

Coming winter cold may take high toll among Americans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The cold may kill more than 450 Americans this winter, two government agencies warned Sunday.

At the same time, a senior citizens' group urged the nation's elderly to be wary of winter weather.

The Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Federal Emergency Management Agency warned their estimate, based on steadily rising statistical averages, is higher than the death tolls for hurricanes, tornadoes and lightning.

The elderly are generally more susceptible to cold-related death, and the American Association of Retired Persons urged the nation's elderly to take the proper precautions to guard against hypothermia, a lowering of the body temperature that can come without warning to some.

In addition to dressing warmly, indoors or out, wearing a hat can be vital. Research shows anywhere between 25 percent and 65 percent of a body's heat can be lost by not wearing a hat, the AARP said.

"Winter, in spite of its stark beauty, is an extremely hazardous time of year," said Dr. Richard D. Hallgren, director of NOAA's National Weather Service. "Temperatures can drop abruptly, and a rising wind can accelerate a body's heat loss dangerously. Special safeguards are called for in winter."

He said when the weather service issues a winter storm watch "you should reconsider carefully whether you have to be out in the elements. And when the watch turns into a warning — meaning severe weather conditions are imminent — people should not go outside at all."

Cold-related accidents claimed 652 lives in 1978 and another 634 in 1977, or 10 percent of the 30-year total for cold-related deaths. Those winters and that of 1979, for which final figures have not been completed, were among the worst the nation has seen, both in terms of coldness and related death.

There has been a long-term upward trend in the number of cold-related fatalities. From 1949 to 1978, said the agencies, an average of 355 deaths were attributed to excessive cold. The average for the last 10 years has been 454 deaths annually.

The government figures are restricted to deaths due to exhaustion caused by low temperatures or exposure to the cold. They do not include other weather-related deaths, such as fatal heart attacks while shoveling snow, asphyxiation in stranded automobiles and other causes.

Medical analysts believe one reason the figures are rising is that as the nation's population gets older, it becomes more sensitive to the effects of cold.

Paul Kershner, associate director of both the National Retired Teachers Association and the American Association of Retired Persons, urged the elderly to take precautions against the cold and said the recommended thermostats be set during the winter for those over 60 at 68 degrees Fahrenheit or higher.

Noting that the elderly, particularly those with circulatory problems or those taking medications, are susceptible to hypothermia, Kershner said the two organizations next year will publish information on the identification, prevention and treatment of both hypothermia and hyperthermia, or heat stroke.

Shuttle fueling begins

Count toward launch attempt starts Tuesday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Technicians resumed space shuttle flight preparations Sunday by starting hydraulic engine refueling to give the rocket plane two opportunities for launch Thursday.

The gearboxes in two of the three onboard turbines that drive hydraulic pumps were cleaned and filled with fresh oil and filters to prevent the same kind of contamination trouble that interrupted the first launch try last Wednesday.

"We've finished all of our work with the auxiliary power units (the turbine engines) and are now in a position to start preparations for picking up the launch countdown again," said Kennedy Space Center spokesman Mark Hess.

Because of the hazards involved in the fueling operation, the launch pad was closed to all non-essential personnel and much of the ground crew had the day off.

The pace of activity will pick up Monday with completion of the fueling. The countdown is scheduled to begin Tuesday morning. Blastoff is scheduled for 5:30 a.m. MST Thursday. The launch period ends around noon that day.

Air Force forecasters said the outlook for launch day called for partly cloudy skies and intermittent rain.

If the flight is successful, the Columbia will become the first manned spacecraft to return to orbit — a key step in the nation's effort to develop a reusable space transportation system.

Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly, who sat for more than five hours in the Columbia waiting for a launch that never came Wednesday, spent the weekend with their families in Houston. The new launch date falls on Truly's 41st birthday.

Before pumping colorless and highly toxic hydrazine into the three tanks for the hydraulic turbines, technicians wearing protective suits topped off servicing carts at the launch pad. It was a slow, painstaking process because of the caustic nature of the fuel.

The refueling was necessary because some of the original hydrazine was consumed last week when the three engines were turned on for five minutes before the scheduled launch.

Twin Falls schools initiate evaluation Report cards for teachers

Teachers such as Karen Snow at Sawtooth Elementary school are periodically evaluated

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Do you remember report-card day? Your mouth was dry. Your little palms got slicky. You turned all your fears over and over in your head as you take it home to the folks or just leave for South America and try to avoid extradition?

With that in mind, you can sympathize with teachers. They have to face report-card day, too. Instead of A's, B's, C's, D's or the unspeakable, teachers in Twin Falls face a sophisticated, professional evaluation process. A committee of educators researched and developed it over a two-and-a-half year period, and there's a good chance that it's the only one of its kind in Idaho.

In most school systems, teacher evaluations are based on a rating-type evaluation form. Usually, a number on a scale of one to five or a descriptive word like "excellent," "good" or "needs improvement" is assigned to the teacher in the various areas of performance evaluated.

In Twin Falls, this traditional evaluation system has been changed. Instead of a rating system, Twin Falls uses what Gary Piller, the assistant superintendent, refers to as a performance-based evaluation form. The evaluation is designed to place an emphasis on improvement rather than finding fault.

"We wanted to do away with words like 'excellent' or 'superior.' What do they mean?" Piller asks. "If I tell you you're excellent in some area, what does it tell you? You need to know exactly what I mean. If (the evaluation form) forces me to tell you specifically what you need to do to improve."

On the Twin Falls' evaluation form, the supervisor describes the teacher's performance with short sentences incorporating "evaluation indicators." The indicators are verbs like "demonstrates," "implements," "relates," "involves" and "supports."

"With this instrument, I actually have to state where you are, and what you have to do to improve," Piller says.

Professional standards call for a formal classroom observation of non-tenured teachers twice every year and once every two years for tenured teachers. This is the minimum number mandated by state law.

But the total evaluation, Piller says, is based on much more than a couple of observations of a teacher working with his or her class.

"This form is not done just during the two periods," he says. "It's a continuous process."

According to Piller, supervisors, who are usually building principals, base their evaluations in part on the teacher's lesson plans, performance with students on the playground or in out-of-class activities and on the teacher's professionalism.

"I request the principals make at least three to four visits throughout the year," Piller says. However, only the formal observations are followed by an evaluation meeting with the teacher.

Frank Charlton, the principal of Twin Falls High School, served on the committee that developed the evaluation system, and as a principal, he put it to use last year. He finds it effective, and he says he really can't identify any serious disadvantages to the new system.

Committee opens hearings today on budget cuts' impact

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A congressional committee, faced with President Reagan's request for deeper spending cuts, begins hearings today to find out what the pared-back budget is doing to people.

"We know that millions of people — the majority of whom are black — have been affected by these cuts," said Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., chairman of the House subcommittee on "public assistance." "I think it's prudent that we assess what damage has already been done before we proceed with further reductions."

He said his panel, a branch of the Ways and Means Committee, plans to hold five public hearings before Christmas — all of them away from Washington.

Ford, Tennessee's only black congressman, said the public meetings will be held away from the capital so lawmakers will have "an opportunity to talk with the people directly, many of whom are not able to afford to come to Washington."

The subcommittee wants to find out how the budget cuts are affecting food stamp recipients, those who receive aid to families with dependent children, Medicaid, and others who depend on government assistance.

Congress has approved $35 billion in 1982 budget cuts, out of $48 billion originally sought by Reagan. In September, the president called for additional across-the-board reductions — another $13 billion — beyond what he first sought.

Ford said his hometown of Memphis will lose 25 percent of its federal funds as a result of the budget cuts and "it's obvious that we cannot absorb this loss of funds."

He said the hearings may show that the president and Congress acted too quickly and may have to restore some of the cut funds.

"Some of the legislation we acted so swiftly upon is having a severe impact," he said. "We want to see whether or not the states can pick up the slack. That's what we're trying to determine."

Consumers could end up footing bill High stakes in Alaska gas pipeline

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A few weeks ago, Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind., got a seemingly routine telephone call from Walter Mondale, a leader of Sharp's party and a man who might carry its presidential standard in 1984.

Many House Democrats have been hearing from the former vice president lately, but this was different. Unlike a recent breakfast meeting with Rep. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., and a telephone chat with Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., Mondale didn't talk politics.

He just wanted to know when Chairman Sharp would hold his House Energy and Commerce subcommittee hearings on the $40 billion Alaska gas pipeline waiver package sent Congress by President Reagan in mid-October.

Significant or not — and there is a sharp difference of opinion — the Mondale call is just one indication of the keen interest in the pipeline waiver. It also offers a rare glimpse of how lawmaking can get tangled in money and politics — a thicket of legislators and lobbyists, former legislators and former high government officials.

The waivers would create significant exceptions to a four-year-old law and presidential edict requiring the pipeline's construction be privately financed. If the project is not completed, the waivers permit much of the financial risk be shifted from owners and international bankers to U.S. gas customers.

Mondale always has favored the pipeline. But his interest in the waivers — apparently before they even reached Congress — raised eyebrows among House staffers and others who oppose the Reagan package as bad for consumers.

"He did talk to Phil Sharp," said Mike Berman, a Mondale spokesman at the former vice president's law firm of Winston and Strawn. "He did not consider that lobbying — just to check on the status of future hearings."

Congressional aide Shelley Fidler, speaking for Sharp, also confirmed the telephone call — but dismissed suggestions it was lobbying.

Some critics, however, see the call to Sharp as part of a sophisticated, subtle lobbying effort — in which political ties to key Democrats ranging from former party chairman to federal power commissioners loom larger than all economic arguments.

Mondale's new job as consultant to the main pipeline firm; his close ties to pipeline consortium chief John McMillan; and McMillan's recent $5,000 contribution to Mondale's presidential election committee all are being cited as circumstantial evidence by some waiver package critics.

McMillan gave the industry allowable gift of $5,000 to Mondale's new political action committee — the Committee for the Future of America — soon after April 30, the day Mondale became a consultant to the board of Northwest Energy Co. of Salt Lake City.

McMillan is a member of the Northwest Energy board and Northwest Energy is parent firm of McMillan's Northwest Alaska Pipeline Co.

Joe Valley, chief spokesman for Northwest Energy, said Mondale was hired to act as "a consultant on energy matters involving the state, federal and foreign governments."

"The image of the former vice president of the United States personally calling up the chairman of the subcommittee holding hearings on the waiver package just to find out when hearings are going to be held is ludicrous," said Edwin Rotshchild, director of the Energy Action consumer group.

"It's extraordinary for someone to try to pretend that's all that's involved," he said. "It's hardly truth, but it's even worse fiction."

More than a dozen prestigious law firms are associated with the lobbying effort. But Democratic members of the Energy and Commerce Committee, chaired by John Dingell, D-Mich., and two key House pipeline subcommittees — headed by Sharp and Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz. — say they've had little direct pressure.

It also is true that hardly a whisper of opposition has been voiced by key Democratic legislators who have been enthusiastic consumer champions.

The waiver package itself was prepared by former federal power commissioner Hugh Moody of the law firm of Akin, Gump, Strauss, Hauer and Feld.

Relic stolen from church

VENICE, Italy (UPI) — Two men forced their way into a church, held a priest and a honeymooning couple at gunpoint, broke open a glass-paned coffin containing the skeleton of the third century martyr St. Lucy and stole all the bones except the skull, police said Sunday.

Police said a man wearing a kerchief over his face pulled a gun on the Rev. Giuseppe Manzato late Saturday as he was closing a door of St. Geremia church. The man was followed by a masked accomplice and the two forced Manzato and a couple from southern Italy to lie on the floor.

Gains for Belgian Liberals

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — The opposition Liberal Party, which campaigned for tax and government spending cuts, scored solid gains in Belgian parliamentary voting Sunday but, the Socialists became the country's strongest party.

"It is a big setback," said outgoing Prime Minister Mark Eyskens, conceding that his Christian Democratic Party had been the biggest loser.

But with the vote dispersed among four major parties and at least 16 minor parties, there was no indication of how a new government would be formed.

Polish strikers adamant

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Defying appeals from both Solidarity and Poland's Communist government, activists leading an 18-day wildcat strike by 200,000 workers said Sunday they will not end the walkout until they win their demands.

The dispute in Zielona Gora, a province along the East German border, began as a bitter personal dispute between local union leaders and officials of a state farm.

The two sides resumed negotiations late Sunday for the first time in several days but broke off the talks later in the night without agreement.

Remains 'not Eva Braun'

LONDON (UPI) — The charred remains of a woman found in a Berlin bunker with Adolf Hitler were not those of his mistress Eva Braun as had been believed for more than three decades, the British Medical Association News Review reported.

Citing evidence gathered by a team of University of California scientists over a 10-year period, the journal reported that Braun's dental records did not match those of the woman whose body was found with Hitler's as the Russians advanced across Germany in 1945.

Official accounts said Hitler shot himself and Braun took poison on April 30, 1945, and the couple was cremated together in a funeral pyre in the Reich Chancellery garden as shellfire rained down around them.

Minidoka collision injures 4

RUPERT — Four persons were injured Sunday afternoon in a collision at a rural intersection south of Rupert.

Cpl. Leslie Stimpson of the Idaho State Police said the accident occurred about 1:45 p.m. two miles south of Rupert on Meridian Road at 200 South.

A westbound automobile driven by Audra Studer, 76, of Rupert, collided with a southbound pickup truck driven by Juan Leturioneo, 35, of Rupert. The pickup was owned by Cal Dredge of Rupert.

Stimpson said the Studer vehicle failed to yield at a stop sign and struck the Leturioneo vehicle in the right side. Following the crash, Studer's car traveled through a fence and into an irrigation ditch on the James O'Donnell farm.

Both drivers and two of their passengers were taken to Minidoka Memorial Hospital in Rupert for treatment.

Elsie Wilson, 78, of Rupert, a passenger in the Studer car, and Studer were hospitalized and listed in stable condition Sunday night. Leturioneo and his passenger, Emilio Gaddilo, 59, of Rupert, were treated in the emergency room and released, hospital officials said.

Francisco Arellano, 45, of Rupert, also a passenger in the pickup, was uninjured.

Stimpson was assisted by Minidoka County sheriff's officers. He said ambulances were called from both Rupert and Burley to take the injured to the hospital.

Historian Will Durant dies

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Will Durant, a major historian and philosopher who won a Pulitzer Prize with his recently deceased wife, Ariel, for a volume of their "Story of Civilization," died late Saturday at the age of 86.

A spokesman for Cedars-Sinai Hospital confirmed that Durant, died of heart failure about midnight MST Saturday, never having been told of the death of his wife, who died at her home Oct. 25 at the age of 83.

Durant was primarily a historian, but so erudite were his observations of the past and so astute his applications of the past to the present, he was regarded as a major philosopher of this century.

Mubarak will seek peace

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Hosni Mubarak vowed Sunday to strive for peace between Israel and the Arab world but said the Palestinians alone should have the final say in deciding what plan will replace "Israeli domination."

Mubarak said Egypt will remain committed to a policy of non-alignment and "positive neutrality" and will tilt neither toward the United States nor the Soviet Union, dealing with them both "without complexes."

Recovery foundations laid, Reagan staff chief declares

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The economy will be "vibrant and healthy" by next summer, building its recovery from recession on the foundation of President Reagan's budget and tax cuts, White House chief of staff James Baker said Sunday.

"The president believes that we have laid the foundation for economic recovery from recession on the foundation of a series of Reagan's promises and achievements to buttress his view."

Appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," Baker noted the Reagan "supply-side" economic program has been in effect for only about 40 days and said "most people are willing to give the president time" to see if his approach will work.

The key White House aide also said further cost-cutting measures — beyond the additional $13 billion in cuts Reagan asked for in September — will be proposed in the next few weeks in the so-called entitlement programs.

The changes, he said, will focus on "cuts at the margin — rounding off at the nearest dollar" of benefit checks. "You'll see a number of those changes," Baker said and predicted such minor moves can mean major savings in programs like Medicaid.

JAMES BAKER
...more cost cutting ahead

"Admittedly we see a recession today," Baker said, "but the foundation has been laid to recover from that and to see an economy that is productive and that is healthy by the end of next spring or the start of next summer."

Making his points in a measured voice, Baker said:

- "The president came into office promising the American people a tax cut and they've received the most substantial tax cut in history."
- "He promised... he would cut the growth of federal spending, and he's cut it in half."
- "He promised... he would cut regulations, government regulations, and he's cut those by one-third."
- "Inflation is down considerably... and while interest rates are too high, they are nevertheless trending in the right direction."
- "So the foundation is there," Baker said.

Notably absent from the recitation was Reagan's promise to balance the budget during his first term.

Amid reports last week that the deficit is ballooning and could reach $145 billion in a fiscal 1984 — Reagan's target year for matching Uncle Sam's revenues with expenditures — the president admitted the goal may not be reached.

But Reagan is standing firm on his plan to seek budget cuts beyond the $38 billion already approved for this year. The president also has rejected arguments that taxes should be hiked to make up some of the red ink.

forces you to write something," he says. "You get away from ratings. I really think it's an instrument that has the right philosophy for evaluation. Its objective is to improve instruction."

The form isn't as time consuming it seems, Charlton says, especially considering its purpose.

"You should spend a little time on a person who is working with young people."

Connie Hutchinson, the president of the Twin Falls Education Association and a fifth-grade teacher at Morn. Inside Elementary, says the association is satisfied with the evaluation system.

"We haven't had any problem with it," she says. However, she feels the process could be improved if the supervisor would meet with the teacher before the observations to allow the teacher to explain his or her objectives for that day.

"It would give them a better idea of what the teacher is trying to get across to the kids," she says. Hutchinson also expresses some concern that time constraints on elementary principals will make the "continuous" concept of the evaluation process difficult to maintain.

"The elementary principals have a tremendous workload," she says. "For them to be out there observing teachers constantly they wouldn't have time for anything else."

Parent-teacher conferences set

TWIN FALLS — All Twin Falls elementary schools will hold parent-teacher conferences this Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Nov. 11-13.

Elementary students will be dismissed from school at 1:15 p.m. each day. Their buses will run early schedules on those days.

There will be no morning or afternoon kindergarten classes held on these days.

All junior and senior high school students will follow a regular schedule.

U.S. pledges Egypt security umbrella

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration has given Egypt its secret assurance the United States will provide "a military umbrella against the Soviet Union" if Egypt attacks Libya, The Washington Post said Sunday.

But, quoting official sources, the Post said the administration stopped short of encouraging Egypt to attack its increasingly belligerent neighbor and no such clash is seen on the horizon.

Reagan administration spokesmen steered clear of the issue and an Egyptian spokesman in Cairo said, "This report is totally devoid of truth."

State Department spokesman David Nail declined to comment on the report.

And White House chief of staff James Baker refused to confirm or deny the accuracy of the story during an appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"I'm not in a position to comment on that report," Baker said. "It deals with matters that are very sensitive, options that are very sensitive, and it would not be productive to comment on that's a story from unnamed sources."

Secretary of State Alexander Haig has condemned Libyan leader Moammar Kadhafi as a leading sponsor of "international terrorism" and called for international action against him.

The Post said the U.S. commitment was given to Vice President Hosni Mubarak in Washington in meetings Oct. 2 and 3, the weekend before President "Anwar" Sadat was assassinated and Mubarak became president of Egypt.

The Ford administration was said to have made a similar secret commitment to Cairo in the fall of 1976, including a promise to block Soviet intervention if Egypt decided to invade Libya to oust Kadhafi.

But the Carter administration withdrew the assurance in 1977, the Post said.

Carter administration officials were concerned, it said, that the commitment would give too much latitude to "Sadat and leave" Washington with too little control over a potentially serious confrontation with the Soviets.

The Post said the Reagan administration retook the assurance to Mubarak in the context of Sadat's concern over a possible Libyan invasion of the Sudan.

CIA men sell secrets, ex-agent says

NEW YORK (UPI) — A fugitive former CIA agent, charged with supplying explosives and terrorist training to Libya, said Sunday he suspected some CIA operatives moonlight by selling secrets about U.S. military purchases to other nations.

Former agent Frank Terpil, who fled the United States last year, was tracked to Beirut, Lebanon, by CBS' "60 Minutes." He told interviewer Mike Wallace he believed some CIA agents were currently supplying "situation reports" with classified information about nations to commercial firms.

Murderer's fate up to Supreme Court

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The fate of Timothy Baldwin, sentenced to die in the electric chair this week for the robbery-murder of an 85-year-old woman, now is in the hands of the U.S. Supreme Court, which twice has refused to review his conviction.

Defense lawyers sent an express mail plea Saturday to Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. asking for more time to prepare a full appeal.

Unless a stay is granted, Baldwin will be moved Wednesday from Death Row to an isolated cell in the Death House. Baldwin is scheduled to die between midnight and 3 a.m. Saturday.

New Jersey election decision today

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — New Jersey's heart-stopping gubernatorial election will be officially decided today when county clerks turn in final vote totals, but a request for a recount appears to be a certainty.

The vote count, which fluctuated all week as discrepancies in the original county returns were reported to the state, was expected to be certified today by Secretary of State Donald Lan.

Republican millionaire businessman Thomas H. Kean was holding a slim 1,947-vote lead over Democratic Rep. James J. Florio in the latest unofficial returns.

Dakota prison calm after uprising

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (UPI) — South Dakota State Penitentiary Warden Herman Solem ordered a "cell to cell" shakedown Sunday following a brief uprising in which a handful of convicts armed with clubs, chains and homemade knives attacked and injured 11 guards Saturday.

Inmates will be placed on a restricted schedule until "we shake it all down cell to cell," said the warden, who would not elaborate on the nature of the restrictions.

Possible holdup lead fizzles in wake of raid

NEW YORK (UPI) — A raid on a plush Harlem social club Sunday netted $2 million in drugs, an arsenal of weapons and a bullet-scarred bank bag.

Police at first suspected the bank bag was linked to a Brink's holdup by a gang of radicals.

But a police spokesman said investigators concluded that a Nanuet National Bank money bag with a bullet hole in it seized in the raid was not connected to the $1.6 million Brink's armored car holdup in Nanuet, N.Y., Oct. 20.

Two Nyack, N.Y., police officers and a Brink's guard were slain in the holdup. The armored car carried money from the Nyack bank but officials said all the loot was recovered.

The FBI and local police tried to determine how the money bag wound up in the four-story Harlem brownstone where police arrested nine people.

Police raided the social club about 3 a.m. after receiving five phone calls from a woman who claimed she was being held hostage there.

Police seized $2 million in cocaine and heroin, slot machines and 10 weapons, including handguns, rifles, and shotguns. Police said the six women and three men arrested were charged with drug and weapons violations.

Police said about 17 pounds of heroin and cocaine had been broken up into several thousand bags for street sale.

Police Sgt. Dennis Dougherty said the brownstone contained a whirlpool bath, marble fireplaces and was "decorated with taste. There was expensive oak paneling. The whole place was very nice."

Dougherty said the woman who phoned police was not in the building. He said investigators speculated a rival drug dealer may have been behind the calls.

Eardley the only election surprise

Anyone looking for signals from last week's elections, both local and national, would be pretty hard pressed to come up with any trends.

No clear-cut indications emerged from the voting results in several states and mayoral races.

There also were few surprises. The Reagan administration lost a chance to tout support of White House philosophy when Democrat Charles Robb won the Virginia governor's race. Robb, Lyndon Baines Johnson's son-in-law, won despite Reagan's personal campaigning for Republican Marshall Coleman and thus broke a 16-year hold on the office by the GOP.

Not surprisingly, the Reagan forces quickly played down thoughts that the Virginia result was a reflection of voter dissatisfaction with the president's policies. It wouldn't have indicated anything, either way.

The cliffhanger award goes to the New Jersey governor's race, where the Republicans and Democrats virtually ended in a dead heat. Although the GOP appears to have won, the Democrats still haven't conceded and probably will file for a recount. On the Idaho scene, the ease with which Dick Eardley was re-elected mayor of Boise caught prognosticators with their polling pants down. Eardley, who last week must have been the guest on every interview show emanating out of Boise, calmly retook office by a landslide.

His victory certainly calls into question the validity of certain public opinion polls that showed challenger Kelly Pearce with the lead. Nobody, however, expected Pearce to be beaten so badly.

Obviously, Boiseans like what Eardley has been doing. The issue of the downtown redevelopment project might have been an overblown issue. Nonetheless, even Eardley couldn't explain the size of his margin.

In the Magic Valley, voters apparently liked the status quo. Although 10 new mayors were elected, only two incumbents were defeated.

A dozen incumbent councilmen were defeated, but that might be considered even less than a "normal" turnover rate.

The one big upset, one that turned on an issue, occurred in Hailey, where Mayor Emory Dietrich was turned out by Wordell Rainey. But the race was close, and the election did not put a City Council into office that provides a mandate on the growth and annexation issues. In other words, look for this controversy to continue.

In Twin Falls, election observers indicated that the re-election of incumbents Emery Petersen and Mary McClusky, plus the choice of newcomer John Peterson, was "what was expected." Council members will elect a new mayor from among themselves in January, but the trend definitely is "steady as she goes."

Anyone waiting for election-year pyrotechnics won't have long to wait. With next year being the gubernatorial election year in Idaho, the battle lines already have been drawn, and the candidates are feeling out their turf and setting up shop.

TIGHT MONEY AND HIGH INTEREST RATES ARE NECESSARY TO COMBAT INFLATION

BUT PEOPLE ARE SCREAMING THAT WE'RE REVIVING USURY...

STRANGLING BUSINESS AND DESTROYING THE AMERICAN DREAM!

WELL - YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING

A tax is a tax is a tax is a tax

Chicago Sun-Times

People at the White House have discovered that when more money goes out than comes in, the result is a deficit.

That's something the wife of any horseplayer could have told their economists, if they had just asked.

But apparently they didn't want to upset President Reagan's fascinating economic plan to cut taxes while spending $1.5 trillion for war devices and still balancing the budget.

This plan could conceivably work if the sick, the old, the blind, the crippled, the unemployed and the poor didn't require some money, even skimpy amounts.

However, these groups haven't indicated that they're going to help balance the budget by voluntarily jumping off a cliff or walking into the sea, so the White House is having a hard time juggling the numbers.

One obvious solution would be to spend less on war machines, since we already have so many, and the military won't know what to do with all the new ones Reagan wants to give them.

But Reagan is against that approach. Maybe his parents forgot to buy him toy soldiers for Christmas when he was a child. Or maybe because he spent World War II in Hollywood he wants to be a movie star that he's too old to fight. Whatever the reason, he's determined to make the Guinness Book of World Records under: "Most Millions Created by One President."

Another solution would be more cuts in government spending. But even Republican congressmen who think ketchup is a nutritious vegetable on children's lunch plates are wary about further cuts. They're afraid of how the voters will react to being told that the kids should try eating the lunch trays.

So some of Reagan's economic advisers have had to tell him that the only solution is to increase taxes.

Naturally this idea upset Reagan because he enjoyed the triumph of cutting taxes. If he has to tell people he wants them to give him the money he said they could keep, he's afraid they will begin calling him President Indian Giver.

So Reagan has reportedly told his people that he will not stand for a tax increase.

However, he said he might accept something called "revenue enhancement."

That's good news for those of us who don't like the idea of a tax increase, especially immediately following the promise of a tax decrease.

You say you don't know what a "revenue enhancement" is?

As I understand it, a "revenue enhancement" is when the government takes a certain amount of money from you to use for government spending.

I know that sounds like a tax increase, but I'm told it isn't because there is a big difference.

The big difference is that because it is called a "revenue enhancement," not a "tax increase," many people might not realize it is really a tax increase and won't be upset with Reagan.

This will permit him to say: "I'm proud to say that I have never increased taxes. I cut taxes. The most I ever asked for was a revenue enhancement."

That sounds a lot better than saying: "I'm proud to say that I have reduced taxes, although I had to increase taxes to replace the money I lost when I reduced taxes. I guess no program is perfect."

Some critics accuse the White House of just playing word games with us. U.S. Rep. Sidney Yates, for example, says it's something like the Pentagon referring to a potential nuclear war as an "all-out strategic exchange," because it sounds less unpleasant. Well, it does sound nicer. I'd much prefer being turned to vapor in an "all-out strategic exchange" than in a nuclear war. I hate war, but I'm not as set against strategic exchanges.

So I'm all for using the phrase "revenue enhancement" to describe the government taking our money.

Because it doesn't sound nearly as blunt and unfriendly as the phrase "tax increase," fewer people will be upset and unhappy. What more can we ask of a president than that he try to keep us happy?

If more people used pleasant euphemisms, we'd have less friction in our society.

For example, it wouldn't be as jarring to the nerves of a liquor store owner if someone with a gun said "This is a transference of funds — for my revenue enhancement" instead of "this is a stickup."

When the store owner called the police, he would say: "I'd like to report a transference of funds."

The police, instead of adding another robbery to the crime statistics, would make note of a transference of funds.

This would result in a dramatic decrease in the crime rate.

How much better a man might feel when he arrived home and found no supper, the phone disconnected and the electricity cut off. It's his wife said: "We have a negative cash flow."

That's more soothing than being told: "We're flat broke."

And when the bill collectors threaten to repossess your car and stereo, and the landlord wants to put you out in the street, don't say: "I ain't got no money."

Tell them: "I have a revenue shortfall."

The biggest problem some congressmen will have with a "revenue enhancement" is that many voters might not recognize that it isn't the same as a tax increase. And this could affect next year's congressional elections.

But congressmen shouldn't let this worry them. Even if they don't get enough votes, they will not have lost.

They'll just have been "re-elected."

Smith would apply politics to restrain courts

The Washington Post Company

WASHINGTON — William French Smith looks like an object d'art that might be advertised in the New Yorker magazine, a sleek figure called "The Attorney," manufactured by one of those companies that produce porcelain ovals and buffaloes.

If the ambiguities and controversies of jurisprudence, or anything else, roll the attorney general's siner life, the rolling does not mark the unlined face that is framed by silvery hair.

In a recent speech, Smith undertook to explicate the administration's determination to use selective litigation opportunities to lead the judiciary toward restraint regarding such matters as equal protection (racial busing and quotas), anti-trust, criminal justice and criteria of justifiability. But Smith's — or his speechwriter's — rhetoric undermined his reasoning. Rarely has inapposite prose done such a disservice to sensible principles.

Smith said that "the groundswell of conservatism evident by the 1980 election makes this an especially appropriate time" for the Justice Department to use litigation "to urge upon the courts more principled bases that would diminish judicial activism." He said "History teaches us that courts are not unaffected by major public change in political attitudes." He quoted Justice Benjamin Cardozo: "The great tides and currents which engulf the rest of men do not turn aside in their course and pass the judges by." He cited Mr. Dooley's observation about the Supreme Court following the election returns. He said that Mr. Dooley was explaining the Court's 1961 decision that constitutional protections do not automatically attach to territories annexed after the Spanish-American war. Smith said the Court in 1961 was "paralyzing the public opinion expressed in the election" of 1960.

Unfortunately, by noting and quoting these things complacently, even approvingly, Smith seemed to imply that courts should follow election returns, judges should be engulfed by political tides and currents, and jurisprudence should change as political attitudes change. Smith likes the most recent tides and currents, but there will be others, and his speech may one day be cited to suggest the propriety of following them, too.

Liberal judicial activism has not been rationalized as following election returns, but as a way of correcting the "infirmities" of representative institutions and the "infirmities" of elected officials by addressing "unmet social needs." But the liberal principle is a close cousin to the one that furks in Smith's speech: courts should take their hearings from social judgments and political outcomes.

But surely, conservative jurisprudence is not as result-oriented as liberal jurisprudence; it is not just a ruse for other results. It emphasizes process, and the duty of judges to render decisions controlled by the text, history and structure of the law.

Smith's ineluctable language allowed the New York Times to portray his speech as a "politicizing" attack on the idea of an "independent" judiciary. Ye Gods! The Times has been a persistent applauder of the activism that has led courts to legislate new rights and new hierarchies of rights; to promulgate bizarre biological doctrines to make four or 50 states' laws (abortion) and to seize the administration of school, prison and public housing systems. A sense of the ridiculous should prevent the Times from now waxing indignant about the thought that someone might "politicize" courts.

The political movement of which the Times is a supporter now depends heavily for the achievement of its ends on judges who understand "independence" as an absence of inhibitions inherent in the judicial function. They understand an "independent" judiciary as one engaged in the free-wheeling pursuit of social preferences. When political movements become anemic, and impotent at democratic illegal campaigns (as in the 1930s; liberals today), they resort to litigation to avoid legislation.

Smith merely wants to use litigation to make arguments for courts to enlarge their deference toward democratic branches of government. Granted, this is a jurisprudence that is apt to appeal to those who are, at any moment, politically confident. But its validity is unrelated to political vicissitudes.

Close analysis of speeches such as Smith's may be mistaken. Most senior officials have little time or inclination to write their own speeches; few have the ability to actually speak to, as opposed to read at, an audience. Unscripted, extemporaneous public speaking, in which the audience sees a person's mind at work, has been largely supplanted by a kind of public speaking in which the audience does not even hear the speaker's own words.

I note this not to excuse officials who deliver off-key speeches assembled by tone-deaf aides, but only to suggest a possible explanation for this fact: Smith's jurisprudence is as Mark Twain said of Wagner's music: better than it sounds.

Jordanian king denies pressure move

Monday, November 9, 1981 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-5

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jordan's King Hussein said Sunday he purchased a $200 million Soviet weapons system for less than half the cost of American missiles but denied his deal with Moscow was aimed at forcing Washington to be more sympathetic to his Middle East views.

The Jordanian monarch, who recently branded U.S. Middle East policy as "simplistic," said his meeting last week with President Reagan convinced him there is a new positive attitude in Washington toward the region.

"I found the mood different from that perceived in the recent past. There was an awareness of the importance of developments in our part of world," said Hussein, who was interviewed in Los Angeles on CBS' Face the Nation.

"My visit came at a crucial juncture, relating to our entire area... following a period when contact (between Jordan and the United States) was almost nonexistent," said the king, who described Reagan as "warm and with great integrity."

Hussein said he hoped Egypt, under President Hosni Mubarak, would soon return to the Arab fold after the period of isolation over its peace pact with Israel.

"I believe Egypt has a very important part to play in the future of the Arab world. I hope conditions permit Egypt to assume its position in the Arab family. I am not happy to see Egypt in isolation."

Asked if his recently concluded deal with the Soviet Union for a missile system was deliberately aimed at winning more attention from Washington, Hussein said: "That was not our intention. I doubt there will be a side effect."

Of the new Soviet weapons package, the king said: "The sum total is less than half the sum total of the Hawk missile batteries from the United States." He said the deal with Moscow cost around $200 million, compared with $450 million for the Hawk missiles.

Hussein added that some Soviet technicians would initially work on the system, but that it would later be taken over by Jordanians.

Asked if he still felt American policy toward the Middle East to be simplistic, Hussein replied: "When I said policies were simplistic, it was the impression you get in the region that solutions are very simple. There are threats of polarization among the Arabs and to our identity as a people."

"The president has given me the opportunity to talk of the past, and correct many misconceptions."

KING HUSSEIN ...likes new attitude

Ayatollah could step down soon

LONDON (UPI) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini may retire from active politics before the end of the year because of deteriorating health and fears Iran would face greater chaos if he is assassinated, the London Sunday Times said.

Quoting reports from Tehran, the paper said Khomeini, 81, has informed the nation's top leadership of his decision.

Sources close to Khomeini's entourage believe he plans to hand over his post as Iran's spiritual leader to Ayatollah Hossein Ali Montazeri before the third anniversary of the Islamic revolution next February, the Times said.

ROBERT STRAUSS ...'We're coming back'

Demo raps Reagan's 'disarray'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss said Sunday that although President Reagan retains personal popularity, his administration is in disarray over its defense, economic and foreign policy.

"Politically, I think that the president personally is probably doing very well," Strauss said on ABC's final "Issues and Answers" program. "And it's understandable. He's a likable, attractive man, an engaging man, a great communicator."

"But, I suspect that when you get past his personal political standing, his administration is having political problems... it's in a good deal of disarray," Strauss said.

Strauss said he backed Reagan on the need for a balanced budget. He said Reagan was forced to admit last week he will not achieve this goal by 1984 because he lacks a clear strategy.

"Wherever he's trying to go, he's trying to get there with divided politics. He has no clear idea of how to get there," Strauss said.

Strauss, who served in the Carter administration as a special envoy to the Middle East, trade ambassador and the president's inflation fighter, said the Reagan administration has provided "no clear signals" on further budget cuts and tax increases because it "doesn't know what it wants."

Budget director David Stockman is saying one thing on economic policy and Treasury Secretary Donald Regan another, Strauss said.

Strauss cited Republican as well as Democratic opposition to Reagan's defense policy and public as well as private differences on foreign policy between Secretary of State Alexander Haig, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and national security adviser Richard Allen.

Admitting that his own party is "going through a period of trauma" following its 1980 election reverses, Strauss said the Democrats have only a "very slight chance" of regaining control of the Senate at present.

But he pointed to Democrat Charles Robb's election last week as governor of Virginia and said, "We're coming back. We're making progress."

ABC will replace Issues and Answers program next Sunday with an hour-long program with David Brinkley as host.

Envoy cites close links

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Japanese and U.S. military have the best relationship in the world despite complaints by some Americans Japan is not doing enough for its own defense, Ambassador Mike Mansfield says.

Mansfield, in an interview in the latest edition of U.S. News & World Report, disagreed relations between the two countries are deteriorating because of differences over trade and defense policies.

"I don't believe they're going downhill. The relationship, if anything, is becoming more realistic," he said. "What we are seeing is a meeting of peoples on a more equal basis and a recognition of the fact that the future of the Pacific Basin depends upon the continued strengthening of the ties between Japan and the United States."

Mansfield said during the 1970s Japan "increased their defense expenditures at a rate of 8 percent a year."

What's what

Do you, too, find it difficult to believe the report by a Moscow correspondent that Soviet Union policemen assigned to vice squads are required to take their meals at their station houses where saltpeper is added to their food? The same dispatch says all vice assignments are temporary duty rotated among officers only for a few weeks each year.

In poetry, as Edgar Allan Poe's wife Virginia lay dying, she trembled with cold. No firewood, no fire. Poe draped their cloak over her. She trembled still. He put their cat on her breast to give her warmth.

Israeli Prime Minister Menchem Begin says the big blue telephone on his desk is for calls to God. Not expensive, he says. They're local.

HAIR DRYERS

Q. Which use the more hair dryers in gymnasium locker rooms, the boys or the girls?
A. It's even now, according to the researchers.

In newspapers, it's usually the headline writers in the sports departments who write the cleverest heads. Such was the consensus in a nationwide poll of city editors.

In 1776, only 20 percent of the newborn babies in this country lived to age 60. Now only 20 percent don't live that long.

The autotesters say it's a rare American-made car that can stand a five-mile-an-hour impact without considerable damage.

SIGNS

Do you heed such notices as "Keep Off the Grass" and "No Smoking"? Not all do. In the ladies loo of a pub in London is a smashed mirror. Next to it is an invitational sign: "The management thanks you in advance for not breaking this mirror."

Opined Nikita Khrushchev: "If you can't catch a bird of paradise, better take a wet hen." The late Mr. Khrushchev was a bit pessimistic. True, our Love and War man's files are crammed with data on bird-of-paradise hunters who bag wet hens. But a lot of wet-hen hunters bag birds-of-paradise, too.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Not a good day for outside activity, but fine for conferring with a business expert about the future. Relax at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): One you have known for a long time could inadvertently give you the wrong information; so depend on your own good judgment.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will act well in time of emergency, so direct the education along troubleshooting lines for best results. The latter part of life will be much better than the former. Don't neglect ethical training early in life.

Suicides arranged in hotel

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The elegant Four Seasons Cliff Hotel was the setting for what police believe to be a meticulously planned and executed murder-suicide pact between two older women and a middle-aged man.

"It looks like it was all planned," said the hotel's assistant manager, Veronica Davis. "They'd had their last cigarette, their last drink. Their bill was paid."

The dead were tentatively identified Sunday as Harriette Wolfers, 68, San Jose; Audrey A. Whittington, 58, Oakland; and Nestor Wolfers, 39, Las Vegas, Nev., thought to be Harriette Wolfers' son.

"It looks like a classic murder-suicide arrangement," said deputy coroner David LeNoue.

Their bodies were discovered in mid-afternoon Saturday, said Chap Riese, the hotel's assistant security director. They checked into the hotel last Tuesday and were believed to have died sometime between 11 p.m. Friday and 11 a.m. Saturday, he said.

"It was all very neat, very deliberate, with no mess," Riese said. "There were folded towels placed under each body to prevent bloodstains."

A brief note was found on a dresser. Its contents were not disclosed, but police said they were considering the deaths a result of a "suicide pact."

Royal birth 'surrogate'

BOSTON (UPI) — Stop the presses — Princess Diana is really a surrogate mother for a couple out west, and Al Haig wants to bomb Congress.

That was the Boston Herald American's version Sunday of the week's news in a satirical page along the lines of the old "That Was The Week That Was" television show. The newspaper printed tongue-in-cheek stories with the admonition "Everything on this page is make-believe. The real world is not anything like what these stories say. Except a little."

For example: "When Princess Diana of England gives birth in June, the child will not become heir to the British throne as reported earlier this week, but will instead become the adopted son of a Los Angeles couple who arranged 10 months ago to have Diana serve as a surrogate mother."

The adoptive mother, wife of an advertising executive who made the deal before the royal wedding, was quoted as saying "I hope the kid doesn't have big ears."

Dear Abby

Send terminally ill brief loving note

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: As we grow older, we are bound to have friends and relatives who become terminally ill. Sadly enough, because we don't know what to say, we sometimes ignore them.

Some of these friends and relatives may live far away, making visits impossible, but your conscience keeps gnawing at you, and you really want them to know that you're thinking about them.

You browse around in a card shop and what do you find? Cards that say, "Get well soon!" Or, "You'll be up and around in no time!" And, "Wishing you a speedy recovery!"

Such cheery messages are clearly inappropriate when you know, and they know (and worse yet, they know that you know) that they will NOT be "up and around in no time."

So, what can you say? It need not be a flowery, literary masterpiece in order to be effective.

Write a brief, sincere message to express your feelings:

"Dear Molly, George and I want you to know that you are in our thoughts and our prayers."
"We love you. — Melanie"

The above is from my new revised and updated booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." To obtain it, write to Abby: Letter Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250, and enclose $2 plus a long, stamped (37 cents) self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: Help! My mother-in-law thinks a married woman should worship her husband, family and home, and be a total slave.

If she hears that my husband and I hired a sitter so we could spend an evening out, she tells me we are too extravagant. If it's mentioned that my husband helped with the housework or children, she says it's the woman's job to take care of the house and kids.

When she sees me doing a crossword puzzle, painting or anything that's a hobby, she tells me that SHE never had time for that kind of foolishness, and I am a sorry excuse for a wife and mother.

All her children are grown. She's 55 — too young to be senile. I know she didn't have an easy life, and it bugs her to see me have it easier than she did. I think she needs counseling, but I'm not brave enough to suggest it to her.

I've tried telling her it's none of her business, but she says the welfare of her son and his children will always be her business!

What should I do? She lives near me and I can't avoid her.

— BUGGED IN CICERO
DEAR BUGGED: You can't change your mother-in-law. But you can try to develop a tougher hide and refuse to blow your top when she comes on with her meddling and piddowns. Don't argue. Be pleasant, cheerful and agreeable. And go right on doing as you please.

Six Murrell of the Idaho Fish & Game Department will be on hand Fri. from 2-4 P.M. to answer any questions on Wild Game.

Dr. Lamb

Woman anxious about pain

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M. D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 28-year old woman in general good health. I am writing to you because I don't want to bother my physician with these abstract symptoms.

But I do want to know if they are important. I have periodic abdominal pain that occurs about one inch to the left of my navel. This is a boring, gnawing pain but never acute.

It often wakes me up around midnight. Eating doesn't help and sometimes seems to make it worse. My stools are frequently a peculiar black color.

I feel as though I'd be wasting the doctor's time and don't really have a serious problem. If it is serious I'm not sure I want to know the truth either.

What do you suggest?
DEAR READER — I suggest a trip to the doctor. Your reaction is typical of many people who have health problems.

There definitely is some anxiety about the possibility of finding out something serious is wrong. So a person continues to be upset rather than face the issue. If you happen to have nothing wrong you'll feel 100 percent better by just finding that out. Patients often forget that one of the important roles of a doctor is making people feel better and sometimes that is accomplished by finding out that there is nothing serious and telling the patient so.

Now, your symptoms are not typical of a specific disease, mostly because the pain is not relieved from eating.

Otherwise I would suggest that you have an ulcer and you may have. I am sending you the Health Letter No. 15-10, Understanding Ulcers and Acidity. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N. Y. 10019.

Often ulcer symptoms are not typical. Pain that tends to wake a person up at night seldom is just nothing. It usually means that something is wrong that requires medical attention.

The black stools may mean that you are bleeding from an ulcer. Digested blood is usually black and tarry.

No one can tell what your problem is without a good examination but I would not simply disregard it. There is too much chance that it is related to an ulcer or other cause for bleeding to be ignored.

Road agency probe leads to charges

WALLACE (UPI) — Both felony and misdemeanor charges will probably be filed in connection with an investigation of alleged improprieties within Nez Perce County's road department.
John Cossel, special prosecutor heading the investigation, said charges probably will be filed by the end of this week.
Cossel declined to say who or how many persons will be named in the formal charges. But he said the investigators' full report dealing with all alleged improprieties — some against Nez Perce County commissioners Vera N. White and Robert Huddleston — will not be filed with the Second District Court for now.
The report, which Cossel now has, details the findings of state Department of Law Enforcement investigator Paul Johnson of Boise and others, including results of an investigative audit. Items on the report include investigation allegations that commissioners have accepted vacation trips paid for by companies which do business with the county, plus gifts or services from county employees.
The probe began in late May when Ms. White asked former Law Enforcement Director Kelly Pearce to look into problems in the road department.
Cossel said earlier that he would make the full report dealing with all allegations available to the public as soon as possible.

Clamp disrupts power in Boise

BOISE (UPI) — Electrical service to 2,050 northwest Boise homes and businesses was interrupted Saturday afternoon when a faulty clamp burned through a power line.
The power failure, which began at 2:40 p.m., lasted 24 minutes for 1,750 customers and an hour and 36 minutes for 300 customers whose supply could not be rerouted through different lines, said Idaho Power Co. spokesman Bob Brown.
The failure was caused by a malfunction of a hot clamp, a current conducting device that had been attached to the wire to hold it in place during construction of a new conductor on a pole, Brown said.

Police officer quits in Boise

BOISE (UPI) — Lt. Dick Maus, a 25-year veteran of the Boise Police Department, says he has resigned, effective the end of November.
Maus said he resigned because of the results of last Tuesday's election, in which Mayor Dick Eardley defeated Kelly Pearce and three other challengers to win a third term in office.
Maus, president of the Boise Local 486 of the International Brotherhood of Police Officers, and other union members had voted to endorse Pearce, former director of the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement.
Maus and Police Chief John Church have said they have had frequent clashes in the past several years. Church referred to Maus as an "arch-enemy" in an election night interview.

Youth improving

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A West Valley City boy who caught his hand and arm in a meat grinder improved from "very critical" to serious condition Sunday at St. Mark's Hospital.
Hospital officials upgraded the condition of Jerry G. Birch, 16, who was injured in an accident at the Granite School District Rehabilitation Center Friday. Sheriff's reports said the boy's hand and lower arm were nearly severed.

Larry Harms, Desert Sky Salvage owner, inspects some of the cars on his Wendell lot

Rusted bodies of ancient autos sit atop a flatbed truck awaiting an unknown future

Vehicles at the Desert Sky yard include this Ford V-8 pickup of middle 1930s vintage

Look back into time Auto salvage yard a museum of sorts

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

WENDELL — Driving north to Gooding on Idaho 46, an awesome sight strikes the eye. Carcasses of rusted car bodies lie scattered in the desert to the east.

Studebakers, Edsels, Cadillacs and Kaisers huddle in the ravines and on the tops of the brown rises. Literally thousands of disemboweled and twisted vehicles bear witness to the focus of America's greatest love affair — the automobile.

It's much more than a scrap metal heap. The Desert Sky Auto Salvage yard is a museum. The rolling brown hills are a graveyard of classic American automobiles.

The yard is also a time machine into the social history of 20th-century America.

It's impossible not to wonder whose hands spun the steering wheel of the '50 Ford convertible that lies faded and rusted, half-hidden by high grass. What were his thoughts? With the roof down, the Ford was obviously more than basic transportation. In its owner's eyes, it was style and beauty in motion.

As you move your hands over the curves of an old Chevrolet coupe's graceful roofline as it slopes down to the tattered rumble seat, you can sense the confident style of the young America that built and bought it. Running your eye over the rusty Chevy's lines is somehow similar to listening to an old recording of Glenn Miller's "String of Pearls."

You try to visualize what the coupe looked like when it first cruised down Main Avenue, perhaps reflecting the marquee lights of Twin Falls' Roxy Theater and Radio Rodeo Ballroom in its glistening paint job. Even the old trucks, with their rounded fenders and goggle-eyed stares, seem to have personality and class. An old Ford panel truck, its soft roof rotted away and tires flat, proudly displays its V-8 emblem on the grill and still exudes beagle-like dependability. Any contemplation of the former owners of the discarded vehicles eventually brings a cold shudder. You peer into the more horribly mangled wrecks, knowing that the owner and his beloved machine were separated only in death.

If you stumble through the cluttered hills of the yard long enough, you'll eventually meet the curators of the museum. Usually, they're bent over the wrenches, pulling parts off the dead vehicles to extend the life of functioning ones.

"Recycling is what it's all about," says Lester Brothers.

He and Chuck Galton appear to be torturing an old International truck with a cutting torch. Brothers explains the finer points of pricing the recycled and often vintage automobile parts.

"The main thing is supply and demand," he says. "The old saying is, 'The more they want it, the more it's worth.'"

Usually, the used parts are priced at about half of new ones, he says.

As he cuts off a door hinge, Brothers outlines the Desert Sky guarantee.

"If the parts don't work, they don't own 'em." The guarantee is good only until the time the part is put into use, he says, since there is no way of knowing how it might installed or abused.

Brothers, who has worked for Jerry Harms, the owner, since 1956, knows a good salvage yard.

"There's no yard in the United States that has as much of the old stuff as this one," he says, turning off his torch and stepping out of the scorched wreck. "We got lots and lots of cars."

And every one has a story hidden just under the rust.

Home of councilman target for burglars

TWIN FALLS — Nobody is immune.

That was the conclusion drawn Sunday by Twin Falls Councilman Chris Talkington after a burglary at his home.

Talkington, who serves as council's police commissioner, said he followed all of the burglary prevention measures recommended by police.

"We have the heavy-duty security locks on our doors. I tell the neighbors when we are leaving town, so we have our neighborhood-watch system," Talkington said.

He and his wife left town last week for a few days and returned Saturday to find that their home at 1224 Galena Dr. had been burglarized.

Talkington said the windows in his home had been washed recently, and some of the screens were not replaced. One window, without a screen, also was left unlatched, and the burglars found it, he said.

A handgun, valued at $500, was missing, and according to the police report, some jewelry items also were taken. The intruders dumped drawers on beds and left the house in a disorderly condition. Talkington said police still are investigating, and his wife has not determined how many jewelry items were taken.

An automobile burglary also was under investigation by Twin Falls police. Officers said a car, owned by Dianne Paylor of Twin Falls and parked at the Twin Falls Clinic, was entered and a purse taken.

Paylor told police her windshield was broken, and the purse was removed from inside the car. The estimated damage to the car at $175 and the value of the purse and its contents at $150. The theft occurred between 10:30 p.m. Friday and 7:30 a.m. Saturday.

Cycle mishap hurts 2

His passenger, Boyd Biggers, 28, stood up on the machine, and it went out of control and rolled over. The accident occurred about noon. Both men were treated and released at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Another Saturday traffic accident in Twin Falls resulted in minor injuries to one person and damage to four vehicles.

Police said a pickup, driven by Richard Thomas Ridinger, 18, of Twin Falls was traveling east in the 200 block of Addison Avenue West shortly after 10 p.m. Ridinger attempted to turn left and collided with an east-bound vehicle, driven by Dwight Eric Rarick, 17, of Castleford. 49ers stop Falcons for 7th straight victory

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers have done it again.
Free safety Dwight Hicks set up a key field goal with one interception and saved the game with another Sunday to combine with the passing of Joe Montana to help the San Francisco 49ers to a 17-14 victory over the Atlanta Falcons.

It was San Francisco's seventh straight victory, eighth of the year against two losses, and gave the 49ers a commanding three-game lead over Atlanta and Los Angeles in the NFC West with six games left to play.

Hicks' first interception led to a 48-yard field goal by Jay Wersching in the final seconds of the opening half to give San Francisco a 10-0 lead.

Then, in the closing seconds of the game, Hicks intercepted Steve Bartkowski a second time on a pass that might have gone for a touchdown and given the Falcons 21-17 victory. On the play, Hicks leaped up in front of the goal line, grabbed the ball in front of intended receiver

Junior Miller and ran the ball 20 yards to thwart Atlanta, which slipped to 5-5 and now faces an uphill fight for a playoff berth.

Montana threw 14 yards to Freddie Solomon for one touchdown and three yards to Charlie Young for another while running his season TD total to 14. Montana, the NFL's top-rated quarterback, completed 16 of 30 passes for 223 yards and was intercepted only once, and that when his intended receiver slipped and fell.

The more veteran Bartkowski completed 20 of 42 attempts for 236 yards but he was intercepted three times and that made the difference.

The Falcons got their points on a one-yard smash by William Andrews, the score coming with a little more than four minutes left in the third quarter and on a 25-yard pass from Bartkowski to Alfred Jackson with 1:34 remaining in the game.

The 49ers faced anxious moments in the final minute but their defense rose to the occasion, holding Atlanta to only 292 yards in total offense.

"Everything happened that could have happened," said San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh. "Atlanta is the most resourceful team we've seen, no question about it, but we were resourceful too. We held our own against top flight opposition the last three weeks and we've prevailed each time. It says a lot for our young players."

Falcons' Coach Leeman Bennett said the 49ers outplayed his team and deserved the victory.
"They did a good job on us. It's as simple as that."

The two interceptions gave Hicks seven for the season and 16 in his career. He has run back interceptions for 175 yards, a club record.
On his key save in the final minute, Hicks said the 49ers were fortunate that Bartkowski threw the ball where he did. On the play, the Atlanta quarterback had the option of going to two potential receivers on the outside or Miller up the middle.

"He (Bartkowski) was looking at Junior Miller," said Hicks. "He didn't see me."
Hicks' first interception helped set up Wersching's field goal in the closing seconds of the first half and gave the 49ers a 10-0 lead. The Falcons finally scored 30 minutes into the game when Andrews wound up a 47-yard, 16-play drive to cut the San Francisco lead to three points at 10-7.

In the opening minutes of the final quarter, Montana drove San Francisco 76 yards in 13 plays with Young grabbing a scoring pass for a 17-7 lead.

With the 49ers in a prevent defense late in the game, Bartkowski had his best throwing streak of the game, connecting on 4-of-5 attempts for 77 yards with the final 25 on Jackson's reception.

After that score, the Falcons tried an on-side kick three times — the first two nullified by off-side penalties by both San Francisco and Atlanta — and then the Falcons made it work on the third attempt when Kenny Johnson fell on the ball at the 49ers' 42.

Seattle finds big play

Zorn, Seahawks upset Pittsburgh

SEATTLE (UPI) — Jim Zorn, who was in Coach Jack Patra's doghouse a week ago, bounced back Sunday to put the big play back in what has been a sluggish Seattle offense.

Zorn connected with fullback Dan Doornink on a 44-yard TD pass and set up a pair of fourth-quarter scores with long completions to rally the Seahawks to a 24-21 upset of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

After enjoying a 21-3 second-period lead and celebrating a new milestone for veteran running back Franco Harris, the Steelers fell asleep. They eventually had a chance to send the game into overtime when David Trout missed a 22-yard field goal attempt with 13 seconds left.

"For the last three or four years, I can't remember being lucky," said Patra, who is struggling through his second straight losing season. "We finally got a little bit of that ourselves."

Pittsburgh, 5-5, lost for the second straight week and now trails Cincinnati by two games in the AFC Central.
"We're in a crisis situation without question," said Coach Chuck Noll of the Steelers. "We've got to find the guys who will reach down for something extra in the weeks to come."

Zorn was benched a week ago in the fourth quarter of Seattle's loss to Green Bay. But he was at his sharpest against the Steelers, completing 18-of-28 passes for 272 yards without an interception.

The 44-yard touchdown pass to Doornink — just before halftime — cut Pittsburgh's lead to 21-10 and helped put the Seahawks, 3-7, in position for their fourth-quarter rally. It was Doornink's third touchdown catch in two weeks.

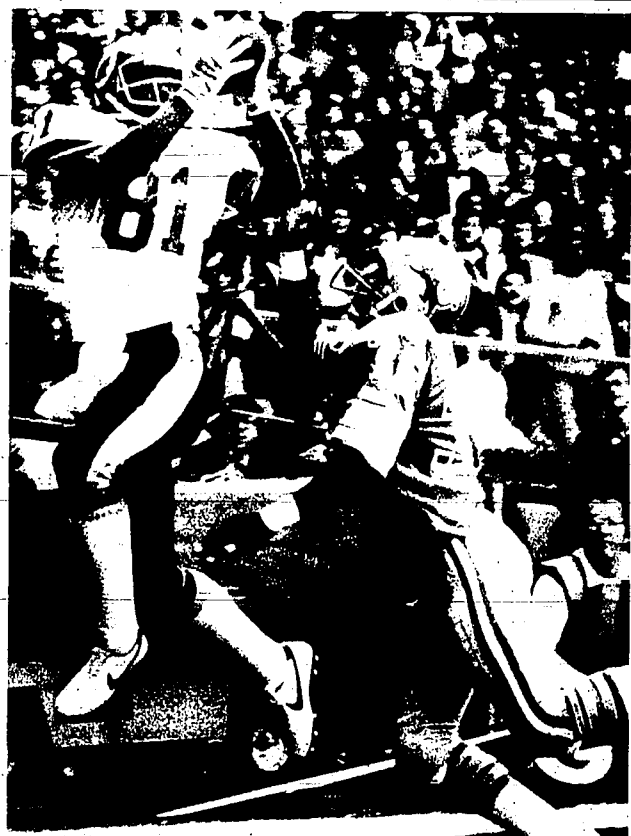

On Dan's touchdown, Pittsburgh came with a blitz and when you have eight or nine of their players on our side of the line, you don't have many guys to beat to the goal line," said Patra.

Seahawk running back Theotis Brown, who was acquired several weeks ago from St. Louis, seems to have solved Seattle's problem scoring on short yardage plays. Brown punched over twice from one yard out in the fourth quarter for the only scoring of the second half.

Seattle's victory took some of the luster off Harris' day. The 10-year veteran picked up 61 yards on 15 carries to join Jim Brown and O.J. Simpson as the only NFL players to rush for 10,000 yards in their careers.

Pittsburgh got its scores on a 6-yard run by Harris in the first quarter, a club record 90-yard TD pass from Terry Bradshaw to converted wide receiver Mark Malone in the second quarter and a 4-yard run by Sidney Thornton, also in the second period.

But Zorn rallied the Seahawks with the long scoring pass to Doornink just before the half and Seattle's defense held the Steelers scoreless the rest of the way.

Bengals blow out Chargers

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Cornerback Louis Breech was the defensive hero of the Cincinnati Bengals' 40-17 blowout of the San Diego Chargers Sunday, recovering a fumble and intercepting two passes in the end zone, one for an NFL record-tying 102-yard touchdown.

The four-year veteran grabbed a pass intended for Wes Chandler and outran the surprised Chargers.
"I knew I had the touchdown because I had some of the big guys blocking in front of me. The last few yards, I slowed down because I knew I had it, but mainly because I was tired. That's a long way to run."

Bengal quarterback Ken Anderson suffered a shoulder injury in the third quarter and had X-rays taken.
"It's just very sore," the 11-year veteran said. "I won't know what's wrong until the X-rays come back."

Anderson rifled touchdown passes to Isaac Curtis and Steve Kreidler to lead the Cincinnati attack.

The Bengals, who had forged a 31-10 halftime lead, swarmed all over Chargers quarterback Dan Fouts, sacking him seven times and forcing three fumbles and an interception that were turned into scores.

The Bengals improved their record to 7-3 to remain alone at the top of the AFC's Central Division while the Chargers dropped out of first place in the AFC West with a 4-4 mark.

Anderson, who left the game in the third quarter with a sprained shoulder, completed 18-of-28 passes for 288 yards. His touchdown passes were four yards to Curtis in the opening quarter and 10 yards to Kreidler in the second period. The Bengals completed their scoring on a 2-yard run by Pete Johnson at 4:14 of the final period and Charles Alexander scored on a one-yard touchdown run. The Bengals also got field goals of 43 and 33 yards from Jim Breech.

The Chargers scored on a 26-yard pass to Wes Chandler in the second period, a 47-yard field goal by Rolf Benirschke in the second period and a 51-yard scoring pass from Fouts to Chandler in the final two minutes of the game.

Checking the films pays off for Bears

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — As a firm believer that the human body is not capable of flight, Coach Neill Armstrong of the Chicago Bears had his doubts about the legitimacy of the kick-defense teams of the Kansas City Chiefs.

Armstrong was particularly suspicious of Gary Green and Stan Rome, the two players who line up directly behind the defensive line when the opposition attempts field goals and extra points.

Armstrong felt those two Chiefs were getting extraordinarily high into the air — and not altogether in a legal fashion — in their bid to block kicks. He felt, and the films he watched of the Chiefs last week seemed to bear him out, that the two players had a habit of stepping on the backs and shoulders of players on the line in an attempt to block kicks.

After watching Kansas City block one of his kicker's field goal tries earlier in the game and coming very close to a couple of other placements Sunday, Armstrong sent in a message to the referees prior to John Rovalo's 37-yard field goal with 2:34 remaining in the overtime: "Keep an eye on the vaulting done by Green and Rome."

Rovalo proceeded to miss the field goal try, kicking the ball into the end zone, but the officials detected Green for stepping on a Chicago lineman and slapped him with an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty.

"I've never seen that called before," said Armstrong, "but we noticed in the films that they had been doing it all season. So we tipped off the officials and they were watching for it."

That moved the ball half the distance of the goal line to the Kansas City 10 and Rovalo booted his third field goal of the game of 22 yards three plays later with 1:53 left in the overtime to give the Bears a 16-13 triumph over the Chiefs.

"(He) (Green) jumps up in the air as high as he can jump," said Kansas City Coach Marv Levy. "He tries to

Steinfort's kick gives Denver win in overtime

DENVER (UPI) — Fred Steinfort kicked a 30-yard field goal 4:05 into overtime Sunday to lead Denver to a 20-20 triumph over the Cleveland Browns, giving the Broncos sole possession of first place in the AFC West.

Denver quarterback Craig Morton threw for one touchdown, Dave Preston ran for another and Steinfort had two field goals during regulation play. The winning kick was set up by a Cleveland fumble, recovered on the Denver 48 by cornerback Dennis

Smith, and a 33-yard pass from Morton to Rick Upchurch that moved the ball to the Cleveland 17.

Matt Baker kicked a 32-yard field goal with 29 seconds remaining to send the game into overtime at 20-20.

The Browns scored on a one-yard run by fullback Cleo Miller and a 23-yard pass from Brian Sipe to tight end Dave Logan.

Despite the loss of its two starting cornerbacks, Denver's defense held off a fourth-quarter desperation drive

The Broncos took the division lead at 7-3.
Morton hit 21-of-31 pass attempts for 291 yards and no interceptions. He was sacked five times for a total loss of 38 yards.

Denver opened the scoring by driving 69 yards on its second possession to set up Steinfort's first field goal, a 45-yarder. The Browns, 4-6, replied with a touchdown early in the second quarter, set up when Denver's Wade Manning fumbled a Cleveland punt on the Browns' 27. Miller put Cleveland up 7-3 when he plunged into the end zone from the one.

Denver produced a scoring drive on its last possession of the half. Starting from their 33, the Broncos mounted a seven-play, 67-yard drive culminated by a five-yard TD pass to wide receiver Steve Watson, his 12th scoring catch of the season.

In the third quarter Steinfort kicked his second field goal, a 43-yarder.

The Browns answered with Sipe's 23-yard TD pass to Logan.

Rogers rebounds; Saints topple LA

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Rookie George Rogers, well on his way to a 1,000-yard season, fell on his face last week, gaining just 22 yards in 15 carries as his New Orleans Saints were routed by the Atlanta Falcons.

That dismal performance weighed heavily on Rogers' mind Sunday as the Saints took on the Los Angeles Rams ... and the 1980 Heisman Trophy winner from South Carolina rebounded.

Rogers shredded the Los Angeles defense for 161 yards and three touchdowns to go over the 1,000-yard mark and led the Saints to a 21-13 victory over the Rams.

"What happened today was particularly nasty after the horrible day I had last week," the 6-foot-2, 220-pound halfback said. "I played probably the worst game of my life against Atlanta and it really bothered me because I always take pride in playing."

season rushing list. Tony Dorsett of Dallas is close behind with the Cowboys facing Buffalo Monday night.

The victory was only the third in 10 games for New Orleans and Los Angeles fell to 5-5.

Rogers scored his first touchdown — midway through the second quarter — after Jimmy Rogers had returned a kickoff to the 41. On the first play, Rogers took a handoff from Dave Wilson, faked a reverse handoff to Guido Nerkins, broke to his right and sprinted 59 yards into the end zone to put the Saints to within 10-7.

For Wilson the game was a homecoming. He grew up several blocks away and attended nearby, Kattella High School.
"I couldn't have been more excited, coming home and beating the Rams," said the 22-year-old rookie who was outplayed by the Saints after only three years of college in a special draft.
"I had a lot of family and friends here and this feels great. We dominated the Rams in every aspect of the game. There's no doubt about it. This is the sweetest victory ever for me."

The Rams boosted their lead to 13-7 with 56 seconds left in the half on a 24-yard field goal by Frank Corral.

New Orleans took a 14-13 lead with 3:55 left in the third quarter on Rogers' second touchdown, a 54-yard run that capped an 88-yard drive. Rogers carried nine times in the 13-play drive for 40 yards.

The Saints closed out the scoring with 3:42 left in the game on a 2-yard TD run by Rogers, his eighth touchdown of the season.

Wilson, starting in place of the injured Archie Manning, completed 11-of-19 passes for 182 yards, including 5-of-5 in the second half. Los Angeles quarterback Dan Pastorini, starting his first NFL game since being injured in the fifth game of the 1980 season with Oakland, completed 15-of-33 passes for 223 yards, but only connected on five of his last 17 attempts for 62 yards. He was intercepted four times in those 17 attempts. The final interception came on a bomb in the end zone as the game sounded to end the game.

Kimberly played the A-3 finals by defeating Kamah 36-12 at Moscow Saturday night while Homedale upset defending champion West Side 29-12 at Homedale Saturday afternoon in the other A-3 semifinal.

Kimberly takes a 10-1 record into the finale while Homedale is 11-0.

Bonnett holds off Waltrip on near-flat

HAMPTON, Ga. (UPI) — Neil Bonnett, running the last four laps with a tire that was going flat, held off challenge by Darrell Waltrip Sunday and hung on to win the Atlanta Journal 500 by one car length.

Bonnett, whose Ford had dominated most of the race, held off Waltrip's Buick on the next-to-last lap but regained the edge going into the first turn on the final lap over the 1.522-mile Atlanta International Raceway.

Waltrip stayed on Bonnett's bumper the last lap and took second place by a scant three feet over Cale Yarborough's Buick.

"When Darrell went by me I had to get it right back," said Bonnett, who posted his third win of the season. "I knew I couldn't wait."

"I cut a tire down with four laps to go. I could feel it and I said, 'Oh no.' Luckily, it held enough air to finish the race."

"It seems like if this thing will finish a race, it will win it."

There were nine cars in the same lap at the finish in one of the tightest races on the NASCAR circuit this year. Bobby Allison was fourth in a Buick, followed by Jody Ridley and Bill Elliott, both in Fords.

Bonnett averaged 130.391 mph in a race slowed seven times for 50 laps by caution flags, well off the race record of 142.712 set by Richard Petty in 1970. The lead changed hands 36 times among 11 drivers.

Bonnett, who led for 200 of the 328 laps, took the lead from Yarborough on the 300th lap and held it until Waltrip edged past him on lap 327.

Pole-sitter Harry Gant was leading 40 laps from the finish when his Pontiac blew an engine.

Bonnett took home $31,500 of the $230,910 purse, including a $10,000 bonus for leading the most laps.

Waltrip, by finishing second, increased his Grand National points lead over Allison to 83 points and can wrap up the 1981 title by finishing in the top 20 in the final event at Riverside, Calif., in two weeks.

Petty, who qualified third in his Buick, and Joe Ruttman, who started eighth in a Buick, both dropped out of the 300-mile mark with blown engines after battling for the lead throughout the race.

Mildcats lucky the schedule doesn't include 'Interstate'

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI) — The makeshift sign on the expressway leading to the North Shore suburbs puts it this way: Interstate 94, Northwestern 0.

The route that had Saturday but almost Big Ten rival Michigan State, hardly a powerhouse itself in recent years, steamrolled over Northwestern 61-14.

So what's new?

Absolutely nothing except that more or less the same type of disaster has befallen an befuddled Northwestern, a school that prides itself for academic excellence, on 29 consecutive football Saturdays.

In reaching the magic number of 29, the Wildcats have won the World Series of gridiron magnitude. Their 29 consecutive losses are a record for a major college team, pushing aside the previous title holders, Virginia and Kansas State.

Northwestern hasn't won a college football game since defeating Wyoming early in the 1970 season. Things have even worsen in the Big Ten. The Wildcats have succumbed in 33 straight conference games since playing a scoreless tie with Illinois in the 1978 opener.

Students, among the 24,000 fans who half-filled Dyche Stadium, erupted in peevish jeer as the plastering Saturday.

Chanting "We're the worst! We're the worst!" they ignored public address pleas and brief resistance from ushers and police officers, storming the field to tear down the score board.

"At Northwestern, we don't get much practice at this," said senior Neil Wyant.

First-year Northwestern Coach Dennis Green observed the ignominious defeat with a note of consolation.

"The students are just having fun," he said, shortly after the goal post toppled.

But, he conceded, "I don't feel very good right now."

And mind you, neither did Michigan State Coach Muddy Waters.

"That part's no fun at all," Waters said. "I don't enjoy it one bit. I'm glad we won, but I don't enjoy winning by that big a score."

The record game became a media event for the Mildcats. All the major networks were on hand to record it for posterity, along with the New York Times, Washington Post, Time Magazine and Sports Illustrated.

Green, previously an assistant at Stanford who took the Northwestern coaching job last winter, is determined to hammer away to push the program to Big Ten respectability.

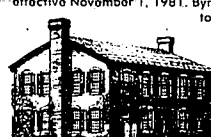

"I'm not interested in going independent or in any other conference," he said. "I'm a Big Ten man."

But it won't be easy. The 29 will more than likely balloon to 30, 31 and beyond.

But luckily for Northwestern, Interstate isn't on the schedule.

get over the top. That's what they did when we blocked the first one. We teach them to go as high as they can over the middle. I did not see it (the penalty)."

"If they're doing it legal, they're doing an excellent job," said Roveto. "They tipped the extra point, blocked the one-field goal and tipped two others, including that one in yard 10. I think the last one was the only one they didn't get a hand on all day."

The Bears started the winning 59-yard drive when defensive end Al Harris fell on a fumble by Kansas City quarterback Steve Fuller at the Bears' 37 with 7:30 left.

Willie McClendon swept 17 yards around left end on the first play and the Bears marched the next 59 yards exclusively on the ground to set up Roveto's third field goal of the game. McClendon rushed for 31 of the yards as the Bears upped their record to 3-7 with a 14-0 victory in their second week over an AFC West co-leader — having also knocked off San Diego in overtime 20-17 two weeks ago.

Roveto appeared to be the goal just moments earlier when his 37-yard field goal try went wide right with 2:34 left. But Kansas City cornerback Gary Green was slapped with an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty for climbing the backs of his teammates trying to block the kick. That moved the ball half the distance to the goal line to the 10 and Roveto converted three plays later.

The Chiefs, 6-4 after suffering their second straight loss, sent the game into overtime on an 18-yard pass from Fuller to Henry Marshall on a 4th-and-2 situation with 41 seconds left in regulation.

Kansas City moved 65 yards in nine plays for the tying score and 37 yards for two defensive holding calls against the Bears. Fuller also completed an 18-yard pass to Stan Rome on the play prior to his first touchdown pass of the season.

Emory Moorehead returned the overtime kickoff 56 yards to the Kansas City 33 and Chicago fans a chance for the victory when the 30-second clock expired while they were lining up for a 51-yard field goal try. The ensuing five-yard penalty forced the Bears to punt.

The next time Chicago got the ball, Gary Spani stopped Matt Suhey for a 30-yard gain. The Chiefs' punt at the Kansas City 38, giving the Chiefs the ball with 8:15 remaining.

BRIDGE Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Don't be a hand hog!

that ilk. He decided not to open two no-trump with a worthless doubleton and 5-4-2-2 distribution. He could have opened a normal one diamond, but if North held four spades North might get a spade bid in first, so South opened a spade.

Oswald: "When North responded one no-trump, South just have raised to three, but that would have left North to play the dummy something South considered undesirable. So South bid three diamonds."

Alan: "North might well have bid three no-trump anyway, but North gave a preference to spades and South carried on to the spade game."

Oswald: "Sometimes these hand hogs are bad dummy players. This one could play the dummy pretty well. East's ace of hearts took dummy's king on trick one, but he came back to dummy's king. Now South cashing for his contract by setting the ace and king of clubs and then running diamonds. West got two spade tricks, but that left Oswald with the 10 heart."

Alan: "If South had taken the spade finesse, West would have had a hard heart. East would uppeper with the 10 and the bad bidding would have been punished by loss of the game." (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
