

Reagan uncovers unpopular cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan outlined Thursday night his latest plan to balance the budget by 1984.

A 12 percent spending cut for most federal programs, a tax crackdown and the death of the Energy and Education agencies were among his proposals.

In a nationwide broadcast address from the Oval Office, Reagan said he would ask Congress to cut outlays for fiscal 1982 by $13 billion, on top of the $35 billion reduction already approved. He said this was necessary to keep a lid on next year's deficit, now predicted to reach $43.1 billion.

Reagan proposed cuts in defense spending, but only about 1 percent of the total budget — $3 billion in 1982 and $13 billion over three years.

And he disclosed plans to generate another $3 billion in government income — nearly $1 billion in fees charged to users of federal waterways and air services — in the fiscal year that begins next week.

While calling for the end of some tax loopholes, Reagan refused to tamper with the personal-income tax cut that takes effect Oct. 1 and steered clear of a proposal that Social Security cost-of-living boosts be delayed to save money.

Sitting behind his broad desk, his hands clasped before him, Reagan interrupted his austerely pitched to announce he wants a special panel — named by House and Senate leaders and the White House — "to remove Social Security once and for all from politics."

Reagan, wearing a blue suit and mottled polka dot tie, was coolly composed as he built his case for fiscal restraint. He said the national debt will soon reach $1 trillion and the cost of interest payments alone now amount to more than $96 billion.

"Washington spends more on interest than on all of its education, nutrition and medical programs combined," he said, blaming federal borrowing for much of the squeeze on money markets.

He pledged to "hold to a firm, steady course" as he tries to pull the nation out of "the economic swamp we've been in for so long."

"I believe we've chosen a path that leads to an America at work, to fiscal sanity, to lower taxes and less inflation," he said. "I believe our plan for recovery is sound and it will work."

The television appeal to the people was in the style that won budget and tax cut victories this summer. Offering a mixture of close reasoning spiced with gentle anecdotes, Reagan hinted there is some flexibility in his new proposals.

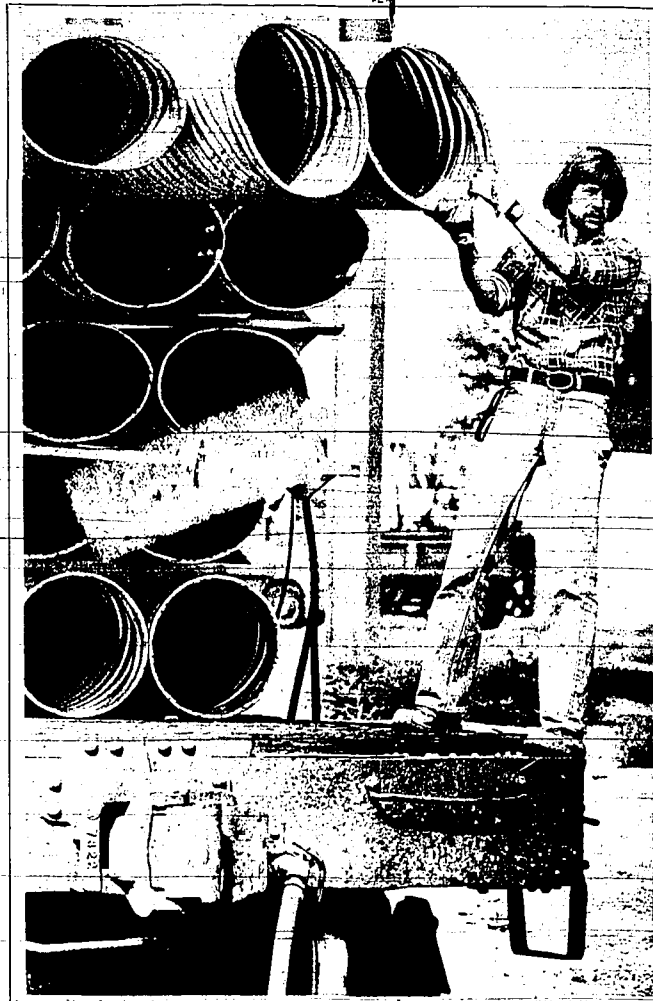

"I recognize that many in Congress may have other alternatives; and I welcome a dialogue with them," the president said.

"But let there be no mistake: we have no choice but to continue down the road toward a balanced budget — a budget that will keep us strong at home and secure overseas."

"None of these steps will be easy," Reagan said. "I know we are asking for sacrifices from virtually all of you, but there is no alternative."

Reagan promised, "Benefits for the needy will be protected," but he said he would cut "the food stamp and Medicaid programs, for example, will be stopped."

Deeper budget cuts have local concern

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The president is calling for more budget cuts, and not everyone is thrilled.

"I'll tell you one thing, the farmers and small businessmen in our area better watch out for reductions in programs they've relied on, like the Small Business Administration and the Farmers Home Administration," warned Buhl businessman George Anthony.

In an informal Times-News phone survey, all Magic Valley residents contacted support President Ronald Reagan's goal of fiscal stability, but not all favor his methods. In a national address Thursday night, Reagan called for an additional $16-billion budget cut during 1982 and a revamped Social Security system.

Everyone agreed on one thing: There's more bell-lightening ahead for individuals, businesses and local service agencies alike.

"I think we should back him," said Sen. Ken Bradshaw, R-Wendell. "Golly, if we don't, what's the alternative? The alternative is bankruptcy for the nation.

"I think it's the right direction, and I believe his proposal makes sense," Bradshaw said.

But he admitted that Reagan's plan will force Idaho agencies and public schools to face some "harsh realities."

"These people will have to look for a way to do the job with what they have," he said. "It's sad, but sometimes a taxing agency has to go broke before it can see where savings and better operation can be made."

As an example, Bradshaw cited his hometown's Wendell School District, which ended up with an approximate $90,000 debt about three years ago.

"The school district tried and failed two times to pass an override levy, but just a year ago they'd paid off the debts, had $25,000 in the bank and had managed to give their teachers raises," he said.

"I asked the superintendent how they'd done it, and he said they had to eliminate a few teacher positions, but mostly, they watched their expenses and supplies — always looking for places to save money," Bradshaw said.

"That's what we're all going to have to do to make Reagan's plan work: look for savings while we're still solvent before we end up bankrupt. At some point you have to stop asking for more money."

Bradshaw, who is 70, said much the same about Reagan's call for a more tightly managed Social Security system, with checks for waste and fraudulent filings.

"If Reagan doesn't get this (Social Security) into financial stability, the old people of our area are going to wake up and not even get a check," he said. "Politicians are great at voting for something and letting the next generation pay for it. Well, we're paying for Social Security right now."

Democratic Party Executive Council, says the idea of balancing the budget is a mandatory goal, but he disagrees with how the administration proposes to do it.

"You can't do it by cutting in one place while bolstering up somewhere

Reagan's second trip around not as sweet on Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Senate-Republican leaders said Thursday night it will be tough to give President Reagan the new round of budget cuts he wants.

Congress may cut defense spending more than Reagan proposed, they said.

And the opposition to Reagan's plans to abolish two Cabinet departments was bipartisan.

Sen. Finance Committee chairman Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "It's going to be tough" to give the president the budget cuts he outlined in a 27-minute nationally televised address.

"No one is enthusiastic about facing up to additional budget cuts," said Dole, who helped steer the recent tax cut and farm bills through Congress. "We will be very slow to cut further into the nutrition and social program areas."

Dole and assistant Republican leader Ted Stevens of Alaska said defense probably will be the target of deeper cuts than the president proposed.

Stevens said it would be "very difficult" to cut most federal programs by an additional 12 percent as the president suggested while proposing that defense spending be cut by just 2 percent.

Stevens also speculated that Congress would cut defense spending much more than the $2 billion the president agreed to slice from the military budget — perhaps up to $4 billion to $5 billion.

"I think it can be done," he said of the president's latest budget-cutting plan, "but not specifically the way he wants."

Liberal Democrats blasted Reagan for slashing social programs while proposing to cut Pentagon spending by a smaller amount.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said Reagan "offers a simplistic fixed percentage cut across the board in discretionary domestic programs."

"So much for their talk of measuring program effectiveness and preserving the social safety net. All programs are to be slashed, regardless of their worth, and the social safety net will soon be more holes than net."

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, called Reagan's proposals "discriminatory... deliberately cutting into programs that serve the elderly, the kids and the poor of this country."

And Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., said, "The president has gone too far in cutting the non-defense portions of the budget... and the American people are going to say 'enough.'"

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., said Reagan "has got a problem," and Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California said, "Plainly his economic program will not work."

But House Republican leader Bob Michel said he was "prepared to meet the challenge" of reducing government costs even further.

Higher states tax suggested

State legislative plan to aid higher education

BOISE (UPI) — An interim legislative committee studying ways of financing higher education recommended Thursday an increase in the sales tax, should the need for additional revenue arise.

The vote came after Legislative Council staff presented several proposals to raise the sales tax to 4.5 or 6 percent and eliminate all sales tax exemptions. The presentation was requested by committee Chairman Rep. Dan Kelly, R-Mountain Home.

Another proposal would set aside 1 percent of sales tax collections to pay off debts incurred to present by Idaho's three public universities and college.

The measure would raise about $46 million the first year, enough to eliminate the $44 million state higher education institutions owe for construction of buildings on their campuses.

Kelly said after the current building indebtedness was paid off, student fees for construction also could be eliminated.

"This leaves a clear cut line of what you can do with tuition," Kelly said.

However, Sen. David Little, R-Emmett, said the committee should recommend cutbacks in higher education.

"I think we've made mistakes in Idaho in the past," Little said. "We have too much. We're just going to have to cut down."

He said the committee should answer the question "what can we do to improve education without spending more and more money?"

Kelly disagreed, saying the Legislature also must look forward to providing for the needs of Idaho students 20 years from now.

Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer, opposed any tax increases at all.

"I, at this time, am not ready to support any kind of a tax increase," Knigge said. "As far as closing schools down, once you start a program it's politically impossible to terminate it."

He said additional revenue should be made up by the students and communities who use the universities and college.

Mrs. Klein said the committee's tuition recommendation "opened one door" to providing supplemental funds for higher education.

Inflation rate remains at double-digit mark

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer price inflation stayed in double digits for the 10th consecutive annual with a jump in housing costs leading the way, the government reported Thursday.

The "market basket" of goods and services used for comparison by the Labor Department grew 0.8 percent more expensive in August, with medical care and food costs helping to spur the rise. All figures reported were seasonally adjusted.

Although last month's rise was gentle compared to July's 15.2 percent annual growth, the increase was notably worse than several previous months. Those happier figures prompted one administration spokesman to declare in May, "Double digit inflation as a phenomenon is behind us."

Despite the new figures, Jerry Jordan — a member of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers — told Congress Thursday, "We think we are on course and that inflation will decline further by 1 or 2 percentage points in 1982."

Jordan said the administration still expects the total 1981 consumer price increase to hang just below double digits — 9.9 percent.

Last year, the cost of living went up 12.4 percent. So far this year, the Labor Department said, actual performance indicates an annual inflation rate of 9.6 percent.

The August accounting also showed the medical care index zooming upward, while food price increases were fairly strong and energy costs hardly changed.

But the various costs associated with housing — especially record mortgage interest rates and rent — accounted for 54 percent of the entire monthly change, department analysts said.

The Consumer Price Index for August was 275.5, which meant goods and services that cost $100 in 1967 had gone up to $275.50.

Medical care turned in an eighth consecutive month of large increases, with August up 1.3 percent, the same amount as July. Hospital rooms were 2.5 percent more expensive in August alone, an annual rate of increase of around 26 percent.

Food prices were up 0.7 percent for the month, slightly less than July's 0.8 percent, but more than any other month this year.

U.S. will meet Soviets for nuclear arms negotiations

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States and the Soviet Union, in an agreement that took two years to achieve, will start arms control talks in Geneva in November on medium-range nuclear missiles stationed in Europe. It was announced Thursday.

The simultaneous announcement from Moscow and New York said that the missile talks will begin in Geneva November 30, and will be headed by Paul Nitze, a former member of the SALT I negotiating team and a prominent critic of the SALT II treaty that was signed but never ratified by the United States. The Soviet team will be headed by Ambassador U.A. Kvitlinsky. The carefully worded joint U.S. announcement does not mention the type of missiles to be controlled, because there is a continuing disagreement between the two sides about the scope of the talks. The official announcement speaks of "those nuclear arms which were earlier discussed between the U.S.

and USSR representatives in Geneva. U.S. officials say that this refers to the so-called Theater Nuclear Force missiles (TNF). On the Soviet side that would include the approximately 270 SS-20s already in place in eastern Europe and on the western side the 572 cruise and Pershing II missiles which are now under development. However, the Soviets want the western powers to include so-called Forward Based Systems, which are nuclear-capable aircraft based in western Europe or on aircraft carriers near Europe, and which have the range to reach Soviet territory. The agreed announcement was made 14 hours after Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko finished their first meeting, a four-hour session, most of which was without any of their advisors present. The announcement said, "Both sides agreed on the importance of these negotiations for enhancing stability and international security and pledged to spare no effort to reach an appropriate agreement." A spokesman for Haig, Dean Fischer said "We are talking about TNF," without specifying which weapons systems would be included, but apparently ruling out any discussion of American aircraft stationed in western Europe. Fischer said European allies will be briefed on the talks with Gromyko and that Haig spoke to President Reagan by telephone Wednesday night. When the NATO Council authorized the alliance to move ahead on the TNF missiles, it also insisted that the United States approach the Soviet Union on talks to lead to the mutual reduction of the weapons. This was done in 1980 and the Soviets, when approached, agreed to the talks on the condition that there be a moratorium on further deployment. This was rejected by the United States on the ground that it would give the Soviets a permanent, built-in advantage, since the western weapons were still on the drawing boards, while the Soviets had their missiles in place.

Washington nuke plants on hold

SEATTLE (UPI) — Representatives of 88 Northwest public utilities Thursday endorsed a $150 million rescue plan that calls for mothballing two unfinished nuclear power plants for two years.

The seven-member Panel on Nuclear Energy unanimously recommended the 88 utilities owning shares in the plants, as well as non-participating private utilities and certain industries, come up with the money as the only way to prevent immediate abandonment.

The Washington, Oregon and Idaho public utilities have until next Wednesday to approve the mothballing of Washington Public Power Supply System plants No. 4 and 5 at Hanford and Satsop. The utilities will have to raise their electric rates to meet the obligation.

Robert Ferguson, managing director of Washington Public Power, told participants money has all but run out for the two nuclear generating plants and they will have to be abandoned as early as next week unless Northwest utilities fund the rescue plan.

He said the $150 million is needed to keep the plants barely alive until June 30, 1983.

"A commitment to a source of funds is desirable in the very, very near future to avoid what we call forced termination," Ferguson said.

Under the proposal, the participants will pay $60 million — or 40 percent of the cost — and the rest will come from private utilities and industries in the region which now buy power directly from the Bonneville Power Administration.

Agca didn't act alone, trial judges declare

ROME (UPI) — Mehmet Ali Agca, the Turkish gunman convicted of trying to kill Pope John Paul II was not a lone fanatic but was part of an international terrorist conspiracy, the judges who tried him said Thursday.

But the judges' full 51-page opinion, issued more than two months after they sentenced Agca to life in prison, said there was no solid evidence to identify the other conspirators or determine why they wanted the Polish-born John Paul dead.

"Agca was only the visible part of a conspiracy whose other members are unfortunately not identified," the judges said of the attempt on the pope's life in the Vatican's St. Peter's Square May 13.

Earlier the Vatican denied Italian newspaper reports that John Paul was wearing a bullet-proof vest at the time of the shooting. The pope was wounded in the abdomen, the left hand and upper right arm in the May 13 attack, but is now recovered. The opinion, signed by Judge Nino Abbate, said: "The managing figure of Mehmet Ali Agca appeared suddenly in the crowd to carry out, almost with bureaucratic coldness, a mandate given him in the name of a common adherence to an obscure plan of aggression and hate."

"But with honesty, it is necessary to admit that the evidence acquired does not permit one at this time to unveil the identity of the promoters of the conspiracy or determine what objectives were directly linked to the eventual elimination of the pontiff," the opinion said.

Agca, the opinion said, apparently was alone in St. Peter's Square when he wounded the pope and two American tourists.

else, like the military, while at the same time you're cutting taxes," Anthony said. "Inflation is going to stay with us and so will the deficit."

"What caught my attention during the speech is he ignored the largest area of waste and mismanagement, and that's our military," Anthony continued.

"Yes, he's called for a $13-billion cut in the defense budget, but you're still talking about a large amount of money, and that can't be shoveled out without mismanagement. The M-1 is a perfect example. That's one batch of money that should never be spent."

Alternative funding is a must if Idaho is going to cope with reduced federal support, according to Twin Falls school board Chairman Dick Ryall, who backs Reagan's plan.

"We're already having problems with state funding of schools. It's not enough (money) to support the system," Ryall said. "My suggestion is for increased sales tax. I know that's not popular, but it offers a broader base — you even tax people from out of state."

"What it comes down to is that if state and local funding isn't available, something else will have to be done," Ryall said. "Education is the most important project of any state. It seems that somewhere there will have to be a tax increase." Ryall applauded Reagan's desire to abolish the two-year-old U.S. Department of Education. He believes education should be handled at state and local levels.

He also thinks Social Security is headed for disaster if the program is not completely revamped financially.

"We do need fiscal responsibility in Social Security," Ryall, 51, said, "so those of us who have been paying in, get a little bit back out."

"Reagan's plan makes sense for this, too. You can't spend yourself rich. The continual spending that's been happening for years has to be turned around," Ryall said.

Speech

The latest spending cut proposals were needed because administration officials saw the deficit for fiscal 1982, which begins next week, would swell beyond their $42.5 billion goal.

Reagan's top presidential officer was designed to save $16 billion — $12 billion in reduced spending and $3 billion through tougher application of the tax laws and charges for the use of government supported waterways and airports.

However, the red-ink figure did balloon $600 million in the latest projections released by the White House in conjunction with the speech. The new estimate calls for $43.1 billion deficit in 1982, $22.9 billion in 1983 and a balance in 1984.

No specifics were offered on how to cut $2 billion in 1982 and $13 billion over three years.

Elimination of abuses and "obsolete incoherencies" in the tax code as part of an extensive review of tax laws. The review mainly involves business tax loopholes.

Reducing the federal work force — including the White House staff — by 75,000 jobs, mostly through attrition. The cuts amount to a 6.5 percent shrinkage of federal employees by 1984.

Reducing federal loan guarantees by some $20 billion.

Reforming benefit plans and welfare programs to save nearly $27 billion in the next three years.

Imposing "user fees" for boats or airplanes which use federal services.

Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River valley: Showers likely today with clouds and showers decreasing tonight. Partly cloudy with a few mountain showers on Saturday. Highs 55 to 60 degrees both days. Lows in the middle 20s tonight.

Northern Nevada and Utah: Variable cloudiness through Saturday with scattered mainly afternoon and evening showers or thundershowers. Cooler days. Highs in the 70s today and in the 60s on Saturday. Lows in the 40s.

Synopsis: Passage of a storm system across southern Idaho is expected to produce precipitation early today, with skies clearing by tonight. On Thursday afternoon, the system was moving slowly inland with clouds of varying density preceding the storm over Idaho. Rain from the storm was falling in southern Oregon and northern California. The storm was expected to bring rain to lower elevations in Idaho with snow in higher mountain areas. Passage of an accompanying cold front will be followed by clearing and a return of high UPI WEATHER FORECAST © pressure, leading to a cold night tonight. Skies should be fair on Saturday.

On Thursday, mid-afternoon temperatures were generally in the 60s in southern Idaho with readings in the 50s in the north. Malad was the warmest at mid-afternoon with 80 degrees. The state's warmest was 81 at Stanley while the coolest morning low was 81 at Malad.

The Twin Falls pollen count Thursday was 34 per cubic meter of air.

For the Magic Valley, generally cool temperatures will hold the need for irrigation water to sub-normal levels through Tuesday. Conditions for harvesting and other outside farm work will be generally good through the first of the week, but showers this morning and Monday may hamper hay drying.

Pain evaporation is forecast at 14 inch today. Spraying conditions will be fair to good this morning with winds 5 to 12 mph but deteriorating as winds increase in the afternoon to 10 to 18 mph.

The extended forecast calls for a series of storm systems to cross Idaho over the next several days, bringing moisture and cool temperatures. Showers on Sunday should taper off Monday with Tuesday being dry. Temperatures should range from highs in the 60s to overnight lows in the 40s.

Elsewhere in the nation Thursday, the hottest temperature was 102 degrees at Gila Bend, Ariz. and the coolest was 21 at Cutbank, Mont.

Senators Ernest Hollings, D-S.C. and Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., display typical school lunch UPI

Democrats jab austerity diet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As President Reagan prepared to serve up new restraints, Senate Democrats met Thursday over a frugal repast to take a poke at the budget austerity already enacted.

With television crews hovering about as attentively as waiters, about two dozen senators ate the official school lunch — ketchup, milk, a tiny meat patty and french fries — designated as the minimum requirement under new Agriculture Department standards brought on by the president's budget cuts.

"This is a poignant example of what happens when Congress is asked to act-in-haste-to-cut-out-waste, fraud and abuse," said Democratic leader

Robert Byrd of West Virginia, listing the three targets candidate Reagan cited repeatedly as places to save money.

Byrd said the lunch was an example of "some of the decent programs that will suffer," and added, "We don't think the American people intended... to deprive the school children of this nation of adequate food."

At a news conference, Byrd noted that Reagan was ready to outline more budget cuts to solve the nation's economic woes. "We can't solve them by making deeper and deeper cuts," he said. "There won't be anything left."

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., ranking Democrat on the Senate Budget

Committee, called the president's program an "affirmative action move to destroy one of the best programs we have."

He said he didn't eat his plastic cup of ketchup because it was half sugar, and charged that new school lunch standards would teach children bad eating habits.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said many schools would pull out of the lunch program because middle class families would prefer their children eat brown bag lunches rather than the official meals.

Leaving the news conference after cleaning his plate, Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., grumbled, "You might as well chew on some wool."

Senate OKs 'back door' pay hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, meeting in a raucous-night session, voted lower taxes and higher pay for its members Thursday just as President Reagan was preparing to ask the nation for new budget sacrifices.

The twin actions were denounced as "a real Christmas tree for members of this body" by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

First, the Senate voted 59-49 to eliminate a $3,000 limit on tax deductions members can take for living expenses in Washington. On that roll call, 35 Republicans and 15 Democrats voted in favor and 17 Republicans and 31 Democrats were opposed.

Then, an hour before Reagan's speech, members voted 45-43 to lift a $25,000 a year limit on what they can earn from making speeches. That vote had 36 Republicans and 9 Democrats in favor, with 12 Republicans and 31 Democrats opposed.

The Senate's largesse also extended to senior federal bureaucrats. It voted to lift the pay cap that has frozen the top civil service salaries for five years.

The actions came on a catch-all bill to fund government agencies through Nov. 20. Current spending authority expires Wednesday midnight; and the regular departmental appropriations bills were delayed by Reagan's budget resolution.

"There's no question it's a back-door salary increase," said Proxmire after the tax deduction vote. "It's a salary increase at a time when senators just won't frontally increase their salaries because it's very unpopular."

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said the 29-year-old $3,000 expense limit does not reflect the cost of maintaining two homes in distant cities, and that instead of a ceiling, members should be allowed to deduct "reasonable and necessary living expenses just as every (traveling) businessman does."

Freshman Sen. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., warned that the tax and honorarium amendments might be determined to have merit later after committee hearings, "but this is the wrong time and the wrong place."

"The president of the United States will talk tonight about the need to cut the budget and the question will be who are we looking after, the public or ourselves?" he said.

Reagan begins salvage of AWACS sale

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration started negotiations Thursday to salvage the proposed $8.5 billion weapons sale to Saudi Arabia from almost certain defeat on Capitol Hill.

Congressional sources indicated a compromise being discussed involves some form of joint U.S.-Saudi manning of the sophisticated Airborne Warning and Control System aircraft, called AWACS — the sale of which Israel vehemently opposes.

These sources said the new version would not involve American pilots on the planes that are crammed with radar and computers capable of picking up intelligence from hundreds of miles away.

There could be several Americans in the crew, or perhaps one American to man the control console, according to the discussions. American-only manning of the planes was not one of the options under consideration.

A round-robin series of meetings, at the White House and on Capitol Hill, was sparked by an administration head count that showed 63 senators against or leaning against the sale, and only 12 in favor.

Both the Senate and House have to reject the sale to keep it from going into effect. But the Senate is the real key, since even the administration concedes the sale stands no chance in the House.

Senate-Republican leader Howard Baker, it was learned, went to the White House Tuesday to meet with President Reagan, national security adviser Richard Allen and Prince Bandar, nephew of Saudi's King Khalid and an air force officer.

Bandar and Allen also went to Capitol Hill, first to meet with key Republicans in Baker's office and then with key Democrats in the office of Sen. John Glenn D-Ohio, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

It was Glenn who suggested last week that some form of a joint operating agreement probably keep the sale alive in the Senate.

Senate committee restores Social Security minimum

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee voted Thursday to restore most of the Social Security minimum benefit and make stopgap changes to bail out the system for the decade.

President Reagan acknowledged major reforms are dead "for the immediate future."

The president, in his nationwide speech on additional budget cuts, supported restoration of the minimum benefit "for those who truly need it," and interfund borrowing to help finance the system temporarily.

But Reagan also acknowledged Democratic resistance to the long-range changes he proposed — including immediate penalties for early retirement, a lowered benefit formula and tightened disability rules — effectively killed them this year.

And he backed off a proposal to delay Social Security cost-of-living increases next year.

Saying "our feet were never embedded in concrete on this proposal," Reagan also called for a task force to seek long-term solutions to Social Security's financial problems.

In a letter to House Speaker Thomas O'Neill proposing the task force, Reagan said legislative debate on the Social Security "has reached an apparent state of impasse."

"Last spring, I proposed what I believe to be a fair, balanced and workable solution to the Social Security problem," he wrote. "However, it is now evident that there are so many different views of the problem that a comprehensive, long-term solution is not possible in the immediate future."

The Senate finance panel voted 19-0 for a package of changes that included continuing the $122 a month minimum for more than 80 percent of the 3 million people who now receive it but who would have been cut off beginning in March under an earlier bill.

The House has voted to restore the benefit completely.

The only recipients who would lose benefits, starting next June under the committee vote, would be people living overseas and government pensioners now receiving more than $300 a month.

The committee voted to make up for the revenue loss by taxing the sick pay and putting minor limitations on Social Security retirement and survivor benefits.

It also voted to permit retirement fund borrowing from the solvent disability fund, and reallocating taxes from those two funds and Medicare to see the system through the current decade. "We've done the responsible thing by making a couple of minor changes," said committee chairman Bob Dole, R-Kan. He said he will move to add the panel's work onto existing legislation "very soon, perhaps next Wednesday."

"We did a very good thing," agreed Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., the fiercest critic of the administration's proposed Social Security cuts.

Weinberger expects Reagan to decide on MX next week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Thursday President Reagan will announce decisions next week on how to base the MX missile.

Weinberger made the comment off-handedly in a House subcommittee he was briefing on his proposal to cut $13 billion from the defense budget over the next three years.

He did not say precisely when Reagan would announce the long-awaited decision.

The original MX concept called for placing 200 of the giant MX missiles, each capable of carrying 10 independently targeted nuclear warheads, in 4,000 horizontal, hardened shelters in Utah and Nevada.

The idea was to put one missile in a field of 26 shelters and trundle it around at random over a network of roads to the actual launch pad so the Soviets never could know where it was at any particular time.

Other deceptive options have included putting the missiles on big transport planes, one to an aircraft, and firing them after an air drop, placing them on trains which would roam over the nation's diminishing rail networks; on trucks to roam the highways until ordered to deploy and fire; on miniature submarines; on freighters or naval craft; among existing Minuteman II silo sites, or in blimps or balloons.

The consensus now seems to be focused on a modification of the original "shell game" concept — 100 MX missiles deployed among 1,000 shelters in the federal land area around Las Vegas, Nev.

Casey wants CIA records exempted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — CIA Director William Casey urged Congress Thursday to exempt all intelligence records from Freedom of Information Act requests to end distrust that he says is drying up U.S. intelligence sources.

"The very fact that CIA files are subject to search and review for information which is releasable (under the act) is extremely disturbing to our sources," Casey told the Senate Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on the Constitution.

He said the National Security Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency as well as the CIA should be exempted because of a perception that vital secrets may be exposed through error or misguided court decisions.

"While several bills before Congress would add to the categories of information that could be withheld under the act, Casey said, the mere fact that records are being reviewed for possible release causes concern.

It is time, he said, "to recognize that only a total exclusion" of all intelligence records from all of the law's requirements will "regain the confidence of human sources and foreign intelligence services."

He insisted that congressional oversight is all the public needs for guarding against abuses.

Allan Adler and Morton Halperin insisted in a joint statement on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union that the information law has led to exposing many abuses that had been withheld and has caused no damage to national security.

"Through the FOIA," their statement said, "the public has learned more about the Bay of Pigs invasion, mind-drug experiments and CIA spying on Americans — largely information that was not included in congressional reports.

Adler and Halperin argued a "perception" that secrets are unsafe in U.S. hands cannot be solved by amending the law because there also have been leaks, security lapses, court-ordered disclosures and memoirs of former CIA agents.

But Casey stressed that the information law — not leaks or unauthorized publications — is viewed by foreign intelligence agencies and individual sources as the crux of the problem.

Classified material has been released inadvertently, causing diplomatic embarrassment and risking lives, because the method of deciding what must be disclosed is not foolproof, Casey said.

There also is the risk that federal courts will order release of classified matter, as has happened in one case now under appeal, he said.

Quebec parliament leader flees from hostage takers

QUEBEC (UPI) — A young couple armed with handguns took the president of the Quebec parliament hostage Thursday to demand a job, but he escaped unharmed three hours later. The couple was arrested.

The incident began when the couple entered the office of National Assembly President Claude Vaillancourt at about 11 a.m. EDT and pulled out guns.

They took Vaillancourt, 37, and a secretary hostage. Police said the couple demanded a job for one of them — which one was not clear — and a getaway car.

Police cordoned the second floor of the National Assembly, the lower house of Quebec's parliament, and staked out the corridors around Vaillancourt's office while they negotiated with the couple.

At about 2 p.m. EDT, Vaillancourt made a rush for the door and escaped from his office. The secretary, who was not immediately identified, made a similar dash for freedom an hour later.

House approves $450 million for highways

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted Thursday to authorize an additional $450 million for work on the interstate highway system in 1982.

But coupled with the action was a more modest "redefinition" of what the completed system will be.

The bill passed on a 377-25 vote and now goes to the Senate.

"Completion by 1990 is an illusion nobody believes anymore," Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa., said during debate on the bill.

The bill provides "new, more realistic concepts of interstate completion," said Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., chairman of the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

Supporters of the bill said the change was needed because increasing amounts of money are required to repair and rehabilitate existing sections of the interstate system.

Some sections are nearing the end of their average 20-year initial life span and need extensive work to keep the highway in usable condition.

The new definition refers to "the minimum level of acceptable service on the interstate system," such as providing an adequate means of accommodating entry and exit traffic flow; pavement design that accommodates the types and volume of traffic anticipated for a 30-year period; and a design of four lanes in areas with populations of under 400,000, six lanes in areas with populations of between 400,000 and 1 million, and eight lanes in areas with populations of over 1 million.

The bill sets new, higher authorization levels for the Highway trust fund, with $1.55 billion for the primary system, including completion of priority routes already designated for construction; $30 million for interstate resurfacing, restoration, and rehabilitation; and $1 billion for bridge replacement and rehabilitation.

The bill eliminates the $125 million set-aside provision that assured all states would receive a minimum of 0.5 percent of the total authorization even if their sections of the interstate system have been completed.

Arizona Congressman leaves Democrats

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Rep. Bob Stump, a conservative Democrat and administration supporter, quit his party Thursday to become a Republican — the first such defection in Congress since Ronald Reagan became president.

"I have been a Democrat all my life," the three-term Arizona congressman said. "But I find that I can no longer support the policies dictated by the liberals who dominate the party."

The defection, first in the current Congress, reduced the Democratic majority in the House to 242 and increased the GOP roll to 192. There is one vacancy due to death.

GOP leaders, particularly National Chairman Richard Richards, have mentioned the possibility of approaching conservative Democrats about bolting the party.

"You can be sure he's met with Reagan on this and is going to get some goodies," said Charles Pine, former Arizona Democratic chairman and a top party operative.

There had been speculation Stump would change parties because of Democratic criticism in Congress of the support he has shown the Reagan administration.

Williams draft group formed

BOISE (UPI) — A citizens committee to urge Franklin County Prosecutor J.D. Williams to run for Idaho attorney general in 1982 officially met Thursday at a political action committee with the secretary of State's office.

Blaine County Prosecutor Keith Roark, chairman of the committee, said a group of county prosecutors had urged Williams to run for the position for some time but had thus far failed in its efforts.

Jerome attorney Jim Jones, who has twice unsuccessfully run for U.S. representative against George Hansen, has officially announced his candidacy for attorney general in 1982.

Ada County Prosecutor Jim Harris has not officially announced his candidacy, but has indicated he will do so after several homicide cases were brought to trial in Ada County.

Roark said the group believed Jones was a poor candidate for the job because he had no prosecutorial experience. He said Williams also had more experience as a prosecutor than Harris.

"Harris does not have sufficient private practice experience," Roark said. Williams, who is a cousin of state Auditor Joe Williams, has more experience in private practice than does Jones, he said.

Roark said Williams also is the only candidate, announced or unannounced, who has "actually been in the office of the attorney general as an employee of Tony Park."

Park, a former attorney general, also is a member of the citizens committee.

Other members of the committee include: Latah County Prosecutor Bill Hamlett; Shoshone County Prosecutor John Cossell; Caribou County Prosecutor Clyde Nelson; J. Patrick Reecer, former counsel to the governor and former director of the Motor Vehicles Division of the Department of Law Enforcement; Robert Panning, chairman of the Board of Corrections, Idaho Falls; and Louis Racine, a Pocatello attorney.

Idaho drug problem gets worse

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's drug problem has worsened since the early 1970s, and heroin use has mushroomed as supplies in the state have increased, officials, state and federal drug enforcement officers say.

Heroin had not been a problem in Idaho since 1974, said George Harrison, chief of the state drug enforcement division of the Department of Law Enforcement. But he said Idaho's heroin supply has increased because the demand has increased.

Harrison said drug enforcement officers worked on six heroin cases in 1977 and confiscated 4 grams of heroin. In 1979, they worked on seven cases and confiscated 55 grams.

In 1979, state agents worked on three cases and confiscated 156 grams, or about 5 ounces, of heroin, Harrison said.

So far this year, agents have worked on five cases and have confiscated nearly a pound, or 453.6 grams, of heroin, he said.

Heroin is in such great supply that dealers have started competing for business by lowering prices and by offering purer heroin mixes, said Bob Dunne, head of the state's federal Drug Enforcement Administration office.

Idaho also shows signs of becoming a major supply state for marijuana, Harrison said.

Northern California and southern Oregon have been traditional spots for marijuana plantations, but California and Oregon authorities are cracking down on the back-country marijuana farms, and growers are looking for states with "reputations for lax enforcement," Harrison said.

"Idaho is ideal for marijuana culture," Dunne said. "The climate is ideal. The people tend to mind their own business. If people mind their own business and don't make trouble, nobody questions them."

Bunker Hill official denies money, not lives, priority of parent firm

BOISE (UPI) — A Bunker Hill Co. director denied Thursday that Gulf Resources & Chemical Co. concentrated on wringing profits from Bunker Hill's lead smelter while assigning a low priority to pollution control.

Robert E. Brown, a Kellogg attorney who sits on the boards of Bunker Hill and Gulf Resources, also said it was not true that Gulf, of Houston, Texas, held absolute authority in corporate decisions involving the Bunker Hill mine and smelter complex at Kellogg.

Seattle attorney Paul Whelan questioned Brown extensively in an attempt to back up his assertion Sept. 14 — at the start of the lead-poisoning trial of Bunker Hill — that the operation was run solely for profit and that the welfare of Kellogg residents was ignored.

The $20 million U.S. District Court suit, filed on behalf of nine former Kellogg children, charges Bunker Hill and Gulf Resources of permanently damaging the health and learning abilities of the children. The trial was in its ninth day Thursday.

Whelan asked Brown if it was true that Bunker Hill's owners based operational decisions on production rates rather than on controlling the emission of lead dust into the air.

"I don't think that's a fair statement," Brown responded. He also denied that most major planning and decisions that expanded the production capacity of the lead smelter were made after Gulf took over Bunker Hill in the late 1960s.

lead, zinc and silver mining venture.

"I think decisions were made by Bunker Hill after consultations with officials in Houston," Brown said.

"But if Gulf said 'Stop tomorrow, wouldn't it?' Whelan asked.

"I suppose 'I would, after an argument,'" Brown said.

Four busted for LSD sale

SEATTLE (UPI) — Four Olympia residents and an Idaho man have been jailed after police seized $75,000 worth of suspected LSD during a narcotics transaction.

Paul Irving Adams, 28, of Sagle, Idaho, and Daniel Dean Wagoner, 23, Paula Inawah Halaby, 20, Kym L. Triggemuth, 21, and John Steven Korsting, 25, all of Olympia, were arrested Tuesday night.

Maj. Dean Olsen of the police narcotics unit said an undercover agent made arrangements to meet the suspects at a parking lot of the Nettleton Apartments on First Hill.

The detective purchased 16 bottles of tablets of the hallucinogenic drug for $10,800 from one of the men, Olsen said. He said the four others were arrested in a nearby car, in which police found 41 grams of suspected hashish worth $615.

Bank robbery suspect seen near McCall

McCALL (UPI) — Lawmen and bloodhounds searched east McCall Thursday for a man believed to have taken part in the robbery of a Riggin's bank earlier in the week.

The manhunt began after McCall Police Chief John Lyon spotted a pickup truck that matched the description of a vehicle reported stolen in Riggin's Wednesday night, a spokesman at the Valley County sheriff's office said.

Lyon pursued the pickup, whose driver fled and soon abandoned the truck and escaped on foot into an area of McCall just south of Myette Lake.

Officials at the Idaho County sheriff's office at Grangeville said authorities believed the man being hunted in McCall was the third suspect in the robbery of the Idaho Bank and Trust branch at Riggin's. Two men were arrested that afternoon southeast of Riggin's after a vehicle chase and shootout.

A third suspect fled into the woods and eluded a three-day manhunt in the Salmon River back country.

The third bank robbery suspect and the man on the run in McCall tentatively was identified as Eugene Brady, 43, who escaped from the Utah State Prison Aug. 7.

James A. Tooley, 20, Tulsa, Okla., suffered a bullet wound in the leg after the bank robbery.

The other bank robbery suspect was Harold David Bales, 44, who escaped from the Utah prison with Brady. Bales was arraigned Tuesday on charges stemming from the Aug. 10 charge bank in Downey. FBI agents say they believe Bales also is a suspect in the Sept. 4 robbery of a bank at Lava Hot Springs.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in love. And it's the most exciting thing that has ever happened to me.
I'm 22 and "G" is 24. He's also the best and of our girlfriends, which complicates matters. They've been very tight for several years, but he told me he has no plans to marry her, although they're living together temporarily.
There has always been a very strong attraction between "G" and me, but I never dreamed anything like this could happen. Well, the other night, the very first time we were alone together, we lost all control and made love.
I don't regret it, but I'm all confused. I know it happened incredibly fast, but Abby, I've never been in love like this before. "G" says he thinks he loves me, too, but it's too soon to make a commitment.

To make matter worse, "G" and his "girlfriend" are going on a 10-day vacation together. (It was planned a long time ago.) He promised to call me every chance he gets while he's away, and said we will work something out when he gets back. He says he doesn't want to lose me, but he's a very caring person and doesn't want to hurt her.

I suppose there is nothing I can do except wait and see what happens, but in the meantime, I would appreciate an objective opinion and any useful advice.

MESSED UP IN W. VA.
DEAR MESSED UP: My objective opinion is that you should cool it. If and when "G" is free from his present commitment, you can pick up where you left off.

DEAR ABBY: A new family moved into our neighborhood. Their children are about the ages of our children, so the youngsters quickly struck up a friendship. Soon we mothers were visiting in each other's homes for coffee. So far so good!

Then after one of her visits, I noticed that two towels and matching washcloths were missing from my bathroom. They were not misplaced — they are gone! Of course I didn't see her take them, but I strongly suspect she did. My questions:

1) Should my children continue to play with her children? Why or why not?
2) How can I get my towels and washcloths back in a face-saving manner for all concerned? I do not want to confront her.
Please don't mention my name or town. Sign me... "M"

DEAR "M": I see no reason why your children shouldn't continue to play with her children. It's unfair to punish innocent children for the alleged "sins" of a parent.

There is no way you can get your towels and washcloths back without a confrontation. My advice is to forget it. But watch her carefully in the future.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 60-year-old woman who has been friends with a very nice gentleman my age for the past three years. I am quite sure he has a good income because he often goes on expensive cruises, drives a fine car and has a beautiful home. He often asks me out for dinner, and the bill is never less than $30, but he never leaves more than a $1 tip! This is embarrassing to me as I am well-known in this restaurant in my small hometown.

How can I let him know that his tip is not enough? Thank you.

— EMBARRASSED
DEAR EMBARRASSED: Use the direct approach. Tell him that a 15 percent tip is considered fair these days, and a 20 percent tip would be considered generous.

Dr. Lamb

Mom worried over calcium

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — My 13-year-old daughter cannot tolerate a quart of milk a day.

Neither will she eat hard cheese or other foods rich in calcium. She has many food dislikes so she does not eat a well-balanced diet. I have been giving her a vitamin-mineral capsule and calcium supplements.

My problem is the guesswork of the dosage of calcium supplement. The labeling is confusing. It says give one and a half grains per tablet, then on the directions it says four tablets three times a day will provide 543 mg of calcium.

Also, I'd like to know the necessity of "gluconate" and "lactate." How much supplement should I give her in addition to the two glasses of milk she drinks daily? The vitamin mineral supplement contains 100 mg of calcium.

DEAR READER — Many people have this problem because they forget that no element such as calcium exists alone, but as part of a chemical compound.

A good example is table salt which is not just sodium, but a salt or compound of sodium and chlorine to form sodium chloride. Calcium exists as a salt or compound, too — calcium chloride, calcium carbonate, calcium gluconate, and calcium lactate to mention a few.

The weight of each tablet is the total weight of calcium gluconate or calcium lactate, just as the weight of a spoon of table salt is the total weight of sodium chloride.

But the amount of calcium alone (not including the lactate or gluconate) in your supplement provides 543 mg of just calcium.

The factors that influence how much calcium you need a day are discussed in detail in The Health Letter No. 17-6, Nutritional Aspects of Minerals, which I am sending you.

Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N. Y. 10019.

Your daughter needs 1,200 mg of pure calcium a day because she is in the growth phase of life.

If she gets a pint of milk a day that will provide more than 550 mg of calcium. That plus the amount in the supplement you are giving her of 543 mg plus the 100 mg in the vitamin mineral supplement will meet her needs almost on the dot.

Incidentally, other readers should note the small amount of calcium that is really in a "vitamin mineral" preparation. Just 100 mg is not nearly enough to provide the calcium most people need.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am very concerned about my father. He is 71 and has been taking medicine for high blood pressure for a number of years.

For the last four or five months he has become very short of breath. His color is not too good, rather pale.

Does he have a heart problem and need a heart pill or could it be lung trouble? His breathing isn't bad if he is just sitting, but to walk any distance or do any of the work he always has done makes him very short of breath until he stops for awhile.

DEAR READER — He needs to see his doctor. He may have developed weakness (failure) of the left side of the heart.

This sometimes happens as a complication of high blood pressure. The weak heart is unable to pump all the blood out of the lungs and the lungs fill with fluid.

At first these people can breathe normally sitting still and as the condition progresses they get short of breath with less and less activity.

If that should be his problem some heart medicine and restricting salt may help him a great deal. Regardless of the cause, he will need medical attention.

Parents donate to keep extra activities going

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

Are football, cheerleaders, bands, debate teams, musicals vital parts of education?

You may answer:
"A high school is nothing without a football team or a band!"

"Football and such are not frills!"
Yet, in this pluralistic society, there are many who feel a school can get along without a football team or a band just as well as a fish can survive without roller skates.

In many school districts, confrontations between those who consider those things basic and those who consider them frills are taking place at the voting booth. Or at the budget chopping block after public hearings.

In special elections on the size of the school tax, more and more voters — only 20 percent of whom have children in school — support reduced budgets at least and at best, budgets of the same size, kept that way by excising extras.

In Kalamazoo, Mich., and up to 50 other Michigan school districts the activities voters and budget cutters consider expendable this year are expected to hold their own, financed by fees from the kids participating.
The fee to play football in Kalamazoo, for example, is $125 per kid. It does not guarantee a kid a place on the field. Just a place — and if one just sits on the bench for the season — says Fletcher Lewis, coordinator of athletics.

Children whose families cannot afford the fee to play football scholarships, awarded in a confidential manner. A kid who gets a free school lunch, based on need, for example, is qualified for a football or sports or band scholarship.

The money for these unusual scholarships comes from Parent Boosters — the group that got the school board and athletic and other departments behind the fee plan.

It was the parents' idea of an alternative to amputating the extra-curricular programs after voters turned down increases in elections in June and August.

The "boosters" raise money in the usual manner: car washes, bake sales, tag sales, babysitting, raffles, selling sandwiches and such.

The fee for play or participation in extra-curricular activity — including in some cases yearbook and school paper — first surfaced in California when school money shrunk due to Proposition 13, approved by taxpayers and mandating a lid on property taxes for schooling.

Chris Bolton face-to-faces with a piece (that's right, this is one piece) from his spring show at the Herrett Museum. All pottery in that show featured boxes with faces on them.

A chat with artist-musician-carpenter Chris Bolton... round two

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — He is as serious about art as he isn't about life.

So when artist-musician Chris Bolton and a reporter with a tape recorder sat down to talk about art and life, the result was a mixture — some surprisingly serious discussion from this generally unserious person and some plain off-the-wall Bolton.

Unfortunately, none of this was preserved. Bolton and the reporter enjoyed an expense-account lunch at a posh Twin Falls restaurant while the tape recorder sat next to them, purring quietly. The quiet, reassuring hum belied a malfunction that prevented even one syllable of the discussion from being recorded.

Gone, then, is a lyrical description of salt fuming, the technique he uses to fire his pottery. Or his lament that nobody really understood what he tried to do with his art that was on display at the Herrett Museum last spring.

Of course, it is no wonder people had a hard time understanding his work. He named one piece "Chrome-Plated Megaphone of Destiny," because it looked like a teapot and he didn't want anybody to think it was such an ordinary object.

"Names don't mean anything to me. They are just a way to pass the time — whim and fancy," he explained later.

The day after the lost interview, a sheepish reporter approached Bolton with a request for another chance.

Once again from the top

The tape from the second interview begins with the sound of garbled voices and other unidentifiable noises.

Reporter: You have to keep within earshot of the tape deck.

BOLTON: I don't think the pros have to do that.

Silence

BOLTON: How are we going to do this? Aren't you supposed to ask questions?

Reporter: Yes, but I used them all yesterday. You could describe salt fuming again.

At this point, a passerby looks inquiringly toward Bolton, who responds:

"I'm being interviewed. This is important stuff. This is Paul Harvey's personal reporter. Hello America, stand by for NEWS."

Turning back to the interview, he continues:

"Salt fuming, yes. When you salt fume, you use a salt kiln that has already been fired. It has residues of salt in it so you don't have to put any salt in it in the conventional style. You just pack your pots in, throw random stuff in there to get flash marks on it, fire to temperature, throw a little salt in and turn it off.

"You just bank on all the gunk that's left in the kiln settling down on your pots in a thin unshiny layer that gives you a nice color contrast and textural quality you can't get any other way.

"These pieces [pots in the Herrett show] are fired to what we in the trade call about cone three or four, which is about 2,000 to 2,200 degrees Fahrenheit. About that. You can put down either cone three or that temperature, but don't put them both down in case I'm wrong and all my friends who are potters would laugh at me."

Even then, he once said of his last steady job, "I was hired on a technicality."

He found the job through a government program designed to give jobs to people who the recession had recently thrown out of work. To qualify, a person had to have been unemployed a certain number of days during the previous year. "When haven't I been unemployed for that many days in the last year," Bolton asks.

He is level-headed (near as you can tell under the variety of hats he favors); but what is common sense to him may seem offbeat to most people.

Bolton is not interested in making money through the Spud Pups. It takes too much work to get popular enough to make a living playing music, he said.

Likewise, he is dubious about making a living with his pottery. He enjoys the freedom of throwing away a perfectly marketable piece simply because it did not turn out the way he wanted.

He also likes the freedom to work in "series."

His pottery show at the Herrett Museum was made up entirely of boxes with faces. He said it makes more sense to show people his exploration of one idea than to try to prove he is a Renaissance man.

That show closed the day of the second interview.

Bringing in the background

Chris Bolton, graduate of Twin Falls High School class of 1969; nephew of Twin Falls Mayor Hank Woodall; a guitarist who only this year began playing with his first band, the Spud Pups; a potter and artist who returned to working on ceramics about a year and a half ago after ignoring it for several years.

Generally, he is an unemployed carpenter, seeking work only when he needs money or knows of an interesting job. He has not held a steady job for five years.

How to spot Spud Pups, Bolton exhibits

Chris Bolton and his fellow Spud Pups Steve Parks and Rick Kuhn will play in Hansen today through Sunday.

They will appear at the Shake Shack, on U.S. Highway 30 in Hansen, from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. today and Saturday and from 8 p.m. until midnight Sunday.

They are also scheduled to play at locations in Hagerman and Gooding during the next two weekends.

Several pieces of Bolton's pottery are currently displayed, and offered for sale, at Lightworks Gallery in Burley.

Bolton

What's the next scene?

Reporter: As you prepare to pack up your exhibit and close it down, you must be thinking about where you go from here.

BOLTON: (laughing) Yes this is true Paul, it's lonely at the top. Um, yeah, my new direction is platters as I told you yesterday on the tape that malfunctioned.

Reporter: Well that's okay, I actually remembered many of the things you said yesterday.

BOLTON: It would be interesting to see just how well you remembered. Not plates, platters, excuse me. Platters gives a larger feeling.

Reporter: I think you said platters, we could probably verify that on the tape.

BOLTON: Okay Tom. Yeah, platters from here on out, for awhile.

Reporter: They mean what to you? BOLTON: Nothing. None of this means anything to me. It's all experiments in texture and frolic. They're fun to throw, it's a fun shape to make, and it's a little bit difficult. Making big ones is still a challenge to me, and you get this big round flat surface to work with when you done. It's like a canvas.

I must be a latent painter, although I probably haven't done five complete paintings in my life, or something like that, I'm not sure. I must be an extremely latent painter.

The big influences

The previous day, Bolton had talked about the people who have most influenced his art, and one of those people is a painter, Michael Green, an art instructor at the College of Southern Idaho, has been "a source of information and inspiration for years and years and years," Bolton said.

Then he corrected himself. "Years and years actually, he's not that old."

The other major influence is potter Bill West of Jerome, whose work was the first example of salt glazing Bolton saw.

At this point in the interview, Bolton looked at the reporter and commented, "It's hard to believe you're actually writing words when you scribble like that."

The reporter is taking notes to protect himself in the case of another tape recorder malfunction.

Reporter: I figured I'd give the tape deck one more chance before I threw it off the Perrine Bridge.

BOLTON: I can understand that, I thought it was sort of funny you didn't do a titter test and play back yesterday.

Reporter: I was completely confident.

BOLTON: New batteries and all — Reporter: You were telling me you're goal is to make pots that are indistinguishable from the volcanic rocks in the desert on the north side of the Perrine Bridge, you said you would like to put an exhibit out there where it would take people anywhere from 20 minutes to two weeks to tell they were pots.

BOLTON: Yes. You remember that part well.

Reporter: Is that still true? I was wondering if maybe you just felt that way yesterday.

BOLTON: That's always been my goal. I've always admired the rocks out there as pieces of art. I'm insanely jealous that I can't bring myself to make pots that are so non-functional they look like rocks. These still have to look like sculptures and that bothers me a little bit.

Music is easier to understand

If Bolton's art, goals and lifestyle are a little hard for people to understand, and perhaps slightly unorthodox, the music of the Spud Pups is just the opposite. The group bills its music as "Old-time American Music."

None of the songs they play is less than about 25 years old, Bolton said. They are country songs, but songs influenced by the Old West more than the south.

Bolton calls the music "front porch music": simple, but with flexibility that leaves room for a musician to be creative.

"Simple, but elegant," Bolton said. "Like basic black, you never go wrong with basic black or Hank Williams, which is why so many country western singers wear black."

He insists that though he is serious about music, he is in for fun, not profit. If it gets to be a job to play, he says, he'd quit.

"I'd probably do it just to prove I am what I say I am," he said, "a quitter."

Dance classes set for October

TWIN FALLS — Dance classes taught by Carol Perera Montgomery, a former Broadway dancer, are set to begin in October. Montgomery will be teaching classical ballet and jazz dancing, with special combination classes for children. She will also teach a musical comedy dance class for adults, geared for persons who want to participate in local productions.

Classes will be held at the Episcopal Church, 210 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. Registration will be held Sept. 30, Oct. 1 and 2 from 2 to 7 p.m. at the church.

Classes will begin Oct. 6. Montgomery said she will feature special rates for the first 50 students who register. For more information, call her at 423-5938 after 10 a.m.

NBC tops news Niensens again

NEW YORK (UPI) — For the second consecutive week, NBC's hit radio program "Nightly News" took first place in the Nielsen ratings, topping the once invincible CBS "Evening News" into third place.

As if that were not enough, on the entertainment side ABC rode two new shows, three old reliables and a football game to first place, pushing CBS into second.

But the news Niensens had to hurt the most. CBS has dominated evening news broadcasting ever since the format was increased from 15 to 30 minutes, but the battle for supremacy which began with the departure of Walter Cronkite has steadily eroded its position.

For the week of Sept. 14-18, the ratings score was NBC 11.9, with 24 per cent of the audience; ABC's "World News Tonight," 11.7 and 24; and CBS 11.4 and 23. In the previous week, the score was NBC 10.8 and 23, ABC 10.7 and 23 and CBS 10.4 and 22.

CBS will counterattack with the beginning of the fall season by backing "Evening News" anchorman Dan Rather with recently signed newsman and analyst Bill Moyers, and by recalling Cronkite as a special correspondent — a role he retained upon relinquishing the anchor post.

ABC won the prime time race for the week ending Sept. 20 by placing two new fall schedule candidates — "Code Red" and "Best of the West" — in the top 10. NFL Football and three old standby sitcoms completed the score by giving ABC six of the top slots.

The prime timescore: ABC 16.9 and 29.4, CBS 15.5 and 27.0, NBC 14.0 and 24.2.

The top 10 programs for the week ending Sept. 20, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co. were:

1. 60 Minutes (CBS).
2. Dukes of Hazzard (CBS).
3. Code Red (ABC).
4. Three's Company (ABC).
5. Diff'rent Strokes (NBC).
6. Alice (CBS).
7. NFL Football (ABC).
8. Best of the West (ABC).
9. Too Close for Comfort (ABC).
10. Love Boat (ABC).

What's what

What do you know about sea turtles? An expert on some reports that you get all females if you raise sea turtles in warm water, all males if you raise them in cold water.

All the new mothers go home within 24 hours after giving birth. That's at the Melrose-Wakefield Hospital in Melrose, Mass. No complications in more than 300 cases so far, doctors there report.

Q. How much mileage is covered by the fingers of a typical typist on any given eight-hour day?
A. from 12 to 20 miles.

KEWPIE DOLLS

Q. Why was the Kewpie Doll called that?
A. It's originator, Rose O'Neill, said she coined the word "Kewpie" out of "Cupid" and "baby." Quite some time ago, that. She was an illustrator of children's stories in "The Women's Home Companion" magazine. Her first Kewpies were made in Germany in 1909. She died in 1944.

Q. Aren't motels required to pay their maids the minimum wage?
A. If they gross more than $325,000 annually, they are, according to the U.S. Department-of-Labor.

Q. Is it safe for pregnant women to walk through the security devices at airports?
A. Quite safe. Those instruments use magnetism and electricity to detect metal weapons, not radiation on people. An airlines spokesman says more than 10 billion people have passed through the screens without developing even so much as one medical problem.

TONY BENNETT

It's reported that singer Tony Bennett doesn't know how to drive a car and doesn't care to learn.

Just one county in California—San Bernardino with 20,117 square miles—is bigger than nine states.

The 27th President of the United States, William Howard Taft, said flatly: "Politics, when I am in it, makes me sick."

Crooked dice figure in one out of every 20 private crap games, according to the experts' expert of all time, John Scarne.

Ifurricanes have formed in every month except April. Who asked how many acres in a city block? Four plus, typically.

Today is Friday, Sept. 25, the 268th day of 1980 with 97 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase. The morning star is Mars. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Libra.

American author William Faulkner was born on Sept. 25, 1897.

On this date in history:

In 1513, Spanish explorer Balboa became the first known European to see the Pacific Ocean when he crossed the Isthmus of Panama.

In 1789, the first U.S. Congress adopted 12 amendments to the original Constitution, 10 of which were ratified and became known as "The Bill of Rights."

In 1926, the Ford Motor Co. put its workers on an eight-hour day, five-day week schedule for the first time.

In 1973, the American Skylab 2 crew ended a record 59-day stay in space and returned safely to earth.

Lennon's art too erotic for some

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — A suite of intimate and erotic pen-and-ink drawings by the late former Beatle John Lennon drew thousands of admirers this week and sparked none of the controversy it has created at other showings.

"Bag One," a series of 14 lithographs created by the assassinated artist in 1969 to depict events and scenes surrounding his marriage to Yoko Ono, opened a showing Sunday in Berkeley's Claremont Hotel.

The exhibit, one of four sets of Lennon lithographs now touring the country, was banned by police in Providence, R.I., last week after a detective called the pictures "nasty."

The nationwide tour represents the first time the drawings have been exhibited together as a suite. It is one of an edition of 300 hand-signed drawings.

Lennon, known primarily as a musician and songwriter, is also a published author and poet.

Several of the lithographs, explicit drawings of Lennon and his wife making love, were seized by police at their original showing in London in 1970.

The couple's wedding ceremony in Gibraltar, and the famous "Bed In" for peace in Amsterdam are portrayed in simple, bold lines in a rough style that betrays the artist's lack of technical training while attesting to his eye for form and detail.

Eight of the pieces are strongly erotic in nature and have engendered anger and outrage in some parts of the country.

Promoter... said the exhibit was supposed to be shown first at a Sacramento shopping center gallery. He said shopping center owners vetoed the idea after "discovering that the drawings had been seized by Scotland Yard for allegedly being "indecent."

"A sign now warns viewers, "If you are offended by erotic art, do not enter this area."

"The sign is really funny," said Debbie Goldstein, 32, a San Francisco bookkeeper.

"I don't see anything except a husband and wife in love," said San Rafael housewife Lynne Serra.

Defenders of the works have answered charges of indecency with comparisons to works by such artists as Picasso, Braque and Matisse.

Acting '100 times' easier than baseball: Russell

Friday, September 25, 1981 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho B-7

By RICHARD FREDMAN
Newhouse News Service

NEW YORK—Acting is "100 times easier" than playing baseball for Kurt Russell, who has done plenty of both. On screen these days he's to be seen as Snake Plissken, the hardened criminal who rescues the president of the United States in the futuristic thriller, "Escape From New York." And he's also to be heard as the voice of Copper, the bound with an identity crisis in the Disney animated feature, "The Fox and the Hound."

But the lanky, athletic actor had a previous career as second baseman for such minor league teams as the Paso-Ore.-Rainbows and the El Paso, Texas, Sun Kings until a 1973 shoulder injury drove him from the diamond during his fourth season.

Now, at 30, he looks back on his baseball years with fondness, but not sentimentally. About the baseball "strike he says:

"It was difficult for me to take sides, because both sides were ridiculous."

Even before he began playing professional ball, Russell had made some 10 films for Disney. At the age of 10 he appeared with Elvis Presley in "It Happened at the World's Fair." Much later he was to play the rock star in "Elvis," a television drama directed by John Carpenter, the director of "Escape From New York."

It was while working on "Elvis" that Russell met his future wife, Season Hubley, who played Priscilla Presley and has a bit role as "a crime associate" in "Escape From New York."

"I'm not a Presley fanatic," Russell says, "but I remember he was very nice to me on the set of 'World's Fair.' We'd lose a football around between takes. He was never fatherly or patronizing. After all, he was only 27 himself at the time."

"Elvis was really just an incredibly simple man from the South with a talent for singing and a genius for knowing exactly what his charisma was for every individual in the audience."

"In fact, he was one of the few men in the world who understood his own charisma. If he made the slightest mistake in style he'd sense it instantly and hit the audience up again."

"He used to practice in front of a mirror being Brando or James Dean or Montgomery Clift—all wild ones and rebels without a cause. But he never made the mistake of imitating them. He just incorporated them into his own personality."

"Elvis could stand in one spot and move more than Mick Jagger prancing around the stage. Modern rock types eat up the scenery. Punk stars are so rehearsed, you're just watching an act. But he really moved—all from the inside. As for as drugs and women go, he was just a kid in a candy shop."

Russell married his co-star Season, and now they have a 16-month-old son with the impressive moniker of Boston Oliver Grant Russell Boston?

"I didn't name him after the city, but after a dog kennel I used to see when I was working on a ranch. Only later it dawned on me that of course Boston was the guy's last name. I looked the name up and discovered that the guy who killed John Wilkes Booth was named Boston Corbett; so there are people named Boston, and they shoot assassins."

"If we have a daughter next we might name her Paris or Manhattan. People could call her Hattie. Just now Boston has white hair; he looks like Caspar the Friendly Ghost. You should see the picture I snapped of him being held by Isaac Hayes, the big black 'Duke' in 'Escape From New York.' It's quite a study in contrasts."

Despite the film's title, most of it was shot in St. Louis because "logistically it was impossible to shut down New York streets and bridges long enough to fill them with all that trash and then pick it up again before rush hour."

"I love New York. My wife is from here, and her heart sinks every time our plane lands in Los Angeles. The film certainly isn't anti-New York. I think most people in this country would rather see California sink into the Pacific than Manhattan sink into the East River—and they'd be right."

"New Yorkers have a great attitude. They say, 'Yeah, I'm a New Yorker. Go ahead, mug me.' Then when you ask them why they don't live somewhere else, they tell you, 'There is nowhere else.'

"I spent four months lifting weights to get in shape for Snake Plissken, and quit the minute the movie was over. Nothing is easier for me than acting—I think it's the joke of all time to make your living by talking."

"Usually, once the camera stops, that's the end of the character for me. There are no repercussions at the end of the day, unless I haven't done it well enough. But in 'Escape,' Season tells me I'd come home and be a little surly and quiet. I guess she character of Snake really got to me more than I thought."

"What John Carpenter and I wanted was for people to say to themselves, 'I don't like this guy and I don't know why.' I'm pulling for him, but God, I hope he makes it.' We never once thought of what New Yorkers would say about seeing their city being trashed that way only 15 years from now."

Before making "Escape From New York," Russell starred in "Used Cars" as Rudy Russo, a wildly unscrupulous car dealer with high political aspirations. The movie was a box office disappointment, perhaps because of the disenchanting view it takes of American business and political ethics.

"Maybe we made a mistake," Russell says. "Essentially we sold to the audience, 'You want car crashes? We've got car crashes.' But we had a lot more."

"Rudy is still my favorite character, the closest to real life I've ever played. He has drive and talent as well as being unscrupulous. He genuinely cares for what he is doing, and getting all these nuances meant walking a very thin line as an actor."

"Rudy isn't a product of the '60s as you normally think of them. He came out of the '60s saying, 'I'll accept the way things are and make that system work for me.' I think lots of young Americans today are like him."

'007 star may even write Bond film

Roger Moore picking up confidence as actor

By RICHARD FREDMAN
Newhouse News Service

NEW YORK—After playing James Bond in five successful films—the latest is "For Your Eyes Only"—Roger Moore feels he's the world's leading authority on the late Ian Fleming's fictional hero, the suave British secret agent 007.

Except for Sean Connery, who played him in six earlier Bond epics, in fact, the handsome, gregarious actor half-humorously threatens to write a new Bond novel himself, now that only one of Fleming originals—"Octopussy"—remains to be filmed.

"I'm by no means sure I'll be playing Bond in 'Octopussy,'" he was saying here recently. "I get greedier from film to film, and Cubby Broccoli, who produces the Bond movies, may not be willing to meet my price."

The latest word is that Broccoli will not be making a film of John Gardner's recently published Bond pastiche, "License Renewed." So if "For Your Eyes Only" is as successful as its predecessors, Moore may well find himself writing about the hero as well as playing him.

"I'm not at all tired of Bond. For me the character is always fresh. But the Bond movies are much more physically demanding than any others I've made, and really I prefer roles with more chat and less action."

"I'm a quick study. I don't have to sweat away at a script to learn lots of lines. As-Bond, practically all. I ever got to say 'I'm Bond, James Bond.'"

"The villains get all the good times, while I'm either freezing up on a mountain top or clearing my sinuses under water."

With all the skiing, skating, tobogganing and deep-sea diving Moore has to do in "For Your Eyes Only," it's perhaps the most physically grueling role the actor, now 54, has played.

Two other unusual features of the new movie are that it depends less on gadgetry than the earlier "Moonraker," and the villain is less spectacularly evil.

"Moonraker" wasn't science fiction, exactly—it was more science fact. All the space stuff we showed in it was technologically possible.

"But there's no point in going on competing with the special effects of 'Star Wars' or 'Superman II,' no matter how successful they may be. We just didn't want to go in that high-tech direction again."

"As for the bad guys, the most successful villains in real life are the plausible men. It's only the obvious creeps and monsters who wind up in jail."

Although he still likes playing the Bond role, Moore, unlike most actors, doesn't enjoy seeing himself on screen.

"Once a movie is finished, it's all over as far as I'm concerned. Watching the movie is like watching yourself being dead."

Having made four movies in the last year—"For Your Eyes Only," "Folks," "The Sea Wolves" and "The Cannonball Run," Moore feels he deserves a rest.

"There's no law saying you have to be constantly appearing before your audience. Anyway, I'm pretty cynical about my so-called fame."

Pachelbel 'Kanon' a classic

By RICHARD DYER
©1981 Boston Globe

"The Pachelbel Kanon? The Schlockelbel Kanon?" exclaimed the clerk in the record store in response to a question, before gesturing over to a wide bin stuffed with albums including what has been described as "the biggest selling classical selection in history."

There are now a dozen and a half recordings of these famous—57 measures of music in the catalogue, and that doesn't count the numerous jazz and pop versions—everything but the original version for three violins and continuo. Cleo Laine has even written words for it, and has recorded the result in sticky duet with James Galway.

The piece has served as background music for TV commercials and Marvin Hamlisch has shovelled it onto the soundtrack of "Ordinary People," and from the credits you could get the impression he wrote it (though actually in the small print you could read that it was "arranged for mixed voices" by John Williams, and additionally arranged by Jean-Francois Paillard, and orchestrated by Jack Hayes).

You can hear it in any elevator, and a couple of weeks ago it was the subject of a cartoon in the New Yorker. We are all prisoners of Pachelbel. The "Kanon" has joined the short list of pieces of music that people who hate classical music love—the adagio of the Mahler 5th (the "theme" from "Death in Venice"), the opening of Strauss' "Also sprach Zarathustra" (the "theme" from "2001"), and Ravel's "Bolero" (the "theme" from "10").

Who was this Johann Pachelbel, and why is he doing this to us? Pachelbel himself was born in Nuremberg in 1633 and died there in 1706. He was prominent not only as a composer but as an organist. He held church and cathedral posts in Vienna, Friurt, Gotha, Stuttgart, and finally at St. Sebald's in Nuremberg; curiously at one point in his career he turned down an opportunity to go to England to be organist at Oxford.

Another curious fact is that at one point he was the teacher of Johann Christoph Bach, who in turn became the teacher of Johann Sebastian. The bulk of his music, as you would expect, was written for organ or for the uses of the church; his contribution to chamber music was modest.

Pachelbel was never a forgotten figure, exactly, but over the last few decades—his music—has become an attractive subject for academic study, and there has been a proliferating number—of dissertations about him, chiefly in German. The "Kanon" was recorded for the first time, apparently, by Karl Muenchinger back in 1958. Two decades later, Muenchinger recorded it again; and his annotator stated the reason: "Two decades of advance in sound technology adds spice to Pachelbel's tender morsel in this follow-up edition."

The popularity of the "Kanon" probably began because of the easy accessibility of the piece in recordings available on inexpensive labels. And one kind of popularity generally leads to another: popularity feeds on itself.

And of course there is the appeal of the piece itself, which lies partly in the simplicity of its formal procedures (as easy to follow as "Three Blind Mice," which is a canon too), partly in the hypnotic effect of the 28 repetitions of its two-measure passacaglia bass (as repetitious as anything in a rock song), and partly in the gathering, then relaxing, intensity of the variations on the tune. There is also the appeal of the luscious orchestral garb in which this piece for three violins and continuo is usually clad.

Every so often a classical work comes along that is so universal and far-reaching in its appeal that it crosses over from the purely classical idiom into the world of pop music—such is the case of the Pachelbel Kanon, long an underground cult classic.

Wastewater hydro project feasible

Potential energy from the city's main wastewater trunk line could be turned into energy

Idaho Frozen Foods waste is crucial

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A unique municipal hydropower project using wastewater appears economically feasible if Twin Falls' waste-water volume remains at present levels.

In a 57-page report recently prepared for the city, J-U-B Engineers conditionally recommends that the city proceed with a proposed small-scale hydropower project: "it would use high-pressure sewage outflow that drops over the Snake River Canyon rim and into the treatment plant below.

The qualifying condition is that Idaho Frozen Foods continue to contribute "waste water" to the city sewer system. If IFF withdraws from the system and builds its own treatment facility, as the company has indicated it might, the reduction in sewage flow could cut the project's income-producing potential by 33 percent, J-U-B determined.

J-U-B does consult work for both the city and IFF. The engineering firm's relationship with IFF includes work involving the firm's possible withdrawal from the city sewer system.

Possible conflicts of interest hinge on whether IFF eventually builds its own treatment plant or remains a customer of the city's, said Dale Riedesel, a J-U-B engineer.

Engineers found that with IFF's waste, the power project could yield a net income of $17,000 during the first year of operation. That figure could rise to $23,710 in the 10th year, the report states. City officials have said the project's financial promise lies principally in the city's opportunity to sell power to public utilities.

The cost differences would be relatively minor — less than $30,000 — with respect to building a plant designed to function efficiently with the city's present waste water volume, or a plant designed for a volume considerably below present levels.

The engineers also said there is a chance that waste water channeled through the city's main trunk line could be supplemented with waste water from a smaller line if the additional supply was necessary.

More than 70 percent of Twin Falls' waste water is piped through the city's Grandview trunk line, which carries it to the canyon rim above the treatment plant. From the rim, another pipe channels the water along a 390-foot drop and into the plant. The falling water is, in effect, lost energy.

If the city harnesses that energy, the necessary technical advances could have nationwide significance. The availability of an unconventional turbine capable of handling waste water solids has enhanced the project's appeal considerably, according to the engineers.

It would take about nine months to get the hydropower system built.

The proposed plan calls for the facility, automated and basically unmanned, to be situated at the canyon base, directly north of the treatment plant. J-U-B consultants say the environmental impact would be minimal.

The options for funding the project involve either a bond issue or use of federal revenue-sharing money.

Teacher talks

Binding arbitration seen as last resort by Twin Falls teachers

TWIN FALLS — Stalled contract talks have made binding arbitration the only alternative to confrontation, according to Dick Chilcote, the chief negotiator for Twin Falls teachers.

Chilcote said that "absolutely nothing happened" at the 90-minute bargaining meeting Wednesday night, which again left teachers without a contract.

He said that binding arbitration, advanced again by the teachers, was rejected flatly by the board.

Binding arbitration is a settlement process in which both parties agree to accept the findings of a neutral third party.

The most recent offer made by the board was a base salary of $11,500. The teachers are asking for $11,800.

Board spokesman, Superintendent James Sawin, said after the meeting that the negotiation process is still viable. The board, he said, offered the teachers a plan in which salaries would be increased at mid-year if school attendance is up. The plan, which was rejected earlier in the negotiations by the teachers, was rejected again Wednesday.

The basic problem, Sawin said, is that the funds to pay the teachers' salary request don't exist in the

Hansen negotiators optimistic after talks

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

HANSEN — Teacher and school board negotiators again left the bargaining table Wednesday night without a contract settlement, but the future seems brighter.

"Things are looking a little better," said board spokesman Richard Youree. "There is some movement towards settlement."

Youree said that the package offered by the board did not involve more money, but it was a step in the budget. He said that reduced outside funding for schools has led to a situation that is frustrating to everyone involved, including the public.

According to Sawin, the board opposes binding arbitration on the grounds that it is not provided for in right direction.

The board offered a $10,700 base salary with a $125 fringe pool at Wednesday's talks, Youree said. The previous offer was a $10,800 base with a $100 fringe pool. The teachers, who were interested in more insurance coverage, were dissatisfied with the benefits portion of the previous offer.

Joan Martin, the chief negotiator for the teachers, said Wednesday's meeting was productive, and the teachers were "excited and optimistic" about the offer.

The next bargaining session is scheduled for Wednesday.

the negotiating procedures or in state law. He said the board felt the present negotiating process ultimately will produce agreement.

"There is no good resolution for lack of funds," Sawin said, "but there is a resolution."

Chilcote said that the board has no credibility with the teachers as far as salary offers are concerned. As proof, he cited the negotiations of the past three years. Each year, he said, the board told the teachers that no money was available to meet their demands. Yet, at each year's end, an excessive carryover emerged, he said.

"The teachers do not trust the board," Chilcote said. "And past history is the reason why."

To illustrate the extent of the mistrust among teachers, Chilcote revealed at Wednesday's bargaining session the results of a rank-and-file vote taken Sept. 15. He said 93 percent (202) of the teachers voted not to accept the board's offer. About 90 teachers did not return ballots.

Since the board maintains that its budget figures are correct and extra salary money does not exist, while the teachers feel that the money is there, Chilcote feels the only way to settle is arbitration.

"In order to avoid the possibility of any confrontation, we need to go to binding arbitration," he said.

According to Chilcote, the teachers association would bear the expense of the arbitration process, and it would accept an arbiter from Twin Falls to avoid outsiders being involved in the negotiations.

State hearing held here Citizens debate budget cutbacks

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Education, highways, nursing — even weeds — are all in trouble.

So argued department heads and project directors from around the Magic Valley during a governor's budget hearing in Twin Falls on Thursday afternoon.

One man at the hearing compared the state's financial tightening to pruning dead limbs from a tree to get rid of the waste, only to carry it too far and end up chopping off all the fruit.

But the debate wasn't going to be resolved Thursday. Gov. John Evan's senior assistant, Steve Seward, and the state's financial management administrator, Larry Scale, were taking testimony only to aid the governor in developing a 1982-83 budget proposal to submit to the 1982 Legislature.

Although a spectrum of interest groups attended the hearing, increased funding for education was the most frequent topic.

Citing override levies, reduced teaching staffs and program cutbacks around the Magic Valley this year, Idaho Education Association representative Jim Shackelford said more severe times are on the horizon for Idaho schools if the Legislature does not increase state support for public schools.

To stress his point, Shackelford claimed that many children of Twin Falls district teachers actually may qualify for the free lunch program used in the district because of their parents' low salaries.

"Looking at the teachers' salaries as the only source of income, 12 percent of the Twin Falls teachers would qualify for free lunches if they have five-member families," Shackelford said. "That amounts to one in eight teachers."

Former police officer in Kimberly indicates he may sue over firing

Rebollozo files $70,000 claim against city

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — A former police officer fired this summer has indicated he may sue Kimberly for $70,000.

No lawsuit on behalf of former Officer Ari Rebollozo has been filed in 5th District Court. But Rebollozo's lawyer, Mark Stubbs, has submitted a letter to the city, claiming $70,000 in damages.

Under Idaho law, persons planning to sue municipalities must file such a letter within 60 days after the alleged grievance has occurred.

City Council formally discharged Rebollozo on May 27, following a closed-door session. Rebollozo had been with the department for two years.

Now a security guard for Cactus Pete's in Jackpot, Nev., Rebollozo is seeking $5,000 in lost wages, $15,000 to cover lawyer's fees and $50,000 in general and punitive damages.

He claims he was fired over a dispute with fellow officer Alan McInroy, who resigned earlier this month. Rebollozo says McInroy ordered him to remain on call during Memorial Day weekend after McInroy previously had agreed to assume that duty himself.

Police Chief Jim Campbell was out of town during the incident, and McInroy was serving as department supervisor.

Rebollozo says that Councilman Ted Wasco, who serves as police commissioner, then fired him for insubordination. Wasco's decision was upheld by the entire City Council at the May 27 hearing.

But Rebollozo maintains the decision to fire him was made while council was meeting in an executive session.

"They never told me that during the council meeting," he said. "They left me outside."

Because his termination came before he had a chance to attend the police academy and become certified as an officer, Rebollozo maintains his career has been damaged seriously.

"I can't get hired anywhere in Twin Falls County so far," he said. "I'd like to work under Sheriff (Jim) Munn, but I don't know if I can do it without certification."

Rebollozo also maintains he was treated unfairly because other Kimberly officers had received less severe punishment for more serious infractions.

The case raises the possibility that city officials violated Idaho's open-meeting law, as well as federal civil-rights statutes, Stubbs says.

Whether the suit is filed depends on whether ongoing negotiations with the city are successful, Stubbs said.

"I can only say settlement offers have been passed back and forth, but no agreement has been reached," he said. "If it isn't settled in a satisfactory manner, then my client has instructed me to proceed with any legitimate claims against the city of Kimberly."

Elmore County top state PILT winner

BOISE — Checks for $7.3 million were mailed to Idaho counties today for payments in lieu of taxes from the federal government. Elmore County apparently was the big winner in the 1982 federal sweepstakes, though no one is quite certain why. Elmore will receive a check for $886,650, compared to its 1980 payment of $286,648. Twin Falls County will receive $483,501, some $12,000 more than the county commissions included in their budget. Most other counties in the state received slight increases.

Officials of Twin Falls and Elmore counties were attending the Association of Idaho Counties meeting in Boise and were not available for comment. Bob Buffington, the Bureau of Land Management, state director, said Idaho counties received $581,288 more this year than in 1980. Congress authorized the payments in 1976 to compensate for services the counties perform free for federal lands. Fred Cook, chief of public affairs for the BLM in Idaho, said several changes were made in the way in-lieu payments were calculated this year. County leaders, once they saw the impact on their annual budgets, have been more careful to identify lands that qualify for payment. Cook said. In addition, rules were changed to include federal wildlife refuges, some military installations and other previously excluded lands. The payments previously covered lands in national forests, the national park system, the BLM, water resource development projects and those used by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The increase in Elmore County could result from the inclusion for the first time of Mountain Home Air Force Base, he said. Other Magic Valley counties received: Blaine, $316,271; Cassia $225,616; Gooding $195,021; Jerome $66,632; and Mindoka $125,021. The windfall may be short-lived. The U.S. Senate has authorized full funding of the program for 1982, while the House eliminated it entirely. A conference committee will decide the issue in coming weeks.

Area cities, counties, make request for land

By RON ZELLAR, Times-News writer

BOISE — Twenty-nine local governments in Idaho, including cities, counties and school districts, have filed 71 requests for federal land. Under provisions of the federal Recreation and Public Purposes Act, Secretary of the Interior James Watt has asked local governments to request earlier this year to file for land needed for community expansion. The Bureau of Land Management is doing the necessary research to transfer land ownership, according to Fred Cook, BLM's chief of public affairs in Idaho. State and federal authorities have agreed on a plan to process the requests, some of which require additional work by local governments. Cook said 41 of the requests for land transfers need formal applications from local officials, and those could take two years or more to complete. Simpler requests, such as permits for rights of way, can be issued easily in 30 to 60 days, he said.

Among the proposals are requests from Twin Falls County for a solid waste site, sanitary landfills and a moor site. Blaine County entities have filed 11 requests, ranging from ones for county gravel pits to snow storage for the city of Ketchum—and a water reservoir site for the city of Halley. Shoshone asked for a landfill site and continuance of its flood-control agreements. The city of Malta, in eastern Cassia County, sought sites for a well, an airport and a landfill. Two requests from the city of Clayton, situated near new mining activity 20 miles east of Stanley, could face problems with the national Wild and Scenic Rivers Act and pre-existing mining claims, Cook said. The city asked for plans to expand and locate a sanitary landfill. BLM's state director, Bob Buffington, said a plan of development must be submitted by local governments with formal applications if they are to eventually receive title to the lands requested.

Nurse 'bounty' doubled in effort to attract more

TWIN FALLS — The "bounty" for finding a nurse for Magic Valley Memorial Hospital has been doubled. It's part of the hospital's ongoing effort to recruit registered nurses and licensed practical nurses. The bounty system was instituted to get the county involved in the recruitment process. Persons who recruit either an RN or an LPN who works at the hospital for six months will be paid $250. Previously, the finder's fee was $100. Also, a person who recruits a nurse who works part time for six months will receive $100. Nurses must submit in writing on their first day of employment the name, address and phone number of the person who referred them to the hospital. Administrator William Burns, who asked the MVMH board to approve the change, said he hoped it would create more interest in the bounty. "We've now paid two so far," he said. About 20 part-time and full-time nursing positions are presently open. The hospital also is devising a tuition payment program that may make employment more attractive to nurses, Burns said. Under the proposal, the hospital will pay portions of tuition costs for staff members who wish to continue their education in return for a pledge to work a certain time at the hospital. For example, if an employee says he will work at the hospital for three years, the hospital will pay up to $3,000 in tuition fees. If, however, the person leaves after a year, he must pay the hospital two-thirds of the $3,000. Burns said similar programs are used at other institutions, and MVMH's program will be open to all its employees. Details of the proposal will be worked out and presented at the Oct. 26 board meeting.

Boy on bike hit by truck
TWIN FALLS — A boy was injured Thursday afternoon when his bicycle was struck by a pickup truck. According to police, John Maxim, 12, 471 Addison Ave., suffered a leg injury when he was struck in the crosswalk at Monroe Street and Addison Avenue by a car driven by Jerry Shafer, 399 Quincy St. Shafer had stopped at the stop sign on Monroe and then pulled forward, knocking the bicyclist to the pavement. Police cited Shafer for failure to use caution. Maxim was treated and released at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

But series not being carried on KMVT

'60 Minutes' team starts daily daytime show

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK — Fans of CBS's "60 Minutes" — and the Nielsen ratings indicate they are legion — now can have their favorite video fare five days a week, though for five of those days it will be called "Up to the Minute".

The crew for the new 30-minute series which premieres Monday at 2 p.m., EDT, is the same as the one that runs the popular Sunday evening magazine — Marley Safer, Harry Reasoner, Mike Wallace and newcomer, Ed Bradley. Even the logo is almost the same — a pocket watch with no ticking.

Instead of Andy Rooney, "Up to the Minute" employs Bob Keeshan — "Captain Kangaroo" in another incarnation — for the post-script, thus making good a promise CBS advanced when Keeshan yielded half an hour of his morning kiddie show to "Morning With Charles Kuralt."

Only the producer has changed. For the Monday through Friday series, it is Grace Diekhous instead of Don Hewitt.

Certainly the content is every bit as provocative, and since the program will dedicate an entire week to one subject, it delves much deeper than its Sunday cousin ever could.

The topic with which "Up to the Minute" makes its Monday debut is "The Effects of Feminism on Men," and Harry Reasoner kicks it off with some surprises for both Readers.

In five segments, he explores a world in which women suddenly have become assertive — even aggressive — in their bid for equality and what he turns up among macho men in bars, at cocktail parties and in interviews often in show'error.

"It goes against the grain," says one unidentified man of the modern woman's predilection for inflating contact. "It goes against years of tradition and upbringing."

"What do they really want anyway?" wails another.

"What is it they're looking for?"

A third answers.

"I think what they want is somebody who is an upper-level executive for Xerox who happens to be a well-published poet and is deciding on a secret career as a Ph.D. sex therapist and is attending the Masters and Johnson's clinic largely because he wants his lady to be totally happy," he grouses.

Tennis huster and self-proclaimed professional male chauvinist Bobby Riggs is outraged.

"I like my woman to respect me, and then I'm in charge," he roars in an interview with Reasoner. "I'm a guy who likes to be in charge. I like to call the shots. . . and she should be in charge of the kids and take care of 'em."

"Not all the men polled are so apalled at the new wave.

"I inherited the same culture you did," Robert Walden of the television series "Lou Grant" tells Riggs. "Your generation passed it on to me and I hope I don't pass it on to the next generation."

By episode five, with frightened men, men abandoned to raise the kids, men who work for women and men now confused as to how to relate even to their daughters all explored in depth, Reasoner's around-the-coffee table discussion crumbles into a blazing fire — for all.

Everyone talks at once, tempers flare, names are called. Wryly, Reasoner interrupts the brawl with a summation.

"Can you imagine five women agreeing as closely as we have?" he asks.

Experts doubtlessly will carp at the style, but "Up to the Minute" is likely to wind up owning the 2-3:30 p.m. daily time slot the way "60 Minutes" owns Sunday evening.

A spokesman for KMVT in Twin Falls said the new series conflicts with NBC programming — specifically, the popular soap opera "Another World" — and will not be aired. However, CBS affiliates in Salt Lake City (KSL) and Boise (KBCI) on area cable systems are expected to air the new program.
