

Shuttle has green light for launch

Work ahead of schedule

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Dozens of technicians scrambled over the space shuttle Columbia Sunday in preparation for the spaceship's unprecedented second launch Wednesday.

The technicians were finishing chores ranging from washing windows to checking the computer's memory.

The countdown for the 5:30 a.m. MST Wednesday launch — the first time a manned spacecraft will be returned to space — was running ahead of schedule and weather forecasts were improving. Space officials believed weather to be the main factor in whether 184-foot-tall Columbia launches on time.

"We've seen no problems," said project engineer Larry Ellis at a shuttle status briefing.

Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly remained in Houston preparing for their first flight into orbit and their arrival at the Kennedy Space Center Monday.

Up to 60 technicians worked around the shuttle preparing it for the five day, 83-orbit voyage that will carry more than two tons of experiments and a 50-foot boom arm to be tested for future satellite unloadings.

The solid rocket boosters, the retrievable rockets that help launch the shuttle, were ready for flight. Food and medical supplies were put aboard. Even the windows in the astronauts' cabin were cleaned.

The Columbia's five computers were checked out and declared ready for flight. A glitch between the computers and a backup computer delayed the first launch of Columbia for two days in April.

Officials hoped they had solved another problem which they noticed after the first launch April 12. A shock wave from the ignition of the booster rockets jolted the spaceship for a split second and on its return to Earth engineers found two metal struts in the nose were bent slightly.

No major damage was done, but to keep it from happening again 16-inch diameter water hammocks — which look like large water-filled sausages — were placed around the boosters Sunday to help absorb the shock. A massive water spray system also was expected to eliminate the problem.

Columbia's maiden flight showed man could send off a rocket and return it to Earth like an airplane. The second voyage would prove it can be done again.

Historic 'return launch' of the Columbia to space will be marked by tests of its exterior 'arm,' shown in artist's concept

A fourth set of tanks will be added for the next flight to allow the Columbia to spend a week in orbit.

The spacecraft also has three new fuel cells. The original units were replaced with improved versions designed to last the full 100 missions the shuttle is expected to be able to carry out.

for Columbia's three fuel cell electric generators. The reaction between oxygen and hydrogen produces electricity and water for drinking. The oxygen is also mixed with nitrogen for breathing.

An extra set of hydrogen and oxygen tanks was installed following the first test flight to show the Columbia the ability to stay up five days.

Even as the countdown for the second flight continued, preparations for the third flight next March were going ahead. Jack Louma, expected to be the commander of shuttle flight three, was practicing landing at the Kennedy Space Center in a twin-engine jet rigged to land like the shuttle.

Sudden showers and blustery winds continued to hit the cape Sunday but an Air Force forecast said the weather should be satisfactory Wednesday. Winds were expected to die down to about 11 miles an hour, acceptable for launch.

The next big job early Monday was loading the Columbia's six insulated tanks that hold hydrogen and oxygen

Halloween's 'horrors' heard across nation

By United Press International and The Times-News

Police across the nation Sunday listed another litany of horror stories that have become a tragic part of Halloween lore.

Among them was the fatal shooting of a trick-or-treater in Baton Rouge, La., a self-inflicted fatal stabbing in Ohio and various reports of doctored candy with needles and drugs.

But in the Magic Valley, law-enforcement officials said it was almost as quiet as a "regular Saturday night." Police in Twin Falls received only three complaints, which involved egg-throwing and overturned garbage. There were no serious traffic accidents despite an unusually large number of small trick-or-treaters on the streets.

A Twin Falls sheriff's deputy said one man, on his way home from a party and dressed in a bumble-bee costume, was arrested on a minor charge, about the most interesting thing that happened all evening.

Several minor traffic accidents and only a handful of complaints were reported elsewhere in the Magic Valley. Officers said it was one of the most quiet Halloweens in several years.

Meanwhile, a Baton Rouge man was charged with second-degree murder in the Saturday night fatal shooting of a 13-year-old trick-or-treater dressed in Army fatigues and carrying a toy machine gun. Police said Robert James Bouton, 58, apparently mistook Daniel K. Breaux for a prowler.

Police said the boy and his companions did nothing to provoke the shooting.

The Cleveland suburb of Parma apparently won the booby prize for the highest number of reported incidents.

Ernest Pesek Jr., 23, who was trying to dress like Dracula, stabbed himself in the chest Saturday night and died two hours later, police said. Pesek apparently had wanted to complete the Dracula illusion by driving a stake through his heart.

He placed an inch-thick board beneath his shirt and drove a double-edged knife into it.

Allows testing before production

Computer design melds with manufacturing

By MARSHA TAYLOR
Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — No pencils, no erasers, no P-squares, no drawings. Architects and design engineers increasingly are being forced to work without the traditional tools of their trade.

Back to the drawing board? Not at all. Drawing boards also are on the way out.

As the United States searches for ways to increase productivity, new technology for the factory of the future emerges that will change the shape of industry. Such technology is computer-aided design and computer-aided manufacturing, known as CAD-CAM.

CAD, the older of the two, is the name given to computer — rather than human — production and production control. For example, a computer may be used to start or stop an assembly line rather than having a foreman flip a switch. Computer-controlled robots are integral parts of many CAM systems. CAD is the name given to design executed with a computer on a video screen.

Getting CAD and CAM systems to "communicate" — designing a part by CAD and manufacturing it by CAM — is the focus of top-priority research and development.

The worldwide leader in developing CAD systems is Computer Vision Corp. of Bedford, Mass.

"Computer-aided design takes place on a screen that looks like a TV tube and is hooked to a computer loaded with CAD software packages," explains Ashok Bhidé, Computer Vision's director of strategic planning for mechanical systems. "Instead of designing by drawing lines on a piece of paper, designers 'draw' on the screen."

"Once a drawing is finished, the computer allows the designer to rotate objects, to turn them over and look at them from new angles. With conventional methods, we had to make new elevations each time we wanted to see different angles. Now, the computer does all this for us and then lets us print out conventional elevations on paper."

CAD frees the designer from the more mundane tasks of design work, says Bhidé. It also allows testing of new ideas before expensive prototypes are ordered, because the computer tells the designer what would happen to the creation under performance conditions.

"CAD lets us be more creative," says Bhidé. "You can try a hundred new ideas and then just pick one or two to have prototypes made. Money isn't wasted on ideas that don't work, but we can still try out our new ideas."

—The bulk of CAD technology did not exist 20 years ago.

"CAD-CAM today is a fast-growth industry," says analyst Laura Congiario of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., an investment firm.

Regan anticipates mortgage rates will drop sharply and stay down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary Donald Regan predicted Sunday the administration's economic policies will send mortgage rates down and keep them down in coming months.

Regan, interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation," said the combination of problem of "unusually high interest rates" showed "how deeply inflation is imbedded into this economy."

But, he said, the drop in mortgage rates that began in recent weeks will continue "over the next several months" and there is reason to hope mortgages will stay down because "if we have inflation leked, there's no reason for them to back up."

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Dole, R-Kan., appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," said he foresaw a drop to 15 percent in interest rates by the end of 1981.

So far, he said, Regan's economic program "really hasn't had a chance to work. I'm convinced it will." Both Regan and Dole indicated they do not expect to see any major tax increases in fiscal year 1982.

The Treasury secretary said that to enact a large tax increase during a recession would be "the wrong thing at the wrong time." And, he said, "it looks like we're going to be in a recession for another six months or so."

He said that while he had not ruled out a 1982 tax increase, "the more I study the problem, the more I'm convinced that there may not be any tax increases in fiscal year 1982."

"We've been looking at a long range of taxes — excise taxes, luxury taxes, energy taxes — and none are very popular," he said. "We may be making a decision in the next few days or maybe ruling in or ruling out altogether and focusing on '83 and '84."

Dole said he expected "little 'tampering" with nutrition programs like food stamps and school lunches in the next round of budget cuts but that Congress will look closely at defense spending in Regan's proposal for "strategic modernization."

"Can we now afford that expense when we're looking at more cuts in social programs or increasing taxes?" he asked. "Those of us who have the responsibility are probably taking a little closer look at some of the decisions pending whether it's the MX (missile) or the B1 bomber."

Regan reiterated his testimony before a congressional committee last week that "at this time it's still possible to have a balanced budget in '84 but it's not probable unless Congress acts" on Regan's budget cuts. "The president is 'fully committed' to seeking a balanced budget, Regan said. "If they give us the cuts that we initially suggested plus the additional cuts we suggested in September, there's a good chance we can do it."

Idaho Power sets court appeal over inverted rate order

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. will ask the Idaho Supreme Court this week to overturn an order by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission imposing an inverted-rate structure for the utility's residential customers.

Idaho Power spokesman Larry Taylor said that the company will file the appeal by Friday — the last day such an appeal could be filed.

Taylor said Idaho Power claims the inverted residential rates — which require the company to charge progressively more per kilowatt-hour for higher electrical usage — are "discriminatory and preferential in nature" and would penalize customers who heat their homes with electricity.

The inverted rate structure is designed to encourage conservation of electricity, its proponents say.

Taylor said the utility will not contest the PUC's order changing the rate structure for businesses and irrigators. The order provides that, instead of paying for their electricity according to a declining-block rate structure, businesses and irrigators now pay a flat rate.

Journalist mediates at prison

GRATERFORD, Pa. (UPI) — A newspaper columnist to whom a dozen criminals have surrendered met Monday with four convicts holding nine hostages at Graterford State Prison in a four-day standoff and was given a list of 12 demands that he called "reasonable."

Chuck Stone, a Philadelphia Daily News columnist and senior editor, arrived at the prison at the request of Gov. Dick Thornburgh and the mother of Joseph Bowen — a three-time killer who is the leader of the convicts barricaded in the prison kitchen with his hostages.

Stone was invited to the prison because "he has a history of receiving and granting the physical safety of fugitives and escapees," said Kenneth Robinson, a Pennsylvania Bureau of Correction spokesman.

Stone said he promised not to reveal the substance of the prisoner's demands.

So which witch is real witch?

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — While youthful ghouls celebrated the tricks and treats of Halloween, one group of modern day witches challenged another with misrepresenting the ancient European pagan religious tradition.

The disagreement centers on just who could be considered a witch.

The protesting group was led by Duane A. Landzak, who described himself as director of the Assembly of Wicca in Sacramento.

Landzak said Wicca was a disciplined religion for non-Christians which has a study. Organizers of a Saturday public witches' rite misrepresnted the tradition, he said.

But Ann Forfreedom, leader of the Goddess Rising group, countered that she was qualified to claim a Wicca affiliation and that the problem was part of a larger dispute among Sacramento witches who disagree on publicity and feminist issues.

AT&T wants club dues in rates

DALLAS (UPI) — American Telephone and Telegraph Co. spends more than $100,000 annually to pay club memberships to its executives and managers, causing higher telephone bills nationwide.

The 26 club memberships — supplied to United Press International on request — include $16,000 for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, $13,500 for the New York Chamber of Commerce and Industry and $12,500 to the Associates of the Harvard Business School.

Southwestern Bell spokesman Dale Johnson said the list supplied to UPI was a "representative" sample of proposed expenditures that AT&T has either passed on to telephone customers or is seeking permission to again pass on.

Nationwide, AT&T is also asking customers to pay $24,800 for portraits of AT&T executives and $30,000 for their business dinners. AT&T is also requesting $75,000 to defend the controversial expenses from customer criticism.

God promises end to cancer?

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Evangelist Oral Roberts formally dedicated his $20 million City of Faith hospital Sunday and said that God has promised a cure for cancer.

"I am going to stand here and deliver a prophecy which I believe is from the spirit of God," Roberts told a crowd of 13,000, gathered to dedicate the controversial hospital, which combines modern medicine with old time religion.

"God's going to give a breakthrough in cancer, friend, and that breakthrough is not very far away," said Roberts. "The missing element is about to be applied."

1,300 fisherman lost in storm

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — About 190 boats carrying more than 4,300 fishermen disappeared in the Arabian Sea in a tropical storm that lashed western India Sunday with 10-foot-high waves and 60 mph winds.

The fishing boats were reported missing between the west coast ports of Dwarka and Jakhau, 700 miles southwest of New Delhi, after they were caught in a hurricane-force winds of 65 mph Friday, officials said.

Submarine fails escape bid

KATTESKRONA, Sweden (UPI) — A small Swedish armada of warships circled a grounded Soviet submarine for the sixth straight day and 200 troops stationed nearby were placed on "increased alert" Sunday when the suspected spy vessel attempted to break free and possibly sneak away.

The trapped Soviet sub started its engines Sunday apparently trying to break free from the rock gripping the vessel. But the submarine did not move and the commander ordered the engines turned off.

Defense spokesman Col. Jan-Ake Borg said the sub and its 56 crewmembers "can't get out. We have an iceberg blocking the path and they could not get under it."

U.S. linked to torture aid

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — A former Uruguayan navy intelligence officer charged Sunday that U.S. manuals were used to train Uruguay's military staff in torture, including electric shock and hot towel interrogations.

Victor Paulo Laborde Baffico, also said that most officers who trained him had attended courses at the School of the Americas run by U.S. military in Panama.

But Baffico, who served in the Uruguayan Navy from May 1979 until his desertion in February of this year, said in a 51-page sworn statement that he saw no other evidence of United States involvement in Uruguayan intelligence work beyond the manuals that were translated into Spanish.

Computers threaten rights

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Advanced computer technology, while enhancing law enforcement efforts, threatens to curtail constitutional questions involving privacy, surveillance and search and seizure, a congressional report says.

The Office of Technology Assessment said computer technology has entered every aspect of life from criminal records to mail, phone calls and shopping habits, yet there is little legal precedent for applying constitutional law to issues raised by computer-based information systems.

The 166-page report said areas of constitutional rights that may be affected include:

- Freedom of speech and press.
- Protection against unreasonable search and seizure.
- Protection against self-incrimination and guarantee of due process of law.
- Right to a trial by impartial jury.
- State guarantees of due process and equal protection of laws.
- In addition — to helping law enforcement officials to gather and store information on crimes and criminals, computers may eventually be used to predict criminal tendencies.
- Techniques are being studied for detecting tendencies toward juvenile delinquency, drunken driving or violent antisocial behavior and for security checks by the government," the report said.

Computer-based predictions could also be used to approve credit, determine insurability or hiring and promoting employees, the report said.

"Essentially, individuals may be denied rights, privileges and benefits based, not on past performance, but on a prediction of future tendencies," it said.

"National information systems may provide mechanisms for surveillance that penetrate more deeply into an individual's privacy than was previously possible," it said. "Thus, threatening rights guaranteed under the Fourth Amendment."

Market penetration still is small, cautions analyst Faith Griffin of the investment banking firm L.F. Rothschild Unterberg & Tobin.

"Everybody (interested in CAD-CAM) wants to count heads, but I believe we still miss a lot," says Griffin. "Just remember — that anybody who manufactures anything and uses a blueprint to do it, can conceivably make use of CAD-CAM technology. And in the near future, many of them will."

Griffin estimated sales of integrated CAD-CAM systems in the United States, the leader in the field, at $25 million in 1979. Sales in 1980 increased to $50 million, Conigliaro says.

Griffin believes the U.S. market for 1984 will be worth around $2 billion. "We're still missing a lot" in CAD-CAM use in the electronics industry (currently the leading user) and map-making at 35 percent, in architecture and construction at 45 percent and in mechanical manufacturing at 50 percent to 55 percent.

Vastly increased productivity is what makes CAD-CAM systems so attractive to industry.

"Depending on the use you're putting a CAD-CAM system to, you may get a productivity increase of 5-to-1," says Stuart Newman, the promotion manager at CAD-CAM's No. 2 ranked company, Applicon in Bedford, Mass. "But that increase may go as high as 100-to-1. The applications are endless. People are just beginning to really sit down and think about what to do with these systems."

And CAD-CAM companies like Computervision plan "to give increases a lot more to think about outside the country."

"The United States has a big technological lead," says Blide, "but it is incorrect to assume this will turn into a big lead in increased productivity. The systems used outside the United States obviously will increase productivity wherever they may be."

Blide says that increased use of CAD-CAM technology in the United States should mean greater productivity. Although the United States leads in the field of CAD-CAM development, many of the systems the nation's companies sell are for use outside the country.

"The United States has a big technological lead," says Blide, "but it is incorrect to assume this will turn into a big lead in increased productivity. The systems used outside the United States obviously will increase productivity wherever they may be."

Tuesday's elections will test Reagan's strength

By United Press International

Two governorship races that may test President Reagan's political pull, plus scores of big-city mayoral races are at stake in off-year elections Tuesday.

And at least three local ballot issues have national implications:

A direct challenge to Reagan's economic policy on the Massachusetts ballot, where voters will mark "yes" or "no" on a non-binding referendum saying Congress should redirect military spending toward social and education programs.

District of Columbia voters will have a first chance to express themselves on a tuition tax credit — allowing parents a tax refund of up to $1,200 for expenses of educating their children. The controversial issue has never been tested at the polls.

In Kentucky, Democratic Gov. John Y. Brown, who is reported to have presidential ambitions, backs a referendum to rescind the state's 182-year-old ban on governors succeeding themselves.

Brown, who made millions peddling Kentucky Fried Chicken, has not disclosed his political plans, but most state politicians expect him to seek re-election in 1982 if the initiative is approved, and use his office to bring a quest for the Democratic presidential nomination two years later.

The two states where governorship races may test Reagan's political clout are in normally Democratic New Jersey, which chooses between Democratic Rep. James Florio and Republican Thomas Kean, and usually Republican Virginia, where Democrat Charles Robb faces Republican J. Marshall Coleman.

Polls in both states show the Democratic candidates with declining leads.

Reagan has campaigned for Coleman in Virginia, and the Republican attorney general has succeeded in reducing Robb's early lead in the polls.

The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot gave

Robb just over 40 percent to nearly 39 percent for Coleman and more than 20 percent undecided. That paper's September survey gave Robb a 3-point lead.

The campaign has been bitter, with Robb accusing Coleman of being "soft" on narcotics dealers as attorney general and Coleman making an issue of the fact that Robb, a Marine Corps White House aide in the Johnson years, is married to the former Lyndon Bird Johnson.

Reagan's economic program has been a major factor, with Kean campaigning on a tax cut plan copied after the president's, and Florio claiming the program has hurt New Jersey because of the sharp cutback in federal funds.

Kean got a last minute boost over the weekend as Vice President George Bush and Senate Republican leader Howard Baker joined the campaign.

Scores of cities are picking mayors, including some 15 of the nation's largest metropolitan areas. New York Mayor Ed Koch's election is more in the nature of a coronation. He won, both the Democratic and Republican nominations.

California brushfires contained?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — More than 1,000 firefighters using 100 fire engines and nine helicopters Sunday began taming a 17,500-acre brush fire.

It was the largest of a series of wind-whipped blazes that have destroyed at least 11 homes.

Hot, dry Santa Ana winds from the desert, blowing at times to 50 mph, spurred the flames out of control through canyons of dry grass and thick brush Saturday in Browns Canyon along the Los Angeles-Ventura County line north of Los Angeles.

The fire was 40 percent contained Sunday afternoon and officials predicted full containment by evening.

County fire spokesman Jim Davids said more than 1,000 firefighters were on the lines Sunday. Helicopter water drops began at first light and six air tankers were borrowed from the U.S. Forest Service, but later released.

Predicted heavy winds failed to rise Sunday but Davids said the firefighters "are getting the upper hand at this time."

The largest of the fires destroyed four houses and a mobile home. An earlier fire nearby destroyed six homes.

"We have the blaze about 40 percent contained," he said, "but there is still a 14-mile long open fire line."

Several hundred residents of the area, about two miles north of an earlier fire near the San Fernando Valley community of Chatsworth, were evacuated from their homes.

Horses and other livestock were turned loose late Saturday as the flames jumped from ridge to ridge across the narrow canyons in a fire storm.

A fire which broke out Friday night near the Chatsworth Reservoir to the south of Browns Canyon, destroyed at least five homes before it was controlled at about 1,000 acres. Three firefighters were injured in that blaze, including one who was struck by a car.

The Browns Canyon fire did not threaten homes after dawn Sunday, but before the wind shifted during the night, the flames burned to within 100 yards of a neighborhood, sending residents fleeing to hastily set up Red Cross shelters at nearby schools.

Brush fires also burned early Sunday in the Chino Hills of San Bernardino County, blackening about 1,000 acres, and a 200-acre fire was brought under control near the Western Hills Country Club near Chino.

Another brush fire which broke out Saturday near the El Paso Marine Air Station in Orange County, damaging several homes of a base housing area.

BLM, tell us why Buffington is out

What's behind the sudden transfer of Robert Buffington, the Idaho Bureau of Land Management director?

More importantly, who's behind it? All Idahoans know — and Buffington, too, for that matter — is that the BLM in Washington has ordered him out of the state. But we know of no reason why this action was taken.

Buffington claims that Idaho ranchers put pressure on national BLM Director Robert Burford and Secretary of the Interior James Watt to affect his transfer, ostensibly because of Buffington's land-use policies. Suddenly, there were 32 letters written to U.S. Sen. Steve Symms and U.S. Rep. Larry Craig complaining about Buffington.

But the BLM has not released the letters, and Buffington has had to file under the Freedom of Information Act to see them himself. Is this the way the government treats its employees — first by casting a cloud of suspicion over their heads, by transferring them and stonewalling on the reasons for the change?

Everybody — including several Idaho environmental groups — is accusing cattlemen for Buffington's ouster. If this is true, then one interest group has caused the BLM action, then something is rotten in Idaho and Washington.

And what about Symms and Craig? Why haven't they commented on the controversy? They surely know who wrote the letters and their content. Or are they part of this movement to oust Buffington?

This all smacks of a political hatchet job, an attempt to remove an official who has done a reasonably good job of managing BLM affairs in the state.

All Burford has said is that "a change would be helpful to the public interests in general."

We detest that condescending attitude. Burford owes the people of this state an explanation: exactly what happened and why.

Program Not new

Editor, Times-News:

This program in safe driving campaigns, 55-Alive-Mature driving, is not a new program as a Times-News writer stated in the Oct. 26 issue. Such a program was conducted by the Magic Valley AARP in 1978 under the direction of the National Safety Council Improvement Program, defense driving course and presented for two days at the College of Southern Idaho.

The present program is sponsored by Twin Falls Chapter of the National Teachers Association. Any driving course is important and should be conducted by persons having the expertise on driving ability. For their project the Retired Teachers could use their education expertise helping children in subjects which are needed in teaching knowledge for the welfare instead of teaching over-55 people how to drive longer.

In other words, the instructors should have the expertise in their work. We realize several older drivers should no longer be driving and a good driving refresher course would help. One of the scheduled speakers says many older people don't realize the dangers of driving after taking medications. How about the medications taken by some of the younger residents in these modern times.

Insurance companies have higher premiums for the younger generation from teenagers to 30 years, and in some cases are reduced for perfect driving habits. This group has most of the reckless driving and fatalities and does pay higher rates. This does not apply to the older drivers unless they have an accident.

The 55-mile limit is a law that should be continued. It has reduced fatalities around Twin Falls and it has slowed traffic within the city limits. On state highways it has reduced fatalities and the severity of the accidents.

Twin Falls police have a reduced force and it is arduous how much productive work they accomplish at each shift. Idaho State Police are now undermanned by nine patrolmen, 19 officers patrol the state in eight counties.

Driving courses are important, but let us have persons with the proper expertise conducting the seminars.

Council by district?

Editor, Times-News:

Seven council districts in Twin Falls! Seven voting districts in Twin Falls!

In our representative system of electing representatives of the public, why can't we have a councilman elected from each voting district?

I know this scares the hell out of the ruling class in Twin Falls. In order to have a more representative group making decisions that affect all of us, why not a councilman from each district?

It would surely make our bond

"who cares" attitude about city elections — more interesting, and it would surely make for a more interesting council meeting.

The only way to come for the citizens to be represented in Twin Falls, not the special interest groups —

Evans' henchmen

Editor, Times-News:

I have seen four flagrant examples in the past year of the contempt for which government (state of Idaho) agencies hold a person's reputation.

These agencies are representative of Gov. Evans' administration. While Evans presents himself as a fine fellow, his henchmen go around, especially in Twin Falls County, and do cross injustices. There is a solution to this crime; come next election date.

Yes, it is a way from election time, but by presenting these facts now it will give Evans' supporters all kinds of time to try and explain away these grievous assaults on Idaho citizens.

Let them explain the heinous entrapment by a state-sic-law-enforcement officer of one Lisa Guerra. Whenever law-enforcement engages in criminal acts to get another person to do a criminal act — who's the criminal? That's one.

The efforts of the state as pertains to the discrediting of the former administration at the Skyview-Hazelde Manor. They finally charged Goldie Fawcett, as decent a person who draws a breath with a farcical felony. Although the union didn't amount to much, the state-aided war against it was atrocious. That's two!

Three! This absolutely, positively, PHONY investigation which was held by the state EMS, at the expense of a 50 cent charge on at least 40,000 license plates — on Edwards' ambulance service. The state must proceed to take this case, and those charges, to court.

Do they want to? No, they want to kiss off all that expense and forget the whole thing. They don't want an example of state agency harassment to reach the courtroom, and they don't want such testimonials as that of one Deb Scott to reach the courtroom.

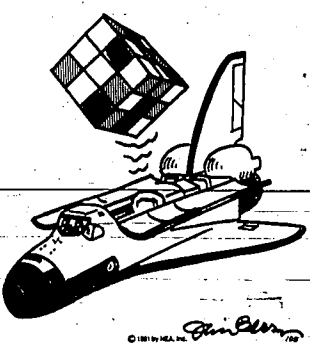

Number four's the pick of the litter. I think I'll hang on to it for a while. Oh, if a Dan Thurnquist comes and coozes up and then offers to help you merchandise drugs, pay no mind. He's law. He's Idaho's finest. He's on the state payroll doing state business. He's one of Evans' boys!

Berry's World

"The Pentagon says it'll drive the Russians nuts!"

Don't blame Watt; he'll be moderate

Editor, Times-News:

Few people realize — the effects extreme environmental pressures put on the business community of our state and nation.

Of course, no one wants an unstable environment. James Watt will prove to be a more moderate administrator than the environmentalists think. Everyone needs to come halfway. Watt has repeatedly said this and the environmentalists hide behind their hands and quake at the thought of facing him, or so it would seem. None of them seem willing to sit down and discuss actual issues and how to solve them. They only throw around inflammatory unproven remarks about what will happen if Watt remains.

Extreme environmental pressures have dominated the direction of the government for far too long. These pressures have stifled the reasonable economic growth of many of our environmental related industries for so long that their very existence is being threatened. All of these industries, mineral mining, gas and oil, lumber, livestock, farming, recreation, etc., realize for the most part, that if they don't take care of the land they are trying to make a living from, they won't have anything!

Most people have a very romantic idea of how our planet's ecosystem works. I certainly don't know all of it — I am not a scientist. But the scientist also doesn't know everything! The scientist should try living with that eco-system, as farmers and ranchers have done for generations. Then the farmers would have a more realistic view of how our planet can work.

For the most part, Americans that don't make a living directly from the land, (and that is most Americans) don't realize if the industries that do are unreasonably stifled, (which they have been for too long), these same Americans won't have anyone to produce enough fuel, food, housing or jobs. There are many, many jobs intertwined with the above industries. If businesses are stifled and become unstable, as they are at this very moment, then our whole economy suffers, and not just from inflation.

What good will it do to protect "every" plant, animal and unusual area on our planet, when the most important "thing" to people's survival is at stake?

What is this "thing" you ask? Why, of course, it is the farmers, ranchers, miners, loggers, oil companies, etc. These are "our" "endangered species." You don't believe this? Ask these people how the environmental issues affect them.

Without these people being able to operate under reasonable conditions, you will be hungry and cold, without housing or transportation, much less time to defend yourselves. Issues take time to research these issues before burning James Watt at the stake.

No commitment?

Editor, Times-News:

The editorial, "The Kidnap Case: No Easy Answers" (Times-News, Oct. 28), was read in its entirety to see in what direction you might perceive a possible solution for young men going wrong in a state, (every country) "ought to be wondering why three obviously able young men came out of their environment only to turn to crime."

Would experts be like Naaman the Syrian and indignantly refuse the simple answer? How many experts know that the "old humans" is alarmingly capable of anything under the right stimulus? How few still know that belief on Christ resolves the endowment of God's Spirit, that creates a new man within that is not dragged into the despolism of sin. These young men needed a commitment to Christ; not have their hands bolted, which seems to be the main object of churches today. Their success is not the prime object; the fact that God wants them is the all-important one. For he is the Savior of all mankind, especially of those who believe" (1 Tim. 4:10); and he will be "all in all" (1 Cor. 15:28).

AWACS lesson: Saudis have more lobbying muscle

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Nine percent of all the human beings who have ever lived are alive today, and last week it seemed as though most of them were in Washington lobbying for or against the AWACS sale. This struggle was notable for one unlikely event. Sen. Clarence Pell (D-R.I.), who is not generally considered the Senate's Oscar Wilde, said something epigrammatic: "No nation that is owned and run by 2,000 congressmen can be called truly stable."

We shall see if the accelerating flight of private money out of Saudi Arabia, and the arrangements — small planes conveniently parked, for private flights out at short notice — presage instability. If in 1985, when the AWACS are to be delivered, the regime that bought them is around to receive them, then those who have expressed faith and faith is required in Saudi Arabia's stability will be partially vindicated.

Ronald Reagan won this fight because baseball is America's national pastime. Every kid learns that in a close play at first base, a tie goes to the runner. In government, the President is the runner.

If the lights had been turned out in the Senate and the senators had voted anonymously on the merits of the sale, it would have lost 90-10. The decisive argument was: If the President loses, it will prove that he cannot control foreign policy.

Actually, had he lost, it would have proved that he cannot control foreign policy without thinking about it more than he has done. But that is true anyway. And this episode — a scandalous drain on executive energy on behalf of a commitment undertaken haphazardly and rationalized desperately — is not an example of foreign policy under control.

From the start, the side to be on in the AWACS dispute was whatever side was going to lose. The winning side was — is — destined to be blamed for whatever happens in the Middle East, and little good happens there. Of course that is supposed to change now that the Saudis have received yet another token of U.S. affection in addition to F-15s which were supposed to be the limit, and the F-15 enhancements that we had said we would not sell.

If the sale had been blocked, the anti-Israel contingent in the U.S. government would have been hard to contain. Unfortunately, the fact that the sale was approved does not mean the Saudis have a burden of obligations to dispatch. They promised nothing of significance, nothing of significance having been asked. They will be as good as their word.

A lesson of last week is that in spite of all the talk about the muscle of the "Israeli lobby," it is no match for the Saudi lobby. The latter includes all those corporations which (prompted by a passion for the public interest, we are invited to suppose) lobbied furiously for the sale. As Galvin Colledge would have said had he been among us last week, the business of American foreign policy is business.

The arguments ginned up to rationalize this sale will be heard again when next the Saudis are in the mood for a shopping spree. The arguments will then be even more powerful because even more corporations will be salvaging, and America has now put so many eggs in the Saudi basket.

Israel is preparing for final withdrawal from the Sinai. That will radically shrink Israel's strategic space and will remove a large inhibition on any Egyptian inclination to move away from the Camp David peace process. And the Reagan administration has, with the AWACS sale, diminished Israel's qualitative edge.

Israel is a small island in a vast, hostile sea, and has counted militarily on a vast, hostile sea, and has compensated for its permanent qualitative disadvantage. Just as the Sinai withdrawal is about to increase Israel's jeopardy, the AWACS sale arms an enemy, and it tells Egypt that nations can receive U.S. favors while promoting "holier war" against Israel.

Reagan has risked much (the currency, the next election; the "conservative era") in an economic policy that Howard Baker calls a "big bet gamble." But compared with the wager on the Saudis, the economic gamble is a lead pipe cinch. ON ABC's "Nightline" the day of the AWACS vote, Richard Allen, Reagan's national security adviser, recalled the U.S. commitment to Camp David. Israel's former Prime Minister Barak asked the Saudi ambassador to the United States if Saudi Arabia is ready to make peace with Israel. The ambassador gave a dusty answer which said "no" — no to Israel, and to Camp David.

Thus ended the day the Gipper gave hits all for the Saudis and for the conjecture that they "really" want to be helpful.

Gas decontrol

Farm production costs predicted to skyrocket under proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Proposals for three-year phased decontrol of all natural gas prices would add $1.54 billion to farm production costs in 1982 and a total of $8.2 billion by 1985, a consumer group study concluded Sunday.

The Citizens-Labor Energy Coalition, in a study titled "Break Harvest: The Impact of Gas Decontrol on America's Farms," said accelerated gas decontrol would take its biggest toll in the corn and grain-producing states where nitrogen fertilizers made with gas are crucial.

"Low-income farmers, for example, would have to pay an added $540 million for fertilizer before all controls came off in January 1985," said, "Farmers would pay an extra $522 million in Illinois; $417 million in Nebraska, $383 million in Texas, $328 million in California and $222 million in Kansas.

"The last thing farmers need is still higher costs, more inflation, higher interest rates and falling consumer purchasing power," said Robert Brandon, Washington director of the coalition. "Yet that's just what lies in store if the Reagan administration succeeds in decontrolling natural gas prices."

Robert Mullins, legislative affairs director of the National Farmers Union, said "thousands of American farmers would stare bankruptcy in the eye" if they had to absorb the price increases projected in the study.

He called on Congress to reject gas decontrol.

The study proceeds from the assumption that about 960 billion cubic feet of gas will be used in farm production in 1982, 1983 and 1984, regardless of the price of the gas.

Congress' current timetable for partial gas decontrol by 1985 yielded the study's base average wellhead gas prices of $2.90 per 1,000 cubic feet in 1982, $3.80 in 1983 and $4.95 in 1985.

It was assumed that a program of total phased decontrol by 1985 — similar to one recommended by the Cabinet to President Reagan and another embodied in a bill now before Congress — would yield average prices of $4.50 in 1982, $6.75 in 1983 and $9.00 in 1984.

The difference in prices multiplied by total annual consumption yielded the figures of $1.54 billion for 1982 and $8.2 billion for the three years.

The study developed corresponding figures on indirect price increases from accelerated decontrol on farm income, residential heating, machinery, goods and services.

"By the winter of 1982-83, farm households will be spending $1,000-$1,500 for home use of gas, depending on the region of the country," it said.

The price figures assumed for the case of accelerated decontrol are somewhat higher than those developed by other consumer groups and about twice those estimated by gas producers.

Refiners' rebates are a risk

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Oil refiners may be the only main suppliers of consumer goods voluntarily to pull down markups of products to balance supply and demand, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday.

Refiners have been increasingly offering rebates to wholesalers and dealers for increased volume, a system that has caught many dealers and jobbers in a tough profits squeeze, he said.

Lundberg said there are attempts by refiners to bring "excess into balance with dwindling demand" on the eve of the OPEC endeavor to do the same thing.

"The new rebate system is not designed to keep any dealers in business by subsidizing their losses at retail levels with rebate relief."

"It is designed to encourage dealers to take risks of losing money by dropping their prices to pick up volume."

Lifting controls would be federal revenue windfall

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government has a golden opportunity to capture more than $75 billion in budget-balancing money in the next three years by immediately lifting natural gas controls and taxing the windfall profits, an economic analysis concluded Sunday.

The analysis, done by Wisconsin's Madison Consulting Group for a group of heating oil retailers called the Northeast Coalition for Energy Equity, found that decontrol in early 1982 could produce $49 billion in new federal revenue by 1985.

If Congress imposed a windfall profits tax at the same time, the analysis said, another $30 billion could be collected by 1985 — the deadline for partial gas decontrol under a current congressional timetable.

"The substantial additional federal revenue created by natural-gas-decontrol would reduce the federal deficit significantly during the next several years," predicted John Buckley, cochairman of the coalition and vice president of Northeast Petroleum Industries of Boston, Mass.

Heating oil retailers have been clamoring for an end to federal price control on natural gas which provide an effective subsidy for the utilities that deliver the competing home heating fuel.

"Residential customers have been defeating at an alarming rate from decontrolled heating oil to cheaper natural gas in recent months.

"The combination of higher corporate-income-tax collections from natural gas producers and an excise tax on 'old' gas comparable to the oil windfall profits tax would produce total revenues during the next four years of more than $75 billion," the coalition said in a statement based on the findings of both the Madison Consulting Group and Data Resources Inc. of Cambridge, Mass.

"Immediate decontrol of natural gas prices also would increase production, encourage conservation and lower U.S. imports of oil and gas," said Buckley.

He said decontrol with a windfall tax would "lessen the need to slash funding for social programs and allow low-income energy assistance programs to be expanded."

Burial benefit cons may rise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's decision to cut back on Social Security burial allowances may sharply increase fraudulent payments of regular retirement benefits to the dead, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said Sunday.

"It's ironic," he said in a statement, "but a change meant to save money may actually end up encouraging fraud."

The Wisconsin Democrat said one of the chief ways the Social Security Administration learns of the death of people receiving benefits is through funeral directors who collect the $255 burial allowance on behalf of the heirs.

However, he said, the number of people receiving the death benefit was cut by more than half when Congress approved Reagan's request to limit the payment to only a surviving spouse or a child under the age of 18.

"Ironically, this comes just as the Social Security Administration has discovered that it has been making payments to several thousand dead people," he said in a statement.

Aspin said the recently uncovered cases of fraud — when a death deliberately is not reported and the retirement checks continue and are cashed by the deceased's relatives — represent a loss of about $23 million this year.

He said administration officials now are worried about the possible effect of the loss of the $255 incentive for funeral homes to report deaths of Social Security recipients.

"It is easy to imagine hundreds of thousands of deaths going unreported nationally," he said.

With about 2 million recipients dying each year, he said, the loss could reach about $72 million a year if only 1 percent of the deaths go unreported.

Medicare's home care plan abused

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An audit of visits under the nearly $1 billion Medicare home health program shows more than one-fourth were improper or of questionable need, the General Accounting Office reports.

The GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, said it studied 37 agencies employing nurses, therapists and home health aides to visit patients who are supposed to be homebound, in need of medical attention and under a doctor's care.

Of 18,586 visits reviewed by GSA nurse consultants, 5,970 — or about 27 percent — were not covered by the program or were questionable, GAO said in a report to Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., who requested the audit.

In about a sixth of the questioned cases — 854 — the patient was not homebound, GAO said.

the chief ways the Social Security Administration learns of the death of people receiving benefits is through funeral directors who collect the $255 burial allowance on behalf of the heirs.

However, he said, the number of people receiving the death benefit was cut by more than half when Congress approved Reagan's request to limit the payment to only a surviving spouse or a child under the age of 18.

DEAR ABBY: Three weeks ago I flew from Denver to Los Angeles on Continental Airlines. I started to read the magazine placed in every passenger's seat and came across two pages of excitement over your new book, "The Best of Dear Abby."

I have never read anything so funny in my life! I laughed so hard I was in tears. The people around me must have thought I had lost my mind, and the stewardess kept offering me black coffee, thinking I needed to be sobered up.

I live on a ranch in Colorado, and we buy most things from mail-order catalogs because it's easier than driving 90 miles to the nearest city that may or may not have the merchandise.

I'd like to get one book for myself and several for Christmas gifts. Can you help me?

Well, for two years I've been in love with a wonderful girl, and when we graduate from college we plan to get married. You guessed it, she's not Catholic—she wants to be married in her own church (Methodist), and I can't blame her.

She hasn't asked me to give up my religion, and I'm not asking her to give up hers. We get along fine, never argue about religion, and we know we can make our marriage work.

I can't discuss this with my parents because it always ends up in a fight. I don't want to talk to my priest because I'm afraid he might try to talk me out of marrying this girl, and there's no way I will give her up.

Any advice?

Fashion help coming for full-figures

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Let's face it. Many of us women never are going to be a size SIX NANCY REAGAN.

But don't panic. Help is on the way. Manufacturers, designers and retailers in increasing numbers realize there are a lot of full-figured women out there and are catering to them with chic fashions once only their skinny sisters could find.

Just how many women classify as large, fat, overweight, obese—whatever term you choose—can be estimated only. Several sources in market research, retailing and government put the number anywhere from 20 million to 26 million.

Evelyn Roaman, an executive of the Roaman chain of department stores catering to the larger women, says more than 30 percent of American women wear a size 16 or larger.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. figured that among women 20 years old and older there were in the latest statistics available (1979) nearly 20 million who were 10 percent above average weight and more than 7.6 million, 20 percent or more. The figures were based on a blood and blood pressure study of the American Society of Actuaries (insurance companies).

For years, the fatty has been looked down on. She feels rejected, like an oddity, and often develops psychological problems because the American image of style has been "fashion is thin."

Just when this about-face started can't be pinpointed. Some firms have been catering to the larger sizes for decades. But suddenly, you can't turn around without seeing advertisements for high style for higher sizes, name designers cutting clothes above 12 and 14, intimate apparel manufacturers promoting lingerie for the larger ones.

Stores which once shunned the large woman shopper to a drab large-size section, now are establishing special departments for her—Catalogs—from prestige—specialty shops and department stores are devoting sections to fashions for the women once called fat.

Q. Say a woman becomes the mistress of a married man. How long does her affair usually last? And why does she do it?

A. That, too, has been investigated. Researchers say they can't pin down the time length more specifically than three to 11 years. But in 65 percent of the situations, they say, the woman says "friendship" is responsible, her friendship with the man.

Pentagon denies Post report

AWACS part of larger deal?

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Pentagon Sunday called "loosely unfounded" a report that the sale of AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia is part of a secret plan to build bases in Saudi Arabia for possible use by U.S. forces.

The Washington Post, quoting an internal Pentagon paper, "an authoritative foreign official" and U.S. diplomatic and military sources, Sunday said the secret strategy would allow the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force to move "over the horizon" to those forward bases and prepositioned supplies if hostile forces attempted to capture the Persian Gulf oil fields.

The stage is also set, the Post said, for a region-wide air defense network led by Saudi Arabia and potentially including such moderate states as Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Oman, Bahrain and Qatar.

The unnamed sources said the plan evolved over two years during highly sensitive discussions and includes a complex plan to help Saudi Arabia build military facilities with a sophisticated electronic command system that could be the nerve center for U.S. forces fighting in defense of that nation.

The Post said the overall plan has not yet been approved by the Reagan administration, but the momentum began during the Carter administration has continued.

What explicit terms have been agreed to were formalized in February in a secret oral understanding between Maj. Gen. Charles Donnelly, chief of the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force, and Col. Fahd Abdullah, head of the Saudi air force and an influential member of the royal family, the Post said it learned from U.S. diplomats.

The newspaper said that, according to official sources in Washington and abroad, the sale of the Airborne Warning and Control Systems planes to Saudi Arabia is just one small part of the overall plan.

According to the Post, the heart of the understanding is: If America will sell the Saudis an integrated package of top-of-the-line military technology, Saudi Arabia will build and pay for a massive network of command, naval and air defense facilities large enough to sustain U.S. forces in intensive regional combat involving the Soviet Union.

The end result, the Post said, would be to let the United States to allow to preposition more than a 90-day supply of equipment, munitions and supplies, including refined oil, in facilities constructed in Saudi Arabia by U.S. engineers according to U.S. specifications.

A Pentagon spokesman said the Post article "appears to be contingency planning by Carter administration officials and assumptions, many of which are inaccurate."

The spokesman cited several "inaccuracies," including:

- Any so-called "secret understanding" between the United States and Saudi Arabia "remains a secret even from (Defense) Secretary (Casper) Weinberger who discounts it as totally unfounded."

Mineral tax initiative slated

BOISE (UPI) — A coalition is poised to offer a ballot initiative proposing a state severance tax on minerals to bolster Idaho's education system and communities affected by boom-and-bust development.

JOHN PEAVEY
Leading fight for tax

Plans for the measure are being laid despite protests from the mining industry, which says a severance tax on metals could kill many mining ventures and wreck Idaho's already staggering economy.

The Legislature passed a 2 percent severance tax on oil and natural gas this year, but some say it's not large or broad enough.

State Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, said Idaho's schools, counties and cities should benefit from minerals extraction with a tax on a small percentage of the gross value of minerals when they are extracted.

Peavey has tried to get lawmakers to pass a 5 percent tax on oil and natural gas plus a 2 percent tax on 2 percent-levy on precious metals and hard-rock minerals. He holds little hope for the idea, so he and several others in a coalition are studying the feasibility of a petition drive to put the question on the 1982 general election ballot.

Mining industry representatives point to the impending closure of Bunker Hill Co. — the nation's second-largest silver producer — as evidence that the industry could not afford to pay the tax.

Peavey and various education officials and local government spokesmen say the tax would not cripple mining companies, but would allow the state's schools and communities a share of the profits.

Linda Dewey, Pocatello, new president of the Idaho Education Association, said her group is committed to proposing a severance tax initiative petition but isn't sure when it will be circulated.

Mrs. Dewey said the IEA has approached education, conservation and local government groups about whether they would back the initiative drive for 1982.

She said IEA representatives have discussed strategy with Peavey and talked to Gov. John Evans' staff in hopes of drafting his services in the petition drive. Evans currently opposes a severance tax on metals.

press aide Dan Myers said.

Peavey and Mrs. Dewey said a firm decision about whether to pursue the petition campaign would be made before the end of the year.

Penny Ysursa, administrative secretary for elections in the Idaho secretary of State's office, said 28,925 certified signatures of qualified electors would be required to place the measure on the ballot.

Peavey estimated it would cost $10,000-$15,000 to promote the initiative. He said he expected the mining industry to outspend the initiative proponents by a 10-to-1 ratio.

"I think we could get it on the ballot and could get it passed overwhelmingly if we had a chance to debate it prior to the election," Peavey said.

"There's just a limit to how much money they (the mining industry) could effectively pour in against us — after a while it would be pretty obvious that they're trying to buy it."

"At first glance, it would appear to be negative, but we really need a money set aside, we could help communities like Kellogg and Wallace gear down and bring in some alternative industries. And mines do close — they always close — they tap a limited, finite resource."

Ron Beimel, executive director of the Idaho Association of Counties, said his group opposed a severance tax in the past but will debate the issue again. Beimel said he personally favored a severance tax because it could help Idaho's counties survive a chronic shrinkage in revenue.

"What many people don't realize is that so many outside interests are coming in and raping our land," Beimel said. "Once it's raped it's gone. There ought to be something we can do. Other states have severance taxes."

Martin Peterson, executive director of the Association of Idaho Cities, said his group has not taken an official stand on the metals severance-tax issue, but he said the "right" formula would be endorsed by the group. He said the AIC would ask the Legislature next year to amend the 2 percent oil and gas severance tax to give the cities a share, rather than just the state and counties.

Idaho Mining Association Executive Director Jack Peterson said Idaho already has a "very, very reasonable and broad-based" tax system and any additional taxes on corporations would be "excessive" particularly during the current economic slump.

"During a time of economic recession and curtailing projects and closing plants, it's a time to encourage development of an industry, not put additional costs on the industry," he said.

"I'm constantly amazed that people would want to place burdens on a primary industry in a state where every single job is even more important to the economy."

Peterson, who would not indicate how the mining industry would fight a petition drive, said the mining industry faces even deeper problems in the coming months.

Pat Harwood, head of the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry, said a severance tax would be a "tragedy" and would close many marginal mining operations.

Youth problems confab set

BOISE (UPI) — Teen-age drug and sex problems and education will be discussed during the governor's conference on Children and Youth Monday at Boise State University.

High Yield! Tax Free! Insured All Savers Certificates Plus free fine china

Exempt up to $2,000 in taxes

Regardless of your tax bracket, the First Security Tax-Free Certificate lets you exempt savings interest from your federal income tax, up to $2,000 on a joint return ($1,000 on an individual return.)

How to spread tax benefit

By spacing your purchases between now and December 31st this year, and December 31, 1982, you can divide your tax-free benefit over the next two taxable years. You should plan now to purchase as many certificates as you require between today and December 31, 1982, when the government program terminates. There is a minimum deposit of $500, or as much more as you wish, for each Certificate.

Insured, high yield

Certificates are issued for a period of one year at a rate based on 70% of the yield of the most recent 52-week Treasury Bill auction. When the tax exemption is considered, this yield is an excellent return on your money, and safety is insured by the FDIC up to $100,000 per account. (Federal regulations stipulate: substantial interest penalty is required for early withdrawal; tax exemption is lost if account is closed before one year; certificates cannot be used for collateral.)

First Security bonus

The First Security bonus is a free place setting of elegant fine china in your choice of two distinctive patterns when you open a First Security Tax-Free Certificate with a deposit of $500 or more. Additional china available at reduced cost depending on amount of deposit.

Converting Money Market Certificates

It is possible to redeem your present First Security Money Market Certificate before maturity, without penalty, if you reinvest in a First Security Tax-Free Certificate. Federal regulations prohibit moving these funds to another institution without incurring a penalty. We suggest you give careful thought to this option, and make a decision that is most beneficial to both your income and federal tax needs.

A word about yield

The annual effective yield for certificates purchased now is 10.77%. Interest is compounded or paid quarterly. So if you prefer to use your interest income, it may be withdrawn quarterly. Should you choose this option, the actual annual yield will be 10.36%.

Dam O2 level talks to begin

BOISE (UPI) — The Bureau of Reclamation plans to begin contract negotiations with the American Falls Reservoir District, Idaho Power Co. and 35 reservoir space owners to conform with a new state dissolved-oxygen standard.

The 1980 Legislature amended the dissolved oxygen standard below American Falls Dam from 6 parts per million to 5 parts per million. Since that time, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has ruled the new standard would apply.

The proposed contract amendments also would permit Idaho Power to retain ownership of the water quality facilities constructed within their leased project area and would allow the reservoir district to designate the Bureau of Reclamation to act as their agent in collecting annual spaceholders operation and maintenance payments.

The proposed contract amendment will be available for public review about Dec. 15. A 30-day period will be allowed after that for receipt written comments on the proposal.

No follow-up in schools, community

'Get High on Yourself' anti-drug campaign flops locally

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A nationwide anti-drug campaign that sprouted follow-up programs in cities around the country, so far has withered in Twin Falls.

After more than a month, there has been no local follow-up to the campaign, nor have any plans made for it.

The campaign, entitled "Get High on Yourself," was described by NBC as "the biggest and most concentrated positive alternative-to-drugs campaign ever produced for television."

It began Sept. 16, with a television special that featured more than 50 "drug-free heroes" who tried to convince teens that "you can be someone just by being yourself." The show was supplemented with a week of concentrated public-service announcements.

The campaign called for follow-up involvement by private enterprise, government and the schools across the nation.

Dennis Messenger, the director of curriculum for Twin Falls public schools, says he has not heard much about the results of the campaign, and as far as he is aware, the schools have not planned any follow-up activities.

Frank Charlton, the principal at Twin Falls High School, says he feels the initial television special and the kickoff week publicity were effective.

"We had a number of students that I know watched the special," he says.

"I believe it had quite an impact."

However, Charlton says the high school has planned no follow-up to the program.

Barry Meyers, executive director of the Magic Valley Alcoholic Recovery Center, which serves many teenage drug users, says it's hard to measure the effect of the campaign in Twin Falls. Since his program always is operating at capacity, Meyers says that it is difficult to determine if the NBC campaign brought in any additional teenagers.

He feels, however, that MYARC has received positive attention due to the public-service announcements provided by television station KMYT in conjunction with the "Get High on Yourself" campaign.

"I think it was a good idea," he says. "My only concern is that it was a one-shot deal with no follow-up."

Meyers hasn't heard of any community participation in the program, and he fears that community leaders are avoiding the situation. Part of the problem with drug use, he says, is that it is the type of problem that communities tend to "sweep under the carpet."

Mike Dolton, executive director of the chamber of commerce, says that he isn't aware of any follow-up plans in the community, but he feels that some sort of local "Get High on Yourself" program, featuring local leaders and celebrities, would be valuable.

"I think it's a great idea," he says. "It just hasn't caught fire."

Behavior modification is key to diet, expert will say at health talk

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Learning how to eat "just one chocolate-chip cookie" will be discussed today at a free health lecture, "Behavior Modification: A Diet For Life."

The lecture, at 7:30 p.m. at Magle Valley Memorial Hospital, will cover "defensive eating" or tips on changing unhealthy eating habits. The lecture is one in a monthly series on health offered by the hospital.

"Food is such an integral part of our lives, you just can't say 'You can't eat sweets again,'" says Sharon Anderson, a MVAH dietitian, who will handle the lecture.

Yet, "It's the American pastime: Let's go on a diet," she says.

Anderson believes that slowly changing one's eating habits, rather than crash dieting, is the key to losing weight and keeping it off.

She says that many persons who go on a fat diet often gain weight back after they achieve their goal because they go back to the same habits that made them fat in the first place.

Anderson is not saying persons must give up all fattening food. Rather, they must learn to eat it in moderation. "There's nothing wrong with eating pie, eggs or salt if done in moderation," she says. But "Americans think if a little is good, a lot is better."

Anderson says her lecture is not aimed just at overweight persons but at anyone who wants to learn to eat better for a healthier lifestyle.

Anderson, who has a degree in dietetics from Brigham Young University, says she plans to show participants techniques for developing strategies for eating right.

First, she will help people learn where the problems are, perhaps in frequent snacks or in periodic binges. Others may not crave sweets but eat too much in general.

She will demonstrate the use of a reward sheet, "which assigns points when various small goals are reached. If a person reaches a score of 85 percent or so, even if the obesity on the bathroom scale remains the same, they should reward themselves with something they wanted to buy or do — avoid 'food rewards'."

The disappointment in having pounds go off slowly can be mitigated, Anderson feels, by pleasure in achieving mini-goals.

Small goals might include eating slower, avoiding eating while watching television or being aware of nibbling during meal preparation.

It's been her observation that "25 percent of dieting is calorie counting; 75 percent is behavior modification."

Anderson's lecture is part of

49ers 'get physical' to beat Pittsburgh 17-14

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — For an entire week, General Manager Coach Bill Walsh "forced" his young San Francisco 49ers the same hypnotic, confidence-building message, telling them they could defeat the Pittsburgh Steelers with aggression and intimidation.

The NFC West-leading 49ers, especially the defense, took Walsh at his word. In an extremely physical game in which every score followed a lost fumble or interception, the 49ers forced six Pittsburgh turnovers to win their sixth straight game, 17-14.

The key to the game was to hit with Pittsburgh," Walsh said. "I talked with them about it all week. They came to Pittsburgh and played physical football with this great team."

Williamson recovered a fumble by Pittsburgh running back Frank Patrick, and with 3 seconds left before the half, Ray Wersching kicked a 45-yard field goal for a 10-0 lead.

Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw prepares for the worst as he comes to the end of a short eight-yard scramble.

The Steelers dropped to 5-4 and out of a first-place tie into second place in the AFC Central behind Cincinnati, which defeated conference rival Houston.

It was our biggest physical test so far, playing away from home," Walsh added. "Few teams come in here and win."

Pittsburgh's defense played well too, scoring one of the Steelers' two touchdowns and setting up the other. But San Francisco's offense was better prepared to withstand the physical battle than Pittsburgh's, possessing the football for 34:16 of the game's 60 minutes.

"We wanted to control the ball," said San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana, who passed for 295 yards and a touchdown to help raise his team's record to 7-2. "I would have kept it for 20 minutes at a time if that would have kept it away from their offense."

"It's tough to win in Pittsburgh. None of these guys ever let down."

Montana, the NFC's top-rated passer, completed 22-of-37 passes, including a 5-yard touchdown pass to Charlie Young that broke a scoreless defensive struggle with 1:11 left in the first half and capped a 46-yard drive begun when Eric Wright intercepted a Terry Bradshaw pass.

The 49ers' second and game-winning touchdown, scored on Walt Frazier's 2-yard run with 5:35 left in play, came after San Francisco rookie Carlton Williamson intercepted a Bradshaw pass and returned it 28 yards to the Pittsburgh 43.

A little over a minute after the 49ers scored their first touchdown,

The Steelers defense erred—Pittsburgh to come back and take a 14-10 lead in the third quarter.

Cornerback Mel Blount broke Montana's string of more than 100 passes without an interception, picking off a pass at the 50 and returning it all the way for a touchdown 4:24 into the third period.

On San Francisco's next series, Jack Lambert intercepted Montana and gave the Steelers possession on the 49ers 22. On the first play from scrimmage, Bradshaw hit Jim Smith in the end zone for the touchdown.

But the 14-10 Pittsburgh lead was deceptive. Pittsburgh's offense ran only four plays in that quarter and forced its defense to be on the field for 13:24.

The Steelers' defense, obviously tired, was unable to stop the 49ers after Williamson's interception gave them possession on the Pittsburgh 43. Moving the run with the pass, Montana ate up more than five minutes of time, moving the 49ers in for their final touchdown.

The Steelers began their final drive on their own 17 and moved to their San Francisco 32 before they stopped themselves once again. This time, instead of turning the ball over, Bradshaw threw incomplete on fourth down, and the 49ers look over and ran out the clock.

Pittsburgh running back Franco Harris managed 104 yards rushing, his first 100-yard game of the year and 38th of his career — despite his team's inconsistent and mistake-filled play.

Who's Joe Cribbs? Just ask Cleveland

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — Despite the circumstances, Sam Rutigliano was in somewhat of a joking mood Sunday.

The Cleveland Browns coach had just watched his club drop a 22-13 decision to the Buffalo Bills, but he just couldn't help make light of one of the Bills who ran almost all night against his defense — Joe Cribbs.

"Joe Cribbs?" Rutigliano asked after the game, tongue planted firmly in cheek. "I was really surprised. I never heard of him. Where did they get him?"

"All he was, was the best rookie in our conference last year and made the Pro Bowl," Rutigliano declared in answering his own question. "He's a big play guy and we couldn't stop him."

Cribbs, a second-year running back, caught three touchdown passes from quarterback Joe Ferguson. He also rushed for 85 yards. Cribbs also fumbled three times, but atoned for his miscues.

Ferguson, however, made the fumbles the brunt of his post-game jokes.

"I thought I was going to fumble next," the Bills quarterback said, laughing. "I just hope he (Cribbs) quits fumbling and keeps on making big plays."

Cleveland had cut the Buffalo lead to 15-13 with 9:41 left in the fourth quarter when Sipe lofted a 12-yard touchdown pass to tight end Ozzie Newsome, who beat Bills cornerback Rufus Bess on the play.

Buffalo struck quickly on their next possession when Ferguson fired a 60-yard scoring pass to Cribbs, who split the middle of the Browns defense and breezed past linebacker Clay Matthews and safety Thom Darden at the 7:23 mark of the final quarter.

The win lifted the Bills record to 6-3 and kept them in the title hunt in the AFC East while the Browns dropped to 4-5 in the AFC Central.

The Bills got off to a 13-0 lead before the Browns countered with a 35-yard second quarter field goal by Matt Bahr and a 39-yard Bahr kick in the third quarter.

Buffalo was awarded a safety with 2:17 left in the third quarter when they sacked quarterback Paul McDonald, substituting for Sipe who was shaken up on the previous play, in the end zone. McDonald got rid of the ball as he was going down, but referee Bob McElwee called McDonald for intentional grounding which gave the Bills a 15-6 lead.

The game started off as a defensive struggle but the Bills opened it up on two Ferguson to Cribbs scoring passes. The first came when Ferguson found the second-year running back down the left sideline with a 36-yard strike as he streaked past Cleveland rookie defensive back Hanford Dixon with 2:35 left in the first quarter.

Buffalo, however, missed the point after due to a poor center.

The Bills scored again with 10:29 left in the second quarter when Ferguson faked a handoff on an end-around play and tossed a 15-yard pass to Cribbs, who had beaten Browns linebacker Don Gooden.

Chargers nip chiefs on late field goal

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Roll Benirschke, named "Hero of the Year" by the NFL Players Association for his winning battle against an intestinal disease that nearly cost him his life, made another comeback on the playing field Sunday.

He had missed an extra point following a touchdown early in the game and it appeared to be a crucial mistake when the Kansas City Chiefs took a 20-19 lead with little more than six minutes left to play.

But the San Diego Chargers' kicker wound up the hero of the game as he hit a 22-yard field goal with just 13 seconds left to give the Chargers a 22-20 victory.

"Any kicker, I think, likes it to come down to him," he said. "I just didn't want it to come down to us losing because of the missed extra point."

Benirschke said he watched "the situation" developing "in the game's closing minutes" and "I was hoping to get a chance for the field goal."

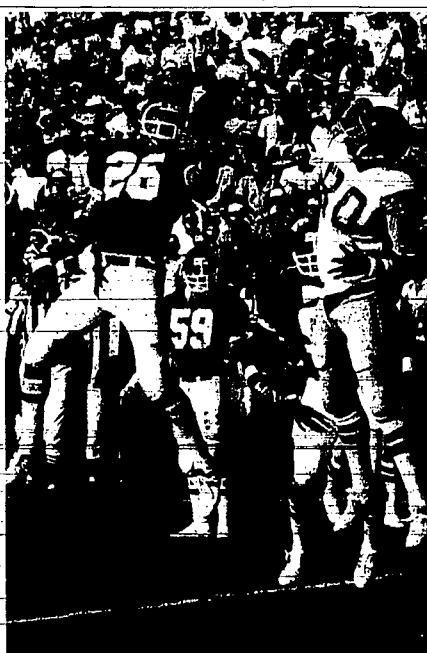

He said he tried to make sure not to rush his final kick and explained, "I think that's what happened on the extra point. We were due for one. We wanted to win it even more because of the way our offense was trying and playing their hearts out."

"We've lost two close games due to field goals in the last few seconds (Chicago and Minnesota), so this time it was our turn."

The win left the Chargers and Chiefs tied for first place in the AFC West.

Taking over on their own 26 with 6:32 left in the game, the Chargers drove 70 yards in 14 plays for the winning score.

The big play of the drive came when the Chargers faced a 4th-and-9 on the Kansas City 48, and quarterback Dan Fouts hit Wes Chandler with a 23-yard pass that gave the Chargers the ball on the Chiefs' 24.

Chief Gary Barbago stymies pass to Kellen Winslow

Five plays later, Benirschke kicked his winning field goal. The victory lifted the Chargers' record to 6-3, the same as the Chiefs. Denver has a 5-3 record and the Broncos host Minnesota Monday night.

Earlier in the fourth quarter, Kansas City took a 20-19 lead on a 32-yard field goal by Nick Lowery.

The Chargers scored earlier in the game on a 1-yard plunge by Chuck Muncie in the first quarter, a 4-yard run by Muncie and field goals of 29 and 19 yards by Benirschke in the second period.

Kansas City also scored on a 2-yard run by James Hadnot in the first period, a 3-yard reception by Billy Jackson in the third period and a 21-yard field goal by Lowery in the final period.

Fouts completed 24-of-39 passes for 297 yards.

The Chargers took a 19-7 halftime lead on a pair of field goals in the last 30 seconds. The second field goal, with no time left on the clock, capped a two-play 32-yard drive that began when Wyatt Henderson recovered a Curtis Dledose fumble on a kickoff.

San Diego got the game's first score on a possession-drive, a 10-play, 1-yard touchdown drive by Muncie that put the Chargers in front at 10:19 of the opening quarter. The Chargers' drive was set up when Gary Johnson recovered a fumble by Kansas City quarterback Bill Kenney on the 50-yard line.

The Chiefs evened the score the next time they got the ball, marching 72 yards in 11 plays and scoring on Hadnot's run with 3:36 left in the first quarter.

The Chargers went ahead 13-7 at 4:10 of the second period on a two-yard sweep by Muncie into the right corner of the end zone. Benirschke's extra point attempt sailed wide to the right.

Dolphins rebound into win column at Baltimore's expense

MIAMI (UPI) — After the bitter disappointment of last week's last-minute defeat at Dallas, the Miami Dolphins got well back on Baltimore Sunday.

The Dolphins took control with 10 points in the third quarter and then coasted to an easy 27-10 victory, handling the Colts their eighth straight loss.

After the nightbreaker in Dallas last week, this game was especially important to Miami Coach Don Stula. "We're still on top of the heap in the AFC East and that's what's important to us."

Quarterback David Woodley, who ran for one touchdown and passed for two more, looked surprised when he was asked if it was nice to have a breather for a change.

"It wasn't exactly a breather until the fourth quarter," he said. Woodley said that because of the success Dolphin wide receivers have been enjoying recently, he was forced to go to his tight ends more.

"The offensive line was doing the job. What can I say?" said Franklin. "They were opening the holes, and that made it easy."

Baltimore Coach Mike McCormack said he had expected a better performance going into the game.

"I really thought we'd play much better than we showed today," he said. "We didn't do at all what we wanted to do."

"It was a bitter loss. We're trying to battle through the tough times and we have a lot of young kids that are trying like hell."

The Dolphins victory improved their record to 6-2-1 and kept them atop the AFC East while the troubled Colts, plagued by dissension during the week, dropped to 1-8.

The touchdowns by Woodley and Harris gave the Dolphins a 14-10 halftime lead over the Colts, who had scored on a 3-yard pass from Jones to Don McCauley and a 44-yard field goal by Mike Wood.

But the Dolphins scored 10 points in the third quarter on Von Schamann's first field goal of the day and Lee's TD reception.

The Dolphins drove 56 yards to the Baltimore 24 after the second half kickoff, but two straight incomplete passes stalled the drive and Von Schamann kicked a field goal.

Late in the third period, the Dolphins got the first big break of the day when Baltimore running back Curtis Dickey fumbled and Dolphin nose tackle Bob Baumhower recovered and returned it 10 yards to the Colts 29.

After an incomplete pass, rookie fullback Andra Franklin ran up the middle for 21 yards to the 8 and one play later, Woodley and Lee hooked up for the score.

The Colts tied it 7-7 with an 80-yard drive. Jones started it off with consecutive 20-yard passes to Flessa, McCauley and Dickey and then kept it going later with a 16-yarder to McCauley.

McCauley grabbed the 3-yard scoring pass underneath the Miami defense on the goal line.

Then came another 80-yard march — this one by the Dolphins. Tight end Bruce Hardy caught back-to-back passes of 18 and 19 yards to move the ball into scoring position at the Baltimore 29.

The Dolphins stalled because of penalties but on a 3rd-and-14, Harris gathered in his first touchdown pass of the season.

Wood's 44-yard field goal with a gusting wind came with 4 seconds left in the half. The Colts had driven from their own 32 to the Miami 27 in 12 plays but were unable to take it and Wood's field goal made it 14-10 at the half.

Bunker Hill lead settlement won't get kids out of poverty

TILLAMOOK, Ore. (UPI) — In a run-down house with peeling plaster, Billie and Marlene Yoss live with their three ill children on a $622-a-month welfare check, even though the children recently became millionaires.

The Oct. 25 landmark, out-of-court settlement by the Bunker Hill Co. that made the adolescent children millionaires reached the family three days late because the Yoss home does not have a telephone.

The settlement from the Bunker Hill Co. — the nation's largest refiner of lead, zinc and silver, came near the end of a six-week trial in Boise.

“I’ve done it for years, but it’s hard. I wish I could go to a store and buy them brand-new clothes off the racks instead of from a secondhand store.”

Depending on how long the nine Yoss and Dennis children live, the settlement will total between $6.5 million and $8.7 million, officials say. Yoss moved his family to Oregon after the firm fired him — one of the highest settlements related to his work as a miner has prevented him from working much.

Medical experts testified at the trial that the children were poisoned by lead emissions and lead deposits in the soil from a smelter near their home.

The lead they carry in their bones for the rest of their lives causes severe, dominant-pain, headache, muscular aches, urinary problems and may also cause sterility. It also can act to shorten their lives.

In October 1973, a record 35.3 metric tons a month of lead emissions were recorded in the air above Kellogg. That was the year 8-year-old Ariene Yoss was an infant.

The following August, testing by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control showed that Ariene’s body measured 174 micrograms per 100 liters of blood — one of the highest concentrations ever measured in a human and four times the limit scientists consider dangerous.

The level in Ariene’s 4-year-old sister, Edna, measured 122 micrograms, and in 3-year-old Raymond it was 114.

“The doctors in Chicago said we had three walking dead babies,” Mrs. Yoss said.

Yoss says he would like to use a little of the settlement to buy his family a decent house and set up a small business. He thinks he’d like to teach his son a trade.

“I could make him into a good welder,” he says. “The boys are mechanically inclined.”

But the terms of the settlement, which mandate lump payments and monthly payments for the children for life, or for their heirs for 40 years, do not include money for their parents.

“I’m glad the kids go to school,” Yoss says. “But they didn’t take into consideration what my wife and I have been through. Please believe me, we’ve suffered a lot over the past 7 years.”

Yoss, 55, is a miner by trade. In the early 1970s, Yoss made $90 to $100 a day in the mines. Today, what he has to show for it is a miner’s gray complexion and a sagging, grizzled face.

About the time he decided to sue the smelting company, he was fired and left behind the trade he had followed for 20 years, Bunker Hill said the firing was due to excessive absenteeism.

Those events happened about seven years ago, but Marlene Yoss still remembers them vividly.

Her most vivid memory is the day she learned the children were poisoned.

Investigators from the U.S. Center for Disease Control “came to the doorstep on a Friday and asked about whether they could draw blood samples,” she recalls. “I told them to go ahead.”

“We went away for the weekend, and when we got back on Monday, there was a note on the door to take Ariene to a hospital immediately. They said to take the others to our patient.”

What followed was two weeks of painful chelation therapy. Each child received massive injections of chemicals that bond with the lead in the blood and allow the resulting lead compound to be excreted.

“Edna was little, but it took two people to hold her down,” Mrs. Yoss says.

Salt Lake kidnapping leads die

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Salt Lake County Sheriff’s Office said it has nearly exhausted all leads in a search for missing 4-year-old Danny Davis.

Davis is the third child to disappear around Halloween in the city in as many years.

Detectives Friday distributed color photographs of the boy, wearing the pink shirt he had on when he disappeared Oct. 20 from a Salt Lake City grocery store. They also scrapped a composite drawing distributed last week of a man they wanted to question.

L. Dean Carr says the drawing is not of the person now being sought. Carr said he was “not very happy” with the composite drawing of a man believed seen with the boy just before he disappeared.

But deputies still want to question a man who was seen at a gumball machine with a small boy in the Smith’s Food King at 39th South and State Street just before Danny disappeared. The boy was with his grandfather at the store when he disappeared at about 6:30 p.m.

The man is described as 5 feet 8 inches to 6 feet tall, 25-35 years old, with medium-length brown hair and a four- to five-day growth of beard.

Although a $20,000 reward is still available for information leading to the safe return of the boy, few calls are being received by the sheriff’s office or the Salt Lake Tribune’s Secret Witness program.

Garn fights for Idaho judge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, Sunday reminded the Justice Department he opposes efforts to prevent a Mormon federal judge, from hearing a case involving Idaho’s refusal of its ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Garn in a letter to Attorney General William French Smith, said the department had “wisely refused” to appeal Judge Marion Callister’s denial of its motion that he disqualify himself from hearing the case.

In a statement released Sunday, Garn said he also sent Smith a copy of an article he and a former aide, Lincoln Olfphant, wrote on the case for the Harvard Journal of Law and Public Policy.

The Utah Republican said the article was prompted by the August 1975 Justice Department attempt to disqualify Callister from hearing the case, which is still pending before the U.S. District Court of Idaho.

Garn said the department, during the Carter administration, wanted to disqualify Callister because he is a member and regional representative of the Church of the Latter-day Saints, which opposes ERA.

Based on these facts, the department made the outrageous claim that Callister’s church position “necessarily” rendered him personally biased,” Garn said.

“The Justice Department,” he said, tried unsuccessfully to prove the judge was “no longer capable of free and independent thought” because of his association with the church.

Callister, he said, “deserves commendation for his courage in remaining on the case in the face of spurious challenges to his impartiality.”

Garn said the department’s position was not supported by the Constitution, which says in Article VI that “no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office of public trust under the United States.”

The senator said he expects Callister to reach a decision in the case in the “very near future.”

Horsemeat store battles prejudice

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — When the nation’s consumers boycotted beef eight years ago because of high prices, lines of 100 people or more stretched to stretch around the city’s Hawthorne Market — the only horsemeat outlet in Oregon.

Now, owner Steve Metje doesn’t even open the store some days.

During the boycott of 1972-73, the price of horsemeat rose to 13.000 pounds a week of what he calls “the friend we rode out West on.”

“Lately, that figure has dropped to only 4,000 pounds a week.

Inconsistent supplies are holding “back meat,” said Metje, 33.

“It’s a subject, my credibility isn’t believable.” “It’s hard to stay open. I can’t just come up and get more. Butchers in the beef business can just look in the phone book and find at least a page of other suppliers.”

Summers says the city’s free monthly lecture series aims to provide residents with the knowledge to take responsibility for their own health.

Rather than relying on doctors to “fix it,” when a person gets ill, Summers says people should establish a healthy lifestyle that may prevent illness.

December’s lecture will focus on home safety measures. Summers also encourages residents to suggest future lecture topics.

MMVMI’s new emphasis on “wellness” or promoting good health through prevention and education.

“Wellness is a buzzword in the hospital industry now,” says Sue Sumner, director of the community relations director. “The term has come to mean more than the absence of illness, she says. It refers to staying healthy physically, emotionally, intellectually, spiritually and socially.

49ers 'get physical' to beat Pittsburgh 17-14

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — For an entire week, General Manager Coach Bill Walsh forced his young San Francisco 49ers the same hypnotic confidence-building message, telling them they could defeat the Pittsburgh Steelers with aggression and intimidation.

The NFC West-leading 49ers, especially the defense, took Walsh at his word. In an extremely physical game in which every score followed a lost fumble or interception, the 49ers forced six Pittsburgh turnovers to win their sixth straight game, 17-14. "The key to the game was to win with Pittsburgh," Walsh said. "I talked with them about it all week. They came to Pittsburgh and played physical football with this great team."

The Steelers dropped to 5-4 and out of a first-place tie into second place in the AFC Central behind Cincinnati, which defeated conference rival Houston.

"It was our biggest physical test so far, playing away from home," Walsh added. "Few teams come in here and win."

Pittsburgh's defense played well too scoring one of the Steelers' two touchdowns and setting up the other. But San Francisco's offense was better prepared to withstand the physical battle than Pittsburgh's, possessing the football for 34:16 of the game's 60 minutes.

"We wanted to control the ball," said San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana, who passed for 205 yards and a touchdown to help raise his team's record to 7-2. "I would have kept it for 20 minutes at a time if that would have kept it away from their offense."

"It's tough to win in Pittsburgh. None of these guys ever let down."

Montana, the NFC's top-rated passer, completed 22-of-32 passes, including a 5-yard touchdown pass to Charlie Young that broke a scoreless defensive struggle with 1:31 left in the first half and capped a 46-yard drive begun when Eric Wright intercepted a Terry Bradshaw pass.

The 49ers' second and game-winning touchdown, scored on Walt Fawley's 2-yard run with 5:35 left in play, came after San Francisco rookie Carlton Williamson intercepted a Bradshaw pass and returned it 29 yards to the Pittsburgh 43.

A little over a minute after the 49ers scored their first touchdown,

Williamson recovered a fumble by Pittsburgh running back Frank Pollard, and with 5 seconds left before the half, Ray Wersching kicked a 45-yard field goal for a 10-0 lead.

The Steeler defense enabled Pittsburgh to come back and take a 14-10 lead in the third quarter.

Cornerback Mel Blount broke Montana's string of more than 100 passes without an interception, playing off a pass at the 50 and returning it all the way for a 10th down 4:24 into the third period.

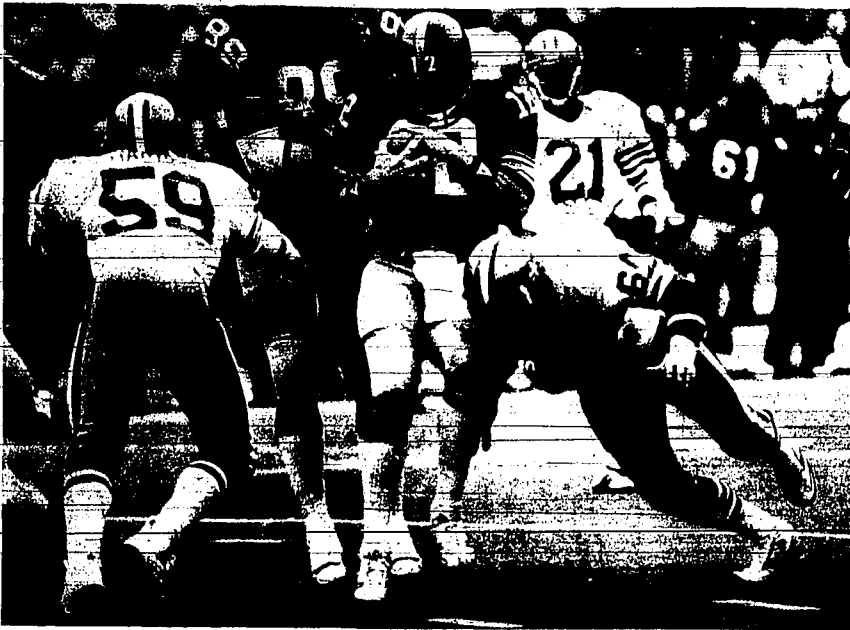

On San Francisco's next series, Jack Lambert intercepted Montana and gave the Steelers possession on the 49ers 22. On the first play from scrimmage, Bradshaw hit Jim Smith in the end zone for the touchdown.

But the 14-10 Pittsburgh lead was deceptive. Pittsburgh's offense ran only four plays in that quarter, and forced its defense to be on the field for 13:24.

The Steelers' defense, obviously tired, was unable to stop the 49ers after Williamson's interception gave them possession on the Pittsburgh 43. Mixing the run with the pass, Montana ate up more than five minutes of time, moving the 49ers in for their final touchdown.

The Steelers began their final drive on their own 17 and moved to their San Francisco 32 before they stopped themselves once again. This time, instead of turning the ball over, Bradshaw threw incomplete on fourth down, and the 49ers took over and ran out the clock.

Pittsburgh running back Franco Harris managed 104 yards rushing in his first 100-yard game of the year and 38th of his career — despite his team's inconsistent and mistake-filled play.

Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw prepares for the worst as he comes to the end of a short eight-yard scramble.

Who's Joe Cribbs? Just ask Cleveland

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — Despite the circumstances, Sam Rutigliano was in somewhat of a joking mood Sunday.

The Cleveland Browns coach had just watched his club drop a 22-13 decision to the Buffalo Bills, but he just couldn't help make light of one of the Bills who ran almost at will against his defense — Joe Cribbs.

"Joe Cribbs?" Rutigliano asked after the game, tongue planted firmly in cheek. "I was really surprised. I never heard of him. Where did they get him?"

"All he was, was the best rookie in our conference last year and made the Pro Bowl," Rutigliano declared in answering his own question. "He's a big play guy and we couldn't stop him."

Cribbs, a second-year running back, caught three touchdown passes from quarterback Joe Ferguson. He also rushed for 85 yards. Cribbs also fumbled three times, but atoned for his miscues.

Ferguson, however, made the fumbles the brunt of his post-game joke.

"I thought I was going to fumble next," the Bills quarterback said laughing. "I just hope he (Cribbs) quits fumbling and keeps on making big plays."

Cleveland had cut the Buffalo lead to 15-13 with 9:41 left in the fourth quarter when Sipe lofted a 12-yard touchdown pass to tight end Ozzie Newsome, who beat Bills cornerback Rufus Bess on the play.

Buffalo struck quickly on their next possession when Ferguson fired a 69-yard scoring pass to Cribbs, who split the middle of the Browns defense and breezed past linebacker Clay Matthews and safety Thom Darden at the 7:23 mark of the final quarter.

The win lifted the Bills' record to 6-3 and kept them in the title hunt in the AFC East while the Browns dropped to 4-5 in the AFC Central.

The Bills got off to a 13-0 lead before the Browns countered with a 36-yard second quarter field goal by Matt Bahr and a 39-yard Bahr kick in the third quarter.

Buffalo was awarded a safety with 2:17 left in the third quarter when they sacked quarterback Paul McDonald, substituting for Sipe who was shaken up on the previous play, in the end zone. McDonald got rid of the ball as he was going down but referee Bob McElwee called McDonald for intentional grounding which gave the Bills a 15-6 lead.

The game started out as a defensive struggle but the Bills opened it up on two Ferguson to Cribbs scoring passes. The first came when Ferguson found the second-year running back down the left sideline with a 58-yard strike as he streaked past Cleveland rookie defensive back Hanford Dixon with 3:36 left in the first quarter.

Buffalo, however, missed the point after due to a poor center snap.

The Bills scored again with 10:29 left in the second quarter when Ferguson faked a handoff on an end-around play and tossed a 15-yard pass to Cribbs, who had beaten Browns' linebacker Don Goode.

Chargers nip chiefs on late field goal

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Rolf Benirschke, named "Hero of the Year" by the NFL Players Association for his winning battle against an intestinal disease that nearly cost him his life, made another comeback on the field in the third quarter.

He had missed an extra point following a touchdown early in the game and it appeared to be a crucial mistake when the Kansas City Chiefs took a 20-19 lead with little more than six minutes left to play.

But the San Diego Chargers' kicker wound up the hero of the game as he hit a 22-yard field goal with just 13 seconds left to give the Chargers a 22-20 victory.

"Any kicker, I think, likes it to come down to him," he said. "I just didn't want it to come down to us losing because of the missed extra point."

Benirschke said he watched "the situation developing" in the game's closing minutes "and I was hoping to get a chance for the field goal."

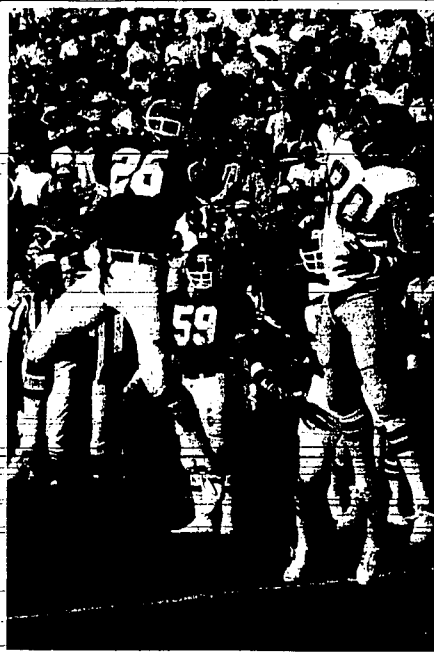

He said he tried to make sure not to rush his final kick and explained, "I think that's what happened on the extra point. We were due for one. We wanted to win it even more because of the way our offense was trying and playing their hearts out."

"We've lost two close games due to field goals in the last few seconds (Chicago and Minnesota), so this time it was our turn."

The win left the Chargers and Chiefs tied for first place in the AFC West.

Taking over on their own 36 with 6:32 left in the game, the Chargers drove 70 yards in 14 plays for the winning score.

The big play of the drive came when the Chargers faced a 4th-and-9 on the Kansas City 48, and quarterback Dan Fouts hit Wes Chandler with a 23-yard pass that gave the Chargers the ball on the Chiefs' 24.

Chief Gary Barbaro stymies pass to Kellen Winslow

Five plays later, Benirschke kicked his winning field goal. The victory lifted the Chargers' record to 6-3, the same as the Chiefs. Denver has a 5-3 record and the Broncos host Minnesota Monday night.

Earlier in the fourth quarter, Kansas City took a 20-19 lead on a 32-yard field goal by Nick Lowery.

The Chargers scored earlier in the game on a 1-yard plunge by Chuck Muncie in the first quarter, a 4-yard run by Muncie and field goals of 29 and 19 yards by Benirschke in the second period.

Kansas City also scored on a 2-yard run by James Hadnot in the first period, a 3-yard reception by Billy Jackson in the third period and a 21-yard field goal by Lowery in the final period.

Fouts completed 24-of-38 passes for 297 yards.

The Chargers took a 19-7 halftime lead on a pair of field goals in the last 30 seconds. The second field goal, with no time left on the clock, capped a two-play 32-yard drive that began when Wyatt Henderson recovered a Curtis Bledsoe fumble on a kickoff.

San Diego got the game's first score on its first possession, on a leading 17-yard touchdown drive by Muncie that put the Chargers in front at 10:19 of the opening quarter. The Chargers' drive was set up when Gary Johnson recovered a fumble by Kansas City quarterback Bill Kenney on the 50-yard line.

The Chiefs evaded the score the next time they got the ball, marching 72 yards in 11 plays and scoring on Hadnot's run with 3:36 left in the first quarter.

The Chargers went ahead 13-7 at 4:10 of the second period on a two-yard sweep by Muncie into the right corner of the end zone. Benirschke's extra point attempt sailed wide to the right.

Dolphins rebound into win column at Baltimore's expense

MIAMI (UPI) — After the bitter disappointment of last week's last-minute defeat at Dallas, the Miami Dolphins got well-quick on Baltimore Sunday.

The Dolphins took control with 10 points in the third quarter and then coasted to an easy 27-10 victory. Handing the Colts their eighth straight loss.

"After the heart-breaking loss last week, this game was especially important," said Miami Coach Don Shula. "We're still on top of the heap in the AFC East and that's what's important to us."

Quarterback David Woodley, who ran for one touchdown and passed for two more, looked surprised when he was asked if it was nice to have a breather for a change.

"It wasn't exactly a breather until the fourth quarter," he said. Woodley said that because of the success Dolphin wide receivers have been enjoying recently, he was forced to go to his light ends more.

"We were getting a lot of double coverage on the wide receivers and they left the tight ends on a line backer, so we tried to exploit it."

Also exploited were the power running talents of rookie fullback Andra Franklin, who gained 101 yards rushing in the first 100-yard effort by a Dolphin back this year.

"The offensive line was doing the job. What can I say?" said Franklin. "They were opening the holes and that made it easy."

Baltimore Coach Alke McCormack said he had expected a better performance going into the game.

"I really thought we'd play much better than we showed today," he said. "We didn't do all what we wanted to do."

"It was a bitter loss. We're trying to battle through the tough times and we have a lot of young kids that are trying like hell."

The Dolphins victory improved their record to 6-3 and kept them atop the AFC East while the troubled Colts, plagued by dissension during the week, dropped to 1-8.

Woodley opened the scoring in the first quarter by bolting into the end zone on a quarterback draw play from 3 yards out. He then added touchdowns on a 22-yard pass to Darrin Harris and a 7-yard throw to tight end Ronnie Lee. Between TD passes, Dave von Schamann nailed a 41-yard field goal.

Von Schamann added another field goal midway in the fourth quarter from 22 yards out. It was set up when safety Lyle Blackwood intercepted a Bert Jones pass and returned it to the Baltimore 34. Five plays netted 20 yards but Baltimore stiffened, forcing the field goal.

The touchdowns by Woodley and Harris gave the Dolphins a 14-10 halftime lead over the Colts, who had scored on a 3-yard pass from Jones to Don McCauley and a 44-yard field goal by Mike Wood.

But the Dolphins scored 10 points in the third quarter on von Schamann's first field goal of the day and Lee's TD reception.

The Dolphins drove 56 yards to the Baltimore 24 after the second half kickoff, but two straight incompletions stalled the drive and von Schamann kicked a field goal.

Late in the third period, the Dolphins got the first big break of the day when Baltimore running back Curtis Dickey fumbled and Dolphin nose tackle Bob Baumhower recovered and returned it 10 yards to the Colts 29.

After an incomplete pass, rookie fullback Andra Franklin ran up the middle for 21 yards to the 8 and one play later, Woodley and Lee hooked up for the score.

Woodley's 3-yard TD came with 2:41 left in the first quarter. It finished off a 5-yard drive featuring power running by Franklin and completions of 10 and 9 yards to running back Tony Nathan.

The two teams then traded scores on the next possessions.

The Colts tied it 7-7 with an 80-yard drive. Jones started it off with consecutive 20-yard passes to Reese McCall and Dickey and then kept it going later with a 16-yarder to McCall.

McCauley grabbed the 3-yard scoring pass underneath the Miami defense on the goal line.

Then came another 80-yard march — this one by the Dolphins. Tight end Bruce Hardy caught back-to-back passes of 18 and 19 yards to move the ball into scoring position at the Baltimore 29.

The Dolphins stalled because of penalties but on a 3rd-and-14, Harris gathered in his first touchdown pass of the season.

Wood's 43-yard field goal with a gusting wind came with 4 seconds left in the half. The Colts had driven from their own 33 to the Miami 27 in 12 plays but were unable to take it in and Wood's field goal made it 14-10 at the half.

The Colts drove from their own 20 to the Miami 5 in the waning minutes of the game and in the process, had two touchdowns passes by Jones called-back because of penalties. But the scoring third ended when Miami safety Don Bessille intercepted a Jones pass in the end zone.

Oakland downs Patriots Wilson making it difficult for Plunkett to find work

OAKLAND (UPI) — If Sunday's game is an indication of what Marc Wilson can do, it may be a long time before Jim Plunkett, last season's Super Bowl hero, regains his job as the Oakland Raiders No. 1 quarterback.

Wilson, starting for the third straight game in place of Plunkett, completed 22-of-36 passes for 275 yards, including a clutch 14-yard touchdown throw to Cliff Branch, in leading the Raiders to a 27-17 victory over the New England Patriots.

It was only Oakland's fourth victory against five losses but as Raider Manager General Partner Al Davis said, "At least we're still alive."

"It's a start," added Coach Tom Flores, "something we needed to get off on the right track. But we're still not out of the hole we dug our selves into."

Wilson's scoring strike to Branch put the Raiders in front 20-17 with 7:50 left to play and the Raiders went on to score an insurance TD on a 5-yard run with a recovered fumble by defensive end Willie Jones. The Patriots suffered their seventh loss in nine games.

Cedrick Hardman, Oakland's other defensive end, sacked quarterback Steve Grogan and when the ball popped out of his hands, Jones grabbed it and ran in for the touchdown with 1:22 remaining.

Wilson, although only in his second year in the NFL, has been allowed to call his own plays except in crucial situations where the coaching staff advises him.

"On the first play of the game, Wilson threw to Branch for what would have been an 80-yard scoring play but a holding penalty against Henry Lawrence nullified the second play."

"Cliff told me all week he would like to go deep the first time we got the ball," Wilson said, "and I agreed it was a good idea. Of course, I consulted with the coaches and they gave me the green light. I can't help but think that pass influenced how New England would play defense against us."

Pats Coach Ron Erhardt said Wilson's ability to avoid sacks when he was pinned in made a big difference.

"We had a chance to sack him several times,"

Erhardt said. "But he got away and made some great first downs that kept their offense going."

Kenny King ran for more than 100 yards, the first time it has been done this year by a Raider, to help set up three scores as the Raiders won their fourth game against five losses and dropped the Patriots 10-7.

Mark Van Eeghen, making his first appearance as a running back since suffering an injury five games ago, scored on a 2-yard run and Chris Bahj kicked field goals of 51 and 26 yards to account for the other Raider points.

The Patriots scored their points on a 19-yard pass from Steve Grogan to Don Hasselbeck, a 3-yard smash by Sam Cunningham and a 38-yard field goal by John Smith.

Cunningham's touchdown put the Patriots in front at 17-13 to open the second half, and six minutes later, Wilson drove the Raiders 55 yards in eight plays, the last one his scoring pass to Branch for a 20-17 lead.

The Raiders took possession with 5:27 left and reached the New England 43 when Derrick Ramsey fumbled after a 20-yard reception from Wilson with Rick Sanford grabbing the ball for New England at the Pats' 20.

Two plays resulted in a 7-yard loss for the Pats, and then Cedrick Hardman sacked Grogan. The ball popped up and Branch grabbed it, running the remaining 9 yards for the insurance points.

Wilson completed 22-of-36 passes for 275 yards in his finest performance since becoming Oakland's No. 1 quarterback. He drove the Raiders to the New England 33 after the opening kickoff, and Bahr followed with his first field goal to put Oakland in front.

On Oakland's next possession King fumbled at the 25 and, after Rod Shale recovered for the Pats, Smith kicked a 38-yard field goal to tie the score 10-10.

Midway through the second quarter the Raiders went 57 yards in five plays with Van Eeghen getting the final 3 for a 10-10 lead, but with 51 seconds left before the intermission Grogan hit on five consecutive passes for 75 yards, the last one going to Hasselbeck to tie the score 10-10.

Bucs' bombs shatter Bears

TAMPA (UPI) — Tampa Bay tight end Jimmie Giles caught only one pass Sunday against the Chicago Bears, but it was a record setter.

Giles managed to get behind safety Doug Plank and when he pulled in a Doug Williams pass at the Tampa Bay 40, he had a 10-yard lead on Plank and went untouched for a second quarter 81-yard touchdown, the longest score from scrimmage in Tampa Bay history.

Last year in Chicago, Plank and Giles figured in a key play that many termed would end the pass-catching effectiveness of Giles.

On that play, as Giles jumped high for a pass, he was speared in the back by the hard hitting safety on a play that resulted in a league fine for Plank.

For several games Giles was suspected of "heating footstools" while going for passing touchdowns.

But his solitary catch Sunday in the Buc's 20-10 victory has become a Giles trademark.

"Primarily, our offensive objective is to spring big plays," Giles said. "We had double coverage on the backs," said Chicago Coach Neil Armstrong. "Giles lost the linebacker at the line and had nothing but wide open field."

The 81-yard touchdown was one of two big pass plays by Williams. He hit wide receiver Kevin House with a 51-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter.

Bill Capece, who missed one field goal and had a second blocked, was successful on a 46-yarder in the second period and added a 39-yard field goal in the final period.

Waifer Payton, who passed the 9,000-yard career rushing mark, scored Chicago's only touchdown on a 1-yard plunge in the fourth period, and John Roveto had a 40-yard first period field goal.

The Bears still were in the game midway through the final period after Alan Page blocked a 29-yard field goal attempt by Capece.

On the Bears' first play after the block, Vince Evans hit Rickey Watts with a 37-yard pass, but cornerback Norris Thomas stripped him of the ball and safety Neal Colzie recovered for Tampa on the Buc's 3.

The Buccaneers took advantage of that turnover to drive for the final field goal by Capece to put the game out of reach.

Cornerback Mike Washington had blunted a second period drive by the Bears when he intercepted Evans on the Tampa Bay 29 and in the third period, Linebacker Hugh Green intercepted another Evans pass on the Tampa Bay 20.

Payton, who went into the game needing 77 yards to reach the 9,000-yard mark, had 92 yards on 22 carries. He is the fourth leading NFL career rusher behind Jim Brown with 12,312 yards; O.J. Simpson with 11,236 yards and Franco Harris of Pittsburgh who had 9,838 yards going into today's game against San Francisco.

The Bears have blocked at least one punt or field goal attempt in each of the last five games against Tampa Bay and Papa's block Sunday was the 28th of his career.

Southern Illinois sinks Indiana State 17-3

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (UPI) — Running back Walter Poole and quarterback Richardson Johnson each scored on 1-yard runs to lead Southern Illinois to a 17-3 Missouri Valley Conference victory over Indiana State Sunday.

The game was played on Sunday because of a contest held in the ISU stadium Saturday.

Poole scored with 6:53 left in the first quarter, and Paul Molla's extra point kick made the score 7-0. Indiana State got its only points with 12:53 left in the first half when Dennis Teegarden kicked a 44-yard field goal. Johnson's touchdown came with 5:26 remaining in the second quarter and gave UIU a 14-3 halftime lead.

Molla finished the scoring with a 39-yard field goal in the third quarter. Southern Illinois dominated the entire game and had a 13-minute advantage in possession time, due mainly to its back running attack. The Salukis had 322 yards in 74 rushes and only 37 yards on eight pass attempts. Poole had 118 yards in 25 carries before bruising his knee just before the end of the first half.

The leading ground gainer for the game was UIU's Derrick Taylor, who finished with 27 carries for 127 yards.

Fultz wins Ocean State marathon

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Jack Fultz, winner of the 1976 Boston Marathon, captured the sixth annual Ocean State Marathon Sunday, shaving more than a minute off the old mark with a time of 2:17:35.

Fultz, 33, of Lincoln, Mass., shattered the 2:18:37 mark set by Bobby Doyle in 1977.

Top amateur woman was Mary Hynes of Quincy, Mass., who finished at an unofficial time of 2:52.

Patti Catalano, a four-time Ocean State champion and the only professional in the field of 2,500, broke her own mark for the marathon with an unofficial time of 2:33:31. Her previous course record was 2:40:28.

Catalano and 17 other distance runners were suspended Oct. 4 for accepting prize money at the Cascade Run-off in Portland, Ore., last June.

The Athletics Congress has barred her and the others from competing in sanctioned events unless they have separate sections for professionals and amateurs.

The Ocean State, a qualifying event for the Boston Marathon, created the professional division so Catalano could compete.

Alouettes gain playoffs on 3-13 mark

MONTREAL (UPI) — Rookie halfback David Overstreet scored on a seven-yard run and broke loose on a 26-yard touchdown pass from Ken Johnson Sunday to power the Montreal Alouettes into the CFL's Eastern Division playoffs with 39-15 triumph over the Ottawa Rough Riders.

The victory ended one of the league's strangest races ever for a post-season playoff berth. The Alouettes completed the season with a 3-13 mark, just edging out the hapless Toronto Argonauts, who finished at 2-14 by failing to win in their season finale Saturday against Hamilton.

The game was a preview of next Sunday's Eastern Division semifinal. The Riders, whose record slipped to 5-11, will host the Alouettes in Ottawa to decide which team faces Hamilton for the eastern championship.

Brock breaks CFL season pass record

WINNIPEG (UPI) — Winnipeg Blue Bomber quarterback Dieter Brock established a new CFL record for passing yardage in a single season Sunday, breaking the mark Sam Elcheverry set in 1956.

Brock reached the 4,725 yard mark in a game against Calgary, breaking the old record of 4,723 yards set by Elcheverry with the Montreal Alouettes.

Williams leads in PBA Columbia open

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Mark Williams rolled 749 in his final three games Sunday of a tournament in the PBA's Columbia 300 Open to take a 136-pin lead over Dave Husted.

Williams held the first-round lead in the $100,000 tournament before being overtaken by Jeff Bellinger in round two.

Williams, with a total of 4,105, is the top bowler in the 24-man field that started match play Sunday night, with the finals Tuesday.

Bellinger fell from first to third after averaging only 200 during the last qualifying round and was 157 pins off the pace.

Vines takes French tennis tournament

PARIS (UPI) — Mark Vines of Richmond, Va., playing a hard baseline game with brilliant work at the net, came through with a resounding 6-2, 6-4, 6-3 victory over Frenchman Pascal Portes to win a $50,000 tennis tournament Sunday.

"I have had a great week," said the elated Vines as fans surged around him at the end of the match. "I'm as surprised as you are to be where I am now."

Vines, a 24-year-old left-hander, won his first Grand Prix. The 1979 graduate of the University of Texas has been a professional only two years and was practically unknown a week ago. Until Sunday he had never succeeded in passing more than one round in a Grand Prix tournament.

His match against Portes never reached the summits of tennis but showed undeniable qualities: lots of mobility, a factual sense and remarkable volleys.

Rogers is New South Wales champion

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — American Bill Rogers managed only a 3-over-par 76 Sunday but still won the $79,000 New South Wales Open golf title by three strokes at the Lakes Golf Course.

Despite two bogeys on the last three holes, the Texan wound up at 7-under 285. Urre better than Australia's Lindsay Stephen, who had a 71 with four birdies. Rogers managed only a lone birdie in the closing round played on a wet, windy day.

Sunday's win was Rogers' sixth of the year, including the British Open and the World Series of Golf.

Rogers said he was a bit disappointed with the finish to his round Sunday, but added, "I feel very confident if I had been pressured, I would have played a lot better."

Cowboy quarterback Danny White is sacked for a 10-yard loss by Philadelphia's Ken Clark.

Dorsett rallies Cowboys past Eagles

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Tony Dorsett has a very short memory and as a result, the Dallas Cowboys have grabbed a share of the NFC East lead.

Forgetting his mistakes earlier in the game that twice cost his team the ball, Dorsett knifed off left guard for nine yards and a touchdown with 7:31 left in the game Sunday to cap Dallas' latest comeback finish and give the Cowboys a 17-14 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.

Dorsett lost a fumble at the Philadelphia four-yard line in the first half and saw a pass go off his fingertips into the waiting arms of an Eagle player in the third quarter. But he atoned for the errors with the game on the line, running for the touchdown that boosted the Dallas record to 7-2, the same as the Eagles.

"You have to do something to forget about the mistakes," Dorsett said. "You have to forget them and go on to the next play. There are too many plays in a game to dwell on one mistake."

The Cowboys, who came back from a 13-point, fourth quarter deficit last week against Miami, were down 14-3 late in the third period after an 85-yard touchdown bomb from Iton Jaworski to Harold Carmichael but they refused to die.

Danny White hit tight end Doug Cosbie for 17 yards and a touchdown with 12:45 left to cut the Philadelphia lead to 10.

"That was a broken play," White said. "He was just supposed to go on seven yards and make a short turn. I felt pressure behind me and stepped up in the pocket and Doug adjusted. I threw it where Doug could either get it or tip it to Tony Hill. He made a great catch."

The Cowboys' defense then backed the Eagles up to their three after a sack by end Ed Jones that gave the ball back to the offense at the Philadelphia 38. Dorsett began the drive with a 15-yard run and ended it with "his" touchdown, dragging free safety Brenard Wilson over the goal line.

"After they scored on that 85-yard pass, we had to go out and get some things going," Dorsett said. "We knew we could move the ball but we had to push it into the end zone."

The Eagles mounted a last gasp drive that carried them from their 10 to the Dallas 16. Backup quarterback Joe Pisarcik piloted Philadelphia after Dallas' cornerback Dennis Thurman knocked Jaworski out of the game on a blitz and picked up a 15-yard penalty.

But Tony Franklin, who was 14-for-19 coming into the game, missed a 34-yard field goal attempt with 1:46 to go.

"What can I say?" Franklin said. "It was a good snarl and a good hold. I just blew it. What hurt more was that I let the team down."

"I never thought Franklin would miss that field goal in a million years," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said.

Landry said the pass play to Cosbie was the big play and added he didn't feel the win necessarily showed any superiority.

"They made that one big play but we didn't take any pressure off them at all," he said. "There was not much difference between the two teams today. I don't think we are a better team than the Eagles."

Philadelphia Coach Dick Vermeil was equally blunt.

"I'd say we got beat by a better football team," he said. "I thought Dallas did a super job and if not for some real alert defensive plays inside the 20, they could have beaten us worse than they did."

Dorsett, the NFC's leading rusher entering the game, finished with 78 yards in 20 carries.

The bomb from Jaworski to Carmichael came three plays after Dorsett saw White's pass go off his fingertips and into the arms of linebacker Jerry Robinson at the Philadelphia 3. From his own 15, Jaworski found Carmichael at midfield, past rookie cornerback Everson

Waltrip wins NASCAR title

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Darrell Waltrip beat Bobby Allison by half a car length Sunday to claim his 12th NASCAR Grand National victory this season, the rain-delayed American 500 at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

It was the fourth consecutive victory for Waltrip and gave him a sweep of the three fall races in North Carolina. The last time any driver won four in a row was when Cale Yarborough did the trick in 1976. Ernie Waltrip, he drove a Junior Johnson-prepared car.

Waltrip led eight times for 163 laps but didn't grab the lead for good until the final five. A caution flag with about 40 miles left set up a four-car duel involving Waltrip, Allison, Harry Gant and Richard Petty.

Allison and Waltrip, driving Buicks, exchanged the lead four times in the final 30 miles before Waltrip was able to pull out the victory and win $23,410.

Gant took third in a Pontiac. Petty finished fourth in a Buick and Joe Ruttman placed fifth in a Pontiac.

The victory gives Waltrip a 68-point lead over Allison in the competition for the Grand National Driver of the Year title.

The 34-year-old Waltrip averaged 107.399 mph in the race, which featured 33 lead changes among 11 drivers on the 1.017-mile track.

"The race was originally scheduled for last Sunday but was postponed because of rain."

Twelve caution flags slowed the race during 96 of its 492 laps.

Jets trounce Giants in 'Battle of Big Apple'

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — Thanks to a relentless pass-rush and the receiving heroics of Wesley Walker, the New York Jets made the New York Giants look rotten to the core in the Battle of the Big Apple.

Ends Mark Gastineau and Joe Klecko combined for seven of the Jets' nine sacks Sunday and Walker caught a 39-yard touchdown pass and set up three of Pat Leahy's four field goals with key receptions in pacing a 26-7 rout of the Giants.

"I've said over and over that you have to win the November games if you are serious about the playoffs," said Jets' Coach Walt Michaels as his club ended the Giants three-game winning streak and dropped them to 5-4. "We were aggressive throughout and good things happen when you play that way."

Leahy, who has made nine straight field goal attempts, hit on kicks of 37-33, 42 and 38 yards and the Jets defense pitched a shutout as the club improved to 4-1 after a weeklong losing streak to Seattle last week.

"Our defense won this game for us — I've never seen it better," said Walker, who certainly did his part — "You have to execute and that's what we did today. On my touchdown, Richard (Todd) audibled at the line and I ran a post move. He (cornerback Terry Jackson) kind of bit and it was a perfect throw by Richard."

The Jets raised their regular season record against their rivals to 2-1 and the Giants — installed as favorites coming off an overtime victory in Atlanta — were limited to 166 total yards.

"They were the better team and they certainly outplayed us," said Jets Coach Ray Perkins. "That was the best pass rush we've faced all year."

Beleaguered right tackle Gordon King, who saw Gastineau shrug him aside for four sacks, was even more impressed.

"I did not do my job," King lamented. "That Gastineau is some piece of work."

Richard Todd hit on 13-of-30 passes for 207 yards and a touchdown, turning to the speedy Walker in almost every key situation.

Walker, who caught six passes for 142 yards, snared a 35-yard pass from Todd to set up Leahy's final field goal, a 38-yarder 2:14 into the fourth quarter. The Jets took a 16-0 on Leahy's 42-yarder 4:20 into the third quarter, set up by a 16-yard pass to Walker and a 16-yard pass interference penalty against Terry Jackson.

The Giants got back in the game momentarily thanks to a costly mistake by the Jets' special teams. Punter Chuck Ramsey dropped a perfect snap and Giants safety Beasley Reese scooped up the fumble and ran 4 yards for his first NFL score, pulling the Giants within 16-7 late in the third quarter.

The Jets had 33 yards in total offense when Todd hit a wide open Walker for 32 yards to the Giants' 25 on third down early in the second quarter. Six plays later, Leahy clicked on a 37-yard field goal to put the Jets ahead 3-0.

A questionable decision by the Giants preceded Leahy's 33-yarder with 5:53 left in the half. Todd's 24-yard pass to Bruce Harper and a 14-yard strike to Walker moved the ball to the Giants' 11 and a 15-yard personal foul penalty on Jets' tackle Chris Ward was declined on 3rd-and-5. Instead of a 3rd-and-20 from the 25, the Jets kept the ball on the 11 before Leahy's kick.

The Jets capitalized on a Giants' fumble to set up Walker's TD catch. Leon Bright mishandled Ramsey's punt and Jesse Johnson recovered at the Giants' 39. On the next play, Todd connected with Walker, who beat Jackson in the left corner and ran under a high pass to give the Jets a 13-0 lead.

The first quarter was an exercise in offensive futility as each club punted four times. Three fights broke out in the opening half between the bitter New York rivals, who were meeting for the first time in the regular since 1974.

Whitehurst leads Pack past Seattle

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — David Whitehurst wanted to say "I told you so."

Making his first start in almost two years, Whitehurst threw three touchdown passes and ran for another Sunday in the Green Bay Packers 34-24 victory over the Seattle Seahawks.

Whitehurst did it before Packers fans who had booed him profusely before when he started for Lynn Dickey, who had suffered a back injury last week against Detroit.

"I'd love to say, 'I showed you guys,'" Whitehurst said. "But I don't really feel that way."

It was his first start since Nov. 25, 1979, against the Philadelphia Eagles. The win gave the Packers a 3-6 record and snapped a six-game losing streak at home. It also may have eased the pressure slightly on Coach Bart Starr, who has said he must win at least eight games to keep his job.

Seattle Coach Jack Patra said he had heard a lot of comments about Green Bay but was not familiar with Starr's situation. He said the win must be "very gratifying" for Starr and the Packers.

"It was a good first half, a very good football game at that point," Patra said of the contest which was tied 21-21 at the half. "Of course, it was good for Green Bay all day."

With 9:17 left and Green Bay leading 28-24, Patra pulled quarterback Jim Zorn and substituted Dave Krieg.

"Passes were falling incomplete and it wasn't the receiver," Patra said. "Time was running short and we didn't have time for him to work it out."

"I was off on a route or two," Zorn said. "There was a big play I think I threw poor on but Jack's making the decisions. He decided to pull me out, and that was it."

"I just didn't think he was throwing the ball very well," Patra said. "He gets into one of those situations once in a while."

"I think what has happened with Green Bay is Green Bay is not one of those teams that has won games in the last minutes," Patra said. "Today, they got it up and turned it on."

Whitehurst hit 19-of-31 passes for 205 yards but throwing two interceptions to safety John Harris.

Whitehurst threw TD passes of 38 and 8 yards to wide receiver James Lofton and 7 yards to tight end Paul Coffman and ran 1 yard for a fourth touchdown.

Green Bay's final six points came on a 13-yard field goal by Jan Stenerud with 1:58 left to play and a 36-yard field goal by Stenerud with 41 seconds left in the game.

Seattle scored on a 37-yard field goal by Efron Herrera, his longest ever. Jim Zorn touchdown passes of 12 and 14 yards to fullback Dan Doornink; and a 42 yard interception return by Harris.

Packers quarterback David Whitehurst eludes Seahawk Mike Jackson as he scrambles for eight yards and a first down.

Oilers' errant passing paves Bengals' victory

CINCINNATI, (UPI) — Ken Anderson fired three touchdown passes Sunday to pace the AFC Central leading Cincinnati Bengals to a 34-21 victory over the faltering Houston Oilers.

Cincinnati topped its record to 6-3 and, thanks to San Francisco's 17-14 win over Pittsburgh, the Bengals took sole possession of the AFC Central lead. Houston lost its third straight game and fell to 4-5.

The Oilers played most of the game without running back Earl Campbell, who suffered a left hamstring pull midway through the second quarter. Before the injury, Campbell had gained 74 yards on 14 carries.

Anderson threw a pair of touchdown passes to Dan Ross — 8 yards and 14 yards — and teamed with Cris Collinsworth on an 18-yard TD toss.

Anderson, who sat out most of the final quarter, completed 21-of-30 passes for 281 yards.

Cincinnati also got a TD from fullback Pete Johnson on a 4-yard run, while Jim Breech kicked field goals of 51 and 30 yards.

The Bengals virtually decided the game by scoring 24 points in the second quarter while keeping the Oilers scoreless.

Houston quarterback Ken Stabler was intercepted three times and the Bengals turned all three into scores.

The Bengal barrage began on the opening play of the second period when Johnson crashed a 4-yard pass for a TD. The 80-yard drive was highlighted by Anderson's passing to Collinsworth for 13, 22 and 22 yards.

Glenn Cameron intercepted a Stabler pass at the Cincinnati 33 to set up the next Bengal touchdown — an 8-yard pass from Anderson to Ross with 3:14 left in the second quarter.

With 1:34 remaining, Cincinnati began another drive on its 33 and in just seconds scored again, with Anderson passing 13 yards to Collinsworth for the TD.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Willie Randolph, who hit only .222 in the World Series but had a much better on-base average with nine walks, could be taking another stroll right back to where he originally came from — Pittsburgh.

His name has come up in the talks the Yankees and Pirates have been having for Dave Parker.

Pittsburgh, which dealt Phil Garner, isn't the only club looking for a second baseman. So are Montreal and Oakland. Boston also is losing free agent Jerry Remy. If the Yankees move Randolph — and his name has been included with Bucky Dent's in a possible deal for Montreal's Gary Carter — they may go after Remy or Bobby Grich, another free agent after five seasons with the Angels.

George Steinbrenner always has liked Grich, who led Tony Armas, Dwight Evans and Eddie Murray for the American League's home run leadership with 22 this year. That, incidentally, marked the first time in 80 years any second baseman in the league was involved with the title since Nap Lajoie, then with Philadelphia, topped the circuit with 33.

The Kansas City Royals, currently touring Japan, are considering mov-

Randolph-for-Parker trade possible

The Expos have just about decided to keep Jim Fanning as their manager for next season. He has better job security than any other manager. When the Expos do decide to make their next managerial change, he'll go back into the front office where he has done an outstanding job.

Steve Garvey becomes a free agent with the Dodgers at the end of next season at which time his agent, Jerry Kapstein, may be looking to get him a multiple year contract at $2 million a year. If the economy is anything like it is now and the Dodgers balk at paying that kind of money, it wouldn't surprise me to see either the Yankees or Mets try to get Garvey...

Dodgers, Braves and Yankees are all after Padres' Ozzie Smith, rated by many the best defensive shortstop in baseball. Not many know that Dodger shortstop Bill Russell came very close to being out of the World Series because of bone trouble in his left foot. Russell wasn't sure he could play until a couple of days before the Series' opener and General Manager Al Campanis left the decision up to him. "There's no way I could just sit around and watch the games," Russell finally decided. The foot has been troubling the 33-year-old Dodger, shortstop two years now and he'll probably have it operated on this winter.

What's all the fuss about? Bob Lemon taking Tommy John out for a pinch hitter in the fourth inning? The late Casey Stengel pulled his third baseman, Cleo Boyer, for pinch hitter Dale Long in the second inning of the 1960 World Series opening between the Yankees and Pirates and nobody made that much of it even though Long did the same thing Bobby Marcano did in the last two weeks. Covering the Yankees' manager that winter, so you can make of it what you will although it wasn't because he jerked Boyer that early...

Atlanta wallops Saints

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Steve Bartkowski threw touchdown passes of 48, 60 and 47 yards to wide receiver Alfred Jenkins Sunday to power the Atlanta Falcons to a 41-10 victory over the New Orleans Saints.

Two of the three touchdowns came on the first play of an Atlanta possession. Jenkins picked up two Falcon records with his performance — three touchdown catches in a game and a total of 11 for the season.

The Falcon defense capitalized on Saint mistakes and virtually shut down the Saints' biggest offensive threat, running back George Rogers. In the first half, Atlanta opened a 10-0 lead and, though the Saints tied it 10-10, the first touchdown pass to Jenkins put the Falcons up for good in the second quarter.

Bartkowski hit Jenkins for his 48-yarder midway through the second quarter, capping a 4-play, 73-yard drive. Jenkins beat defender Russell-Gary by three steps up the middle and ran in untouched.

DENVER (UPI) — Tommy Kramer likes to compare the Minnesota Viking offense to sandlot football; the similarity, he says, is a willingness to improvise.

"If anybody's open we try to hit them," the Viking quarterback said. "I'm going to move around a lot to find the open receiver, even make up some plays if I see something that might work."

Kramer and the Vikings meet the Denver Broncos Monday night — only the third meeting between the two clubs, both with 5-3 records this year. Minnesota has won the two previous regular-season encounters.

Considering Kramer's success with the two-minute offense — he has led the team to victory in the last two minutes on eight occasions — one key will be whether Denver can execute a "prevent" defense.

Kramer has succeeded in part because of his ability to devise plays on the spot. Against Detroit earlier in the year, he told receiver Arad Rashad: "Run down the field about 25 yards and just get open. I'll get you the football." The pass was completed and Minnesota won 29-24.

Covering Rashad will be Bronco cornerback Louie Wright; an All-Pro in 1977, 1978 and 1979.

"Hopefully, we'll have enough points to where it won't come down to the last two minutes," Wright said. "But right now I believe they're doing more games in the last two minutes than any other team. This is a team that will go to the end zone. We'll have to come up with something that will prevent that."

One of Kramer's most favored receivers has been running back Ted Brown, who led the league in receptions with 48 entering this weekend's NFL games.

Kramer is the second-ranked quarterback in the NFC with 140 completions on 258 attempts for 1,853 yards, 16 touchdowns and seven interceptions.

Despite Denver's disappointing 9-7 loss to Buffalo last week, Bronco quarterback Craig Morton remained the No. 1 quarterback in the NFL with a rating of 106.3, and, like Kramer, 16 touchdowns and seven interceptions.

Rams overhaul Detroit

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Wendell Tyler ran 60 yards for a touchdown and scored from a yard out with 9:39 remaining Sunday to spark the Los Angeles Rams to a 20-13 victory over the Detroit Lions.

Frank Corral added field goals of 42 and 41 yards following Tyler's 1-yard score to help the Rams improve to 4-1.

Tyler's second TD atoned for his fumble on the Detroit 2 on the Rams' previous possession. When the Rams took over against reserve quarterback Jeff Rutledge hit Preston Denmark with a 64-yard pass to put the ball at the Lions' 1.

From there, it took Tyler three tries before he finally made over the left side for the final yard to tie the game. Corral's 70th consecutive extra point put the Rams ahead 14-13.

After Letoy Irvin's second interception of the game, Los Angeles moved into position for Corral's 42-yard field goal with 1:40 left in the fourth quarter. Corral connected again from 13 yards out with a 13-yard left.
