for better results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... ...he or she will want to complete whatever has been started but could easily get into a rut by being too dependent on one activity. Expose your progeny to a wider range of activities. Don't neglect ethical training.

SWIFT HAIRCUT

Q. How long does it take a good barber to give a man a good haircut?

A. Can only report that 29 seconds was the record established some years back by a national magazine that tested the matter in an old-timey short-hair contest. Only scissors were allowed. Clearly, it's not fair to rate today's stylists by such statistics. And styles differ so that it might be difficult to repeat the competition. Wouldn't 20 minutes be about right?

Q. Little argument here: Is the Sailor's Horn Pipe a musical instrument or a dance?

A. The instrument is called a horn pipe, the dance is the Sailor's Horn Pipe. But the dance was named after the instrument. Incidentally, that particular dance was the fore-runner of tap dancing in general.

Teamster official denies kickback tale

JACKIE PRESSER

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Teamsters International Vice President Jackie Presser Monday denied allegations he took $300,000 in cash kickbacks and served as an informer for the federal government.

The Plain Dealer, in a Sunday story, quoted federal sources and court documents as saying Presser took the kickbacks from a public relations firm hired by the Teamsters to upgrade its scandal-ridden image.

The newspaper then reported Monday that Presser, considered a leading future candidate for union president, and his late father, William, who was a vice president of the Teamsters at the time of his death last month, were informers for the Internal Revenue Service.

The paper said the Pressers met four or five times starting about 1971 with two agents of the IRS criminal investigations unit, offering them potentially damaging information about allies of ex-Teamsters president Jimmy Hoffa.

The meetings were held at various locations and were arranged through Harry Haler, a founder of the public relations firm alleged to have paid the younger Presser the kickbacks over a 1½-year period, the newspaper said.

The Plain Dealer said it was told by a well-informed federal investigator that Jackie Presser "also was an informer for the FBI during the late 1970s."

The Plain Dealer said federal officials were aware of allegations by Haler that he passed or arranged to pass along the payments, in monthly installments of $16,500, to the younger Presser.

The bribes were described by Haler as the price the public relations firm Hoover-Gorin & Associates, had to pay to do business with the Teamsters, The Plain Dealer said.

But Presser, in a statement issued through his attorney, John R. Climaco, rejected the allegations, as well as The Plain Dealer's statement that the union official "declined to be interviewed."

"We have examined The Plain Dealer story and find the accusations concerning Jackie Presser have absolutely no merit, that the sources of these accusations have no credibility whatsoever," the statement said.

Fatal plunge

NEW YORK (UPI)—A man climbed a barrier around the Empire State Building's 86th floor observation deck Monday, lowered himself one floor, stripped naked and jumped to his death, police said.

It was the second time this year a man jumped to his death from the 102-story landmark.

Police were unable to identify the man, who did not leave a note or carry identification in his wallet or clothes.

Nurse stops at accident, assists son

LEWISTOWN, Pa. (UPI)—Wanda McCallis is a licensed practical nurse, trained to react quickly and calmly in a medical emergency.

She had to use that training under the most horrifying of circumstances.

Mrs. McCallis, 29, was heading home from work Friday when she noticed people beginning to gather at the scene of a traffic accident two blocks from her home. She parked her car and hurried to help with the injured.

All she could tell at first was that at least one young boy was hurt, hit by a pickup truck. What she could not tell was that another youngster also lay seriously injured — her son, David, 7.

Police said the two boys had run directly into the path of the truck on U.S. Route 22, one of this central Pennsylvania community's main streets.

"I saw it was a little boy. He was yelling," Mrs. McCallis said. "Then I saw another little boy. His face was already starting to swell. I hardly recognized him. Then I saw his red shirt and I knew it was Dave."

Someone had already called for an ambulance, and David appeared to be in worse shape than his friend, so she went right to work.

"He wasn't breathing right," she said. "When we got him in the ambulance, I suctioned him out. He had his jaws clenched. There wasn't anything more I could do for him."

Both boys were taken to Geisinger Medical Center in nearby Danville.

Clear unfinished business; be with cheerful friends

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to wind up unfinished tasks before launching into any new project. Be sure to be with cheerful persons who can help you to keep your spirits high. Be optimistic.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Home conditions should be handled cleverly during your spare time. Try not to be overly critical of others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take extra time to get caught up with routine tasks you have been putting off. Avoid trouble by being wary of outsiders.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take care of matters which you have been neglecting lately. Use your own good judgment now for best results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may feel a little despondent today, so take it easy, and rebuild your energies. Be happy with yourself.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Use tact in the handling of a private matter and all works out to your satisfaction. Take no risks in travel.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Not a good day to expect help from friends who have problems of their own at this time. Show kindness to others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Taking any risks where your good reputation is at stake today is unwise. Make an effort to alleviate a possible problem.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study new outlets for increasing your income. Use your own good judgment in making an important business decision.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't postpone routine duties at this time because you have an urge to go on a fun spree. Be more cheerful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A good day to settle a dispute of long standing with an associate. Strive for more harmony with close ties.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make plans now to handle the work ahead of you more efficiently. Take time to improve your appearance. Be thoughtful.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan sensible recreational activities for the days ahead. A business matter should be handled promptly for best results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will want to complete whatever has been started but could easily get into a rut by being too dependent on one activity. Expose your progeny to a wider range of activities. Don't neglect ethical training.

SWIFT HAIRCUT

Q. How long does it take a good barber to give a man a good haircut?

A. Can only report that 29 seconds was the record established some years back by a national magazine that tested the matter in an old-timey short-haircut contest. Only scissors were allowed. Clearly, it's not fair to rate today's stylists by such statistics. And styles differ so that it might be difficult to repeat the competition. Wouldn't 20 minutes be about right?

Q. Little argument here: Is the Sailor's Horn Pipe a musical instrument or a dance?

A. The instrument is called a horn pipe, the dance is the Sailor's Horn Pipe. But the dance was named after the instrument. Incidentally, that particular dance was the forerunner of tap dancing in general.

Q. How small does that rock have to be before you can classify it as a pebble?

A. Less than two inches in diameter. If it's more than 10 inches in diameter, it's called a boulder—please note.

Stock, bond prices plunge amid fears about '82 deficit

By MARIANNA OHE
United Press International

NEW YORK — Bond and stock prices plummeted Monday in one of the worst days in Wall Street history. The slide came amid fears the administration's 1982 budget deficit may be larger than expected and leave interest rates at their record highs.

Bond prices sank to record lows in a rout that could make it virtually impossible for states and cities to raise money for needed services. And analysts held out little hope of improvement in the near term as high interest rates make short-term investments — paying up to 18 percent — more attractive than the long-term bond market.

They said the crowding out of the municipal and corporate sectors of the bond market by heavy Treasury borrowing has put the municipal market in a near crisis.

All Treasury issues with maturities of three years or longer were at record lows, with the key Treasury 30-year bond sinking roughly three points from Friday's level to close at 95 1/2.

A Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority 30-year bond worth $1,000 last week plunged to $950.

Stocks took their cue from bonds. The Dow Jones industrial average — based on the prices of 30 blue chip industrial stocks — dove 36.46 points to close at 900.11. The closely watched indicator lost 7.80 points Friday and 16.36 overall last week.

The loss was the worst since the Dow fell 28.80 points on Jan. 7 after a Wall Street forecaster advised clients to sell. The January plunge took was shortly before Ronald Reagan took office promising a new economic package of tax and budget cuts.

The New York Stock Exchange index skidded 2.18 to 72.92, the worst point loss in its history.

Analysts said the main factor behind the rout was investor discouragement over the Federal Reserve's report late Friday that the nation's money supply climbed $500 million in the latest week following a $5.1 billion surge the previous week. Analysts had expected a smaller figure.

The figures mean near-record high interest rates won't decline in the near future, and the Fed won't ease up on its tight money policy.

Wall Street also is worried that President Reagan has underestimated the budget deficit for 1982.

Third of four parts

WASHINGTON — Enlarging the lock at Bonneville Dam is the key to the Northwest's future as a major exporter of agricultural products.

The attention being focused on legislation to authorize and fund the new navigational lock makes it perhaps the single most concerted Northwest effort in this Congress.

"One thing you develop back here is an appreciation for the big picture in the Northwest," says Rep. Dick Morris, R-Wash. "We think we are doing well now, but in the next decade it will become phenomenal."

Recent revisions in railroad freight rates have made it more attractive to ship grain out of the Midwest than the Mississippi River system.

"What few people recognize is that Idaho has a port," points out Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho. "It serves not just Idaho, but Montana, Wyoming and even the Dakotas."

Built in the 1950s as the first dam on the Columbia River, Bonneville's lock was not envisioned as part of a well-travelled highway, which the river has become. Today the Bonneville lock is a bottleneck, with barge traffic backed up, waiting to pass through to river ports in Washington state, Oregon and Idaho.

The impact of the Bonneville bottleneck is felt far upriver and even into the Midwest. With the region's wheat farmers having a record crop this year, the lock will slow grain movement to ships destined for Portland, on which the cargo will be moved to the Orient and the Middle East.

In a year of presumed budget austerity, it will be a neat trick if the powers of the Northwest congressional delegation can have an enlarged Bonneville lock authorized and funds appropriated for it.

It will be a test of Sen. Mark Hatfield's power and ability as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee to deliver $3.1 million for continuation of planning and design of the lock in fiscal year 1982. In the House, Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., and Rep. Norm Dickson, D-Wash., will be similarly tested.

The authorization bill is sponsored by Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore. It was a shrewd move for Wyden, a freshman, to take the lead on the Bonneville lock bill, which has great support in all three states. His major co-sponsors are AuCoin and House Majority Whip Tom Foley, D-Wash.

Wyden says he is waiting to see how the waterway user fee issue is resolved before trying to move the Bonneville lock authorization bill. Morrison suggests there might eventually be a joining of the two issues, by having the lock's construction funded by user fees.

Hatfield is sanguine about getting federal money for the lock. "We will have money to finish-up the project in this budget," he says. "The question will be 'How do we handle the construction money?'"

Wyden explains the dilemma which Hatfield faces. "The problem is that we haven't had a water projects bill in five years. That means that both good and bad water projects are lined up for authorization and funding. But we will argue that the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway at $5 billion is one thing while Bonneville lock at $150 million is another."

Hatfield gives a hint of how he will manipulate the arcane politics of the appropriations business to get the lock funded. "I'm not about to divulge my strategy, but it will not be a new construction act."

States, cities may be in trouble

Bonds sink to record lows

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bond prices sank to record lows Monday.

The situation left the government and municipal market "almost in a rout" that could severely curtail the ability of states and cities to raise money for needed services.

"The bond market is a disaster and it's the result of an inevitable collision between heavy Treasury borrowing crowding out the tax-exempt and private sector and the tight monetary policies of the Fed," David M. Jones, economist at Aubrey G. Lantano & Co., government bond house, said.

The key Treasury long-bond had fallen to 95 1/2, at mid-day, bringing the yield to 14.55 percent. All Treasury issues from three years out were at record low prices.

But hardest hit is the municipal market. The Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority 30-year bond, which sold last week at par (100), was down to 94 Monday and there's little hope that things will improve in the near term.

Monday's rout came after the Federal Reserve reported an $800 million jump in the money supply Friday on the heels of a $5.1 billion increase the week before.

William V. Sullivan Jr., senior vice president at Bank of New York, said. "That eliminated any prospect for further softening in the federal funds rate from the current 17-18 percent range."

"There's no retail buying in the secondary market and as a result inventories are on dealers' shelves," Sullivan said. "You cannot own bonds yielding 14 1/2 percent and carry them in your inventories at 18 percent."

Jones said the "crowding out" of the tax-exempt and corporate sectors by heavy Treasury borrowing has put the tax-exempt market in a "near crisis."

"Top-rated companies have access to needed funds, but lesser-rated borrowers are lopped off first and that's exactly what's happened to states and localities," Jones said. "The market has been flooded with housing and industrial revenue bonds and now borrowing for old-fashioned purposes such as highways and other essential services is being pushed back."

Grain futures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat, corn and soybeans futures prices on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat: 11 1/2 to 12 1/2; corn: 3 1/2 to 4 1/2; soybeans: 10 1/2 to 11 1/2.

Corn and soybeans declined as increased government intervention in the market was feared. Both commodities hit contract lows on the board.

Corn did find some support, however, around the interest for corn at $2.25 per bushel.

The outside market was weaker.

Cabinet council backs natural gas decontrol

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's Cabinet Council has recommended administration support for a complete lifting of natural gas price controls by 1985, industry and government sources said Monday.

The sources said the Cabinet-level group last week decided in favor of a position statement flexible enough to support several different approaches to decontrol legislation.

One such approach, a bill offered by Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, would deregulate gas immediately from wells drilled after Dec. 31, 1980, while phasing out controls on all other gas by 1985.

In favoring a statement of general principles on the issue, the council apparently rejected one plan calling for immediate decontrol of all gas produced after 1977, and another that would have a less drastic initial impact on gas consumer prices.

A July 30 council subpanel memorandum outlining the three options noted that "a major strategy decision" is needed on how specific our stated position should be in light of the likelihood of protracted congressional debate and negotiation.

Under the preferred choice, a position statement would call for a three-year phaseout of controls for all gas by 1985, with controls to be lifted immediately on unspecified types of new gas.

The administration also would insist on ending current legislative restrictions on gas use as well as price subsidies for residential consumers during the phaseout.

A White House memo obtained by Capital Energy Letter said the four-position statement of principles could then be worked into a bill.

The winning option was backed by Energy Secretary James Edwards in a change from his earlier preference for a stretch-out of controls, perhaps to 1987.

Phil Kief, a department spokesman, said he understood the flexible decontrol option was selected. But he cautioned, "It could still all change now because other guys at the White House are taking a look at it."

Bally gains pizza chain

CHICAGO (UPI) — A major pinball machine manufacturer is buying a pizza parlor chain and will convert the restaurants into combination arcade-pizza parlors, a business periodical has reported.

In a $4.5 million stock transaction, Bally Manufacturing Co. acquired Barnaby's Family Inns Inc. This week's issue of Crain's Chicago Business said.

"We bought Barnaby's to give ourselves a running start in the new business," Robert Mullane, Bally's chairman and president, said.

He said he expects the conversions to begin by November and the 11 franchise outlets — most in suburban Chicago and Wisconsin — will reopen under the name Bally's Tom Foolery.

Bally is the biggest operator of arcades in the country. The deal thrusts it into competition with Show Biz Pizza Place and Pizza Time Theatre, innovators in the video-pizza business.

Prior plea in murder case reversed

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In a surprising turn of events, a Twin Falls man withdrew his guilty plea to second-degree murder Monday in 5th District Court.

That means Jon LeRoy Sjogren, 29, who was to be sentenced Monday for the May 26 murder of Donna Hartley Smith, 61, of Twin Falls, will stand trial for first-degree murder.

Sjogren remained in the Twin Falls County Jail without bond following the 5th District Court session.

Sjogren's July 6 guilty plea came after Twin Falls County prosecutor Harry DeHaan agreed to reduce the charge against the defendant to second-degree murder, which carries a maximum life prison term.

According to Sjogren's earlier statement, he walked Smith home from a local bar, became involved in a fight with the victim and knocked her down. Thinking she was dead, Sjogren said he left the victim's home.

Sjogren said he later returned to the home, found the victim on her bed and heard her moan. In a panic, Sjogren said he grabbed a phone off wall and strangled Smith with the telephone cord.

Monday, DeHaan recommended 5th District Court Judge Daniel Meehl sentence Sjogren to a determinate 50-year prison sentence. Under such a sentence, Sjogren would not have been eligible for parole until he served the term, except for an allowance for "good time."

In requesting the harsh sentence, DeHaan characterized Sjogren as a danger to society, with no hope of rehabilitation and as a man who had committed "the most serious offense possible."

In past cases, judges employ indeterminate sentencing under which a defendant is sentenced to a maximum penalty. But that type of sentence leaves to the state Board of Corrections final authority over how long a period the defendant actually serves in prison.

DeHaan's recommendation led Meehl to question Sjogren on his involvement in the crime. The question evoked a surprise response from Sjogren, who said he could not remember actually murdering the

"I remember coming to my senses, standing over her, with the cord around her neck," Sjogren said.

Sjogren added he pleaded guilty to a reduced charge because he feared a jury would convict him of first-degree murder due to his lengthy criminal record and because of the amount of circumstantial evidence against him.

That response led Meehl to call a 10-minute recess, after which the defendant withdrew his guilty plea.

DeHaan then announced he would refile the first-degree murder charge. No date for a trial has been set.

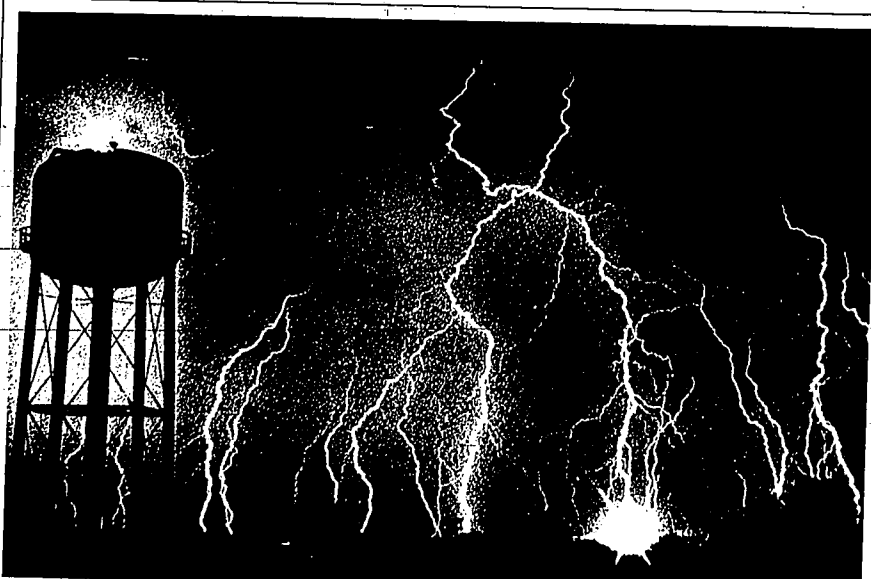

Later, Sjogren's lawyer, Greg

Fuller, said he was as surprised anyone else in the courtroom about the outcome of the hearing.

"This is a complete surprise to me. When I came in today, he had pleaded guilty. Now he's had second thoughts and he can't remember killing her," Fuller said. "I'm back where I started."

But Fuller defended his client's actions, saying if Sjogren couldn't remember actually killing the woman, he had no choice but to plead not guilty.

"He's right in doing that. The only problem is he's taking a gamble."

Lightning: BLM firefighters may hate them, but thunderstorms can be entertaining and a science lesson to boot

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Lightning has carried about as much favor on southern Idaho rangelands this summer as Mrs. O'Leary's cow.

Range and forest fires costing hundreds of thousands of dollars have been attributed to lightning strikes, compounding the area's worst fire season on record.

For the porch spectator, though, the heavenly displays and attendant air-spitting rumbles offer high drama with a science lesson on the side.

Lightning has fascinated mankind for centuries. Early Scandinavians believed "fluffy cumulus clouds were messengers of Thor, god of Thunder. The red-bearded Thor was said to use his enormous strength to help mankind, rumbling across the skies in a goat-drawn chariot.

Scientists now know lightning begins with harmless-looking cumulus clouds that grow to enormous proportions. Static electrical charges build, and ultimately change the chemistry of the air in search of a power-cord to the ground.

George Freier, a physics professor at the University of Minnesota, compiled for students in 1974 a pamphlet on much of what was known about lightning. He titled it "How to Enjoy a Thunderstorm."

Lightning occurs when cumulus clouds grow miles high and — for some unknown reason — become polarized like giant batteries, according to Freier. A small fraction of the positive and negative charges that bind atoms together become separated in the enormous clouds. Positive ions collect near the top, negative ions near the bottom.

When the charge becomes great enough, electrical attraction seeks to correct the imbalance. But charged regions of the cloud often are closer to the ground (or to other clouds) than to the companion charges. As a result, lightning can go down, across, or, seemingly, nowhere.

The charges intensify, says Freier, until a negatively-charged "electron leaves home" — in this case an atom — and displaces another electron in its own search for electrical stability.

Storms spark new rangefires in area

By the Times-News and United Press International

Scattered lightning storms ignited new fires in southern and central Idaho Monday, as firefighters battled the upper hand on a blaze 25 miles west of Jackson.

Salmon National Forest was one of the areas hardest hit. Other new fires were reported on the Payette Forest and on Bureau of Land Management grazing land across southern Idaho.

Firefighters from the Humboldt National Forest predicted containment early today on an 1,800-acre blaze near Elk Mountain, south of Three Creek School. Crews from the Nevada Division of Forestry nearly had the fire contained Sunday morning, according to fire boss Gordon Stevens, but high winds triggered its growth from 100 to 1,000 acres.

Hot spots remained in scattered aspen groves, according to fire information officer Ed Waldapfel. Two crews planned to work until midnight improving the earthen line around the fire.

Both the Shoshone and Burley BLM districts were engaged in fire fights with no estimate for containment Monday night.

A 600-acre fire near Lava Lake northeast of Carey was reported about 4:30 p.m., according to Carlos Mendiolia, Shoshone District fire management officer. A helicopter was dropping water in an effort to keep the man-caused blaze out of a nearby hayfield, Mendiolia said.

Other equipment included six large pumps and a refill tanker. An estimated 100 firefighters were expected on the scene by this morning.

On the Burley District, a 150-acre fire seven miles southeast of Declo was reported at 2:30 p.m. shortly after a small thunder storm passed through the area, according to fire information officer Inez Hannah.

Fire efforts were hampered by a shortage of trained personnel, Hannah said. Several firefighters from the Burley District had already returned to college. Some 12 persons were on the fire, aided by two tankers, a pickup and a bulldozer.

Salmon National Forest spokesman Gordon Daniels said eight fires were reported after the lightning moved through the forest at about 4 p.m. He said most were spot fires, although one near Duck Creek Point was larger and 14 firefighters had been dispatched to that blaze.

Firefighters in the Boise BLM District, meanwhile, extinguished an 8-acre fire south of Mehta. That fire of unknown origin was reported at 1:47 p.m. and declared out before 5:30 p.m., dispatchers said.

Another blaze had been reported in the desert area west of Roseworth, dispatchers said.

Glenns Ferry patrons to vote on school levy

GLENN'S FERRY — Glenns Ferry School District patrons today vote for the third time on a plant facilities levy.

The proposed $45,000 levy would fund purchases of new school buses over the next five years plus cover building maintenance and operation.

Voting locations include King Hill Grange Hall, the school district board room, Glenns Ferry Episcopal Church, Sailor Creek Cafe, Hammett Community Church and the home of Sieert Johnson at Indian Cove.

During the May 19 and June 30 elections, the required two-thirds margin was narrowly missed. In May, 58 percent of the voters favored the additional tax. 64 percent supported the plan in June.

Reed said some of the district's school buses must be replaced from service because of high mileage and increasing engine repairs. It takes about a year for a new bus to be delivered once an order is filed, Reed said.

District administrators also claim numerous repairs needed at school buildings aren't possible with present funding. One example cited involves failing heat registers that are in need of either replacement or extensive repair.

Minidoka harvest fair opens — RUPERT — Minidoka County is holding its harvest fair in Rupert this week.

FFA and 4-H exhibits began arriving at the fairgrounds Monday and will be judged before the public beginning at 6 p.m. Wednesday.

A 4-H and FFA horse show is scheduled Wednesday at 9 a.m., as is swine judging for entrants from the two organizations. Beef judging begins at 2 p.m. A family night variety show follows at 7:30 p.m., featuring the Commencement, a Magic Valley barber shop quartet.

A horse gymnastics for youngsters will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., with 10 classes for entrants age 10 and younger. A hunter-jumper show open to all horse owners will be held 9 a.m. Friday, with English and western divisions.

John Healzer named Jerome County's public defender

JEROME — John J. Healzer Monday became the third Jerome County public defender in a series of appointments by the Jerome County Commissioners.

He switches from being the county's deputy prosecuting attorney to public defender Sept. 1. Also that day, county prosecutor Roger Burdick becomes 5th District Magistrate Court judge for Jerome County and public defender William Dalling becomes prosecutor.

The commissioners approved Healzer's application and upped the public defender contract from $18,000 to $20,000 a year with the 1982 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Healzer said he will hire a full-time secretary for the county workload. And while there is a small office available in the courthouse, he plans to handle the bulk of the work from his own law office. The public defender work is part-time but Healzer said he expects to spend a large part of his time in public defense.

"I will probably spend better than half of the contract amount for secretarial services and other expenses. We will have a part-lawyer (staffer) from our office assisting and I think I can guarantee that the county will have good defense," Healzer said.

He said there is criticism of the public defender program by those who say indigent defendants often have better legal services than the middle income citizen and taxpayer.

"In our society it is required that these people get good defense, and I am dedicated to having the system work. I believe it is necessary that we make quality legal representation available to everyone," Healzer said.

Healzer moved to Jerome about 2½ years ago. After graduating from Kansas State University, he spent four years in the U.S. Air Force as a missile launch officer before earning his law degree from Washburn University in Topeka, Kan. He briefly practiced law in Wichita before coming to Idaho.

"I have always wanted to live in southern Idaho, south central Idaho to be exact. We vacationed here and I liked the area," he said.

Shortly after passing the Idaho bar examination, he joined the Jerome law firm of Hart, Burdick and Healzer. He said he has had a small amount of criminal defense work in Kansas and while Burdick served as Jerome County public defender, he assisted there. When Burdick was elected prosecutor, taking office in January, Healzer joined him as deputy prosecutor.

In recommending Healzer as public defender, Commission Chairman Mel Grindstaff said the other candidate, James Meservy of Twin Falls, apparently dropped out of contention as he had not contacted commissioners since last week.

Healzer and his wife, Connie, have two daughters, Ann, 3, and Paula, 1.

Buhl Community Ed gets city funds

BUHL — The Buhl Community Education Association got $1,500 in city support Monday in an 11th-hour plea before the Buhl City Council.

Proponents of the funding, significantly below the association's earlier proposal for $4,000 in federal revenue sharing money, presented the "one testimony" of a final hearing on Buhl's 1980-81 budget. The council then adopted a $913,190 budget for next year. Of that sum, $276,701 represents the general fund, which is the city's main operating account. The budget also includes $105,000 in federal revenue sharing money.

Education Association spokesman Jack Ramsey told the council Monday that inquiries about community education programs indicate substantial desire for such services in Buhl. Last year, the programs drew 235 registrants.

Ramsey also said there are indications that in future years, federal revenue sharing money could be replaced by user fees and other money generated through the program.

Previously, the Buhl Community Education Association received financial assistance through the College of Southern Idaho, but those funds disappeared in the wake of CSI's financial crunch, Ramsey said. Expenses to be met with federal money the council authorized include the salary for a program coordinator and the cost of liability insurance.

Possible programs this year could include training of teachers' aides and a class on home and family safety, Ramsey said.

Councilmen said they would have preferred Twin Falls County revenue sharing money also help fund the program. But the council added it appears too late for that money to be sought.

In other business Monday, the council said advertising for bids to upgrade Buhl's municipal swimming pool will appear this week, with bid opening tentatively scheduled for Sept. 14.

About $50,000 has been allocated for the project, which includes structural changes in the aging pool, improvement of water circulation, and installation of a heating system and new deck. The work is expected to be finished before winter.

Prison escapee caught

JEROME — An afternoon search by police for a man and woman suspected of possession of stolen credit cards, netted unexpected game — a Utah State Penitentiary escapee.

Greg Garver, 31, has been charged with fraudulent use of a credit card, resisting arrest, forgery.

According to the Idaho State Police, the hunt began at 4:30 a.m. when the Jerome County Sheriff's office received a call from the Traveler's Oasis truck stop that a routine credit card check revealed that a man and a woman were using a stolen credit card to purchase a lot of tires.

The couple set off across the fields west of the Oasis but police lost them in the high growth.

The chase was picked up again when the couple was sighted on the road south of the Oasis.

According to State Police Cpl. Frank Thompson, Jerome Deputy Jim

Howe pulled up next to Garver to make the arrest. Garver was met with unexpected resistance. "He put up a whole of a fight," said Thompson. "He was extremely strong. Howe had a whole handful."

The State Police arrived moments later and when Thompson attempted to assist the deputies in handcuffing the suspect, he said he was lifted from his feet by Garver.

When the suspect was checked through the National Crime Information Center, it was learned that Garver was an escapee from the Utah State Penitentiary. The system didn't give the original charges leading to Garver's imprisonment.

The woman accompanying Garver identified herself as his wife, State Police identified her as Darlene Summerfield, 29, of Utah. She was charged with accessory to fraudulent use of a credit card.

Twin Falls registration set

TWIN FALLS — Registration for Twin Falls High School students will begin Friday, according to school officials.

National Honor Society students, who will be helping with registration, and Seniors will register Friday. Juniors are to register the following Monday and Sophomores Tuesday. Students are to report to the north cafeteria doors at the following times during their registration day:

8:00 to 8:30 Honor students
8:30 to 9:30 1 to M
9:30 to 10:30 F to H
10:30 to 11:30 A to L
11:30 to 12:30 lunch
12:30 to 1:30 N to S
1:30 to 2:30 T to Z

Students must register at the appropriate time. Otherwise they will have to wait until the end of registration to choose their classes.

Classes will begin Wednesday, September 2. All students will report for their first period classes at 8:50 a.m.

Lightning

The second electron kicks out a third, and so on, creating an electron avalanche.

This avalanche "ionizes" the air, making it a better conductor. The electron chain twists and branches in search of a home. Chance high-speed photography has revealed short bursts of positive charge coming from the ground to meet the approaching bolt.

When the path is complete, whammo. The cloud loses its pocket of charge in a splinter of a second.

Large clouds have more than one pocket of charge, scientists believe. Hence, some strokes appear to flicker as other charges, separated by four-hundredths of a second, empty into the ionized "power cord." A lightning flash with 12 strokes would last about half a second. Most flashes, Freier says, hold four or five strokes.

Branches do not flicker because they establish no power link. Using principles of sound and light, one can easily estimate the distance of a lightning strike, as well as the cloud's distance from the ground. Sound travels a mile in about five seconds. So, counting "one-thousand-one, one-thousand-two..." when the flash appears, rumbling at the count of 10 indicates the stroke landed two miles away.

The duration of rumble can similarly gauge the channel's height. If the strike was close, a 2½-second rumble would indicate a strike more than a half-mile long, since sound from one end must travel further than sound from another. Thunder noises can also reflect other clouds, however. Sometimes a brief ripping or tearing noise precedes the first crack of thunder, according to Freier. This tells you initial branches were closer to your ears than was the main channel.

Contrary to common belief, lightning often strikes twice in the same spot. Ask any Forest Service fire spotter who lives in a mountainous, grounded tower. Lookouts often come equipped with wooden stools capped with glass insulators. Spotters have reported phenomena ranging from hair standing on end to eerie blue flames dancing on the appliances.

Lightning can be classified as hot or cold. Cold lightning packs the wallop in a shorter time frame and is less likely to start forest and range fires. There have been instances of people recovering from strikes by cold lightning.

Common sense often is not sufficient to protect outdoor travelers from being struck by lightning. Some safe viewing tips include:

- Don't hide under trees. A youngster in La Grande, Ore., three years ago was killed when he and a fishing companion ducked under a pine tree to avoid a rainstorm. Trees are natural lightning targets and, while the trunk may absorb most of the charge, branches can carry a lethal dose.

- Don't stand in an exposed field either. Your body is a better conductor than the surrounding air.

- Huddle in a ravine, if necessary, or stay in your car. Automobile bodies are well shielded, although it may be unwise to touch two different metal objects within the car at the same time.

- Do not fly a kite under any circumstances. Benjamin Franklin's kite may have encountered a small field of charge, but it is doubtful he would have survived a direct hit.

Front porch viewing offers little risk, and allows some of the best views of late-August storms in the Magic Valley. So relax, enjoy the spectacle. And if your friends believe in Thor, count silently.

Police probe alleged rape

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Police are investigating an alleged rape of a Twin Falls woman Thursday night.

Police said the woman reported Friday that she had been assaulted by two men when she stopped on Fifth Street to untangle her pantleg from the chain of her bicycle. She said she was then raped by one of the assailants while the other held her down.

Man pleads to vandalism

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man pleaded guilty to reckless driving and malicious destruction of property and was released on $550 combined bail Monday.

According to witnesses, Robert E.

Easter, 22, of route 1, Twin Falls, drove his vehicle across the lawn of the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Friday night. The four-wheel-drive vehicle became stuck in the recently-watered lawn and Easter was arrested by hospital security officers. The hospital lawn suffered an estimated $1,000 damage.

Canyon Springs paving proposal heard by council

TWIN FALLS — The proposed paving of Canyon Springs Road resurfaced Monday before the Twin Falls City Council.

Mayor Hank Woodall assured a group of persons voicing their protest that it will receive council consideration, but he said the council was not in a position to make any commitments Monday night.

The project has received sporadic consideration for a number of years, according to Canyon Springs Golf Course owner Joe McCollum, who said the road as it now exists is well suited for paving.

City Councilman Chris Talkington said options to be studied should include the possibility of shared funding by the city, the Bureau of Land Management, Canyon Springs Golf Course and other canyon property owners. The cost of the project is uncertain.

Buhl temporarily closes driver's license bureau

BUHL — No driver's licenses will be issued in Buhl Tuesday because of repairs being made to the camera.

The office will be closed this week only. Meanwhile, tests can be taken at the Twin Falls County Courthouse in Twin Falls.

News of Record

TWIN FALLS COUNTY — THEFT — Twin Falls police are investigating a burglary of a Twin Falls woman's home. Lottie Jensen of 1047 Elm Street reported an estimated $810 in cash and jewelry was stolen from her home Friday.

Buffered aspirin may be best single dose

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A medical newsletter trying to help people make some sense out of the bewildering variety of aspirin products on the drugstore shelves says buffered aspirin solutions may be the best way to take a single dose of aspirin.

But The Medical Letter, a non-profit biweekly publication on drugs, says buffered aspirin solutions are not suitable for long-term use because of their high sodium content and the chemical changes they cause.

In addition to buffered aspirin solutions, aspirin is available as plain tablets, as buffered aspirin tablets, as timed-release capsules and in formulations combined with other drugs.

Scores of aspirin-containing products are available to consumers. The newsletter concluded that there are no simple answers to choosing among the widely used formulations.

The Medical Letter said plain aspirin tablets disintegrate in the stomach and dissolve primarily in the small intestine. The rate these products dissolve determines the rate they are absorbed into the blood and, presumably when they begin to produce pain relief.

The newsletter said improperly manufactured tablets may be so tightly compressed that they do not disintegrate easily, or they may crumble before use.

If said pharmaceutical differences between tablets can produce differences in the body, but "no controlled trials have been done to show that any one brand of plain aspirin is a better analgesic than any other."

Dear Abby

Wife smokes so he leaves

By ABIGAIL V. BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: While my wife and I were vacationing in Washington, D.C., we had dinner in the dining room of an elegant hotel.

After dinner, coffee was served, and since the tables were quite close together I told my wife that we had better ask the couple sitting at the table next to us if they objected to our smoking. (My wife and I both smoke.) When I asked, the gentleman very graciously thanked me for asking and said they would appreciate it if we didn't smoke.

Within two minutes, my wife lit a cigarette! I politely reminded her that we had agreed not to smoke, but she went right on smoking and said, "They wouldn't have put ashtrays on the table if they didn't expect people to smoke."

I left the table, found our waiter, paid him and didn't return. Consequently I caught him — from my wife, who said I was rude for leaving her alone at the table. Please straighten one of us out.

— J.C. IN BERKELEY

DEAR J.C.: I think you both need a little straightening out! Your wife's behavior was rude and childish, but the punishment you chose in retaliation was inappropriate. Better to have apologized to your neighbors for your wife's rudeness.

You'd have probably caught him — for it, but the face with the egg on it would have been your wife's.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are now retired and travel a great deal. We always bring back some inexpensive but interesting souvenirs as gifts for our friends. Our parents, now long deceased, always did it, and we have imitated their example.

Our question: Has this custom gone out of style? Last week, good friends returned from the Middle East and invited us over to show us a wonderful assortment of curios and trinkets from boutiques where they obviously spent hours shopping. All their souvenirs were for themselves only. Not one little memento for us!

Last evening, a couple with whom we have been very friendly for over 50 years returned from a trip around the world with a wonderful collection of souvenirs that they proudly showed us. Not a single package for either of us!

Abby, my husband and I have never failed to remember our friends with token gifts purchased in foreign lands. We are hurt and amazed at their lack of reciprocity. Or is bringing back gifts from trips a thing of the past?

— DISAPPOINTED
DEAR DISAPPOINTED: No. That charming and thoughtful practice still flourishes among the generous, sensitive and well-bred.

DEAR ABBY: Recently someone wrote to you stating that an alien had married a U.S. citizen in order to obtain permanent resident status in the U.S. Such action by a foreign national is, in fact, a violation of the U.S. criminal and immigration laws.

Aliens should be "informed" that fraudulent marriages cannot be used as a basis for gaining immigration benefits, but rather will result in deportation from the United States forever.

— DAN D. DANILOV, ATTORNEY AT LAW, SEATTLE, WASH.

DEAR MR. DANILOV: Thank you for the official kiss of death on phony marriages between aliens who marry U.S. citizens in order to obtain immigration benefits. But when one says, "I love you," when in fact it's the immigration benefits he/she loves, who's to know ... unless the alien confesses, which is highly unlikely?

DEAR ABBY: I went with a married man for 14 years and I never looked at another man in all that time.

His wife died after a very short illness and I thought for sure he would marry me, but do you know what happened? He married a young girl he had known only three months!

I asked him why he didn't marry me, and he said he could never respect a woman who went with a married man for 14 years.

Acne not just for teenagers

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 31 years old and have been having more trouble with blemishes the last few years than when I was a teenager.

A dermatologist I consulted for a year gave me pills and some cream for my face. After I went off the pills it started all over again. I can't afford to keep seeing a specialist and I don't want to be on pills all the time.

I break out with big red bumps on both sides of my face and I also have a lot of blackheads. I wash my face twice a day and wash my hair every other day. Is it possible to have dry and oily skin at the same time? My forehead and just below my eyes are real itchy.

DEAR READER — You don't have to be a teen-ager to have acne; that is just when it usually begins. I do think that anyone who has persistent acne problems should see a doctor.

In severe cases, treatment can prevent scarring and permanent blemishes.

There are three main aspects of treatment — drying up oily skin, promoting peeling to open pores to promote drainage and use of antibiotics to prevent bacterial action that leads to the red inflamed pustules.

You can't wash away blackheads. They are below the surface of the skin and not dirt, but oily plugs of sebum formed by your skin glands. Soaking with warm water and gentle rubbing with a warm wet washcloth helps.

To give you more details about the management of acne I am sending you The Health Letter No. 82, Acne Can Be Treated. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N. Y. 10109. As it explains, you should avoid oily or greasy preparations for your face as these all make matters worse.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 12-year-old girl and I need a letter to you about how much milk you need.

My mother always says the same thing you said — that you need three glasses of milk a day. When I was younger I was fussy about everything. Now my only problem is milk. I hate it!

My mother makes fresh yogurt every day. Would it be OK if I had four cups of yogurt every day instead of milk? She says I need the calcium for growth. Is it too late for me to benefit from it and have a healthy life?

DEAR READER — No, it is seldom too late to get some benefits from improved health habits.

Remember — you can use yogurt as a substitute for milk. The important point is to get enough good quality protein and enough calcium in your diet. The calcium supports your bone growth and at your age you are probably still growing. You will get about the same amount of calcium from your yogurt as you would from milk.

Houston running back Earl Campbell places $2100 Rolex watch on Leon Gray's wrist while other Oilers wait for theirs

Campbell 'watches' out for Oilers

HOUSTON (UPI) — True to his word, halfback Earl Campbell Monday presented watches worth $2,100 each to Houston Oilers linemen and one fullback whose blocking in 1980 helped him win the NFL rushing title.

Campbell made the presentations of 12 watches during a team meeting and head coach Ed Biles told about it later at a news conference.

"Once again this shows the kind of class Earl has," Biles said. "He did it in a team function without fanfare. He doesn't know that I am telling you about it."

Campbell's total of 1,934 yards in 1980 was the second best one-season rushing performance in NFL history.

Campbell had promised his teammates watches during the 1980 pre-season camp — after he had led the NFL in rushing each of his first two years in the league.

The only non-lineman to receive a watch, which a jeweler said retailed for $2,100, was fullback Tim Wilson. The others on Campbell's list were tight ends Rich Caster, Mike Barber and Dave Casper, and linemen Leon Gray, Morris Towns, Angelo Fields, Ed Fisher, Carl Mauck, David Carlier, Conway Hayman and Bob Young.

Hayman and Young are no longer on the team.

High baseball salaries just, Aaron says

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Henry Aaron, who hit more home runs than any other player in the history of the game, said Monday the game's top stars deserve the big salaries they are getting.

"Who started this salary war?" he asked. "Nobody's sticking a gun to the owners' faces. Dave Winfield would be a fool not to accept his money if (Yankee owner) George Steinbrenner wants to pay him."

Aaron, who was here to be honored in ceremonies before Monday night's Milwaukee-Browers-Chicago-White Sox game, said if he were playing today he would ask for the same salary Los Angeles Laker guard Magic Johnson gets — $1 million a year.

But he added with a chuckle, "Mine would have to be tax-free."

"The thing that bothers me is where are the owners getting the money to pay out the millions of dollars," he said.

"During the strike negotiations the ballplayers told the owners, 'Let's see the financial books if you say you haven't the money to pay.' The owners didn't want to show them. I don't see many franchises up for sale."

Aaron said the new baseball contract is bad for owners because "ball clubs can't protect so many good players. You're going to see players ask for more money and the owners are going to pay them."

He said Ted Turner, owner of the Braves, offered him the job as the team's general manager after Bill Lucas, who is Aaron's former brother-in-law, died.

He said he turned it down because he was "involved in a lot of things" and would not like the job.

"In order to sign a player," he said to deal with two players," he said. "Half of the players in our minor league system have agents."

"These agents try and sign as many players as they can, hoping they can come up with a big star. But they don't know a baseball player from a pumpkin."

He said he can continue in his current post with the Braves "as long as I want to" because he and Turner have a good relationship.

Corruption continues to disrupt athletics

New Mexico assistant coach receives penalty

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Former New Mexico assistant basketball coach Manny Goldstein was fined $1,368 Monday and placed on 18 months supervised probation for his convictions on single counts of fraud and filing of a false public voucher.

District Judge W. John Brennan also ordered Goldstein to pay back the $684 he cheated UNM out of on a New York City recruiting trip Aug. 30-Sept. 3, 1979.

Goldstein's lawyers had indicated prior to Monday's sentencing, however, that the 53-year-old defendant planned to make restitution.

There was no immediate word on whether Goldstein would appeal last Friday's conviction. A jury that deliberated a little more than three hours also acquitted Goldstein on four related counts.

Goldstein, talkative and bitter following his sentencing Monday, last week told a few local reporters, accusing one of perjuring himself during the trial.

District Judge W. John Brennan, who sentenced Goldstein, also required the ex-assistant coach to pay about $20 a month for his supervised probation. Brennan said Goldstein could avoid prison time by heeding the terms of the sentencing, including payment of both the fine and the restitution money.

Goldstein's former boss, ex-UNM head basketball coach Norm Ellenberger, was convicted recently of 21 counts of fraud and filing false public vouchers.

The judge in that case, Phillip Balamonte, sentenced Ellenberger to a year's unsupervised probation, did not require restitution and left open the possibility that Ellenberger's conviction eventually would be expunged from the record.

Balamonte, who voiced disfavor with college athletes during his remarks at sentencing, said other college coaches had committed the same kinds of acts for which Ellenberger was convicted. He said he would not be a party to "hypocrisy" by handing Ellenberger a tough sentence.

But the lenient sentence drew sharp criticism from the Ellenberger jury, prompted local editorials and provoked a raft of angry letters.

Witness says cops put guns to Settles' head

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A witness to the arrest of Long Beach State football star Ron Settles, who was found hanging in his jail cell hours after being booked, told a coroner's inquest Monday that two police officers put their guns to Settles' head while picking him up for a minor traffic violation.

The coroner's inquest was sought by friends and relatives of Settles, who said it was inconceivable that the 21-year-old Settles, who would have been a senior at Long Beach State this year and appeared to have a bright football future, would have taken his own life following the arrest last June.

In Monday-morning's session, Gloria Zabala said she witnessed Settles' arrest while waiting for a bus on a busy street. She said Officer Jerry Lee Brown, the main arresting officer, asked Settles for his driver's license and car registration but the football star refused to give him either.

An argument then ensued, Zabala said, with Brown at one point calling Settles an "asshole." Moments later, another patrol car arrived at the scene and two more officers walked to Settles' car. After a brief "tug-of-war" with Settles trying to keep his car door closed and the officers trying to pull it open, she said, Settles was dragged out of his car.

"Then the two officers drew their guns and placed them on either side of his head," Zabala continued. "The guns were right against the man's temples."

Settles was then handcuffed, put in the second police car and taken away, she said.

The official police report said Settles hanged himself in his jail cell, using a mattress cover, about three hours after the arrest. He was booked on charges of assault with a deadly weapon on a police officer, possession of cocaine and refusing to identify himself.

During his booking, Settles was severely beaten about the head and neck by at least two Signal Hill policemen. Chief Gaylord Wert initially said Settles had only been struck on his thigh with a nightstick when he became violent inside the police station, but later recanted that story and admitted the severe beating occurred.

NFL clubs keep trimming rosters; veteran QB Lee cut

By United Press International

The youth movement has bounced quarterback Bob Lee off the Los Angeles Rams.

Lee, a backup for most of his 12 NFL seasons, was one of seven players waived Monday by the Rams as the 28 teams must trim their rosters to 50 players by 2 p.m. MDT today.

By waiving Lee, 35, the Rams are still left with three quarterbacks, starter Pat Haden, Jeff Rutledge and rookie Jeff Kemp.

Lee was signed by the Rams late in 1979 after Haden was out for the season and Vince Ferragamo was coming off an injury. Last season, Lee did not throw a pass. He began his career with Minnesota, was traded to Atlanta and signed again with the Vikings before coming to Los Angeles.

For his career, Lee completed 368-of-730 passes for 5,034 yards and 30 touchdowns.

The Rams also announced that rookie running back Robert Alexander would be lost for the year after undergoing knee surgery. Alexander, the team's fifth-round draft choice from West Virginia, was hurt in Friday's loss to San Diego. Also placed on injured reserve was offensive tackle Art Plunkett, who sprained his lower back.

Washington Coach Joe Gibbs apparently has decided to keep some youth on his roster and waived three players, including defensive end Fred Cook.

Cook, 29, a 7-year veteran obtained July 18 in a trade with Baltimore, played 104 consecutive games with Baltimore since 1974. The Redskins tried him at left and right defensive end in exhibition play.

Steve McMichael and Doug McDougald, a pair of once promising defensive linemen taken early in the 1980 draft, were among 10 players waived by the New England Patriots. Also placed on waivers was punter Ken Naber, an eighth-round draft choice. The move guarantees Mike Hubach the punting job for the second straight year. The Patriots also waived tight end Terry Nelson, who signed as a free agent after Russ Francis retired.

Dallas cut punter Curt Carlson, which once again leaves the punting chores to quarterback Danny White as the Cowboys trimmed their roster to 56. Coach Tom Landry had said he was looking for someone to replace White, but none of the four punters in training camp could win the job.

The Houston Oilers, uncertain about the severity of Clifford Nielsen's shoulder injury, said they will keep quarterback Kenny Stabler on the roster for at least another week in hopes he would come out of retirement. The Oilers trimmed their roster to 52, placing linebacker Art Stringer on the physically unable to perform list and placing rookies Delbert Fowler and Larry Jones on injured reserve.

"We plan on carrying Kenny on the active unit for a little while longer," Coach Ed Biles said in a prepared statement. "Yes, this does open up the door for Kenny to come back. Yes, Ladd (Hertzog, Oilers' general manager) has talked to Kenny's agent."

Kansas City released veteran center Charlie Ane and three other players to reduce its roster to 55. Ane, 28, played six seasons with the Chiefs as a backup center to Jack Rudny.

Tampa Bay cut its roster to 51 by waiving nine players, including fourth-year linebacker Aaron Brown. Also waived were running back Rick Berns, tackle Rickey Dozier, quarterback Jeff Quinn, wide receiver Bo Taylor, running back Robert Thomas, punter Frank Garcia, defensive end Ted Vincent and nose tackle Mark Maack.

Miami reached the 50-player limit by waiving nine players and placing safety Doug Beaudoin on injured reserve. Among those cut were quarterback Brad Wright, guard Thom Drombrow, guard Vince Cowell and wide receiver Sam Greene.

Minnesota reduced its roster to 55 by cutting five players, including running back Garry White and wide receiver James Murphy. Murphy, a 10th-round pick from Utah State made several spectacular catches early in camp, but then faded, said Coach Bud Grant.

Pass receiving was also White's downfall, a team spokesman said.

Irwin must fend off surging Clampett

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (UPI) — Hale Irwin showed he is ready for this year's World Series of Golf — but look out for Bobby Clampett.

Irwin won for the second time this season Sunday, taking the $50,000 Buick Open in a playoff, but Clampett finished second for the fourth time and golf's most charismatic newsmaker could break through for his first victory any week.

Irwin, spurred on by the memory of what for him was a bad 1980, (no wins and 38th on the money winning list) won the Hawaiian Open in the early part of the PGA Tour this year.

This enabled him to taper off his tour playing in the summer, taking a week off here and two weeks there until his idle time totaled seven weeks.

The Buick Open, back on the tour as a regular stop after an absence of 11 years, was to be the two-time U.S.

Open champion's tuneup for the World Series of Golf.

"I wanted to play this tournament before the World Series," Irwin said after besting Clampett, defending champion Peter Jacobsen and Dr. Gil Morgan by sinking a 17-foot birdie putt on the second sudden death hole.

"But I can give you 63,000 reasons why I wanted to win this one," said Irwin, whose $63,000 addition jumped him from eighth to fifth on the PGA Tour earnings list with a total of $248,649 this season.

All three second-place finishers got $26,133 for their efforts and in Clampett's case it vaulted him past two others into 14th place on the earnings list and into the field for the World Series of Golf.

The top 15 money winners automatically qualify for the World Series of Golf and both Clampett and long-hitting Lon Hinkle moved ahead of Keith Fergus, who did not play in the Buick Open.

"Bobby Clampett is a good golfer and he's going to win a lot of money," Irwin predicted.

Clampett, 21, has a lot going for him, not the least of which is his golf ability.

He came into last year's Buick Open, then a satellite event, and tied for eighth to win the Player's Card without having to go through the Qualifying School. He wound up with $10,190 his rookie season.

Now Clampett has added the Buick to his list of runner-up finishes that includes the Bing Crosby, Western Open and Greater Hartford Open — a second season worthy of the likes of golfing greats like Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Lee Trevino.

Golf galleries already have sniffed out that special electricity present only in the young Clampett, the former Brigham Young player. He was the crowd favorite for the final round though he was playing with the better-known Irwin and British Open champion Bill Rogers.

His frizzy hair and facial resemblance to one of the late Marx brothers has earned him the nickname "Harpo" among his fellows.

He also is a media charmer. Any guy who throws cold water in his face to wake himself in the middle of a golf tournament can't be all bad.

Clampett so far is best known for hitting shots from his knees as a non-competing courtesy player in last year's U.S. Open — and getting asked by the officials to leave the course in the middle of the round.

The ability, eccentricity, gallery popularity and quotability are a combination that occur only rarely on the sports scene and guarantee Clampett fame — provided he can win a few important golf tournaments.

Little league baseball stars prepare for World Series

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (UPI) — The eight All-Star teams preparing for the 35th Little League Baseball World Series worked out Monday.

The 11- and 12-year-old boys from five nations worked out at Lamade Stadium in preparation for today's opening game.

The only undefeated team this year is Escandido, Calif., with a 15-0 record, followed by Tai Chung, Taiwan, the defending champions the past four years, with a 19-1 record. Monterrey, Mexico, is 16-1 and Barrington, Ill., is 16-2.

In today's first-round games, the SHAPE (Supreme Headquarters for Allied Powers in Europe) team of Belgium, 6-1, plays Trail, British Columbia, 16-3, and Stamford, Conn., 13-1, meets Tampa, Fla., 15-1.

In the single-elimination tournament, the Taiwan Escandido plays Barrington and the Taiwan team, which has won nine world titles since 1969, faces Monterrey, which won in 1957 and 1958.

Liao Te-sui of Taiwan said he has not decided on his starting pitcher.

When asked what he thought of his team's chances, the 47-year-old school cashier said through an interpreter: "Maybe after Tuesday we can figure out better teams. After I see other teams, I can figure out competition."

Jose Luis Gonzalez, the Monterrey manager, said his pitcher most likely will be right-hander Rolando Zamorano, 8-0 for the season.

Sure-thing play works when East led it at trick two. But he would have felt rather silly if East had only dealt a five-card suit, so East played his king and West ruffed.

Now West led the queen of diamonds to South's ace. South's first thought was to run off trumps and pray for rain in the form of some really bad discarding by East and West. Then South decided that wouldn't work.

As he explained later on, he looked at the players and they didn't look like they were unable to play cards.

Now South worked out a sure-thing play. That is, it would be a sure thing as long as East held the ace of clubs. South led another heart. West ruffed with the nine and led a trump. South won and ruffed his last heart with dummy's eight.

Next, came the king of clubs play. East played his ace. South ruffed and drew trumps. Finally, he led a diamond to dummy's king diamond on the queen of clubs. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
