CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — With President Reagan saying they're in "America's heart," astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly wrapped up space shuttle Columbia's experiments Friday and prepared for an early return home today.

Late Friday night, another problem developed aboard the shuttle — power went out in one of three video display terminals that provide flight and landing information to the crew. But ground controllers had Engle solve that problem by replacing the terminal, located in front of his seat, with one located elsewhere on the flight deck.

"Let me just say I'm sure you know how proud everyone down here is," Reagan said in a space hookup over a simple black telephone. "The whole nation, I'm sure, the world, but certainly America has got its eyes and its heart on you."

the spacecraft to return early. The only other shortened manned flight in U.S. space history was Gemini 8 in 1966. Testing the arm — a crane-like structure with shoulder, elbow and wrist joints designed to put satellites into space — was a major objective of the Columbia's second mission once it was proved a manned spacecraft could return to orbit.

Astronaut films lightning bolt

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Astronaut Richard Truly Friday became the first human in history to purposely photograph a lightning bolt from a space perspective as it lit a storm cloud and lanced down onto the African mainland.

Photos from space showing lightning turned up in the cameras of astronauts aboard both Gemini and Apollo spacecraft, said space agency spokeswoman Mary Fitzpatrick, but they were captured accidentally while those astronauts were taking pictures of other weather phenomena.

However, one of Truly's assignments of the space shuttle Columbia's second flight was to spot lightning storms specifically and record their behavior as a possible guide to better weather forecasting in the future.

Shuttle sends spectacular view
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — America got a spectacular view Friday of the shuttle Columbia's "blonic arm" hanging over Earth like a giant sky hook, and astronaut Richard Truly's mother got a "Hi Mom!" greeting from space.

As the Columbia passed over the United States on its 17th orbit, a television camera in the shuttle's cargo bay was aimed at two flight deck windows and showed Truly holding a piece of paper to the window that said: "Hi Mom!"

The first television space view of the $100 million Canadian-built Remote Manipulator System showed it slightly bent at the elbow, extending above the huge radar antenna of one of the earth-viewing experiments in the cargo bay.

Espionage deliberation begins

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Jurors began deliberations Friday in the espionage trial of Polish businessman Marian Zacharski, accused of recruiting a Hughes Aircraft engineer who sold U.S. weapons secrets to the Communists.

During the three-week trial in federal court, prosecutors described Zacharski as a professional, cunning spy "motivated by loyalty to his country" who recruited an American accomplice twice his age "motivated by greed."

The six-woman, six-man jury will be sequestered until it reaches a verdict. Zacharski, being held without bail, faces a maximum term of life in prison.

Two killed in Miami hotel fire

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — A "suspicious" fire raced through an aging oceanfront hotel on south Miami Beach Friday, killing two people, critically injuring two others and forcing more than 100 guests to flee the premises.

Some jumped from windows after leaving their children into the walling arms of spectators and firemen below, while others crawled to safety through the flame and smoke. "One survivor said it was 'bedlam everywhere.'"

Florida Medfly eradicated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department announced Friday the Mediterranean fruit fly had been eradicated from Florida and all quarantine restrictions were lifted.

The action releases from quarantine a 52-square-mile area of Tampa in Hillsborough County where five Medflies were found in August.
Harvey Ford, deputy administrator of the department's animal and plant health inspection service, praised the cooperative effort that went into the eradication work.

First Hyatt settlements made

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — More than $67,000 has been paid in out-of-court settlements in lawsuits stemming from the July 17 Hyatt Regency Hotel skywalk collapse that killed 113 people and injured 186 others, it was learned Friday.

Court documents showed the settlements were made quietly in Jackson County Circuit Court before Judge Timothy O'Leary.
Patricia Bolman and her four children, ranging in age from 6 to 22, were awarded $500,000. Sixty percent of the settlement was awarded to Mrs. Bolman, while 10 percent was given to each child.

In another award Thursday, Lucille Edmiston and her brother Robert Gillespie were offered $25,125 each in the wrongful death of their half brother, Neil O'Connor. A third and final settlement extended $2,250 to Thomas Vance in the wrongful death his sister, Louise O'Connor.
The payments represented the first settlement of lawsuits stemming from the skywalk collapse. So far more than $3 billion in lawsuits have been filed in the case.

Mayor

he found himself the subject of a recall election, which he won.
Woodall says that when he took office, one of his main goals was to unify a council wracked by internal disputes. Council members generally agree that aim was achieved through his efforts and through a change in council's composition.

"My goal, if I were successful, would be to try to maintain the harmony we have had for the last couple of years," says Cheney, a Mountain Bell Co. engineer. "In some instances, perhaps the mayor can suggest or coerce a little bit, but in the main, the council members stand on their own feet and are not really led. And that, of course, is where the question of harmony comes in."

Talkington, an investment consultant, says that "perhaps the mayor's position carries a bit more significance," if only because at least four council members had enough confidence in the person to elect him or her as the group's spokesman.

"I find that any one person's position — on the council — is definitely limited," he says.

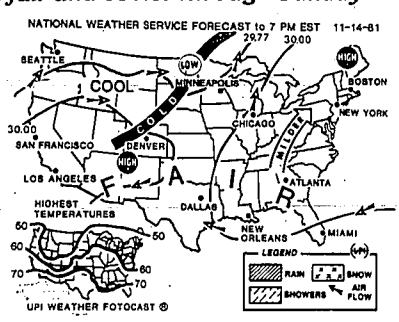

Along with tenure, Smith says, other traditions in the selection of a mayor are one-to-one telephone or coffee-shop lobbying between contenders and other members, and a private breakfast meeting at which council chooses a mayor by straw vote. A formal, public vote is taken later at City Hall.

"For the last 10 or 12 years, I would say, every mayor has either been elected at one of these breakfast meetings or has been unopposed," Smith says.

Analysts believe Saudis pressured Exxon to leave Libya

By United Press International

Saudi Arabia, America's largest foreign oil supplier, may have pressured Exxon Corp. to withdraw from all its Libyan oil operations, analysts said Friday.

Exxon still had no explanation for its startling decision Thursday to terminate its production-sharing agreement with Libya under which the largest U.S. oil company has been producing over 100,000 barrels a day.

Mobil Corp. said it has had some discussions with the Libyan government about its operations in the North African nation.

Exxon, which is holding talks with the anti-U.S. regime of Libyan strongman Muammar Khadafi on arranging an orderly pullout, has 81 Americans and 290 expatriates working in Libya.

"The Libyans are at odds with others in the Arab world but mostly Saudi Arabia, which could have put some pressure on Exxon to get out of Libya," said an international oil specialist who asked not to be identified.

On Oct. 29, 1980 Saudi Arabia broke off diplomatic relations with Libya after Khadafi demanded the withdrawal of four U.S. AWACS planes from the kingdom. The Saudis have accused Khadafi of supporting terrorist groups hostile to Saudi interests.

Exxon is one of four U.S. partners in the Arabian-American Oil Co., which produces the bulk of Saudi Arabia's oil and supplies 5.1 percent of total U.S. oil needs.

A spokesman for Mobil, the only other American partner with producing interests in Libya, said: "Our position hasn't changed because of the Exxon move, but we are studying the entire situation and have had some discussions with the Libyan government regarding our operations there."

"The Saudi connection with Exxon and Mobil should not be overlooked even though the Libyans have been harassing foreign oil companies to buy their overpriced crude and the terrorism authorized by Khadafi is of increasing concern to the U.S. government," a U.S. analyst said.

U.S. oil imports from Libya have fallen to about 267,000 barrels a day from 418,000 barrels in June because the gulf has allowed U.S. firms to reduce purchases of the world's most expensive crude.

Industry sources said Washington had not pressured non-Arab oil firms to terminate Libyan operations even after U.S. Navy aircraft were forced to down two Libyan warplanes in August.

But several sources said the U.S. government — perhaps at Saudi Arabia's urging — may have suggested that Exxon and Mobil pull out of Libya.

"Libya has never been a significant area of operation for Exxon in terms of the amount of oil involved or its contribution to profits," a Wall Street analyst said. "Exxon probably has been losing money on its Libyan interests."

"Exxon's withdrawal from Libya is a big thing from the point of view of U.S. foreign policy," he said. "But it's not very important for Exxon."

Reagan retires father of nuclear Navy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan will retire Adm. Hyman Rickover, but is not "sacking" the 81-year-old father of the nation's nuclear Navy and will offer him a White House job, Pentagon officials said Friday.

Adm. HYMAN RICKOVER will leave his post as chief of the nuclear Navy and will offer him a White House job offer, Pentagon officials said Friday.

Pentagon news conference that the decision was based on Rickover's age but on the need to begin the transition immediately to his successor, who would retain the same powers and carry on the same functions as the admiral in his position overseeing the Navy's nuclear programs.

"We need a man in that job who can carry about the next decade," the 39-year-old Lehman said.

Lehman said Rickover's decision was based on the recommendations of Weinberger and Lehman.

Rickover's current two-year extension of his retirement expires Jan. 31, four days after his 82nd birthday. But he will continue an active duty indefinitely "for the time required to have an orderly transition to his successor prior to taking up his new responsibilities," a brief Pentagon statement said.

No successor has been named, said Navy spokesman Adm. Bruce Newell. Lehman, who made his recommendation to Weinberger several months ago, said Rickover has not decided whether to accept the offer to become presidential adviser — a job dealing with research and development into civilian uses of nuclear energy and "homestead" safeguards.

But, he said, the decision to relieve the admiral of his position is irrevocable even though he "is in full blush of his faculties" and does not want to retire.

"If he decides not to accept the president's offer, we will try to persuade him to assist in the transition," Lehman said. "There will not be a two-year renewal of his active duty status."

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., chairman of the Senate strategic and theater nuclear forces subcommittee, said Rickover "has served his country and the free world with unparalleled distinction."

"It is my hope that the transition and change of command can be achieved with dignity and that his vital work will be carried on," said the former Navy secretary.

The decision to retire Rickover, who successfully has fought off such attempts since he reached the mandatory retirement age of 62 in 1962, was a consensus among members of the administration and the uniformed Navy. It came at a time when most of his allies in Congress had departed.

The departure of the crusty admiral, who has served on active duty for 59 years, will mark the end of an era for the Navy.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger broke the news to Rickover during a 40-minute meeting in his office Friday morning with Navy Secretary John Lehman in attendance, Lehman told reporters. He said Rickover did not greet the decision with "total surprise."

"I don't want to leave the impression that he is being sacked," said Lehman. "He is not."

But he indicated the "truly legendary" Rickover, as a four-star admiral, has little choice but to agree "to the decision of the commander-in-chief."

It was not known if Rickover would accept Reagan's offer to become his adviser on nuclear science, and Rickover himself was unavailable for comment. "I have no comment to

Senate kills proposal to kill Legal Services

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Friday rejected a proposal to kill the Legal Services Corporation despite charges the program's lawyers are "immersed" in pushing social causes.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., beaten in his efforts to do away with the major program of legal aid for the poor, used the scene to warn he is ready to push ahead with social legislation on appropriations bills.

"I favor legislation on appropri-tions bills," Helms warned. "I will do so when I think it is in the best interests of the American people."

Helms' threat to push his pet social issue bills — abortion, school prayer and busing — could tip up the Senate in the final weeks of the session.

On a 61-21 vote, the Senate defeated an amendment by Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-N.J., which would have denied the federally financed corporation any funds in fiscal 1982.

By a smaller margin, 46-34, the Senate beat back a second attempt by the same band of conservatives to cut appropriations for the program from $241 million to $100 million.

Both amendments were offered to the $4 billion appropriations bill for the departments of state, justice and commerce.

The bill, although $33.4 million smaller than the legislation approved by the House, is $419 million over

President Reagan's September budget recommendations and faces a possible veto.

The Senate recessed in mid-afternoon without finishing the bill. Consideration will resume Monday, and when work is completed the measure will go to conference with the House, which also approved $241 million for Legal Services.

Embargo relief added to farm bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House-Senate conference committee agreed Friday to add an embargo relief provision to the 1981 farm bill despite warnings the plan could cost $30 billion.

The decision came as the committee went through another day of work on the controversial legislation. The panel is expected to meet again Tuesday in an effort to finish the measure and send it back to the full House and Senate.

House members of the committee voted 10-3 to accept the Senate language on embargo providing for generous price supports if agricultural products are singled out for an embargo.

Critics of the plan said it could cost votes when the compromise bill is returned to the House.

Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., said the embargo provision would give House members from urban areas one more reason to vote against the bill. They already object to provisions for sugar and peanut supports, he said.

The administration supported the Senate provision, despite the potential high cost.

An administration spokesman told the committee the provision was acceptable because "we're not going to have any selective agricultural embargoes."

The conference committee action followed a 66-20 vote in the Senate Thursday night to amend another bill to bar a president from imposing a selective embargo affecting just one segment of the economy such as agriculture, unless Congress approves.

The House side also agreed to go along with a Senate provision intended to protect farmers whose grain may be stored in grain elevators that go bankrupt. The provision would allow the farmers to remove their grain from such elevators.

Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, warned the Senate language could cause trouble in the House because the House Judiciary Committee has jurisdiction over such matters.

Judiciary Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., may object to the conference committee action when the bill goes to the floor, and "that would only add to the problems" facing the bill, de la Garza said.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., cited a recent report indicating bankruptcy is "a rather widespread problem," with as many as 300 warehouses financially unsound.

Dole said the farmers "could care less" about a jurisdictional dispute between the agriculture and judiciary committees of Congress.

The committee also agreed to a one-year credit extension in the Farmers Home Administration economy emergency program. But it was decided to put a $600 million cap on the program.

More Polish workers return to work

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — More than 200,000 factory workers, coal miners and farmers ended a series of crippling wildcat strikes Friday, easing Poland's labor tension before crucial talks between the Communist government and the Solidarity union.

Three other strikes—less crucial to the nation's faltering economy—continued. The largest of them involved more than 50,000 newspaper vendors in seven provinces.

Negotiations between government and union officials finally ended a 21-day general strike by 200,000 workers in the western province of Ziemia Gora.

In Sosnowice, a Silesian coal-mining town, 2,500 miners on strike for the past 16 days also went back to work, ending a conflict that had threatened to spread.

Both strikes involved local grievances with Communist Party officials. Workers in both labor hot spots remained on "strike alert"—willing to walk out again if implementation of their agreements with local-government officials was altered or delayed. But Solidarity's national headquarters assigned teams of mediators to make certain the strikes stay settled.

Both Solidarity and the government received the news of the settlements with quiet satisfaction. Spokesmen from each side have been talking about the need to restore labor peace before government-union talks on political and economic reforms begin Tuesday.

Despite the apparent trend toward cooperation between union and government, comments by one ranking government official indicated the negotiations themselves would be tough.

Wladyslaw Lorenz, chairman of the state radio and television committee, said the government would have great difficulty reaching agreement with the union on its demand for free access to the nation's mass media.

Administration defends Venezuela arms sale

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senior administration officials said Friday the proposed $600 million sale of 24 F-16 fighters to oil-rich Venezuela will maintain the security of Latin America but not fuel a new arms race in the region.

The proposed sale was defended in advance of President Reagan's meeting next week at the White House with President Luis Herrera Campins of Venezuela.

Congress can veto the deal by majority votes in both chambers. The deal lacks the political and emotional impact of the sale of advanced surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia and which cleared the Senate 88-10 after a lopsided defeat in the House.

The senior officials briefed reporters on the basis they not be identified further, but they are closely involved in the formulation of American foreign policy.

One official said many administrations had attempted to stop the introduction of supersonic aircraft into Latin America.

"They failed," he said, noting that the British, French, Canadians, Italians, and the Soviets all lead the United States in the sale of warplanes and other arms to nations in Central and South America.

"The United States is not dictating to the countries in the area about their defense needs," the official said. "We do not expect it to start an arms race in Latin America."

Venezuela's air force is chiefly equipped with French Mirage and Canadian CF-5 fighters, and British Canberra fighter-bombers.

Venezuela, with its vast petroleum reserves, is an emerging industrial power in the region and it has poor relations with Fidel Castro's Cuba. A

Federal mortgage rates drop

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The rate for federal insured mortgage loans fell to 15.5 percent Friday, reflecting a widespread decline in interest rates.

But other economic news was less encouraging. The Federal Reserve Board reported the spreading effects of auto and housing slumps reached deeper into the economy, with factories cutting another 1.5 percent of their production during October.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the new figures indicate "employment and hours worked in the industrial sector may drop for several months."

The Department of Housing and Urban Development announced that beginning Monday the rate for Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration insured mortgages for new single family homes would be 1 percent less than the current 16.5 percent. It was the second straight monthly 1 percent drop in the rate.

Federal housing commissioner Philip Hahn said the new loan rate "will enable many more households to qualify for a FHA insured home loan." Such loans account for about 12 percent of all mortgage loans. The average rate for non-insured loans is 18.2 percent.

The FHA rate is adjusted monthly to follow interest rate trends, highlighted by a drop this week in the prime rate to 16.5 percent at major banks.

Beryl Sprinkle, undersecretary of the Treasury for monetary affairs, said Friday interest rates are apparently falling at the fastest rate on record. "I have never seen it drop this far this quickly," he said.

"For many months we had evidence that inflationary expectations were coming down... but not in interest markets." Now, he said, "you find those markets moving very favorably."

The Fed's index of industrial production has fallen three months in a row, the first triple decline since last year's recession. August's factory operating rate was down 0.2 percent and September dropped 1.2 percent. The largest decline during the recession was 3 percent.

"We'll see steeper declines this year," said economist Evelina Talner of the First National Bank of Chicago.

Judges OK New Jersey vote recount

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — A statewide recount of Republican Thomas Kean's squeaker victory in the New Jersey governor's race will begin next Wednesday, a three-judge panel ruled Friday.

The recount of the Nov. 3 election is expected to take a week to 10 days and cost Democrat James Florio between $5 and $25 for each of the 5,617 election districts.

Final statewide figures certified by the 21 counties gave Kean, a former Assembly speaker, a 47 percent edge over Florio, a four-term congressman. Kean's totals were 1,145,465 to Florio's 1,143,788.

Kean's margin of victory was the slimmest of any governor's race in the state's history, and it will be the first statewide recount for a New Jersey governor's election.

Florio requested the recount and will not be permitted to stop it once it starts.

Under recount procedures, teams of Democrats and Republicans review absentee ballots and sheets left inside voting machines.

Questions will be directed to the panel of three state judges that ordered the recount Friday.

In a related matter, a probe into alleged voter intimidation during the election has uncovered evidence of an after-hours visit to the Essex County clerk's office to photograph voter tally sheets the night after the election.

Economic program wishful?

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said Friday Budget Director David Stockman's remarks prove the administration's economic program is ill-conceived and based on "wishful thinking and phony assurances."

Speaking at the annual meeting of the National Association of Realtors, Rostenkowski said Stockman's "loose talk" in the Atlantic Monthly magazine did nothing more than show even the president's closest advisers have serious doubts about his economic plan.

"I'm grateful to be as honest with respect to how they view the economic future of the country," Rostenkowski told a crowd of more than 500 Realtors and agents.

Rostenkowski was peppered with questions on just how serious he thinks the nation's economic problems are, particularly in view of the depressed housing industry.

"I don't think we're in a shallow-water recession," he said. "It's a depression. We need a massive new economic approach. As the supply side theory collides with the realities of today's economy and the measure of the nation's confidence, simply hanging tough is not enough."

Some 10,000 real estate agents and brokers are meeting in Miami Beach, with interests focused on finding a solution to bring down interest rates that have depressed the housing market.

Rostenkowski said Democrats "will not stand by as the economy collapses" and will soon propose their own economic recovery plan.

"We must explore alternatives to the all-savers certificates, alternatives that will lead to long-term investments."

"The housing industry is a major victim of our uncertain economic policy. Unless investors and consumers see visible proof interest rates are coming down, 1982 will be bad, and not just for housing," he said.

Soviets help U.S. games

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — Intense Soviet surveillance of the Navy's largest war games since World War II, Ocean Venture '81, contributed to the success of the exercises, the Navy said Friday.

Navy officials privately admit that the North Atlantic phase of the games was designed to test Soviet reaction. For the first time in 20 years, two U.S. carriers and a British carrier were deployed to the Norwegian Sea.

"One of the reasons we went that far north was to see what the Soviets were going to do, to see what their reaction would be," a high-ranking Navy official said. "They did what was expected — we got a lot of interest."

The peak Soviet involvement occurred in the Norwegian Sea, where fighters from the carrier USS Eisenhower scrambled to intercept a record 80 Soviet Bears and Badger reconnaissance planes over a two-week period, the Navy said.

Although interception statistics were not available from all three carriers, Air Force Capt. Jon Peters, chief Ocean Venture spokesman, said the high level of Soviet activity remained constant throughout the Norwegian Sea presence.

Ocean Venture '81, which ended in mid-October, blanketed thousands of miles of ocean from the South Atlantic to the Norwegian Sea and involved 120,000 men and women, 1,000 aircraft and 250 ships from 14 allied nations.

The North Atlantic phase involved nearly 60 ships, including two U.S. aircraft carriers and one British carrier, from nine countries.

Labor leader raps Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said Friday the political mood in America is turning against President Reagan because of high interest rates and a "wanton orgy of tax cuts" by the administration.

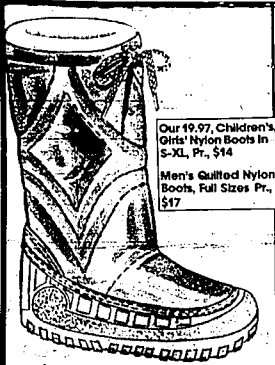

Kirkland, in a report to the labor federation's 14th biennial convention which opens Monday in New York, said Reagan has vindicated union opposition to his candidacy a year ago.

Vote next week expected on Koop

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate is expected to vote next week on the nomination of pediatric surgeon and abortion foe C. Everett Koop as surgeon general, now that a liberal senator has stated his freeze action congressional aides said Friday.

Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., lifted his hold on Koop's nomination after meeting earlier in the week with Health and Human Services Secretary Richard Schweiker. Mathias spokesman Jack Fiddinger said. Under Senate courtesy, any senator can ask for a vote to be delayed.

What's what

This word is not misspelled: "Llight." It's a manufactured variation of the word "light." You're not impressed? American poet Aram Saroyan coined that single-syllable sensation in 1965. A year later it was published in a literary magazine as an untitled poem. And Saroyan reportedly was paid $500 for it.

Space does not permit detailed report here on each of the 32 surgical operations undergone in her lifetime by actress Elizabeth Taylor. Sorry.

No cow can make the "m" sound. A cow does not go "moo." It goes "ooo."

Q. Why is the amount of alcohol in liquor called its "proof"?

A. Because early sellers offered "proof" of the alcohol content. They used liquor-soaked gunpowder. They lit it. If it burned, they said, that was 100-percent proof it was 50-percent alcohol. Evidently they figured it sounded better to say "100-percent proof" than to say "50-percent alcohol." Promoters have been known to think that way.

Q. What's the longest anybody ever threw a boomerang that came back?

A. 123 yards. One Al Gerhards of Downingtown, Pa., reportedly set a record with that throw.

Q. What was the central theme of Confucius' philosophy? A. Kindness. He was one of the first "Do unto others" teachers. More specifically, he thought it best not to rig a social system to deal with people from the top down, but to encourage people to deal with one another decently, so they then just naturally would produce a good social system from the bottom up. Hey, Prof, did I get it right?

MEMORY

Scholars scoffed at an ancient claim by Socrates. He said people know everything from one beginning, that what they learn is merely the recovery of what they already know. Then along came the researchers with their relations about genetic memory. Why does one infantile tropical fish rush into its mother's mouth for protection when danger threatens? Why does a little pig instinctively know where the milk is? Why does a child make a gesture exactly like the gesture of a grandfather he's never seen? You just don't know how much you already knew on the day you were born.

Funeral processions were required by the law of old Rome to move only at night.

KBGL will repay 'borrowed' money

POCATELLO (UPI) — KBGL-Television of Pocatello is requesting $50,000 from its private-donations fund to cover a loan taken from a federal grant without official authorization.

Idaho State University President Myron Coulter the public television station's borrowing of the federal funds to meet salary payments has led to considerable confusion, and officials were attempting to correct any misunderstandings.

Service Grant account to cover projected salary costs from July 1 through Dec. 31," Coulter said.

"Friends of 10... formed to raise private money earmarked for local programming at the station, which is located at Idaho State University."

Since July KBGL station management has used some Community Service Grant funds originally budgeted for other purposes to cover a portion of the employees' salaries, which was lost when state funding expired June 30, Coulter said.

"Technically it was inappropriate for the station to shift funds from one grant area to another without formal approval, even though KBGL has had local resources available to repay the advance loan if the reallocation is not approved by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB)," Coulter said.

Funds from the Friends of 10 account were not used initially to meet the salary crunch that began in July because KBGL had hoped to retain the local funds for programming, said Don Rogers, station manager.

"The state Board of Education was not requested, nor did they authorize our actions," he said. "However, I did notify university officials, Nelson Robinson of the CPB in Washington, Friends-of-10 directors and members of the state's Commission on Public Broadcasting of what we were doing regarding funding," Rogers said.

The station still is hoping for a waiver from the federal agency, which administers the Community Service Grant, to make the budget transfer official, Coulter and Rogers said. They said such a waiver would allow money from the Friends of 10 account to be restored and used for programming.

The waiver and other federal grant provisions will be discussed in Boise Monday when Robinson meets with representatives of Idaho's three public television stations, the Idaho Education Department and the state public broadcasting commission.

Evans warns state finances getting worse

MOSCOW (UPI) — Idaho Gov. John Evans said the state's financial plight is getting worse.

State agencies are requesting $530 million for the next fiscal year but analysts expect as little as $160 million in revenues.

Evans says that the outlook for the coming fiscal year "is going to be very, very discouraging."

"I thought last year was going to be bad, but this year is going to be far more serious," he said.

Evans said his analysis expected up to $480 million in revenue next year, but one of his staffers told him this week that the figure could drop to $360 million.

But Evans said he is resigned that there will be no tax increases this year due to the prospect of the 1982 elections.

The state is going to have to find other ways of raising money, he said, noting that a proposal to redistribute liquor-tax revenues may be the answer.

Asked if he believed the Legislature would approve local-option taxes for counties, Evans said, "I seriously doubt that's going to happen."

But counties can survive on the 5 percent budget-increase limit imposed by the Legislature, he said. Lawmakers must come up with "some sort of relief valve," he said, to compensate for taxing restrictions imposed as a result of the 1 percent property tax law.

Investment scheme keys BBB concern

BOISE (UPI) — The Treasure Valley Better Business Bureau says Idahoans should be very leary of an investment scheme promoted by a Kentucky man.

The man reportedly promises to pay people $5 a month for eight years if they will send him an initial fee of $16.

Bureau Executive Director Ken Thornberg said the scheme is being operated by George Ernst Jr. doing business as Many Interested Savers, Inc.

"This is open and blatant fraud," Thornberg said Thursday. "Ernst is leading people to believe that there is an endless source of funds available from some tooth fairy in Georgetown, Ky. He seems adept at getting innocent victims to believe in him and to send him larger and larger sums of money."

Thornberg said bureau investigators have located some people who sent Ernst more than $1,000. And he said Ernst has falsely told some people that income from the venture is tax-free.

"Consumers should stay away from this type of scheme, which is a combination chain letter-ponzi type scheme," the BBB official said. He suggested that Idahoans who are contacted by Many Interested Savers should get in touch with the bureau.

Law enforcement cited for drop in accident rate

BOISE (UPI) — State and Boise City authorities say increased law enforcement and truck inspection have led to a dramatic reduction in traffic accidents over the past several months.

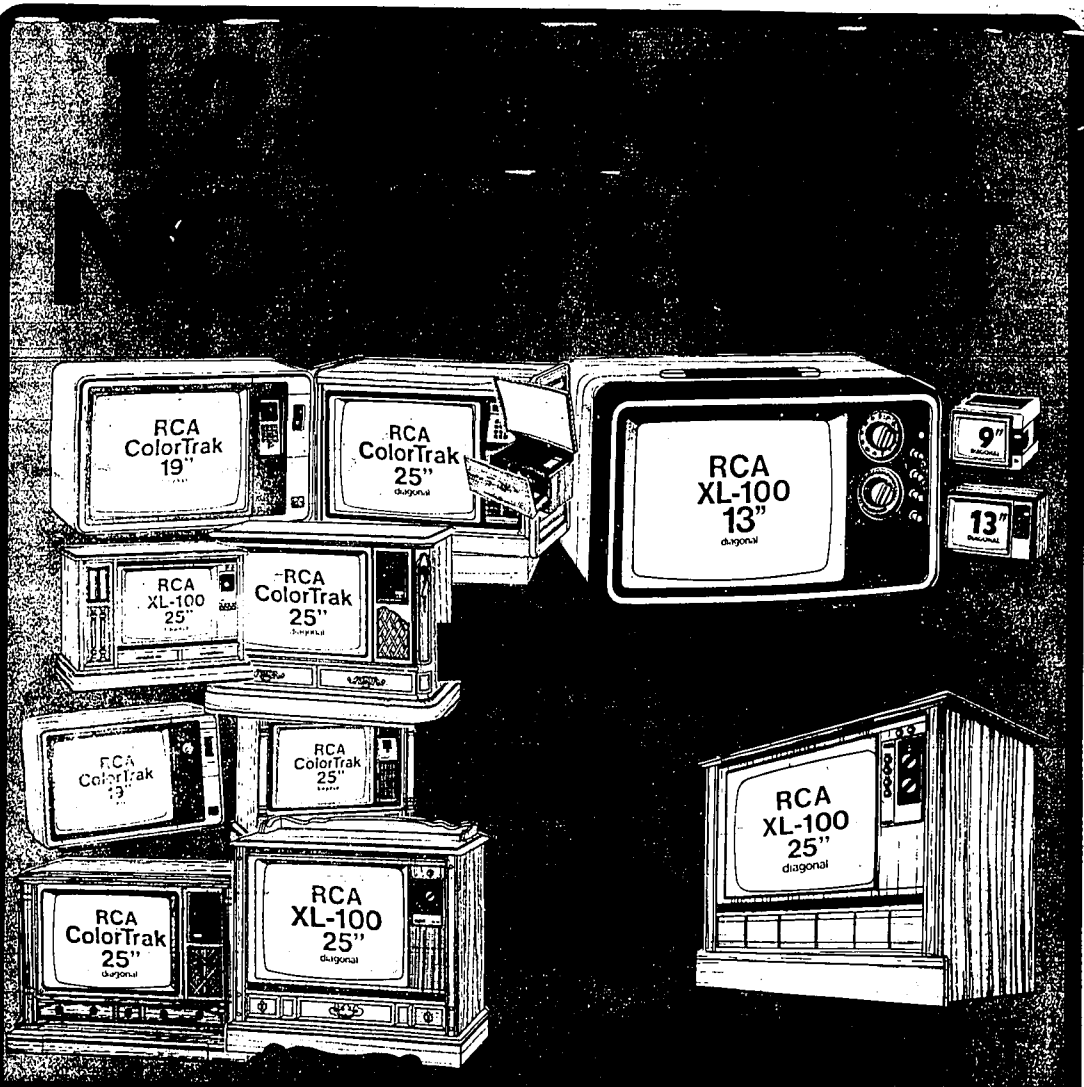

Truck-related accidents have declined 30 percent in Idaho since 1978, according to a report by the state Motor Carrier Safety Bureau.

In 1978, there were 2,476 truck-related mishaps in Idaho, with 61 fatalities. But from October 1980 through last month, the number of accidents had dropped to 1,732, with 47 deaths, the bureau said.

The bureau said safety inspections over the past seven months have led to the repair of 10,714 unsafe trucks in Idaho. At the project's onset, an average of 3.91 violations were noted per inspection. But the average had declined to 2.95 this year, the bureau said.

The industry is taking better care of their equipment," the report said.

The report said the inspection program was "largely responsible" for the decline in truck-related accidents and deaths.

Crimebusting isn't their job, giving service is

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS -- They are not "crime busters," and they are the first to admit it. They are dedicated men performing a service to the College of Southern Idaho and the community.

This is the assessment of Chuck Grimes, whose nine-man security force keeps the peace on the College of Southern Idaho campus 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

Grimes, 46, was named director of the CSI security department a few months ago when his former boss and veteran director, Lee Talkington, retired.

A former Marine, he has worked for railroad and airline firms. He joined CSI nine years ago as a night watchman.

He describes the department not as a police department but a service department that exists to help students, faculty, guests and the general public while on the campus.

The department has come a long way in recent years, he says.

Back in the early 1970s, the students called the security staff "rent-a-cops," and other police agencies were critical of some of the tactics and authority the young officers used and assumed, Grimes says.

"At that time, our staff was mostly work-study program students who were enrolled in the college's law-enforcement training classes.

"There were a few 'jet jockeys' who enjoyed chasing traffic violators around the campus and sometimes off the campus," Grimes recalls.

"They couldn't be blamed too much. They were young, eager and were just practicing some of the things they were being taught in class but under the wrong circumstances."

Now, the security department's members all work under contract, much like the faculty members.

They are mature, career law-enforcement men, Grimes says.

When it's 3 a.m. and you walk into a dark building on the silent and vacated CSI campus to make sure there are no intruders, you may have some second thoughts about the job, Grimes says. But it's just part of the job.

Of the nine men, six qualify as "special officers" for having been approved by the Twin Falls Police Department, he says. They have a year's experience and undergo an extensive background investigation.

Special officers have full powers of arrest, and they can issue municipal parking and driving citations. Security police powers, however, are limited to the college campus.

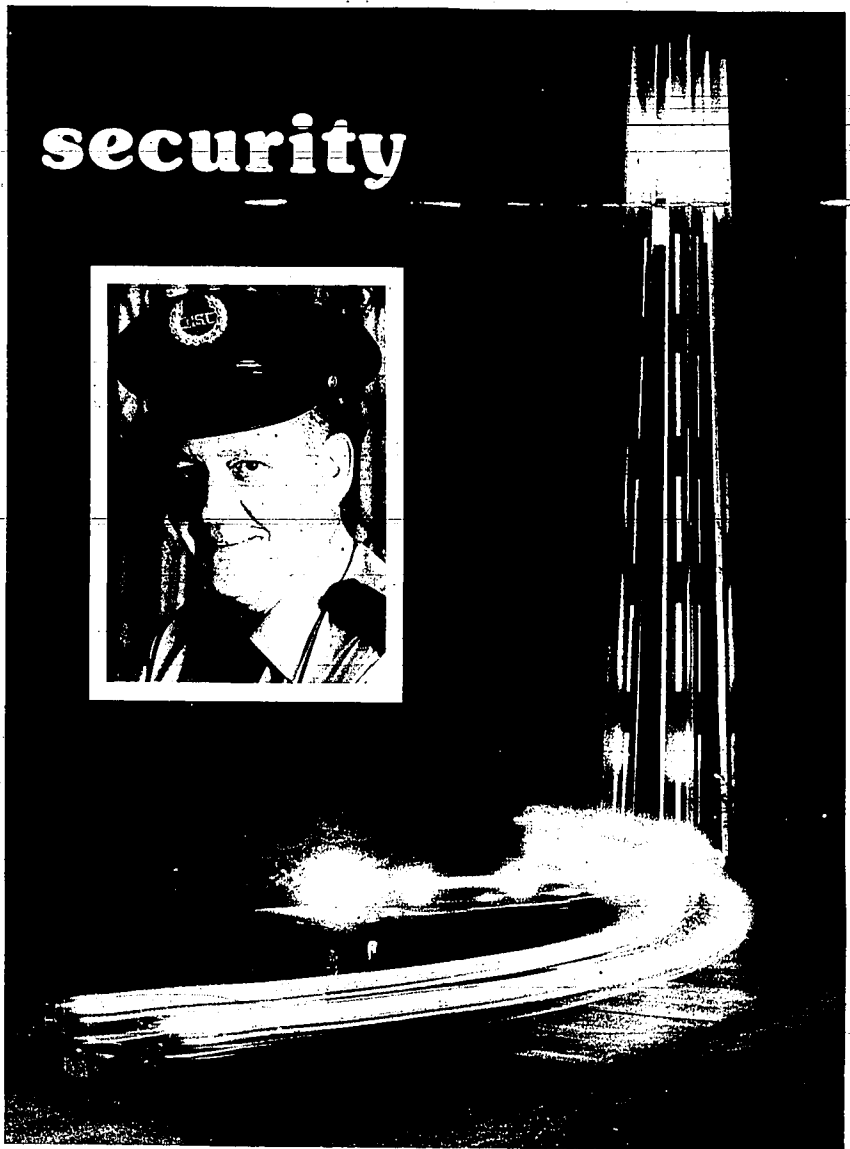

The speed limit on campus is 15 mph. It takes a few citations every year to get both the students and the faculty to comply, Grimes says, and radar equipment helps convince them.

Security officers at CSI are never armed.

Alone at night on the dark, deserted campus, an officer may wish for a firearm, but Grimes says "over specialization and over professionalization in security matters are not the college's role."

"As long as security performs its duties in a professional manner, we have the cooperation and backup of local law-enforcement agencies," he says.

P&Z approves land division requests

By MARTY TRILLIARAE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS -- The Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission approved requested land divisions in Twin Falls and Hagerman on Thursday.

The requests came from Maurice Allen of Twin Falls, who sought to divide a 6.5-acre parcel four miles south and a half-mile east of Curry Crossing, and W.J. Crook of Hagerman, who wanted to establish a small residential subdivision.

In approving Allen's request, zoning board members noted that the parcel contained two houses. Allen's plan to divide the land in such a way as to leave one house on each parcel alleviated the board's concerns about additional residential construction in the area.

Crook's proposal calls for the establishment of a four-lot subdivision on four acres of land next to the Gridley Bridge near Hagerman.

Board members expressed some concern because one of the proposed lots was below the one-acre minimum set by the health department. As a condition of approval, the health department also must agree to the proposal.

Both decisions followed public hearings on the proposals. No objections were raised.

In another move, the zoning board agreed to assist the Idaho League of Women Voters in an anticipated lobbying effort during the upcoming session of the Legislature in support of the Land Use Planning Act of 1975. Judging from a series of legislative efforts to restrict the statute in the past, Ed Woods, the county zoning administrator, concurred in the league's assessment that more challenges are likely in the 1982 Legislature.

Woods countered criticism of zoning efforts by saying the zoning board's actions and policies at least had placed a brake on the pace and type of development in agricultural areas.

Officer 'lives right,' in gunman incident

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS -- Frank Mogensen, an Idaho State Police officer, says he must have been living right lately.

On Nov. 7, he stopped a speeder on I-84 between Jerome and Twin Falls. The Oregon car was traveling in excess of 70 mph, Mogensen said, and when he stopped it, the driver, Stephen Mark Wright, 27, of Hillsboro, Ore., was "sullen" but cooperative.

Mogensen said he told the driver to follow him to Twin Falls to post bond.

"He grumbled about it, but when I went back to my car, he followed in his right tail," Mogensen said.

"It wasn't until we got out of our cars on Shoshone Street in front of the Courthouse that I saw the .45 caliber gun strapped to his hip," Mogensen said.

"He wasn't illegal. It was not concealed, so I just said nothing about it, but I was very careful."

In the Courthouse, the sheriff's office couldn't make change for the large-denomination currency that Wright had, so it was suggested that he go to a bar for change. However, a sheriff's deputy told him the bar owner would take a dim view of the firearm.

"Wright replied, 'Where I go, the gun goes,'" Mogensen recalled.

"I didn't want any trouble, so I volunteered to go get the bill changed," Mogensen said.

"Thirty-six hours later, the same motorist was shot and injured after he fired on two Colorado officers when they walked up to his parked vehicle to ask why the man had parked in a field."

"Two Grand County deputies from Hot Sulphur Springs were checking the car," Mogensen said. "They spotted the gun, he was wearing, and they told me he came out of the car with the gun drawn and making bizarre and strange religious comments."

"The officers took cover as the man fired shots in their direction, then they returned the fire, striking Wright in the leg. The wound was severe, almost-severing the bone," Mogensen said.

Mogensen said he had checked Wright out through the National Crime Information Center, but there was no record. However, he apparently had been involved in a family conflict just before he bought the revolver and left Oregon. His family had reported him missing in Oregon, but the information was not filed with NCIC.

"Had it been filed, I would have probably known when I approached his car that he was armed," Mogensen said. "I didn't see the gun when I talked with him after making the radar stop, but he had a good opportunity to shoot me if he had wanted to. I turned my back and walked back to my car after asking him to follow me."

"Some days you are just lucky, or maybe he hadn't gotten mad yet."

YFCA narrows director search; final by Dec. 15

TWIN FALLS -- A field of 25 applicants for the Magic Valley YFCA directorship has been narrowed to seven, and a selection will be made by Dec. 15, according to a Y spokeswoman.

Donna Stalley said Friday that the seven applicants' personal references are being checked, and the Y board will select two or three final contenders Monday.

The executive director's position has been vacant since spring, when debts of $250,000 forced closure of the Y's Elizabeth Boulevard facility. Recruitment of a director and improvement of the building got under way following a successful fund-raising campaign this summer.

Stalley said the two or three top applicants and their spouses will be invited to Twin Falls for personal interviews. The 25 applications received by the board came from all parts of the country, she said.

Man dies who made friends while writing parking tickets

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS -- Richard "Buck" Wilson wrote hundreds of parking tickets in his 16-year career with the Police Department, yet somehow, he managed to make an equal number of friends.

"He had a way about him," said Kenneth Johnston, a retired police officer and a friend of Wilson's. "It had a way where he could give a ticket to someone, and they wouldn't get mad. It's just the way he talked to people."

"He had a sixth sense about people. One person you put on the back, the next you have to be gruff. Buck understood that," Johnston said.

Wilson, who retired from his meterman's job in October of 1979, died in his sleep at about 2 p.m. Friday. He was 67.

The crossing guard duty at the old Washington Elementary School, a job that went with Wilson's post with the Police Department, made him a virtual landmark with Twin Falls residents.

According to John Stephens, who shared guard duty with him, it was a labor of love for both men.

"The children knew him real well," Stephens said. "He kidded them along and played with them. We learned all the kids by their first names."

"You had their lives in your hands when you crossed them," he said. "We never had a child hit by a car at the intersection (North Five Points). We were kind of proud of that record. We had some close calls, though."

Sgt. Collins Helms remembers Wilson's almost endless energy, which usually was channeled into his great love, square dancing.

"It was always on the go," Helms said. "He was always going some place square dancing."

And he cut quite a figure on the floor, according to Hegenia and Howard Ehresman, when he danced with the Wheeling Stars Square Dancing Club.

"He was a good dancer," Mr. Ehresman said, speaking of Wilson's later years. "He still would have loved to have gotten out there and danced."

East won the first trick with his king of hearts. He saw no future in the club suit and led back the 10 of spades.

The play proceeded quickly from then on. South entered dummy with a club, took a diamond finesse, returned to dummy with the other top club, repeated the diamond finesse and wound up with five diamonds plus two tricks in each black suit.

There was some discussion about the possibility that South could have made an overtrick if the defense had slipped, but no one noticed that East could have beaten the hand if he had simply played a low club on the first trick.

Interest rates are high today, but no interest is paid on tricks at bridge. If East had ducked that first club, South would have had just one entry to dummy to lead diamonds. East would surely have made his king of diamonds and South would have been able to take only eight tricks.

Of course, the play might have proceeded very slowly. Maybe South would have found a way to get a trick out of his heart king, but in all probability he would not have worked that out. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
