Reagan still optimistic Soviets break weapon talks

By REBECCA IRVIN United Press International

GENEVA, Switzerland — The Soviet-Union-shut-down-all-nuclear-arms talks with the United States Thursday, breaking off bargaining on long-range weapons 15 days after walking out of parallel negotiations on medium-range missiles.

The Soviet delegation discontinued the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks on intercontinental nuclear missiles claiming the "global strategic situation" changed with the arrival of new U.S. missiles in Western Europe.

Moscow broke off the separate, parallel Intermediate Nuclear Forces talks Nov. 23 after the West German parliament approved deployment of the new missiles.

As they did in the INF talks, the Soviets refused to set a date to resume START.

Chief U.S. negotiator Edward Rowley said the United States regretted the Soviet decision and hoped Moscow would soon agree to resume the talks.

"The United States is fully prepared to continue the regular pattern of the START negotiations," he said.

"These negotiations are in the interest of both our nations and of the entire world," Rowley said, reading a statement in front of the U.S. delegation building.

The 35-minute final session ending START's current round was the shortest since talks began June 30, 1982.

In a statement issued after the meeting, the Soviets said that "in view of the deployment of the new

NATO frées records from arms talks — A8

U.S. missiles in Europe that has already started, the changes in the global strategic situation make it necessary for the Soviet side to review all problems which are under discussion at the START negotiations.

"Therefore, no date for the resumption of the talks has been set," the statement said.

Rowley said the United States could not agree with Soviet assertions that "developments outside the scope of these negotiations require the Soviet Union to withhold agreement on a resumption date" — referring to the NATO deployment of 572 cruise and Pershing-2 missiles — already underway in Western Europe.

U.S. officials said they were "not too surprised" by the Soviet announcement and stressed the Soviets merely said they were "re-examining" their position at START.

But Washington, President Reagan insisted that the Soviet Union did not break off the talks, but instead "simply was not prepared to set a time for resumption of talks."

Reagan, expressing optimism that the negotiations on START would be resumed at some point, made the remarks on the South Lawn as he was leaving for a trip to Indianapolis to address an education forum.

At the same time, Reagan said that he would support a meeting between Secretary of State George Shultz with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Stockholm in January.

1,150 loans affected PCA consolidation slated for Monday

By BOB FREUND Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Eastern Idaho Production Credit Association will announce the eight-county Magic Valley area and take over close to 1,150 loans from the insolvent Southern Idaho Production Credit Association of Twin Falls on Monday.

Stockholders of the Pocatello-based farm-cooperative lender voted this week to take over the financially solid portions of the Magic Valley cooperative, after the Southern Idaho board of directors agreed to liquidate the troubled association because of huge losses.

Eastern Idaho President Eldon Hill said Thursday that members from the association's 18 counties in Idaho and Wyoming approved the acquisition in a series of six meetings that ended late Wednesday. He did not release any vote totals.

"We're going to pick up all the credit-worthy accounts that we possibly can, and that's about all I can tell you at this juncture," Hill said.

Borrowers with good loans will get an immediate drop in interest rates of a half-percent because of the Eastern Idaho association's strong financial position, he said. Sources outside the Southern Idaho PCA say the interest rate is likely to fall to between 12 percent and 13 percent.

The borrowers' stock also will hold the same value it had before the liquidation, says Larry Butterfield, the president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Spokane, which oversees the PCA system in the Northwest. Southern Idaho borrowers are required to buy $8-worth of stock for each $100 borrowed. Each share is worth $5.

But borrowers with badly delinquent or "lost" loans will not get either guarantee, Butterfield says. The federal bank will keep the Southern Idaho PCA office open until the bad loans either are firmed up to the point where the Eastern Idaho PCA will take them or until they are liquidated.

"That will take at least two years," Butterfield says. He expects a number of the loans to be rescued and moved to the Eastern Idaho PCA.

Officials now are plying the num-

Utility seeks payment for coal plant planning

By ELLEN MARKS United Press International

BOISE — Idaho Power Co. will try to charge ratepayers about $11 million for costs incurred during the past decade as the utility considered building a coal-fired plant, spokesman Larry Taylor said Thursday.

But he said the utility will not request permission to begin recovering the costs until it files its next rate increase request, which may not be for some time.

A cut in energy demand caused the utility to drop its earlier plans to build a coal-fired plant, but company officials believe they should be allowed to recover the costs of environmental and geological reports required by federal agencies and the state Public Utilities Commission, Taylor said.

"Many of the costs were required of the company to proceed on a very reasonable course for providing electricity for customers," Taylor said.

Idaho Power waged a heated battle to build the proposed Pioneer plant near Boise in 1974, but the PUC rejected the request for environmental reasons in 1976.

Additional studies were funded about two years later, when the utility announced it was studying the possibility of building a coal plant at other sites, such as Bliss or American Falls, Taylor said.

PUC President Conley Ward declined comment on Idaho Power's proposal, but predicted there would be arguments over whether the utility should be allowed to recover the costs of a plant that never was built.

Ward said the request might be viewed as inconsistent with a PUC policy forbidding a utility from charging ratepayers before a plant begins generating power.

Reagan wants strict schools

By United Press International

INDIANAPOLIS — President Reagan told educators Thursday he has directed the Justice Department to help find ways to return "old-fashioned discipline" to the nation's schools.

"Whatever it takes, we must make certain America's schools are temples of learning not drug dens," Reagan told closing session of a three-day administration-sponsored conference on education.

Reagan said "fundamental reforms" in the classroom — not more federal money — are needed to rescue America's schools and keep them up to par with the Soviets, Japanese and Germans. He proposed a six-point program that included "good old-fashioned discipline," a crackdown on drugs and alcohol and a "good teaching."

Reagan received a polite but lukewarm reception from the 2,300 educators and state politicians, many of whom want an increased federal commitment to education.

He received his biggest applause when he said "in some schools, teachers suffer verbal and physical abuse. I can't say it too forcefully — this must stop."

Reagan was preceded to the podium at the Indianapolis

Convention Center by Education Secretary Terrel Bell, who challenged schools to increase student literacy, stem high-school dropout rates, bolster curriculums and raise teachers' salaries.

"Now this is a big order for the nation's schools," Bell said. "We will have to solve many problems such as discipline, lack of parental commitment, adequate funding and a changed and reordered lifestyle for teenage America."

Bell held the National Forum on Excellence in Education as a followup to a series of reports last spring and summer that found schools in trouble and that triggered a still growing crusade to improve them.

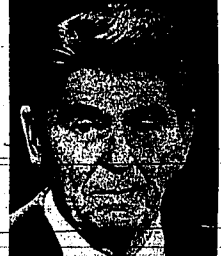

A study by Bell's National Commission on Excellence in Education last spring estimated that about 23 million Americans adults and 13 percent of 17-year-olds are functionally illiterate.

He said, "Students cannot fully attain other necessary proficiencies if they do not read and write...."

Bell's recommended four "performance goals":

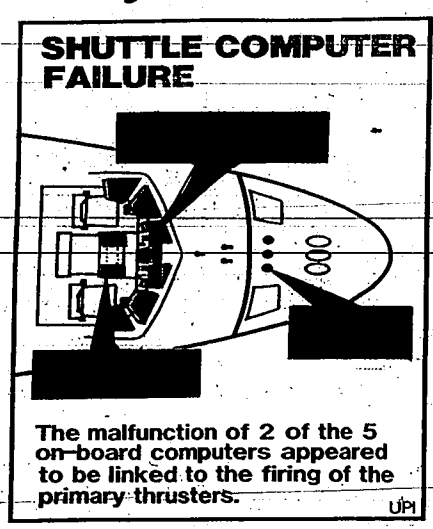

• Raising college entrance scores to where they were in

SHUTTLE COMPUTER FAILURE

The malfunction of 2 of the 5 on-board computers appeared to be linked to the firing of the primary thrusters.

By MARK BARABAK United Press International

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — The shuttle Columbia glided to a smooth landing Thursday in the setting desert sun after an eight-hour delay, bringing back six men, Spacelab and a priceless payload of results from 10 days in orbit.

Space pilots John Young and Brewster Shaw, waved off from two earlier landing opportunities because of a baffling crew-ster problem, flew the shuttle in from the north for the first time and touched down on the dry lake bed runway 40 minutes before sunset.

Young and Shaw appeared at a welcoming ceremony three hours after landing but the mission's four scientist-astronauts — Robert Parker, Owen Garriott, Byron Lichtenberg and European Ulf Merbold — were at the doctor's office undergoing medical tests to see how they re-adapt to gravity.

"We had a lot of fun on that mission," Young said, joking that he turned to jelly when the computers started acting up. "We enjoyed every minute of it."

NASA administrator James Beggs said the six astronauts — the world's largest space crew — "brought back enough data to keep our scientists busy for the next 10 years."

Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson,

Next flight promises 'real space fun' — A3

associate NASA administrator in charge of the shuttle program, called the landing "perfect."

He said the cause of the shuttle's computer problems remained a mystery, but predicted the trouble would be isolated and fixed in time to keep the next shuttle launch on schedule for Jan. 30.

The 114-ton spacebus, making the most difficult landing yet in the shuttle program, landed at 4:47 p.m. MST — 3:47 p.m. California time — refueling to a halt directly in the middle of the long clay runway to end its 4.3 million mile journey.

"What a stop, Columbia!" said Young, who has been in space six times.

"Welcome home, beautiful landing," said John Blaha in mission control.

Young, who has hinted he might retire soon from space flying, checked the instruments, turned off the shuttle's systems and exclaimed 13 minutes after landing: "Fantastic!"

"Well done," said President Reagan in a statement released by the White House.

"Our congratulations to the entire Marines force Druze to lift white flag

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Druze Muslim militia shelled U.S. Marines again Thursday, but the Marines fired back so fiercely the attackers raised a white flag. The Druze later turned their guns on Christian east Beirut, wounding at least three people.

No Marine casualties were reported in the morning's 90-minute battle on the red dirt hills that form the Marines' northeast perimeter.

But Druze leaders and Syria vowed to continue the repeated assaults on American forces and the 1,200 Marines deployed around the Beirut airport spent another night confined to darkened bunkers on a Condition 1 alert.

The battle came four days after eight Marines were killed and two wounded in assaults following an American air strike on Syrian troops.

At mid-evening, Druze artillery shelled Christian neighborhoods in the capital for nearly 100 minutes and three people were reported wounded, the state-run radio said. Shelling between Druze and Lebanese army units also erupted on the Shout mountains southeast of Beirut.

Christian Phalange radio said President Reagan's Middle East envoy, Donald Rumsfeld, arrived for a new effort to end the Lebanese fighting. There was no immediate word of his plans for talks.

However, with the deepening U.S. military involvement, Italy said it wanted to slash its peace-keeping force in Beirut by half, to the 1,100 originally committed.

At a NATO meeting of foreign ministers in Brussels, the U.S. and three nations contributing troops to peace-keeping forces in Lebanon —

Italy, France and Britain — vowed they would stay on to support Lebanese President Amin Gemayel.

Describing the morning battle, Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said the Marines came under "heavy and concentrated" small arms, mortar and rocket-propelled grenade fire from an enemy bunker northeast of the airport.

The area is controlled by Syrian-backed Muslim Druze who oppose Gemayel's Christian-dominated government.

Next shuttle to rival Buck Rogers

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Space Editor

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — The space agency will switch from the exhaustive scientific investigations of the ninth shuttle flight to a leading display of personal speed during flight 10 in late January.

Two spacewalking astronauts will use jet propelled backpacks to cruise outside the space shuttle Challenger in a dramatic rehearsal of an attempt to rescue a crippled satellite in April.

Astronauts Bruce McCandless and Robert Stewart will fly up to 300 feet away from the shuttle Challenger and may venture out without a safety line.

"It's a pretty dramatic demonstration of the abilities that we have," said Glynn Lunney, shuttle program manager at the Johnson Space Center.

McCandless, Stewart, mission commander since D. Brand, co-pilot Robert L. Gibson and Ronald E. McNair are scheduled to be launched on shuttle flight 10 Jan. 30. They will spend eight days in orbit on the most ambitious shuttle mission yet.

Besides the spacewalks, the astronauts will launch two commercial communications satellites and deploy and later retrieve a German instrument platform. During the second spacewalk, McCandless will conduct a unique orbital refueling test in Challenger's open payload bay.

The jet propelled backpacks, called manned maneuvering units, are the key to the April flight in which an astronaut will fly to a spinning sun observatory called the Solar Maximum Mission and to stabilize it so the shuttle's mechanical arm can grab it and bring it into the cargo bay for repairs.

McCandless and Stewart on the upcoming mission will test the 26-jet maneuvering units for the first time and rehearse rendezvous maneuvers required for the April flight. They also will practice replacing a bad electronics box aboard the satellite.

Lunney said he was confident all the equipment would work for the January test, but he acknowledged in an interview that the mission was more risky than most.

"There's an added degree of risk but I would not characterize it as a great big step in that way because even if the manned maneuvering unit were to fail, the orbiter can be flown over, and under and around the crewman who might be on such a unit and brought back into the cargo bay," Lunney said.

Experts paint dim nuclear picture

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Prominent Soviet and American scientists joined Thursday in warning that nuclear war and its aftermath probably would wipe out human life on Earth.

The scientists said new studies show a nuclear exchange would trigger a series of major climatic changes that would doom even non-combatants in the Southern Hemisphere.

"Our planet is simply too small to cope with the shock of a major nuclear war," Sergei Kapitsa of the Physical Problems Institute of the Soviet Academy of Sciences said.

If the superpowers used just one-third of their nuclear arsenals, the explosions would "trigger a range of catastrophic climatic effects" not limited to the war zone, Carl Sagan, a Cornell University astrophysicist, said.

The doomsday scenario would occur even if only one nation launched a "first strike" and the target nation did not fire back.

"It would be an elaborate way of committing suicide," Sagan said.

"A nuclear war of any scope would mean either the disappearance of mankind, or its degradation to a level below the prehistoric one," Vladimir Alexandrov, chief of the Soviet academy's Department of Climate Models, said.

In the post-war world, "the homo sapiens (human beings) will not have the ecological niche they now enjoy," Alexandrov said.

The grim predictions were offered by four Soviet and four U.S. scientists who recently studied the likely effects of a nuclear war. Their forum in the Senate Caucus Room was sponsored by backers of a nuclear freeze.

Reagan lifts arms-sales ban on Argentina

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, reversing a ban imposed by the Carter administration, will lift restrictions on U.S. arms sales to Argentina because of dramatic human rights improvements, the State Department said Thursday.

The ban is to be formally lifted Saturday, the day Argentina inaugurates an elected civilian president.

The event ends nearly eight years of military rule, during which thousands of political dissidents disappeared or were murdered.

"Argentina has made significant progress in meeting internationally recognized principles of human rights," State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said.

He said Reagan's certification that Argentina is eligible to seek arms "is particularly appropriate" as Raul Alfonsin is inaugurated in Buenos Aires. Vice-President George Bush will represent Reagan at the ceremony.

The decision is a sharp reversal of the restriction President Carter imposed in 1978 because of widespread human rights abuses.

The administration and Argentina's military government jointly expressed a desire to lift the ban early in Reagan's term. But congressional opposition stymied the effort and it was derailed in 1982 by the junta's invasion of the Falkland Islands.

Trim federal budget in military area too

We don't always agree with Idaho's junior senator, Steve Symms, who is developing a reputation as a leading challenger to Jesse Helms for the most conservative member of the Senate.

But his tough proposals to trim the federal deficit, we think, are on the right track, particularly his thoughts that the nation must find a way to dent the politically protected programs in the social-services area.

We wish, however, that Symms would go further and apply the same kind of cost-benefit analysis to the military budget, which many observers think can also undergo some substantial trimming, particularly in its contracting and competitive bidding procedures.

Nonetheless, we like his train of reasoning on cutting benefit growth in the social-services area. He identifies several sacred cows — Social Security, military pensions and federal workers — where rapidly increasing costs are a major cause of the federal deficit, which is now at the $200 billion a year level.

He proposes across-the-board pay cuts for federal employees, including elected representatives and cuts to those Social Security recipients who are "affluent." He thinks the eligibility age for recipients gradually should be increased to reflect the longer lifespans of many Americans.

These ideas are essentially sound ones, at least in theory, leaving aside the specific level at which benefits should be pegged.

The same kind of logic can be applied, we believe, to some aspects of the military budget, which is also responsible for the huge deficits. Contracting and bidding practices need tight controls. More than one weapons system needs careful scrutiny. But those kind of cost-control measures apparently aren't within Symms' interest.

Within the next two weeks the president's commission on the federal deficit will issue its report, identifying both social-services programs and military spending as the two areas responsible for the huge gap.

If we are going to cut personal income taxes by 25 percent, thereby reducing revenue, there is no way on God's green earth that the deficit will shrink unless there are also large cuts in spending.

Symms thinks the cuts should be in social services; we think they should include military spending as well.

Compiling Gowen history

I am collecting information and memorabilia pertaining to early aviation for possible permanent display at Gowen Field in Boise.

The field is named in honor of First Lieutenant Paul R. Gowen who died in an air crash near Panama City, Panama, in 1938. To my understanding, his widow remarried and located in the Twin Falls area. My efforts to locate her or any immediate family have been fruitless.

Gowen Field, dedicated in 1941, was used extensively during World War II as a training base and today is still used by the Idaho Air National Guard for that purpose. Anything pertaining to the history of the field especially the World War II era would be appreciated.

If any reader can be of help; I would appreciate them calling 733-1691 or writing me at the following address: 538 N. Seventh, Payette, ID 83661.

Proposal would raise taxes

Residential taxpayers should understand what's happening. Rep. Tom Silvers is leading a move in the legislature to repeal the 50 percent initiative. This would mean:

1. An increase in taxes on homes in 1984 of 30 percent, plus the amount of any local budget increases, overrides, etc. Property taxes on homes would probably rise 35-40 percent statewide.
2. Since other kinds of property enjoy a discount on assessed value in the way they are assessed (compared to homes), we would return to the pattern of the 1970s. There would be a continuing "tax shift" to homes. Residential taxes would rise much faster than the rate of total taxes.

From 1978 to 1982 total residential property taxes in Idaho rose 97 percent, $8.4 million. The combined total for utility, commercial and farm property rose $5 million, or 4.5 percent. Residential taxes rose 12 times as much, in total dollars, as the combined total of other taxes. There was massive and continuing tax shift to homes.

The reason for that pattern was that homes are assessed on selling price. All other kinds of property have large discounts, by comparison. Utility property is assessed partly at historic cost (what did the dam cost in 1925), less depreciation. Industrial buildings get depreciation at 4 percent a year. Most of the market value of farm land is exempt from assessing. 65 percent in 1981.

Commercial property is assessed on income, not selling price. The 50 percent law gave homes a discount similar to discounts the legislature had given other kinds of property.

Silvers wants to restore the system under which other kinds of property get a discount, and homeowners get the shift. The result would be an explosion of residential taxes, similar to the late 1970s and, very likely, another tax revolt.

We are able to feed the survivors if there are no survivors

BOSTON — Yes indeed, ladies and gentlemen, just when the script was getting stale, we are offered a new act in the National Nuclear Follies. A hearty welcome, please, for "FEMA and The Farmers."

When last heard from, you may recall, FEMA (the Federal Emergency Management Agency) was hoisting it up on center stage with plans for evacuating our cities. In case of nuclear war, their theme song was: Pack up your troubles in your old family buggy and drive, drive, drive. Each urban dweller was assigned a rural destination, and a welcome wagon.

Also, their act played second banana to the hit charade of T.K. Jones and His Magic Shovels. The undersecretary of defense made it into the Nuclear Follies' big time with his upbeat view on survival: "Dig a hole, cover it with a few doors and then throw three feet of dirt on top." It was Jones who told us that we'd all make it if there were enough shovels to go around.

Well, fans, FEMA is back. They've taken on young crops suffer more from radiation than more mature crops. With any luck the nuclear war would take place in August rather than June. Summer stock time, as you know.

But FEMA's basic scenario is that, "The land and the work force would be available under even the greatest calamity — nuclear attack... Sufficient production seems assured to meet survivor needs."

In part, the planners are counting on the availability of migrant labor. There would be plenty of urban migrants hanging around to help with the harvest, they say. No more help problems; no more illegals. Everyone will pitch in with the picking.

They are also counting on diminished appetites. The pressure to feed the survivors will disappear pretty quickly, along with the survivors. Following an attack which would almost halt the population, FEMA notes, "those who are doomed to die will be consumers for (only) part of that time." No problem.

But back to the cans. The authors do admit there will be a problem with food processing and distribution. "Frankly the post-nuclear attack picture is not so bright in processing."

What we seem to be missing is a plan for more containers.

Now I don't know about the rest of the civil defense audience out there, but I have a feeling that these people could have cribbed their script from "The Day After." The best scene in the film was the wonderful meeting between the bureaucrat and the farmers.

The bureaucrat, speaking from instructions probably produced by FEMA fantasists, tells the farmers to go out into the fields and scrape up the fallout and the contaminated top soil. This is a little like skimming a ten-mile oil slick off the ocean with a teaspoon. Only this time, we're talking dead dirt.

Frankly, I hate to pan such a sincere troupe. Lord knows, they win points for imagination. More to the point, FEMA and the farmers were just doing their job of post-nuke planning. In an era when we name a nuclear missile "The Peacekeeper" and talk freely about first-strike scenarios, FEMA is just a doo-wop chorus for a headliner like Edward Teller.

But I keep remembering the words of Robert Jay Lifton, the Yale professor of psychiatry who has written about the "logic of madness" in our nuclear thinking: "Civil defense is part of the fundamental illusion about a nuclear war: The illusion of surviving. The illusion of recovery. It's massive denial."

Lifton's point-of-view is that of a nuclear-theater critic. "In itself (civil defense) seems like a natural and appropriate thing to do. But it increases the possibility of nuclear war, making it more acceptable. That's why it's immoral."

In fairness, the FEMA predictions may be accurate. If Carl Sagan's group of scientists is right, ten percent of the nuclear arsenal can create an ultimate Nuclear Winter. In that case, there would be enough food for the number of people: none.

Feldstein get's a lesson in the dangers of telling the truth

There is only one worse sin than to lie in the Reagan White House, and that is to tell the truth.

The first person to discover this is Dr. Martin Feldstein, the chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisors.

Dr. Feldstein's job is to advise the president on the future of the economy, regardless of political race, ideological creed and bookkeeping color.

What is driving Mr. Reagan's political advisers up the wall is that Dr. Feldstein has not been painting the same rosy future of the economy that the president intends to use in his re-election campaign.

Last week the Harvard professor was called on the carpet once again by the president's inner circle.

"They made him put his right hand on the Federal Budget."

"Do you swear to tell the economic truth, the whole economic truth, and nothing but the economic truth, so help you God?"

Dr. Feldstein said, "I do."

"You see," said Reagan's

Art Buchwald

right-hand man, "I told you he wasn't a team player."

"Why do you have to tell the truth during an election year?" another right-hand presidential aide asked him.

"Because I'll look like an idiot if I don't," Dr. Feldstein said. "We're going to have to face up to a $200-billion deficit in 1985 that could destroy any hope of a recovery. The only way to deal with it is to raise taxes and cut back on military spending."

"Dr. Feldstein," a third right-hand aide said, "you're not only not a team player, you're a Benedict Arnold."

"Look," said Dr. Feldstein, "here are the figures. I'm not making any of this up."

"Don't back up your argument with figures," the first right-hand man said. "That's the coward's way out. Do you realize you are making the deficit a political issue?"

"But the president made it a political issue in 1980, and that's one of the reasons he won," Dr. Feldstein protested.

"That was before it became his budget deficit. You're in to give us economic reality to show why a $200 billion deficit is good for the economy."

"How can I do that?" Dr. Feldstein said. "If the government has to go out on the public market and borrow money to pay its debts, it will send interest rates sky-high, and the private sector won't be able to afford to borrow money to keep the recovery going. Doesn't anybody here want to deal with reality?"

"We're only willing to deal with one kind of reality," a right-hand man said. "And that's getting the president re-elected. Now you either shut up about budget deficits or get off the team."

"I don't want to get off the team," Dr. Feldstein said. "I believe I'm serving the president by telling him the truth about the economic future of the country. It's gets re-elected and doesn't realize what lies ahead for him he'll become the laughingstock of the nation."

"All right, doctor," said the hardest right-hand aide. "You haven't got the message, so we're going to have to play rough."

"I'm not going to listen to any more of this claptrap," Dr. Feldstein said, and walked out.

"Bring in Larry Speakes," someone said.

The president's press secretary came in with his notepad.

"Larry," said the hardest aide. "Dr. Feldstein refuses to be a team player. At your next press briefing we want you go out and ridicule him in front of the entire White House press corps."

"Oh boy," said Larry. "This is going to be fun. Can I mispronounce his name every time I say it?"

"Give the whole thing the full treatment," the aide said. "You can use every joke about him in your book. We're going to get rid of Dr. Gloom one way or the other."

Soil conservation goal of new plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary John Block announced a pilot $20 million soil conservation effort Thursday, setting the stage for national debate about requiring farmers who receive government subsidies to practice conservation.

The pilot program will provide federal funding to pay farmers up to 90 percent of the cost of planting grass on highly erodible cropland for five years or planting trees for 10 years.

There is no legal authority for tying price supports or other farm programs to conservation, the administration has not adopted it as a policy and the idea has generated controversy among farmers. But Block said he has become increasingly convinced that it should be done.

"I guess I've probably believed it for quite a while, but I believe it more with each passing year and each passing day," he told a news conference to announce several conservation initiatives.

He said the pilot project would test the willingness of farmers to make long-term commitments to take highly erodible cropland out of production. With the results in hand, he said linking conservation with farm program benefits should be debated when Congress considers legislation to replace the current four-year law expiring in 1985.

The government estimates that 6.4 billion tons of soil erode from the nation's land each year and that erosion rates are unacceptable on 140 million acres of cropland.

Block said the pilot effort also would take land out of production at a time when U.S. productive capacity has outstripped foreign and domestic demand.

'Babies' follow parents

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The "baby-boom" babies have grown up favoring married life over being single, seeking more respect for authority and frowning on marijuana use, an apparent reversal of some earlier attitudes, a new report says.

The report is based on the results of a telephone survey of 1,000 Americans born between 1946 and 1964 conducted by National Research Inc. for the American Council of Life Insurance and the Health Insurance Association of America. The survey examined attitudes toward values and lifestyles, finances and health and health care.

According to the survey, 76 percent say an equal marriage, where husband and wife share the work child-rearing and homemaking responsibilities, most appeals to them. Among the unmarried, only 10 percent prefer the single life and 5 percent favor living together.

The report said 56 percent expressed approval of unmarried adults living together, while 32 percent disagreed.

Sixty-three percent said only economic necessity should lead a mother of preschool children to work outside the home and 51 percent believe that "strict old-fashioned upbringing and discipline are still the best ways to raise children."

Only 24 percent say they "would welcome more acceptance of marijuana usage, while 70 percent would not welcome that change, the report said.

Reagan angers rights groups

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Angry civil rights groups accused President Reagan and Republican congressional leaders Thursday of "double-crossing" them by sneakily trying to stack the U.S. Civil Rights Commission with Reagan appointees.

"There's no question the civil rights community feels betrayed by the president of the United States and the Senate and House Republican leadership," Ralph Nease, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, charged at a news conference.

"We are greatly troubled by this apparent double-cross," said Joe Previne, congressional liaison for the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Civil rights groups and their backers on Capitol Hill are upset over efforts by Reagan and House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois to drop two prominent GOP women, Mary Louise Smith and Jill Ruckelshaus, from the anti-discrimination agency. The pair would be replaced with people more in tune with Reagan's distaste for busing and affirmative action quotas.

Actress would have sued ...

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Actress Jodie Foster, who John Hinckley Jr. tried to impress by shooting Ronald Reagan, says she would have "loved" to sue the presidential assassin but he has no access to his family's money.

In an interview in Sunday's issue of Parade magazine, Miss Foster also said she does not believe the troubled young gunman, son of a wealthy Denver oilman, will ever be released from a mental institution — even though he maintains he is not dangerous to society.

"I don't think he'll get out," she said. "It would just cause too much controversy, and they would have to change the whole law regarding the insanity plea."

Doctor would feed invalid, face charge

ELIZABETH BOUVIA
Wants to die

By CATHERINE GEWERTZ
United Press International

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — A doctor testified Thursday that he would force feed a quadriplegic woman who wants to starve to death and risk the legal consequences if the court approves her wish to die in a county hospital.

Dr. Donald Fisher testified during the fourth day of a hearing that he was aware he could be charged with battery or violation of the patient's civil rights if he forced Elizabeth Bouvia.

"I realize that," Fisher said. "Pushing a patient away from a car that might run over them can also be construed as a battery."

Mrs. Bouvia, 26, has asked Superior Court Judge John Hews to grant a preliminary injunction that would forbid doctors from force feeding her.

The cerebral palsy victim said she wants to die at Riverside General Hospital, where she receives pain medication, because she has no where else to go.

Hews is not expected to make a decision before next week. Mrs. Bouvia's estranged husband testified in the afternoon session that his wife's desire to die was influenced by the couple's inability to have a child. Richard Bouvia also said his wife suffered a miscarriage before they were married in August 1982.

Bouvia, an ex-convict, said in an earlier interview he thinks the miscarriage and his inability to father a child were two factors that affected his wife's emotional state and led to her death wish. He also cited the drowning death of her older brother last year and her inability to find a job in social work.

Mrs. Bouvia, who has said she prefers death over life as a helpless quadriplegic, testified Wednesday she would use the only strength she has — in her right hand — to tear out feeding tubes if doctors try to force feed her.

Asked by Mrs. Bouvia's attorney if force feeding would violate her sense of "personal autonomy," Fisher replied:

"If she did die, she wouldn't have any autonomy."

Mrs. Bouvia has cited the fact that she requires round-the-clock care by others as the primary reason she wants to die.

Fisher contends the woman's decision has been influenced by recent setbacks in her life, including the breakup of her marriage and financial problems. But he said she is mentally competent.

Mothers juggle work, family differently

By ELIOT BRENNER
United Press International

WASHINGTON — More than half of working mothers with pre-school children arrange for child care outside the home and more mothers would look for work if such care were cheaper, the Census Bureau reported Thursday.

In a lengthy examination of child-care practices, the bureau reported that 40 percent of working women arrange for child care services in someone else's home and 15 percent in group care centers. The children of 31 percent of working mothers are cared for in the mother's home.

The bureau said just over 9 percent of the women care for their children while at work. That figure is down slightly from June 1977, when it was 10.7 percent.

Of the 40 percent cared for in another home, 21 percent were kept by non-relatives and 18 percent by relatives.

The report, based on a June 1982 survey, said there were 5,086,000 women between the ages of 18 and 44 with a child under age 5 who were working full- or part-time. There were nearly 6.5 million mothers of pre-school children not in the work force.

The proportion of mothers not in the labor force who work is that work if they could find child care at a reasonable cost is three times higher in families with incomes under $15,000 — 38 percent — than in those with incomes of at least $25,000 — 13 percent.

Among other highlights of the report: —Working women most likely to use group-care services include blacks, those whose youngest child was at least 3, well-educated women and those working full time.

—Of the 31 percent who have their children cared for at their home, 14 percent of the cases the father took care of the children, 11 percent had another relative cared for the children and 5.5 percent hired a non-relative. Nearly one-fourth of the fathers who provided primary child care were unemployed when the survey was made.

One of 12 drinkers is 'alcoholic'

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — About one of every 12 people who drink develops a psychological dependency on alcohol and that is the "essence" of alcoholism, a University of Texas psychiatry professor says.

Dr. Edgar F. Nace of the University of Texas at Austin said that psychological dependency remains long after a person stops drinking and continues to influence thinking and behavior during early years of recovery.

"Dependence means being influenced, controlled or determined by something other than one's self," he said. "This is the effect alcohol is having on those vulnerable to the development of alcoholism."

Writing in the current issue of "Texas Medicine," the Texas Medical Association's monthly journal, Nace said "psychological dependency" is expressed through changes in behavior and thinking.

"He (alcoholic) may bring his own bottle to a party, lest the host not have his particular brand; but really to be certain that a ready supply of alcohol is available," he said.

"In the early stages of dependency, the person is concerned with the possibility that his drinking will interfere with his job," Nace said. "Later, the concern is that work may interfere with obtaining a drink."

Nace said other well-known behavioral changes include morning drinking, binge drinking and brief amnesia or blackouts.

Rapist rethinking surgery option

ANDERSON, S.C. (UPI) — A married rapist who had chosen castration over a 30-year prison term told his attorney Thursday night he now "wants some time to think about it."

"I don't know what he's thinking," said attorney Glenn W. Thomason who represents Roscoe J. Brown, a 27-year-old father of two.

Thomason met with Judge C. Victor Pyle Thursday after Brown told reporters he would seek castration. The judge told the attorney Brown must drop his appeal of the castration option before the court can order the surgery.

Thomason said he relayed the judge's message to Brown Thursday night and the inmate expressed second thoughts.

"I told him he couldn't accept castration until he drops his appeal," Thomason said. "He said he didn't know if he wants to drop the appeal, and said he wants to think about it."

The attorney said he plans to meet with Brown Saturday to discuss the situation further.

Brown, of Pendleton, S.C., Mark Vaughn, 22, of Central, S.C., and Mike T. Braxton, 20, of Sarasota, Fla., pleaded guilty last month to repeatedly raping, beating and using a cigarette lighter to burn a 23-year-old Anderson woman. The 30-pound woman lost about half of her blood during the ordeal, court testimony indicated.

Vaughn and Braxton have not decided whether to accept castration or the prison term.

Prosecutor: Kill Biegenwald

FREEHOLD, N.J. (UPI) — Richard Biegenwald is guilty of an "outrageously vile, horrible and inhumane" murder and should be executed, a prosecutor told jurors considering Biegenwald's sentence Thursday.

The 44-year-old Asbury Park, N.J., man, who served 17 years in prison for a 1958 murder and faces trial for four other killings, was convicted Wednesday for the August 1982 shooting death of Anna Olesewicz, 19, of Camden.

The six-woman, six-man jury, which can recommend death by lethal injection or a life prison term with no parole for at least 30 years, began deliberating shortly after 1 p.m.

In a five-minute summation, Assistant Monmouth County Prosecutor James Fagen reminded the jury of Biegenwald's 1958 murder conviction and noted a prior murder is grounds for recommending the death sentence.

"You heard how this girl was killed — four bullets to the head," he said. "This was outrageously vile, horrible and inhumane. What I'm asking you to do is ... bury Mr. Biegenwald, something Mr. Biegenwald didn't have the decency to do for Anna Olesewicz."

"He got out of prison and killed again. While he was out, he got married and had a child, something the victim never had the chance to do and never will."

Flu on rise nationally

ATLANTA (UPI) — Three different varieties of influenza viruses striking in widely separate areas of the nation were reported Thursday by the national Centers for Disease Control.

One of the influenza cases involving a 20-year-old pregnant woman in North Carolina was fatal, the CDC said.

The CDC said it had received reports of illness caused by three influenza strains — type A(H3N2), the same general strain that caused world epidemics in 1957-58 and 1967-68; a second strain A(H1N1) related to the Russian flu virus; and a type B strain that frequently affects children.

The North Carolina victim, who was not identified, entered a hospital with pneumonia and died after delivering a premature child. The CDC said blood tests showed she had an influenza infection caused by the type A(H3N2) virus and "an extensive interstitial pneumonia."

However, there has been no evidence of increased respiratory illness in the victim's community, the federal health agency said.

The CDC said a community outbreak of influenza caused by the A(H3N2) flu virus began in Fairbanks, Alaska, in November and affected mostly adults of working age, with little illness seen in children. In early December, increased influenza-like illness was reported from Anchorage and Bethel, Alaska.

The same flu virus has been active in Nashville, Tenn., the CDC said, along with a second H1N1 virus. The latter virus also was identified in an ill 15-year-old male in Mobile, Ala., but there were no reports of increased influenza activity in that city.

The CDC said it was too early to tell if the nation will be assaulted by all three flu viruses this winter or if one will prevail.

Abused child released, dies

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A 3-year-old boy removed from his home because of alleged physical abuse and then ordered returned to his mother died Thursday of internal injuries and "bruises from head to toe," police said.

Dayshawm Bernard apparently had been beaten for days and was unconscious when his mother and her boyfriend took him to Tourow Infirmary early Thursday morning, police said. The child was dead on arrival.

The mother, Carol Bernard, 22, and her boyfriend, Eddie Moses III, 20, were arrested and charged with first-degree murder, said New Orleans Police spokesman Gus Krinke.

"It's probably one of the more severe cases of child abuse that I've ever witnessed," said officer Ron Cannatella, a member of the department's child abuse section involved in the arrest of Ms. Bernard during a Nov. 6 incident.

"The child's body was covered with bruises from head to toe and the child had a very large, severe bruise across his forehead," he said. "The child also suffered from numerous internal injuries."

Police records show the youngest was removed from his home in early November and placed under the direction of foster care authorities because of alleged abuse, Krinke said.

Nine days later, Orleans Parish Juvenile Judge Salvatore Mule ordered the child given back to his mother, police said, despite objections from child protection advocates.

"On Nov. 15, (Mule) returned the child to the custody of the mother against the recommendation of the child protection center and here we have the child today being beaten to death," Cannatella said.

Doctoring

Expert: Limit medical students

NEW YORK (UPI) — Limiting the number of medical students, schools and specialists will curb the growing doctor glut in the United States and lead to better health care at less cost, a hospital executive said Thursday.

Dr. James F. Glenn, new president of Mount Sinai Medical Center, also proposed stiffer licensing for graduates of foreign medical schools who want to practice in the United States.

Glenn, formerly dean of Emory University Medical School in Atlanta, made the unusual attack during his inauguration address, citing the nation's health care bill is over $300 billion a year.

The audience included public officials and top officials in the health care industry and from medical schools nationwide.

Glenn cited a 1980 report by the Department of Health and Human Services, which predicted a surplus of doctors in the nation by 1990.

"No action has since been taken to change the situation," he said.

"The major issue is that they add to an already inflated pool of physicians who bear the ultimate responsibility for expenditure of health care dollars.

"I believe we that we can plan for quality medical care at reasonable cost through a rationing of medical education, by controlling the number of students, the number of schools and the number of specialists."

Glenn has made his views known to deans of the 12 medical schools in New York State, the Commissioner of Health and the Board of Regents which licenses physicians, asking them to develop a rational policy for controlling physician education and thereby help to contain healthcare costs.

Doctors subjected to 'burnout'

CHICAGO (UPI) — Views of doctors as inflexible may cause them stress and contribute to high rates of drug abuse, anxiety, depression and eventually "burnout," physicians said Thursday.

An important character trait of doctors must be the ability to deal with imperfection — one's own and others, said Dr. Steven Dubovsky and Robert W. Schrier of the University of Colorado School of Medicine in Denver.

"For centuries, the physician has been viewed by his community as beyond reproach and virtually infallible in his decisions which often involve matters of life and death," they said in a Journal of the American Medical Association commentary.

"Such esteem has helped to create a mystique that, while reassuring to patients, can lead to great pressure on each new generation of physicians."

Doctors are confronted with illness and death, long hours and inadequate time with families, a prolonged period of apprenticeship, increasing complexities of medical technology, new frontiers in medical ethics and the burgeoning volume of medical knowledge.

Israelis attempt to block PLO escape

YASSER ARAFAT Seeks exit from Tripoli

By IVAN ZVERINA
United Press International

UNITED NATIONS — Israel sought cancellation Thursday of plans for the evacuation of Yasser Arafat and his PLO guerrillas from Lebanon under the U.N. flag, saying safe conduct for "terrorists" was inconceivable.

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar immediately made it clear his agreement for the use of the blue and white U.N. flag on "humanitarian grounds" would stand.

Arafat and his men, who have been battling PLO rebels in the north Lebanese port of Tripoli, prepared Thursday to board four Greek ships sent to evacuate them.

Israeli ambassador Yehuda Blum told the General Assembly during its Middle East debate he was asking Perez de Cuellar to cancel all arrangements made for the use of the U.N. flag in the evacuation from Tripoli of PLO remnants loyal to Arafat.

Blum did not say whether this meant that Israel would interfere with the planned evacuation if Perez de Cuellar does not cancel his authorization.

Asked for comment, a U.N. spokesman said "the reason for authorization of the use of the U.N. flag was on purely humanitarian grounds."

He said Perez de Cuellar's authorization in response to the Palestine Liberation Organization's request last week for U.N. safe conduct specified it was to "facilitate the resolution of a situation which has already cost many innocent lives and created great destruction."

Blum said the Israeli decision was made as a result of Tuesday's bomb attack on a bus in Jerusalem in which four civilians were killed and 46 others wounded and for which "the PLO wing headed by Yasser Arafat assumed responsibility for the crime."

"I am instructed to inform the General Assembly that the government of Israel is requesting the Secretary-General to cancel any arrangements that may have made to give the terrorists safe conduct under the United Nations flag," he said, departing from the prepared text of his speech.

In light of this horrendous crime, perpetrated by Arafat's terrorists, it is inconceivable that the United Nations, which is ostensibly dedicated to the preservation of human life and the enhancement of peace, should provide the terrorists with any assistance or facilities whatsoever," Blum said.

German leader charged for corruption

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Economic Minister Count Otto Lambsdorff was charged Thursday with bribery in a $175 million pay-off scandal, making him the first cabinet minister in West German history to face prosecution.

Parliament lifted Lambsdorff's immunity, Bonn Prosecutor Johannes Wilhelm formally charged the 55-year-old aristocrat with accepting a $50,000 bribe for trying to arrange a tax waiver for the Flick company, a large West German conglomerate.

The courts now must decide whether there is sufficient evidence to try Lambsdorff. Meanwhile, there have been increasing calls for his resignation from Chancellor Helmut Kohl's cabinet.

In a short statement, Wilhelm's office announced the charges had been filed. Lambsdorff will formally be notified by court officials within the next two days.

The minister has said he will not decide his future until he examines the charges. Kohl, under heavy pressure from opposition critics, has said he will stand by Lambsdorff until the court issues an indictment, which could take months.

The opposition Social Democrats introduced a motion in Parliament Thursday urging Kohl to dismiss Lambsdorff. The motion will be formally debated Friday.

Because the ruling Christian Democrats have a majority, there is little chance it will pass. However, a noisy and acrimonious debate is expected.

The Flick scandal dates from 1975, when the company sold its 52 percent share of the Daimler-Benz auto company for $717 million. Under German law, the company owed $175 million in capital gains tax.

NATO blames Russians for arms breakdown

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — NATO Thursday released a detailed account of the discontinued talks on intermediate-range nuclear forces blaming a stubborn Soviet demand for the breakdown in negotiations.

"The United States and its allies are prepared to have negotiations resume any time," said Richard Burt, assistant secretary of state and chairman of the Special Consultative Group on disarmament, which released the report.

"All the elements for an equitable and verifiable agreement were in place when the Soviets discontinued the talks, and they will remain on the negotiating table," Burt said.

"Deployments are beginning... but they can be halted or reversed at any time on the basis of a concrete and equitable arms control agreement," he said.

The 48-page report was prepared for a two-day meeting of NATO foreign ministers, who gathered in a top-secret session to review East-West relations and the situation in the Middle East, among other matters.

The Soviet Union walked out of the Intermediate Nuclear Forces talks Nov. 23 in protest to the NATO deployment. Thursday, the Soviets abandoned parallel negotiations on reduction of long-range nuclear arms, also in Geneva.

Officials said the report's release indicated pessimism about an early resumption of the INF talks, which until now have been kept confidential.

Human error, lack of radar blamed for crash

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Human error, blinding fog and lack of radar control caused the collision and explosion of two Spanish jets, killing 93 people on the runway of Madrid's airport, authorities said Thursday.

The Spanish airline pilots' union also called for the resignation of Spain's civil aviation director, blaming ing his agency for Wednesday's fiery crash at Barajas airport.

The official investigation into the causes of the crash — Madrid's second major air disaster in 10 days — could take months to complete, but aviation officials, air traffic controllers and pilots said a ground radar system and adequate runway signals could have prevented the accident.

Weeping relatives and friends of the 93 people who perished aboard the Iberia Boeing 777 and the DC-9 of the Spanish domestic carrier Aviaco mourned their dead in a memorial service at the airport chapel.

Nine government ministers joined about 500 people, many sobbing, in the packed chapel. Madrid's Roman Catholic archbishop Angel Soquia read a telegram of condolence from Pope John Paul II and preached a somber homily.

Immediately after the service, mourners headed for an airport hangar where their relatives' charred bodies and personal effects awaited identification.

Official fears Nazi revival

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — A West German Jewish leader said Thursday he is concerned young West Germans are increasingly turning to Nazism because they lack "a democratic consciousness."

Helmut Gallinski, chairman of West Berlin's Jewish community, said a ban the government imposed Wednesday on the National Socialist Action Front, a neo-Nazi movement, was overdue.

"The activities recently of Michael Kuehnen and his National Socialist Action Front were monstrous," Gallinski told the Hanover Neue Presse newspaper in an interview. Kuehnen is a former army lieutenant seeking to revive the brown-shirted storm troopers of the 1930s.

He said the membership of the organization, which is overwhelming Christian, is so young Germans are as vulnerable to anti-Semitism and racism as their parents. But he denied the weak economy was the reason for the revival of interest in Nazism.

Suspect had powder burns

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Tests indicate the alleged assassin of opposition leader Benigno Aquino fired a gun before he was killed by soldiers, a forensic chemist testified Thursday.

Chemist Alda Magapoe of the National Bureau of Investigation told a five-member legislative panel that she conducted paraffin tests on Rolando Galman at a military morgue and discovered nitrate specks embedded in his hands.

She said the nitrates, which make up gunpowder, indicated that Galman fired a gun before he was killed by soldiers Aug. 21.

But she also said gunpowder burns remain for 72 hours on a person who fires a gun and she could not positively say whether the nitrates were caused by a gun fired on Aug. 21 or earlier.

Government investigators say Galman, 33, an alleged communist hit man, was gunned down moments after he shot Aquino, President Ferdinand Marcos' chief political rival.

OPEC holds oil price, seeks tighter accord

By JOHN A. CALLCOTT
United Press International

GENEVA, Switzerland — OPEC ministers reached agreement Thursday on freezing their $23-a-barrel oil price and 17.5 million barrel-a-day production ceiling through the first quarter of 1984.

Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani made the announcement at the end of the second day of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' semi-annual ministerial meeting.

Delegates said the 13-nation cartel would hold the line on existing price and production levels at least for the first three months of 1984 and then review the pact in light of world demand at that time.

But the accord on maintaining the price and production levels set last March still left open the problem of ensuring that each OPEC member country strictly adheres to the arrangement.

Ministers agreed to establish a committee to discuss individual production quotas under the overall ceiling and ways to enforce compliance.

OPEC decided to sidestep the thorny issue of reassigning oil quotas among its members. Iraq, Iran, Venezuela and the United Arab Emirates had demanded the right to produce more oil under the current ceiling.

"We have complete agreement on the London accord," Yamani told reporters after a three-hour session Thursday night, relating to OPEC's March decision to lower prices by $5 to $29 a barrel and limit output to 17.5 million barrels a day.

Yamani, who came under pressure from other OPEC states, also said Saudi Arabia "might have to decrease production" if a need arose to defend the $29 base price. Some OPEC members accused the Saudis of exceeding their implied 5 million barrel-a-day output limit.

Iranian oil minister Mohammed Ghazali also told reporters that current prices and production would be maintained.

"We accept the spirit of the London agreement," Ghazali said, although he added that Iran still contests the $29 price and wants it to be returned to the previous $34-a-barrel level.

Ministers agreed to meet for a third day of talks Friday to discuss long-term strategy and the appointment of a new secretary general.

Iran, Iraq, Algeria and Venezuela were competing for the post which has been vacant since last June.

Oil industry analysts watching from the sidelines at the heavily guarded Intercountry Hotel, said OPEC would gain little from a simple freezing of its price and production ceiling.

Storm hits Rockies, Oregon

By DAVID SMOTHERS
United Press International

Winds beat the front range of the central Rockies with 60-mph force Thursday and freezing rain, snow and ice closed some highways in Oregon. Snows, some of them heavy, fell from the western mountains to the Great Lakes.

Much of the rest of the nation, battered by early December storms that took at least 39 lives, fell under the spell of a wintry calm.

The snows of December and November left officials and forecasters plenty to worry about.

About a million cubic yards of dirt and debris were piled on top of Slide Mountain near Lake Tahoe, Nev., ready to thunder down at any time. Northwestern Indiana drivers received more snow than a large section of Indiana got all last winter. Three walling storms since Dec. 1 are blamed for 39 deaths across the country.

Wintry weather still had a bite in the north. The wind chill factor was 31 below zero at Miles City, Mont., winds were clocked at 60 mph at Casper, Wyo., up to 4 inches of snow came down in Montana. Three inches fell at Indianapolis and Columbus, Ohio.

St. Louis, Mo., was the nation's coldest town with 6 below.

Travelers' warnings were still up in Oregon, across the Rockies and into Indiana.

"But within the next five days we can't see any new storms coming," a spokesman for the National Weather Service in Kansas City said. "Of course, that could change at any time."

In Nevada, many were worried about what has happened already this season appears to be shaping up more severe than last year, when record Sierra Nevada snowpack triggered avalanches and flooding.

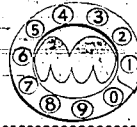

Bruce Cox, a ranger for the Toiyabe National Forest, said it was impossible to predict when a major slide would occur on Slide Mountain "but I am certain it will."

The Soil Conservation Service said the water content in the mountain snowpack was much higher than last year at this time. The level of Lake Tahoe was 6 inches below maximum and water was being released as fast as possible without causing damage downstream.

"I'm nervous," said Claude Dukes, a federal water master. "I'll have to admit that. Lake Tahoe is a real problem to me. I'm just holding my own throat."

By MARTIN HEERWALD
United Press International

SEATTLE — The mothballing of Washington Public Power Supply System project No. 3 substantially increases the risk of termination, the chief executive of Puget Sound Power & Light Co. warned Thursday.

John W. Ellis told a special three-member federal arbitration board an extended construction delay at the Satsop, Wash., project would open the possibility of having to win another relicensing battle in a region that has well-organized opponents of nuclear plants.

Ellis said if mothballing led to termination, his Bellevue, Wash.,-based utility would have to hike its rates to cover the $116 million it already had spent as its share of the project.

The Puget Power executive cited the experiences of his utility in being forced by strong opposition to drop plans to build twin nuclear plants in Washington and the cancellation of a joint venture with Portland General Electric to build a plant at Pebble Springs, Ore. He said funds spent in planning and trying to win licenses on those projects had to be paid by utility ratepayers.

"Under the construction delay, a vacuum is created for those opponents to see that no nuclear plant is completed," he said.

Ellis testified before a three-member board appointed by U.S. District Judge Richard Buby to decide by Dec. 23 if Bonneville Power Administration was right or wrong last summer when it forced the project into mothballs for three years.

His testimony completed the case of the four investor-owned utilities which together own 30 percent of the Satsop plant. Two or three days of rebuttal testimony will complete the hearing next week.

Ellis said his firm has spent $116 million so far on its 5 percent share of the plant.

He said it was beyond belief that the BPA could not impose a modest rate increase to gain the more than $1 billion needed to complete the three-fourths finished project.

Ellis said a three-roll increase in Bonneville rates would provide the revenue. That would amount to an increase of about 10 percent. BPA officials have said the increase would have to be substantially more and it would not be "prudent utility practice" to impose such rate hikes throughout the region.

Puget Power agreed to participate in WPPSS 3 only after the BPA "strongly indicated" the project could not be completed without help from the region's private utilities, Ellis said.

Arguments before the arbitration board focused this week on the need for the plant's power and the price it could demand in the marketplace.

The four investor-owned utilities filed suit seeking an order requiring a resumption of work on WPPSS 3, which was put on hold last spring when WPPSS was unable to borrow funds to finish it.

The supply system was frozen out of the bond market after it defaulted on $2.25 billion in bonds issued to finance abandoned WPPSS plants 4 and 5 at Satsop and Hanford, Wash.

Dress causes teacher firing

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — The Eugene school board has suspended a teacher for wearing a turban to work, as required by her religion.

The board voted 6-0 Wednesday night to suspend Karla Kaur, known as Janet Cooper, based on a state law forbidding teachers from wearing religious dress in the classroom.

Ms. Kaur, a member of the Sikh faith, said she must wear her white turban to symbolize her commitment.

She said later she is committed to her students, "but I'm more committed to my religion. The board just did what they had to do. I bear no animosity toward them."

Firm disclaims plane crash

BOISE (UPI) — An insurance company for Ada County asked a federal judge Thursday to relieve it of responsibility for any claims filed against Sheriff Chuck Palmer in connection with a plane crash involving his son.

The U.S. Fire Insurance Co. claimed it should not be forced to cover any damage claims stemming from the October wreck of the Cessna 182 airplane, registered to the Ada County Aerial Sheriff's Inc., a volunteer group.

Passenger James Hultgren died from injuries stemming from the crash 20 miles southeast of Challis.

The federal court suit says his wife, Irene, has told the insurance company she plans to lodge a $500,000 dollar claim against Palmer and several other officials, but county officials said the action has not been filed.

The crash occurred while Palmer's son, Mike Palmer, was piloting the plane during an elk-hunting trip.

The insurance company said the trip constituted an unlawful use of the aircraft, according to the suit.

The firm also said the county's policy specifies it will not cover accidents that occur when the plane is being rented or leased, as was the case on the elk-hunting trip, the suit said.

The sheriff has defended his son's use of the plane, although Mike Palmer was not a member of the aerial volunteer group.

The sheriff said his son, a special deputy, was gaining experience about the area's terrain that could benefit the county.

The insurance company also accused the county of failing to cooperate in its investigation of the incident and of making public statements without its permission.

The suit asks a federal judge to issue a declaratory judgment relieving the insurance company of responsibility and for recovery of attorney fees.

The suit names as defendants Ada County, the Ada County Aerial Sheriff's Inc., Mike and Chuck Palmer, Irene Hultgren and Cessna Finance Corp., lienholder on the plane.

Prosecutor opposing waste dump

BOISE (UPI) — Owyhee County Prosecutor Clayton Anderson said Thursday he is worried because he is seeping out of a site at a Bruneau hazardous waste dump because architectural drawings show the containers were designed to leak.

Anderson also said a preliminary analysis of Air Force drawings he obtained show the floor of the site is six inches thick — not five- to seven-foot thick as officials believed earlier.

He said he is trying to obtain additional information he thinks may show the need to shut the Envirostate Services site at Bruneau, which currently is not receiving waste because the company now is using a similar dump near Grand View.

Anderson predicted the Bruneau site would be eligible for money from "Supertund," a special federal account that provides money for hazardous waste cleanup.

"The potential for that being a Supertund site is present," Anderson said.

He said he met with Gov. John Evans Thursday and asked the chief executive to help county officials obtain more information about the design of the site and its contents at the site owned by Envirostate Services of Idaho.

The complex contains two other, nearly identical sites, but they are not being used for storage of hazardous wastes.

The newly revealed Air Force drawings were found in vaults owned by J-U-B Engineers, a Boise firm hired by Owyhee County to study the two hazardous waste dumps, Anderson said.

Governor wants water-right study

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — Gov. John Evans asked Idaho legislators Thursday to authorize an adjudicated study to thoroughly determine existing water rights on the Snake River drainage system.

Evans made the proposal while delivering the keynote address during the Idaho Water Users Association session at Idaho Falls.

Officials said the project could cost the state hundreds of thousands of dollars, but Evans said the legal study is needed for better management of Idaho's water resources.

The governor noted the Swan Falls water-rights controversy "has forced us to deal with an inevitable reality of today instead of five or 10 years from now."

He said the study must be performed without delay because "we no longer have more than enough water for all of our needs. The Swan Falls decision is forcing us to re-think water management practices in Idaho."

An Idaho Supreme Court decision last year upheld Idaho Power Co.'s right to 8,400 cubic feet per second of water at Swan Falls Dam. The ruling, followed by legislative battles and more litigation, threw a cloud over upstream irrigators' and other water users' rights.

Evans also urged the association to adopt a water-user fee to help fund the proposed state study and future water management programs because, he said, financing may not be granted by the Legislature.

Congressman angered by teachers' attack

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — Rep. Larry Craig is blasting the National Education Association, a group that put him on a "hit list" for next year's election.

Speaking Wednesday to teachers, parents and school administrators at North Idaho College in Coeur d'Alene, the Idaho Republican claimed the national organization doesn't reflect the beliefs of most Idaho teachers.

Craig and several other congressmen have been targeted for defeat next year by the NEA, which wants them replaced by representatives believed to be more responsive on school issues.

The two-term congressman criticized the national group, saying its 1982-83 operating budget contained nearly $33 million for increasing membership and lobbying on behalf of liberal political causes, but only $2.4 million to instruct and encourage professional development by teaching members.

"It's no wonder some of our teachers are 'flunking their exams,'" he said.

State official retracts 'offending' comments

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Agriculture Department Director Max Hanson apologized Thursday for saying an auditor who helped draft a report critical of the agency "guzzles booze" and "entrapped" an inspection supervisor during the program review.

Department lawyer Andre L'Heureux said Hanson agreed to signed a written apology drafted by Rory Jones, a Boise attorney who represented legislative audit manager Chuck Lindem.

The two-term congressman criticized the national group, saying its 1982-83 operating budget contained

"We're not going to sue him (now)," Jones said Thursday. "We just wanted this cleared up."

During a news conference last month, Hanson blasted legislative audits that listed past findings in his agency's operations.

He also charged Lindem "guzzles booze" and tricked a state bean and pea inspection supervisor in Twin Falls into entering a bar during working hours.

IEA officials skeptical about salary hikes

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

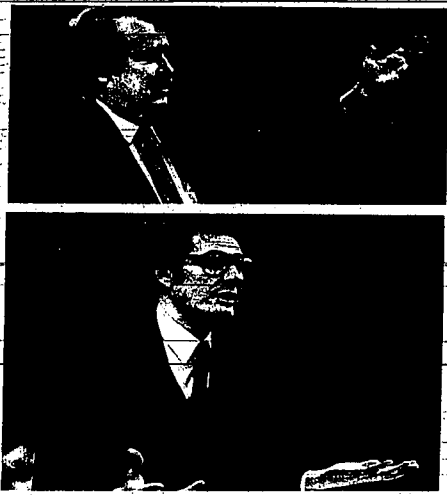

TWIN FALLS — Area Idaho Education Association officials are somewhat nervously praising an increased school funding recommendation, made by a legislative committee. Not surprisingly, the organization is pleased with a proposed $34 million funding increase for teachers' salaries over the next two years. The increase would raise Idaho teachers' wages about 17 percent, bringing them in line with the national average.

House Speaker Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls, said the Joint Public Education Reform Committee of the Legislature has worked more than seven months to develop a program that would increase school funding while improving operations. "It's a long overdue," Silvers said Wednesday. "I think it's something we can live with."

Terry Gilbert, the Idaho Education Association regional director for the Magic Valley, said Thursday that he agrees that the funding increase is overdue, but he points out that the Legislature has not appropriated the money yet. Rep. Kitty Gurnsey, R-Boise, says she thinks Idaho's lawmakers can find the money to fund the recommendations. "I think it can be done," says Gurnsey, the co-chairman of the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee. "If there is public support to increase the quality of education, I do believe the Legislature will back that up."

And Gilbert says that even if the $34 million appropriation for increased teachers' salaries is approved, Idaho will be doing less than its neighbors. Salaries would be raised to the national average, but Idaho is competing for good teachers with the surrounding states, he says. There, the average salary is about $1,000 higher than the national average of $20,550, according to Gilbert. He also points out that the raises would not come immediately. Under the committee's proposal, 60 percent of the raise would be granted next year, with the other 40 percent coming the year after.

"It's like shooting at a moving target," Gilbert says. While Idaho is achieving parity with national wages for 1983, the nation will have two more years in which to raise salaries, he says. However, Gilbert's biggest fear is that the other reforms recommended by the committee will pass, but no money will be appropriated for increased salaries, he says. The Idaho Education Association traditionally has taken a stand against merit pay for teachers. Yet, the organization may support the legislative committee's plan, including a provision for tying salary increases to the IEA on Page B2

Supreme Court hears fish-kill suit

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The responsibility for the death of 80,000 catfish at a Melon Valley hatchery in 1979 was at the heart of a case argued Thursday before the Idaho Supreme Court.

Fish Breeders alleges that a parasite-controlling chemical it purchased from Rangen in January 1979 killed the catfish. Fish Breeders took Rangen to court seeking more than $400,000 in damages. However, a Fifth District Court jury ruled in favor of Rangen, and awarded no damages to Fish Breeders, which then appealed the decision.

During Thursday's hearing, Lloyd Webb of Twin Falls, who is representing the hatchery, claimed that the judge in the jury trial erred by prohibiting testimony about other fish kills that allegedly were caused by the chemical, by falling, among other things, to pre-test it on a few fish.

The court is hearing area cases this week in Twin Falls, as part of its periodic visits to cities around the state. Fish Breeders of Idaho, a catfish producer in the western part of Twin Falls County, is asking the high court to order another trial be held in its lawsuit against Rangen Inc., a Buhl company.

His client contends now, as it did during the trial, that Fish Breeders misused the chemical, by failing, among other things, to pre-test it on a few fish. "This is not a contamination case," but one full of the "human element," Owen argued. "It takes care of the whole situation."

Webb also argued that the judge's instructions to the jury were inadequate. Owen replied that the instructions may not have been extensive, but they were adequate. Fish Breeders "were greedy and wanted too much in the instructions," he said.

And if county must guarantee indigent funds

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In April 1982, the Cassia County commissioners announced that their indigent fund had been depleted and could not cover additional claims.

Harris, who is a paraplegic, and Hodge, who suffers from a mental disorder, need the county funds to help cover the costs of their medication, their attorney, Robert Johnson of Burley, told the high-court justices. The county was asked to pay about $100 a month for each of the individuals, said Steve Bywater, the deputy Cassia County prosecutor, who is handling the case. The money was paid directly to their pharmacists.

Hodge sought help in district court. Bywater testified Thursday that the county came up with some more money in June for its indigent fund, and the subsequent claims from the two individuals were paid. Because of that action, Ward had ruled later that the couple's request for the order was moot, or no longer a legal question. In their appeal, the individuals, in reality, were asking the county to go into debt to pay their requests, Bywater said.

Although money later was "found" and the claims were paid, two individuals do not want to take the chance that the county will not take care of their needs if it faces another shortage of funds. "That was the thrust of an appeal heard Thursday by the Idaho Supreme Court, which is meeting this week in Twin Falls. James R. Harris and Diane Janis Hodge had asked Fifth District Judge Theron Ward to order Cassia County to make sure their claims for medication were paid for by Cassia County in April 1982, the county found that its indigent fund was broke. Letters were sent to the pharmacists of Hodge and Harris, informing them of the situation, and that the county could not pay until October, Johnson said. However, no letter was sent to the couple a month later, the families of Harris and Bywater argued that Harris and Hodge are in jeopardy of losing life-saving drugs if the county's indigent fund goes broke again, as it did in 1981 and 1982. He also said that the county had denied the couple the correct proceedings by notifying only the druggists of the problems. Bywater replied that the couple's requests

Bliss City Council debates plowing a 'driveway'

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

BLISS — City officials in Bliss are undecided whether a five-block street should be plowed by the city this winter.

is the city's responsibility to maintain. But until then, the city is not obligated to do any work on a street, according to city officials. At the Bliss City Council meeting Wednesday, Mayor Roland Zollinger said the street should be plowed, but the city should avoid assuming liability for the street.

to pay, so the city would not be liable for the street. After discussion, Councilman Doug Andrews described the street as "basically a private driveway." He recommended that council consult its attorney for advice on how to serve the residents without being liable for their street.

In related action, Zollinger commended city superintendent Eddie Butler for doing a good job of keeping the other streets plowed. "We've had a lot of compliments on the streets," the mayor said. He also noted that all residents have received letters from the city asking them not to park their cars on streets that need to be plowed.

In other business at the meeting: Zollinger reported that Gov. John Evans will decide this month which Idaho cities will receive federal community-development grants. If Bliss does not receive the grant it has requested, the city has about $23,000 in bank deposits that may be used, in part, to replace or repair sections of the deteriorated municipal water system, he said.

The street, Hess Lane, is located within the city, but it has not been accepted by the city as a street because the base and surface are not "up to grade."

He speculated the leaks were caused by the Oct. 28 earthquake because some of the pipe joints were pulled apart. Council approved a liquor license request for the Y-Tan and wine and beer licenses for Don't Ask, a new business in Bliss.

Save this paper; aid kids

TWIN FALLS — The proceeds from the sale of all the old newspapers and metal cans that are collected at the Kiwanis Club bins around Twin Falls in November and December will go to the "Kids in Car Seats" program, which provides restraining seats for infants, is run by the South Central Medical Society Auxiliary and Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. Lance Clow, the Kiwanis Club president, says the total contribution to the program should amount to about $500. "However, we hope that the citizens of Twin Falls will make an extra effort to deposit old newspapers and cans so that our donation can be a lot larger," he says. The Kiwanis newspaper bins are located at Albertson's, the Blue Lakes Shopping Center, Smith's Food King, both Twin Falls Circle-K stores, Waresmart and the Lynnwood Shopping Center. Aluminum cans bins are located at Albertson's and the two shopping centers.

Schools and streets finally open

TWIN FALLS — Roads and schools were open Thursday across the Magic Valley for the first time this week. Major highways around the area also generally were back to bare and dry, or bare and wet conditions. However, Idaho 75 north of Shoshone still has a broken snow floor and ice, and there is snow on 75 over Galena Summit and into Stanley. And parts of U.S. 20 that were closed Wednesday were re-opened Thursday, although icy spots and some snow remained. However, Idaho State Police officers were warning that night and early morning travelers should be prepared for patches of black ice, where moisture from melting snow remains on the roads. Highway district crews were mostly in the clean-up stages Thursday and reported no known snow-bound areas. Roads to all ski and snowmobile areas also are open, or will be open by the weekend. Ski areas on the south side of the Snake River were reporting record depths of snow. At a time when ski resorts normally are hoping for additional snow, both Pomerelle and Magic Mountain have had to close at least a day or two because of too much snow. Pomerelle now has 97 inches of snow on the top of its runs — a depth usually reached in late January or February. Magic Mountain is reporting 78 inches, also a high for this time of year. Chuck Grubb, principal in the land development firm, was willing to give the land to the district, but for tax reasons, he would not do so until March 1, 1984. The district then thought it was going to lose the site and turned to the city for help, a request that led to the Deerfield site. Rosso says the high-school site is ideal because pool-overs can use the high school parking area. The pool can be incorporated into the school's physical-education and sports programs.

Hailey pool returns 'home'

Agreement reached with state over site

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Just when it seemed like Blaine County's homeless swimming pool might go down the drain, it has been put back at the spot where its backers wanted to build it. Bob Rosso, a member of the county recreation district board, said this week that the district has learned it will not be required to obtain title to land — adjacent to Wood River High School — by Jan. 1 in order to keep a grant that will assure the pool is built.

The Idaho Parks and Recreation Department has decided the title requirement is not necessary for the district to receive a $131,000 grant from the federal Land and Water Conservation Fund for the $300,000 pool, Rosso says. However, the district will have to begin construction on the site, north of the high school, by the end of the year or lose the grant. "I'm excited because it (the high school location) is by far the best site," says Rosso, who has been involved in the search for a pool site for the past two years.

The district had thought it would lose the high-school site because it could not obtain title until March 1. Therefore, it had turned to a site on municipal park property in the Deerfield area, on the east side of Hailey, as an alternative. The Hailey City Council met in special session last month and approved the new location. However, several homeowners in the Deerfield and adjacent Blawha subdivisions objected, and it appeared the pool might be unpopular at that site.

Furthermore, the city attorney had determined that the city should have held a public hearing before approving the Deerfield location. So, the council was faced with reaffirming its decision, this time against organized opposition. But while on a trip to Boise, Councilman John Coddle stopped into the state Parks and Recreation office to find out for himself what the problems were. After talking with state officials and discussing the matter further with recreation district officials and the future owner of the property, an agreement was worked out that satisfied the state.

In the meantime, the district must begin work on the project before Jan. 1, to keep the grant. Parks and Recreation Department planner Reuel Smith says the construction requirement will be met if the district begins site preparation by tearing down two buildings, removing a fence and putting in utility subdivisions. Coddle says everyone involved deserves credit for being flexible and doing what they could to get the pool back to the high school site.

The district's latest problems began when it was learned that the high-school site was not owned by the city of Hailey; the city owned only a utility easement on the site. Spranger-Grubb Associates, a land development firm in Hailey, held an option to buy the land from the owner. Chuck Grubb, principal in the land development firm, was willing to give the land to the district, but for tax reasons, he would not do so until March 1, 1984. The district then thought it was going to lose the site and turned to the city for help, a request that led to the Deerfield site. Rosso says the high-school site is ideal because pool-overs can use the high school parking area. The pool can be incorporated into the school's physical-education and sports programs.

Man robbed to get attention

By PAT MARCANTONIO Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Dennis Major of Twin Falls told a judge this week that he had robbed a man to get attention.

The 22-year-old Major pleaded guilty on Monday to the Aug. 10 robbery of the 7-11 store at 1445 Addison Ave. in Twin Falls, where he pushed a man on the counter and demanded money. Earlier, he had admitted robbing the Buttry's grocery store in Twin Falls on Sept. 11. Neither crime involved the use of a gun.

Major has been sentenced to spend four months at the North Idaho Correctional Institution at Cottonwood for both crimes.

In his statement to court, Major said he had committed the crimes for attention. "I don't feel I'm a criminal; I just did criminal things."

Public defender Mike Potts suggested that his client be sent to the Cottonwood facility instead of prison, because of Major's prior clean record. "It will do Dennis some good," Potts said.

Dennis Voorhees, the deputy Twin Falls County prosecutor, and Judge Daniel Meehl agreed. At the end of his term at Cottonwood, Major will be returned to court to determine if his behavior warrants prison time or probation.

Major had requested he be sent to the state prison at Boise for the four months, so that he would be able to visit with his parents — something he said he could not do at Cottonwood. But, Meehl decided that NICI would be best for the young man. Family support could come through letters, the judge said.

In another case heard Monday, 52-year-old Charles F. Kessler of Pocatello pleaded innocent to sexually molesting a 7-year-old girl on Sept. 11 in Twin Falls.

Powers requested that Kessler's bond be lowered from $10,000, or that he be released on his own recognizance, since he had no prior record. Meehl took the matter under advisement until he receives more information about the suspect's finances.

Meehl did order that Kessler find a private attorney to represent him because some property he owns apparently makes him ineligible for the services of the public defender.

Water leak closes Bliss School

BLISS — The Bliss School was closed Wednesday because of a severe water leak.

According to clerk Anita Standa, one section of the roof had melted snow, and water was flowing into the library office in a steady stream, "like a low faucet running."

Water also leaked through the east wall into the lower level of the school, she said.

A repair crew showed the remaining snow off the roof Wednesday night by temporary roofing over the library and office.

"It will need to have a better patch job next summer," Standa said.

Students get extra holiday

RUPERT — Students in the Minico School District will have an extra day of Christmas vacation this year.

The Minico school board has approved adding the Monday after New Year's Day to Christmas vacation. The extra day will be made up on the Monday after Easter, April 23, which previously had been designated as a holiday.

The board made the decision at its meeting this week. Also at the meeting, it was announced that the Board's negotiating team has agreed to meet with negotiators from the teachers association to begin talks on a contract for the 1984-85 school year. The first meeting has been set for Feb. 1.

Nursing home to hold party

WENDELL — A Christmas party will be held at the Magic Valley Manor nursing home in Wendell on Sunday, Dec. 18, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Santa Claus will be on hand, along with live entertainment and food and drink.

The public is invited to attend.

Area lawmakers to talk

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual public-information session with area state legislators next week.

The meeting will take place at noon next Thursday, Dec. 15, at the Turf Club, 734 Falls Ave. in Twin Falls, executive director Mike Dalton says.

The public is invited to attend the luncheon, which will feature short comments from each Twin Falls-area lawmaker and an opportunity for those attending to ask questions.

The cost of the luncheon is $5. Those wishing to attend must register by calling the chamber office at 753-3974.

School district has openings

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls School District is looking for a Chapter One and migrant-education teacher and an athletic director, says Superintendent Gary Piller.

Chapter One is a federally funded program for disadvantaged students.

Frances LaCroix, the present Chapter One and migrant-education teacher, will leave the district on Dec. 21 to move to Salt Lake City. Her job responsibilities also have included the district's classes for children who speak little English.

Piller says he will accept applications from current employees and from teachers outside the district. The position of athletic director will be filled if Duke Wiseman is appointed O'Leary Junior High School principal at the Dec. 13 board meeting as expected, the superintendent says.

Piller says the position will be open to employees within the district, and he also may open it to other educators. In the meantime, he says he is considering changes in the responsibilities of the athletic director.

TWIN FALLS — Students in the Twin Falls schools and their parents will learn about drug abuse next week.

JACKPOT — A Cactus Pete's cash-no-cashier, Fritz Harzig, was charged Thursday with discharging a firearm into Burton's Club 93 casino, according to Elko County sheriff's Detective Larry Lipprell.

On Nov. 21, a bullet passed over several unoccupied blackjack tables and lodged in the south wall of the casino, Harzig confessed to firing the shot, Lipprell says. The defendant apparently had suffered heavy gambling losses earlier that morning, according to the detective.

Harzig also was charged Thursday with taking goods from vehicles with Oregon and Utah license plates in Cactus Pete's parking lot the morning of Dec. 1. One of the burglaries was not reported, but the registration for the Utah vehicle was found in Harzig's apartment, the detective said.

Also Thursday, Harzig was charged with a burglary of the Family Motel in Elko.

Last week, Harzig was arrested and charged with possession of stolen credit cards from an Elko burglary-smatching-and-two-counts-of-pur-

Paul Henning, of the Intermountain Hospital in Boise, will present a seminar called "Epileptic! Kids, Drugs and Alcohol" to all Twin Falls students above the second grade.

The program will concentrate on marijuana and alcohol, a hospital spokesman says. Henning will show a filmstrip and discuss the medical effects of drugs like marijuana on the lungs, the memory and the reproductive system.

The effects of peer pressure, popular music, advertising and movies on drug usage also will be considered.

Parents will have a chance to view the filmstrip Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the O'Leary Junior High School auditorium. Following the film, will be a slide presentation to explain to parents the kinds of drugs being used among students and their effects. How to identify drug usage and find help also will be discussed.

High-school students will participate in the seminar on Monday. Junior-high students are scheduled for Tuesday, and grade-school students will hear the presentation on Wednesday.

IEA honors newspaper series

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Education Association has awarded the Times-News a certificate of appreciation for a five-part series on education.

From Oct. 16 to Oct. 20 of this year, the paper ran a series of articles that examined the quality of education in the Magic Valley.

The series analyzed student test scores, discipline, class offerings and education policies in area schools, using the Twin Falls, Kimberly, Wood River and Dietrich schools as examples. Community leaders and educators were given a chance to comment on the educational system in the valley, and Idaho's Excellence in Education report was printed.

Managing editor Stephen Hargren and former education reporter Horat Gubert were specifically commended by the Idaho Education Association for having "the energy and commitment required to prepare and present the series."

BLM needs 1984 firefighters

SHOSHONE — The Bureau of Land Management's Shoshone District will be hiring approximately 60 firefighters for the upcoming June through September fire season.

Persons interested in applying for one of these positions should pick up an application form by BLM 01588 and submit it to the agency prior to Jan. 15.

To be eligible for employment, applicants must be at least 18 at the time of appointment and physically able to perform the work.

For more information, call 886-2206.

New BLM chief to be honored

BURLEY — The Bureau of Land Management's Burley District will hold a ceremony to mark the appointment of John Davis as the new district manager.

It will be held at 10 a.m. next Wednesday, Dec. 14. The ceremony, which will take place at the BLM office at 200 S. Oakley Highway in Burley, will be followed by an open house.

The public is invited to attend.

Correction

JEROME — Dorothy Hughes, a worthy grand matron in the Eastern Star organization, will make her official visit in the Jerome Eastern Star chapter at 8 this evening, instead of Saturday, as was reported in Thursday's Times-News.

All Magic Valley Eastern Star members are invited to attend the meeting, which will be held in the Jerome Masonic Temple.

Cactus Pete's employee charged with Barton's shooting

BOTH BURGLARY CHARGES WERE IN CONNECTION WITH A BREAK IN AT LINDA HIGGEN'S APARTMENT AT THE MIDDLECAMP COMPLEX IN JACKPOT ON Dec. 4.

Harzig is still being investigated in connection with the shooting of a bull south of Jackpot, and a theft at Barton's Club 93, the detective said.

Two-car accident sends girl to hospital

TWIN FALLS — An 18-year-old Twin Falls girl was treated for injuries following a traffic accident Thursday evening at Third Avenue East and Ash Street.

Sgt. Jim Milder, of the Twin Falls Police Department, said Roma Pfister, 18, of Twin Falls, was a passenger in a car driven by Tod Romans, 19, of Route 2, Twin Falls.

His vehicle was westbound on Third Avenue when he pulled in front of a car driven south on Ash Street by Fory Mamber, 19, also of Twin Falls.

Job performance, Gilbert says

"The package may have to be supported to deal with public perceptions and gain necessary revenue," he says. "I think the public — many of them, anyway — think we have a lot of dead wood, and they (the teachers) need to be kicked in the behind. I think that is erroneous."

A provision for yearly evaluations should please some of the teachers' detractors, Gilbert says. Yet, he feels the reform will have little benefit except as part of a plan that signals to teachers that the Legislature is willing to support education.

A Twin Falls teacher and the IEA's state vice president, Connie Hutchison, says she is more apprehensive about the committee's proposal.

"If possible, the state would provide an undesignated amount of money to school districts to promote teachers according to previously established district criteria," Hutchison says she fears the evaluation based on quality and leadership abilities would cause divisiveness among teachers.

"I do feel there will be problems with 'merit pay if you differentiate between good and poor teachers in the district,'" Hutchison said Thursday.

Gilbert also objects to the limited scope of the merit-pay proposal.

"What does merit pay say? The ill's of education rest on the shoulders of the classroom teachers. They will all be held accountable for education, and just a few who are identified as superlative will be rewarded," he says.

The merit-pay proposal also seems unpopular with teachers who do not belong to the Idaho Education Association.

Kimberly High School math teacher Gordon Hogan says the proposal will be "very, very hard to implement," fairly or unfairly, he says, when he was in the defense industry, he says, but it's not a concept that translates well to education.

"The difference is who is funding it. In private industry, they just have to answer to themselves. We are public property."

Heber Lorenzo Welch

HEYBURN — Heber Lorenzo Welch, 88, of Heyburn, died Wednesday at Casita Memorial Hospital.

Born July 14, 1895, in Logan, Utah, he married Sarah Welch on June 6, 1918, in the Salt Lake City temple of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

They lived in the Logan area, and he was section foreman for the railroad. Later, he farmed and then went into the painting business.

He was a veteran of World War I and was active in the Mormon Church.

Mr. Welch had lived in Heyburn for the last several years.

Surviving are: a son, Desmond Welch of Heyburn; a daughter, Elzanda Campbell of Spokane, Wash.; a brother, Delbert Welch of Buncraft, Idaho; a sister, Edna Ockler of Logan; six grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by his wife, who died in 1945, a son, three brothers and three sisters.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Monday in the Heyburn First-Ward Mormon Chapel, with Bishop Richard Sabe officiating. Burial will be in the Ogden City Cemetery.

Friends may call at McCulloch's Funeral Home in Burley on Sunday from 4 to 8 p.m. and on Monday prior to the service.

Hall C. Parke

TWIN FALLS — Hall C. Parke, 76, of Twin Falls, died early Thursday morning at the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital.

Born Oct. 1, 1907, in Halley, he had lived in Twin Falls since 1961, moving here from Florida, where he had lived for nine years.

Mr. Parke was the manager of Ketchikan, Alaska, during World War II. He served in the Civil Air Patrol during the war.

He was a member of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension.

Surviving are: his wife of Twin Falls; a son, Larry Parke of Idaho Falls; a daughter, Evelyn Parke of Coeur d'Alene, Calif.; four grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by a brother. A memorial service will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Rev. Father Fred Elwood, officiating.

Born Nov. 21, 1900, in Orvet, S.D., he married Violet Johnson on June 8, 1930, in Slickney, S.D.

In 1948, they moved to Gooding, where he worked for the Union Pacific Railroad until retiring in 1967.

He was a member of the Gooding Nazarene Church.

Surviving are: a son, Chris Marquardt of Caldwell; three daughters, Darlene King of Lublin, Texas, and Mary Lou Fries and Ruth M. Acha, both of Gooding; a brother, Ernest Marquardt of Missoula, Mont., and two sisters, Doris and Frieda, both of South Dakota.

He was preceded in death by his wife in 1968 and a daughter.

The funeral will be held Monday at 2 p.m. at Demaray's Gooding Chapel, with the Rev. David McGarran officiating. Burial will be in Elmwood Cemetery in Gooding.

Friends may call at the funeral home Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

Haley still learns

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "I've been fortunate to have played for a lot of coaches from junior high through college. I've learned something from everyone that I've been able to use in practically every game since."

With that Dewey Haley, sophomore point guard for College of Southern Idaho, lets everyone know he's not overlooking any part of his basketball development.

Haley and his CSI teammates currently are preparing for today and Saturday's K and T Steel tournament, which could present them with their strongest competition of the season. Nebraska Western will meet third-ranked Dixie College at 7 p.m. today in the opener with CSI taking on arch-rival Ricks in the nightcap. Saturday will be losers' games at 7 p.m. and the title game at 9 p.m.

That Haley is in Idaho playing basketball stems from several decisions he made when he graduated from Lavonia, Ga., High School.

He played football, basketball and baseball and enjoyed success in all three.

"I had to make a decision," Haley said. "I decided to go with basketball. But even though I shouldn't have gone with baseball. And there are times I think about going to another school and trying out for the football team as a walk-on," said the former ballplayer.

One of the reasons Haley chose basketball was he came out of his senior season with a 30-point-per-game average.

Having decided what to play, he then had to decide where.

"I think I started thinking about CSI because New Mexico talked about it," Haley said. "I had heard of Idaho, but I didn't know much about it," he added with a laugh.

Perhaps the pivotal point that allowed then-coach Dave Campbell to woo Haley here was "when I was in high school I always said I was going to get as far away from home as I could. But as the years went by, I realized this was a good opportunity to get a long ways away and mature and learn to rely on myself more. Now I'm really glad I came out here because it's been two different worlds."

But as he contemplates the next two years, Haley said the chances of his returning closer to home are greater. "I think at least stay on the other side of the mountains," he added with a laugh.

Haley will be visiting Georgia State during the holidays and that would put him close to home where "all the people who supported me from junior high through high school could watch me play and hopefully I could show them their time wasn't wasted. And I like to work with the kids in my hometown. When I go home I go to the school and tell them things that I've learned and how to use it. I've taught my younger brothers and they've been working on it because they're beating me with my own stuff."

But he isn't limiting his thought to Georgia.

"I'm getting letters from all-around I haven't closed any schools out. I suppose the major thing will be I'll look at their rosters and how they are coming back and how I might fit in," he said.

From a basketball standpoint,

Haley estimates this year's team is "20 points better" than last year's.

"We have more depth, our last men go to the boards better, we've got shooters and we've got role players and role players are what you need mainly. Someone who understands what he's supposed to do for the team, does it and doesn't try to play beyond himself."

"I think the big difference between this year and last year's team is that last year we lacked the men to go to the boards. And I think we're more fundamentally sound this year. Coach Trenkle really stressed fundamentals in pre-season practices."

Haley said he had no problem adjusting to the point-guard role he's inherited at CSI.

"I scored a lot in high school but I figured I'd have another year in college," he said of last season when he wasn't very offensively oriented.

"I still think my job is more to get the ball inside than think about shooting outside jumpers," he said.

"If I shoot from outside, maybe it's a good chance for two points. But if I get it inside to the big guys, we've got a good chance for the three-point play. I tell the big guys, 'You got open and I'll find a way to get the ball to you.'"

"I definitely feel more relaxed, more calm this year. I know my ability and I know what is expected of me. I'm playing game-to-game and not looking too far ahead."

That Haley is accomplishing those things is obvious to those who watched him last year and then at the T-Bird Classic in Casper, Wyo.

"People started heating up on Dewey at the Classic," confirms CSI Coach Fred Trenkle. "Weber State liked him last year and after the Casper tournament, they're looking for him again. Georgia State has kinda been plugging along. They called after we got back from Casper and I just told them if they wanted Dewey, they'd better start making their move because he's lit up a lot of teams."

Elite quartet to convene in K&T tourney

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Four teams with the potential to be among the 20 top-ranked junior college teams in the nation sometime this season collide in the K and T Steel Basketball Tournament at the CSI gymnasium this weekend.

Currently, only the host Golden Eagles are ranked, Coach Fred Trenkle winding up his first week as a head coach by being ranked 17th.

But Dixie College of St. George, Utah, headed by former BYU High mentor Neil Roberts, brings in a 105-81 record. However, that one Dixie loss came in the finals of the Valley of the Tournament last weekend at the hands of Ricks College 108-87. Ricks comes in with a 7-2 mark and Nebraska Western, a team CSI defeated in the Casper Classic, is 6-2.

The dogfight kicks off at 7 p.m. today with Dixie taking on the Nebraskaans while CSI and Ricks square off in the 9 p.m. nightcap. The first-night losers will play at 7 p.m. Saturday with the title game slated for 9 p.m.

The first official tournament function will be a luncheon for coaches and meet officials at the CSI cafeteria at noon today. CSI boosters are invited to attend a no-host get-together after tonight's second game at the Canyon Springs Inn.

"This has got to be as good a field as anyone can put together for junior colleges this year," said CSI Coach Trenkle.

"I know that Coach Roberts feels that Ricks has probably the best team he's seen come out of that school. And (Ricks Coach) Gary Gardner was quoted in the Idaho Falls paper as saying this was probably the best team he's ever had. I know that we beat Nebraska Western by 20 at Casper but we got 10 of those in the triple-minutes of the game. Kinda funny on them before they got into their game. They've got some excellent athletes."

Ricks and CSI have one common opponent this year in Central Wyoming University. Central tipped Ricks by four and CSI tipped Central by a point in that infamous 30-four game at Casper. But when Central came to Rexburg Tuesday night, Ricks extracted 106-73 vengeance.

"But," said Trenkle. "Ricks was without Alan Campbell in that first game and Burns four-year recruiters have told me he's probably Ricks' best all-around player. He missed a couple three games with a leg injury of some kind and they lost two games while he was gone. He had 27 against Dixie in the Valley of the Sun finals and is leading them in average scoring so I'm sure they missed him in those two losses."

In addition to Campbell at 6-7, Ricks is expected to start 6-6 Roland Smith and 6-8 Bryan Fink. The guard spots will be held down by 6-0 Paul Sagers and 6-1 Trent Shippen.

The night saw Ricks play against Sirio of Brazil; they were a tremendous shooting team," said Trenkle of the Vikings. "They pose a big problem because most of their players have tremendous range and we don't guard out that far. If they're hitting these 25-footers, we'll have to start extending and then they've got all that depth in tall guys to go to inside. We'll find out really quick how far we can extend our defense without opening up the paint."

Although Ricks beat Dixie by 19 points, Coach Roberts isn't certain that margin is indicative of the game.

"Roberts told me Dixie was down something like five with three minutes left and Ricks then put them away by hitting something like 18 free throws coming to the wire."

"The other thing I know about Dixie is they were the only U.S. team that beat Sirio in Brazil in their tour of this country. They got them by eight points and Sirio beat us. They've got to be a good team," Trenkle added.

Nebraska Western, which was 25-11 last year and runner-up in region IX, is largely a freshman team. They are coached by Terry Layton who is in his first year at the Scottsbluff school but familiar with southern Idaho after spending three seasons at Northwest Nazarene College in Nampa.

The Cougars are led by 6-11 sophomore guard Russell Starr with Joe Deypraying the other starter out front. They are spelled by James Woods, 6-4 guard, who had two good scoring nights last year in the Casper Classic. The Cougars usually go with 6-4 Wilmer Merritweber, 6-6 Stuart Noland and 6-7 Buckley Cramer inside and spell those three with 6-4 Nicky Foster.

Yankees active in trading

Kuhn in until March; Brown AL prexy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Bowie Kuhn, star of a "transitory bridge" over troubled waters, had his job as baseball commissioner extended until March 1, 1984, and Dr. Bobby Brown was named president of the American League Thursday at the winter meetings.

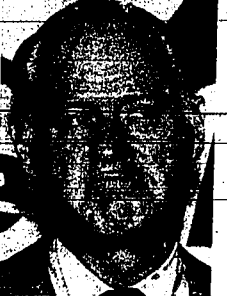

Kuhn, who was supposed to vacate his office by Dec. 31, was asked to stay on another two months in order to give the Search Committee additional time to find a successor.

In explaining that the job of finding a replacement was much tougher than originally anticipated, Bud Selig, chairman of the Search Committee, said he had received unanimous approval from the owners to keep Kuhn in office for another two months.

It was the second extension Kuhn has received. He originally resigned as commissioner last August after the owners had voted the previous November not to renew his contract but was asked to stay until Dec. 31.

"Clearly, a transitory bridge needs to be built at all times and having Bowie there — and that's the latest date he will be leaving — is better from him, frankly, more than it comes from me — will be very helpful in a smooth and effective running of the commissioner's office," said Selig.

Despite reports to the contrary, Selig insisted that no candidates had been offered the job as commissioner.

BOWIE KUHN
Bridge over troubled waters

although he admitted that about a dozen had been interviewed.

"This job has been offered to no one, no one," said Selig. "Nobody has withdrawn, nobody has been offered the job and I can't believe or imagine where anybody got that kind of garbage. Now I mean that with every fiber of my body."

Selig said there were various reasons for the delay.

Ex-CSI star McNealy traded

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — The Montreal Expos traded pitcher Ray Burris to the Oakland A's Thursday for minor-league outfielder Rusty McNealy, a former star outfielder with the College of Southern Idaho.

Burris, 33, posted a 4-7 record with a 3.63 ERA last season while appearing in 40 games. Used mostly in relief, he hurled 54 innings and struck out 100 men while walking 56.

A 10-year veteran, the right-handed Burris began his major league career with the Chicago Cubs in 1973 and twice won 15 games in a season for the Cubs.

McNealy, one of the smallest players in baseball at 5-foot-8 and 160 pounds, spent most of last season at Tacoma, of the Pacific Coast League. The 25-year-old hit .288 with no home runs and 42 RBI.

Known for his base-running ability, McNealy stole 43 bases and scored 89 runs for Tacoma. He played in just 15 games for Oakland, most of them as a pinch runner, and did not get a hit in four at-bats, although he scored five runs.

Bennett Williams of Baltimore, a former New York Yankee third baseman and a noted Houston cardiologist, replaces Lee MacPhail as AL president, effective Jan. 1. MacPhail resigned to take over the job as director of the Player Relations Committee. Robert O. Fisher, who served under MacPhail, was named executive vice president under Brown.

On the trading front Thursday, the New York Yankees were the most active team. The Yankees acquired shortstop Tim Lincecum from the California Angels for pitcher Curt Schilling.

Burley, Jerome face tough battles tonight

By CHRIS HART
Times-News writer

A pair of Magic Valley's A-2 teams should get a better idea tonight whether they'll emerge as contenders in the season as contenders or pretenders.

Burley, 1-1 and rated third in the state, entertains second-ranked Madison in a battle of Bobcats. Meanwhile, No. 4 Bishop Kelly travels to Jerome, which seeks to end an annoying losing slump. Both games begin at 8 p.m.

The Burley-Madison encounter promises to be a competitive one. Burley's front line has pleased Coach Jerry Swan so far with its offensive and rebounding production, but he feels that Madison will provide a stiff test.

"We're going to have to rebound well tonight. Central tipped Ricks by four and CSI tipped Central by a point in that infamous 30-four game at Casper. But when Central came to Rexburg Tuesday night, Ricks extracted 106-73 vengeance."

However, Grover feels Burley will be "quite a bit bigger than we are. That will be a little bit of a problem."

Madison hasn't experienced many problems in building its 3-0 record. All of its victims have been A-1 schools: Idaho Falls, Skyline and Bonneville. "We've been better than I expected," Grover said.

"I think it's a little slow coming out of football. We're not playing as well as we can, but we're still able to win and I'm really pleased with that."

Jerome hasn't been pleased so far with its shooting percentage, which is hovering near the 55 percent mark. "That's not as good as this team should be shooting," Coach Ben Allen said. "I think the kids are trying to create their own shots instead of letting the offense create the shots for them. We have to be a little bit more selective."

In the Tigers are 2-1 with only a loss Wednesday to 6-11 Minico spoiling their record. "The kids are playing good defense, which is really surprising because we haven't spent a bunch of time on it," Allen Wednesday said.

Jerome didn't spend a bunch of time scouting Bishop Kelly, mainly because such tactics were impossible with the recent snow rendering travel to Boise impossible. But Allen, who faced the Knights last year when he coached at Buhl, has some idea of what Jerome will see tonight.

"They had a young team last year and if they ended up winning their district, so I anticipate they'll have a good team this year," he said. "Size-wise will be bigger than they are, so I'm sure they'll try to move the ball up and down the floor more."

Knight Coach Neil McCarthy said nothing to suggest Allen was wrong. McCarthy plans to rotate nine players, a pattern which lends itself to a running game. Additionally, McCarthy doesn't seem to slow down the tempo, thereby allowing Jerome's 6-5 Gary Hulseby to dominate matters.

"That would be nothing new, Allen said. "Gary's been doing a super job defensively, the way they coach praised. "Offensively at Minico they pretty much shut him down but I think we've got to get him a little more aggressive offensively and get more movement in the key. I think we've got to have everybody double-teaming and piling up on him. That's partly because we're not shooting well from the perimeter. But defensively it's a more intimidating force than I remember from last year."

Resorts report amazing snow depths

TWIN FALLS — Snow reports from area ski resorts sound more like late-season depths than the third weekend of the season.

All resort operators agree there is no shortage of snow and the coming weekend offers excellent skiing. Most resorts opened Thanksgiving day with record snow depths and have been getting continuous storms since that time.

Pomerelle, south of Burley, is reporting 97 inches of snow at the top of ski runs and 73 inches at the lodge following a week of snow storms. Four inches of new snow was reported Thursday. The road has been plowed and was in good condition Thursday afternoon. Night skiing began Wednesday at Pomerelle and the resort is operating on a regular schedule of Tuesdays through Sunday with both day and night operations.

Owner Woody Anderson said the opening of night skiing was postponed until Wednesday night since the road to the resort was closed Tuesday.

Magic Mountain, south of Twin Falls, reports today after being snowbound since Saturday night. Highway crews had cleared the road and were completing the parking area late Thursday. The resort will be open today through the weekend with a record amount of snow for this early in the season. Manager Jody Anderson reports 60 inches at the lodge and 78 at the top of the ski runs. Forest Service officials reported about 18 inches of snow fell during one single storm early this week.

Soldier Mountain is reporting 42 inches at the lodge and 52 inches on top with 12 inches of new snow since last Sunday. The road was plowed and lifts running Thursday. Buses will run to the resort this weekend from Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, Wendell and Fairfield.

At Sun Valley, resort officials said three inches of new snow fell Wednesday night and Thursday morning. Total depths are 53 at the top of Baldy Mountain and 47 at the half-way mark. Forecasters are for some additional snow showers today.

All lifts and runs are open with the exception of lower River Run. Temperatures Thursday were 20 to 25 degrees on Baldy, 25 to 30 on Dollar Mountain and 35 on the valley floor.

Noah's woe causes shock, sympathy

YANNICK NOAH
French star contemplated throwing himself into river

PARIS (UPI) — Athletes, psychologists and sports writers Thursday reacted with surprise, tempered with sympathy, to Yannick Noah's news conference earlier this week at which the French tennis star admitted he had contemplated suicide.

Noah, who recently announced he intended to move to the United States because he was unhappy with the media attention he was receiving in France, told reporters Tuesday he was frequently despondent.

"I'm going to New York because I'm just fed up to the teeth and my life just makes me sick," Noah said. "I've walked around Paris at night, crying like an idiot, stood on the Alma bridge (over the Seine River) and asked myself, 'Do I jump or not?'"

Christine Lahana, writing in the French sports daily L'Equipe, said the 23-year-old Noah had probably bared his troubles to the press to change his relationship with those responsible for making him famous.

"What is particularly interesting in his case is that his stress is proportional to the extremely heavy pressure to which he is subjected and the relative rareness of champions of his stature in France," she said. "In a way, this sort of problem could only have happened to him."

L'Equipe columnist Andre Halphen responded by naming several stars, who, in his opinion, had "cracked" under the strain of heavy competition. He included tennis players Bjorn Borg and Martina Navratilova, track star Bob Beamon and cyclist Eddy Merckx.

Jean-Paul Loth, Technical Director of the French Tennis Federation, exhorted Noah, this year's French Open champion, to dismiss his detractors and "make full use of his potential."

"Go on, man, forget them, those who would prevent you from breathing, and think instead of all the others and about yourself," Loth said. "Go ahead and live as you wish... but without disappointing your public by letting uncertainty slip in about going after the world title which I believe you can get."

But cycling champion Bernard Hinault was less charitable in his outlook.

"He evidently does not have his feet on the ground and only after a few years of professional activity," he said. "What would it be like if he was number one in the world and the pressure was on him for six or seven years? I may appear hard, but at this level a champion doesn't exist unto himself."

Jordan to face Navratilova in Australian final

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Ninth-seeded Kathy Jordan survived a slow start and swept into the Australian Open final against Martina Navratilova with a 7-6, 6-1 victory Thursday over Zina Garrison.

No. 1-seeded Navratilova romped into her third straight Australian final by defeating Pam Shriver, 6-4, 6-3, in the semifinals of the $1 million event. John McEnroe showed championship form Wednesday in shrugging off a rain interruption to earn a semifinal berth by defeating Australian Wally Masur, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2. Tim Mayotte, Sweden's Mats Wilander and top-seeded Czechoslovakian Ivan Lendl rounded out the men's semifinal field.

Jordan, King of Prussia, Pa., experienced difficulty with Garrison in the first set. Garrison, of Houston, troubled Jordan with her passing shots and led 5-2 and appeared to have the set at her mercy when she served at 5-3. But Jordan started to move in behind Garrison's tentative second serve, taking the ball on the rise and repeatedly wrong-footing her opponent to force a tie-breaker, which she won 7-3.

Jordan kept the pressure on Garrison, taking her serve in the second and sixth games with her sleek approach shots off Garrison's weak second delivery. Jordan was much too aggressive for Garrison, who surrendered the second set with a string of unforced errors in 13 minutes.

Navratilova took only 50 minutes to defeat Shriver before a near-capacity crowd of 8,000 at Koyong Stadium. The "only" time she has dropped a match this year was against Kathy Horvath in the French Open.

Navratilova moved into the semifinals by defeating England's Jo Durie.

Go! Mize-Nause finish fast in team event

LARGO, Fla. (UPI) — Larry Mize and Martha Nause blistered the back nine to fire a 7-under-par 65 Thursday for a one-shot lead in the first round of the $550,000 Mixed Team Classic.

Tied for second at 6-under-par 66 were the twosomes of Fred Couples and Steve Strassburger, Dave Elzbeberger and Rosie Jones and Gary Koch and Judy Clark.

Alone another stroke back at 67 was the team of Mark McCumber and Allice Ritzman.

No team has ever made a successful defense of its title and last year's winners — JoAnne Carner and John Mahaffey — opened Thursday with an even par 72.

Twenty-two of the 48 teams bettered par.

The tourney is played with a unique format in which both members of a team hit drives on all holes. On the par 3 holes, they select the best ball and alternate shots until holing out. On par 4 and 5 holes, they hit each other's ball for the second shot, then select the best ball and alternate shots until the hole is completed.

Mize and Nause started their round on the back nine and made the turn at 2 under. They then carded five birdies on their second nine with Mize just missing a 6-footer on the final hole.

"It was the only one he missed all day," Nause said.

The day started poorly for Mize, as he booked his first tee shot out of bounds. That unsettled the team somewhat and they parred the first three holes and bogeyed the fourth.

But then Mize's putter got hot. He sank a 6-foot birdie putt on the first hole after the bogey to pull the match even, then sank birdie putts on his 7th and 9th holes.

Nause and Mize birdied the first two holes after the turn, put together back-to-back birdies on their 14th and 15th holes and added another on their 17th.

Canada leads U.S. in cup competition

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — Dave Barr shot a 6-under-par 66 Thursday to lead Canada to a two-stroke lead over the United States after the first round of the World Golf Cup and International Trophy event.

Barr, with the best round of the day, had halves of 34 and 32 over the 7,000-yard, par-72 Pondok Indah Country Club course in hot and humid weather as his teammate John Anderson shot 72 (35-37) to give Canada a total of 138.

The U.S. team of Rex Caldwell and Jerry Cook was at 140 with Caldwell shooting a 69 and Cook 71.

Italy, with Sylvano Locatelli (67) and Massimo Manelli (75), was third at 142. Spain, represented by Manuel Pinero and Jose-Maria Canizares, who won the championship last year in Acapulco, Mexico, was another stroke back in fourth place. Pinero shot 70 and Canizares 73.

Wales, with Ian Woosnam (70) and David Vaughan (74), was next with 144.

Barr, 31, from Richmond near Vancouver, playing in his fourth World Cup, had four birdies and an eagle without a bogey. His eagle came on the 150-yard, par-5 14th hole where he reached the green with his one-iron second shot and holed a 22-foot putt.

One of his birdies — on the 4th hole — was a double of sorts. His drive hit a bird in the air some 50 yards in front of the tee and tore a wing off it. The bird dropped to the ground but Barr's ball carried 250 yards off the fairway.

He got his second birdie on that hole, the one that counted, with a 25-foot uphill putt with a double break.

Artist creates individualistic wood paintings

The North Fork General Store is an example of the Idaho themes that dominate Gary Stone's art his unique method of wood-carved painting. He was watching a friend sandblast a coffee table when the vision struck of a new way of doing bas-relief.

Experimenting, he developed a process similar to the way tombstones are scribed; he would cut a picture into a rubber template, place the template on a table top, then sandblast. The result was a bas-relief picture etched into the surface of the wood. Then, using his considerable talent with paints, Stone added color.

At first, he used only wood tones. "I wouldn't use any white," he says, "because I was afraid that would cheapen it." But before long, his horizons had widened far beyond the basic wood tones. And, in a short period of time, the artist carried the skill from table tops to the wood-carved paintings that are now hanging on so many patron's walls.

About the time Stone was refining his wood-carving techniques, Glenn Janss was starting the Sun Valley Art — See STONE on Page C3

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — No stranger to adversity, artist Gary Stone of Kimberly is proof that climbing from the pit of despair to success is not just the grip of fairy tales.

Stone, who now has wood-cut paintings hanging in homes and offices from Hawaii to New York and from Canada to Mexico, says he initially recognized he had reasonable artistic talent when he was a first grader.

Asked by the teacher to draw anything he wanted, he drew a man sitting in an outhouse. Unfortunately, it was so realistic, "she slapped me right across the face," he says with ironic humor.

Majoring in art at Brigham Young University, the Burley native says he didn't really learn much at college even though he got straight A's. He says it was several years after school and a shot at a sign business in Provo, Utah, when he got his real training.

But going to work in Boise for Harry Hopfgarten, who Stone refers to as "a true master," is what he considers his true beginning.

"He was old school. With him, you learned the basis for carving and paint mixing before you ever touched a brush." The admiration for Hopfgarten grows in Stone's face as he talks about his mentor.

Stone and his wife, the former Bev Larsen who grew up northeast of Boise and also majored in art at BYU, recently celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary.

Bev Stone, a lively sort to say the least, is an insatiable Idaho history buff who writes a weekly column for the East County Chronicle. Her enthusiasm hasn't failed to grip her husband, either.

Starting up at the ceiling with piercing blue eyes, Stone says, "I guess we've read just about every book that's ever been written about Idaho." As proof of his zeal, Idaho is the background for almost all his works.

From 1959 until 1975, Stone worked for West Coast Airlines, which eventually merged into the present-day Republic Airlines. He and his wife both speak wistfully of this time of their lives and it isn't hard to see why they're glad it is all a part of the past.

Up until 1970, Stone was not only progressing from an after-work imbibing-with-the-crowd into a serious problem drinker, but he confessed that his art was at a near standstill.

While working in the Sun Valley area as a station master, Stone had a terrible skiing accident on Baldy in which he says he "slid from the top to the bottom of Greyhawk Run." He spent nine months either in bed or a wheelchair with the doctors having to rebreak his bones several times before they would heal properly.

His wife mentions that she believes things are meant to happen. When in the hospital, a friend began to bring the artist old barn boards that Stone would paint on while flat on his back.

"I painted pictures of rich folks homes and they sold as fast as I could paint them," Stone says, shaking his head almost with disbelief.

It was in 1974 when Stone devised

Rosalie Sorrels returns

TWIN FALLS — Reviewers have called her "a national resource," a "folk heroine" and "the best singer I ever heard."

Rosalie Sorrels, the woman getting these accolades, returns to Twin Falls Wednesday to tell her tales and sing. She will be performing at the Renaissance Academy of the Arts at 9 p.m.

Sorrels, whose appearances have been to standing-room-only audiences, is a performer with an international following. In addition to her regular tours through the United States and her dozens-plus recordings, this summer she completed a highly successful tour of Europe, playing to enthusiastic audiences and reviewers in Italy and elsewhere on the continent.

She has commanded a first in the United States since her first concerts nearly 30 years ago, playing in clubs, coffee houses, public auditoriums, and universities. She performed in Twin Falls earlier this year.

Sorrels taught at the University of Utah and produced folk festivals there, and has served on the board of directors of the Newport Folk Festival and on the advisory board of the New York City Folk Festival.

Her repertoire includes traditional folk songs, her own compositions, and the songs of contemporary American writers.

Though she professes to find music "a solitary thing," she has also, in her writing as well as in her music, affirmed her affinities with the lives of other women.

"When I make a song or a sentence, I feel close to the women who have articulated women's condition. Singing, I celebrate all these unnamed, unsung women who have gone before me, each generation paving my road so that I can sing any song."

Her recent appearance in Boise took her back to the place of her childhood; she was raised in Boise and in a log-cabin on Grimes Creek near Idaho City and returns to the area periodically to visit her mother.

Tickets, $5 per person, are available at Warner Music, The Music Center, Ann's Hallmark and the Academy.

Darth Vader puts on a tutu — so to speak

KETCHUM — Darth Vader in a tutu? Can it be?

The Ballet School Foundation in Ketchum presents "The Trap at Bidion," a student dance performance billed as "a new 'Star Wars' saga" on Saturday, at the Wood River High School Auditorium in Halley.

The performance features 115 dancers, some as young as 5 years old.

Direction and choreography is by Hilarie Neely, school director and member of the Idaho Dance Ensemble. Janet Edman and Kathleen MacLean, school faculty members, also assisted in the choreography.

An original ballet, "The Trap at Bidion" was written by Ketchum resident Helene Potts. Luke Skywalker, Princess Leia and, of course, Darth Vader are the central characters.

Vader captures Leia and puts her under an evil spell. Skywalker comes to the rescue, but is then captured himself by Vader.

The Little People release Skywalker, who then confronts Vader in a desperate struggle to conquer the Dark Side.

Curtain time is 7:30 p.m. and tickets are $2 for adults, $1 for children under 12 years old, and are available at Chapter One Bookstore, Encore and the Ballet School in Ketchum, and at Gemini Arts in Halley.

For more information, contact Neely at the Ballet School, 725-5003.

Blaine Billman art showing at gallery

By KATE LOPEZ
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Blaine Billman decided a few years ago to move traditional pen and ink wildlife art in a different direction.

Instead of the stark, heavy contrast normally associated with pen and ink, he concentrated on easing the tones and shadows to provide the range of gray colors that pencil provides.

After years of practice, his dedication and patience are beginning to pay off.

Billman received the Best of Show award at the National Wildlife Art Show in Kansas City in March for his drawing entitled "Where Eagles Dare," an extremely detailed depiction of a bald eagle. "Where Eagles Dare" is also being featured on a poster for the protection of non-game species.

Billman's work is currently on display at the Canyonside Gallery in Twin Falls and he is also included in a special exhibit at the National Museum of American Art in the Smithsonian Institute.

But Billman says he received his most satisfying award only recently, when he was chosen as one of 20 finalists in the Federal Duck Stamp competition.

All waterfowl hunters must purchase a Federal Migratory Waterfowl Stamp each year to obtain a hunting license. Proceeds received from the sale of the stamp are used for waterfowl conservation, says Billman.

"It's a conservation program as well as a hunting program," he says.

Each year a different species of waterfowl is on the stamp.

"It's the top banana for a wildlife artist," says Billman. "There are from 500 to 2,000 entries nationwide. It's the most prestigious."

Opera tickets still available

TWIN FALLS — Tickets will be available at the door for the Northwest Opera Association's weekend production of "Hansel and Gretel" set for 8 p.m. Saturday and 2:30 p.m. Sunday at the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium.

Directed by Paul Klus of Hagerman, the opera was written by the late Engelbert Humperdinck and is based on the well-known Grimm's fairy tale although details have been softened.

The local production features 13 gingerbread children and nine angel dancers and has outstanding sets, says Harold Gerber, association president.

Lead roles are played by Shawna Fuller as Hansel and Sheila Okelberry as Gretel, with Camille Cox as the witch, Hede Fairbanks as mother and Harold Stetler as father.

Musical director is Bruce Whitehead with Karen Sweet as choral director and Beverly Hackney choreographer. Accompanists are Phyllis VanNest and Roberta Chute.

Tickets, which are $5, are available at all Idaho First National Bank offices, The Music Center, Warner Music, Sullivan's Music, Judy's Books, Pennywise Hallmark, Christian Book store and CSI.

Noah's woe causes shock, sympathy

PARIS (UPI) — Athletes, psychologists and sports writers Thursday reacted with surprise, tempered with sympathy, to Yannick Noah's news conference earlier this week at which the French tennis star admitted he had contemplated suicide.

Noah, who recently announced he intended to move to the United States because he was unhappy with the media attention he was receiving in France, told reporters Tuesday he was frequently despondent.

"I'm going to New York because I'm just fed up to the teeth and my life just makes no sense," Noah said. "I walked around Paris at night, crying like an idiot, stood on the Alma bridge

Sparte, a psychologist, Christine Lahana, writing in the French sports daily L'Equipe, said the 23-year-old Noah had probably bared his troubles to the press to change his relationship with those responsible for making him famous.

"What is particularly interesting in his case is that his stress is proportional to the extremely heavy pressure to which he is subjected and the relative rareness of champions of his stature in France," she said. "In a way, this sort of problem could only have happened to him."

L'Equipe columnist Andre Halphen responded by naming several stars, who, in his opinion, had "cracked" under the strain of heavy competition. He included tennis players Bjorn Borg and Martina Navratilova, track star Bob Beamon and cyclist Eddy Merckx.

Jean-Paul Loth, Technical Director of the French Tennis Federation, exhorted Noah, this year's French Open champion, to dismiss his deductions and make full use of his potential.

"Go on, man, forget them, those who would prevent you from

But cycling champion Bernard Hinault was less charitable in his outlook.

"He evidently does not have his feet on the ground and only after a few years of professional activity," he said. "What would it be like if he was number one in the world and the pressure was on him for six or seven years? I may appear hard, but at this level a champion doesn't exist into himself."

Jordan to face Navratilova in Australian final

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Ninth-seeded Kathy Jordan survived a slow start and swept into the Australian Open final against Martina Navratilova with a 7-6, 6-1 victory Thursday over Zina Garrison.

No. 1-seeded Navratilova romped into her third straight Australian final by defeating Pam Shriver, 6-4, 6-3, in the semifinals of the $1 million event.

John McEnroe showed championship form Wednesday in shutting out a rain interruption to earn a semifinal berth by defeating Australian Wally Masur, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2. Tim Mayotte, Sweden's Mats Wilander and top-seeded Czechoslovakian Ivan Lendl rounded out the men's semifinal field.

Jordan, King of Prussia, Pa., experienced difficulty with Garrison in the first set. Garrison, of Houston, troubled Jordan with her passing shots and led 5-2 and appeared to have the set at her mercy when she served at 5-3. But Jordan started to move in behind Garrison's tentative second serves, taking the ball on the rise and repeatedly wrong-footing her opponent to force a tie-breaker, which she won 7-3.

Garrison, who surrendered the second set with a string of unforced errors in 13 minutes.

Navratilova took only 60 minutes to defeat Shriver before a near-capacity crowd of 8,000 at Kooyung Stadium. The only time she has dropped a match this year was against Kathy Horvath in the French Open.

Navratilova moved into the semifinals by defeating England's Jo Durie,

Go! Mize-Nause finish fast in team event

LARGO, Fla. (UPI) — Larry Mize and Martha Nause blistered the back nine to fire a 7-under-par 65 Thursday for a one-shot lead in the first round of the $50,000 Mixed Team Classic.

Tied for second at 6-under-par 66 were the twoomes of Fred Couples and Jan Stephenson, Dave Elchelberger and Rosie Jones and Gary Koch and Jay Clark.

Alone another stroke back at 67 was the team of Mark McCumber and Alice Ritzman.

In addition to her regular tours through the United States and her dozen-plus recordings, this summer she completed a highly successful tour of Europe, playing to enthusiastic audiences and reviewers in Italy and elsewhere on the continent.

She has commanded a following in the United States since her first concerts nearly 50 years ago, playing in clubs, coffee houses, public auditoriums, and universities. She performed in Twin Falls earlier this year.

Sorrels taught at the University of Utah and produced folk festivals there, and has served on the board of directors of the Newport Folk Festival and on the advisory board of the New York City Folk Festival.

Her repertoire includes traditional folk songs, her own compositions, and the songs of contemporary American writers.

Though she professes to find music "a solitary thing," she has also, in her writing as well as in her music, affirmed her affinities with the lives of other women.

"When I make a song or a sentence, I feel close to the women who have articulated women's condition. Singing, I celebrate all those unnamed, unsung women who have gone before me, each generation paving my road so that I can sing any song."

Her recent appearance in Boise took her back to the place of her childhood; she was raised in Boise and in a log cabin on Grimes Creek near Idaho City and returns to the area, periodically to visit her mother.

Tickets, $5 per person, are available at Warner Music, The Music Center, Ann's Hallmark and the Academy.

Darth Vader puts on a tutu — so to speak

KETCHUM — Darth Vader, a resident — Helene Potts, Luke Skywalker, Princess Leia and, of course, Darth Vader are the central characters.

Vader captures Leia and puts her under an evil spell. Skywalker comes to the rescue, but is then captured himself by Vader.

The Little People release Skywalker, who then confronts Vader in a desperate struggle to conquer the Dark Side.

Curtain time is 7:30 p.m. and tickets are $2 for adults, $1 for children under 12 years old, and are available at Chapter One Bookstore, Encore and the Ballet School in Ketchum, and at Gemini Arts in Halley.

For more information, contact Neely at the Ballet School, 726-5003.

The Ballet School Foundation in Ketchum presents "The Trap at Bidlon," a student dance performance billed as "a new Star Wars saga" on Saturday, at the Wood River High School Auditorium in Halley.

The performance features 115 dancers, some as young as 5 years old.

Direction and choreography is by Hilarie Neely, school director and member of the Idaho Dance Ensemble.

Blaine Billman art showing at gallery

By KATE LOPEZ
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Blaine Billman decided a few years ago to take traditional pen and ink wildlife art in a different direction.

Instead of the stark, heavy contrast normally associated with pen and ink, he concentrated on using the tones and shadows to provide the range of gray colors that pencil provides.

After years of practice, his dedication and patience are beginning to pay.

Billman received the Best of Show award at the National Wildlife Art Show in Kansas City in March for his drawing entitled "Where Eagles Dare," an extremely detailed depiction of a bald eagle. "Where Eagles Dare" is also being featured on a poster for the protector of non-game species.

Billman's work is currently on display at the Canyonside Gallery in Twin Falls and he is also included in a special exhibit at the National Museum of American Art in the Smithsonian Institute.

But Billman says he received his most satisfying award only recently, when he was chosen as one of 20 finalists in the Federal Duck Stamp competition.

All waterfowl hunters must purchase a federal Migratory Waterfowl Stamp each year to obtain a hunting license. Proceeds received from the sale of the stamp are used for waterfowl conservation, says Billman.

"It's a conservation program as well as a hunting program," he says.

Each year a different species of waterfowl is on the stamp.

"It's the top banana for a wildlife artist," says Billman. "There are from 1,500 to 2,000 entries nationwide. It's the most prestigious

Opera tickets still available

TWIN FALLS — Tickets will be available at the door for the Northwest Opera Association's weekend production of "Hansel and Gretel" set for 8 p.m. Saturday and 2:30 p.m. Sunday at the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium.

Directed by Paul Kliss of Hagerman, the opera was written by the late Engelhart Humpevnick and is based on the well-known Grimm's fairy tale although details have been softened.

The local production features 13 gingerbread children and nine angel dancers and has outstanding sets, says Harold Gerber, association president.

Lead roles are played by Shavna Fuller as Hansel and Sheila Okeberry as Gretel, with Camille Cox as the witch, Helene Fairbanks as mother and Harold Sheller as father.

Musical director is Bruce Whitehead with Karen Sweet as choral director and Beverly Hackney choreographer. Accompanists are Phyllis VanNest and Roberta Chilcote.

Tickets, which are $5, are available at all Idaho First National Bank offices, The Music Center, Warner Music, Sullivan's Music, Judy's Books, Pennywise-Hallmark, Christian Book store and CSI.

Actor E.G. Marshall recalls television's earliest projects

By JULIANNE HASTINGS
United Press International

Television

NEW YORK — Fifty years in the business, two Emmys, more than 500 television credits to his name — when E.G. Marshall starts reminiscing about television—the time goes by far too quickly.

Marshall has been doing television "since it began."

His first appearance was in June 1948 in "Our Town," starring Raymond Massey on NBC. The late Fred Croe was the television director, Martin ("Chefs") Manulis was the stage director.

"In those days you went on the air when you were ready and when you finished, if there was time to spare, they'd tell some news or play some music," Marshall said during an interview in Manhattan's Greenwich Village where he still has an apartment.

"We didn't have Nielsen's in those days."

"You used to have to go to a bar to watch it," a colleague once told me. "AA got me out of bars and now television's putting me back in. You have to go to a bar and watch your show or watch a kiddie a week later."

Kinnies, officially known as kinescope recordings, were the only records that could be made of those old television programs in the days before videotape. They were made by filming a television monitor and the picture quality, needless to say, was poor.

The first audience was upscale, middleclass, city people who went to theater and concerts.

"You could tell by the mail that the audience was changing," Marshall said.

"What they would object to? You shouldn't show anything above the knee and you shouldn't discuss religion and never use a cuss word, 'hell,' 'damn,' because that was forbidden."

"If there was any accent, like an Irish play or a cockney play, you'd get mail saying, 'Why do you do these plays with these foreign brogues?'"

"I'd think of reaching out to Indiana, no longer just New York, Philadelphia, Chicago."

Much of what was done on the air were works that are public domain — Shakespeare, Ibsen, Faulkner.

"When did you see Faulkner last on television," Marshall sighed.

Marshall was recently seen on television in his portrayal of the late Ambassador Joseph Kennedy Sr. in the NBC miniseries "Kennedy." His latest project has been the CBS presentation of John Steinbeck's "The Winter of Our Discontent" with Donald Sutherland, Teri Garr and Tuesday Weld.

"What's heartening about this is here we are getting back to American writers and doing real stuff," Marshall said of the Steinbeck movie.

He said he was disappointed with the course television took as it matured.

"It never developed the way we all hoped and thought it would."

"I suppose a lot of people will be watching the numbers on 'Winter of Our Discontent' to see whether they can say, 'I told you so,' or 'I told you,'" he said, switching the tone of his voice to indicate first disapproval and then approval.

The Minnesota-born Marshall started his acting career on the stage in Chicago.

"The first week you'd be sold out and the second week you'd have a half house," he said.

Lines read three, pants paid $7 apiece to share a ride to New York.

He got a room at the 4th Street Hotel and struck out.

Thought for today

A thought for the day: President George Washington advised, "Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire — conscience."

He also is not interested in directing.

"Can you imagine dealing with actors? I'd rather speak around and say to the director, 'Why don't you tell him or her to do this? Or what about this idea?'"

"I recognize directorial con. They say, 'Oh that's terrific how you do that. Oh my God, that's magnificent the way you do that!'"

"Mike Nichols has a thing that he says at the end of a scene or an act, he does his imitation of W.C. Fields — sounds nothing like him. He says, 'Very good. Just two small thoughts...'"

"There are always two very important things," Marshall said. "He's a very good director."

Despite all his TV and movie experience, Marshall's first love is still the stage.

"I'm in control — or I am not in control," he said.

"You can't own your own editing when you're on stage. It's up to you. When you see a movie or television film you say to yourself, 'Why the hell do they cut to that person now? Because that's a very important line. I was trying to make a point there.'"

"But when you're on stage, they can't trim the lights on you."

Center. Stone says he called her and asked if she would like his work. She looked and liked and his paintings were hung in the art center.

The artist's works have since been shown in numerous galleries including the MGM Grand in Las Vegas. But not everyone was receptive to Stone's new idea of art.

"I had some bitter disappointments from blue noses," Stone reflects. "They said it should be shown in rafts."

At the present, Stone is doing no gallery work. Almost everything he's doing now is personalized, custom art, he says.

"People always look at a painting for a minute and move on to the next one without studying the details," he says. He goes on to explain that this little trick makes them get down on their hands and knees with a magnifying glass to seek out the names. In doing so, they see detail. Bev's name is also hidden in every piece of art.

Stone didn't become a full-time artist until 1975 when Carl Hayden, a public relations man for Jackpot, sighted several of his wood-carved paintings displayed in a restaurant at Twin Falls Municipal Airport.

Approaching the artist, Hayden told him he could be rich.

Stone then went to Hayden's residence in Argerme, where he met the late Ardrie Teater who Stone considers "A very accomplished, internationally-known artist." Teater silently studied several of the young artist's works before stating, "This is the best artwork I've seen come out of the state of Idaho," Stone fondly remembers, adding, — "I just about wipped it."

Teater then warned that it was impossible for an artist to make a living.

"But, I did it, and so can you," Teater added.

"I quit Air West and we lived on corn flakes for the next two years," Stone says, he and Bev laughing. "We decided if we'd have to lose the house, then we'd lose the house. If we had to lose the car, then we'd walk down the road."

But, he hasn't lost either, and they don't live on corn flakes any more. Back then, he sold a painting for $75 to $150. Now, they go at $2,000 to $4,000.

The problem with alcohol continued to nag the artist through the early days of his profession until, in 1977, "I botched out." Bitterly frustrated with car wrecks and broken bones, and thinking of his family, Stone took the help of his wife and a counselor and kicked the habit cold-turkey.

Now, he feels deep concern for others with alcohol-related troubles. At one point, after talking about how easy it is to fall into the trap, he smiles and apologizes for, "Sounding like Currie Nation."

Stone's favorite place in the world is his three-bedroom cabin 40 miles downstream from Shoup on the Salmon River. Very near the primitive area, he has to cross the Salmon by a hand-operated cable car to reach the log structure that has no electricity and sports an outdoor privy. One wonders what his first grade teacher would think of that.

When not hooking steelhead from the car suspended over the middle of the swift water, he often uses it as his studio and loves to paint in the quiet of the evening under lanterns. Best of all, the cabin frees him from incessant phone calls that reach his home studio, he says.

The artist isn't the least hesitant to give a fatherly boast about his two offspring. Daughter, Kall Bukendorf is a housewife with, according to her father, a real talent for writing. And his son, Bret, is "loaded with artistic talent."

He says he hopes Bret will help with a planned addition to the business — Stone thinks that he and Jerome artist, Gus Flowers, have developed a new process to reproduce wood-cut painting, heretofore unmastered.

Stone says art, like everything else, is 15 percent talent and 85 percent hard work. His advice for those who are undecided about what to do in life is to do that in which you are most interested.

"Narrow your interests down to 10. Then to five, and, finally, to one. Then figure out how to make a living at it. It's really quite easy looking back. Well, not easy . . ."

Billman entered a five-inch by seven-inch night scene of trumpeter swans flying through fir trees. The entire piece was done in dots and he says he spent 171 hours on it.

Jazz artist a bit young

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — The sound of Harry Allen's tenor sax in the Rhode Island All-Star High School Jazz Ensemble brought a college scholarship offer he politely declined.

The man with college connections was insistent. "Time is running out; it's almost May," he told Allen.

"I've got lots of time," the young musician said. "I'm a freshman."

That was 1981; Harry was 14. Now in his senior year at Burrillville, R.I., high school and thinking about college, he already has tasted the professional jazz circuit, from Greenwich Village and Los Angeles to the granddaddy of outdoor events — the Newport Jazz Festival.

Allen, who turned 17 on Oct. 12, has made three straight Newport appearances and a 12-stop California tour, and along the way has been encouraged by — and played with — some of the greatest musicians in mainstream jazz.

His tenor saxophone swing style is reminiscent of the lyrical reed-playing of the 1940s and '50s big band artists Ben Webster and Lester Young.

"He's head over heels in talent. He's in the beginning stages of the young giants coming up. He's got to develop it," says veteran bass player Major Holley, who has summoned Harry to the Big Apple several times to sit in with him and other top artists.

"He does not jump on styles of other sax players," Holley said. "Everything he plays on the horn is his — no gimmicks, just plain saxophone."

Allen switched to tenor five years ago by fluke when he was in the sixth grade at a middle school in Cumberland, R.I. The bandmaster asked him to switch from clarinet because the band didn't have a tenor sax. One year later, Allen was playing with the high school band. As a seventh grader, he won Most Valuable Musicians honors at a high school competition at the Berkshire College of Music in Boston.

Harry's jazz leanings began in his pre-teens. He began playing the accordion at 7, was improvising at 8, and was state jazz champion for that instrument at 10, 11 and 12, in competition with adults.

"I taught him to love music. That's about all you can do. He picked up the rest by himself," says Harry's father, Maurice Allen, a former big band drummer who gave up the road life in 1962 to become a family man and mathematics teacher.

Harry's first two Newport Jazz Festival appearances, in 1981 and 1982, were as first tenor with the state high school jazz all-stars. His most recent, this August, was a rousing stint with producer George Wein's Newport Jazz Festival All-Stars, in which he tracked bass with Scott Hamilton, another Rhode Islander.

"He's got such a seasoned style, both technically and in maturity for somebody his age," says 30-year-old Hamilton, who hit the big time at age 21 and was voted International Jazz Musician of the Year in 1978.

Hamilton has had Allen sit in with him a dozen times, including a night at New York's Blue Note, and has referred him for gigs when he has had prior commitments. He said he suspects Harry's accordion beginnings gave him "a foundation for harmony. That's something most horn players are lacking," Hamilton said.

Allen said he plans to go to college next year, but probably not as a music major. "Most of the stuff you learn with jazz is from playing with other people," he says.

high school band. As a seventh grader, he won Most Valuable Musicians honors at a high school competition at the Berkshire College of Music in Boston.

Harry's jazz leanings began in his pre-teens. He began playing the accordion at 7, was improvising at 8, and was state jazz champion for that instrument at 10, 11 and 12, in competition with adults.

"I taught him to love music. That's about all you can do. He picked up the rest by himself," says Harry's father, Maurice Allen, a former big band drummer who gave up the road life in 1962 to become a family man and mathematics teacher.

Harry's first two Newport Jazz Festival appearances, in 1981 and 1982, were as first tenor with the state high school jazz all-stars. His most recent, this August, was a rousing stint with producer George Wein's Newport Jazz Festival All-Stars, in which he tracked bass with Scott Hamilton, another Rhode Islander.

"He's got such a seasoned style, both technically and in maturity for somebody his age," says 30-year-old Hamilton, who hit the big time at age 21 and was voted International Jazz Musician of the Year in 1978.

Hamilton has had Allen sit in with him a dozen times, including a night at New York's Blue Note, and has referred him for gigs when he has had prior commitments. He said he suspects Harry's accordion beginnings gave him "a foundation for harmony. That's something most horn players are lacking," Hamilton said.

Allen said he plans to go to college next year, but probably not as a music major. "Most of the stuff you learn with jazz is from playing with other people," he says.

Restaurants serve up Mel Blanc characters for customers

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

'HOLLYWOOD' — If your town doesn't have a Gadgets restaurant, chances are it will within the next year or two, offering an entirely new dining experience along with steaks, hamburgers and pizzas. Gadgets is a newly designed national franchise outfit involving Warner Bros. and other corporations with plans for a string of 150 eateries across the country.

Baltimore have Gadgets in full operation. What distinguishes Gadgets from other chain restaurants, Howard Johnsons for instance, is the entertainment factor. Diners at Gadgets will see a completely automated 20-minute show every half hour or so featuring eight-foot robots with pre-recorded dialogue and songs. But the robots are very special and familiar characters. Looney Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck, Yosemite Sam, Porky Pig, Speedy Gonzales, Tweety

Bird and Sylvester, Henry Hawk, Foghorn, Leghorn, Tasmanian Devil are other wackos from the Warner Bros. cartoon factory. Those who have visited Disneyland are familiar with the audioanimatronics shows featured in the "America Sings" attractions at both theme parks. Gadgets' figures and shows will be compared to them.

and TV animated cartoons for more than 45 years. "Every restaurant will have 50 different entertainment programs, so there won't be a lot of repetition," Blanc said the other day. "Bugs and Porky and Sylvester and the rest are involved in little story lines, sketches and songsters. "People will go in for dinner and be able to see several different shows while they eat. The restaurants are designed so diners can see from any angle in the room. It's a lot of fun and a lot of laughs."

Blanc, 75, has been making people laugh since his radio debut 58 years ago on station KGW in his native Portland, Ore. He became a fixture on the Jack Benny radio and TV shows. His best character on the Benny shows was Cy, a former movieyokibole Mexican in a serape and sombrero, a perfect foil for the comedian. These days, with fewer cartoon shows being made for theaters and TV, Blanc keeps busy with the Gadgets project and touring the college circuit, appearing before packed houses on 144 campuses in the past three years. Blanc, a diminutive man with melancholy eyes and an obvious love of his work, also does TV commercials, using Sylvester for a cat food product, Daffy for storage bags, and Bugs, Daffy and Porky for a soft drink blurb. He continues to provide the voices for such feature cartoon films as "Daffy Duck's Movie: Fantastic Island" and "Bugs' Bunny's Third Movie: A Thousand and One Rabbit Tales."

Knight pianos billed as Rolls Royce of breed

By LILAH LOHR
The Baltimore Evening Sun

BALTIMORE — Queen Elizabeth has one of the royal yacht, Yehudi Menuhin has two, and the British Broadcasting Company insists upon them for broadcasts. But most Americans haven't heard of Alfred Knight Ltd. pianos, unless one Paul McCartney played in "A Hard Day's Night" nearly 20 years ago. "Knight's vertical pianos are billed as the Rolls Royce of the breed, and are manufactured by a small British company with a 1,000-unit per year capacity and shipped sparingly to the United States. (Until last week, that is.) Baltimore's Phil Huth, Knight's eastern United States agent and owner of the Warfield Piano Co., has received a container-load of 22 pianos worth $90,000, the largest shipment Knight has ever sent to the states at one time. With this group of Knights, Huth hopes to boost his retail business from a sideline to a main line, broaden his market area and maintain a level of sales sufficient to continue the container shipments. In the past, Warfield Piano owes this Knight shipment to the poor economy. In the past, Huth limited his imports to three or four Knight pianos a year, for he has had to pay as much as $195 per cubic meter for piano cargo in an ocean-going container. But waning traffic in the port of Baltimore gave Huth and his freight forwarder enough leverage at the end of the summer to negotiate a $30 per cubic meter shipping fee, a price reduction that made it possible for Huth to order a full container load of the instruments. Eight of the newly-arrived pianos was ordered in advance, and Huth anticipates little trouble selling the remaining instruments. He offers them for about $4,000, comparable to the price of a larger piano, but the ownership of a Knight is not even from a baby grand, he maintains. "Knight builds a specialty item and they do it better than anybody else," he says from his showroom/shop/warehouse in West Baltimore. "The pianos are literally custom-built, put together, strung, adjusted and fitted by hand, and the Knight people offer several styles. In 22 finishes or they'll match any furniture finish if you send them a sample. They have a little old man who does 'inlay' work if you want that—basically you can get anything you want." Huth, a Baltimore native who as a 15-year-old wrote the Lafayette's 1962 rock-and-roll hit "Life's Too Short", first heard a Knight piano while studying in Florida to become a piano technician. After he learned his craft, he returned to Baltimore and went to work as a piano tuner and technician "who sold pianos on the side, out of the garage." "I saved my money from the very beginning—hoping to buy and sell Knights," he says. "You just knock me out. After I handled a couple of sales I asked for a tour of the Knight factory in Essex, and the Knight family asked me to be their agent for the eastern United States." Now he has leased space above an abandoned warehouse in West Baltimore where he rebuilds and reconditions instruments in a back shop scented with wood glue. In the front room sit pianos for sale, baby grands and spinets, uprights and Knights. Though Huth keeps up piano maintenance contracts with local school districts, colleges and restaurants, buying and selling the instruments is becoming Warfield's main business. Up until now, Huth has sold about three or four Knights a year, often to customers shopping for a baby grand. The new shipment, he says, gives him an inventory to work from while marketing to institutions such as schools and conservatories across the country. FREE GIFT CATALOG Give Falls Brand Gift Packs & Meal Products For Christmas and Assist Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services Available Now thru Dec. 24 From Our Booth In the Lynwood Call 734-4112 for Catalog

New 'Barber of Seville' recording said to be one of the very best

By JOHN ARDOUN
Dallas Morning News

In his notes for the new Philips recording of Rossini's "The Barber of Seville" (6769 100), musicologist Philip Gossett reminds us that "The Barber" is "the oldest opera by an Italian composer never to have disappeared from the active repertory."

It has held the stage continuously since its premiere at the Teatro Argentina of Rome on Feb. 20, 1816. "He might have added that because of its longevity and its popularity, 'The Barber' also has had an exceptional track record on the phonograph. "Few repertory pieces have been so well served on disc. "As early as 1896, there was a complete 'Barber' recording, and the various integral versions of the work that followed amount to a performance history of this extraordinary comedy in music. "That first 'Barber' recording was built around the remarkable 19th-century manner of tenor Fernando de Lucia. "In it, his singing brings us as close as possible to the way the music of Count Almaviva was performed more than 100 years ago. The next set was made in the early 1930s and mirrored the broad approach taken to the opera in the 1910s and 1920s. Its glory is the presence of baritone Riccardo Stracciarini as Figaro. "Between the Stracciarini 78-rpm 'Barber' and the poised and stylish LP version by Maria Callas and Tito Gobbi in the mid-1950s, there was an important recording on Cetra, notable for the mezzo Rosina of Giulietta Simionato and the suave, agile

Almaviva of Luigi Infantino. Now comes the best "Barber" since the Callas set and the first recorded digitally. For it, Philips Records began with conductor Neville Marriner and the Academy of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, one of the world's principal chamber orchestras. This was Philips' way of saying that this would be no ordinary "Barber," but one that aimed for virtuosity, transparency and quick-silver articulation. And so it proved to be. It also turned out to be a remarkable evocation of live theater, something that happens rarely in the recording studio. Marriner's sane, singing tempos obviously not only put his cast at ease, but made their recording of the opera a pleasure. There was a long period in which a well-balanced, stylistically apt group of singers could not be found for "The Barber," while operas like "Aida" and "Tosca" could be cast ideally. Today, the opposite is true. With the exception of one minor role, I frankly cannot imagine a better "Barber" cast than Philips has assembled. Interestingly enough, it involves only one Italian—bass Domenico Trimarchi as Don Bartolo, yet the singing of the Italian language here is not only on a high level, but the performers—a Greek mezzo, an Irish baritone, a Mexican tenor and a British bass—use it idiomatically to create character and to impart humor and dimension to their lines. In the title role, Thomas Allen emerges as one of the major bel-canto baritones of the day. His wide-ranging, attractive voice is beautifully equalized, and the terrors of the part—scales and trills—are duck soup for his agile voice. Rosina is sung by Agnes Baltsa, who is becoming one of the most accomplished and interesting singers of today. She not only plays her part to perfection, but plays with it to create a fascinating, feline character. Like Allen, she puts her uncommon vocal virtuosity entirely at the service of the drama. Another important contribution is that of tenor Francisco Araiza. I have not heard him yet in person, so I cannot know how accurately this recording reflects the size and color of his voice. But it would seem to be a substantial sound, one unusually dark, supple and virile for Almaviva's music. He is very musical, and though he frequently has to aspirate in scale passages, at least he does so with impressive velocity. Marriner, being equal parts practical musician and musicologist, is scrupulous in the edition he has used and carefully restores the original dynamics and instrumentation of Rossini's score. The only cuts he has made are in the recitatives, which do tend to go on. It appears, too, that he has used a forte piano for the recitatives instead of a harpsichord, another welcome authentic touch.

Science fiction not real, people believe

By WILEY HALL
The Baltimore Evening Sun

Yes, the ABC movie, "The Day After" was graphic and horrifying. But as graphically as the movie depicted the horrors of nuclear war, it also illustrated the big shame and disgrace of science fiction.

Science fiction suffers from a fundamental lack of credibility with the public at large; a lack that is greater than in other types of entertainment. It defies explanation. Science fiction is not for real, people seem to believe, it is made up. It is whimsical, fantastical, and escapist.

Consequently, the science fiction world has been shut out of the debate over nuclear war, even though no other type of literature has so thoroughly explored the causes and effects of such a war.

"The Day After" was a science fiction movie. It could not have been anything else. In fact, this is exactly what science fiction is all about: considering the causes and effects of nuclear war, or of any technology, or of any social, political or economic decision.

Science fiction novels dealing with the follies of nuclear war fall into a general category, I call "After the Disaster" books. They range from the graphic to the whimsical.

Some are frightening; showing the survivors of a nuclear war as mutant freaks and cannibals living in a savage dog-eat-dog world that you or I could not possibly survive. Or could we?

Some are intriguing; speculating that the inheritors of a nuclear holocaust might be the largely non-white population of the Third World.

Some are emotionally satisfying; predicting that after a nuclear holocaust, the survivors will turn on the scientists who made such a holocaust possible, and the politicians who made it inevitable. They tear them limb-from-limb—reast-them-alive—bonifies made from physics textbooks.

And, frankly, some are escapist: imagining that such a holocaust would blast us all back into an idyllic, pre-Industrial age, to nature, to a simpler, Wilderess Family type of life.

There are even novels that predict the holocaust would disrupt the physical laws of nature, making magic possible; or alter our genes so that we can read minds, teleport objects and fly through the air like birds.

But there is one After-The-Disaster novel that transcends all of the others. It won science fiction's highest award, the Hugo, a couple of decades ago, and it remains one of the all-time classics.

Best of all, it is a novel that can transcend the traditional resistance to science fiction and be appreciated by almost anybody. It is a truly great book, a moving book.

That novel is Walter M. Miller Jr.'s, "A Canticle for Liebowitz."

This is a melancholy story told in three parts thousands of years after the nuclear holocaust. The survivors of that "dark age" developed a deep distrust of any kind of learning and systematically destroyed all books and persons of learning.

The first story tells about a simple, unassuming monk who's monastery secretly tried to preserve as much of the books as they could. What the books meant is lost, and the monks' unquestioning devotion to so much that we would consider trivial makes for a contrast that is part amusing and part heart-breaking.

The second story follows a scientist who is trying to reconstruct much of the lost lore, while at the same time playing the intrigue of a barbarian nation by trying to sweep—and unite—the shattered North American continent.

Good grief!

The original Charlie Brown, who inspired the hard-luck charms of the character of the same name in the "Peanuts" comic strip, died of cancer earlier this week. Brown, shown in a photo taken in March of this year, and Charles Schulz, the creator of "Peanuts," met in an art class.

Gospel radio station blasting up the power

By MACK SISK
United Press International

DEL RIO, Texas — The "borderblaster" radio station that once beamed preachers and Wolfman Jack's rhythm and blues show across a quarter of the earth is back on the air with plans to double its transmitting signal.

XERF is the most powerful commercial radio station in North America and the third most powerful in the world. With its mammoth transmitter across the Rio Grande in Ciudad Acuna, Mexico, XERF can increase its signal up to five times the 50,000-watt limit allowed by the U.S. Federal Communications Commission.

Station officials say the two most powerful commercial stations in the world are one in the Netherlands Antilles with 500,000 watts and one in Luxembourg with about 250,000 watts. XERF once reached homesick U.S. military servicemen as far away as the Mediterranean and the book "KGB Story" says Soviet agents learned English listening to it. But by last year the station had dwindled to 50,000 watts and featured 15-minute taped religious segments.

Then Mike Venditti, a radio fanatic from Philadelphia, came last December and began making changes.

"There is an excitement about being here because XERF is an historical station," Venditti said. "We want to make history again. It's a broadcaster's dream to have his hands on a station like this."

Venditti, 32, who came from a station in Huntsville, Texas, says he wants to double the transmitter's nighttime output to 500,000 watts. He changed its format from all taped preachers last May. He went to adult-contemporary music during the daytime when the station was 50,000 watts and used the religious shows at night after switching on the monster Mexican transmitter.

"We're non-directional, 250,000 watts," he told an interested evangelist. "We cover the whole United States and 25 percent of the world. And we're for real about putting out the gospel."

Venditti said he came primarily to continue the nighttime in terdenominational religious programming, featuring such evangelists as Kenneth Copeland, but found that nostalgic music of the 1940s, 50s and 60s during the daytime also helped keep the station financially afloat.

He put the station back on the air live Nov. 4, telephoning his new sales manager, Dava Cloudt, from across the border asking her to go outside and listen on her car radio as blind disc jockey Nancy Lynn spun an old Everly Brothers tune.

Venditti now is hoping the station will make a hit with a new format designed to re-attract some of the same people who listened to Wolfman Jack howling out record introductions and selling mail-order baby chicks 1982-84.

What's what

Q. How does a magician stop his pulse at will?
A. A tightly knotted handkerchief in the armpit will do it. The magician can exert pressure against it or relax, almost imperceptibly, and the wrist pulse will stop and start accordingly.

Q. How does a man in a palindromic -- words spelled the same way backward and forward -- sometimes fail to mention "kinikink," a mix of dried leaves and bark once smoked by the Ojibwa Indians. Also, they occasionally forget "Malayalam," a Dravidian language of Kerala in southwest India. How could they overlook these?

A. Shopping malls.

People, too, get mangle.

SHAKESPEARE IN SPORTS

Some claim William Shakespeare was among the earliest of the great sports writers. Consider his lines. On hockey: "Gentle Puck, come hither." -- "A Midsummer Night's Dream." On baseball: "You did bid me steal." -- "Othello." On bowling: "Mercy on us, we spill." -- "The Tempest." On golf: "Give me the Iron." -- "King John." On basketball: "Hear the shrill whistle!" -- "Henry V." On tennis: "O monstrous fault!" -- "Henry VI." On auto racing: "Let me clutch thee." -- "Macbeth."

President Calvin Coolidge didn't want his wife messing around with the White House menus. He liked to plan them himself.

It was not a federal felony to assassinate a U.S. president until after John F. Kennedy was murdered.

"Milling is the close notching around the edges of coins. Client asks, 'What's milling-for?' Now that the metal in coins is worth so little, I don't know. Originally, though, it was to discourage the petty practice of chipping the edges off gold and silver coins for the precious metals. A coin without the edge grooves became worthless.

Editor's Note: William H. Dwyer is the author of "The Day Is Ours: How a Ragged Rebel Army Stood the Storm and Saved the Revolution," published by Viking Press. Here he gives some glimpses of the men who brought about a turning point in the American Revolution during nine eventful days, Dec. 26, 1776, through Jan. 3, 1777.

By WILLIAM H. DWYER
United Press International

In the opening minutes of the Battle of Trenton on the first Battle of Trenton fought in the morning of Dec. 26, 1776 — an 18-year-old lieutenant from Virginia named James Monroe and a 10-year-old sergeant from Massachusetts named Joseph White took part in a daring foray that helped bring about one of General Washington's greatest victories. They were members of a small raiding force that stormed and captured two — troublesome — artillery pieces and killed or routed the Hessians who had been firing them. As he charged on the enemy position, Monroe was shot down by a musket ball that passed through his chest and shoulder. He was carried from the field of battle. Reaching the artillery position, Sergeant White found that all of the Hessian cannoners except one had either raced off or been shot.

"Run, you dog!" White shouted, holding his sword over the Hessian's head. "The Hessian, as White would later recall, "looked up and saw it, then ran. We put in a canister of shot and fired."

With Christmas — and, more importantly, the day after Christmas — approaching, I get to thinking about

Books

President-to-be Monroe, Sergeant White and others I came to know in the 10-year course of researching "The Day Is Ours."

These were, in James Wilkinson's phrase, members of "the little band that faced the storm," men and boys projected from routine, even banal, lives into the big things of a war.

As Christmas 1776 approached, the American Revolution so vociferously hailed in 1775, was collapsing. After defeating the Americans on Long Island, at White Plains and at Fort Mifflin, a seemingly unstoppable army of British and Hessians had chased the ragged rebel army across New Jersey to Pennsylvania. Congress had fled from Philadelphia, the enemy's target, to Baltimore. The war, it appeared, would soon be over.

Then Washington attacked the Hessian garrison at Trenton with his Continental veterans and took some 900 prisoners. A week later, on Jan. 2, 1777, the Continentals and militia reinforcements took a heavy toll of the enemy in the second Battle of Trenton. The next day, after outflanking the enemy in a night march, they defeated the British force at Princeton.

Following the first Trenton battle, Lieutenant Monroe was taken to a home in Bucks County, Pa., to recuperate before returning to action. (In a book titled, "Burr," by the way, a forward writer named Gore Vidal dispensed of the young Virginian in these words, "... the burly Lord Stirling ... was always attended by his aide James Monroe, whose principal task during the Revolution was to keep His Lordship's cup filled until it was time to put him to bed.")

After taking part in both Trenton battles, Sergeant White, the 19-year-old — from Massachusetts — learned, during the night march to Princeton, that he was to be in command of an artillery crew in the action expected there. But this, he objected, was too much responsibility for a sergeant. Why should Colonel Henry Knox "bolt upon me?" White's captain replied, "He remembers what you did at Trenton." It worked. "I began to feel my pride rising," White would recall, "and I said no more" in the Princeton battle he added to his laurels.

In my mind's eye there are scores of many other soldiers serving during the Trenton and Princeton actions: Joseph Hodgkins, Charles Willson Fiske, and the Rev. John Rosburgh, to name just three.

On the march southward in the autumn of 1776, Lieutenant Hodgkins, 31, a shoemaker from Massachusetts, received word that his infant son, "Pease, an artist-turned-landlord, instead of heading homeward as were many with far less reason, were maintained on duty throughout the Trenton and Princeton battles. Pease, an artist-turned-landlord, acted as a sort of mother hen for, as well as leader of, a company of Philadelphia militiamen. At age 62, Rosburgh, a Presbyterian minister, led a contingent of his parishioners to the battle area and was killed in the second Trenton battle. His last letter to his young wife (and mother of his five children) brings letters:

"You would think it strange to see your husband, an old man, with a French fusée slung at his back. This may be my last letter ye shall receive from your husband ... I send my compliments to you, my dear and children. Friends, pray for us."

Other glimpses come to mind: young John Howland brushing against Washington's horse on a narrow bridge as the enemy approached for the second battle at Trenton, and noting that the "majestic countenance of the General inspired confidence and assurance in a moment so critical"; Colonel John Henslet dying in the Princeton battle with "discharge papers" he had chosen to ignore tucked into one of his pockets; Washington riding into the middle of a firefight to rally his troops at Princeton and, at the end of that battle, shouting, "It's a fine fox chase; my horse rode with troops pursuing the fleeing British."

This was Washington's finest hour. He had somehow, largely through the strength of his own personality, held the ragged remains of a rebel army together. The Monroes, Whites and the other members of "the little band that faced the storm" had kept a dying revolution alive.

A long hard road lay ahead but never again would America be seized by such panic as spread through the states in December 1776; never again would the American cause be in such jeopardy as it was in December 1776.

Bruner autobiography fascinating for insights

"In Search of Mind," Essays in Autobiography — by Jerome Bruner (Harper & Row, 396 pp., $20).

By CHRISTINA ROBB
Boston Globe

Born blind, Jerome Bruner was the fourth and last child of two Polish-Jewish immigrants to New York. His father was a self-taught, self-made business success, and his mother a rather chilly housewife who Bruner says he can't remember ever hugging him.

In fact, I found Bruner's autobiography as fascinating for its blind spots as for its insights. Imagine being born blind to a woman who didn't touch you much? How would you connect to the world? How would you learn to talk?

Bruner's older sister, Min, was his "functional mother," he says. And then at two, he had the first of a pair of cataract operations that gave him sight. He says he has no memories of blindness or of learning to see.

But later, much later, he was to revolutionize psychology with a series of experiments about the way meaning and values are part of the act of seeing — proving that sight, like speech, is cultured and not just some raw automatic response.

His father died when Bruner was 12 — a loss whose pain he does remember — and his mother started moving. He went to six high schools in four years. His mothering sister, Min, got married. These two important women in his life drop out of his story completely once he gets to college.

Going to Duke University in 1933 as a New York Jew was like learning to see again. Bruner had never done well in school, but now he was gripped by the excitement of the young science of psychology — named for the Greek word for soul — wherein some radicals were claiming that the domain of psychology was totally limited to what you could see as a rat do. Gradually, at Duke and then in graduate school and later teaching at Harvard, Bruner found allies to support his convictions that meaning and thought were the natural province of psychology, too, even though rats couldn't be seen to think. After studying Nazi propaganda and public opinion during World War II, he turned his attention to the measurable "constant errors" in human vision. His experiments pointed to an inner mind-set or screen affecting what was seen.

That demonstration led him to work on thinking, just when the metaphor of the computer was becoming legitimate. Even though Bruner said people weren't so much like rats, many objectivist psychologists could accept Bruner's argument that people were like machines, and that people perceived things according to pre-set inner "programs."

He began then to study in infants the beginnings of thinking, and finally, via Noam Chomsky's hypothesis about an inborn "language acquisition device" and John Austin's work on "performative utterances," to study how infants learned to talk.

Visual cues from the mother turned out to be vitally important in this process — and at last, perhaps pleasantly, Bruner learned the lessons in speech that his cold mother hadn't given him as a blind toddler.

'Zelig' proof again of Woody's ability

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the 1920s, Leonard Zelig was everywhere. With the famous and glamorous, the infamous and humble.

There was nothing particularly unique about Leonard himself, except for his ability to transform his physical appearance to that of the person he was with.

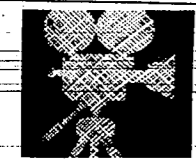

With old people, he would become wrinkled. In the company of over-weight people, he would begin to gain pounds. With criminal types, he developed a scarface.

Zelig was one of those comet-like phenomena who burned brightly in the heaven of celebrity, then are forgotten.

The film "Zelig" is a bright and funny satire of all those documentary characters whose lives are told via old film footage, reflection and narrative. It is also a positive proof of Woody Allen's foothold as the American innovative comedy talent.

Allen, who also stars as the fictional title character, tells Zelig's rocky story in documentary style, complete with convincing newsworld footage. Technically and in form, it really is like sitting through one of those public television specials, except for Allen's bizarre touches and original wit.

Review

Movies

Where the film falls is in its attempt at the love story between Zelig and his physician. Documentaries lend themselves to satire, but not romance.

It does succeed throughout, however. Woody Allen's dean pan is perpetually funny. The makeup is particular well done, changing the familiar Allen face into dozens of other people — from a black man to fighter.

Movie buffs ready for another 'Dirty Harry'

By JAN HERMAN
Chicago Sun-Times

HOLLYWOOD — Asking Hollywood insiders about what's hot and what's not among Christmas movies is like consulting the proverbial blindmen on the size and shape of an elephant.

Even veteran observers of Tinseltown stationed in Los Angeles and New York, who are normally as reticent as broken-down horse players, blurt to predict what will hit and what will miss.

"That's something I would never venture to propogate," one sniffed. Another, somewhat more forthcoming, noted: "If anybody figures out how to predict public acceptance, he'd be elected a genius of all time or at least president of the phone company."

Of course, everybody in and around the film business knows that Christmas week will be the most bankable week of the year. They know, too, that the studio release their best pictures during Christmas for Academy Award consideration because February releases are often forgotten.

The public is ripe for Clint Eastwood in his new Dirty Harry movie, one theater-chain executive said, echoing similar remarks from every quarter. "That's what he does best. He shoots people and says, 'You made my day.' He always opens big in that role and he's always good for three to four weeks."

Otherwise, unanimous opinion is hard to come by. For example, several insiders could have been describing utterly different movies when commenting on the anti-quake "Silkwood," a 20th Century-Fox release about a plutonium fuel-rod plant worker starring Meryl Streep, Cher and Kurt Russell.

"I hear it's Streep's best performance," one said. "I saw the picture and it's a dog," another countered. What struck a third as "very deliberate-drama" drew the remark that it was "as slow as molasses in January" from a fourth.

As for "Yentl" with Barbra Streisand, critics view her as one of the world's natural wonders. She wrote, produced, directed and stars in this offering. But exhibitors tend to disagree on how well her $16.5 million movie will play outside Jewish neighborhoods.

"No crossover, extremely limited run," one predicted. "It's good pop music, but it doesn't grab us guys," said another. However, a third argued that it would go beyond Jewish neighborhoods "to become 'one of the three biggies' pictures of the season."

In New York, where "Yentl" recently opened, it drew $100,000 in its first week compared with the previous week's $12,000 for "Brainstorm" at the same theater.

That might have been expected in a city with a large Jewish population. But one insider noted that "Yentl" also did well in Los Angeles and Toronto "at theaters not located in all-Jewish neighborhoods."

Meanwhile, Universal's $25 million "Scarface," starring Al Pacino, is being touted for solid grosses now that it has received an R rating instead of an X. But many film buyers, wary of its violence although curiously unconcerned about the violence of "Sudden Impact," are divided on just how well "Scarface" will do.

"There will be a lot of business going in," one booker said. Another snuffed: "I think it will perform." But a third had doubts about how it will hold up. And a publicist from a rival studio pointed out that "it has to be one of the most violent pictures ever made, which will hurt." Addressing the question of quality, one film buyer noted: "It's a classy picture in spite of its violence."

Peckinpah movie lacks gory magic

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Before violence became all too familiar in movies, the name of director Sam Peckinpah shone like a beacon of gore and gungned-down bodies.

His slow-motion and blood-spurting techniques established a norm in movies such as "Straw Dogs" and "The Wild Bunch," whose violence and death became a poetic opera, both repelling and enchanting.

In "The Osterman Weekend," there's a bit of the old Peckinpah magic, but not enough to survive a messy baffling plot of spies and betrayal.

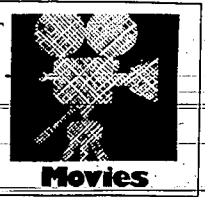

Television interviewer John Tanner, played rather stiffly by Rutger Hauer, is told by a CIA agent that his friends are being targeted as Russian spies. The agent, portrayed with twisted charm by John Hurt, tells Tanner he can help.

The turning is to take place at one of their annual reunions, this one at Tanner's house, which is loaded to the gills with video surveillance gear.

The action thus begins and there's enough to make a sadist smile. Trouble is the characters are not very caring about, despite some good actors in the roles.

Chris Sarandon, best remembered as the homosexual in "Dog Day Afternoon," plays the totally unlikeable businessman with a chip on his shoulder, Dennis Hopper, of "Easy Rider" fame, looks completely lost as the harried doctor.

And leading man Hauer, who starred as a rebellious anti-hero in "Blade Runner," has not shaken off his robot-like demeanor for this role. Only Craig T. Nelson, who starred in "Pottergeist," provides any interest and fun as the television writer who jokes while the bullets are flying and corpses falling.

The remaining cast is not worth mentioning, including Burt Lancaster, who plays the head of the CIA in a conventional portrayal of a war-mongering bureaucrat.

The actors can't be faulted entirely because they were given little to mold in this inane script. Granted spy films usually are outlandish and on the edge of the unbelievable anyway, but this one has gone beyond that to the Twilight Zone.

Peckinpah does have good moments, like the use of the video equipment to create a paranoid mood. And, there is teneness and gut-wrenching nerves to the final confrontation.

"Yet, 'The Osterman Weekend' is not a good spy film should be without. As a result, this weekend is one you'll want to skip for a good book."

'Terms of Endearment' looks like a big hit

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Right now it looks as if the hit movie of the year is "Terms of Endearment," a warm, funny, tragic story of a mother-daughter relationship starring Shirley MacLaine and Debra Winger.

Both are good bets for Oscar nominations. Perhaps an even better bet is Jack Nicholson in the role of a free-swinging ex-astronaut.

"Terms of Endearment" is Nicholson's first unalloyed hit since "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," which won him the Academy Award for best actor in 1975. This time around his prospects are for best supporting actor.

Nicholson romps through the character of Garrett Breedlove with an ease that convinces audiences he is, indeed and at once, a former space hero who is not deluded by his own celebrity.

He is by turns raffish, raucous, brutal, honest and, in the end, tender and altogether endearing.

It's a welcome relief from the heavy, melodramatic villains and psychopaths Nicholson has played for years.

"I believe in first-person acting," he explained. "Eventually, all acting is autobiographical."

Nicholson's assessment is confirmed by director Mike Nichols, who once said he'd never seen an actor who worked so much from himself as Nicholson, yet remained a dedicated character actor.

"Terms of Endearment" was the feature film directing debut of TV writer-producer Jim Brooks, for whom Nicholson had nothing but praise.

The actor said some of his best scenes were cut from the final version of the film.

the past six years. The role has had a felicitous effect on Nicholson.

"As a careerist, I can see this film is an important turn for me," Nicholson agreed. "The character had a logic I could feel an empathy with. He's always trying to do his best, although things don't always work out for him."

"I enjoyed the comic adjustment of playing an astronaut who is quietly about physical illness and who is claustrophobic, yet welcomed the chance to fly in space.

"And it's fun to play a nice guy. He's one of the few characters I've played that I'd like to lunch with. Breedlove is a guy who creates action."

Nicholson, perhaps one of Hollywood's most notorious non-conformists, convincingly transforms even the straight, heroic astronaut into an anti-hero figure.

"I believe in first-person acting," he explained. "Eventually, all acting is autobiographical."

Nicholson's assessment is confirmed by director Mike Nichols, who once said he'd never seen an actor who worked so much from himself as Nicholson, yet remained a dedicated character actor.

Pregnant bride-to-be sings the blues

DEAR ABBY: I'm 22 and my fiance is 21. I'll call him "Leon." We've been engaged for two years, but we never set a wedding date because Leon wanted to pay off his motorcycle, van and boat first.

Well, in the two years we've been engaged, I've had two abortions, and I just found out I'm pregnant again. I honestly don't know how this keeps happening. Abby, I've been on the pill for two years and I hardly ever forget to take it. Leon never uses any protection because it's against his religion.

He wants me to get another abortion, but this time I think we'd better keep the baby and get married. I've always wanted a pretty church wedding. My parents promised me one, but I'm afraid I'll tell them I'm pregnant. I won't get the wedding.

Also, the kind of wedding I will take four or five months to plan, and I'll be showing by then. Please tell me what to do.

—IN LOVE IN TAMPA
DEAR IN LOVE: Tell your parents

Abigail Van Buren
Dear Abby

you are pregnant and want to be married as soon as possible. Forget the kind of wedding that will take four or five months to plan. There's no reason why your wedding can't be both pretty and prompt. And if it's against Leon's religion to use birth control, tell him to use self-control.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle this long-standing dispute between my daughter-in-law and me.

I say that when we are out for dinner and I am the host and the bill comes to the table, the guests should engage in polite conversation and show no interest in the check.

My daughter-in-law not only insists on knowing how much the bill is, she offers her unsolicited opinion on how much the tip should be.

Please print your answer. I want to show it to her.

—STORMY IN SUNLAND, CALIF.
DEAR STORMY: The amount of the bill and the size of the tip should be the exclusive concern of the host or hostess.

Your daughter-in-law should contribute her opinion only if she is going to contribute to the bill.

DEAR ABBY: I just returned from picking up my 9-year-old son at school, and I am at the end of my rope.

This is the fourth time in as many days that "Johnny's" teacher called and asked me to pick up Johnny because he had wet his pants. Today she told me that unless something is done about this I will have to take him out of school.

Johnny stopped wetting his bed when he was 4, but he has not as yet achieved consistent daytime dryness. Sometimes he will be fine for weeks, then for no apparent reason he starts to wet his pants again. It doesn't matter if he's in school or on vacation.

he stills wets his pants.

I've had him to a pediatrician, then to a urologist, and neither doctor could find anything physically wrong, so I took him to a child psychologist. She said, "Ignore it and don't make an issue of it. In time the boy will outgrow it."

This is very hard to ignore, Abby. Now what?

—END OF ROPE
DEAR —END: Take the psychologist's advice, then ask her to write (or telephone) Johnny's teacher enlisting her patience and cooperation.

To expel the boy from school for this reason would only compound his problem. In the meantime, buy him some disposable, absorbent, diaper-type underpants with plastic linings. Your urologist can tell you where to get them.

Fonz may trade his leather jacket for a dress

By DAVID DUGAS
United Press International

"The Fonz" may trade his black leather jacket for a dress. Henry Winkler, who plays the street-smart character on TV's "Happy Days," is considering playing the lead in the hit Broadway play "Torch Song Trilogy."

A spokesman for playwright Harvey Fierstein said Winkler saw the show — about a fender-hearted transvestite — and loved it. He said Fierstein and Winkler have since become friends. The television star's publicity agent in New York confirmed Winkler is considering the role, and Fierstein's spokesman agreed the two have been "talking about" Winkler taking the lead. "He loves the stage — that's his original training," Winkler's press agent said. "He was lucky with 'Happy Days' and did it for 11 years."

Shipping heiress Christina Onassis will pay $18 million in inheritance taxes on her late father's estate under a compromise settlement reached out of court in Athens. That's $10 million less than the $28 million the Greek government demanded earlier this year. Miss Onassis claimed she owed no taxes on the $61 million estate of her father, shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis, who died in 1975, since all its shares were in the hands of foreign companies. Finance Undersecretary Dimitris Tsavoulas said Thursday Miss Onassis will pay the government $8.1 million, the remainder of the money she owes, on Friday. She paid $3.8 million last month, and the government still owes her $6.1 million from the purchase of Olympic Airways, which she also inherited. Tsavoulas said Miss Onassis also will finance a $30 million heart disaster clinic.

Stripper Chesty Morgan, 55, has taken the Stoughton, Mass., Board of Selectmen to court for interfering with her freedom of expression — namely by withdrawing the liquor license from a bar where she works because she was too friendly with the customers. Her attorney, Kenneth H. Tatarian, said Chesty's routine of cavorting around among the tables in the lounge is just to "establish a link between her and the audience." The selectmen said that letting customers pat her was more of a link than is permitted by local tavern laws.

Hill Street deals with death

Newhouse News Service

A measure of how much Michael Conrad meant to "Hill Street Blues" is the rampant curiosity about how the series will deal with the actor's recent death.

It's always tricky for a television series to deal with the death of a cast member, especially one as popular as Conrad, who made a role and a specific scene uniquely his own. The choices are limited—either ignore it, or make it part of the story.

As for Conrad's role as Esterhaus, on Jan. 12, Lt. Henry Goldblume (Joe Spano) will take over the weekly roll-call speech for the rest of the season.

Reportedly, Esterhaus' absence will be explained by Goldblume's comment that he's in a clinic for a checkup.

Producer Steven Bochco says the show probably will deal with Conrad's death head-on, adding, "We won't pretend a character as important as

Television

Conrad's monologue in the squad room opened each "Hill Street" episode. His closing admonition — "Hey! Let's be careful out there!" — became the show's signature.

The actor's reassuring authority held many of the episodes together, especially in the series' early days when "Hill Street" was finding its way. His unflappable presence was the glue that often kept the complicated plot lines from drifting off into chaos. Conrad, 58, died on Nov. 22 after a two-year struggle against cancer.

It's no small tribute to Conrad's skill that Esterhaus retained his authority while involved in some wonderfully ludicrous situations. In the first year, Esterhaus was carrying on a romance with — and nearly married — a high school girl. Later, his amorous adventures with the formidable Grace Gardner (Barbara Babcock) were magnificently bizarre, yet Conrad played Esterhaus at such an exact pitch that the sergeant kept his dignity.

It may seem callous for a series to make a cast member's death part of the weekly entertainment, but it isn't an uncommon problem.

"Dallas" faced the same dilemma with the death of veteran actor Jim Davis, who played Jock Ewing. Davis' death was handled in a series of episodes that saw Ewing travel to South America and subsequently be killed in an air crash.

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

"A politician thinks of the next election; a statesman of the next generation." — James F. Clarke

A politician who uses only the immediate benefits will lose today's game. A statesman who looks to the future will find the way to success. South allows West to win his diamond Jack, hoping that West will continue. However, West realizes that East must have a sit-card suit and switches accurately to a trump, since the real danger is the impending club ruffs in dummy.

Clearly, its best for South to lead his club king instead of a low club. West is forced to win the trick and he has no second trump to lead. South wins any lead by West and comfortably racks up three club ruffs in dummy. What if it had been West who had the second trump? Then South would have had no chance. The difference is that when a low club is led, the defenders have the option of who wins the trick. When South leads the king, only one defender can win.
