

Unemployment worst in six years

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unemployment surged to a six-year high of 8 percent in October with a total of 8.5 million Americans out of work, the government reported Friday.

The White House ruled out any "quick-fix measures." One million workers have lost their jobs since July. 554,000 of them since September, to push the rate higher than at any time during Jimmy Carter's presidency and well above the 7.4 percent level when President Reagan took office.

But the White House said it considers the unemployment to be a "natural short-term consequence of unwinding the deeply rooted inflation that is imbedded in the American economy."

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said unemployment rose in all major categories, particularly among blue-collar workers. In the hard-hit construction industry, 18 percent of workers were out of a job in October. The rate was the highest since it hit 8.2 percent in December 1975 during the Ford administration. It climbed one-half percent from September and was up a full percentage point above July. During the 1980 recession, the rate topped off at 7.6 percent.

The number of unemployed was the highest since the department began its current method of obtaining data in 1947. It eclipsed the previous high of 8,398,000 in May 1975. Many more Americans were jobless during the Depression era but the government totals included 14- and 15-year-olds, who are not counted now.

In addition to the 8.5 million counted as unemployed in October, another 1 million workers who have become too discouraged to seek new jobs are not included in the total or unemployment rate.

"The administration will not adopt quick fix measures to deal with short run movements in the unemployment rate," the White House said in a formal statement read by deputy press secretary Larry Speakes.

"Elements of the president's economic program already in place are sufficient to provide the basis for a strong and lasting economic recovery which we anticipate will be evident in 1982," the statement said.

Calling the unemployed "victims of this engineered recession," AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland blamed the Reagan's economic policies for the high rate.

"It is time to undo some of the damage resulting from the budget cuts, the tax giveaways to the wealthy and the monetary squeeze on the housing and auto industry," Kirkland said.

In Congress, Democrats assailed Reagan's economic program and leaders of the Joint Economic Committee expressed irritation that Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan refused to testify at a hearing on the unemployment situation.

Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., chairing the hearing, forecast a 9 percent unemployment rate before the current recession ends. "This administration has no policy for alleviating unemployment," he said.

Mitchell pointed to Donovan's statement, in his letter declining the invitation to appear before the panel, that the administration was confident unemployment insurance was functioning properly "to deal with the traditional increase which is being registered as the economy readjusts."

"What in the name of God is traditional about an 8 percent unemployment figure?" Mitchell shouted.

Bridges between people

Musical show is more than limelight

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "0000, EEEE, 00000, EEEEE."

The sound filled the backstage hallway in the College of Southern Idaho's gymnasium. In a brilliant green room, the Up With People cast was producing the eerie sounds as part of its pre-show warm-ups. Dressed in colors that would prevent them from ever being shot in the woods, they were getting fired up for the 1,200 or so Idahoans in the audience.

"All the little kids you sang for, all the acoustics, it all has to come together in your head and come out for those people out there," cast director Jeff Kinder tells his group.

And soon, the cast of 78 young people from 14 countries hit the stage and entertained the audience with music from the '20s to the '60s.

After interviewing some of the cast members at intermission, you get the idea that show business is not what is going on here.

"The show is secondary," said Chris Adkins of California. "It's the experience of traveling and meeting people. We use the show as a tool to build bridges between people."

Karla Ewerman, a Swedish cast member, echoed his reasoning. "I joined basically to travel, mostly to learn about other cultures," she said. Just as all their answers were beginning to sound the same, and I was beginning to think, "Maybe they are clones," I was able to talk with Francis Boyle, a Canadian. Boyle said she finished college and wanted to travel; so she joined Up With People. "It's a once-in-a-lifetime type thing," she said. Boyle also was the first member of the cast to admit that the Up-With-People-type music, labeled by cast members as "family" music, is not something she would listen to at home.

"With my mom, yeh," she said, laughing. Gayle Blatchley of Denver happened to join the conversation. "I wouldn't listen to this music," she said, also laughing while she admitted that she leans toward contemporary jazz in her tastes.

When she said she had a bachelor's degree in psychology and is thinking about going back to school for a master's degree in business administration, it was obvious that she was no "clone."

"The show is just a vehicle to travel all over the world," she said. She admitted that town after town, city after city, it sometimes gets monotonous and difficult to get up for the show.

But Blatchley said that two things make it worthwhile: community-involvement groups that give cast members an opportunity to work in the communities and living with families in the cities the cast visits.

"Some people are terrible, and you hope you never see them again," she said. "Some are fantastic."

She laughed when I asked one of the standard "dumb" questions: Do people join Up With People to break into show business?

"Ninety percent of us have never been on a stage before," she said. "If some one joins for the limelight, the staff makes sure they don't get it. It's not what it's all about."

She said that the management doesn't exercise any overpowering social control over the cast. But everyone knows that they are in the public eye.

"You can go out and drink," she said, "but you can't go out and get drunk."

She emphasized that Up With People is not sponsored by any religious group, nor does it work for any particular religious philosophy.

"I'm a Christian," Blatchley said, "but I'm not a holy roller."

Regan: Deficit in 1984

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan conceded Friday he may not be able to keep his campaign promise to balance the budget by 1984 and hinted tax increases may be on the horizon.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan went even farther, saying flatly that the administration has abandoned the goal of balancing the budget in 1984.

Regan blamed the predicted shortfalls through 1984 mainly on a combination of inflation falling faster than expected, which cuts into Treasury receipts, and interest rates that "have remained unusually high, much higher than history would have said they should have."

It was clear, Regan told a news conference, that Congress would not deliver the budget cuts to compensate for this. "Obviously we don't think they can be achieved because we said we are going to run deficits in both '82 and '83 and now we're saying even '84."

Regan predicted the 1984 budget would be "somewhere between" the 1981 deficit of just below $60 billion and a balanced budget.

"It's very difficult to come to grips with saying 'Will it be $20 (billion), will it be $0, will it be $0?'" Regan said. But, he said, "I will say less than this year, going toward a balanced budget."

The president said a balanced budget remained the administration's goal even if it cannot be achieved in 1984.

"I've never said anything but that it was a goal and the eventual goal, whether it comes then or whether it has to be delayed," the president told reporters before an hour and 45-minute meeting on budget strategy with Republican congressional leaders.

Talking to reporters later on his departure for New York, Regan said, "There may be some delay. We'll know that down the road. But that's still our goal and we think this program will achieve it."

Regan is expected to hold a news conference, probably Tuesday, to discuss current budget and economic problems.

Shelter home to give up state license

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The owners of the Magic Valley Living Center, a shelter home located six miles southwest of Twin Falls, will give up their state license, according to an agreement signed this week with the Department of Health and Welfare.

Owners Richard "Pat" and Cheryl Brown have agreed to sell, lease or rent, or otherwise dispose of the center to a "totally independent entity" by April 1.

The center houses about 30 elderly, or emotionally disturbed or mentally retarded residents who do not require medical care.

Tuesday's agreement came after seven years of controversy involving the center, which opened in 1972. An announced June 30 inspection of the center by the DHW found 30 "deficiencies," and the DHW recommended the center's license be revoked. A hearing on the license had been set for Tuesday, the day the agreement was granted.

Tuesday's agreement gives the Browns until April 1 to either relocate the center's residents or relinquish operations to another agency. Any sale, lease or other transfer must be approved by the DHW, and the department may disapprove of any sale

"There will be a day when we will tell our side of the story... I have no statement on this to make." — Cheryl Brown or transfer "only on the grounds that the new entity is not totally independent" or the proper rules have not been met.

Additionally, neither of the Browns will apply for a shelter-home license nor shall either of them engage in any form of care or business involving directly, or indirectly, shelter care" for 10 years.

Until they relinquish their license, the Browns are required to operate the center in compliance with DHW regulations. The department agreed not to attempt to remove the residents from the center "unless confronted with conditions there which justify an emergency action."

The Browns will continue to operate the Golden Age Care Center, at 290 Locust St. in Twin Falls. That home is managed by another couple who have not had "any major problems," said Jean Schoonover, a DHW licensing supervisor.

When called Friday by The Times-News, Richard Brown was not available for comment, and Cheryl Brown said, "I have no statement" to make to the paper. "There will be a day when we will tell our side of the story."

Tuesday's agreement includes a provision that the DHW will not initiate any contact with the news media concerning the agreement or the circumstances leading to it.

DHW attorney Stan Voytes, who helped draft the agreement, was not available for comment Friday.

Dr. Edward Gallagher, a state health officer who signed the agreement but who said he did not directly help in its drafting, said the news-media provision "wasn't something we requested be included, but it was something we could agree to."

He said the provision may reflect the fact that the Browns wished to maintain good "community relations," since they may be operating the facility until April.

He said agreement came after "an extended period of legal negotiations."

The agreement also stipulates that nothing in it "shall be construed to be an admission of guilt or liability, or violation of any rules or regulations by any person."

The infractions found in the June 30 inspection led the department to initiate the license-revoking procedures. A hearing was set for September and continued to Nov. 3.

Schoonover said the inspectors found inadequate food, unsanitary conditions, and inadequate supervision. There was no indication that a smoke detector and fire alarm system, found to be not working in a May 1980 inspection, had been tested to ensure it was working, she said. In addition, the survey said medications were stored improperly and medication records were not kept.

She said the Browns were away at the time of the inspection, and the only supervisor was the center's cook, who was also baby-sitting her 2-year-old child.

The Browns were informed in writing in July of the infractions found, and they responded in October, Schoonover said.

She said Brown admitted he had used "poor judgment" in putting the cook in charge, and that she had not followed instructions on food preparation. He said she had been replaced and proper supervision would be maintained.

Schoonover said Brown responded to the medication complaints by saying only that one bottle of cough syrup was stored improperly and medication

President supports voting act

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sending a positive signal to black voters, President Reagan announced Friday he will back — with reservations — a 10-year extension of the landmark 1965 Voting Rights Act.

A key enforcement provision of the act will expire next year unless it is extended by Congress. Black leaders have been pressing Reagan to support extension of the law, regarded as one of the nation's most effective pieces of civil rights legislation.

Reagan said he believes states that have complied with the act should be given an opportunity to "bail out" or become exempt from its special requirements.

"Toward that end, I will support amendments which incorporate reasonable 'bail-out' provisions for states and other political subdivisions," he said in a statement.

Under current procedure, called "preclearance," a jurisdiction covered by the act must obtain prior federal approval of any voting change — even moving a voting location — to ensure it has no discriminatory purpose or effect.

The jurisdictions covered are Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Virginia, Alaska, Arizona, Texas, and parts of California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Hawaii, Idaho, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, South Dakota and Wyoming.

Reagan also said he supports keeping a bilingual ballot provision currently in the law.

Civil rights groups expressed disappointment with Reagan's less-than-wholehearted support of the act.

"We consider the president's position to be against the interests of the minority community," said Lani Guinier, attorney for the NAACP Legal Defense Fund.

Natural gas decontrol raises prices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The annual natural gas bill of the average American household will jump from $383 to $826 when partial decontrol takes effect in 1985 unless Congress intervenes, a gas utility industry spokesman said Friday.

George Lawrence, president of the American Gas Association, told the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee that certain escalator clauses written into existing gas supply contracts would drive prices up suddenly and unjustifiably as soon as controls come off new gas Jan. 1, 1985.

Lawrence and Eugene Luntey, chairman of the trade group, called on Congress to outlaw the contract escalator clauses on gas tapped after 1977.

Congress' current timetable for partial decontrol by 1985 does not envision lifting controls on old gas, which may amount to about half of pipeline supplies. The gas utility and pipeline trade group favors keeping controls on the cheap, old gas indefinitely.

If Congress sticks to its current timetable, Lawrence said a typical annual residential gas bill will rise $243 — or 42 percent — in 1985 because of the effect of the escalator clauses. The bill would go from $583 in 1984 to $826 in 1985.

But if the clauses are voided by legislation, he said, bills will rise only $73 — or 13 percent — under partial decontrol.

Drunk driving action urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Organized foes of drunk driving joined those sorrowed by drunk driving deaths Friday in urging swift congressional action against a carnage that claims 28,000 lives a year.

The witnesses swarmed into a hearing by the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on courts to back a bill that would require states to impose stiff penalties for drunk driving or else lose their shares of a $200 million highway safety aid fund.

They also supported a proposal for President Reagan to create a "blue ribbon" commission to study the problem and make recommendations to states and localities.

The chief hearing witness was Cindi Lamb of Mount Airy, Md., whose 2-year-old daughter Laura has been paralyzed from the shoulders down since she was injured by a fourth-offender drunk driver.

"She still doesn't feel anything and is not going to," Mrs. Lamb said in her testimony on behalf of the California-based Mothers Against Drunk Drivers.

"I still have nightmares," she said. "I cry a lot. I still feel bad. I hurt inside. I'm begging you to move as swiftly as possible on this issue. I feel we need strong legislation — with teeth in it. Drunk driving is not a accident. It is a crime and should be treated as one."

Negotiators compromise on milk support prices

Saturday, November 7, 1981 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate negotiators broke an impasse in farm bill negotiations Friday to approve a compromise milk support program.

Their version was a little more costly than the version supported by President Reagan.

The compromise, costing $151 million more over four years than the $3 billion administration-backed Senate version, was achieved after conferees rejected eight previous proposals in three days of meetings.

The original difference between Senate and House bills was $165 million over four years.

Approval of a rice support program also added a bill higher costs to the bill, putting it $175 million over the $10.6 billion total the administration is willing to support. The conferees also tossed out a sunflower seed support program.

With a sugar controversy settled earlier with approval of a sugar price support program, tough decisions remained on grain and peanuts programs that will be taken up again Tuesday.

The dairy program would retain a milk support level of $13.10 per 100 pounds in fiscal year 1982 and put the support level at 70 percent of parity in 1983-85. That compares to an 80 percent support level over the past four years.

In the compromise, the support level could rise to 75 percent of parity in 1983-85 if government purchases fall to certain levels, but that was considered unlikely.

Working under threat of a presidential veto of an excessively expensive bill, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., came to the conference with a compromise, only to discover that the administration said his proposal would cost $244 million more than the Senate version, $83 million more than an earlier estimate.

Senate Agriculture Chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C., refused to go along with the extra $83 million, even though Rep. Thomas Harkin, D-Iowa, protested. "We're talking about $83 million based on some speculation of what's going to happen four years from now."

Dole finally broke the ice with a proposal that a 75 percent of parity dairy support level would go into effect if net anticipated government purchases of dairy products reach 2.69 billion pounds in fiscal year 1985.

The trigger was just 100 million pounds less than the 2.7 billion pound total the administration had estimated would prompt the extra $83 million cost.

The dairy program is in the spotlight this year because overproduction has pushed up government purchases of surplus dairy market prices at the support level. The net cost of the program was nearly $2 billion in fiscal year 1981.

Care home sought Retarded may get local facility

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Boise-based agency is seeking to develop and run a residential, medical-care facility in the Twin Falls area for severely retarded adults.

Gem State Homes Inc. has applied for a certificate of need to develop an intermediate-care facility for developmentally disabled adults.

Such facilities, called ICF-MRs, provide medical care as well as shelter, and they include educational and recreational programs and rehabilitation services. ICF-MR residents are generally less functional than those living in shelter-care homes.

Gem State Homes, a non-profit corporation, runs two ICF-MR facilities in Ada County and two in Canyon County.

Administrator Jerry Fowler of Meridian, who co-founded Gem State Homes 18 months ago, said he is looking for a building in either Twin Falls city or county to renovate into an eight- to 12-bed facility.

He said a location tentatively has been chosen outside the city limits, but a final decision has not been made. The cost of the facility has been set at $250,970.

The Region IV Sub-area Advisory Council of the Idaho Health Systems Agency will meet Nov. 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the Twin Falls County Judicial Building, Courtroom No. 4, to review the proposal. This review is the first step in the 90-day certificate-of-need process.

Persons wishing to testify at the hearing must notify the IHSA in writing by Nov. 21 of their intent and include a description of their testimony, exhibits or other material to be presented. If no such requests are received, the public will not be allowed to testify. However, the review will be open to the public. The IHSA's address is: Box 8686, Boise.

The executive committee of the IHSA will review the project on Dec. 17, and its recommendations will be submitted to the Idaho Health Facilities Review board for a final decision.

The state has about 14 ICF-MR centers but none in the Magic Valley area, according to the Department of Health and Welfare.

Fowler and his partner, Martin Landholm, are former DHW employees who left the department to form a non-profit corporation to provide residential facilities for the mentally and physically handicapped. Fowler has a master's degree in social work; Landholm has a master's degree in recreation administration.

Fowler said they became interested in starting a Twin Falls center when they received several referrals from this area.

He said the Twin Falls center would provide a full range of programs for

Mayor says subsidized apartments needed

Kimberly's senior citizen complex opens for public view

KIMBERLY — Low-cost housing that features such things as passive solar heat and glass-enclosed garden patios attracted wide interest Friday when the new senior-citizen housing facility in Kimberly was opened to the public.

The project's 24 rental units are designed for elderly singles or couples. Each unit is ground level, with one bedroom, living room, dining and kitchen area, and a bath.

There also is a community recreation building, where residents may gather or entertain parties, laundry facilities, a paved parking lot and landscaping.

Although keys will not be available to the new residents until later this week, all 24 units have been rented, and Mrs. Guy Walker, the rental manager, said there is a waiting list. Moving-in day is set for Nov. 15, delayed somewhat because the draperies have not been hung.

Mayor Rosa Lea Whitehead praised the new facility as "something we have needed for a long time" and something the community can be proud of.

She said it is the only apartment complex in Kimberly and the only subsidized housing.

Efforts to build the facility began four to five years ago. Whitehead said, when a group of senior citizens began planning for low-cost housing in the community.

The construction, which cost about $600,000, began in May. It was built by G & L Enterprises of Boise, a subsidiary of A W B Industries of Boise, and it operates about 100 similar units in other Idaho communities, including Rupert, Mountain Home, Hagerman and Buhl.

Located at Spruce Street and Center Street West, the facility is about six blocks from the town's business district, and it will be served by the senior-citizens bus.

"We have a lot of residents in Kimberly who badly needed this housing," Whitehead said. "There is very little rental property at a reasonable rate in Kimberly. One lady was living in a house with holes in the floor and broken plumbing fixtures, which was all she could find or afford to rent. These people can qualify for the housing."

The project was built with Farmers Home Administration funding and rental subsidies provided by the federal Housing and Urban Development Department.

Court hears 'fishy' kidnap case

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Supreme Court heard arguments Friday on an insurance company's request for a ruling to void its liability in a case involving refrigerated cargo that was destroyed when a truck driver was abducted.

At stake is roughly $65,000 worth of frozen fish that spoiled when the truck's refrigeration unit ran out of fuel during the driver's eight-day absence.

The insurance company, The St. Paul Property and Liability Insurance Companies, maintains its policy, issued to Clark Transportation, did not cover such types of losses.

Fifth District Court Judge Theron Ward had ruled otherwise, however. That decision was the subject of the appeal heard Friday.

The case was one of 15 appeals argued before the high court in Twin Falls this week. The five Supreme Court justices concluded their Twin Falls term Friday, and they will return to Boise to deliberate the appeals before issuing decisions later.

The insurance company's appeal stems from the Sept. 4, 1978, abduction of truck driver Russell Cooper at a restaurant near Victorville, Calif. Cooper, an employee of Clark Transportation, was driving a cargo of frozen fish from Buhl to Los Angeles.

According to court records, his unidentified abductors held Cooper to the trunk of a car. Meanwhile, the truck was left abandoned.

When he was later freed, Cooper found the truck's refrigeration unit had run out of fuel and the fish had spoiled.

Clark Transportation attempted to recover its losses through the insurance company, and in a ruling issued on Nov. 23, 1979, Ward found that the insurance company was liable for the loss.

In that ruling, Ward ruled that the policy was ambiguous, and as such, the benefit of the doubt should be applied in favor of the insured.

Ward also based his ruling on the view that abduction of the driver constituted theft.

But St. Paul lawyer J. Walter Sinclair argued that Ward's ruling was in error.

The insurance policy was not ambiguous, he said, adding that specific, rather than blanket coverage, was provided by the policy purchased by the trucking company. Losses due to spoilage were not covered by the policy, he said.

Sinclair also took exception to Ward's determination that the abduction came under the broad definition of theft.

In order for a theft to be committed, someone must take personal property with the intent to permanently defraud its owner and convert that property to other uses, Sinclair said.

Under that definition, no theft occurred in this instance, he said.

But Clark lawyer John Hepworth argued that the strict definition applied more to the term of larceny than the popular understanding of theft.

"My clients didn't have the advantage of law-school training," he said, saying that his clients' intention in purchasing the insurance was to obtain cargo coverage.

"When you separate the driver from the cargo, you have removed possession of the cargo from the truck just as effectively as if you took the truck," Hepworth said.

He also defended Ward's ruling concerning the ambiguity of the insurance policy, arguing that the policy neither excluded nor included provisions for coverage in such situations.

And he argued that the insurance company was relying on technical language to avoid honoring its obligation. Saying that insurance policies are not negotiated contracts, the Twin Falls lawyer argued that the insured parties are virtually at the mercy of the insurance company.

"The insurance company giveth and taketh away," he quipped. "The insurance company giveth nothing and chargeth lots."

3 police cars damaged by fleeing race driver

Rupert area chase like 'Smokey and the Bandit'

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minidoka County sheriff's Deputy David Constantineau was patrolling on Idaho 24, south of Rupert, late Wednesday night when he was passed by a sports car, moving at a speed he estimated to be in excess of 130 mph.

"This brown Trans-Am blew by me. I don't know how fast. Must have been 130," Constantineau said. "He had it touched-out. I don't know what that thing will do, but it must have been in excess of 110."

Constantineau took pursuit and began a chase he said reminded him of "Smokey and the Bandit." It zigzagged over the roads south of Rupert and through the city itself, and ended with three police cars damaged.

After Constantineau began pursuit, he radioed ahead for assistance from Rupert city police. Moments later, Sgt. Kendall Warr's patrol car was struck when the sports car overshot a turn onto county road 100 South, where Warr was waiting.

Constantineau continued pursuit down the roads south of Rupert, with speeds often hitting 90 to 100 mph, he said, including a whirlwind tour of a subdivision off 100 South. But the deputy gradually closed the distance between his cruiser and the fleeing black vehicle.

"We go through some extensive training at the academy," Constantineau said. "He may beat us on a dirt track, but he's not going to beat us on the roads."

When the chase entered the city limits, police were able to close in on the vehicle. The fleeing driver entered 43 Street, only to find the way blocked by Officer John Fisher. The Trans-Am did a 180-degree turn and headed back the way it came, but the driver found a determined Constantineau blocking his escape.

Considering the vehicles already damaged and the danger to the people involved, Constantineau said he decided the chase had to end. He maneuvered his patrol car into position for a game of "chicken." The Trans-Am braked before colliding head-on into the sheriff's car.

The deputy leaped from his car and pulled his revolver. When he attempted to pull the Trans-Am's passenger door open, the car shot backwards, striking Fisher's vehicle, then shifted and pulled out. Constantineau unsuccessfully attempted to shoot out a tire on the escaping vehicle.

"He was ripping rubber by then," he said. "I couldn't see for the gravel and dust, but I did put one through the rim."

By the time Constantineau had gotten behind the wheel of his car again, the Trans-Am was out of sight. He learned later that the vehicle had gone down South Fifth Street, a dead-end street.

According to Constantineau, the car jumped the abutment at the end of the street, snapping a guy wire on a telephone pole. The vehicle crossed through a field and eventually ended back on 100 South.

The driver pulled into a driveway off 100 South and shut off his lights and engine. However, an alert motorist, who had been a witness to part of the chase, recognized the vehicle and reported it to Cpl. Delon Jones of the Idaho State Police, who was in the area.

Gaylon Kidd, 38, of 300 S. 475 W., Rupert, was arrested and charged with running three stop signs, one count of reckless driving and three counts of hit-and-run. Constantineau said there also is a felony charge of malicious destruction of property pending.

According to the deputy, Kidd, the owner of Gaylon's Autobody, 709 Second St. S., is also a stock-car driver. Kidd was released on his own recognizance and will be arraigned in Minidoka County Magistrate's Court on Monday.

The damage to the three police cars involved in the chase was estimated at more than $2,500.

Q. What's "narrowcasting"?

A. A term to distinguish it from broadcasting. It's usually used to identify broadcasts of a limited nature for special interest groups. Language lessons, that sort of thing. Credit for coinage of that one goes to a one-time director of the BBC-TV, Sir Hugh Weddon.

Q. How come the electric eel doesn't electrocute itself?
A. Static tissue around its vitals evidently insulate it. About 40 percent of the eel is its power plant. When it discharges, its head becomes positive, its tail negative. The flow of electricity through the water around it stuns its prey. Takes a short while after it discharges to reload. South American natives rely on this fact. At a stream they want to ford, they run a horse across first. Any eels therein discharge against the horse's legs. And the humans then cross before the eels can power up again.

MR. MANVILLE

Remember the late Tommy Manville, married 13 times? He used a recorder to answer his telephone. His message said: "Mr. Manville is out. He'll return shortly. Please leave your name and the reason for your call. If you're one of Mr. Manville's ex-wives, don't bother to leave a message."

What kind of animal is a swift? Your answer depends on your line of work, maybe. An ornithologist says it's a bird. As do most of us. But a herpetologist says it's a lizard. A mammalogist says it's a fox. And an entomologist says it's a moth.

British television is engineered to speed things up slightly. A 100-minute American movie will run 96 minutes in England.

There was a time in The Netherlands when you needed a doctor's prescription to buy a loaf of bread.

Navy vows drug crackdown

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The Navy is no longer accepting its drug problem as a reflection of society and vows to eliminate abuses through tougher enforcement, a Navy spokesman said Friday.

Cmdr. Ken Pease, a spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet, said an additional 500 officers and enlisted men are being added to enforcement, monitoring and education duties to combat drug abuse.

More than 400 of the additional personnel have been assigned to enforcement and detection duties, he said. Until recently, the Navy had concentrated its fight on education and rehabilitation.

"Before, we thought it something that could be done through rehabilitation," Pease said. "And now we've found that's not the way to go. Our attitude has not changed. What has changed is our method of eliminating it."

In the past, the Navy has excused its drug problem as being endemic to society, noting that its personnel comes from a society that tolerates drugs.

"I think the Navy has found it cannot function as another phase of society," Pease said. "We have to be prepared to go to war. Drug abuse cannot be tolerated in a war machine, and that's what we're going to do."

Pease said the number of drug-detection units aboard ships would be increased from 78 to 200; another 715 narcotics agents are being added to the Naval Investigative Service; and each of the Navy's nine major commands would get a high-level staff officer whose sole duty would be prevention of drug and alcohol abuse.

He said the Navy would no longer tolerate drug abuse in any form, and "our goal is to reduce it to zero."

While Navy officials publicly state that their view of the drug problem has changed because of ongoing studies, they privately admit that publicly over drug abuse had a lot to do with stepping up enforcement.

The Navy's drug problems drew widespread attention when a congressional subcommittee reported that 400 copies of six of 14 men killed in a plane crash last May aboard the nuclear carrier USS Nimitz showed they had used drugs within a 30-day period prior to the mishap.

Shortly after the revelation, Adm. Thomas B. Hayward, Chief of Naval Operations, announced a crackdown on drug abuse, although specific actions were not defined until a memorandum circulated among Navy commands in late October.

Blames Reagan policy

O'Neill: Recession is deliberate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Speaker Thomas O'Neill told business leaders Friday the current recession is a "deliberate and conscious policy" of the Reagan administration.

In remarks prepared for the Fordham Business Conference in New York City, O'Neill said, "The economic fate of the greatest democracy in the history of the world depends on a novel, unproven theory called 'supply side' economics."

"It's time for the president to face facts," he said, pointing to the administration's Friday announcement of an 8 percent unemployment rate in October — the highest in five years.

"This may be a 'slight' recession to President Reagan," O'Neill said. "But to the guy out of work, it is a personal disaster."

"This recession is a deliberate and conscious policy of this administration," he said.

The speaker said Democrats will propose a plan in early 1982 to lower interest rates and produce new jobs, although he did not specify what the "reasonable, modest and flexible" program would include.

Citing recent dismal statistics for housing construction, new car sales and farm income, O'Neill said, "The Reagan administration dares to call this a 'new beginning.'" — the phrase President Reagan coined for his economic policies.

He cited the administration's tight money policy as the "cause of high interest rates and said the recently approved $749 billion tax cut "has jeopardized the very fiscal stability of this nation's government as well as threatening the funding for national defense, Social Security and other vital governmental activities."

Hussein condemns Camp David

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — King Hussein of Jordan, appealed again Friday for a homeland for the Palestinians, saying there would be no peace in the Middle East without it.

Hussein, speaking before the World Affairs Council, also said the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was caused by Sadat's breaking of Arab unity.

During the speech, about 45 demonstrators saying they represented the Palestine Liberation Organization gathered outside the hotel chanting anti-Hussein slogans that included, "Hussein is a puppet of the CIA."

Hussein condemned the Camp David agreement as a sellout of the principles that the Arab nations had demanded for the Palestinians for many years.

He said that before Sadat went to Camp David he had exchanged letters with the Egyptian president assuring him of support and Sadat "said that we were in agreement on these principles. As is now well known, a very different kind of agreement emerged from the Camp David conference, an agreement profoundly at variance with... the assurances I had been given."

"Israeli transgression and arrogance, together with all the factors which caused the late President Sadat to deviate from his set course outlined

Loose nuclear talk concerns Europeans

VENICE, Italy (UPI) — European defense experts expressed concern Friday over Secretary of State Alexander Haig's mention of a "demonstrative" nuclear blast and the public U.S. debate on the possibility of nuclear war.

"Such talk only alarms people, especially Europeans, and tells the Russians what we are going to do," said Federico Sensi, Italy's ambassador to NATO.

"We should always be thinking about these things but we should not talk about them so much in public."

Sensi spoke at a two-day symposium on North Atlantic Treaty Organization defense strategy. The conference, on a heavily guarded island in the Venice lagoon, was organized by the Atlantic Treaty Association of Italy.

In his speech, Sensi did not mention Haig's remarks but they were a central topic of private discussion among defense experts at the conference.

Haig told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday that NATO had "contingency plans to fire

Radical scorns her arrest, raid

NEW YORK (UPI) — Radical Cynthia Boston, seized by a small army of police as a suspect in a terrorist raid on a Brink's armed car, denounced her arrest Friday as an example of "ruthless fascism."

The 33-year-old black separatist was released Thursday for lack of evidence to connect her to the Brink's attack in a New York City suburb in which two policemen and a security guard were killed. Four radicals are being held in the Oct. 20 attack.

Raising her fist in a militant salute, Ms. Boston told a Harlem news conference, "My arrest was a conspiracy on the part of terrorist forces of the U.S. government."

The former information minister of a black separatist group called the Republic of New Afrika, Ms. Boston declared:

"My arrest and prosecution were an ironic, hysterical charade. It is clear to us that this is a witch hunt, and not only a witch hunt aimed at me. It is an attempt to liquidate our forces, to scatter our forces, to drive people underground."

Schools close as voters reject levy

ESTACADA, Ore. (UPI) — What people once thought could never happen, has happened. For lack of money, the Estacada schools closed.

"I've been here 10 years, and I took it as a kick in the teeth from the community. I feel like this town has given up on me, and I'm ready to give up on this town," said student Mike Hatten.

For the fourth time, local voters rejected a proposed tax levy Tuesday needed to keep the Estacada School District open.

It was the first school closure in Oregon since 1976 when, because of levy failures, schools in Eagle Point, North Bend and South Lane were shut down.

"If other districts could see this, they wouldn't want to go through with it," said state Superintendent of Public Schools Verne Duncan, after meeting with Estacada officials.

Thursday predicted as next shuttle launch date

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI)—The space shuttle Columbia, grounded by clogged oil jets in two of its three hydraulic system engines, probably will be cleared for launch next Thursday, a spacecraft engineering chief said Friday.

Herace Lamberth, chief of fluid systems at the Kennedy Space Center, said he believes the problem was a gearbox wax buildup caused by a leakage of hydrazine fuel into the lubrication oil. It tests show that is the case. Lamberth said, astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly will be given the go-ahead to fly the shuttle next week on its unprecedented return to orbit. A decision was expected by late today.

Lamberth said analysis of samples taken from the two auxiliary power units that drive pumps for the spacecraft's hydraulic system would be available by early today.

Launch director George Page said earlier that Wednesday was the earliest possible date for the mission that already is six weeks behind its original schedule.

But after more evaluation of the problem, Lamberth said, "I think Wednesday's probably out unless we're awfully lucky. I think Thursday is much more probable."

If the contamination is not the wax substance produced by the mixture of some fuel in the lubrication oil, then Lamberth said the launch likely would be delayed into the week of Nov. 15.

"If it turns out to be wax that we're expecting it to be, our plans are to go in, install a new filter, then flush about four gallons through the system," he said.

Lamberth said there appeared to be no reason to replace the two auxiliary power units - APU - that had the dirty oil. He said that flushing the system and installing new filters should do the job.

"We feel if the contamination is the type of wax contamination that we expect when hydrazine and lube oil mix, we feel changing the fluid and changing the filter is going to reduce the contamination down to such a level that it will support one mission," he said.

CHEV S-10

A NEW-SIZE HIGH-MILEAGE PICKUP

It's here! The incredible Chevy S-10. And you've never seen anything quite like it. It's longer than the imports, smaller than a full-size pickup. It has a roomy cab, a smooth, car-like ride and available V-6 power for twice the towing power of any import pickup. But best of all S-10 has higher gas mileage ratings than any of the best-selling import trucks.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Most players in the Life Master Pairs stopped at four hearts and were happy when the bad trump break held them to five. A few bid to six and most went down one undoubled.

One West player could not stand properly. He doubled six hearts. South ran to six no trump. Now West wished he hadn't doubled six hearts. He passed and had to lead something. The jack of hearts looked pretty safe and he placed it on the table. It turned out to be a real mistake, while either a diamond or spade lead would have left declarer one trick short. The heart lead gave Harvard professor Rjard Zeckhauser a chance to give you a remarkable end play.

Dick won the lead in his hand and led his eight of hearts. He planned to duck if West ducked, but West played his 10 spot. Now Dick went after diamonds. The jack dropped so he cashed six diamonds and continued with dummy's ace and king of spades to come down to a three card ending. His three cards were king-seven of hearts and king of clubs. West had to blast his ace of clubs in order to keep a guard for his nine of hearts. Dick led a club from dummy. West took his ace, but had to give declarer the last two tricks with his two hearts.
