Troops flying home From Grenada

By IRVING ALLEN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The last remaining U.S. combat troops will leave Grenada Monday, 48 days after the U.S. invasion and slightly ahead of the Christmas week schedule, a White House source said Saturday.

The source said 918 paratroopers in the 82nd Airborne Division will be airlifted back to Fort Bragg, N.C., Monday morning, with 1,100 support troops coming home by Thursday.

"This beats Christmas," the source said, referring to the withdrawal deadline promised by administration officials since shortly after the invasion began Oct. 25.

The withdrawals would leave 300 U.S. soldiers on the Caribbean island, most of them military police — armed and in uniform — to "keep law and order" until the fledgling Grenadian government organizes a police force of its own, said the source, requesting anonymity.

President Reagan told congressional leaders Friday he could not "see them" due to the withdrawal deadline.

The paratroopers, coming out on Monday, arrived Oct. 27, two days after the invasion began.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill and Senate President Pro Tempore Strom Thurmond, R-G.C., Reagan said Friday the objectives of the U.S. invasion of the tiny Caribbean island are being met.

"Although it is not possible to predict the precise duration of the temporary presence of United States armed forces in Grenada," Reagan said, "I anticipate that this (their removal) will be accomplished in the near future and that any members of the U.S. Armed Forces remaining in Grenada hereafter will have normal peacetime assignments, such as training, local security and the furnishing of technical services."

Reagan said he is "satisfied that the objectives are being met."

NOW backs Mondale Women vow Reagan defeat

By JUDITH DUGAN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The National Organization for Women, saying President Reagan's re-election would be "a crisis for American women," threw its support behind Walter Mondale Saturday in the first presidential endorsement by the group.

"We will not sit at this one out," NOW President Judy Goldsmith said following a day-long meeting of NOW's board of directors and political action committee.

"We are activists, and we will put our energy behind defeating Reagan and electing Walter Mondale in 1984," she told reporters. "Our quarter of a million members are experienced in canvassing, raising money, phone-banking and lobbying through long years of fighting for the Equal Rights Amendment."

The group's political action committee voted 32-5 for Mondale in a private meeting, Ms. Goldsmith said. She would not say who the five board members favored, but acknowledged the second-strongest candidate was Sen. Alan Cranston of California. An effort by Jesse Jackson for the sen-dissemination never really got off the ground.

Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado said after learning of the Mondale endorsement. "Candidates are spending too much time making speeches and are not giving American women the discussion of issues they deserve."

"This was a very historic meeting," said author Betty Friedan, NOW's first president who lobbied for Mondale. "This can elect a president. Women can elect the president of the United States."

Ms. Goldsmith acknowledged that electability was a "major factor" in choosing Mondale, the front-runner for the Democratic nomination, but also cited Mondale's record on women's and civil rights issues.

"Four more years of Ronald Reagan would be devastating," said Ms. Goldsmith. "The potential for a Reagan reelection represents a crisis for American women."

Police hunt mother at Ashley's funeral

By STEVE GREEN
United Press International

BOISE — Police detectives attended the rain-soaked funeral and burial of a brain-dead baby Saturday in a failed attempt to catch the parents of the abandoned infant, who died after two months hooked to life-support systems.

Boise police watched the small crowd of mourners to see if one of both of Baby Girl Ashley's unknown parents came to pay their respects to the child.

But the funeral did not lead to any breaks in the case, police said.

Detective Frank Richardson said plain-clothes officers were assigned to the funeral service at the downtown St. Michael's Episcopal Cathedral and the burial at Spring Gardens Cemetery outside the city.

He said officers would have been able to positively identify the mother by blood and hair samples taken from the Boise State University restroom in which the child was born and abandoned Sept. 28.

About 60 mourners attended the church ceremony, where the Rev. Martin Dwyer read from the Bible.

Reclamation rules rekindle bitter Idaho water-law dispute

By HAL BERTON
United Press International

TWIN FALLS — One of the most bitter disputes in the history of American water law was rekindled last week, with the publication of U.S. Interior Department rules that will implement the Reclamation Reform Act of 1982.

The rules are the latest manifestation of a still-unfolding battle to determine who will benefit from the federally subsidized water projects that have turned the desert of the West into some of the most fertile agricultural lands in the world.

The new rules represent some part of a compromise between the reformers and the large corporate farmers, centered in California, who have benefited for decades from federally subsidized water.

But if one segment of the law — known as the "hammer" clause — is challenged successfully in upcoming court action, the new rules will represent a near-total victory for the large corporate farmers.

This key clause, as now written, eventually would force large farmers to pay the market rate for all water used to irrigate lands in excess of 960 acres.

However, the clause would have only a limited impact in Idaho, where few farms irrigated by water from federal projects are more than 960 acres in size. Most southern Idaho farmers, according to area attorneys John Rosholt and Roger Ling, who specialize in water issues, generally are satisfied with the new rules.

These rules, in addition to expanding the old acreage limitation from 320 acres to 960 acres for a husband-wife farming team, also abolish a previous residency clause that required farmers to live on, or near, the acreage being irrigated by federally subsidized waters.

But Ling warns that the rules will add a considerable financial burden to irrigation districts, as well as some farmers, by imposing increased paperwork.

The new rules reflect congressional efforts to update the original 1902 Reclamation Act. By imposing the 320-acre limit, an earlier generation of legislators had hoped to ensure that only family farmers benefited from the irrigator water.

But the 1982 act left a giant loophole to the 320-acre limit by allowing unlimited leasing of additional acres of land irrigated by federally subsidized water. And over the years, this loophole allowed farmers in Idaho and elsewhere about the West to flout the intent of the act.

The worst abuses occurred in California, where Southern Pacific, Standard Oil of California, Tenneco and other large corporate farms, with the aid of lease agreements, use

Nobel prizes keys on rights

By United Press International

OSLO, Norway — Lech Walesa, who "made humanity bigger and more inviolable," was awarded the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize Saturday for his role as founder and leader of Poland's banned Solidarity trade union. His wife Danuta accepted the prize on his behalf.

His brief acceptance speech, read at the awards ceremony by his wife, was met with a prolonged standing ovation from an audience that included King Olav II.

In Sweden, King Carl XVI Gustaf presented the 1983 Nobel science and literature prizes Saturday to five American scientists and the British novelist William Golding.

"Lech Walesa has made humanity bigger and more inviolable," the prize is a homage to the power of victory which abides in one person's belief, in his vision and in his courage to follow his call," said Norwegian Nobel Committee chairman Egil Arvik as he presented the award.

Hours after the ceremony, some 1,600 Solidarity supporters marched past the hotel where Mrs. Walesa and her son were staying in a torchlight parade. Both appeared in a window to greet the marchers.

Walesa remained in Poland in tribute to union members still imprisoned in Gdansk.

"On that solemn day my place is among those with whom I have grown and to whom I belong — the workers of Gdansk," Walesa said in the speech read by Mrs. Walesa as she and her 13-year-old son, Bogdan, received the Nobel gold medal, diploma and $190,000 check.

Walesa, 40, quoted 1905 Nobel laureate in literature Henryk Sienkiewicz, who described Poland saying: "She was pronounced dead — yet here is proof that she lives on."

"Today nobody claims that Poland is dead. But the words have acquired a new meaning," Walesa said in an implied reference to the outlawed Solidarity trade union.

In Sweden, four of the other laureates urged Soviet leader Yuri Andropov to release dissident physicist and Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov from his internal exile and let him leave the country.

During an elegant awards ceremony, King Gustaf rose to present a Nobel diploma and gold medal to each winner, starting traditionally with the physics prize, shared by William A. Fowler and Subramanyan Chandrasekhar.

They were followed by awards to chemistry laureate Henry Taube, economy winner Gerard Debreu, literature winner Golding and medicine laureate Barbara McClintock, an 81-year-old biologist.

Golding, author of "The Lord of the Flies," was the only non-American among the winners.

Nobel chairman Egil Arvik presents prize to Lech Walesa's son, Bogdan, and wife, Danuta.

Conservatives' views on Reagan mixed

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan got a mixed report card Saturday from 11 leading conservatives asked to grade the chief executive and his administration after almost three years in the White House.

The assessments, collected for the Heritage Foundation's magazine, Policy Review, ranged from Phyllis Schafly's, "You will not see me criticizing Ronald Reagan" to Paul Weyrich's, "The radical surgery that was required in Washington was not performed."

Nearly every one of the conservatives asked for brief commentaries had something good to say about Reagan or his record. But only one, William Rusher, failed to come up with something that the president did or not do that displeased them.

Schafly, a leader in the battle against the Equal Rights Amendment, said criticizing Reagan "is an easy way for conservatives to get on the national media, but I think that's a mistake."

She praised Reagan as "a wonderful man with all the right instincts" and said "he was fine on the moral issues." He had "licked inflation" and "stood absolutely firm on the air controllers' strike."

But she added that Reagan's main problem "is that he is not a tough enough administrator" and declared, "Social Security was mismanaged at the White House. Reagan shouldn't have talked about the subject at all."

Weyrich, head of the Committee for Survival of a Free Congress, started his comments in a critical vein.

But even Weyrich had a good word for Reagan's stress on tax cuts and defense, emphasizing that "Weyrich, we are decidedly better off than we were before the Inauguration."

Great Lakes storm claims at least five lives

By United Press International

Wintry gusts dropped the wind chill factor to nearly 40 below zero in Minnesota and thick fog Saturday enveloped the nation from Pennsylvania to the Great Lakes. The weather was believed to have taken at least five lives.

A pilot and three paramedics who took off in foggy conditions to aid a heart attack victim on a Lake Erie island Friday night apparently died when their plane crashed into the water and an Iowa woman died in an accident on an icy highway.

Violent winds tore through the eastern slopes of the Rockies in Wyoming and Colorado, where a high winds watch was posted for winds up to 75 mph.

Gusty winds and bitter cold chilled the northern Plains and an advancing storm threatened Wisconsin and parts of Michigan with up to 8 inches of snow.

Heavy rains washed out Texas roads and flash-flood watches were posted.

International Falls, Minn., shivered at 19 below and brisk winds dropped the wind chill to nearly 40 below. The noontime reading at International Falls was 10 below with a 38 below wind chill.

Thick fog from Pennsylvania to the Great Lakes cut visibility to zero in some places. Despite the conditions, a pilot and three paramedics left Put-In-Bay, Ohio, for Kelley's Island to aid a heart attack victim.

"When they left visibility was very low," said Coast Guard Petty Officer Chris Krogan. "We searched last night with two boats and stayed out until visibility got down to zero."

"This guy (the pilot) has been flying around the islands for awhile. He was a pretty experienced pilot. But the chilling was real low," he said.

Searchers Saturday discovered only a life jacket and an oil slick in the 35-degree water.

"We have spotted no survivors," said a Coast Guard spokesman.

Bears slain in Montana

Two grizzly bears were slain in Montana Saturday, the first in the state since 1972, according to state wildlife officials.

The bears were slain in the northern part of the state, near the Canadian border. One was a male and the other was a female.

Bush booed by crowds

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Vice President George Bush — twice heckled by boating, jeering crowds — met Saturday with President Raul Alfonsin in America's first round of talks with Argentina's new democratic government.

Bush, who earlier was heckled by crowds at the foreign ministry and at the capitol, was received by Alfonsin at 8:10 p.m. in the presidential residence in suburban Olivos.

During Bush's one-hour meeting with the new president he discussed military and economic issues, officials said.

At the same time, Under Secretary of the Treasury Robert McNamara met with Economy Minister Bernardo Grispun and Central Bank President Enrique Garcia Alvarez, while the U.S. chief of the Southern Command, Gen. Robert Gorman, met with Argentine Defense Minister Raul Borras.

The United States lifted its arms ban on Argentina this week following the restoration of democratic rule.

DeMeyer decision erodes faith in law

The next time someone in the legal profession tells you how the law is fair and just, recall the case of Virginia DeMeyer, the former Idaho deputy attorney general who got behind the wheel of a car drunk in October 1982, drove down a highway and killed two children.

For this act, she got 30 days in jail, a $1,000 fine, was required to perform 300 hours (five weeks) of public service law, and lost her driver's license for a year. Doesn't seem like much, does it, for two children's lives?

Friday, the Idaho State Bar's governing board decided that her conviction on two counts of manslaughter — both felony offenses — did not constitute sufficient reason to revoke her license to practice law in Idaho, although such a conviction would mean automatic revocation in many other states.

The board went through the motions of citing how the disciplinary actions are supposed to relate to "the ability of the member to function" as an attorney.

From our perspective, we have a case here of a profession closing ranks to protect one of its own. It's that old, age-old evil of the fellow-professional ethic, which some have used to prevent effective enforcement of the public interest. A lawyer gets to keep her license, things just go on the way they are.

In our view, this case has been strangely handled at several points.

Evidence that DeMeyer's blood-alcohol level several hours after the incident was still three times over the state limit was never admitted to the jury. Nonetheless, the verdict if rendered was a fair one in our view; guilty on two counts of manslaughter.

The sentence imposed by Judge Arthur Oliver was, in our opinion, far too weak, amounting to a slap on the wrist. Now, the bar's action removes the last possible sanction.

In our opinion, DeMeyer should have done some jail time. A year for each child's death. In our view, would have been appropriate.

And, again, in our view, we think she should be prohibited from practicing law in Idaho. If getting drunk and killing two children doesn't constitute what lawyers and judges piously call "moral turpitude," we don't know what the term means.

The implication of this outcome is that if you're a lawyer, the law will protect you and your job.

Some people argue that DeMeyer has suffered enough and will think of those children every day of her life. We'd like to think that is true, but we doubt it. Human beings are very good at repressing scars from their past, particularly when there is guilt involved.

But we know how the case will affect many people in the general public, the non-lawyers who don't get slaps on the wrist when they break the law. It will make them all that more suspicious of a profession that supposedly seeks justice and truth.

Lawyers and judges like to talk about how respect for the law is declining in America. They might well look at cases like DeMeyer's to find the reason.

The media and the presidency

Contact would improve Reagan's press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has not had a news conference since Oct. 19 — his 20th in office.

Since that time the Marine death toll has gone up to 254 from a terrorist bombing and from other hostilities in Lebanon; a U.S. invasion of Grenada; the start of deployment of Pershing-2 and cruise missiles in Europe, causing the Soviet delegation to walk out of the Geneva talks on intermediate range nuclear missiles; and an escalation of violence in Lebanon.

Reagan has made policy statements from time to time, and taken a few questions on the run, but he has not submitted to full-scale questioning. Meanwhile, the administration also initiated an unprecedented blackout so that the media could not cover the first stages of the invasion of Grenada.

Reporters did not demand to be told that an invasion was in the making beforehand, although the press in the Caribbean had reason to believe a military action was afoot. But neither did they expect to be misled. A "no comment" would have sufficed.

Over the past several weeks, there have been reports that Reagan has been in high odignon over "leaks" to the press, and has ordered an FBI investigation of this kind of thing. But neither did they expect to be misled. A "no comment" would have sufficed.

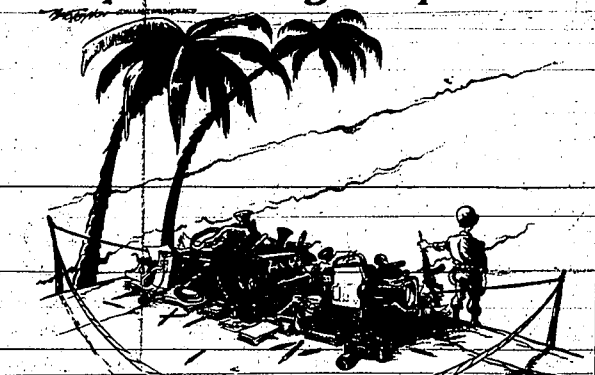

When asked when the president will hold a news conference, spokesman Larry Speakes tells reporters tersely that when Reagan decides to hold one, he will announce it. No president particularly relishes ongoing questioning. And yet, most have understood that there is a basic "people's right to know" what is going on and where his policies are headed. No formal speech can cover all the bases, and at best is highly selective.

Meanwhile, Speakes has adopted a more confrontational style with the media. He has not had a real vacation in a long time and the strains are beginning to show.

He was kept in the dark when Reagan decided to move into Grenada; and his answers to inquiries into the day before were not on target. Recently, he tried to convey the president's displeasure with chief economic adviser Martin Feldstein over the question of the relationship between taxes, defense spending and deficits. But

Speakes was so heavily handed that he appalled some of the White House insiders. The message that Speakes was conveying was correct: Alkes said that Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, was not on board as a team player. But he used a tone of ridicule, and told reporters at one point with a smile: "I do not really think they actually asked him (Feldstein) to resign."

In his own defense at a briefing, Speakes accused reporters of engaging in most of the ridicule, telling them "you should listen to your guinea and your astute in that briefing, and we will see how balanced" the press is.

Speakes was so heavily handed that he appalled some of the White House insiders. The message that Speakes was conveying was correct: Alkes said that Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, was not on board as a team player. But he used a tone of ridicule, and told reporters at one point with a smile: "I do not really think they actually asked him (Feldstein) to resign."

"Your guinea are also part of the record and you are identified on the tapes of these briefings," he warned. "So if you want to see who is the villain of these things that people write about in the newspapers, I would urge you to look within."

But Speakes is the government's chief spokesman and what he says in public is taken as the official word from the White House.

He has had to deal with critical foreign policy matters, and there has always been the question of how much access he has to the president when history is being played out.

And sometimes his parrying with the press takes on an edge. In that respect, he is no different from many of his predecessors who resorted to insult in the face of legitimate questions that they probably were not at liberty to answer.

Helen Thomas covers the White House for United Press International.

To folks out there, we are still "they"

In the end of the third year of the reign of the most popular president since John F. Kennedy, there appears to be an acrimonious debate being waged between the president's men and the American press.

There were indications of it last fall, in the none-too-subtle way in which the Reagan administration shut off the coverage of Grenada.

Another example appeared in the discussion of the fiscal gap, which is now approaching $200 billion a year. The press is beginning to probe the issue, with some help from within, including economic adviser Martin Feldstein. You can bet someone soon will call foul about the reporting.

Across the nation media-bias is again becoming a popular sport for politicians. Hardly a week goes by without one of our more conservative members of Congress taking a shot at the "liberal, Eastern media." Sadly, from my perspective, an increasing number of Americans seems inclined to believe the hyperbole.

But there is just enough raucous behavior and irrelevance in journalistic ranks to make the media a good target. Some reporting is inaccurate. Some journalists are arrogant. Some are just plain rude.

Stephen Hartgen

The impression of journalists as a bunch of boorish, noisy and insensitive aloes has considerable impact. It is a mental picture formed from old Jack Webb movies, of sly, crafty creatures who aren't professionals at all, but merely practice a "craft."

Journalism has come a long way since then and has established itself for the most part as a respectable profession. But in my view, there seems to be a returning negative image, helped along by several administrations trying to shift the blame for their troubles onto the press.

A recent study by University of Chicago researchers finds the public gives newspapers only slightly higher marks for confidence than television journalism. But neither is very high overall. Newspapers were ninth of 13 institutions. Television was next to last, 12th. Both are below the confidence people have in religious leaders, doctors, college presidents, congressional leaders and the White House.

Many prior journalists secretly blame the poor showings on their broadcast colleagues, a view that hasn't been dispelled by the blow-combed puffery that adorns much of television news.

That puffery, combined with irreverence and occasional rudeness toward the administration, has many people thinking that maybe this freedom of the press stuff isn't such a hot idea after all. It is a line we heard frequently this fall over the Grenada invasion on the call-in shows.

Not wanting to be filmed by the same video cameras, we can expect to see some print journalists trying to put distance between themselves and broadcasting's most-obvious buffoonery. That should help the image of newspapers.

But before getting smug, we should recognize that the public makes little distinction between "us" and "them."

We are both "they" to the folks out there, and the problem is getting worse, not better.

Stephen Hartgen is managing editor of The Times-News.

Isn't Dallas-Redskins meeting most important of 1983?

The phone rang the other day and a sports writer from Dallas asked me a strange question.

"Why do the people in Washington hate the Dallas Cowboys?"

"Where on earth did you get that idea?" I asked. "There isn't a team in the National Football League whom we hold in higher esteem and affection."

"That's what we read in the newspapers down here," he said.

"Don't believe anything you read in your own papers," I told him. "How can we hate America's Team? They represent all that is good about this country. They are a credit to their state. I have never heard a harsh word spoken against Dallas by a Redskin fan."

"Does that mean you've never been to a Dallas-Redskin game in Washington?" he asked.

Art Buchwald

"Of course I have. But we cheer equally for both teams. Redskin fans are only interested in seeing a good football game. When it comes to playing the Cowboys the score is immaterial to us."

"Are you putting me on?"

"Why would someone from Washington lie to a Dallas sports writer?" I said. "You have to understand the nature of Redskin supporters. We're different from Cowboy fans. Although we like to win, we don't consider it a matter of life and death. Our hearts go out to the other team if they fumble the ball or their quarterback is sacked. This is especially true when we play Dallas. We have nothing but pity for them and we don't want them to get out of football just because of us."

"Are you trying to tell me the Dallas-Redskin meeting isn't the most important game of the year?"

"Don't make me laugh," I told him. "As far as we people in Washington are concerned it doesn't compare to facing a (real) real (unlike) team like Tampa Bay or the Houston Oilers. The truth is we try to keep our first stringers on the bench so we won't run up the score."

"Am I really talking to Washington, D.C.?"

"You certainly are and I'm privileged to have this opportunity to dispel once and for all the rumors that there is any ill feeling between the Redskins and the Cowboys. After all, we both live in the same world and we don't have time for animosity when it comes to a sily, gringos contest. There is no room in a Redskin's heart for hate. We love Dallas, we love the Cowboys and we worship the Astro turf you walk on."

"Suppose I told you that the Cowboys are determined to beat your brains out."

"If you feel that strongly about it, we'll just turn the other cheek."

"I can't believe I'm hearing this."

"I know it's difficult for people in Texas to understand Redskin fans. But most of us were brought up in the Quarter tradition. You can't provoke us by stirring up a rivalry which will only lead to bad feelings between two nice football teams."

"I can't print this garbage in a Dallas newspaper."

"I don't see why not. It would lead to better understanding between mankind."

"I'm talking about a football game that could decide the Super Bowl," he said.

"And I'm talking about the brotherhood of man," I told him. "We're not savages in Washington who just get victory from a third world football player."

"Do you realize I have no column for Sunday if I print what you just told me?" he yelled.

I said, "You don't, but I do."

Houston tests show way not to go with teacher salaries

HOUSTON — Back in March, 3,200 teachers at Houston's public schools took some required tests of their competency in reading, writing and math. The results, to put the matter mildly, were disastrous. So last week the Houston school trustees took decisive action to improve the situation.

Because 783 teachers cheated, only 2,437 of the 3,200 scores were validated. Of those, 67 percent of the teachers failed the reading test, 46 percent failed the math test and 26 percent failed the writing test.

The Houston trustees were especially concerned about the teachers' failure on the reading test, because the reading test, by any national standard, was not very hard. Even so, 1,510 teachers had flunked. Under a complicated scoring system, Houston had required its teachers to score at least 178 points to pass. Last Monday, as they, the trustees took action. They retroactively lowered the passing score to 174, which means that only 1,072 teachers had failed. A score of 174 means that the person taking the test has answered about 60 percent of the test questions correctly.

Well, let's hear it for the Houston teachers, and for their commission's trustees. Reading about this fiasco, I was reminded of some wiseacre's solution to the problems of the pharmaceutical companies, whose laboratory mice keep coming down with cancer. The answer: Get tougher mice. If you can't get a passing score on a reading exam, lower the passing score.

It probably is unfair to single out the Houston teachers. I just happened to be here when the story broke in the Chronicle, so I pass the tale along. Many other states have encountered the same pathetic evidence of mediocrity — and much worse than mediocrity — among presumably qualified teachers. If little Johnny can't read or write acceptably, it is partly because little Johnny's teachers can't read or write acceptably either.

It is the children who suffer from this untidy situation. Last spring Maryland gave a test on writing proficiency to 53,000 pupils in the ninth grade. More than half of them failed the test. The test was in two parts. Pupils were asked to write a letter to a friend about the performance of a musical group, and also to prepare an account of an automobile accident for police. Two scorers read each paper for content, grammar, organization, audience and sentence formation.

School officials hazarded three explanations for the miserable findings. The first was the telephone, the second was television and the third was penmanship. These 15-year-olds, it was said, spend too much time on the phone or in front of the boob tube, and the boys especially tend to write illegibly.

Maybe so. But a nagging thought will not go away that if teachers in Maryland are anything like teachers in Texas, perhaps some small part of the responsibility goes back to the classroom.

The educational picture is not wholly gloomy. While the Houston trustees were taking care of their little problem, 4,300 educators, state legislators and governors were meeting in Indianapolis for final discussions in a series of conferences on how to achieve excellence in education. Some encouraging steps are in fact being taken.

About 20 states have beefed up their requirements for high school graduation. California, for example, had required only one year of science and one year of math; the new requirement is for two years of each.

Los Angeles will phase in a daily sixth school period. Florida has set in motion a program to pay bonuses of up to $4,000 to outstanding teachers. In Tennessee, Gov. Lamar Alexander may yet win his battle against unionized teachers who oppose his plan of compensation based partly on merit. Across the country, a process of fermentation is at work.

Let me state a truism: Teacher salaries are too low. Let me state another: It is largely because of the low salaries that we wind up with incompetent teachers and ignorant children.

But as the Houston story makes clear, we do not solve the problem by large raises right across the board.

In that fashion, we reward the 62 percent who flunk four questions out of 10 on a test of their ability to read.

James Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View," from Washington.

Government in 1984 may not be a threat

Otis Pike

WASHINGTON — There is a very real danger in 1984 approaches, and it is precisely opposite to the danger that George Orwell prophesied.

The danger of 1984 is that Big Brother, the government, is so sensitive to and frightened of every transient mood, fear or whimsey in the populace that it dare not govern.

In a beautifully perceptive article in the Washington Post this past Thursday, Edwin M. Yoder Jr. talks of the future of 1984 to materialize as envisioned by Orwell.

"In the coming months you will hear more than you care to of what a near-miss it has all been, how we dodged the grip of Big Brother by the skin of our teeth," Yoder says. "Try to overlook it. It never was a real danger to this neck of the planet."

He's right.

Consider the evidence. For the last decade the press, the broadcast media and even the Congressional Record have been awash with an outraged populace screaming abuse at Big Brother. Richard Nixon was forced out of office. Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter were laughed out of office. Now it is President Reagan's turn, and from the most liberal to the most conservative spokesmen, rough criticism outyells gentle praise about 10-to-1.

Instead of the omnipresent eye of Big Brother keeping watch on a manipulated people, 200 million little brothers and sisters watch every breath he takes, every move he makes, every sentence he utters and then blast away!

The only leaders in the nation today are the people who take polls. Would-be leaders are so frightened that they do not run for public office until they take a poll. They do not know what they are for until a poll tells them what they must be for. When a fresh poll shows a change in the wind, the people who are supposed to be steering the ship of state scramble to come about.

There was a depressing article in the Congressional Quarterly recently about Robert Michel, the Republican Leader in the House of Representatives. Robert Michel is a truly decent man, possessed of brains, courage, honor, an engaging disposition and a fine baritone voice.

During his 27 years in the House Michel has risen above pork-barrel politics. The national interest has transcended bringing home the bacon. No more. Michel had a close election in 1982. He got scared. Now he is using his considerable clout to silence his district with goodies, not because he wants to, or thinks it is right, but because Little Brother wants him to and is watching.

Ronald Reagan and both the Republican and Democratic leaders of Congress wanted to collect the income tax on dividends and interest the same way the tax on earned income is collected, by withholding it. Millions of little brothers and sisters screamed, and although it was the wise thing to do and the fair thing to do, the people who are supposed to lead were frightened out of their senses, and stopped leading.

There is no more pressing necessity than making our annual national income approximate our annual national expenses. There is no national leader who is not aware of this, and hardly any who do not emotionally weep about it. But do anything? They are paralyzed by fear of Little Brother.

We have enough surplus butter to spread the Rocky Mountains, but Congress dares not turn off the spigot of federal price supports and has just turned out payments for not producing because so many little brothers and sisters milk cows. The president threatens to veto, and signs.

Old folks, retirees, workers and students all watch Big Brother with beady eyes, and so sensitive is the government that it dare not deal with substance.

If Big Brother dare not cut defense spending or pension spending or social spending, Big Brother must raise taxes and Big Brother doesn't dare.

In one last craven act of abdication in 1982, Congress adrift after defeating, or ignoring, every single deficit-reducing measure it had promised to enact when it passed its own budget resolution.

Now 1984 is upon us, and Big Brother is a helpless, frightened, pliant thing, richly deserving of the contempt we heap upon it but desperately needing our sympathy, our support and our prayers.

Otis Pike, a former congressman, writes for Newhouse News Service.

Have you thought about changing to gas heat lately?

High tech gas heating equipment can save you 25% to 40% on heating costs!

Move up to high tech now. If you heat with oil, electricity, or have an older gas furnace, now's the time to move up to high tech gas heating. From a cost standpoint, gas offers significant savings over other fuels and in most cases your service line is free if you live near a gas line.

No-money-down financing.* Intermountain Gas offers a 10-year, low interest finance program on high efficiency gas furnaces requiring no money down with payments as low as $20.00 a month. The money you'll save will help make your payments. (To qualify, furnace must have a seasonal efficiency rating of 78% or more.) You can also add a new gas water heater under this finance program.

$200. Cash rebate.* If you choose not to use our finance program to buy your new gas furnace, we'll give you a $200 cash rebate.

(Subject to certain conditions.)

See a dealer or call your Gas Co. for details.

Reagan: 'Agony must end'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan said Saturday the United States has shown "great restraint" in the face of "murderous attacks" on its forces in Lebanon and warned Syria he will do "whatever is necessary" to protect U.S. forces and reconnaissance flights.

In his Saturday radio address, Reagan also pledged to redouble U.S. diplomatic efforts for peace in the Middle East and said, "Lebanon's agony must end."

"Once internal stability is established and withdrawal of all foreign forces is assured, the Marines will leave," said Reagan, speaking from Camp David, Md.

"But because we care about human values for ourselves so much, we must be concerned when freedom, justice and liberty are abused elsewhere. That's the moral basis which brought our Marines to Lebanon," he said.

"The peace process is slow and painful. But there is progress that would not have been possible without the multinational force" of American, French, Italian and British troops.

"We will redouble our diplomatic efforts to promote reconciliation and achieve withdrawal of all foreign forces," Reagan said.

Reagan said his special Middle East envoy, Donald Rumfeld, has returned to the region "and will continue to move the peace process forward on all fronts."

But in a warning to Syria, which shot down two U.S. planes attacking anti-aircraft positions six days ago, Reagan said, "We will continue to do whatever is needed" to ensure the safety of our forces and our reconnaissance flights.

Reagan said the United States has acted with "great restraint" despite repeated provocations and murderous attacks. Our reconnaissance flights have only one purpose and the Syrians know it: To give the greatest possible protection to our troops."

Blacks back mixed ticket

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — Alabama's largest black political group Saturday night endorsed a Walter Mondale-Jackson ticket for the Democratic Party in next year's presidential election by a more than 3-to-1 margin.

Delegates to the Alabama Democratic Conference, the black wing of the party, voted 116-38 to follow the recommendation of its executive committee and endorse Mondale for president, with Jackson as his running mate.

The vote was preceded by loud and heated discussion among the 200 delegates squeezed into the conference room, and was followed by an "impromptu singing" of "We Shall Overcome."

Mondale, vice president in the Carter administration, had a prominent role in the committee's recommendation. Aides said he wasn't aware of the vote.

Civil rights activist Jackson was not immediately available for comment.

Several delegates expressed dismay over what they felt was betrayal of the black leader.

Nuclear power costs skyrocket

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nuclear reactors slated for completion in the 1980s will produce electricity at rates substantially higher than new coal or oil-fired power plants, a "think tank" reported Saturday.

The Worldwatch Institute blamed the situation on huge cost overruns caused by mismanagement, construction contracts that discourage efficiency, high interest rates and haphazard government regulation.

In a key conclusion, the study — using utility industry figures for some 30 nuclear plants scheduled for completion in this decade — said the new reactors will produce electricity "at an average lifetime generating cost of between 10 cents and 12 cents per kilowatt hour."

"This is more than 65 percent above the cost of new coal-fired power and 25 percent higher than new oil-fired power, even assuming substantial fossil fuel price increases," said the institute, a research organization that focuses on global trends.

The study assumed oil prices will rise 3.5 percent annually and hit $50 per barrel by the year 2000. The current benchmark price of oil from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is $29 per barrel.

The report assumed coal prices will rise 2 percent annually, and that coal-fired power plants will need costly air pollution equipment to reduce sulfur dioxide emissions that are linked to acid rain.

Jury slaps Klansman

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — A predominantly white jury found Ku Klux Klansman Henry Hays guilty Saturday night of brutally beating and strangling a black student, then hanging his body from a tree on a downtown street.

Hays, 29, an officer in his Mobile Klan unit, stood motionless as the jury announced its verdict, but members of the victim's family burst into tears.

Hays could receive the death penalty for the murder. He earlier told the jury of 11 whites and one black that he had nothing to do with the March 1961 slaying of Michael Donald, 19.

After announcing the verdict, the jury began deciding on what punishment Hays should receive. The panel also could recommend he spend the rest of his life in prison.

Outside the courtroom before the verdict was announced, Southern Christian Leadership Conference President Joseph Lowery stood hand-and-hand with Donald's sister and said the jury's verdict would have national and international significance.

"Is there a New South or is it warmed over hash in a new society?" Lowery asked.

In closing arguments, acting Mobile County District Attorney Tom Harrison scoffed at the defense contention that the testimony of several witnesses who said Hays bragged to them about killing Donald was misleading.

Fuel leak troubling shuttle

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — A leak in Columbia's auxiliary power unit has slowed servicing of the space shuttle and will delay its scheduled Monday departure for Cape Canaveral at least a day, officials said Saturday.

Columbia, which ended its record 10-day, 4-million-mile mission Thursday, had been scheduled to leave Edwards Air Force Base Monday morning, piggy-backed on a 747 jumbo jet for the flight to Florida's Kennedy Space Center.

"The problem means the departure will come no sooner than Tuesday," NASA spokesman Ralph Jackson said. He said hydrogen fuel will have to be drained from the leaking power unit before Columbia can make the flight.

World Shultz blasted by Arabs

RABAT, Morocco (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz ran into bitter criticism Saturday in his first trip to the Arab world since the United States and Israel established their strategic cooperation agreement.

Shultz and his aides appeared to be taken aback by the strong and open criticism encountered in his short stopover in Tunisia.

Tunisian officials, including President Habib Bourguiba, told Shultz the Arab world believes the Soviets are now a factor in the Middle East conflict only because of Israeli policies which represent a threat to peace.

Of the moderate Arab states are forced to choose between the Soviet Union and communism, on the one hand, and Israel and Zionism on the other. I'm afraid most of them would choose communism," said one Tunisian official who met with Shultz.

Shultz used the opposite logic to explain the new U.S.-Israeli strategic cooperation policy worked out last month when Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir visited Washington.

Russia calls itself human rights haven

By STEVEN R. REED
United Press International

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union ignored President Reagan's criticism of its human rights record Saturday and proclaimed itself a citadel of individual freedom.

"Power here belongs to the people," the official Communist Party newspaper, Pravda, told its readers in a front-page article commemorating International Human Rights Day.

The newspaper listed the foremost rights enjoyed by Soviet citizens as "the right to labor, rest, housing, education, medical treatment, material support in old age, cultural benefits, and also political rights — freedom of speech, the press, conscience, assembly and the right to elect and be elected."

The article capped a week-long propaganda build-up contrasting the "profound democracy" guaranteed in the U.S.S.R. against U.S. exploitation and abuse of citizens, particularly women, workers and racial minorities.

"Anyone who thinks the Soviet Union suffers from Human Rights Day in embarrassed silence doesn't understand the nature of this regime," said a Western analyst. "This is part of the same Kremlin mentality that blamed the United States for forcing it to shoot down the Korean airliner and for walking out of the Geneva arms talks."

Pravda said U.S. imperialism is the leading suppressor of human rights and freedom, and accused the Reagan administration of raising terrorism to the level of official policy.

Chief among U.S. abuses overseas are the invasion of Grenada, acts of undeclared war against Nicaragua and El Salvador's leftist rebels, subversion against Cuba, Angola and Afghanistan and intervention in Lebanon, Pravda said.

The press also devoted extensive space to the plight of individuals in the Soviet Union and United States.

100 protesters arrested at riot over arms plan

FRANKFURT, West Germany (UPI) — Police firing water cannons arrested 100 anti-nuclear protesters who threw rocks and fireworks at police in a riot Saturday outside a U.S. Army depot. Six officers were slightly hurt.

"What is throwing stones in comparison with a Pershing-571" read one banner in the crowd protesting the deployment in West Germany of U.S. cruise and Pershing-2 nuclear missiles.

The crowd also burned a huge American flag in the street outside the U.S. Army's Haines arms depot, which the demonstrators say is an assembly point for Pershing rockets.

A police spokesman said sections of a 2,000-strong crowd threw rocks at hundreds of white-helmeted riot police with shields standing between them and the depot. Some of the crowd began to build street barricades with garbage cans.

"They also threw fireworks and set fire to street garbage bins," said the Frankfurt police spokesman.

He said police then bit back with spurts from water cannons and officers waded into the dripping crowd and arrested 100 demonstrators.

Six policemen were hurt but their conditions were not thought serious.

Earlier, about 4,000 demonstrators marched from rallies in the center of Frankfurt to the depot. Many drifted away before the stone-throwing started. Gangs of masked protesters shook their fists through tin cans and fireworks at the U.S. consulate in the city as they passed, chanting slogans.

Police said a total of nearly 10,000 people participated in marches and blockades in Frankfurt, Stuttgart and Karlsruhe.

Hundreds of police stood by at the U.S. Army's Mutlangen-Pershing-2 base, 35 miles east of Stuttgart as 5,000 people staged a demonstration. About 700 broke through special police barriers erected on the approaches to the base. They were stopped 150 yards short of the perimeter by barbed wire.

Police halt civil rights rally

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Club-swinging riot police Saturday charged a crowd of stone-throwing demonstrators attempting to hold a human rights protest in front of a military headquarters.

At least five people were arrested during the protest by about 150 demonstrators marking the 35th anniversary of the U.N. Declaration of Human Rights.

There were no reports of injuries in the clash outside Camp Aguinaldo, a heavily-guarded military base on the outskirts of Manila that serves as headquarters for the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Ministry of Defense.

About 100 riot police carrying shields and truncheons formed a human barricade outside a main gate leading into the camp shortly before the protest was scheduled to begin.

A firetruck, a jeep mounted with a 30-caliber machine gun and several more riot police took up positions inside the gate.

Police Brig. Gen. Tomas Karingal told rally leaders they would not be allowed to protest outside the camp because they did not have a permit.

Karingal ordered his men to march on the protesters, who ran across a street and gathered in a gas station parking lot chanting anti-government slogans and waving banners saying "Out the U.S.-Marcos dictatorship."

The protesters then marched onto a busy street, blocking traffic and prompting another charge by riot

Happy 100th birthday, Doc

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — Dr. Niles J. Palmer, who started his career as a horse-and-buggy driver for a birthday party thrown at a bowling alley by some 100 members of his family.

For those curious about his longevity, Palmer says he has no prescription for long life and is amazed he made it to 100.

"If you picked somebody to live long, you wouldn't have picked me," he said.

He was a "gamy, sickly kid," and over the years suffered kidney problems, a ruptured appendix, ulcers and heart problems, including major surgery three years ago, but managed to keep going. He lives alone, prepares all his own meals and walks to church and lunch with friends.

Palmer said he started his career as a horse-and-buggy driver for a turn-of-the-century circuit rider optometrist.

Palmer graduated from optometry school in 1915 in Kansas City, Kan., and continued his profession until the early 1970s, practicing in the California communities of Compton, Selma and Los Osos. He retired twice but got restless and resumed work until falling vision forced him to pull down his eyeglasses.

More than 100 family members from around the United States will gather in Fresno to honor him Sunday at the Cedar Lanes bowling alley.

A birthday card from President and Mrs. Reagan, congratulating him on "the fullness of your life" is displayed proudly on his mantle at home.

Four of his five children are still living, and with 19 grandchildren, 38 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild. His wife, Daisy, died in the early 1970s after 64 years of marriage.

Palmer was born in a Kansas-Boo house and remembers traveling by covered wagon to homes in Arkansas and Missouri before returning to Kansas.

"When I was a kid we had no telephones, no television, no electric lights, no refrigeration, no cars, no running water in the house," he said. "Quite a change."

Bishops' letter stirs controversy

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — The controversy over the U.S. Catholic bishops' call for a nuclear arms freeze is expected to prove a "Sunday school picnic" in comparison to a statement on the economy being drafted this week.

"Christ came to bring the Kingdom, and part of the Kingdom is justice and a just society. The economic system has to be submitted to that criteria," said Auxiliary Bishop Peter A. Rosazza, of Hartford, Conn.

Rosazza is one of five bishops shopping what may become a highly controversial analysis of U.S. employment, welfare and trade policy convened at the University of Notre Dame Monday for three days of discussion with economic experts from the left and the right.

The bishops will later go to debates among two former Cabinet members, two high-ranking General Motors Corp. officials, conservative and liberal economists and theologians.

The bishops expect flak from those who call them unqualified to consider what economic policies are best for the country.

"I think the nuclear statement was a Sunday school picnic compared to what they're going to get here," said the Rev. Omer Williams, organizer of the symposium.

"Some of my finest Catholic businessmen will say to me, 'Why don't you stick to something you know something about?'" said committee member Archbishop Thomas Donnellan of Atlanta.

"They're saying we should not say anything, not judging what we will say," said St. Cloud, Minn., Bishop George Speltz, another committee member.

Young author will pen the Calvin Klein story

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIE
United Press International

The Calvin Klein story, one of the best-selling literary prospects around, probably will be written by young biographer Glenn Feldman, whose unauthorized biography of pianist Vladimir Horowitz hit the best-seller lists last spring. Plaskin has interviewed America's most successful fashion designer, who hired at last month for the March issue of Playboy magazine and may work with Plaskin on an autobiographical book, according to publishing world sources. Plaskin and Klein recently were seen together at a New York restaurant with Jacqueline Onassis, an editor at Doubleday's who is known to be interested in the project.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Onassis' boss, published Robert Kennedy, has been selected to chair a Senate subcommittee. A. Lurie of the San Francisco Giants, Doubleday is chairman of the board of the New York Mets and a direct descendant of Abner Doubleday, who reportedly invented baseball in 1839 in Cooperstown, N.Y.

The New York City Center of Music and Drama was the brainchild of Mayor Fiorello La Guardia, so Tom Brokaw made his directorial Broadway splash in the role of "Fiorello" in 1995, will react the mayor at the center's 50th anniversary gala Monday night. Many stars whose careers have been connected with the former Moses Temple on West 55th Street will take part in the entertainment followed by supper on stage.

Judge orders Hyatt fund to pay charities, fees

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Scott O. Wright ended months of litigation by awarding thousands of dollars intended for victims of a hotel walkway collapse to service agencies.

Wright Friday ordered Crown Center Redevelopment Corp., the builder and owner of the Kansas City Hyatt Regency Hotel, to contribute $500,000 from its fund for victims of a 1981 skywalk collapse to the Rehabilitation Institute and $100,000 to the Community Blood Bank of Greater Kansas City.

Crown Center was purchasing Hallmark Cards Inc. established two funds in January as part of the settlement of a federal class action suit in the case. The collapse of two overhead walkways killed 314 people and injured more than 200 others.

Wright ordered $4,409 be paid in arbitration fees and $9,162 in arbitration expenses. Earlier this year, he directed $441,045 be spent on lawyers' expenses and $885,000 for legal fees.

More than $400,000 of a $3.5 million fund has been reserved for legal issues that might arise. Any money left in that fund will be paid to Children's Mercy Hospital, which received $2 million of the $6.5 million fund for charities.

Earlier this month, an attorney involved in the case asked the judge to use the remaining money to further the county's investigation of the collapse.

Parents confused by twins

GREENVILLE, Texas (UPI) — Blotch and Gwen Clausen's 2-month-old twins are alike in every way, so much so that the couple went to the district attorney's office to find out who was Brian and who was Ryan.

For three weeks the Clausens were not sure which of their twins was which. They remedied that Friday by having the Hunt County district attorney's office match the babies' footprints with those taken at birth.

"We got it straightened out yesterday," Clausen said Saturday. "My wife's got one of them marked behind the ear right now."

Clausen said the boys were identical.

"They weigh the same, same height, same birth mark, same everything. They've both got one toe — the middle toe on the right foot — that's smaller than the rest of the toes. I just didn't know," he said.

State Bar lets DUI convict retain law license

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho State Bar says former Deputy Attorney General Virginia DeMeyer was convicted of drunken driving and manslaughter in the deaths of two children won't lose her law license.

The bar's five-member governing board ruled unanimously Friday that DeMeyer, whose license was suspended for 45 days while her case was under review — did not violate professional standards in the manslaughter and drunken driving incident.

"It was the unanimous feeling of the board that while obviously improper conduct was involved in this case, such conduct, in and of itself, is not a violation of professional standards," Chairman Paul Boyd said.

"The function of the proceeding is to protect the public from dishonest or deceptive practices by incompetent practitioners of law," Boyd said. "It is not to impose further sanctions or punishment in addition to those imposed by and through the judicial process."

DeMeyer, 31, was convicted last July of two counts of involuntary manslaughter and drunken driving in the October 1982 deaths of Wesley Black, 12, and his sister, Joy, 10.

The lawyer was sentenced by Judge Arthur Oliver to 90 days in jail, fined $1,000, and ordered to perform 200 hours of community service work. Oliver also ordered DeMeyer to surrender her driver's license to the state for one year.

Hypnotizing doctor gets fine

MOUNTAIN HOME (UPI) — A military tribunal Saturday reprimanded an Air Force doctor and fined him $3,000 on a misconduct charge in a case in which a female patient claimed he hypnotized her and then tried to sexually assault her.

Capt. Glenn Rych, 29, from Toledo, Ohio, was convicted by the nine-member panel late Friday on a charge of conduct unbecoming an officer. But he was found innocent on two counts of attempted rape and an additional misconduct charge.

It took the jury of officers four hours of private discussions Saturday to decide what punishment to impose on the doctor.

Schools may set bus fees

BOISE (UPI) — State Public Instruction Superintendent Jerry Evans Saturday says he expects most local school districts in Idaho to begin reflecting transportation fees from students who participate in extracurricular activities.

"He said the trend of assessing fees for out-of-school transportation or finding other sources of funds to underwrite the expenses is due to the state's reluctance to pick up the local transportation bills — and its new crackdown against excessive reimbursement requests by districts."

"I think the word is out among the school districts that they have to find a way to finance extracurricular transportation costs," Evans said.

"They can be financed out of the school district operating budget, but if they can't do that, they'll simply have to go back to the participants."

"You'll see many districts letting costs fall on those who participate, which is somewhat in a bad situation. Families with considerable financial means will be able to pay, but some others won't. It will be sad."

The state Education Department said the Legislature will no longer reimburse districts charging the state for the costs of bus trips on out-of-school activities, Evans said.

Man sees own car driving in Idaho

GRANGEVILLE (UPI) — An Oregon man was surprised to see his car speeding past the Idaho cafe where he was eating "break" because the vehicle was supposed to be in his own state being repaired.

Fred Deffer, Nyssa, Ore., was so sure it was his car being driven past the restaurant at Whitford, Idaho, Thursday that he notified police.

Soon after, Idaho County Sheriff's deputies and Grangeville Police stopped the vehicle, confirmed it belonged to Deffer, and arrested two men suspected of escaping from the Wyoming State Penitentiary and stealing cars in Oregon and Wyoming.

Trip to Russia involved KGB agents and black marketeers

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
 Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls native Larry Anderson traveled to Russia recently to gather research data for a novel he is writing. But he says he found himself closer to real-life intrigue than he could have dreamed.

An intellectual sort, Anderson was president of the Twin Falls class of 1972. He graduated from Harvard University, where he majored in philosophy and comparative religion. He holds a master's degree in philosophy from Penn State and has studied law, as well as philosophy, at Catholic University.

Besides writing articles for law journals, Anderson says he co-authored two books with Rep. George Hansen, "To Harass Our People" and "How The IRS Seizes Your Dollars."

He is also a musician and singer, and will begin performing with the area rock group Cobalt Blue in January.

Anderson's odyssey to the Soviet Union this fall actually has its roots much further in his past. In school, he studied Marx and Lenin, and wrote his master's dissertation on the 18th century German philosopher Hegel.

Marx got his ideas from Hegel, Anderson believes. "But Hegel's writings were about self — Marx tried to politicize them." He describes Marxism as "a philosophically bankrupt system."

In 1979, Anderson outlined a novel, "The Prince." Its premise is based on the conflict of religion vs. Marxism-Leninism, and includes a Lech Walesa-type figure. He notes that this was before the Nobel Prize-winning Walesa had become known to the world. In the book, Anderson explores the possibility of a nonviolent overthrow of the Soviet system.

Having waded through years of research and hundreds of finished manuscript pages, Anderson felt that he had to see the real thing — to go to the places he was writing about. So, after studying the Russian language for only two months, he took the plunge.

As Anderson describes it, by the second day in Moscow, his trip took a steep turn from that of an ordinary tourist. With his limited command of the Russian language, he was having trouble getting into a restaurant. A non-English-speaking waitress was preventing him from entering.

To the best that he could understand, "She said I had to buy a ticket to the restaurant." Also, he was trying to pay her in rubles, but she insisted on Western currency. Anderson says that a Russian woman — a total stranger who spoke English — came to his aid. She got him into the restaurant, and later came in herself.

Anderson says he went over and struck up a conversation with her, and they became friends.

During his week-long stay in Moscow, she identified herself as a black marketeer and introduced him to a dozen others in her group who were black marketeering for the purpose of raising enough money to leave the Soviet Union, Anderson says. Among other things, they needed Western money to bribe authorities for emigration papers.

Anderson says he interviewed none of these people and even accompanied some of them on intriguing ventures, which he plans to write about in his book. They were open with him, he says, because they wanted their story told to the outside world.

"These weren't criminals to me," he says. "There was no violence involved or physical coercion."

Further, Anderson says the KGB — the Soviet secret police — turns its back on most profiteering, and instead, the government gets a return from the profits of this sort crime by running stores called berkoza shops, which sell

Political cash translates into victories

For winning council candidates

By DAVID MOFFATT
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The amounts may not be great, but apparently it pays to spend money in a Twin Falls City Council election.

That seems to be the lesson to be learned from the post-election financial disclosure reports filed last week by six of this fall's eight council candidates.

The four who won were the four who spent the most.

Among the winners, Gale Kleinkopf listed contributions of $391.22; Doug Vollmer, $205.50; Jack Miller, $82.15; and Eric Anderson, $88.56.

Among the losers, incumbent Alan Wubker said he received no contributions and incurred no expense, and Ernest Vasquez listed $34 in contributions.

Lauren Craig and Calvin Beutler had not filed their reports by the Thursday deadline.

The reports show two other interesting items.

Two real estate groups were the largest, single outside sources for contributions. The Idaho Association of Realtors and the Twin Falls Board of Realtors together spent $400 backing Vollmer and Anderson, both of whom have been in that business.

However, the small donor still appeared to account for a large share of the contributions.

And the greatest expenditure was for advertising in The Times-News. The total spent there, according to the six statements, was $2,070.81.

Incumbent Kleinkopf, an agricultural scientist, won in every precinct in the city.

He listed seven contributions of less than $50, totaling $285, and he spent $35.22 of his own money.

In addition, he received four larger contributions. These were: $106 from Charlotte Kroll and $100 from Egon Kroll, both of 1859 Alhambra Drive; $125 from a political committee chaired by Joe Citek of 1305 Fremont Drive; and $60 from Clark Kleinkopf of 1211-10th Ave. E.

Vollmer, the past president of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, and Miller, a contractor, ran neck-and-neck for second and third place. They also combined some of their fund-raising.

Vollmer listed 25 contributions of less than $50, totaling $948.

In addition, he listed three contributions greater than $50. These were: $100 from the Idaho Association of Realtors; $100 from the Twin Falls Board of Realtors and $75 from H & R Block.

The Vollmer campaign also reimbursed the Jack Miller campaign for $235.50, out of a total $1,141 it raised, the result of a joint fund-raiser.

Miller listed 32 contributions of less than $50, for a total of $985.

In addition, he received three contributions of more than $50 — $100 from Rob Paine, $75 from the Aurora Capital Corp. and $82.15 from fellow Planning and Zoning Commission member Bill Wright.

Anderson, a mortgage loan officer and a former high-school teacher, came in a solid fourth.

He listed 11 contributions of less than $50, totaling 168.36, and spent $400.20 of his own money.

In addition, he listed three $100 contributions — two from the Idaho Association of Realtors, the Twin Falls Board of Realtors and Western Realty Co., his former employer.

City finance director Bryce King said last week that he had not decided yet whether to impose the $10-a-day fine-on-late-filing-the-state's "mba-sunshine" law authorized for the two late reports.

County officials defend prosecutor traveling to Texas

To get prisoner, take care of own affairs

By DAVID MOFFATT
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — This fall, Twin Falls County Prosecutor Harry DeHaan took a two-day trip to Texas to pick up a prisoner and while there, he also took care of some personal business.

Typically, a law-enforcement officer, DeHaan picks up a prisoner for Twin Falls County.

DeHaan, however, says there was nothing inappropriate with him making the trip to pick up burglary defendant Robert Nevill — on-with-taking care of some personal business, involving the sale of a horse.

In fact, he and other county officials maintain the trip may have been a good deal for the county.

DeHaan, in addition to serving as the county's chief lawyer, is in the horse business. He buys, sells and breeds cutting horses from his farm east of Piler.

This is how he explains the Dallas visit.

Last summer, he sold a horse to a business associate in Fort Worth. It was a real "home-run" of a deal, he says. The horse was a former prize-winner, which once sold for $300,000.

But the animal had been cast off by a previous owner, DeHaan had bought it for only $9,000, and says he nursed it back from injuries. He sold it for a nice profit to the Fort Worth buyer, he says.

But when a payment for the deal did not arrive on time, DeHaan became concerned.

Then, he heard in the sheriff's office that someone was needed to go to Dallas to pick up a prisoner, and he says he saw a perfect opportunity to "take two birds with one stone."

Nevill and an accomplice had been caught breaking into the Sav-Mor Drug store, off Main Avenue West in Twin Falls, last Dec. 12. Nevill pleaded innocent and was released on bail. But he failed to appear for his hearing and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

He was arrested in Dallas for alleged stealing a car, according to his attorney, Robert Galley. A deal was worked out to reduce the charge from a felony to a misdemeanor.

Galley says, Nevill waived extradition, came back to Twin Falls with DeHaan and pleaded guilty to the burglary charge. At 20, he told the county, he wanted to pay his debt to society.

"If you need somebody to go, I'll go, and I'll collect some money while I'm down there," DeHaan says he told Sheriff James Munn, who confirms that DeHaan told him about the time about his personal business.

Frogman now dives into people's souls

After battling drugs and war, veteran changed his life

By CHRISTOPHER WILLIAMS
 Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — How does one go from being a confused, disoriented young man to become a Navy frogman, to drug and alcohol dependency, and ultimately, become a missionary?

It's all part of John Wolfram's story. Wolfram will tell that story today at 5 p.m. at Twin Falls Bethel Temple Church.

"I portray my life as going through a maze," Wolfram says. "I had many dead-end streets before I found the right way out."

Wolfram is now an "outreach" minister for the United Pentecostal Church, touring the United States and speaking in more than 300 churches.

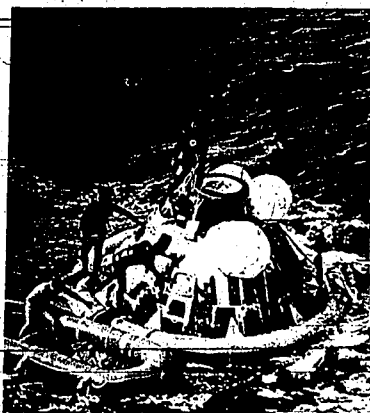

When he is finished speaking in American churches, his destination will be American Samoa and the South Pacific Islands, where he will minister to the native residents for the next four years.

Wolfram describes himself as a happy, contented individual, with direction in his life. But this was not always so.

Growing up in the 1960s was a time of turbulence and disarray, he says. During his high-school days, he sported long hair before it was fashionable.

"It (long hair) really caused a lot of friction in the high school. I received quite a bit of harassment over it."

After graduation, Wolfram faced a major decision. The Vietnam War had begun, and there were alternatives:

Wolfram was the frogman on top of the Apollo 11 capsule in a Look magazine picture.

enlist in the service, go to college, or be drafted.

"Rather than go to college, I enlisted in the Navy. I felt I was too immature to go to college, and I loved the water. I wanted to try out to be a Navy frogman."

At boot camp, Wolfram passed a test taken by more than 2,000 recruits, and then began frogman training in a class of 79.

"The frogman training was really a strenuous ordeal to go through," he says. "Out of the original 79 members of our class, only 29 graduated."

"They tried to bring a man to his breaking point and make him quit. At one point, we went through what was called Hell Week, where we were not allowed to sleep for seven days and seven nights straight. That was when most of the men dropped out."

Once a frogman, Wolfram served as a back-up on the Apollo 10 rescue mission, but the real highlight came when he was assigned to the rescue team for the flight of Apollo 11, the first manned flight to the moon.

"I was the first one into the water," he says. "My job was to swim up to the module and attach the sea anchor, which was really a parachute."

After the Apollo 11 mission, Wolfram ran into trouble. He began experimenting with drugs, he says, and was sent to Vietnam for a tour of duty.

"My mind was really confused because of the drugs. We were in heavy action, and I was shot. Our boat was hit with over eight B-40 rockets."

Share Christmas memories with us

TWIN FALLS — Do you have a memorable Christmas in your past?

Times-News readers are invited to submit an article to the paper about their best Christmas ever . . . or perhaps their worst Christmas ever.

The paper will print the best of the stories during Christmas week. Perhaps the Christmas you remember best is the one when you found out the real truth about Santa Claus, or the first one you spent away from family. Perhaps the Christmas you remember is because of a special gift, or a time when there were no gifts.

Be it soul-lifting, humorous, happy, or sad, we want to hear about it. Share your experiences with other readers.

Articles should be kept to less than 750 words and should be typed, if at all possible.

Send the articles to: Pat [Name], regional editor, Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho. Be sure to include your name and telephone number.

There was a rocket right in front of me, but the head did not explode."

Wolfram says that while starting death in the face, he was looking for some answer. "I was looking for an answer that I could put up with his mind that if deliverance from Vietnam and drugs could be attained, he would spend the rest of his life serving God."

But the change did not take place at once after he got home.

"There was a period where I went back on the promises I made. I lived the same kind of lifestyle, went to the same taverns and continued on with drugs."

"I finally got to a place where I was so sick and tired of the lifestyle. I began to search in many directions, through the occult, horoscopes and hypnosis. I was looking for answers."

Wolfram finally began searching churches and stumbled onto a Pentecostal revival, where Twin Falls minister Alan Pickettler was presiding.

"That night, conviction grabbed hold of me, and from that time on, I never smoked another cigarette and never popped another pill. I went off everything but turkey. I really just needed deliverance."

Since that night, Wolfram says things have fallen into place. He attended a Bible college in Stockton, Calif., for four years and ministered in Wisconsin, Wis., for another four years.

Wolfram's work as an outreach missionary began four months ago. Today's stop in Twin Falls will be his 103rd speaking engagement so far.

"We are really excited to have John speak," Bethel Temple pastor Pickettler says. "We've seen what he has done in the past several years, and he's really enjoying having him."

Today's program is open to the public.

consumer goods for Western cash.

According to the Twin Falls man, foreign goods in the demand in the U.S.S.R. because almost anything produced in Russia is "trash."

Anderson says he found the Russian people as a whole, "friendly but paranoid to death." Part of this is because, he believes, because through most of Russian history, it's been a host for war.

"Every 50 years, somebody would get an idea and say, 'Hey, let's invade Russia,'" he says.

He does not blame the Russians for being protective, but says, "Those SS 20s (missiles) and the divisions of the Warsaw Pact are not for defense. They're there to march across somebody else's front lawn."

Taking the train from Moscow to travel across the country, he says that on his fifth day aboard, he was rudely awakened by a uniformed officer.

After this, a KGB agent in a black jacket entered the room, while another uniformed man guarded the door.

Anderson says the men then brought in a beautiful, blonde travel guide to interpret while they interrogated him for six hours. The black marketers, he says, had tried to teach him how to act around the authorities, but he was "not really any good at it, he says."

Instead, he says, "I watched her (the travel guide's) eyes to see if she'd come picture me." She gazed at him all the questioning and even gazed for him, he recalls.

The agents wanted to know about his black-market friends, Anderson says, but the presence the KGB used for the interrogation was that he had taken a train for six hours. The black have. They finally left with three rolls of film.

However, a KGB observer was left on the train, he says. "I was totally scared to death. I'm not very brave-fishy sometimes—but not brave."

He didn't eat or sleep for three days, he says, and made frequent trips to the bathroom to flush notes concerning his friends as well as extra rubles.

The Soviets check the amount of money you have coming into the country and check you going out, he says.

At Nakhodka, Anderson boarded a steamboat for a three-day ride to Yokohama, Japan. The Moscow Symphony Orchestra was aboard, he says, and had a program each night.

"We are really excited to have John speak," Bethel Temple pastor Pickettler says. "We've seen what he has done in the past several years, and he's really enjoying having him."

Today's program is open to the public.

DeHaan

DeHaan flew to Dallas on Oct. 13, according to a county expense voucher.

He was picked up at the airport by the horse buyer, stayed at the man's home, and then went to the man's banker and lawyer the morning of Oct. 14, DeHaan says.

The horse buyer then drove DeHaan to the Dallas County Jail, where DeHaan, to come out with the prisoner, they dropped him and Nevil at the airport, DeHaan says.

While in Fort Worth, DeHaan says he also looked at other horses and discussed my horse program and his (the buyer's). "Texas is the capital of the ranching business, and Fort Worth is a center for trade in prize cutting horses."

There are few state laws governing prisoner transport, according to the Idaho attorney general's office. However, it is extremely unusual for a prosecutor to do work normally reserved for a sheriff's deputy, says one deputy attorney general.

One reason it's unusual may be the relatively high cost involved of sending a highly paid county employee to pick up a prisoner. DeHaan is the highest-paid county employee at $34,600. A sheriff's deputy makes up to $17,500.

No training is required by state law to pick up a prisoner. Munn says DeHaan was made a special deputy for the occasion and was instructed in the use of the handcuffs and leg weights. DeHaan did not carry a gun. That is in line with common procedure. Munn says police carrying one onto a commercial airliner requires special permission and procedures.

In the past, DeHaan has complained that his office is overworked with its available staff, but on this occasion, he says, he had little trouble clearing his own schedule.

He says he worked the weekend following the trip to prepare for an upcoming murder trial and assigned the sheriff's deputy to prosecute Kandie Kemp.

State law names both the sheriff and the prosecutor as a county's chief law-enforcement officials, but since the prisoner was being delivered into his custody, Munn would be responsible for naming a transport officer, according to the state attorney general's office.

Munn also signed the expense vouchers for the trip.

He says his reasoning for sending DeHaan was that he would not have to pull a deputy off regular rotation. He was short of men at the time, he says.

Besides, DeHaan had studied law at Southern Methodist University in Dallas and knew the area, Munn says.

Munn says he thinks the county came out ahead by sending DeHaan. The only major expense to the county was the plane ticket, which would have been the same for a deputy. Also, a deputy presumably would have needed a motel room, meals and a rental car.

DeHaan says he considered, in advance, whether it was appropriate for him to make the trip. He probably could have collected the money from the horse sale through the mail, "but I thought it would be a good idea to go down and knock on his door."

"Would it have been better," he asks, "to send a deputy who would sit in a motel room and watch TV?"

Worried About How You'll Look With A Hearing Aid?

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of one of the smallest Beltone aids of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

Send for this model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this free model will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It is not a real hearing aid, and it's yours to keep free. The actual aid weighs less than a fourth of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. C-533, Beltone Electronics Corp., 4201 W. Victoria Street, Chicago, Illinois 60646.

Proposed Hailey resort crosses first hurdle

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

HAILEY — A European-style health spa proposed for near Hailey cleared its first hurdle last week, when the Blaine County Planning and Zoning Commission recommended a comprehensive plan change to accommodate the facility.

The commission has recommended that the county commissioners change the approved use of 1,780 acres land from agriculture and rural residential, to rural recreational.

The change would allow Tengerssee Land and Cattle Co., led by a German developer, to seek a recreation-development district zone on the land, on which the developers say they will build a 150-room hotel with a health spa, about 25 single-family homes, a working ranch, lakes, cross-country ski trails through the mountains and other recreational amenities.

They would use a natural hot springs on the grounds for heating and for the spa, which is planned for where the old Hailey Hot Springs Hotel was for 10 years before burning in 1989.

In approving the change in the use of the land, the commission agreed with the developers that a recreational zoning district would allow a great deal of flexibility to both the developer and the county.

Unlike most zoning districts, a recreation-development district does not set forth any specific uses or dwelling-unit densities; the county commissioners establish both the uses and densities, based on plans submitted by the developers.

The only limitation in the zone would be the density of dwelling units, which could not exceed one unit for each one-quarter acre.

Evans Robertson, the attorney for the developer, argued that the zoning would allow the developer to come up with the type of plan that he wants, but it also would give the county the greatest control over what will go on the site, located in Democrat Gulch, about 1.5 miles west of Hailey.

With a recreation-development district, he said, the county would not be bound to a minimum density, as in other zones, and could hold the developers to an low a number of residential units as it deems appropriate.

Robertson said the developer will have to provide what is, in effect, a master plan showing both short-term and long-term development, as required by the zoning ordinance and subject to the board's approval. This, he said, also would give the county the opportunity to control the project.

As envisioned, the resort will feature the hotel and spa on the lower portions of the property, near Crook Creek Road. The spa would be developed along with the hotel.

The working ranch would be built around the hotel and would raise beefsteak, a cross between the American bison and beef cattle.

As the value of the land increases, homes, lakes and cross-country ski trails in the mountains would be built, the developers say. Along the trails, small huts would provide accommodations for overnight adventures.

The spa is to be modeled after European resorts—particularly those in the Bavarian area of West Germany, where the developers, led by German land developer Hans Haensel, originate.

They were introduced to the Blaine County area by Dan Henry, a Hailey miner who winters in the Tengerssee Valley of Bavaria. Henry initiated a "sister-city" relationship between the German community and the Sun Valley-area towns.

The commission approved the comprehensive map change over the objections of planning and zoning director Marideth Sandler.

Sandler wanted to restrict the rural recreation use to an area around the hotel, in part to protect the use of the property if it were sold, she said, and to protect a wildlife migration corridor that runs through the site.

However, Robertson successfully argued that any buyer would be restricted by the present owners' plan, or would have to develop his own that would be acceptable to the county.

Framed in a mass of scaffolding, Navy Seabee Bob Kirk is one of many volunteers who have worked on the center

Senior-center fixin' nears completion

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Jerome Senior Citizens Center is nearing a goal set four years ago, when the group first moved into the remodeled Jerome railroad depot.

Workers, nearly all of them volunteers, are putting the finishing touches on a remodeling project that will give the senior citizens use of the entire main floor of the building.

What formerly served as the freight depot, and covers about a third of the building's main floor, is being refurbished to provide more space for activities, including more dining space, a dance floor, gift-shop space and a permanent quilting room.

Center director Betty Johnson says the organization's activities nearly are pushing out the walls of the original phase of the building, which was opened four years ago.

About 17,000 meals are served each year during the center's Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday lunch program, she says.

The center also has a singing group and a four-piece band. And Johnson says that with the addition of a dance floor, members will be able to dance, as well as listen, to their own music.

Remodeling of the last phase of the building began late this summer, with nearly all of the labor donated.

Don Jacobson, the Jerome building inspector and a member of the organization, says that one of the problems encountered in remodeling the old freight area was that a box car had run through the building at one time, and some of the supports and wall structure in the west end of the building had to be replaced.

The building was cut in two parts when it was moved from its original location — on the tracks west of town — to its present site, near the post office. Jacobson says that when the building was put back together, it was off a few inches, which presented another remodeling problem.

With completion of the current project, the entire building except for an upstairs area will be usable.

"In order to use the upstairs," Johnson says, "we would have to build either a ramp or put in an elevator, and we don't have that kind of money."

The senior citizens have raised about $5,500 in the past two years, through a food concession stand at the Jerome County Fair and through the sale of quilts, foods and handicrafts.

In addition, the Jerome Grange donated $2,000, and both the city and the county have contributed federal revenue-sharing funds to the center. In addition, some funds from the U.S. Office on Aging were made available.

Jacobson estimates the total cost at about $13,000, but he says that without the volunteer labor, the figure would have been twice that amount.

Stream-work law proposed

To Blaine County commission

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

HAILEY — An ordinance to set procedures and standards of evaluation for stream alterations has been recommended by the Blaine County commissioners by the county Planning and Zoning Commission.

The commission is recommending adoption of the ordinance despite objections from many persons who live along the river, they think the ordinance is too restrictive and time-consuming.

However, the commission recommended, at its meeting Thursday, that the ordinance become law because it would give "teeth" to enforcing violations of stream alterations, previously unwritten policy and which prohibits a consistent evaluation of all permits.

The ordinance was introduced by Blaine County Prosecutor Keith Roark and planning and zoning administrator Marideth Sandler, for several years, she said.

First, Roark has said he is reluctant to prosecute those who violate the terms of their permits because there are no set standards of evaluation.

So, the county stands to lose its eligibility for federal flood insurance because it is allowing alterations in the floodway that violate its agreement with the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Loss of federal agencies for homes in a flood hazard area also are being jeopardized, she said.

Third, the standards could be applied consistently and quickly.

"It is important to be consistent; it is important to act quickly, as people have said to me," Sandler said.

An proposed, the provisions of the ordinance could be waived in an emergency, and a priority for the protection of existing structures would be established.

The provisions of the ordinance also would be temporary, and would serve only as an interim document, until the county's stream committee finishes its recommendations for codifying stream alterations.

The committee began work early this year, but it is not expected to finish its work for at least six months. No time limit has been placed on the ordinance, however.

Several people who live along the river object strongly to the ordinance, when it was discussed Thursday. Many said the application requirements were too involved and would be expensive to meet.

Included in the application requirements are: a site plan of the operation, the location of buildings, adjacent properties and the names of their owners, locations of drainages or overflow channels, and a assessment of stream channel.

"It's too much red tape," said Dixie Ivie of Bellevue. It's (the application) too long, too much time and too expensive."

However, Sandler said the entire application could be done by the property owner, without any portion having to be done by professionals.

However, not all who lived along the river objected to the ordinance, and some said it was time for enforcement.

"I'm mad as hell because we don't have any enforcement on what's being done on the river," said Florence Blanchard, who lives along the Big Wood River, west of Bellevue.

Chili supper to be classy

Glenns Ferry chamber plans benefit dinner to help schools

By DIANA HOOLEY
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY — Like the "little engine that could," the Glenns Ferry Chamber of Commerce is facing an uphill struggle.

The obstacle is a fund-raising dinner to benefit the Glenns Ferry schools.

The menu item is chili — and the tickets are priced at $125 each.

"Yes — that's $125, no decimal. And yes, it is close to Christmas. And yes, Glenns Ferry is experiencing a depressed economy."

But says chamber President Liz Gluch, "We thought we could raise $7,000 for the schools' extracurricular activities, and we will."

Gluch says merchants have taken the wrong tack in the past, complaining about shoppers who go out of town, instead of doing something positive. It was with that idea in mind, that the chili supper idea was initiated.

Jim Reed, the Glenns Ferry school superintendent, had reported that the schools' extracurricular transportation funds had been cut seriously by the state.

The situation prompted chamber member Marie Kast to ask fellow merchants, "How much is our community pride and spirit coming directly from our schools?"

The merchants agreed they needed to show support for the schools, and the chili supper project was begun.

At this point, however, "We still have 70 tickets to sell," Gluch says.

The chili supper is scheduled for this Saturday, Dec. 17, at 7 p.m. at the Veterans Hall in Glenns Ferry, and Gluch says chamber members will be delighted to sell anyone a ticket who is interested — non-Glenns Ferry residents included.

To benefit the chili dinner, Gluch says, a $125 ticket will give its holder an opportunity to win one of several door prizes, purchased by local merchants for the drawing.

The door prizes include: a 1984 Chevrolet, Celebrity, from Shrum Motor Co.; a 21-inch color TV and a 19-inch color TV, from Sky's Electronics; a microwave oven, a 12-gauge automatic shotgun and a chain saw, from the Coast to Coast store; two awarded snow tires for a passenger car, from B. and M. Time; a telephone, from the Rural Telephone Co.; a $150 shopping spree, from the Corner Market; and a two-night trip to Shoshone's casino in Elkton, Nev., plus $125 in cash.

Santa Claus will parachute in for the dinner and help with the door-prize drawing, Gluch says.

After dinner, Santa Claus will have treats for the children, and allments of the Glenns Ferry Moose Lodge, and a Walt Disney film will be shown.

Gluch says the dinner is an opportunity for the community to come out and enjoy the fun, but most of all to show support for the schools, and the chili supper project was begun.

Filer's trash fees to decrease

FILER — The cost of residential and commercial trash collection will drop in Filer.

R and R Disposal of Bulli has submitted the lowest bid for the city's trash-collection contract.

The firm will charge the city $2.85 per month for residential users and $6.99 for commercial users. With municipal administration charges added, residential customers will pay $3, and commercial customers will pay $6.25.

Previously, the cost per month was $3.25 for residential users and $8.50 for commercial users.

Other bids for the contract were submitted by D & B of Filer, Parks and Sons of Twin Falls and Magic Valley Disposal of Twin Falls.

State school to host deaf pageant

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The first Miss Deaf Idaho will be crowned next Saturday.

The pageant, sponsored by the Idaho Association of the Deaf, is being billed as more than just a beauty contest.

"It is a pageant where young deaf women can prove themselves as worthy individuals, despite their hearing impairment, showcase their talents and voice their opinions," one of the organizers says.

Two former students from the State School for the Deaf and Blind in Gooding and one current student will compete to become Idaho's first representative to the Miss Deaf America pageant.

The contestants will be:

- Mariene Brown, 19, of Gooding, who was the school's valedictorian this spring. She lettered in volleyball, basketball and track at Gooding, and currently is a freshman at Ricks College in Rexburg.
- Brown, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Brown, was second runner-up in the Miss North Side pageant last summer. She participated in the state school's "Songs of Silence" ensemble and will present a choreographed "sign song" with music for the silent portion of the contest.

- Holly Parker, 19, of Acquia, is a sophomore at Gallaudet college — the world's only liberal-arts college for the deaf — in Washington, D.C., where she is a cheerleader. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Parker.

At the state school, she lettered in volleyball and basketball, and also participated in the "Songs of Silence" ensemble. She, too, will present a sign song and dance routine for the contest.

- Ann Burton, 19, a senior at the state school, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Burton of Blackfoot.

At the Gooding school, she is the school mascot, participates in aerobic dance and hopes to learn computer science.

Her talent offering also will be a sign song and dance routine.

According to Jerry Wilding of Gooding, the general pageant chairman, the girls will be judged on private interviews, appearance in cocktail dresses, talent, evening gowns and an on-stage interview.

To enter, a participant must be 18 to 28, single, have an average hearing loss of at least 60 decibels, be a United States citizen and a high-school graduate.

The pageant will be held in the state school's gym, beginning at 8 p.m.

The master of ceremonies will be television personality Johnny Whitaker, who has starred in "Family Affair."

In addition, the pageant will feature guest appearances by:

- Miss Deaf America, Barbara Tubbs of New York, who will conduct a workshop for the contestants on Friday, and perform a talent selection at the pageant.
- Doris Wilding of Gooding, who is the reigning Miss Deaf District of Columbia, where she is a student at Gallaudet College. She will present a "verrucular vision" which her father, Jerry, explains is a type of musical pantomime.
- Miss Deaf Utah, Nan Hix, another former state school student, who also will appear and present a pantomime.

A Miss Deaf Idaho will be selected every two years to compete in the Miss Deaf America pageant, which is held during the National Association for the Deaf's biennial convention.

Tickets for Saturday's event will be available at the door.

State law may stop request

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — A restaurant in Wendell may be located too close to a school to get a beer and wine license.

At the Wendell City Council meeting last week, Connie Olsen, the operator of Molina's, off North Idaho Street, requested the beer and wine licenses.

However, council President Bob Thackeray said that state law prohibits establishments within 100 feet of a school or church from having a beer, wine or liquor license.

Molina's is located across the street from the Wendell Elementary School, it was noted.

Bill Hollaman, the former owner of the restaurant, said the state law measures the required 100 feet, from building to building.

Olsen could have a license, Hollaman said, if the school had not recently built four temporary classroom units between the original building and Molina's.

Council members discussed the law and decided to do research to find out exactly what the current law is.

"I think it would go property to property, rather than building to building," Thackeray said.

"The best we could do is look and see if changes have been made in that law," he said.

In other business at the council meeting:

- The council voted to pro-rate beer and wine licenses for Galen Dance, the new operator of Farr's Food Center.

In addition, a beer-license request was approved for the Ammo Can, and beer and wine licenses were approved for the Iron Skillet and the M and W Market.

Building contractor Ben Morgan asked the council for permission to put a new sidewalk on East Avenue C, outside the required distance from the curb.

A row of telephone poles, Morgan said, is now where the proposed sidewalk should be, and he wants to locate the sidewalk outside the poles.

Council members agreed to go with Morgan to view the situation this month, to decide what to do.

Utah men charged with car thefts

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies have charged two Salt Lake City men with grand theft, in connection with a rash of vehicles that were stolen Friday along the Sugar Factory Road.

Ronald R. Baldwin, 20, is in custody at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, after a stolen auto sold off Sugar Factory Road and crashed on Friday. He was arrested at the scene, a deputy said.

A hospital spokesman said that Baldwin was in fair condition Saturday evening.

The second man, 18-year-old Jack Goudswaard, was being held in the Twin Falls County Jail Saturday.

He was picked up by Cassia County sheriff's deputies, for Twin Falls authorities, after an attempted theft was reported at the Golden Valley Land and Cattle Co. ranch southeast of Murrah, chief Deputy Harold Jensen said.

A pickup truck stolen from the area later was recovered and linked to Goudswaard, Jensen said.

A traveling companion of the two men also was questioned about the theft of a third vehicle, subsequently involved in an accident, again along Sugar Factory Road. However, he was released without being charged, Jensen said Saturday.

Sheriff's deputies also have impounded the auto which the three men drove into the Twin Falls area: It had run off the road and was disabled.

Baldwin also has been charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, and driving with no license.

The tradition of The Pendleton Christmas.

Americans have been saying Merry Christmas with a Pendleton gift for four generations.

It all began with the beautiful blankets, robes and shawls that a pioneer family began weaving at the turn of the century in Pendleton, Oregon.

Many designs were inspired by the motifs of the nearby Nez Perce Indian Nation, as well as the colors and vistas of the American West: Chief Joseph, the Santa Fe Trail, the Cascade Range, the Grand Canyon and Yellowstone.

Their durability and beauty made the word "Pendleton" synonymous with quality and value. And the giving of a Pendleton gift came to mean giving the very best.

From blankets, the family turned its skills to the weaving of pure virgin wool clothing fabrics.

These fine fabrics were cut and sewn into shirts, sweaters, jackets, and trousers, to assure the buyer that the company stood behind its products, in quality and workmanship.

And the tradition of giving a Pendleton spread throughout the West, and beyond.

Today, the family warranty still holds. Every Pendleton product is still made to the standards of excellence our forefathers set for us those many years ago.

Over the years, the process of weaving and shirt-making have been refined. Pendleton has grown to include tailored sportswear, knitwear, and womenswear. The commitment to quality and value remains the same.

We continue to use only pure virgin wools, selected and graded by hand.

We design the patterns, dye the wool, spin the yarn, weave the fabrics, cut and sew each woven garment.

It is this assurance of quality that makes Pendleton a gift to give, and receive, with pride. A gift to be enjoyed a lifetime.

This year, like every year, the Pendleton gift is a very special way to say "Merry Christmas."

Civil court blotter

The following civil cases were filed last week in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls:

• Ag County Inc. vs. Cook Electric Inc., Warren P. Chapman, Allen E. Grigg, and Robert E. Grigg. The complaint states the defendants have defaulted on the terms of a promissory note, and it asks for $16,381.74 that is due on the principal, plus interest and attorney fees of $7,500.

• Khom and Bounphong Siboumang vs. the latter and one Phou Kao, Vilano and Phogume Siboumang vs. Herbert E. and Elsie H. Thieme. The plaintiffs are seeking damages resulting from an automobile accident that, they allege, caused the death of Samona Siboumang, another child. The victim was a passenger in a car driven by her mother, when the Thieme vehicle collided with the Siboumang vehicle.

The suit seeks compensation on five counts. Count one, special damages of $10,000 and general damages of $250,000. Count two, special damages of $5,000 and general damages of $250,000. Count three, special damages of $1,000 and general damages of $25,000. Count four, special damages of $25,000 and general damages of $2,000. Count five, special damages of $1,000 and general damages of $2,500. In addition, the plaintiffs are seeking court costs and attorney fees.

• The Idaho First National Bank vs. Cristian Flores. The bank is seeking possession of a mobile home and automobile that allegedly are the collateral and a loan by the defendant. The plaintiff claims that Flores has defaulted on his loan payments. It is also seeking attorney fees and court costs.

• Land Surveys - Inc. vs. Hal Reeves, doing business as Reeves and Associates. The plaintiff is seeking payment of $8,155.36, plus interest, that it claims is due on an open account, plus $1,000 in attorney fees.

• Charles Ladd and Deborah Smalley of Boise vs. Aaron M. Hartman, a minor, and Mr. and Mrs. Harland Mike Hartman. The Smalleys allege that a vehicular accident, resulting in injuries, was caused by the negligence and carelessness of the defendants. The complaint is asking for: $1,700 for automobile damage; $500 for past medical expenses for Mrs. Smalley; $65 for past medical expenses for Mr. Smalley; and an amount to be set by the court for future medical expenses; $300,000 in general damages for Mrs. Smalley; and $70,000 in general damages for Mr. Smalley. The plaintiffs are also asking for court costs and reasonable attorney fees.

The following civil court judgments were made last week in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls:

• First Interstate Bank of Utah vs. Vyri and Alberta Askew. A default judgment of $1,777 has been awarded to the plaintiff, plus interest, $500 in attorney fees and court costs.

• James LaBell and Kathleen Marie Tiller have been awarded $37,837.87, plus interest, for an unpaid debt owed by Jimmie Cramel and Rose Mary Rouse, plus attorney fees of $3,000 and court costs.

• A judgment of a suit filed in the Superior Court of the County of Washington, Benton County, by Creditors Clearinghouse vs. Mr. and Mrs. Warren P. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Griggs, and Mr. and Mrs. Warren P. Chapman, has been filed in Fifth District Court. The plaintiffs have been awarded $6,009.40, plus interest and the costs of the suit.

The following civil cases were filed last week in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls:

• University of Utah Hospital vs. Hugh R. Farmer. The complaint is seeking payment of $1,498.33, plus interest, for services, and $500 in attorney fees.

• Acia Hansen Chevrolet Inc. vs. M. Kurt Snyder. The complaint alleges that the defendant still owes on a sales contract made with the plaintiff, although the vehicle has been repossessed and sold. The suit is asking for $2,233.54, plus interest and $750 in attorney fees.

• Hamilton Insurance and Associates vs. Mr. and Mrs. George D. Paul. The plaintiff claims the defendants owe it $687.77, and it is asking for that amount, plus interest and $300 in attorney fees.

• Hamilton Insurance and Associates vs. Gordon and Carol Annis, doing business as South Idaho Ditch Co. The complaint states that the defendants have defaulted on an open account, and it is seeking $2,805.00, plus interest and $250 in attorney fees.

• Hamilton Insurance and Associates vs. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Allen, doing business as B. and B. Pallets. The plaintiff is seeking $2,874.47, plus interest, for payment of services, and $300 in attorney fees.

• Kenneth and Rose Stagnomey, doing business as South Idaho Trailers, vs. Gary Nelson. The complaint states the Stagnomeys were contacted by the defendant regarding the repair of a trailer, and they told him they felt the repairs would cost more than the unit was worth. Later, Nelson again requested estimates of the same repairs and authorized the plaintiffs to make the repairs. The Stagnomeys claim that Nelson has failed to pay the full amount for these services, and they are seeking $1,344.83, plus interest and $400 in attorney fees.

Son sues cattle firm over loan he made to his father

By FAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Whether the Twin Falls Livestock Commission is obligated to pay a $13,248 loan made to its former member, Lynn Rose, by his son was the subject of a two-day trial last week in Fifth District Court.

Mark Rose of Twin Falls filed suit against the livestock commission August 1982. He was seeking payment of a loan he had made the month before to his father, according to court records.

The commission then filed a counter-suit against the elder Rose for damages. That suit claimed that Lynn Rose had no authority to borrow the money on behalf of the business.

Although Judge Daniel Meehl took the case under advisement at the conclusion of the trial Wednesday, Lynn Rose already has filed the suit brought by the company. He did not notify the court in time of his intention to represent himself or retain another lawyer, after his former attorney, Harry DeLeon, withdrew from the case this past August. So, he has lost his right to argue against the commission.

Meehl told Rose that he did have the right, however, to voice his side about how much the company should be awarded in damages.

Rose purchased the Twin Falls Livestock Commission in 1978 from Albert Olabarria and Charles Sewell, but due to financial problems, the business later reverted back to Olabarria.

Although he had no seat on the commission's board of directors, Rose did remain as an employee.

after Olabarria took over management on May 10, 1982. According to the company's suit, between October 1981 and April 1982, Rose borrowed $54,000 from a company account to pay off business and personal debts. When Olabarria requested the return of the money, Rose borrowed money from his son and another former commission employee, according to court documents. When the commission refused to pay on the promissory note Rose had given his son, Mark Rose filed suit against the company, seeking payment and expenses.

At last week's trial, Lynn Rose said that he had used the money to pay only expenses that had been incurred on company business. But during questioning by the attorney for the business, John Ritchie of Twin Falls, Rose said he could not remember the specifics because it was a hectic time.

Ritchie argued that only the firm's board of directors had the power to borrow money.

Ritchie also hinted that there had been collusion between the Roses. "This was a father-and-son transaction," he said.

But Mark Rose's attorney, James May of Twin Falls, replied that his client was not aware of the power maneuvers that were occurring in the company hierarchy. And for all purposes, Lynn Rose still was in charge of the business during the time the loan was made, he said.

On the witness stand, Mark Rose repeatedly answered questions about who was in charge of the company with an "I don't know." And even though he said he saw his father regularly, Rose said he did not know "who had the upper hand."

May claimed that even though Olabarria had requested that Lynn Rose not place the commission in debt, he required Rose's signature on company checks.

In addition, May said, the commission had benefited from the money Rose borrowed because it was used to pay debts.

Meehl will make his ruling on the case at a later date. Since the lawsuit was filed, the commission has been sold to a group of nine area investors.

Brothers' rape conviction upheld

BOISE — The state Court of Appeals has upheld the rape conviction of two brothers in a 1979 Elmore County case.

The court announced its decision last week in an appeal filed by Horacio Silva, who was sentenced to 15 years for rape, and his brother, Rafael, who was given 10 years in prison for attempted rape.

The Silva brothers were charged with murder and rape after the nude body of a young woman was found by a country road in February 1979. The murder charges were dropped when it was determined the woman died from intoxication and hypothermia. However, the Silvas were convicted of rape after a jury trial.

Both appealed the verdict, claiming that a mistrial should have been granted. The testimony of a pathologist at the trial concerning the cause of death was not relevant and biased the case against them, they said.

In addition, Horacio Silva's lawyer argued that incriminating statements that his client made prior to his arrest should not have been used in the trial. The appeal judges, however, found no errors in the way the trial proceeded.

Frances Hicks of Mountain Home, who represented Rafael Silva, said later last week that he had not had time to confer with his client about appealing the decision to the Idaho Supreme Court.

Kimberly man faces federal bonding charge

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has charged a Kimberly man with operating as a livestock dealer without a bond.

Richard Hale, who lives southwest of Kimberly, did not renew his registered bond after it was terminated, according to Al Sylvester, information officer for the department's Packers and Stockyards Administration.

Agricultural marketing specialist Matt Hennes, who investigated the case, said a check during August showed that Hale bought cattle both for himself and as an agent for others at public markets in the Twin Falls, Gooding and Shoshone areas without holding an adequate bond.

Hale has not yet asked for a formal hearing on the charge, which was lodged Nov. 18, officials say.

Attempts to contact him for comment were unsuccessful.

If the charge is proven, he could face suspension of his dealer's registration and a civil penalty ranging from $1,000 to $5,000, according to law. The Packers and Stockyards Administration enforces bonding laws for livestock, poultry and meat.

Divorces

The following divorces were granted last week in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls:

- Anne W. Grosshans from Larry Grosshans; Peggy Jo Kelly from Paul L. Kelly; Christine M. Kitch from Dean S. Koch; Patricia Ann Staffer Oga from Richard Gene Oga; Donna L. Packer from Jack Charles Packer; Bernley Eugene Martens Jr. from Linda Jane Martens; Hugh Anthony House from Cynthia Jane House; Jimmie Lee Conder from Jewell Conder; Betty Baker from Eddie Harrison Baker III; and Susan Kathryn Jones from James Justin Jones.

Your Spine & Health:

BEDS

by Dr. Ludwig C. Landwehr, D.C.

The average man spends one third of his life in bed. A period during which the body is supposed to recharge itself. Most people do not give enough consideration to their beds. Generally a firm mattress is best for correct support and in many cases your doctor or Chiropractic may even suggest the use of a board between mattress and spring. Now, ever in mind, selected cases of a soft mattress may be indicated, but avoid sagging which may contribute to a chronic aching back.

The 8 hours or so spent in bed should be restful and conducive to rebuilding the body, not an additional form of medical stress that disturbs rest, distorts the spine and adds interference to nerve and blood supply.

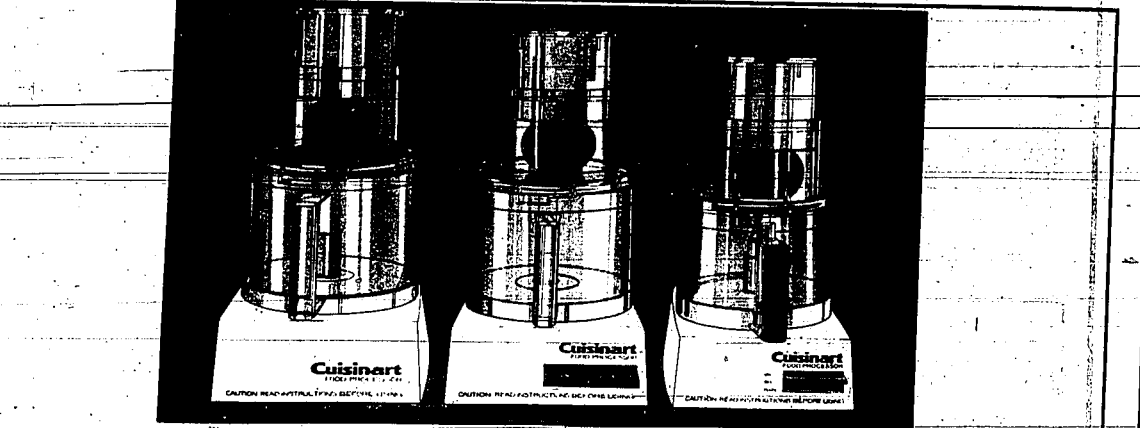

Good posture habits will help you to sleep better and feel better.

(One of a series of articles published in the public interest to explain and illustrate the practice of scientific Chiropractic, written by Dr. Ludwig C. Landwehr, 717 Main Ave. W., Twin Falls, Tel. 733-5222.)

Fatal accident produces suit

TWIN FALLS — A $368,000 lawsuit has been filed against the 79-year-old man who allegedly was at fault in an Oct. 19 traffic accident that caused the death of an 8-year-old girl.

Koon and Bombberg, Si-boumbeung of Twin Falls filed the claim last week in Fifth District Court, naming Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Thieme of Twin Falls as the defendants.

According to the claim, the Si-boumbeung's daughter, Samana, died as a result of injuries she received in the accident, which took place west of Twin Falls on U.S. 30. Thieme caused the accident by pulling out from a country road in front of a car driven by the Si-boumbeung's 19-year-old daughter, the suit states. Samana and three other Si-boumbeung children were passengers in the car.

According to Idaho State Police reports, both drivers and all the passengers, which included Mrs.

Thieme, were injured. Samana Si-boumbeung died later that day in a Utah hospital.

The couple is seeking damages for the loss of their child, medical and funeral expenses, and attorney fees. They have demanded a jury trial.

In addition to the civil action, Mr. Thieme also faces a criminal complaint in connection with the accident. He will go to trial in Fifth District Magistrate Court on a misdemeanor charge of vehicular manslaughter.

Jail destruction charge against woman dropped

JEROME — A charge that Debbie Rundle, 27, of Jerome, damaged the Jerome County Jail has been dismissed, following a preliminary hearing last week in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Jerome.

The felony charge — destruction of jail property — was dismissed by magistrate Judge Roger Burdick.

Rundle was arrested Nov. 26 on charges of driving while under the influence of alcohol and possession of marijuana. Jailers said she destroyed a ceiling light after being placed in her cell. However, Burdick ruled the state failed to present sufficient evidence that Rundle had caused the damage.

Rundle still faces the other two charges. At the time of her arrest, she was on a three-year probation, given for growing marijuana at her home. She also had been charged at the same time with possession of cocaine.

Police don't like kids' calls

JEROME — Four Jerome juveniles have learned that you can't make annoying telephone calls and get away with it, especially if the calls are made to the police.

Jerome police Chief Darryl Cameron said the four — two boys, ages 7 and 9, and two girls, ages 6 and 8 — were brought to the police station last week and questioned about the calls.

Several calls were received by police dispatchers, and some also were made to the Fire Department, he said. Those who received the calls said the youngsters were annoying and used obscene language, according to the chief.

The two boys, who are brothers, have confessed to making a number of calls last Tuesday while school was out and they were at their home, Cameron said.

Later, the two girls were brought in for questioning regarding other calls. There apparently was no connection between the two sets of callers, he said.

The calls were traced to the homes of the children, and the parents were contacted.

Leonard to return to boxing

By DON CRONIN
United Press International

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. — Former welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard, who retired last November after eye surgery, said Saturday night he will fight, again, perhaps as early as February.

Leonard, 27, boxed two three-round exhibitions Saturday night before making the surprise announcement. He showed some flashes of the quickness that earned him a 21-1 record that included 23 knockouts. Leonard's last fight was a third-round TKO of Bruce Finch on Feb. 15, 1983 in Reno, Nev.

Leonard was to defend his world welterweight title against Roger Stafford in Buffalo last May but he had problems with his vision the week before the fight and returned to Baltimore to be examined at Johns Hopkins. His condition was diagnosed as a partially detached retina and corrective surgery was performed.

After several months of consultation, Leonard announced his retirement at an elaborate news conference in November 1982.

"Yes, I will fight again but it's not a comeback," Leonard said. "I'm back. I've got to get in better shape and get with (trainer) Mike Traiser and work out the logistics. Hopefully, I could have a 10-round tussle by February or March, maybe."

Leonard has steadfastly denied that he would ever return to the ring but there were indications in recent weeks that he might change his mind. The key to his decision to return may have come last month when he served as a television commentator at the world middleweight title fight between defending champion Marvin Hagler and Roberto Duran, the only man ever to defeat Leonard as a pro.

After the fight, in which Hagler won an unimpressive 15-round unanimous decision, Leonard simply smiled and nodded when fans asked if he thought now that he could beat Hagler. A multimillion-dollar bout against Hagler was in the negotiation stage when Leonard sustained his eye injury.

Leonard burst into the public eye in 1976 when he was one of five American fighters to win gold medals at the Olympic Games at Montreal. He reeled off a series of impressive victories as a pro and won the World Boxing Council welterweight title in December 1979 with a 15th-round knockout of defending champion Wilfredo Benitez.

Leonard lost his only pro fight when he dropped a 15-round decision to Duran at Montreal in June 1980, but regained the title in their rematch in New Orleans five months later when Duran quit in the eighth round in the celebrated "no mas" fight.

Leonard moved up in weight and took the 154-pound World Boxing Association junior middleweight title with a ninth-round knockout of defending champion Ayub Kalule in June 1981. He then achieved his greatest moment as a pro three months later when he stopped previously unbeaten Thomas Hearns, the WBA welterweight champion, in the 14th round of their title unification bout at Las Vegas, Nev.

The fight, considered one of the best in recent years, was the richest in boxing history.

In his two Saturday night bouts, Leonard went against lightweight heavyweight Herman Epps and middleweight Odell Leonard.

Ricks cruises to K&T Steel championship

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Ricks College opened in a dead sprint and stayed there Saturday night, racing past Dixie 100-85 and into the K & T Steel Tournament championship.

Earlier, CSI, with point guard Dewey Haley coming up with 12 of his 20 points in the closing 12 minutes, downed Nebraska Western 79-66 for consolation honors.

Ricks, collecting its second tournament title against Dixie in three weeks, put three men on the all-tournament team: Craig Spjut, Bryan Fink and Roland Smith. They were joined by Dixie's Adrian Parrish, Stuart Noland of Nebraska Western, and Haley.

Spjut, a Boise High product, won the MVP trophy by staging a pair of shooting spurts. His second-half shooting carried Ricks past CSI and into the finals Friday night and his hot hand helped Ricks into a lead it held throughout the game against Dixie.

Ricks jumped ahead 9-1 and might have blown things completely out of hand had not the Vikings been whistled for a basket. The shot thrust Dixie into the bonus situation early and freshman Ricky Henry worked the inside for a bunch of charity points to keep the Rebels from falling away.

But it would have taken a miracle to stay close with the hot-handed Vikings, who pumped through 36 points in the first 10 minutes — a torrid 19-point per game pace if it had been maintained.

Dixie's other freshman, Parrish, started hitting in the second 10 minutes and although Ricks jumped ahead by 18 on a couple of occasions, it couldn't put the Rebels away. Ricks led 53-39 at intermission.

In the second half, Dixie made a couple of threats to get back into the game. In the first four minutes, the Rebels shot 10-of-13 and saw Ricks jump back out on top by 16. At the 15-minute mark, however, Dixie had its best chance.

Four-of-five times Ricks turned the ball over in its pell-mell race downcourt and missed a jumper on the fifth. Parrish and David Faldino picked up four points apiece and with 11:06 remaining in the game, Dixie was back in it at 75-67.

"Three times we got it down to eight and had the ball each time with a chance to get it to six but couldn't," said Dixie Coach Neil Roberts.

The last eight-point deficit game with 7:02 to play. But Ricks' Alan Campbell, who blazed for 18 of his 23 points in the second half, then hit six straight points to pull Ricks out of reach.

The win means Dixie and Ricks will play four times this year, the next two in ICAAC competition.

"I'm sure our players learned 'Ricks won't beat you to death. I mean they are not a dirty team. They play hard all the time and it's always good to play against a good team. I'm sure our players learned some things tonight that will help us at the end of the season."

CSI's victory over Nebraska was what usually is expected in consolation games, not a lot of intensity. "After you lose that first one in a tournament, you stand a pretty good chance of losing the next one," Coach Fred Trenkle said prior to tipoff.

The Eagles, who had smoked Nebraska Western 10-2 in the opening two minutes of the Casper tournament, didn't enjoy that kind of success.

With 10 minutes gone, CSI was ahead just 16-14. The Eagles immediately jumped that to 25-16 but by halftime the Cougars were back to within four.

The major break was provided by freshman Lowell Cleweld with the Eagles holding a 43-38 advantage. Cleweld scored off the baseline, hit a slam on a fast break and then followed in a miss for three points. He shot 10-of-13 and was joined by freshman John Willis who was there to

Broncos shock Fresno

BOISE (UPI) — Vinch Hinchen scored 18 second-half points and Frank Jackson sank four last-minute free throws as Boise State upset Fresno State 90-82 in a non-conference college basketball game Saturday night.

Boise State led most of the way as its tight zone defense limited Fresno State to 39 points in the first half and kept the Bulldogs in a hole the entire final period.

The Broncos surged ahead by as many as 10 points late in the game as Fresno State was forced to foul to stay close.

Hinchen, a 6-5 senior guard, led all scorers with 22 points on 10-of-15 shooting from the field. Ron Griggs and Jackson added 10 points each for the Broncos.

Bernard Thompson paced the losers with 20 points and Ron Anderson added 12. No other Bulldog scored more than four points.

Boise State shot 63 percent from the floor while holding Fresno State to 44 percent for the game and 52 percent in the first half.

Hinchen, held to four points in the opening half, scored six straight points midway through the final 20 minutes each time maintaining a seven-point edge for Boise State.

Fresno closed to within four points three times in the last six minutes, but each time Hinchen increased Boise's advantage with spinning and driving field goals.

Boise State, of the Big Sky Conference, finished the game by sinking six eight-free throws in the last 50 seconds.

The win boosted Boise State's record to 4-1 and dropped Fresno State, the 1982 National Invitational Tournament champion and a member of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, to 0-2.

Bruins breeze past Nampa in non-conference encounter

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Briefly courting trouble but never thoroughly falling into its clutches, the Twin Falls Bruins ran away from Nampa in the second half Saturday night and routed the Bulldogs 74-49 in a non-conference game.

The Bruins, 2-0, received a moderate challenge from the Bulldogs while building a 37-28 halftime advantage. Then all aspects of a dual vanished, as Twin Falls scored the first nine points in the third quarter to essentially seal the matter.

Coaches Andy Toolson and Darren

Stuart combined for 44 points to lead the Bruins' rampage. Toolson scored 23, sinking 10 of 15 shots, his most entertaining basket being a neatly executed alley-oop dunk off a Stuart layup with 4:35 left to play.

Stuart's performance included eight rebounds and four assists, drawing praise from Bruin Coach John Astorquia.

"I thought Darren played a great game, mainly because he showed a great deal of control," Astorquia said. "His shot selection was twice as good as it was last week (in the Bruins' opener against Elko). When we had lots of people on the bench with fouls, he took over and steered us. He basically ran the club on the floor."

Twin Falls basically ran Nampa off the floor, in Bulldogs Coach Terry Adolfsen's estimation.

"The transitions hurt us an awful lot," he said. "When they jumped to a 10-4 lead right off, that was kind of indicative of what was to come."

Actually, it was an 8-0 lead the Bruins instantly assumed. But the Bulldogs fended off extinction through Twin Falls' early foul trouble and center Steve Halley's determined work inside and on the foul line. By quarter's end the Bruins led only 22-16.

Twin Falls had opened in a full-court press designed to disturb the Bulldogs, not destroy them. "All we wanted to do was put token pressure on them, and we got a little excitement," Astorquia said. The Bruins committed several backcourt fouls, allowing Nampa to enter the bonus situation with 4:13 still left in the first quarter and forcing Astorquia to resort to a zone and frequent substitutions.

Rick Bailey's three-point play with 3:15 left in the half pushed Nampa to within five, 31-26. But two Stuart baskets and Todd Jones' follow while falling backwards of a missed Stuart layup gave Twin Falls its nine-point cushion at intermission.

Then came the third quarter, and with it the end. Toolson fed Bob Burwell for a basket, hit two jumpers and a free throw himself and Stuart contributed a follow, giving the Bruins a 46-28 bulge with 5:05 to go. Twin Falls led reached 20 for the first time at 3:17, when Toolson buried a short baseline jumper.

Halley, who paced the Bulldogs with 16 points, sank two free throws with 6:58 remaining to draw Nampa within 57-43. Twin Falls responded with another dominant surge, tallying eight straight points on two buckets each from Stuart and Toolson, including the aforementioned dunk.

Twin Falls and Nampa, which fell to 1-3, meet again at the Bulldogs' gymnasium Friday night.

Nampa swept preliminary action, defeating the Bruin sophomores 57-44 and the junior varsity 50-33.

Cooper, Young poised for final run at NFR championships

By ANNA WAGNER
Special to The Times-News

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — With the completion of two performances Saturday, pressure intensified at the National Finals rodeo as cowboys battled to win the wire for world championship titles entering today's 10th and final performance.

All but two championships will be decided during today's competition, with Oklahoma cowboy Roy Cooper assured of the all-around and calf roping titles.

In the team roping, Californians Dennis Walkins and David Wiles turned in a 5.6 for first place and Lee Woodbury of Caldwell and his partner Jake Milton had a 6.2 run that was fourth in a four-way split.

Dee Pickett of Caldwell and Mike Beers won the ninth go-round in the evening, with a fast 5.4. In the average, Clay Cooper and Tee Woolman lead with 73.2, while Woodbury and Wiles are second with 68.4. Dick and J.D. Yates of Pueblo, Colo., stand first in the world standings, closely trailed by Pickett and Beers.

In the afternoon performance in barrel racing, Jerome's Mickey Young had a 66-point ride but finished out of the money. Chuck Logue, McKinney, Tex., marked 77 points for first. The evening performance saw world leader Bruce Ford score 75 points for a first-second split with Canadian cowboy Jim Duff.

The average figures find Ford tied with Nevada rider Danny Brady, 653 points each. Ford also leads the world standings, $9,800 ahead of the second-ranked Young.

In saddle bronc, Mel Coleman of Saskatchewan scored 79 points for first in the afternoon round. Doclo's Kent Cooper placed third with 77. Cooper also finished third in the ninth round, scoring 74, while Bud Pauley, Miles City, Mont., won that round with a 79. The leader in the world standings as well as in the average is Brad Gjermundson, $22,800 ahead of his nearest competitor in the former but closely trailed in the latter. Cooper enters the final round standing third in the world ladder.

Texas cowboys Jerry Jetton and Mike Arnold set an arena record in the afternoon, both having 8.1 second runs in the calf roping, which was a first-second split. Roy Cooper leads both the average and world standings, with Pickett sitting seventh in average.

In the matinee performance of bull riding, Wacey Cathey of Big Spring, Texas, had an 83-point ride for first place. The ninth round was won by Lonnie Wyatt of Kimball, Neb., with an 81-point effort.

Entering today's round, Cody

Snyder, a Canadian cowboy, leads both the average and the world standings, barely ahead of Wyatt in each.

Martene Eddleman of Ordway, Colo., won the afternoon performance of barrel racing, turning in a 16.35 run. Kathy Spears of Arkansas won the evening round with a 16.35. Eddleman leads both average and world standings, but she is closely challenged by Texan Sherry Elms.

Today's final round can be seen on KMYT, Channel 11, on a tape-delay basis at 7 p.m.

No. 5 Iowa tumbles again, this time to OSU

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Rick Berry, Darrin Houston and Steve Woodside each scored 12 points Saturday to lead 17th-ranked Oregon State to a 53-48 upset of No. 5 Iowa.

The victory averaged a 56.4 loss by the Beavers, 2-1, against the Hawkeyes. Iowa dropped its second straight and fell to 3-2. Steve Carlino led the Hawkeyes with 15 points and Michael Payne added 12.

Oregon State led all the way and was ahead 44-31 by 13:39 to play when Iowa, led by Carlino and Andre Banks, closed the score to 51-48 with 2:15 left.

But Woodside and Charlie Sifton each hit one of two free throws in the final minute to secure the win. The Beavers led 30-21 at halftime.

New Mexico 65 UCLA 60

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Senior guard Phil Smith scored six points in the final two minutes and New Mexico overcame a 13-point first-half deficit to upset No. 7 UCLA 65-60 Saturday.

The Lobos led all scorers with 18 points, but the unranked Lobos ahead to stay at 57-56 on a layup with two minutes left, and then scored four of New Mexico's final eight points on free throws.

Forward Alan Dolensky had 17 for New Mexico and Tim Garrett had 10. UCLA was led by Ralph Jackson with 15 and reserve forward Brad Wright with 12.

The Lobos, who trailed 37-24 with two minutes left in the first half, outscored UCLA 12-0 early in the second half for a 44-38 lead, which they pushed to 48-44 with 10:30 left.

UCLA, ranked by Jackson and Wright, closed with an 8-0 run to pull ahead 52-48.

Nebraska 67 Arkansas 64

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Sophomore center Steve Hopson scored 21 points and pulled down nine rebounds to lead Nebraska to a 67-64 upset of 16th-ranked Arkansas Saturday night.

Nebraska, 5-1, held a 29-27 lead at halftime over the Razorbacks, 5-2.

Carrying shooting by Hopson and senior forward Stan Clouty, who finished with 17 points, helped the Cornhuskers pull away to leads of 13 points several times in the second half.

Arkansas, effective from the inside in the first half, suffered through a cold second half as the Huskers pulled away.

Junior center Joe Kleiss led the Razorbacks with 22 points and 10 rebounds. Arkansas shot just over 42 percent from the field and 54.5 percent from the free-throw line. Nebraska shot 61.5 percent from the field and 63.3 percent from the line.

Senior guard Eric Williams and sophomore forward John Matzke scored 10 points each for the Huskers.

Purdue 106 Tampa 100

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Ricky Hall and Curt Clawson scored 18 points each and the No. 11 Furcuse Bollermakers clobbered Tampa 106-100 Saturday.

With the score tied 2-2, the Bollermakers ran off 16 of the next 18 points and led 50-17 at halftime.

Purdue, using reserves for most of the second half, extended the advantage to 56 points twice, including the final margin.

Tampa, 3-4, is in the first year of a revamped program after the university suspended its basketball program after the 1970-71 season.

Purdue, 6-0, had three other players in double figures. Tampa was led by Al Miller with 15 points and Moses Sawney with 10.

Georgia 50 N. Iowa 58

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Gerald Crosby and James Banks scored 18 points each to lead No. 8 Georgia past Northern Iowa 50-58 Saturday in the opening round of the first Triple AAA-Drake Classic.

Georgia will play the winner of the Drake-Austin Peay contest for the championship Sunday.

Vern Fleming added 18 points for the Bulldogs, 4-1. It was Northern Iowa's first loss in five starts.

Northern Iowa jumped out to a 12-6 lead over Georgia's press defense three consecutive times and the Bulldogs scored 14 points in a row to take a 20-12 lead midway through the first half.

Georgia led 39-27 at halftime and opened up a 29-point lead 5 minutes into the second half. It went ahead 58-35 when Richard Corben converted a 3-point play with 12:36 remaining.

Eric Hawthorne scored 14 points and Dwayne Jackson 10 for the Panthers.

N. Carolina 82 Hofstra 56

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Lorenzo Charles and Terry Gannon paced 12th-ranked North Carolina State to an easy 82-56 win over Hofstra Saturday.

Charles' had 23 points and Gannon added 20 as the Wolfpack improved its season record to 7-1. Tom Schreyer made the score 18-15 with 12 points.

North Carolina State never trailed and with 14:48 remaining in the first half scored 12 unanswered points in five minutes to go ahead 24-10.

The Wolfpack led 40-20 at the half, extending its lead to 74-39 with 7:38 remaining before North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano began substituting freely.

N. Carolina 87 Syracuse 64

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — Second-ranked North Carolina placed five players in double figures, led by Michael Jordan with 19 points, and the Tar Heels used their height advantage to cruise to an 87-64 victory over Syracuse Saturday night.

UNC was barely tested in rolling to its fifth consecutive triumph while handing the Orangemen their first defeat in five contests.

Jordan was helped by teammates Sam Perkins and Matt Doherty with 18 points each. Brad Daugherty had 12 and Kenny Smith with 11. Sophomore Rafael Addison led the losers with 18 points.

The Tar Heels jumped to a 6-2 lead before Syracuse tied the contest at 6-6 on a 15-foot shot by Gene Waldron at 14:17. But UNC then reeled off 15 of the next 17 points to grab a commanding 21-8 advantage and send a hush over the huge Carrier Dome crowd.

The Orangemen, unable to employ their fast-break offense, shot only 41 percent from the field during the first 20 minutes. However, the hosts showed signs of life by outscoring UNC 23-8 during the last four minutes of the half, including Sony Speer's basket from just beyond midcourt to pull within 40-28 at halftime.

North Carolina shot 71 percent from the floor in the first half and averaged 81 percent for the game while UNC made the score 18-15 with 12 points, no closer than 18 points during the final half.

Houston 71 St. Mary's 55

HOUSTON (UPI) — Senior Michael Young scored 24 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead sixth-ranked Houston to its fifth straight victory, a 71-55 decision over St. Mary's (Texas) Saturday night.

Junior center Akem Abdul Olajuwon pitched in 13 points, 11 rebounds and five blocked shots for the Cougars.

For St. Mary's, Melvin Roseboro scored 18 points, relying mostly on his outside jumpers as did the rest of the Rattlers who couldn't penetrate the Houston zone.

Roseboro tied the game for the last time with 8:08 gone on a jumper that made the score 18-15. Houston kept St. Mary's from scoring for the next six minutes and went into halftime with a 30-22 lead. The Cougars built their lead to as many as 18 points twice in the second half.

The Cougars are 5-1. St. Mary's is 6-3.

Maryland 78 Duquesne 67

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Junior center Ben Coleman scored 19 points and sophomore forward Len Blas added 16 to lead 15th-ranked Maryland to a 78-67 victory over Duquesne Saturday night.

The Terrapins jumped to a 12-2 lead in the first five minutes of the game and led 40-38 at halftime. The Terps shot a sizzling 72 percent from the floor in the first half of 23 shots.

Maryland closed in the second half but Duquesne drew within 70-81 on a pair of free throws by senior forward Derrick Englin. Big sophomore guard Jeff Baxter helped ice the game for Maryland by sinking four free throws down the stretch.

Coleman and Blas dominated the inside game against the younger, smaller Duquesne. Coleman hit all eight of his field-goal attempts and Maryland outrebounced Duquesne 36-19.

Duquesne was led by freshman center Ron Stevenson with 15 points and senior guard Emmett Sellers scored 14.

Maryland upped its record to 4-1 and Duquesne fell to 1-3 in the non-conference game.

BYU 106 St. Mary's 74

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Devin Durrant scored 21 of his game-high 35 points in the second half Saturday night as Brigham Young shot a team record 75.6 percent to whip St. Mary's 106-74 in the consolation game of BYU's Cougar Classic.

Utah State played Lamar in the 10th-annual classic's title game.

BYU, ahead by three at halftime, outscored the Gaels 22-8 in the opening minutes of the second half to put the game away. The Cougars hit 39 of their 53 attempts from the floor to break the old team shooting record of 65 percent against New Mexico in 1979.

Brett Applegate added 22 points for the Cougars (2-2) and freshman Mike Smith 18 points and 10 rebounds. Durrant hit 11 of his 12 shots from the field and was 13-of-16 on foul shots.

The Gaels, 3-5, were led by David Boone and John Wheeler with 13 points each.

Kentucky 72 Kansas 50

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Seniors Melvin Turpin and Jim Master

combined for 48 points Saturday night to lead No. 1-rated Kentucky to a 72-50 victory over Kansas in the Wildcats' first round game of the season.

Turpin scored 25 points and Master 23 to give Kentucky a 3-0 start on the season. The Wildcats improved their all-time record against Kansas to 15-1, winning the last nine in a row and the last five on the campus of the Big Eight school.

Sam Bowie won the opening tip and raced down the floor for a slam-dunk off a lob by Roger Harden to give Kentucky a 2-0 lead four seconds into the game. The 6-foot-11 center Turpin then scored six points off a variety of high-post picks to increase the Wildcats' lead to 14-4 at 5 1/2 minutes into the game.

But Kansas scrambled back on the eight points of Kelly Knight to reduce the deficit to 20-18 with 6:01 remaining in the half. Kenny Walker missed a free throw for Kentucky 21 seconds later and Kansas came downcourt with a chance in late the game but Carl Henry lost the ball out of bounds on his dribble.

Kentucky went on to score 13 consecutive points over the next five minutes, including five by Master and four by Turpin, to open up a 33-19 advantage and eventually left the court with a 35-20 halftime lead.

Weber St. 94 N. Mexico St. 71

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — Greg Jones scored 17 points Saturday night in leading unbeaten Weber State's balanced offense as the Wildcats whipped New Mexico State 94-71.

Shawn Campbell and John Price each scored 14 points for the Wildcats, won 6-0, and Randy Worster added 13. Weber State shot 58 percent for the night, to only 41 for New Mexico State, to pull away.

The game was close until the final 12:25 when Weber State outscored New Mexico State 18-0 during the next four minutes to lead 68-51. The Wildcats also used three technical fouls on ejected Aggie coach Walden Drew to score six points and pad their lead.

Steve Colter led all scorers with 22 points for New Mexico State, none in the second half. Lindsay McMillan added 16 for the Aggies but only nine points.

Falcons slip past Ole Miss

By MARY SCHLANGENSTEIN
United Press International

REVEPORT, La. — The Independence Bowl was supposed to be a boring duel Saturday night, but the game before the flash flood windings of the Air Force Academy Falcons and Mississippi Rebels simplified to stay afloat and thanks to the leg of Sean Pavlich it was the Air Force that did the best job. Pavlich kicked three field goals in a deep mud to bring the Falcons a 27-10 win over the Rebels in the Independence Bowl — the first of the NFL's post-season attractions. "I couldn't be happier with this team," said Air Force coach Ken Hatfield. "This team has been a part of something very big. Our offense moved the ball and controlled the clock and our defense shut them down. It was just the type of game I thought we would be in for." "Nobody expected the deluge which turned the natural turf field into a quagmire." "Without the rain I think we would have been ripped up and down the field," said Mississippi coach Butty Baker. "I think it would have been a much closer contest. The ball was slippery and hard to handle." "More than two inches of rain fell in the area before the kickoff and additional showers fell during the game itself." But the Falcons used their relentless ground game to move into field position good enough for Pavlich's three field goals, producing the Air Force's second consecutive bowl victory and its 10th win of the season — most ever in a single year for the academy. Pavlich kicked a 44-yarder on the Falcons' opening possession of the game, added a 38-yarder with 7:39 to go in the first half and finally kicked a 27-yarder with 7:59 to go in the third quarter. Mississippi could score only on Neil Teevan's 32-yard field goal with four seconds left in the first half — a score set up by one of Air Force's three fumbles. Another of the Falcons' fumbles, coming at the Mississippi 20 with 1:32 left in the game, gave Mississippi a final chance to win. The Rebels moved the ball to the Air Force 48 with 71 seconds to go but two plays later, quarterback Kelly Powell was sacked and fumbled. Even though the fumble was recovered by Mississippi center Wayne Pierce, the Rebels were left with a fourth-and-25 situation. Powell's desperation pass was knocked away by Greg Zalinger at the Falcons' 20 with 35 seconds left to clinch the Air Force victory. "The closest either team could come to a touchdown came on Air Force's first possession of the fourth quarter when the Falcons made it to the Mississippi one." But the Rebels stopped Air Force three times from the one, with Defensive Player-of-the-Game Andre Thompson making the final stop. The Falcons ended the year at 10-2 and with eight straight wins. Mississippi finished with a 6-6 mark.

Air Force quarterback Marty Louthan was named the game's Most Valuable Offensive Player. He completed 6-of-7 passes for 71 yards and ran 25 times for 87 yards. Powell threw 27 times, but could complete just 11 passes in the sloppy conditions for 138 yards.

Wilander wins Australian, biggest paycheck in history

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Swedish teenager Mats Wilander won the biggest prize in the history of tennis Sunday, earning $677,500 for defeating Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia 6-1, 6-4, 6-4 to win the Australian Open tennis tournament singles championship. Martina Navratilova captured her second Australian Open women's crown Saturday when she overcame American Kathy Jordan 6-4, 7-6.

Sweden won yet another title when Stefan Edberg swept aside one of Australia's top teenage prospects Simon Youl, 6-4, 6-4 to pull off the second ever Grand Slam in junior tennis. The first was by American Butch Borchardt in 1958. Australians Mark Edmondson and Paul McNamee won the doubles Saturday, scoring a straight sets decision over Steve Denton and Sherwood Stewart of the U.S.

Strock-led Miami shakes off Falcons

By LES KLOS
United Press International

MIAMI — Miami Dolphins quarterback Don Strock hadn't started a regular season game since 1981 and hadn't thrown a pass in competition in nearly a year, but he still felt comfortable Saturday.

"It wasn't as strange a feeling as you might think it would be," he said after completing his first 11 passes, including two for touchdowns, in Saturday's 30-24 victory over the Atlanta Falcons.

"I wasn't thinking about 11-for-11, I was thinking about 10-3," he said of the score before he threw his second scoring pass.

"That's not much of a lead," said Strock, who was replacing rookie sensation Dan Marino, injured last week.

Coach Don Shula, relieved after his Dolphins held off a late Falcons rally, half played a kind word for Strock, who has been a backup for nearly all of his 10 years in the league.

"Strock was outstanding for a guy who hadn't played for a long time. He was on the money most of the day," Shula said.

But Shula also found plenty of time to moan about Atlanta's two touchdowns in the final minutes.

"We had them put away and let them off the hook. That was a great example of what can happen in a short period of time," he said.

As unhappy about the comeback as Shula was, Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski was pleased.

"It says we are fighters and we have a lot of character. It's been happening all year," Bartkowski said.

Strock threw touchdown passes of 7 yards to tight end Joe Ross and 15 yards to Tony Nathan in the first half.

The Falcons' Mick Luckhurst connected on a 35-yard field goal and Miami's Uwe von Schamann kicked an 18-yarder to give the Dolphins a 17-3 lead at intermission.

The Falcons closed it to 17-10 on a 5-yard touchdown by Gerald Riggs after driving 55 yards in five plays the first time they got the ball in the third quarter. But the Dolphins put it away with two touchdowns over a two-minute span of the third quarter on runs of one yard by Andra Franklin and 13 yards by David Overstreet.

The Falcons scored a late touchdown on William Andrews' 24-yard run, set up by Steve Bartkowski's 21-yard completion to Billy "White Shoes" Johnson.

Atlanta then moved to within a touchdown on a 4-yard scoring pass from Bartkowski to Floyd Hodges, set up when Andrew Provenza recovered a fumble by Franklin on the Miami 35.

The Dolphins, who clinched the AFC West championship last weekend, improved their record to 11-4. The Falcons, quarterbacked by Bartkowski for the first time in three weeks, fell to 6-9.

Andrews ran for 161 yards on 21 carries to give him 1,409 yards for the season, breaking his 3-year-old club record.

Strock wound up with 18 completions in 23 attempts for 223 yards. Bartkowski was 15-of-27 for 175 yards.

After the Falcons closed to 17-10 on Riggs' touchdown, the Dolphins drove from their 32 in nine plays and Franklin scored from a yard out. Strock threw a 24-yard pass to Durriel Harris and Overstreet went over tackle for 23 more to keep the march going.

Miami forced Atlanta to punt and came back again when Strock threw a bomb which Mark Duper wrestled away from cornerback Bobby Butler for a 47-yard gain. On the next play, Overstreet skirted left end and struggled over two defenders for a 13-yard score.

Steelers end slump with rout of Jets

By DEE CARNICELLI
United Press International

NEW YORK — With his club in deep trouble, Chuck Noll called on Pittsburgh's Spirit of Playoff Past Saturday and in just 20 plays, the Steelers were on their way to the playoffs again.

That's all that Terry Bradshaw needed to produce a 14-0 lead, and spark the Steelers to a 24-7 rout of the New York Jets that brought them at least a wild card berth in the AFC.

Bradshaw, playing for the first time this season after suffering complications from off-season elbow surgery, threw for six touchdowns in the three games he played. Bradshaw, who took the Steelers to a record four Super Bowl victories during his 14-year career, threw a 17-yard TD pass to rookie Greg Garry in the first period and a 10-yarder to Colvin Sweney early in the second period.

Bradshaw suffered a bruise on his injured right elbow throwing the pass to Sweney and did not return to action.

the Browns in the season finale next week.

"He was a major factor," said Noll of Bradshaw. "It was a remarkable performance considering what he's gone through. We saw him work during the week and we felt he was ready and I think he showed it today. Hopefully he should be ready for next week but we'll have to wait and see."

Bradshaw said he was delighted to be back and hoped he could continue in the season-ending game against Cleveland next week and into the playoffs.

"I was apprehensive to the point that I did not know if I would handle myself under the pass rush,"

Bradshaw said. "That was my only concern because all week long I had been throwing the football accurately but I wasn't facing a pass rush like the New York Jets. My No. 1 concern was to settle down, read the defenses and throw the ball to the people who were open."

"I came out and I was able to read their coverages and hit the man I was supposed to."

Bradshaw said he injured his arm on the first touchdown pass to Garry and then re-injured it on the scoring pass to Sweney.

"I hurt it throwing across the field — that's what really hurt it. The other passes I had no trouble," Bradshaw said. "You don't practice running across the field throwing 30 yards. On the second touchdown pass they had a blitz on and I just snapped it. I thought I hit it on something. It was all informed and I just couldn't play any more. I just hope it's all right for next week."

The Steelers, now 10-5 after ending a three-game losing streak, can wrap up the AFC Central title if Cleveland loses to Houston Sunday or by beating

Weaker teams get stronger at winter meetings

By FRED McMANE
United Press International

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Baseball has concluded its first meetings ever held at "Music City," and 18 major league teams came away whistling a happy tune.

But baseball's owners are still stinging the bases over the status of the commissioner's office.

There were 16 transactions involving 34 players completed at the meetings, and although there were no earth-shaking deals, several clubs appear to have improved their rosters.

Many of those teams are the so-called "no sunlight" clubs that Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said posed a problem to the competitive balance of major league baseball.

The Seattle Mariners and Texas Rangers were perfect examples.

The Mariners came away from the meetings with two starting outfielders in Gorman Thomas and Barry Borel.

The club ranked last in the American League in runs scored last year and figures to improve its punch with those additions.

The Rangers, too, should be better offensively with the addition of Gary Ward, obtained from Minnesota.

Ward is one of the better right-handed hitters in the league and figures to add 70 to 75 runs to the club's output.

That is not only gaining from ear to ear over the acquisition of Ward but also for unloading the salary of catcher Jim Sundberg.

The Milwaukee Brewers wanted Sundberg so badly they were willing to pay almost $1 million to get him.

Trading catcher Ned Yost and pitcher Dan Scarpetta to get Sundberg, the Brewers had to pay a $250,000 trade buy-out and absorb two years of his deferred payments, totalling $375,000 a year. Sundberg has six more years left on the contract he signed with the Rangers and will start collecting on deferred payments when it expires or if he is injured and can't play any more.

That's OK with the Brewers. They think he's the guy who can help them regain the American League pennant, even though he hit only .201 last season. Despite his decline in offensive production, Sundberg still ranks among the league's better receivers.

The Oakland A's and the Los Angeles Dodgers may have improved themselves the most.

Since the end of the season the A's have signed free agent Bruce Bochte and traded for catcher Jim Essian and relief pitcher Bill Caullin. Tim Lincecum and Ray Burris. They also selected pitcher Jeff Bennett in the major league draft from Tidewater of the International League. He's considered one of the top young pitching prospects in the minor leagues and could make the A's roster next season.

Oakland also is expected to sign free agent second baseman Joe Morgan within the next couple of weeks.

The Dodgers made only one trade at the meetings, but it was a dandy. They gave up the Class AA player of the Year, pitcher Sid Fernandez, to the New York Mets for relief pitcher Carlos Diaz and a player to be named later, who will be infielder-outfielder Bob Bailor.

"Getting a player like Fernandez is exciting," said Lou Gorman, vice president of player personnel for the Mets. "The Dodgers are playing for next year and they helped themselves a lot."

Most of the trades made at the meetings involved older players on the way down such as Thomas, Sundberg and relief pitcher Ron Reed or unproven youngsters with promise such as Fernandez and first basemen Carmelo Martinez and Steve Rabuni.

"It's so difficult to make deals with top flight players because of their big contracts," said Gorman. "Many clubs were concentrating in other areas."

Several things went unresolved during the week. Free agents Rich Gossage and Darrell Evans still remain unsigned, although it is believed Evans is close to signing with the Dodgers.

The New York Yankees' managerial situation hasn't been straightened out either. It was expected that owner George Steinbrenner would fire Billy Martin and replace him with Yogi Berra at the meetings, but Steinbrenner postponed his decision.

It's expected that Steinbrenner will make the change this week in New York, however.

On baseball's business side, a former teammate of Berra, Dr. Bobby Brown, was named AL president during the week, but the status of the commissioner's job remained unchanged.

Baseball's Search Committee was unable to recommend a successor to commissioner Bowie Kuhn and he was asked to stay in office until March 1 as a transitory bridge. Kuhn accepted but made it clear he would not stay past that date.

"I feel for them," said Kuhn, referring to the Search Committee. "My position has been they have a helluva tough job. With each passing month the solution in a sense becomes easier."

DUSTY BAKER
He'll stay in L.A.

Baker vetoes L.A. plans to ship him to Oakland A's

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A two-hour Friday night meeting with Oakland officials failed to convince Los Angeles Dodgers left fielder Dusty Baker to approve a trade to the A's.

Baker, dealt to the A's pending his waiver of a no-trade clause in his contract, was not convinced that he would have remained an everyday player with Oakland.

"At no time during our discussions was money, or contractual terms or if beyond discussed," said Jerry Kapstein, Baker's agent. "Our discussions have concluded. The commissioner's office will be notified."

The Dodgers and A's worked out a tentative deal Wednesday night with Los Angeles coaching two Oakland minor league prospects for Baker.

Three fourth-quarter SIU interceptions spell doom for Nevada-Reno in Carbondale

By SAMUEL O. HANCOCK
United Press International

CARBONDALE, Ill. — Terry Taylor intercepted one pass for a touchdown and intercepted another to set up a second score to lead Southern Illinois to a 23-7 win Saturday over Nevada-Reno in a NCAA Division I-AA semifinal game.

Ron Miller, the Salukis' scoring quarterback, converted both extra point kicks to help lead the Salukis to a 23-7 win Saturday over Nevada-Reno in a NCAA Division I-AA semifinal game.

The top-ranked Salukis raised their record to 11-1 with the victory, while the Wolf Pack closed the season at 5-6.

Wolf Pack quarterback Eric Berens. Less than 30 seconds later, he picked off a second pass, and returned it 19 yards to the 2-yard line. Halfback Derrick Taylor carried the ball in for the TD.

Miller converted both extra point kicks to help lead the Salukis to a 23-7 win Saturday over Nevada-Reno in a NCAA Division I-AA semifinal game.

The Salukis had taken a 9-0 halftime lead on Miller's field goals of 35 yards in the first quarter and 45 and 19 yards in the second quarter.

Carolin led Central State's first touchdown of the game with 2:20 left in the third quarter after a bad snap on a punt attempt by SIU gave the Wolf Pack the ball at the SIU 10-yard line. Fullback Anthony Cortey, the Wolf Pack's leading rusher, brought the ball in from the 2-yard line for the touchdown.

The Wolf Pack's place-kicker,

Tony Zendejas, holds more than a score of NCAA all-division records and has kicked 70 career field goals. But he missed his only attempt of the day Saturday following the third quarter TD.

West Carolina manages to turn back furious fourth-quarter comeback by Furman GREENVILLE, S.C. (UPI) — Melvin Dorsey ran 4 yards for the deciding touchdown Saturday to cap a 30-yard drive midway through the fourth quarter and lead Western Carolina to a 14-7 triumph over Furman and a berth in next week's NCAA Division I-AA championship game in Charlotte.

Western Carolina, a 23-7 winner over Nevada-Reno in the other Division I-AA semifinal match Saturday.

Furman led 7-6 with 6:09 remaining in the game when Dorsey scored Western Carolina's only TD on a 4-yard blast up the middle. Dorsey had provided the key play in the drive, breaking a 43-yard run to the Furman 38.

After Dorsey's touchdown, Jeff Gilbert passed to tight end Eddie West in the end zone for the two-point conversion.

The touchdown and conversion came after Furman was called for roughing the kicker on a successful Western Carolina field goal that put the Catamounts ahead 3-7. Western Carolina Coach Bob Waters elected to return the three points and take the penalty, which gave the Catamounts a first down at the Furman 4 and set up the winning score.

Western Carolina broke ahead 3-0 on a 30-yard field goal by Dean Blasucci with 4:07 left in the first quarter. After missing 52- and 45-yard kicks in the second quarter,

North Dakota State blows away Central State to claim first NCAA championship

By MACK SISK
United Press International

MALLEN, Texas — Quarterback Jeff Brentnir rushed for 120 yards and one touchdown and passed for another score Saturday to power North Dakota State's potent ground game to a 41-7 victory over Central State at Ohio in the NCAA Division II national championship game in the Palm Bowl.

Brentnir opened the scoring in the first period with a 10-yard touchdown pass to Stacy Robinson and a scrambling 34-yard touchdown run. That set the stage for a 14-yard touchdown with 53 seconds remaining to stake the Bison to a 21-0 lead after one quarter before 5,000 fans.

With wind gusts up to 30 mph, Central State's James Woody, who passed for more than 2,100 yards in the regular season, could not crank up until the second quarter.

Woody's passing with the wind during the second period helped Central State cut the margin to 21-14 on a 14-yard plunge by Kevin Cummings and Mark Corbin, but the Marauders could get no closer after that.

Brentnir took North Dakota State on a nine-play 83-yard drive against the wind capped by a 34-yard run by Jess Willis that gave the Bison a 23-14 halftime lead.

North Dakota coach Don Morton said Brentnir played "a very courageous game. He ran the ball well. It was tough to pass but the important thing was he got our team."

James Moistre ran 5 yards for a third period score and Corbin scampered 26 yards to score. North Dakota State's Ken Kubisz kicked a 31-yard field goal against the wind to leave the Bison leading the Marauders 38-21 after three periods.

Kubisz added a 127-yard field goal in the fourth quarter for the game's final score and also missed a 47-yard attempt. He was good on all five North Dakota State extra points.

With Brentnir racking up 120 yards on 21 carries, the Bison outgained the Marauders 314 yards to 137 yards on the ground. Brentnir also completed 3 of 11 passes for 47 yards.

Woody connected on 13 of 27 passes, but had two picked off and North Dakota State converted both into scores. The Bison also recovered one fumble that led to a Kubisz field goal. Corbin led Central State's rushing with 65 yards on 16 carries and the Marauders wound up with 137 yards on the ground and 147 in the air. Both teams ended the season with 12-1 records.

It was North Dakota State's first NCAA Division II championship, although the Bison had claimed three other small college titles in the 1960s via the ratings. Central State made its first appearance in the playoffs.

"We just got a sound, old-fashioned whipping," said Central State's Billy Joe. "We could line up again tomorrow and they're probably beat us. They were just a better team."

In Grand Junction, Colo., quarterback Bill Monson threw two touchdown passes and Joe Stellavato booted two field goals to lead Mesa College to a 34-17 victory Saturday over Central Arkansas in the NAIA Division I semifinal.

The Mavericks will play Carson-Newman of Johnson City, Tenn., next week.

Monson connected on a 31-yard TD pass to Shan Vasey at 11:09 of the third quarter and followed with his second scoring pass, a 12 yarder, early in the fourth period to Keith Howard.

Stellavato had field goals of 30 and 38 yards.

Also pacing the Mavericks was Russ Hobson, who scored on a 13-yard run in the second quarter and booted 4 yards in the final period for his second TD.

Central Arkansas opened the scoring at 10:56 of the first period on a 35-yard run by Darren Wright and closed the first half with a 61-scoring pass from quarterback Allen Reed to Bruce Mcege.

Central Arkansas led 14-10 at halftime. Its only second half score came on a 43 yard Curtis Burrow field goal at 2:42 of the third period.

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

"It is easier to enrich ourselves with a thousand virtues than to correct our selves of a single fault."
 Jean de La Bruyere.

How can the defenders manage to beat today's game? If you think it's difficult to see the solution with all hands in view, imagine how many defenders would succeed in actual play. Dummy wins the diamond lead and trumps fall in two rounds. South now strips the diamonds and leads a heart. How should the defense counterattack?

If East takes his two hearts and leads a third, South discards a club and runs the diamonds. If West leads a club, South plays the 10 and it's West's turn to shine. If West covers, Dummy's king wins and a club towards South's jack scores the game. Who would find this winning defense in real life? You wouldn't need a calculator to get the answer but it is instructive to study the combination.

Bid with The Aces
 South holds: 6-2-3-B
 ♦ 8 5
 ♠ A K 6 3
 ♥ 5 2
 ♣ A 8 4

ANSWER: One no-trump. No reason to rebid hearts. One no-trump wins by elimination of other choices.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 11263, Dallas, Texas 75215, with self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

The front wheel drive diesel Centauri van is not just a new economy vehicle. It's a whole new concept. Now bigger is better. It will give you better economy than many cars with more roominess than a standard passenger van. Six feet of stand up headroom. 76" spacious rear couch-bed, 2 wardrobes, big touring windows — a true luxury van. 50 cubic feet of concealed storage, 11" step up for safety and ease going in and coming out. Four forward facing, swivel captain's seats and many more features uncommon to other passenger vans.

'Grandma on the go' helps children learn

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Bernice Meiers is known as the "grandma on the go."

But unlike many retired persons, her "going" consists of things like jogging around school gyms, jumping rope, balancing bean bags and even crawling.

A physical fitness nut? Not really, although she already has gained the rewards of faithful exercise — a flat tummy and a firm muscle tone that would put many younger people to shame.

The Twin Falls woman is involved in the Foster Grandparents program. Her assignment is assisting Wes Remaly in the perceptual motor-learning program — that is conducted in all Twin Falls elementary schools for kindergartners and first-graders.

Meiers and Remaly, whom she describes as "the nicest young man I've ever known," started in the program together in 1981. He asked for a Foster Grandparent to help, and she was assigned as someone "who might be able to do it," she recalls, laughingly.

There are some 40 Magic Valley senior citizens involved in the Foster Grandparent program, which has been promoted nationally by Nancy Reagan. But most of the tasks they do are sedentary, according to Marcie Donner, the area director and the strenuous activity Meiers does four days a week voluntarily could not be done by all grandparents. Many are assigned to classrooms, where they work on a one-to-one basis.

The Foster Grandparent program has been cited as one of the most cost-effective government social programs, Donner says, partly because it serves a dual purpose — helping both low-income senior citizens and children with special needs.

Meiers obviously enjoys her work with the motor-learning program. The job "has its own rewards," she says. Foster Grandparents receive a stipend and fringe benefits, such as free hot lunch and yearly physical exams.

"The doctor said there were no restrictions on what I could do," she says, adding that she shoveled her own walk during the recent snowstorms.

But the real reward, to her, is seeing the amazing improvement in every phase of learning among her young pupils. Perceptual motor learning is based on the now-proven fact that childhood physical activities, such as crawling, facilitates development, not only of coordination but mental ability.

But that's only part of the story. As children gain in motor skills, their self-confidence and the way they feel about themselves also improves, she says.

Meiers tells of a little boy whose ankles were so weak he couldn't stand on the balancing beam without "gripping my hand like crazy."

But after 12 weeks in the program — where the slogan is keep on trying — the child could walk it backward.

As a helper in the program, which is held one day per week at each elementary school, Meiers does everything the children do.

"I usually do two laps around the gymnasium — with them — for warm-up."

And she has learned to jump rope and to run again.

"I can do the 40-yard dash," the silver-haired, trim woman, who has five grandchildren of her own, says, modestly.

Sometimes, she even gets down and crawls to show her students how it's done.

Many children this age do not know their right hand from their left, she says, and if they do, they don't realize that their right hand and right foot are on the same side.

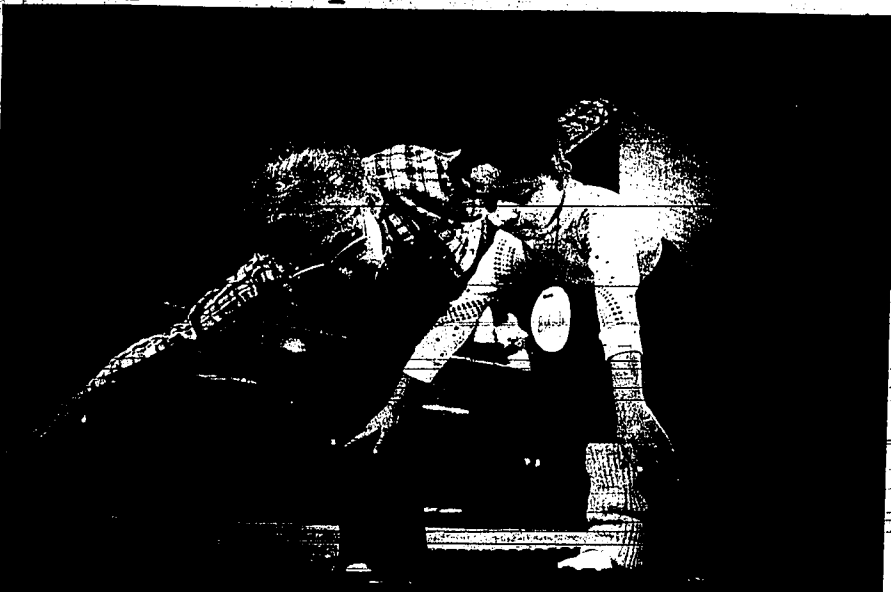

But then, she didn't realize the many things that can be done with a simple bean bag, she says.

"We carry them on our heads for balance and on our hands to build muscle tone."

She and Remaly work with 1,000 children weekly, and they all know her.

"When we drive up, the kids yell, 'It's P.E. day,'" she says.

Although all students in the two grades participate in the program, one of the extra values is that the leaders and the parents who also volunteer watch for children with special difficulty, so they can receive additional help, Remaly says.

Bernice Meiers is shown where she spends much of her time helping students overcome problems

Meiers moved to Twin Falls nine years ago, "following her children" — Howard Meiers, who now lives in Filer, and Shirley Moulton of Twin Falls.

The active grandmother spent most of her life in Southern California, where she and her husband, the late Harry Meiers, operated a poultry business. Feeding 80,000 laying hens twice a day and gathering their eggs, plus raising her children, kept her on the go.

A native of Beaville, Texas, she attended school in Nebraska, graduating from high school in Gering, Neb. She then worked as a dietitian in a hospital in Wheatland, Wyo. In the late 1930s, college degrees were not needed for so many jobs.

Just west in cold turkey and learned it," she said.

"We watched all that orchard being torn out," she recalls.

Although she likes physical activity and played basketball and tennis, she also likes to read and enjoys good music. She does needlepoint, crochets and quilts.

Meiers also is active in the First Christian Church, where she is in charge of the dining room when large dinners are served, and she was the coordinator for a recent retreat.

"I'm an organizer," she says. She's also taken many trips, some with the Shoshone Senior Center.

program, which she says she found "very rewarding."

She only had five weeks of vacation last year, but that's how she likes it.

In addition to these activities, Meiers also serves on the advisory board of Foster Grandparents program and helps her daughter and daughter-in-law can and freeze.

"I'm on the go. Some (older) people do have physical problems, but some of them create their own."

With her active lifestyle, it's not surprising that her medical report says "no restrictions."

Frank Merritt recalls the days when Milner was a town

Frank Merritt spent his early days in a community spawned by the building of Milner Dam

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

WENDELL — Half-melted coins easily could be found in the ground in the old community of Milner back in 1918.

Frank Merritt of Wendell was a boy of 8 when his parents moved to the settlement — along the Snake River in eastern Twin Falls — which even then was striking for its beauty.

When the Milner Dam was constructed in 1904-05, to divert water for the newly opened Twin Falls Tract.

Many of the original buildings that served workers during the project — when it was believed the community would become a thriving town — had by that time become vacant and fire apparently had taken its toll.

"We kids used to find half-melted coins all over," Merritt says.

When his father, George Merritt, brought his family there in June 1918, World War I had not ended, and guards were stationed at the dam as a precaution.

"The guards would wave flashlights over the dam," Merritt says. "I guess they were afraid someone might blow it up."

His school days during the two-and-a-half years the family lived at Milner, reflected the changes occurring in the community. He first attended class in the old Riverside Hotel which, he says, "was torn down around us."

Lumber from the hotel was used to build three houses, according to Merritt.

Then, the school was moved to the former bank building, and finally, the students were placed upstairs, so a store could be opened on the first floor of that structure.

Elder helps solve mystery

MILNER — The mystery of the Lynch Brothers Market token has been solved.

Last spring, in an "Elder" story about Christina Bradshaw, the long-time Milner resident said that about 10 years ago, her son had found a token inscribed "Lynch Brothers, Milner, Idaho," at the site of the old townsite.

It was good for 12.5 cents at what was assumed to have been a merchandise store in the days when Milner was a bustling settlement while the nearby dam was built.

The Bradshaw family tried to find out more about the token, but the Lynch Brothers Market had long since moved to Boise.

Mr. Merritt contacted the Bradshaw family, who had the token for about 30 years.

While his father was a young child, Mr. Merritt had contact with the Bradshaw family.

The Merritt family first lived in what had been the Lynch Brothers store for a few months.

Rabbit drives drew big crowds at that time. Often staged on Sunday, the drives would bring people from Burley, Murtaugh and the Greenwood area, southeast of Hazelton.

"You never saw so many people," Merritt says.

Later, his family lived on the north side of the river, and Merritt, the oldest of six children, walked across the catwalk over the dam to get to school in Milner. He also attended school in Jerome, Shoshone and Dietrich.

After their stay in Milner, where his father farmed, the Merritts moved to Artesian City, six miles southeast of Murtaugh, another early-day community that never developed.

All that was left of the earlier settlement, Merritt says, were two natatoriums; one large and one small, and a dance hall, once the site of large gatherings.

While Merritt remembers vivid details of these communities, he now just looks at the token as an adult.

Cub Scouts sell wreaths to brighten Christmas for retirees

A week ago Saturday, despite the heavy snowfall, some two dozen boys sold 100 Christmas wreaths to Twin Falls shoppers who braved the storm. And in the best Christmas spirit, the group, members of Cub Scout Pack 74, sponsored by the Mormon Sixth Ward, used the "fruits of their labors" to bring happiness to residents of the two retirement homes in Twin Falls.

The boys and their leaders, Cathy Brown, Leah Mascheck and Dean Johns, purchased Christmas trees for which they had made decorations earlier. Thursday night, they took the trees to the Woodstone and Heritage retirement centers, and not only decorated them, but delighted the elderly residents with a program encompassing both the light and spiritual sides of the holiday.

A Ripert man who didn't even know he could carry a tune until he was 25, will compete in the Metropolitan Opera regional finals early next year in Seattle.

Robert Newman, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Newman of Rupert, won the opportunity to compete after winning first place in the opera group's district auditions in Spokane last month. He had not planned to compete this year, although he placed in the top 10 last year, but since he was called to Spokane to sing in a production of "La Traviata" and the auditions were the same time, he decided to participate.

The scheduled performer for the Spokane production had become ill, and Newman agreed to take the role on three-days notice, according to his wife. The music was flown to him by air, so he had one brief practice session before driving to Spokane.

A hartone, Newman graduated from Minico High School and Utah State University, with a degree in accounting. After realizing his singing talent, he returned to college to earn a degree in music from the University of Idaho, from which he graduated with honors a few years ago.

Currently, Newman is working part-time on a master's degree. He has studied with Mary Walker of Twin Falls and Dorothy Barnes of Moscow. He has performed in several Boise operas and will appear in "Carmen" there next spring.

Use common sense when buying gifts

DEAR ABBY: Last year you devoted an entire column on what to give — and not to give — for Christmas. Wonderful. Please give it another run.

— SENIOR CITIZEN
IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR SENIOR CITIZEN: Many others have requested a rerun, and here it is.
DEAR READERS: Can you believe it's time to prepare for the holidays again? Well, it is, so do yourself a favor and do your Christmas shopping early.

If you're wondering what to give Aunt Jennie or Grandpa, who don't get out much, let me tell you what NOT to give them:
• No dating perfume, after-shave or cologne. (The bottles have several unopened boxes gathering dust on their closest shelves.)
• Grandpa doesn't need another necktie, and Aunt Bertha doesn't really want any more brooches, necklaces or earrings.
• With the price of groceries so high, folks who live alone on a fixed income probably would be delighted to receive a basket of goodies, include small cans of salmon, chicken, ham, tuna, vegetables, fruit, instant coffee, tea bags, crackers, cookies and instant soup mixes.

Older people who live in confined quarters do not need more "things" that are ornamental only. Don't send music boxes, statuettes or other bric-a-brac.
A truly thoughtful gift: postcards and some lined stationery with envelopes and a generous supply of postage stamps. (Enclose some self-addressed envelopes.)
The homeward-bound will appreciate a box of greeting cards for all occasions so that they too can send birthday, anniversary, graduation, get-well and "congratulations" to others. (Use a sport Stamp some envelopes.)
Don't give anyone a gift of clothing unless you're absolutely sure the size is right. That goes for the color and style, too.

If you're tempted to pass along a scarf, purse, wallet — or some useless little doodad you received three Christmases ago — please don't; the recipient will probably find it just as useless as you did. (Besides, you might get it back the year after next.)
If someone on your gift list is living on a pension, a check for any amount would be much more appreciated than a frivolous little trinket. Or give someone who's coming penniless a year's subscription to a newspaper or magazine you know he or she will enjoy.
If you buy a gift on sale, be sure it's appropriate since if the recipient tries to take it back he will be told, "Sorry, sale merchandise is not returnable."
Don't give anyone a pet unless you're absolutely sure it's wanted and will be properly cared for. And if you want to delight someone who considers his pet a "member of the family," include a tin of cat or dog food for the pet.
Don't give wine or liquor unless you're sure the recipients imbibe. Candy, nuts and fruitcake make wonderful gifts for those who aren't counting calories, but please have compassion for those who are, and lead them not into temptation.

Resist giving toddlers stuffed animals and dolls that are bigger than they are. And parents will thank you most for not sending their children horns, drums, sirens or whistles. If you give a child a game or book, be sure it's in the appropriate age range.
Instead of giving someone a gift with permission to "exchange it if it's not what you want," save yourself (and him) "much time and effort" and give him a gift certificate in the first place.
Holiday time can be very depressing for people who are alone, so if you know someone who might be alone and lonely, give him (or her) the best gift of all — an invitation to spend the holidays with you and your family. Loneliness is the ultimate poverty. Love.

Fashions in museum

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Metropolitan Museum is giving its first show devoted to a single living designer to Yves Saint Laurent in tribute to a career that for 25 years has had more influence on international fashion than any other.
The museum's 12th annual Costume Institute exhibition organized by Diana Vreeland, octogenarian former Vogue magazine editor, has turned out to be its most exciting, touching off salutes of publicity and a round of social events that is giving the pre-Christmas New York season a French fillip.
Saint Laurent arrived from Paris Dec. 1 for possible last minute adjustments in the show, which had been a year in the making, but found everything to his liking, including the piped-in contemporary music and the pervasive scent of his latest perfume, "Paris."
"I only had to walk around a little to find that Mrs. Vreeland needed no advice from me," he said on a pre-opening tour with several hundred members of the press, the largest number ever to come out for a costume show at the Met. "She is so wonderful. Everything was perfect."
"Yves Saint Laurent: 25 Years of Design" opened privately Monday with a $500-a-ticket dinner-dance fund-raiser for the museum attended by many of the best-dressed women in the world, and will be opened officially to the public next Wednesday, running through Sept. 2, 1984.
It surveys the 47-year-old designer's work beginning with collections he created for the House of Dior from 1957 to 1960 and continuing through collections designed under his own label from 1961 to the 1983-84 fall-winter collection. Included are some Saint Laurent's costumes for 30 ballets and music-hall shows and nine movies.
Against backgrounds that suggest Paris' architectural past, trellised walks in the Bois de Boulogne, saucers lacquered in Chinese reds and greens, and a grand gallery of the mauve decade, 150 costumes from a staggering 100 collections (four a year) delineate Saint Laurent's contributions to the fashion language of our time.

Designing clothes for stars is his role

BY DIANE REISCHL
Dallas Morning News
DALLAS — His world is one of rich, broad-shouldered women with cleavage. Even Nolan Miller marvels that most actresses be designers for a living.
Joan Collins, Linda Evans, Lana Turner, Barbara Stanwyck. They all have perched their hips and shoulders so wide there's no disguising them, "so I just exaggerate them more," he says.
With a $15,000 weekly budget, Miller dresses Evans, Collins and the entire cast of "Dynasty." With smaller purses, he also costumes the casts of "Love Boat," "Sam Houston" and "Hotel."
As "Dynasty's" costume designer, Miller creates more than 18 outfits weekly, bedroom negligees, sequined formal, tailored suits for office or courtroom. "We're always in trial on 'Dynasty,'" he says.
Tall and Hollywood-handsome, Miller is a 48-year-old veteran of Aarou Spelling Productions. Though he designed for the variety shows in the '50s and "Charlie's Angels" in the '70s, not until "Dynasty" did the public notice his work. He says it was the first time his characters were to look moneyed, and, in the case of Alexis Carrington, money-obsessed.
"Someone said to me: 'Don't you think she is overdressed?'" I said: "True, but she walked in the room and you didn't know who she was, you would still know she is rich and important and would probably get out of her way."

"Everything about her is studied. She's always very put together. If she's in white, it's all white. The character of Alexis borders on being theatrical in her clothes."
Miller likens his job to that of a pop psychologist. For three seasons, he has tried to ease Linda Evans, as "Crystal," into primis. "He says she prefers monochromatic outfits in soft pastels. Alexis has a thing, she thinks she can't wear green. There's absolutely no reason, but I don't press it. She's unhappy in it, so why do it?"
Miller underestimates Evans' sweet-natured character with pliant jerseys and other drapery. "Formerly a conservative dresser, Evans has grown more lavish in taste as her character, the secretary-turned-wife of an oil tycoon, has become accustomed to wealth. Miller tells of the time Evans eyed herself in the mirror before entering the set, wearing a $20,000 necklace and a $100,000 sable wrap. "What ever made me think I didn't like these things?" she remarked.
Miller strategy is to dress the stars in classics rather than fads so the clothes won't appear dated when "Dynasty" airs in England and Australia a season or two behind. His designs also are more skin-conscious than average street fashions. "We attempt to give a sensuous kind of thing, of course," he says. "The networks like the sexy things. It helps the ratings."
Television also dictates that garments contain the most detail from the waist up — the area emphasized on film.
As characters change, so must their fashions. The once trampsy Fallon (Pamela Sue Martin), "madcap and avant-garde," as Miller calls her, sports a business look since she began running a hotel.

But Miller hasn't changed Heather Locklear's appearance in the least. For her role as the erstwhile wife of gay Steven Carrington, he continues to create tight, cheap clothes for "more of a common look."
Miller frequently relies on polyester for female characters — a preference that has resulted in a professional link with the Celanese Company, a polyester manufacturer. He came to Dallas last week on a Celanese promotion.
"They called me on 'Dynasty' when they kept seeing some of the Fortrel fabrics. They said, 'Are we imagining this? Is it an accident, or do you really like it?'" Miller says Joan Crawford opened his mind to synthetics. She always asked for polyester.
"Miss Crawford was adamant about fabrics — that they not crumple, because she traveled a great deal. She wore a lot of polyester. She was a fiend for everything being clean. She loved having blouses that could be washed by her personal maid."
From the sixth grade, Miller wanted to dress the likes of Crawford and Lana Turner. Reared in Burkburnett, Tex., and Lake Charles, La., Miller was a star-struck MGM movie junkie, enchanted by the blas-cut satins worn by Jean Harlow and Carole Lombard.

structures currently important to Idaho's physical history.
An employee of the Morrison-Knudsen construction firm of Boise, he helped construct the Lower Salmon Falls Dam in the Hagerman Valley, and he was superintendent of the Malad Bridge construction in 1957-58, when the older structure between Hagerman and Bliss was replaced.
He also helped build both the Brownlee and Oxbow dams on the Snake River, which were constructed by the Boise firm for the Idaho Power Co. And he spent two years building forms for the Anderson Ranch Dam for another firm.
Merritt, a native of Clifton, a small community 30 miles south of Pocatello, where he was born Feb. 4, 1910, says he got into construction work because he "couldn't make enough to live our farming."
He farmed a few years in the area after his marriage on Sept. 20, 1930, to Marguerite Stevens.

Help was needed at the Lower Salmon Falls project, so he started working "other kinds of work during the winter, including chipping hay."
"I stood on a feeder table and breathed dirt," he says.
When he was 27, he started shearing sheep through the spring and into July, then would return to construction work.
However, shearing sheep in those days was dusty, too, and both these things, he said, contributed to the emphysema from which Merritt now suffers.
"It was so dusty shearing on the Brumau desert that sometimes you couldn't see the sheep you were working on."
But he continued in construction work for many years. Without formal training, Merritt learned on the job.

"I'd sit up nights to study."
But it paid off — soon, he was put in charge of three or four other workers.
"One of the advantages of building dams was the opportunity to fish, which was his main hobby."
Other projects on which he worked include bridges across both the Low Line and High Line canal, near Twin Falls, and a bridge in the Lolo Pass area, in northern Idaho.
Merritt once had a near escape from electrocution during construction of the Oxbow Dam. A machine was blowing concrete, and he was standing on a wooden ladder holding an electric cord.
The cord, which had been sent to the repair shop earlier, evidently had not been fixed, and the electric current passed through his chest.
"As long as I was on the wooden ladder, I was OK, but when I touched a steel beam, the current froze me," Merritt says he couldn't even move his hand away from the cord. As soon as the current was cut off, he crumpled and fell. Fortunately, he was standing only a few feet above a platform, so he was not hurt in the fall.

The company doctor looked him over, gave him some pills and pronounced him all right, he says. But Merritt believes the incident probably has had some effect on his health.
The accident occurred in the early 1950s, and he retired in about 1968.
The Merritts have lived in Wendell for 46 years, all in the same house, which he has added on to and remodeled extensively.
They have five children: Marvin Merritt of Omaha, Neb.; Larry Merritt of Bryan, Texas; Glenn Merritt of Wendell; Rita Howard of Coeur d'Alene; and Rex Merritt of Pocatello. They also have 15 grand children and two great-grandchildren.

Santa needs helpers at nursing homes

TWIN FALLS: — Once again, Santa's helpers are needed to ensure each resident at Skyview-Hazelde nursing home is remembered this Christmas.

Area residents are requested to select a number from the list below and deliver the items to the nursing home nurses station or office by Dec. 21. Each gift should be wrapped and labeled with the number and content.

Volunteer helpers also should call Agnes King at 733-2295, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. to record the number they have chosen and thus avoid duplications.

She will coordinate the gift project. All gifts will be distributed to nursing home residents Christmas morning.

Selecting and Arranging Furnishings

by Jo Ann Rose

CHRISTMAS CHAIRS are a popular gift selection for the man of the house... one of those roomy, comfortable chairs he can relax in for reading or watching his favorite team on television. But in these days of Women's Liberation, it seems that the woman of the house should have her chair, too... a suggestion which isn't as facetious as it might sound at first.

A woman's chair doesn't need to be as large as the average man's... but the wife will find just as much pleasure in it. The fact is that today's woman needs her hours of relaxation, often in the evenings when the day's work is done, for reading, sewing, watching TV or simply talking over the day's events. A favorite place should be part of her decorative scheme... just for herself. The decorative idea to draw from all this is that furnishings should not be selected just for themselves, or considered in a vacuum. They are for the use and enjoyment of particular people, in their own special ways, and according to their own personal taste.

Particular furniture for particular people is just what we sell. Whether it's a gift chair, a decorative accessory to give or enjoy or anything else in home furnishings, be sure to come in and look over our displays.

Work Of Art.

Sometimes, a thing of beauty has additional merit. It also turns out to be useful.

Take, for instance, this square of sculpture coated with rich gleaming silver. Feels smooth, well-formed, solid in the hand. Looks valuable, and it is—it's Clinique's Forever Compact. But it's not just idle beauty. This compact has a job—it helps skin perfect its good looks.

The Forever Compact holds what's needed to complete a smooth and poreless look: Clinique's clean, fine pressed powder so sheer and subtle it blends with any skin.

You'll find it, plus a fast free skin analysis with Clinique's Computer, at our Clinique Counter.

As an art form, this compact is a treasure. And with the refill that comes along, it goes on doing its good work. Forever. 35.00.

Stricklan, a 1978 graduate of Buhl High School, attended Northwest Christian College. She now is a student at the College of Southern Idaho and is a dental assistant for Dr. Daniel H. Haymore.

Root, the son of John O. and Darlene Root of Twin Falls, is a 1978 graduate of Twin Falls High School. He is a landscaper for Kimberly Nurseries.

The couple plans a Jan. 7 wedding at the First Christian Church in Twin Falls.

Somebody Needs You

"Somebody Needs You" a public-service column that appears each Sunday in The Times-News, is designed to match those in the community who need volunteer help with those who can provide it.

Is there an elder person in your block? Volunteer to clear the walk and driveways, and shop for the elderly near you who are house-bound during this bad weather. If you would like to help the elderly but do not know whom to help, call Bruce Bennett or Karen Mack at 733-9554, extension 334.

You can help make Christmas a happier time of year for many families. You can help with area Christmas baskets and toy drives. Contact the Magic Valley Volunteer Bureau at 733-9554; extension 334.

Would you be interested in helping to collect and preserve local history? To volunteer to help with this project, contact the Twin Falls Public Library at 733-2964.

During this holiday season, why not spend some time with someone who needs your companionship. Visit a nursing home near you. You'll be glad you did.

An elderly woman needs transportation to the library in Twin Falls once each week. Call the CSI Homemaker Service at 733-9554.

If your organization needs a volunteer, call Bruce Bennett at the College of Southern Idaho at 733-9554, extension 334, to have it appear in this column.

Erosion cuts Magic Valley yields

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — As many as three-quarters of the Magic Valley's fields are sustaining severe erosion from irrigation practices, costing farmers significant crop losses, new research indicates.

David Carter, a soil scientist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Snake River Conservation Research Center, says that two years of research in 48 Magic Valley fields have documented large losses of rich topsoil.

In the worst cases, the topsoil has been stripped away, leaving a whitish subsoil and much poorer growing conditions, he says.

Heavier use of fertilizers also cannot bring back the yield losses caused by the washed-away soils, Carter also has found.

"Most of these farmers around here have been irrigating about 78 years, and we've found a lot of it where there's been erosion a hardpan eight inches to a couple feet on the upper ends (of fields)," Carter said last week.

"The topsoil layer averages between 12 and 15 inches in the Magic Valley. It overlies a hardpan layer that severely restricts growth. Although loss of topsoil has been recognized in the past as an important problem in agriculture, its effects on yields have not been documented, Carter says. His local studies are part of a nationwide project by the government's Agricultural Research Service to pin down how soil losses can trim yields for a number of crops.

Generally, the less topsoil available, the worse the yields for most crops, Carter says. For instance, grain needs 15 to 25 inches for highest yields; in 10 inches or less, yields can be cut by as much as 77 percent, the research shows.

Beans grow well in 18 inches of topsoil; they reach only 26 percent of maximum yields in four inches. Sugar beets, which are the least sensitive to topsoil losses, can reach 72 percent of top yields in a thin, four-inch layer of topsoil.

Exiting on more fertilizer also will not bring the yields back once topsoil is lost, Carter says.

"Growth is trimmed so severely because the subsoils have less organic matter, less microbe activity and different chemical and mineral compositions than topsoils.

"The topsoil losses occur when irrigation streams pick up soil particles and carry them through furrows to the lowest end of the field.

Chris Everts, a clean water specialist with the University of Idaho Extension Service at Twin Falls, says many Magic Valley farmers work topsoil fields, which may have 6 inches of topsoil on the high end and as much as 35 inches at the low end.

Carter says the next phase of the study will tackle what to do about topsoil losses. One approach will be to replace washed-away topsoil back at the high end of the field, he says. He is working on the project with research technicians Robert Berg and Barbara Sanders, both from the Snake River Center.

The national study also is developing computer models to estimate erosion and its impacts on yields.

So far, research indicates that cutting down the length of time fields are irrigated, incorporating crop residues into the soil or switching to sprinkler irrigation all help to stem topsoil losses.

Still, whenever topsoil is washed away, yield losses are likely to occur, Carter says. Yields are typically in disappearing much faster than nature is building it back up, he says. It takes nature 50 years to build up a quarter-inch of topsoil, Carter estimates.

"In some of these fields, if it weren't for the fact that there was a little topsoil being mixed in each year-by-cultivation, they wouldn't have any soil at all."

Whitish soil in this Magic Valley field indicates severity of soil loss to irrigation erosion.

Bean Growers succeeds in keeping balance

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Bean Growers Warehouse Association has sold its Filer plant but it has modernized its Hazelton plant the past year.

It is trying to recover lost patronage at its Jerome operation, and it is gearing up for new customers at the Kimberly warehouse.

The administration has moved out of rented offices and bunked in with the beans and wheat in a new annex at the Twin Falls mill.

In 28 years of age, the 500-member cooperative is trying to keep its balance among the shifting tides of the marketplace.

It is succeeding. Its latest financial report shows that after absorbing operating losses of $100,000 in 1982, the marketing company has rebounded to reap a $100,000 gain this year.

Bean Growers managed to turn that income on $6.7 million worth of sales, 5.4 percent less than in 1982. It also has had to contend with abnormal losses caused by the bankruptcy of a Portland grain elevator.

The figures mirror a change in the way the Bean Growers is taking in and marketing Magic Valley crops. Over the past few years, the cooperative's board of directors started building up plants that could be modernized.

Now, Ronald D. Johnson, the dynamic new general manager, is pushing the trend forward with more vigor, trying to install lasting efficiencies.

Equipment is being modernized. "With the new technology, we're attempting to address economies of scale," he says. "What we're trying to do is move more product over the existing mills."

The association also is consolidating operations at area plants. The reasons are a matter of economies. A bean mill, for instance, must process 50,000 hundredweight of beans to be operating efficiently, he says. It's not cost-efficient to have full-time warehouses just miles apart from each other, he says.

The cooperative also is speeding up shipping, using unit trains where possible, as at its 25-car facility at Hazelton.

Behind the modernizations lie trends in agriculture and in marketing.

"I think one of the things affecting this company is the lack of seed (bean) sales to the Midwest," Johnson says. "A hardpan layer has jumped into the seed market, snatching business away from Idaho, he says.

But markets for commercial beans are starting to come back, opening up prospects for new sales, he says.

"I think we're — at least this company — tending to move a little bit more to the commercial beans, and a lot of the farmers are doing likewise.

That means technology changes. In handling seed beans, delicacy and extreme quality is a must. "With commercial beans, it's handled more like any bulk commodity," Johnson says.

Seed beans typically give warehouses a higher margin of return than commercial beans. To get the same margin, the warehouse must process and ship commercial beans more efficiently, Johnson says.

Bean Growers sold its Filer warehouse to Allison Mills this summer to solve an efficiency problem, says Bean Growers President Leslie R. Jones, of rural Twin Falls.

Accepting and processing a bag of beans was costing close to $9.00, in excess of any margin. Taking in — wheat — there also was costly, and there was too little storage to handle both crops at the same time, he says.

There was another problem that the cooperative will tackle head-on in the next few months — loss of customers in some areas. Bean Growers wants to build a new facility in the Filer-Buhl area. It once also had a Buhl warehouse.

But it won't go ahead until it can find out why it is losing ground.

Jones and Johnson say they are going out to hold meetings with farmers in the area to ferret out the reasons and to decide where to build. The new facility most likely won't be a full-scale plant, but rather a receiving spot that ships the crop to a processing or storage site.

The cooperative's large plant at Jerome also is having trouble holding its wheat.

Lending agency fails for second year to fulfill directive

By SONJA HILLGREN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — For the second year in a row, the Agriculture Department's lending agency has failed to live up to a congressional directive that at least 20 percent of its loans for farm operations go to lower income farmers.

In fiscal 1982, the percentage going to so-called "limited resource" farmers, those with low incomes or farmers just starting in business, was 11.9 percent of lending. In fiscal 1983, the percentage fell slightly to 11.5 percent.

An analysis by Rural America, an advocacy group for rural citizens, said that the Farmers Home Administration met or exceeded the 20 percent requirement in only 10 states. The best record was in Rhode Island, which had 35.4 percent of loans going to limited resource farmers.

Other percentages of the complying states included 30.7 percent in New Hampshire, 26.5 percent in Kentucky, 26.4 percent in Pennsylvania, 26.1 percent in Hawaii, 25.8 percent in Vermont, 23.2 percent in both Iowa and Massachusetts, 22 percent in Wisconsin and 20 percent in Connecticut.

Alaska had the worst record with no funds going to limited resource farmers. Other low percentages included 0.5 percent in Virginia, 1 percent in Delaware, 3.3 percent in Arkansas, 3.6 percent in Texas and 3.7 percent in Georgia.

Congress enacted a limited resource program in 1978 and later directed the agency to distribute a minimum of 20 percent of operating loans to farmers with low incomes or young people entering farming.

The Northeast had the best record in fiscal 1983, although falling short in three states. In Maine, 17.9 percent of lending went to limited resource borrowers. In New Jersey, the rate was 8.7 percent and the rate in New York was 17.4 percent.

Virtually all of the states with low percentages have a large number of low-income farmers so there is no excuse for failure — to lend the 20 percent, said George Rucker, Rural America's research director.

The South, the region with the lowest farm income, had the worst record, with less than 9 percent of the agency's operating loans going to low-income farmers.

The share of lending to limited resource farmers in the South included 13.4 percent in Florida, 10.9 percent in Maryland, 9.3 percent in North Carolina, 9.5 percent in South Carolina, 15 percent in West Virginia, 11.9 percent in Alabama, 6.1 percent in Mississippi, 9.8 percent in Tennessee, 7.9 percent in Louisiana and 19.2 percent in Oklahoma.

Rural America called for a federal investigation of the farm lending program. When limited resource loans are lumped together with all farm operating and purchase loans made by the agency, Farmers Home provides 12 percent of the credit to American farmers. The rest comes from banks, the federally chartered Farm Credit System, insurance companies, other private sources and individuals.

David Raphael, executive director of Rural America, said, "The agency's failure to implement this much-needed program during a period of mounting financial crisis in agriculture demonstrates its disregard for congressional mandates and the plight of hard-pressed farmers.

A spokesman for the agency said one reason lending to low-income farmers was low was lack of demand.

"It wasn't a good time for people to expand farming or start farming," the spokesman said. "I don't think I would want to start in a business that the farm economy has had in the past few years."

Just the same, the agency provided a record $1.68 billion in operating loans in fiscal 1983, of which almost $1 billion went to low-income farmers. In fiscal 1982, nearly $144 million out of $1.2 billion went to that group of low-income or starting farmers.

The percentages of funds that went to low-income farmers in other states:

were 17.2 percent in Illinois, 5.7 percent in Indiana, 7.5 percent in Michigan, 8.7 percent in Ohio, 14.9 percent in Kansas and Missouri, 8.1 percent in Minnesota, 17.1 percent in Nebraska, 5 percent in North Dakota and 18.2 percent in South Dakota.

In the West, percentages were 17.8 percent in Arizona, 12.3 percent in Colorado, 16.1 percent in Idaho, 17.1 percent in Montana, 11.9 percent in Nevada, 5.1 percent in New Mexico, 12.6 percent in Utah, 11.4 percent in Wyoming, 9.2 percent in California, 15.1 percent in Oregon and 12.3 percent in Washington.

The agency said that 1,357 of its 270,000 clients were foreclosed upon in fiscal 1983. Of the foreclosures, 615 were made by the government and 742 were made by other lenders. A total of

Barter can open export markets

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

MOSCOW — U.S. exporters can open many markets for farm products by bartering instead of paying a marketing economist from the University of Idaho says.

"Many countries that cannot afford cash purchases are ready to export commodities," says James R. Jones, a marketing economist in the University of Idaho's College of Agriculture.

"U.S. exporters of peaches and lentils have been approached about exporting coffee beans. In the future, numerous business dealings on counter-trade terms may be available," he says.

Although about 30 percent of world trade involves bartering, American exporters have not been as active in the bartering as European and lesser-developed nations.

Part of the reason is the lack of export trading companies, companies with special legal privileges that are geared to working in world trade. The U.S. government only recently has started licensing these types of companies, which can act as clearinghouses for exported and imported merchandise.

But there are significant problems to overcome. Export trade is a complicated business, Jones says. An even swap is difficult to arrange.

One problem involves the types of articles that come on the market. Unless done through two governments, "invariably they'll be coming at you with something that you may have to ask a question — 'What are you going to do with it?'" Jones says.

Compounding that problem is the fact that barter transactions often are used to dispose of products for which markets are not readily available. Otherwise, the seller would seek cash through normal marketing channels, Jones says.

In many cases, a clearinghouse with large amounts of capital and a wide network of contacts is necessary to sell goods obtained through swaps.

And bartering does not solve buying-power problems, such as the current strength of the U.S. dollar against other countries' currencies, because the values of products have to be pegged to some form of money.

"It is sure not going to be the vehicle that is going to solve the current farm problem," he says.

'I'm into romance, not risqué' Photographer solves holiday dilemma

By JEFF WILSON

Stuart Naldeth poses Lin Parker for Christmas cheesecake

COSTA MESA, Calif. (UPI) — Stuart Naldeth solves the Christmas gift dilemma for women who want something personal and intimate for the man in their lives.

He does it in pictures of scantily clad women, but not the sort usually seen in men's magazines.

And while actress Joan Collins posed in the buff recently for Playboy's starring models, Naldeth's clients usually have only one man in mind.

This Christmas, Naldeth's one-of-a-kind service is accommodating housewives, business women and even grandmothers who want to present a sensual boudoir shot to their man.

He's already photographed more than 100 women and is shooting pictures of up to a dozen a week in a Christmas rush that has become a rage in Orange County.

"I'm into romance, not risqué," Naldeth said. "Anyone can take cheesecake photos, my work is in a class by itself."

Naldeth, 32, has a psychology degree he says helps him pin customers at ease for the revealing photo sessions.

"I play soft music, serve vintage wine and talk to them during the sitting," he says. Naldeth, whose studio also handles traditional portraits, came upon boudoir photography accidentally.

"I had photographed the wedding of a young couple and a few months later the bride came back and requested something more sensual for her new husband. She put as much time and money into her boudoir portrait as she did for the wedding shots."

It costs an average $350 for the pictures, which usually include a framed 20-inch-by-24-inch wall portrait.

One of his customers included a state senator's wife, who had to down a six-pack of beer to get the nerve to do it, he said.

Another woman, a bank vice president, was getting ready to dump her boyfriend and she wanted him to remember what he'd been missing.

One woman only wanted waist-length portraits because the husband, her boyfriend wouldn't hang them on the wall. When questioned further, she revealed her boyfriend lives with his wife.

Since starting the unique photo service six months ago, he has 50 percent of his studio business has turned to shooting seductive poses of what he calls a "new permissiveness regarding soft-core type sex."

"Most of them are professional women who earn a decent income and want something different for their husbands or boyfriends," he says. "The women want to be feminine."

"It is not too unusual for women to want to look like magazine models. Most of my clients are ordinary-looking, but the finished pictures will fit right in with Playboy or Cosmopolitan."

Emil J. Barycki has been appointed manager of the Kraft, Inc. plant at Carey. A native of Pennsylvania, Barycki joined Kraft in 1973 as quality control manager at its Rupert plant. He became sanitation supervisor at Pocatello in 1980 and process cheese manager there a year later. Barycki, his wife and two children live at Bellevue.

Phillip H. Hummel has been appointed district manager of franchise services for Kentucky Fried Chicken. He will administer the Idaho-Wyoming district from Twin Falls. Hummel was previously food service director for the Granite Falls, Wash., school district. He will serve as a consultant to franchise holders and provide liaison with the company.

Six employees from the Volco Inc. store at Jerome are being honored this month for 10 years of service. They are: Kathy Crist, a computer technician in the accounting department; Bill Jewell, a buyer; Olina Newton, a consumer sales representative; Al Taylor, truss manufacturing coordinator; Harleigh Wallington, contractor sales representative; and Mary Welch, secretary.

Wallington also has announced his retirement. All are scheduled to receive the awards at a Christmas party later this month. Volco Inc. is a building supply

The Dean Growers Warehouse Association, Inc. of Twin Falls elected three members to its board of directors at its annual meeting last week. Leslie R. Former Twin Falls banker selected First Security head BOISE — James E. Phelps, a Twin Falls banker during the 1960s, will succeed Ralph J. Comstock Jr. as board chairman and chief executive officer of the First Security Bank of Idaho early in January.

Comstock, a third-generation Idaho banker who has directed operations of the statewide system since 1965, is retiring to pursue personal business interests, it was announced last week. The appointment hands Phelps the top three posts and primary responsibility for the 72-office banking network in Idaho. He had been named president in June, after serving six years as executive vice president.

Phelps, 61, started his climb toward the top when the statewide system bought out the then-independent First Security Bank of Twin Falls in 1965, while he was president of that institution. His look over the Magic Valley division then, and after heading both the eastern and southwestern regions, became executive vice president. Phelps will preside over Idaho's part in a decentralization and growth program, announced earlier by the bank's parent company, First Security Corp., which is based in Salt Lake City.

Comstock's retirement will end a 49-year career with First Security, which he began as a messenger in the Pocatello office. It also will end decades of bank leadership by his family.

His father, Ralph J. Comstock Sr., was president of the statewide bank from 1956 to 1962. Three years later, Comstock was installed to head operations, as president and chief executive officer. In 1977, he was elected chairman of the board and continued as the chief executive.

Comstock also is well-known throughout the state for his charitable activities and community involvement. A long list of awards and positions include: the Governor's Award in the Arts, given in 1981; a 1982 Presidential Achievement Award from Rotary International; the former presidency of the Idaho State Boise State University Foundation; and current chairmanship of St. Luke's Regional Medical Center in Boise. Comstock serves on an array of commercial business boards as well. In the banking industry, Comstock is past president of the Idaho Bankers Association, a past member of the American Banking Association's executive committee and a member of the regional advisory committee to the controller for the 13th national bank region.

He will remain a director of the First Security Corp. after his retirement. First Security has offices in 50 Idaho cities. Its parent, First Security Corp., has $4.8 billion in assets and employs close to 5,000 people in a number of subsidiaries. It has banking operations in Idaho, Utah and Wyoming.

On the move

Curtain up for new theater

TWIN FALLS — Interstate Amusement Inc. opened its new five-theater complex on Twin Falls' east side last week, capping a $450,000 expansion. The five-month project added two new theaters and rebuilt one of the original three, making room for 70 more seats. Called Twin Cinema 5, the 40,000-square-foot complex now can hold 1,630 movie-goers at one time, says manager Ron Harman. Three of the theaters feature stereo sound. The project also enlarged the lobby and paved three acres for parking.

Business leaders and movie-industry guests got a preview of the expansion at special showings Thursday. The official grand opening to the public was on Friday. Interstate Amusement, which is based at the complex, operates 16 theaters in Idaho and Wyoming, including all of the commercial screens in Twin Falls and Jerome. Its most recent acquisition was the Gooding Schubert Theater, purchased Nov. 15.

The corporation is owned by Roy Roper of Twin Falls and three partners in Montana. Repair shops in operation Glenns Ferry — Two new auto-repair shops have gone into business in Glenns Ferry. Glenns Ferry Transmission opened at 202 E. First Ave. on Nov. 1. Owner Jim Orr, who previously worked for John's Auto Electric, says the business specializes in radiator and transmission repairs. It also handles general car and truck repairs. Mid-City Automotive, at 219 N. Hancock Ave., offers auto tune-ups, lubrication and parts. Owned by former California resident Eugene Alonso, the business opened Oct. 24.

Efforts expand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States and Mexico have signed an agreement to expand their cooperation in the science and technology of agriculture and natural resources.

The agreement commits the neighboring nations to work together on tropical agriculture, crop production, foresting, animal health, soil conservation, seeds, forestry, pest control and nutrition.

The agreement was signed by John Block, United States secretary of agriculture, and by Horacio Garcia Aguilera, Mexico's minister of agriculture and water resources.

Minorities get their chance

DENVER (UPI) — The nation's minority business community would be guaranteed a share in developing the West's vast oil shale reserves under a proposal introduced Friday in the draft of a federal oil shale leasing bill.

Minority spokesman Clarke Watson, who insisted on the addition, called the action a start in the right direction, but was not strong enough.

"It's woefully inadequate at this point in time," Watson declared. "It seems to be overly broad. The record reflects the broader the legislation, the less likely things are to happen." The amendment requires the Interior secretary to take such action necessary to "insure the maximum practicable use of minority business enterprises" in developing shale resources.

Minorities get their chance

Watson wanted the amendment to cite specific rules, regulations and presidential citations that already had been adopted for affirmative action.

He also wanted it to make sure minority involvement would be in proportion to its population in the United States.

DeWitt John, chairman of the group drafting the bill and a top official in the Colorado Department of Natural Resources, reminded Watson the proposal still had to be reviewed by government, industry and environmental groups before a final version is sent to Congress next year for action.

Steelmaker reactivates plant facilities

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Bethlehem Steel officials said Friday they will reactivate two steel-making furnaces at the company's Sparrows Point plant, meaning the recall of about 200 laid-off workers. Plant General Manager John Roberts said one furnace in the No. 4 open-hearth shop will go on line Jan. 9, 1984, and the second one will start up Jan. 16. The entire No. 4 open-hearth shop was shutdown early last year due to poor business conditions. Roberts credited an increase in business for the furnace reopenings.

Many of West's wild areas may contain oil

Seismic survey crew count in U.S.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Almost two-thirds of the proposed and designated wilderness areas in 11 Western states may have the geologic characteristics necessary for petroleum, says a Department of Interior report.

However, U.S. Geological Survey Director Dr. Dallas Peck said Department of Interior policy does not allow leasing for oil and gas development within wilderness and wilderness study areas.

"The information in the new report can be used for background purposes only, because exploration is not allowed in present or potential wilderness areas," he said in a statement released on Thursday.

The 275-page report said about 46 million acres or almost two-thirds of the proposed and designated wilderness areas may have the geologic characteristics — such as adequate source beds, reservoir rocks and trapping structures — necessary for the occurrence of petroleum resources in varying amounts.

oil from these wilderness lands is estimated to range from 6 billion to 1.5 billion barrels with a mean estimate of 8 billion barrels. The undiscovered recoverable natural gas is estimated to range from 5.5 trillion to 16.6 trillion cubic feet with a mean estimate of 9.7 trillion cubic feet.

"Because of the lack of oil and gas exploration and the limited availability of site-specific geologic data, the study has been based primarily on what is currently known about regional geology as well as some extrapolation of that knowledge," Peck said.

Due to the lack of more data, the numbers in the report should be used as overall indicators rather than absolute conclusions as to the presence or absence or amount of reserves of oil and gas in a specific location, he said.

The report is the first systematic petroleum resource assessment to integrate the available geologic information of designated federal lands through a computer-based digital cartographic data system.

During the next several years, the USGS plans to use a similar system to complete the petroleum resource assessments of federal lands in Alaska and in other parts of the United States that are unassessed.

A companion out separate map has been published for each state to go with the report, "Petroleum Potential of Wilderness Lands in the Western United States."

The report is an initial assessment of the petroleum potential on the lands.

"While the study represents the best existing inventory of the petroleum potential of these wilderness lands, it is based on limited publicly available surface and subsurface information," Peck said. "Thus, conclusions cannot be made as to the presence or absence of oil and gas in a specific location or the amount of reserves on the basis of these assessments alone."

The report covers lands in Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

Hot gift item this Christmas

Buyers should pick phones carefully

By SYDNEY SHAW
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Shoppers buying telephones for Christmas gifts or for themselves should be on guard for mislabeling, false endorsements and the absence of warranties, a consumer group says.

"Phones are one of the hottest items next to the 'Cabbage Patch' dolls for Christmas," said Samuel Simon, director of the Telecommunications Research and Action Center. "All consumers can save money if they own their own phones. The $2-a-month saving, however, can be turned into a loss with a single bad purchase."

He said many phones do not indicate what kind of dialing system they use.

"A consumer might think they are getting a touch-tone phone when in reality it is a rotary 'pulse dial' telephone," Simon said. "The term 'pulse dial' means rotary, but because the phone has buttons, many consumers don't realize this."

"Tone phones will not work in a home that has pulse dialing service, but to connect with an alternative long-distance phone system such as MCI or Sprint, or to take advantage of new data services such as home banking and shopping, a customer must use the more expensive tone phone.

Some phones are described merely as "push-button," which is misleading, Simon said.

There are also phones, including the "Deco Phone," claim they have been government-approved, Simon said. Others, such as the "Excel" and "MCE," say they are approved by the Federal Communications Commission.

"These statements on the packages are just not true," he said. "Every telephone meets federal technical standards of compatibility and must be registered with the FCC, but registration is not approval. No U.S. government agency approves or evaluates telephones."

He said many phones have no instruction manuals, lack any kind of guarantee and come in packages that do not even indicate the name and address of the manufacturer.

"Consumers will have a hard time getting a refund if they are unable to contact the manufacturer. These phones may be less expensive, but consumers should think twice before buying a product that is not sufficiently labeled."

He advised shoppers to make sure they can return the phones to the place of purchase if they don't work, or exchange them if they are incompatible with the type of service at the recipient's home.

Airlines reportedly considering joint purchase

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Three major U.S. airlines may cooperate in an unprecedented joint order of up to 200 McDonnell Douglas or Boeing aircraft, a business publication has reported.

A copyright story in the St. Louis Business Journal's Dec. 12-18 issue says there are industry reports that American Airlines, Trans World Airlines and United Airlines could make a combined purchase of McDonnell Douglas's MD-80s or Seattle-based Boeing's 737-300s.

The Business Journal said that although spokesmen for the airlines declined comment on the reports, American Airlines President Robert Crandall reportedly told officers of jet engine manufacturer Rolls Royce that such a purchase "would make a lot of sense."

The purchase would benefit the financially troubled airlines by permitting them to buy fuel-efficient aircraft at a discount price, in the current buyer's market, the Business Journal said.

Aerospace analysts said a joint buy might cause the manufacturer to sell aircraft individually priced at $20 million to $25 million for less than $20 million a unit.

Such a purchase also could revive St. Louis-headquartered McDonnell Douglas's commercial aircraft operation at Long Beach, Calif. The firm recently cut back to production of one aircraft model, ceasing development of the MD-90 and MD-100.

"Unless the United Autoworkers strike still ongoing at Douglas's commercial facilities is settled soon, even the MD-80 program may be terminated," with Douglas withdrawing from jetline manufacturing entirely," said aerospace analyst Wolfgang Demisch, of The First Boston Corp. in New York.

customers, possibly because of fierce competition with new unit-train facilities along the Union Pacific Railroad line.

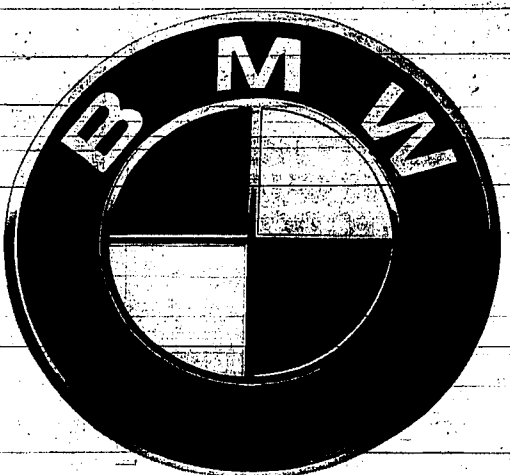

Other elevators and warehouses are running into the same problems in the current agricultural markets. Stretching dollars with new technology, adapting to new customer demands and consolidating operations are options that can't wait, Johnson says.

Bean Growers Warehouse Association, which has membership throughout the Magic Valley, operates six plants, with a total storage capacity for 550,000 hundredweight of beans and 1.1 million bushels of wheat.

Its current plants are at Twin Falls, Kimberly, Hazelton, Berger, east of Murtaugh and Jerome.

NOW YOU CAN BUY A BMW A LITTLE CLOSER TO HOME.

At the Bavarian Motor Works, it is our contention that extraordinary performance—from both car and dealer—is the only thing that makes an expensive car worth the money.

It is not surprising, then, that the appointment of a new Dealership is a rather special event.

Our goal is to provide service for BMW owners as efficient and reliable as the car itself: fast routine servicing, ample parts availability, accurate engine tuning and precise diagnosis of any impending problems.

If you are interested in a BMW, our newest dealer will be happy to arrange a thorough test drive at your convenience.

YEAR-END TAX PLANNING

(A Few Ideas)

Now is the time to do something to cut your 1983 tax bill because once December 31st rolls around, it will generally be too late. Consider some of these ideas.

The purchase of a personal computer may have some tax benefits. To the extent the computer is used for business or to produce additional income, you're entitled to investment credit and depreciation deductions. You may even choose to expense up to $5,000 of the cost of the business portion.

Installing a safe in your home to safe-guard stocks, bonds, and other investment assets allows you to deduct the cost of the safe over the year period.

Before the end of the year, collect clothing, books, toys, household goods, and other items around the house that are no longer used and donate them to a charitable organization. Get a receipt showing the valuation of the items donated, and you'll be able to take a charitable deduction on your 1983 tax return.

If you received a lump sum distribution from a qualified retirement plan, you can defer taxation on the distribution by rolling some or all of the funds into an IRA or another qualified plan within 60 days.

Keep track of the fees paid to banks or brokerage firms to set up or make your IRA account because they are deductible.

Do energy-saving installations before December 31st to qualify for the energy credit in 1983. Qualifying expenditures include storm doors and windows, insulation, and weatherstripping.

With elections coming up, consider political contributions before the end of the year. The credit is equal to 30% of your contribution with a maximum credit of $50 single and $100 filing joint.

Review your tax situation and the best ways to minimize your 1983 taxes with the C.P.A.'s at Seamons, Bancroft, Smith & Cook P.C.

Nation's sugar farmers go on the offensive

By SONJA HILLGREN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — American sugar farmers are taking the offensive. They are fighting a proposal to abolish sugar import quotas and to preserve a sugar price support program that will be under attack when Congress begins consideration of farm legislation next year.

There are those who would like to destroy the American sugar industry and our ability to produce," Horace Godfrey, a Washington sugar lobbyist, said at a news briefing.

Godfrey spoke to reporters to put his side of the story before congressional battles heat up over sugar policy which arouses strong emotions in Congress.

Godfrey singled out Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., as one of the chief opponents of the existing sugar program.

Several months ago, Downey introduced legislation to abolish sugar

U.S. uses more sweeteners, less sugar

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans used more than 1.5 billion pounds of sweeteners in 1982, up from 1.3 billion in 1981, according to a report by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Corn sweetener use could reach 1.5 billion pounds in 1983, up from 1.3 billion in 1982, according to the report.

Only when the Food and Drug Administration approved use of aspartame in soft drinks, all major soft drink manufacturers have used the artificial sugar in varying amounts.

Quotas, which limit the amount of imports in order to bolster U.S. sugar prices, Congress recessed for the year before hearings on the bill could be held by the House Ways and Means Committee on which Downey serves.

Agriculture Committee," which is regarded as captive of sugar farmers, the aide said.

Terminally ill boy, 4, visits tractor factory

WATERLOO, Iowa (UPI) — Workers at a John Deere tractor plant Friday welcomed a terminally ill Louisiana boy whose last wish is to see where tractors are built.

Special room and travel discounts were given to 4-year-old Will Vincent and his family so they could fly to Waterloo and tour the John Deere Tractor Works, The Lake Charles, La., community raised funds for the trip through a program called "Wishing Well."

Beth Vincent said her son became interested in John Deere equipment through his grandfather, a farmer.

"We live in a rural area with farms all around us," she said. "He's always loved to see tractors. He's pretty tired from the trip now, but he's real excited about seeing these tractors."

"Obviously, the quotas couldn't be eliminated totally" and price support loans should not be eliminated, said an aide to Downey.

He believed that American sugar prices too high above world prices.

"We wanted to draft a bill that would not be referred to the several times in recent years in the House and the battle to maintain the sugar program in 1983 law will be toughest there.

Sugar farmers will face more scrutiny of their program when Congress begins consideration of the 1985 farm bill.

Senator wants grain repository for Idaho

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, has urged federal officials to choose Aberdeen as the new home for the National Small Grain Collection, the country's largest repository for grain commodities.

McClure, in a letter to Agriculture Secretary John Block, noted that federal officials already have determined the present facility at Beltsville, Md., is inadequate to meet our future small grain research needs, and a new facility will have to be built within four years.

The national grain collection houses small grains and provides information about plant breeding and research to growers across the country.

McClure said two recent studies completed within the past two years have chosen Aberdeen as the most environmentally acceptable site of the locations recommended.

McClure said the University of Idaho has offered to construct the new facility in Aberdeen and lease it back to the federal government under a long-term agreement.

"The climate at Aberdeen is ideal for storage of the collection," McClure said in his letter.

"Given the lead time necessary to construct a new facility and given the widespread support, the cost savings, the convenience to the users and the ideal storage environment, I believe that action should be taken as soon as possible to relocate the National Small Grain Collection from Beltsville to Aberdeen, Idaho."

USSR buys more corn

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has bought 304,000 metric tons of American corn in its second purchase of U.S. grain announced this month.

The Soviets were active buyers of U.S. grain during September, but laid off during October and November. On Dec. 1, the Agriculture Department announced Moscow's purchase of 100,000 tons of U.S. corn.

The latest sale of corn, announced this past Tuesday by the department, raised Soviet purchases for the first year of the new five-year grain agreement to almost 4.93 million tons. Of that, 2.89 million tons are corn and the rest is wheat.

The Kremlin also has bought 400,000 tons of soybeans under the agreement, which requires a minimum annual purchase of 9 million tons of U.S. grain, or 8 million tons of grain and 500,000 tons of soybeans.

In wheat growing

Kansans lag, Briton says

By BETTY LUMAN
United Press International

TOPEKA, Kan. — An English farmer told his Kansas counterparts their wheat growing methods are from the Stone Age.

Oliver Walston of Thriplow Farms LTD in Cambridgeshire told members of the Kansas Farm Bureau their wheat farming practices were what British farmers were doing 10 years ago.

"When it comes to wheat production, ladies and gentlemen, you are in the Stone Age," said Walston, who runs a 3,000-acre farm. "You are 10 years behind me."

About six or seven years ago we in Europe went through a wheat revolution; you haven't even thought of it. If you were to do what we've done, your wheat production would rise dramatically."

Walston, a well-known farm journalist in Europe, said he had just completed his best harvest ever. His 1,200 acres of wheat yielded 83 bushels an acre, while his barley crop yielded 149 bushels per acre.

In the past harvest, Kansas yielded an average 42 bushels per acre. Grant County took top honors in the state with 64 bushels per acre.

Walston also told the Kansas farmers he is earning $5 a bushel because of government price supports compared to the price of U.S. wheat last month of $3.46 a bushel.

University, said European farmers now grow wheat intensively and "look at wheat the way a truck farmer looks at lettuce."

He said he spends a great deal more time and money on each of his acres of wheat than a Kansas farmer and applies more insecticides, fungicides, phosphates and nitrogen.

"My sprayer goes in the field eight to 10 times" between planting and harvest, Walston said. Kansas farmers in the audience said they may spray their wheat crop twice.

Walston said he would like to see Kansas wheat farmers experiment with the method for three years to see if it would work in the state, even though he admitted it may not make sense based on "the price you get and the climate you have."

"Why not try and beat the Europeans at their own game?" he said. At least one western Kansas wheat grower came up to Walston after his speech and said he was interested in the idea. The two men agreed to exchange letters on the subject.

The American farmer and European farmer are not competitors; but their countries' treasures are, Walston said, referring to various government crop programs and support systems.

One of the major problems farmers around the world face, he warned, is a growing gap between farmers and the rest of the population. Walston said farmers could not stay on the farm but must get involved.

Rare sparrow's future stake on Maine coast

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — The future of the rare grasshopper sparrow in Maine is at stake in a struggle between bird lovers and blueberry growers in the coastal town of Kennebunk.

The referee is the Pesticide Control Board, which must decide whether to continue to allow pesticide spraying on the Kennebunk blueberry barrens.

"It's rarer than the least tern or the bald eagle. It's inconceivable that we would let it die," said Peter Vickery, a wildlife specialist for the Massachusetts Audubon Society.

Vickery was one of several wildlife biologists who appeared Thursday before the Pesticide Control Board. They said spraying the blueberry barrens would drive the grasshopper sparrow away forever.

Each summer, about half a dozen pairs of the tiny brown sparrows, which make an odd, trilling chirp similar to that of a grasshopper, light upon the blueberry barrens in Kennebunk.

The biologists said the Kennebunk plains is the only suitable place in the state suited for the birds, which feed on grasshoppers, caterpillars, crickets and other bugs that thrive in open areas.

The board has given blueberry growers a "special dispensation" to spray the barrens with Velpar — a new herbicide that kills grasses and bushes that compete with blueberries for nutrients and growing space.

But the grasses and bushes also spawn grasshoppers and caterpillars, so the spraying threatens to ruin the habitats for the sparrows, said the biologists.

"We don't have the luxury of time," said Peter Cross, a wildlife specialist with the Inland Fisheries and Wildlife Department. "And with only six pairs, there is not much room for experiments. It is paramount that we have action this winter."

A few pairs of grasshopper sparrows are known to exist in New Hampshire and Massachusetts, but the only sizable colony left is on Martha's Vineyard off Cape Cod, officials said.
