GOP settles; budget setting begins

BOISE (AP) — The Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, stalled for two weeks by lawmakers' quibbles over revenue, will start working Monday on a $484 million fiscal 1985 state spending plan.

Things got off dead center Thursday when the Senate Republicans endorsed a $484 million figure that won't require any tax increases.

That spending level, which House Speaker Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, said he could support, tentatively includes $228 million for public schools, $111 million more than they received this fiscal year.

Gov. John Evans said he doesn't think a $484 million budget can make it through the

IDAHO LEGISLATURE 1984

Legislature, and said the proposed school funding level is inadequate. But he said if lawmakers dump a $484 million budget in his lap and then go home, he's not inclined to call a special legislative session as he did last year.

"If they're going to walk out and not fund state government, they'll have to face the electorate this fall," he said. Evans has asked lawmakers for a $560 million budget, with $243.7 million for public schools.

The key to getting the budget process rolling, again, was a Republican decision in the Senate to delay action on a bill raising pay for teachers and administrators, until the House enacts legislation to raise the $20.3 million it will cost.

The pay hike bill, passed by the House and now in a Senate committee, will not be included in the $484 million budget, Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, said.

"What we're doing is trying to get the process moving," Risch said. "Today is the 60th legislative day."

Senate Minority Leader Kermit Klebert, D-Hope, called $484 million unrealistic.

Klebert said Democrats are looking at a total state spending package of $535 million—$540 million, and at $235 million for public schools.

Senate David Little, R-Emmett, co-chairman of JFAC, said that none of the tentative budget figures the committee is looking at, including the $228 million figure for public schools, is etched in stone.

But Rep. Steve Antoine, R-Rupert, chairman, said he'll try again today to get something out to the full House.

Four measures will be presented to the committee on Friday, he said.

Three raise the state sales tax. One, offered by Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, repeals the job credit for businesses, revises the investment tax credit, and imposes a minimum income tax on individuals and corporations.

While Antoine said that proposal may have the best chance of making it out of committee, he said it would raise only about $18 million, short of the amount needed to finance the kind of education spending lawmakers claim the public is demanding.

Senate clears Swan Falls bill

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY Times-News Capital Bureau

BOISE — A bill that would remove an estimated 5,000 water users from Idaho Power's lawsuit over the Swan Falls water-right controversy was approved by the Senate, 21-13, on Thursday.

But without an acceptable "subordination" plan — to protect the interests of other existing or potential water users — Gov. John Evans says the measure is likely to be vetoed.

The bill, written by Idaho Power, would remove the utility from the threat of action by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission for failing to protect its water rights at Swan Falls. After a 1982 Idaho Supreme Court ruling, Idaho Power filed suit against the holders of 7,300 water rights. The utility said the suit in light of the court ruling, it was obligated to show it was defending its water rights.

Under the bill passed Thursday, Idaho Power would drop 5,000 defendants from the suit. In exchange, it would be protected from accusations that it was failing to defend its water rights.

Sen. William Ringert, R-Boise, who sponsored the bill, said that although it "leaves 4,000 people without cer-

SEN. JOHN PEAVEY

Bill would free 'hostages' on the status of their water, the bill is still needed to clear up uncertainty surrounding the 5,000 owners.

Ringert, an attorney who works extensively on water issues, said the 1982 Supreme Court decision that determined that Idaho Power's Swan Falls water right was not "second" to upstream use by irrigators was "a shock to everyone concerned." And he referred to an Idaho Power Co. brochure from 1964 that promised "millions of acres away from the magic of irrigation," as proof that the utility one time was encouraging farmers to use more Snake River water.

Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, said passage of the bill would mean the 5,000 water users would no longer "be treated as hostages."

The Swan Falls controversy began when Peavey and others filed a complaint with the PUC, alleging the company's increasing electrical rates were being caused by a loss of hydroelectric generating capacity — caused by farmers using the water, instead of Idaho Power.

Peavey contends subordination is not in the best interests of electrical customers, economic growth or existing irrigators.

But Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, who led the opposition to the bill, said he did so because the company's lawsuit "is probably more bluff than really good substance," and because the company is seeking "legislative recognition" of a water right that might not otherwise be recognized in a court.

Noh also questioned whether the company would observe agreements to subordinate its water rights at other hydroelectric facilities, in particular its Hells Canyon complex.

In addition, he said other proposed legislation would ensure subordination of those facilities and at the same time, would enact the provisions of the Idaho Power-authored bill.

However, the Senate's president pro tem, James Risch, R-Boise, called the proposal "valid, fair and equitable. It takes care of the people who have spent the money" to develop the lands.

But "the chief executive (Gov. Evans) will probably veto this anyway," Risch said.

Later, Evans confirmed Risch's comments. "I think it's very important that the people of Idaho have passage of a subordination bill," Evans said in an interview Thursday afternoon.

Like Noh, Evans supports legislation that would combine the provisions of the Idaho Power-authored measure with provisions that would subordinate the company's Swan Falls water right.

Lawmakers delay Meese confirmation

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Senate committee agreed Thursday to delay for one week the vote on Edwin Meese III's nomination as attorney general after new questions were raised about his role in the 1980 Reagan presidential campaign's use of documents from the Jimmy Carter re-election campaign.

"There is no evidence he was very, very much involved in that," Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, told a stormy session of the Judiciary Committee. Metzenbaum "might like to be heard" that he had no involvement in the campaign concerning the Carter documents," he said. Following the committee's decision, a spokesman for the committee chairman said was unrelated to Metzenbaum's charges — Meese repeated earlier denials of involvement in the transfer of Carter materials.

"I have no knowledge of any effort by the 1980 Reagan-Bush presidential campaign... to obtain Carter documents, Meese said in a letter to the committee that he asked him for an explanation.

Metzenbaum, Meese's chief opponent on the committee, Wednesday released a document from the re-election campaign of former President Carter that was marked to the attention of Meese, then a top Reagan campaign official.

Despite Republican-held control Committee rejects military aid request

By ROBERT PARRY The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Republican-controlled Senate Appropriations Committee Thursday rejected President Reagan's emergency request for $21 million in aid to Central American rebels.

On a 12-11 vote, the committee defeated an amendment by Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, to provide the money for the rebels battling the leftist Nicaraguan government.

After its vote, the committee postponed until Tuesday action on Reagan's companion proposal for $83 million in emergency military aid for El Salvador's beleaguered army, which is struggling against Marxist insurgents.

The administration wanted to attach the emergency aid request to two unrelated bills. The Appropriations Committee approved $200 million for energy assistance for poor people after rejecting the amendment that contained the aid package for Nicaragua rebels. Reagan proposed linking the $83 million for El Salvador to a bill that would send $150 million in emergency food relief to Africa.

Despite the defeat, the administration could try to revive the $21 million proposal when the bill reaches the Senate floor.

Robert Silms, a White House spokesman, said the administration was "disappointed" with the committee's action. He had no further comment.

During the Senate committee's debate, chairman Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., opposed the administration's approach, claiming the low-income energy assistance bill would be jeopardized if the money for the Nicaraguan covert operations were included.

Hatfield said that a number of states, including Oregon, had exhausted their energy assistance money.

Two other Republicans, Sens. Warren Rudman of New Hampshire and Lowell P. Weicker Jr. of Connecticut, also broke with the president. Rudman said he feared the amendment would jeopardize the energy assistance bill.

"I'm not sure if we're engaging in a game of chicken or blink (with the Democratic-controlled House) and we're not going to get a blink," Rudman said. "There are people in my state who are cold. Maybe that's not significant to people from California, but it is important to people in New Hampshire."

Stevens said there was "no alternative" but to approve the money as part of the energy assistance bill because otherwise, legislative action on the proposal would not occur until June, when the CIA would run out of money for the rebels.

Stevens, the majority whip, said he was personally asked to submit the amendment by Reagan.

Both the energy assistance bill and the food aid bill cleared the House Tuesday with strong Democratic support and administration strategists believed that by attaching the new military aid as riders, Reagan could overcome House opposition and dispatch the aid quickly.

But earlier Thursday, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. had denounced the president's military aid proposal as a "backdoor approach" to obtaining the money.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the administration settled on the maneuver after exploring various options for quickly resupplying Salvadoran government forces who are battling leftist guerrillas.

Federal board blames owner for airline crash near Hailey

By DAVE LEWIS Times-News Staff

HAILEY — The National Transportation Safety Board today blamed the owner of a Sierra Pacific and the Federal Aviation Administration were at fault for the crash last winter near Hailey of an aircraft that was under contract to Transwestern Airlines.

In a probable cause investigation concluded this week, the NTSB found that Sierra Pacific, which owned the plane that Transwestern was leasing, had used an improper bolt in the plane's control system, which caused the plane to go out of control.

The board also found that the FAA failed to detect an error in the maintenance and inspection procedures used by Sierra Pacific, says Ira Furman, a spokesman for the NTSB, which spent more than a year investigating the Feb. 15, 1983, crash.

"The principal issue is the people who do the maintenance work are supposed to be separate from the people who do the inspection work," Furman said Thursday. In the case of Sierra Pacific, the same people who maintain the plane also inspected it, Furman said, and the FAA failed to notice this error.

"The FAA did not detect that which they should have," he said. The plane, a DeHavilland DHC-6 "Twin Otter," crashed on Idaho 75 between Bellevue and Hailey, after going out of control on its approach to Friedman Memorial Airport.

Five of the plane's six passengers and its pilot and co-pilot were injured in the crash. Two of the victims have filed lawsuits over the accident.

Although the NTSB found an error in Sierra Pacific's maintenance and inspection procedures, the company's president disagrees with the finding.

FAA rules allow the same people to maintain and inspect their own work, says Gar Thorndurk, the president of Sierra Pacific. "That's perfectly permissible by FAA standards," Thorndurk said Thursday. "I think they're wrong on that."

As for the wrong bolt being put into the plane's elevator system, Thorndurk said, "We'd like to know ourselves where the fault lies." Despite the findings of the board, Thorndurk says the establishment of blame is not. "It's an opinion they have on a probable cause," he said. "Of course, that's not a conviction."

A field report conducted immediately following the crash stated that the wrong bolt was used to attach the plane's control rod to the torque tube in the plane's elevator system.

The bolt also was unsecured, contrary to the manufacturer's instructions, the field report states.

The NTSB report says the bolt came loose during flight. The result was a downward pitch in the nose of the aircraft, which made it impossible to reach the landing strip.

The NTSB report says the bolt came loose during flight. The result was a downward pitch in the nose of the aircraft, which made it impossible to reach the landing strip.

A hearing on a motion to have the two suits heard at the same time is scheduled to be held today before Fifth District Judge Douglas D. Kramer in Hailey. Currently, Ryan's lawsuit is scheduled for trial on Sept. 17.

Findings indicate that an improper bolt gave way causing this Feb. 15, 1983 crash

Pump fails; workers asphyxiate

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A gasoline-powered water pump failed at a highway construction site Thursday, filling a large sewer pipe with toxic carbon monoxide gas that killed two workers, authorities said. At least 25 other workers and firefighters were overcome by the fumes and heat exhaustion. Two workers entered the large-diameter sewer pipe at the Papago Freeway construction site to check on a pump being used to remove standing water from the pipe, said Gordon Routley, fire protection engineer. The pump apparently had not been checked for a couple of days and it apparently malfunctioned, filling the 200- to 300-foot-long pipe with carbon monoxide, Routley said.

Defects anger auto consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) — An automobile consumer group accused the government Thursday of "concealing dozens of dangerous defects" by conducting informal, private inquiries into auto safety complaints instead of beginning public investigations. "The Center for Auto Safety said that three-fourths of the complaint cases received by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration are being handled informally and, thereby, without an announcement that a hazard may exist. . . . Is that people continue to drive cars that may be ticking time bombs," Clarence Dilow, executive director of the consumer group, wrote NHTSA administrator Diane Steed.

Auto workers end convention

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers union ended a three-day convention Thursday with leadership pledges to demand higher pay and pension increases this summer in contract bargaining with General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. The final two days brought two discordant floor fights — from black-Michigan members who failed to join the consolidation of several districts to a group seeking platform language spelling out a demand of $18,000 yearly pensions from the big automakers. . . . But UAW President Owen Bieber declared after adjournment that unity was achieved with an "upbeat convention."

Missile vehicles join in convoy

GREENHAM COMMON, England (AP) — A convoy of cruise missile vehicles left the U.S. Air Force base at Greenham Common early today on a deployment exercise, and will be carrying live missiles, the Defense Ministry reported. . . . It is the first reported deployment exercise outside the base 50 miles west of London, which has been the scene of numerous demonstrations since U.S.-built nuclear cruise missiles began arriving there last Nov. 14.

or pump water that might further reduce the flow of water at Idaho Power's Swan Falls power plant. New users would not be required to compensate the company for a resulting loss of generating capacity under a subordination policy. The subordination proposal supported by Evans was passed by the House on Monday, by a 37-33 vote. It was then the subject of a six-hour public hearing Wednesday before the Senate Resources and Environment Committee, which Noh chairs. But members of that committee and the bill's supporters say that plan is in trouble and in need of amendments if it is to gain passage in the Senate.

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — One of six defendants in a barroom gang rape case threatened to "kill" a bartender if he told police "It was just me alone" who attacked a woman on a pool table, a witness testified Thursday. Valdimiro Pacheco, a customer in Big Dan's bar in New Bedford on March 6, 1983, said he heard Daniel Silvia make the warning to bartender Carlos Machado. "I heard him say, 'Don't tell them it was just me alone or I'll kill you,'" Pacheco testified. He said he was sitting at the bar when he saw a group of laughing men hold a crying, struggling young woman down on a pool table. He said Silvia was on top of the woman while at least one other man tried to force her to perform oral sex. "I heard" the sound of crying, and heard her talking to the men," Pacheco, a Portuguese immigrant, testified through an interpreter. "I saw her talking to the others and try to get up." Pacheco said when the woman struggled to free herself, another man "look her arm" and "was talking to her." Then he tried to force the woman to have oral sex. The witness said another man interrupted his pants as he talked to the woman. Pacheco said the man then shoved the woman's leg. He said he turned to the bartender and asked: "You let that go on in here? I said, 'What you like them to do that to your daughter?'" Earlier Thursday, jurors heard testimony that the woman told an emergency room doctor she had been raped by 14 men.

New remap plan introduced

BOISE (AP) — An Idaho House committee wants state representatives to be elected under one districting plan and senators under another.

That proposal, the newest in Idaho's reapportionment controversy, was introduced by the House State Affairs Committee Thursday.

The plan would establish 36 House districts. But the Senate would be left with a district court plan, popularly called "A-B," that establishes 42 districts.

Under the present system, declared unconstitutional by the Idaho Supreme Court because counties are divided, voters elect one senator and two representatives from each of 35 districts.

House Minority Leader Mel Hammond, D-Rexburg, called the new plan "ingenious."

Rep. Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, said attorneys have determined there are no legal problems with the strategy. Little said state-with-constitutions-like Idaho's have used dual districting successfully.

He said the resolution arose from a bipartisan effort that essentially mirrors a reapportionment bill the Senate defeated last week.

The Senate's action left Idaho with the court-ordered reapportionment plan that would add seven seats in the Senate and 14 in the House. But legislators have authorized spending money to take the reapportionment issue to federal court.

The proposal that Little unveiled on Thursday, to the apparent surprise of some committee members, didn't get the panel's approval without clearing a few hurdles.

Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, opposed that amendment on grounds he will suffer a political setback merely to benefit Horseshoe.

The measure also drew criticism because it would establish a district stretching from New Meadows to the Canadian border. Rep. Carl Braun, D-Orofino, said the cost-of-running-for-election-in-a-district-that-size-is prohibitive.

Stiff standard may spur dropouts

BOISE (AP) — Stricter mandatory attendance requirements to be imposed this fall at Idaho high schools, intended to limit intrusions on academic work, may encourage students to simply quit school, a member of the state Board of Education says.

"I'm afraid what's going to happen is what's already happening," Cheryl Hymas said. "We're just increasing the drop-out rate."

On Thursday, the board voted to require elementary schools throughout the state to develop mandatory attendance requirements for their pupils as well.

But that new regulation, strongly backed by educators across the state, does not outline any minimum attendance requirement as the high school rule does. It leaves those details up to local officials, many of whom already have some sort of attendance policy in effect.

But beginning next fall, high school students will be denied credit if they miss more than 10 percent of their classes. Currently, they can still get credit if they miss 15 percent.

Mrs. Hymas said she has already heard of incidents where students missing more than the allowable number of classes under the current policy have just decided to drop out of school and school officials have effectively done nothing to stop that.

Relative responsibility law panned

BOISE (AP) — A state Senate committee could vote Monday on legislation repealing a new law that opponents say discriminates against the disabled.

The Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee took testimony Thursday on the bill, which would repeal the state's five-month-old Relative Responsibility Act.

The act requires parents, spouses and children of Medicaid recipients in nursing homes to help pay the cost of care.

Among those covered by the bill's requirements are the parents of permanently disabled children over the age of 18 who reside in licensed nursing homes.

Those children include residents of the Idaho State School and Hospital in Nampa, a facility treating the mentally disabled.

When the state Department of Health and Welfare urged passage of the bill last year, supporters said that it was only right that family members be financially responsible for each other.

The department said the new law would mean an extra $160,000 for the department annually, which, when combined with federal matching funds, would mean an extra $480,000 in Medicaid funds for Idaho.

Crop liens considered

BOISE (AP) — Farmers who don't pay their bills for fertilizers and pesticides could "free" liens against their crops under a bill the Idaho House has passed.

Representatives cast a 44-24 vote after heavy debate on Thursday to send the measure to the Senate.

Rep. Noy Brackett, R-Twin Falls, said $200 million worth of fertilizer was sold in Idaho last year, and dealers had trouble collecting about 15 percent of that.

He said he opposed the bill partly because he thinks high-pressure salesmen prey on farmers who don't know whether they will be able to pay their bills.

Bills to reverse sexism returned

BOISE (AP) — Two bills removing discriminatory language from various Idaho laws have been sent back to committee for more work, following the defeat of one measure.

The Idaho Senate agreed to return the bills to the Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee on Thursday.

Sen. Roger Fairchild, R-Fruitland, chairman, said there was no opposition to the bills when they were considered in his committee.

But after they reached the Senate floor, he said, opposition surfaced.

He asked that the bills be returned to committee "to give opponents a chance to present their opinion."

The committee is working on changes in the bills to make them more acceptable to the full Legislature.

One bill makes simple language changes in various sections of the law, replacing the word "men" with the word "people," for instance.

The other bill makes more substantive changes, deleting language in some Idaho property law that gave women a more protected legal status than men.

That bill was defeated on Wednesday. Some opponents said the changes were unnecessary in light of more recent law and court rulings.

Weatherizing bill approved

BOISE (AP) — A bill to provide a state tax deduction for people who weatherize their homes under incentive programs offered by state-regulated utilities has passed the Idaho House.

The measure cleared the House on a 67-1 vote Thursday and advanced to the Senate.

The deduction issue arose after Idaho Power Co. offered interest-free loans for its customers to improve the heating efficiency of their homes.

Idaho Power gave customers the option of paying 30 percent of the loan promptly, and said that in return, the company would forgive the remaining 70 percent.

The Idaho Tax Commission announced the 70 percent forgiven amount as taxable income.

The Internal Revenue Service has a similar tax-liability question under consideration and is expected to make a ruling this summer.

School elections could get strict

BOISE (AP) — Legislation toughening the penalties for casting multiple ballots in school district elections has won final legislative approval in the Idaho Senate.

The Senate approved the measure 34-0 on Thursday and sent it to the governor.

The bill provides the same sanctions for fraudulent voting in school elections as apply to general elections under the Idaho Penal Code.

The state Department of Education had requested the legislation.

Last year, a reporter for the North Idaho Press in Wallace cast multiple ballots in a school bond election as part of a reporting effort to prove the system could be abused.

The multiple ballots were discovered, and legal action was instituted against the newspaper.

But the charges were dismissed after a magistrate ruled that the Idaho registration law didn't apply to a school election.

State might explore delegating authority

There is an oft-stated dictum of Republican politics that the government that functions best is that which is closest to the people. One of the prime objectives of the Reagan administration is to return control of many aspects of government, from finances to regulation, to the states.

You might guess that conservative states would follow suit, passing authority to local units of government where possible. But in Idaho, you'd be wrong.

The state ranks 50th in the degree of discretionary authority the Legislature grants to county and city government.

That dead-last ranking has bothered many local government authorities over the years.

But it is routinely defended by legislators who say their constituents don't want them to share authority — particularly the power to tax — extensively with cities, counties and school districts. The various taxing initiatives we've seen over the years may reflect, at least in part, that concern.

Still, a real case can be made for expansion of local authority. Except in a few narrowly defined "resort" communities, which can tax certain services like motels, local units of government are essentially powerless to provide for their own level of services.

A good example is the indigent medical-care area, where the costs have been dumped directly back on the counties. These, in turn, have no revenue source to turn to except the much-maligned property tax.

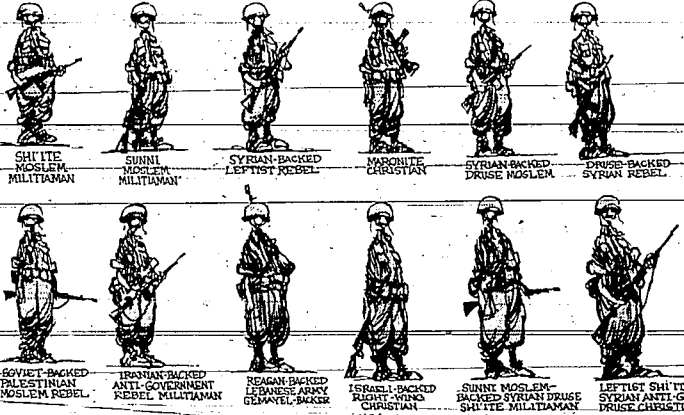

City and county government have tried again this year to get the Legislature to designate a part of any sales tax increase for local units, but that approach seems to be again headed for defeat.

We think the Legislature should explore these issues more seriously. A interim study committee, for example, could look at ways in which the state could reasonably delegate authority without giving up essential powers best reserved for the state. Such a committee might then make recommendations to the full Legislature.

A state that is willing to explore controversial subjects like consolidation of school districts and lottery revenue bills should be willing to explore how and under what conditions its own power can be delegated to more local levels of government.

Moynihan explains it for Democrats

WASHINGTON — The middle essay in Pat Moynihan's new book, "Loyalties," should be read by all Democrats. It especially should be read by — or, if necessary (they are awfully busy), read to — Walter Mondale and Gary Hart. It explains much about why the last Democratic administration was the first Democratic administration in this century to be repudiated in a reelection.

On March 1, 1980, Carter's U.N. Ambassador voted in the Security Council for a vicious anti-Israel resolution proclaiming Israel guilty of "flagrant violation" of the Fourth Geneva Convention. That Convention is a codification of Nazi crimes in occupied territories, especially Poland. Israel is the only nation ever found guilty of violating it. In an editorial entitled "Joining the Jackals," the Washington Post described the vote as "the essential Carter." Moynihan, who agrees, writes:

"The Carter people — some of them — left Washington convinced, and proclaiming, that defeat in the Middle East was brought about by 'unrealistic incompetence at the U.S. Mission to the United Nations and the inability of the secretary of state to control the mission. What they did not proclaim and only dimly understood was that they themselves had put in place the ideas that helped bring them down."

The Carter administration adored the United Nations precisely because it is dominated by Third World nations who believe, as so many Carter people did, that the United States is a defender of an intolerable status quo in the world. This admiration was one of the few constants in a rudderless administration.

On Dec. 15, 1980, as Carter and his people were packing, the General Assembly passed the obscenely anti-Israel and, in some cases, anti-Semitic resolutions. One repudiated Resolution 242 which, since 1967, has been the single international acknowledgement of Israel's right to exist. No U.S. official spoke on Israel's behalf. Moynihan believes the Carter policy of ostensible humility rested on a peculiar arrogance: the belief that the behavior of other nations is primarily responsive to U.S. behavior when U.S. behavior is morally beautiful. A few other Democrats feel as he does. New York's Mayor Edward Koch says too many prominent Democrats express "the political equivalent of Christian Science: If we think pure thoughts, the bad things will go away."

Serious Democrats, Koch says, served on and endorsed the report of the Kissinger Commission on Central America. It called for much more economic aid, some more military aid and government efforts for human rights. But not one presidential candidate endorsed it, most oppose it. Koch asks: Do Democrats really think the insurgents in El Salvador would be more considerate of human rights than the democratically elected government the insurgents are trying to overthrow?

Regarding Lebanon, Koch quotes the liberal New Republic: Democrats "set up a drumbeat of criticism that encouraged Syria to press its advantages at every turn." Democrats, he says, do not seem to understand "that our country has some shrewd and brutal adversaries out there in the world, and that no matter how plausibly we are they won't leave us alone."

The New Republic notes that the Democratic candidates "have spent much of this campaign furnishing adversaries (of the United States) with lists of all the places in which the United States would not intervene if one of them were elected and from which it would withdraw." Neither Hart nor Mondale nor Glenn seems willing to clearly affirm the proposition on which U.S. policy has rested for nearly 40 years: that the United States would respond to a Soviet attack on Europe as if it were an attack on U.S. territory. The New Republic notes that no U.S. soldier will be put ashore in the proposition on which U.S. policy has rested for nearly 40 years: that the United States would respond to a Soviet attack on Europe as if it were an attack on U.S. territory. The New Republic notes that no U.S. soldier will be put ashore in the proposition on which U.S. policy has rested for nearly 40 years: that the United States would respond to a Soviet attack on Europe as if it were an attack on U.S. territory.

Gary Hart has been especially extreme, assuring adversaries that no U.S. soldier will be put ashore in the Persian Gulf region, no matter what, and calling for an end to U.S. military aid to El Salvador, which would mean a swift communist conquest. Hart has sought to blur his McGovernite past and perhaps his McGovernite present by advocating "reforms" for a "leaner" military. But what would be the use of leaness if his foreign policy would allow no role for military power? "I fear," writes Moynihan, "that so long as the ideas underlying the Carter administration's U.N. policy are dominant within the Democratic Party, Democrats will be out of power — and rightly so." The evidence of the campaign so far is that whoever the Democrats nominate will, like Carter, regard foreign policy as an arena for striking ineffectual moral poses.

George Will writes for The Washington Post.

Kitty Genovese, New Bedford case touch a public nerve

BOSTON — It is just 20 years since Kitty Genovese became one of the few victims of crime we remember by name.

On March 13, 1964, this young woman was stabbed repeatedly near her Queens, N. Y., home. That night, 38 people heard her screams for help, but not one called the police until she was dead.

The chilling anniversary of her death occurs just as the New Bedford rape case has come to trial. There, a woman has testified that she was held down on a pool table in a bar named Big Dan's and raped while others watched and observed.

Both of these cases in their own time have focused a sensitive public nerve about callousness as well as crime. The classic line from the Kitty Genovese case was from a witness: "I didn't want to get involved."

The memorable line in the alleged barroom rape was the reported cheer: "Go for it." In neither instance were all the bystanders as uncaring as we may have believed at first. The attacks on Kitty Genovese were stopped twice by yells from windows. At least one of the men in Big Dan's, the bartender, says that he tried to contact the police when he sensed trouble.

But what gives public attention to these and dozens of similar tales of violence are the crimes of omission — Bad Samaritans, if you will. We are profoundly disturbed by the idea that one human being can watch another being hurt without helping. It makes us all feel more vulnerable, isolated, alone.

In the years since Kitty Genovese's murder, social scientists have learned a great deal about the "bystander effect." They've learned that the willingness to intervene depends on a number of subtle factors beyond fear. It turns out that people are less likely to help if they are in a crowd of bystanders than if they are the only one. Their sense of responsibility is diffused. If the others aren't helping, they begin to reinterpret what they are seeing.

People are also more passive in urban neighborhoods or crowded city spots where they suffer from "excessive overload" and simply turn off. They rarely get involved if they believe that the victim knows the assailant. This is especially true if the crime being witnessed is, as alleged in both these cases, a rape or attempted rape.

But the irony is that Bad Samaritans are not comfortable with their apathy. In many crimes, says Dr. Charles Kurtz, a psychologist at North Carolina State who has done some of this research, "they are not just callously viewing the situation. I'm quite sure that bystanders are going through tremendous internal conflict. But they can't bring themselves to do anything."

We can't prove that there are fewer cases of bystander apathy today than 20 years ago. But we do know that the public acceptance of "not getting involved" has practically disappeared. Indeed, most of us have come to favor a law that would require bystanders to help.

Harold Takooshian, who has organized a Kitty Genovese memorial conference at Fordham University on March 10, says that after the Genovese murder, 75 percent of those polled still thought that intervention should be left to one's own conscience. But by the time he repeated the survey last year after the New Bedford case, 85 percent agreed that a person should be required to help, or at least phone the police, or face a fine or jail sentence.

There are already many such "duty to rescue" laws in countries like France, West Germany and the Soviet Union. But only three states (Vermont, Rhode Island and Minnesota) have adopted a model bystander law that explicitly states a citizen's "duty to rescue" a victim under certain conditions — when, for example, the bystander is not in danger himself.

Perhaps we have become more sensitive to victims or simply more conscious of the social effect of apathy in the face of a criminal. As Dr. R. Ross Stotland, of Penn State University, says, the Bad Samaritan gives a message to the criminal "to go ahead, that it's easy."

Stotland says, "There's a delicate balance between social control and criminal behavior. Only as people get involved do we preserve social control."

Any "duty-to-help" law is largely symbolic. Why do we have to compel one person to help another three decades ago? The law would show public support for the ethical instincts to help, the belief that people have responsibility to each other. It would be, finally, a statement that was missing the night of Kitty Genovese's death: We want to get involved.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Letters/Too much firepower in possession of both sides for safe world

Settle disputes with reason — As of 1981, the United States and the Soviet Union possessed 50,000 nuclear weapons. With the recent deployment of the short-range missiles in Europe, we now have thousands more. This is more than enough firepower to destroy every city on earth every 15 minutes.

The problem is that nuclear weapons have become much more dangerous, and have multiplied in numbers, while our judgment has not become much wiser, our ability to get along with the Soviet Union, and their will to us, has not increased with our arsenals. The Army race is clearly not improving our national security, because the more it proceeds, the more insecure we feel.

We countries are driven by fear and a mutual distrust bordering on the pathological are into a suicidal strategy called, in the words of the Pentagon, for "mutual assured destruction" (MAD) as the best deterrent to war.

If we are to survive, we must accept personal responsibility for war and peace. It is time to stop pushing the button. International disputes must now be settled by reason — not with weapons. As President Dwight D. Eisenhower stated, "I like to believe that people in the long run are going to do more to promote peace than are governments. I think that people will peace so much that one of these days governments had better get out of their way and let them have it.

Pendulum will swing back

We hear a great deal of talk about freedom but not too much talk about justice. We have so much freedom in our country, the crooks come here from all over the world. Here, they have a real heaven and are even allowed to have guns to help them in their dirty work.

In most cases, it is always the victim that is put on trial, providing they are still alive. Very seldom does the criminal have to take the stand. Even if the defense attorney "knows" his party is guilty, he does everything in his power to keep his client free.

It was "justice" that Jesus wanted for his people, when he said, "Woe unto you also, ye lawyers, for ye take men with burdens grievous to be borne."

As for the school prayer issue, I feel it is best to let it run its course. For instance, take the unions. The more people fought them the stronger they became until eventually the unions are starting to destroy themselves.

So it was also with religion in Russia. At one time, practically everyone depended on religion for their needs, and now you see what has happened to religion in that country.

It is a known fact whenever a pendulum swings too far one way, if you let it be, it will usually come back by itself.

Single faint hope remains

An open letter to Nolan Victor

As regards to your letter to The Times-News concerning education, you make some good points. Education does not belong in the hands of professional educators and bureaucrats in white towers far off in the Boise and DC funny farms. Rather it belongs in the hands of local corporate school boards and parents, using monies charged to the users of the service (parents of children).

Still there are some serious flaws in your arguments. You are accepting the premises laid down by your adversaries as legitimate. That will either corrupt your ideals or render you otherwise ineffective. For example, to argue "whether merit pay" is better the more fundamental question of the right of government to take from you at the point of a gun, those monies in the first place. For instance, to argue that "we ought to make a law" belies the question of the purpose of law.

In the first place, it seems politicians and elected officials can't resist the temptation to play fast and loose with the rules if they aren't being watched. Does it never occur to them to repeat laws or simply do nothing? To let people take care of their own individual problems? To let freedom have a free hand to be free?

You would do well, Nolan, to take the time to study "Atlas Shrugged" written many years ago to a generation too secure in their own ignorance to appreciate its prophecy. Ayn Rand fortells the fall of capitalism and with it free anything. The increased desire for security and protection, the lessened sense of self-worth and personal sovereignty inevitably lead to state guardianship...our governments of all of the above.

Our school systems but reflect the desires for protection, security and personal integrity in the classroom, not freely worked for but "freely" dishied out.

From each according to his ability, to each according to his need." That's a nice sounding Christian ethic, don't you think, Nolan? Yet when we as a society take what must be its very nature to be free, and attempt to impose it at the point of a (polite) gun, it transforms itself into the most heinous and subtle of evils. Well meaning but foolish people, are slowly, imperceptibly corrupted by the power of holding the gun, the power to make myriad laws. The result is that educational budgets are discussed which would have been laughed out of court three decades ago.

We have but two viable options, Nolan, aside from writing letters. Have you considered that of each dollar of wealth that you create 40 cents is taken to finance that your destruction? Or do you choose to contribute to your own destruction? Once we were a republic. Those days are sadly gone, never to return. In this age of instant communication can a true democracy survive? How much trust do we have in our fellowmen? The answer does not come easily. Yet we have no other choice. Hell will freeze solid before grand and pompous legislators will act on the most obvious of necessities.

Having long lain in a dark and dusty corner of the Constitution, the local initiative. Farther beyond the reach of the well-paid special interests. The setting of policy in the hands of the people. The details of policy in the hands of the legislature. I believe it is our last faint hope as a free nation.

Whatever the future holds, it is a timeless truth that we will "enjoy" the kind of education and the level of freedom that we deserve. Our present system of education is abysmally inefficient. Our present level of freedom is at an all-time low. Is that what you deserve?

Soviets challenged to new arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Edward L. Rowyn, the chief American negotiator for strategic weapons talks, challenged the Soviet Union on Thursday to set a date for returning to the Geneva arms talks, a step that other U.S. officials said was unlikely anytime soon.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger told reporters the Reagan administration "hasn't had the slightest indication" that the Soviets want to resume the two sets of suspended talks on any basis, either separately or merged.

Paul Nitze, chief U.S. negotiator for the separate talks on curbing medium-range missiles in Europe, said the Soviets probably would not return to the bargaining table in Geneva, Switzerland, before the U.S. presidential election.

Weinberger said that if the talks resume, the United States might agree to each side having 200 to 300 nuclear weapons in Europe. It was the first time a senior administration official has publicly put a number on the total number of weapons that might be part of any interim agreement.

The administration has proposed a "zero-zero" option which would cancel NATO's planned installation of new Pershing 2 and cruise missiles if the Soviets dismantle their new SS-20 medium-range missiles targeted on Western Europe.

Jobless seek benefit funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 346,000 unemployed Americans sought for the first time to get jobless benefit checks in the week ended Feb. 25, about 7,000 fewer than the total filing such applications in the preceding week, the government said Thursday.

On the eve of the Bureau of Labor Statistics' release of the national unemployment rate for February, the Employment and Training Administration also reported a sharp drop in the number of jobless workers receiving regular state-paid benefits.

The agency said that in the week ended Feb. 18, when figures were adjusted for seasonal variations, 2,436,000 unemployed Americans were drawing basic, state-paid benefits, usually 26 weeks in duration, down 127,000 from the previous week, based on figures adjusted for seasonal factors.

Man ignites wife, sister

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — A man doused his estranged wife and her sister with a flammable liquid and set them ablaze aboard a city bus Thursday, police said. The man was arrested shortly afterward.

Georgia Regains, and her sister, Mary Williams, were taken to San Bernardino County Medical Center with first- and second-degree burns, police said.

"They're both critical," said Police Department spokeswoman Lori Lieske.

A hospital spokesman said Mrs. Regains suffered second-degree burns over 30 to 40 percent of her body. Ms. Williams was in serious but stable condition. The degree of her burns had not been determined.

Kaley Eugene Regains, 31, was arrested near the scene and booked for investigation of attempted murder, said Ms. Lieske. She identified him as the estranged husband of Ms. Regains.

The two women and the man were arrested as they boarded the bus, driver Tom Hoenan said.

Hart drawing strength from converts

By DAVID ESPO
The Associated Press

Gary Hart's self-described "catch-up" presidential campaign demonstrated new strength Thursday, as a poll showed him gaining sharply on Walter F. Mondale in Alabama and some former backers of John Glenn and Alan Cranston converted to his side.

Hart, Mondale, Glenn and the Rev. Jesse Jackson campaigned in the South, where Georgia, Alabama and Florida are three of nine states holding "Super Tuesday" Democratic presidential primaries and caucuses on March 13.

George McGovern, the fifth Democratic candidate, was in Massachusetts and Vice President George Bush was in Florida jumping the Democrats together as the "fearful five."

Hart was asked in Orlando about his Florida campaign and replied, "We are trying to play catch-up against campaigns that have had five or six times the money."

He added, "I think we're going to do very, very well."

Mondale, also in Florida, said, "We're coming back" after a disastrous string of election defeats, but he is concentrating almost all his efforts in the South, at the expense of Massachusetts, another state holding a primary on March 13. A Boston-Globe poll earlier in the week showed Mondale trailing Hart, 41 percent to 29 percent, in Massachusetts.

McGovern's campaign in Massachusetts was aimed at pulling what one aide termed "a Gary Hart" referring to Hart's late surge that took him past Mondale in the New Hampshire primary last week.

McGovern has said he will quit the presidential race if he doesn't finish first or second in the Massachusetts primary.

Hart has won the New Hampshire primary, the Maine caucuses and the Vermont primary in succession, and Mondale and Glenn are counting on Southern voters to slow or stop the Colorado senator's surge.

Committee leaves plan on deficits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee delved from its deficit-reduction plans Thursday to approve 31 relatively minor tax provisions, most of which would cost the government money.

Included in that package were provisions blocking the Internal Revenue Service through 1985 from saying how employee fringe benefits should be taxed, watering down a newly toughened set of rules on taxation of tips, and granting a tax exemption for military and civilian government employees killed abroad.

In addition, the panel reversed one of its deficit-reduction actions taken last week. After all votes were counted, aides said, the committee rejected a provision intended to discourage businesses from buying luxury cars. That provision, denying any tax benefit on the portion of a car above $15,000, would have saved the government about $400 million over the next three years.

While Congress and the Reagan administration searched for ways to hold the deficit to $50 billion over the next three years, these other developments occurred:

• President Reagan dismissed the problem with leading Senate Republicans, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. They did not agree on anything. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said of the session.

• Reagan's budget director, David Stockman, said prospects for an agreement between the administration and congressional leaders on a plan that would save about $100 billion over the next three years "are improving significantly with each passing day."

• In a speech to the National Association of Manufacturers, Martin Feldstein, Reagan's chief economic adviser, said recent declines in the value of the dollar would make it easier to raise taxes to help reduce the deficit, which would ease that situation, he added.

• Democrats on the House Budget Committee met in private for the third straight session to map a budget strategy for the 12 months that begin next Oct. 1. Republicans will hold their own sessions next week; the full committee will try to write a budget the following week.

Prayer draft called radical

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of a school prayer amendment charged Thursday that a compromise version drafted by Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., to attract additional support is "an even more radical proposal" than the original.

"Its passage would seriously disrupt the delicate balance between church and state authority presently articulated in the First Amendment," Barry W. Lynn, legislative counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union, told a news conference as the Senate entered its fourth day of debate on school prayer.

Lynn centered his criticism on a provision in the Baker compromise that would give volunteer religious groups "equal access to schools and other public facilities."

"That provision was not part of the original proposed constitutional amendment backed by President Reagan, although he has approved of the new language."

"Even outside religious groups zealously seeking to proselytize, whether fundamentalist Christians or followers of the Rev. Sun Moon, would gain ready access to American schools," Lynn complained.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said in a floor speech that criticism of the so-called equal access provision, which he would have "based on misunderstanding."

"Equal access is not mandatory," he said. "There are not affirmative obligations. There would be no requirement that any school adopt such a policy. They would simply be protected from a constitutional challenge should they choose to do so."

The proposed constitutional amendment, which Reagan is pushing as a major election-year social initiative, is intended to override a 1982 Supreme Court decision which outlawed any officially sponsored, organized or sanctioned prayers in public schools.

Murderer returned to prison mere hours after his release

By JOHN HOWARD
The Associated Press

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Theodore Strelski, who beat a Stanford math professor to death with a hammer 5½ years ago and refuses to promise he won't kill again, was paroled Thursday.

He was jailed again three hours later for refusing to abide by terms of his release.

The gangling, bearded former graduate student, who shocked the Stanford University community and received national notoriety by saying he was "absolutely non-committal" about whether he would return to the campus and kill again, walked out of the state prison at Vacaville at 8:30 a.m.

After talking about 20 minutes with reporters outside the prison gates, the 47-year-old Strelski was driven by officers to a parole office in Sacramento, 45 miles away, to process his release.

Two hours later, state prison spokesman Phil Guthrie, who earlier had said officials were powerless to refuse parole, notified reporters that Strelski had violated his parole "and we're in the process of returning him to the prison right now."

"He refused to sign his release papers. He refused to accept his $200 release money. He indicated in no uncertain terms that he would not cooperate with parole officers. We

THEODORE STRELSKI
Won't apologize for killing ruled that he had violated parole," Guthrie said.

Paul Sakuma, an Associated Press photographer who was in the prison office when Strelski's release was processed, said the inmate refused to sign papers detailing the conditions of his parole, and refused to sign a document in which he promised to take medication.

Sakuma said the refusals occurred about 10 minutes before Strelski was released.

Guthrie said under state law,

Strelski can be ordered back to prison for no longer than six months for a parole violation. But, Guthrie said, that can be extended under certain conditions to a maximum of 18 months.

Just before being driven away from the grounds of the California Medical Facility, Strelski said he wanted to "complete my sentence, then live where I want."

He had been scheduled to go to Orange County to complete a one-year parole, but was taken first to Sacramento, the closest parole office to Vacaville, for processing. Guthrie said Strelski had several chances, both in Vacaville and in Sacramento, to sign release papers, but refused.

Strelski had vowed to violate his parole with a "non-violent act . . . an act of omission, like missing an appointment" with his parole officer.

The action would be "an anti-Stanford statement," he said.

Probe of fire winding down

PROMONTORY, Utah (AP) — Investigation of a fire which caused $2 million damage at the Morton Thiokol Wasatch Division plant here is expected to end next week, company spokesman Jim Brown said Thursday.

Brown said the investigation would not be completed before next Monday. The fire ignited in a rocket fuel casing facility last Friday after workers reported seeing sparks. Solid fuel propellant, which was hardening in casings, exploded and burned.

The propellant is used in space shuttle booster rockets.

The fire, which sent 14 people to the hospital for treatment of minor injuries, destroyed one building and damaged another.

Investigators from Thiokol and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration are trying to determine what caused the sparks that ignited the fuel.

Jury to see photographs of bodies

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A judge ruled Thursday that a jury could see photographs showing the decomposed remains of two of five boys whom bookkeeper Arthur Bishop has admitted kidnapping and killing.

Defense attorney David Biggs argued the photos were "irrelevant" because Bishop told police where to find the bodies. Biggs charged that Deputy Salt Lake County Attorney Bob Stott was trying to sway the jury, saying the "prejudicial nature of the photos" far outweighs the illustrative purposes.

Bishop, 32, is charged with five counts of first-degree murder, five counts of aggravated kidnapping and one count of sexual abuse of a minor. He has pleaded innocent to all charges.

If convicted by the seven-woman, five-man jury, he could face death by firing squad or lethal injection.

Defense attorney Jo Carol Nesset-Sale has said Bishop's confession to police will not be disputed. The defense is arguing he should be convicted of a non-capital crime — possibly second-degree murder or manslaughter — because of emotional and psychological problems.

Third District Judge Jay Banks admitted as evidence Thursday two photos of the decomposing bodies of Troy Ward, 4, and Graeme Cunningham, 13. They were made after the corpses were located in a stream in Big Cottonwood Canyon southeast of Salt Lake City.

Troy disappeared June 22, 1983, and Graeme was last seen alive July 14, 1983 — 10 days before police arrested Bishop, a bookkeeper by trade, during routine questioning.

The judge reserved a decision on whether to admit as evidence the photos showing the skeletal remains

Ruler: Liberty before reform

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The leader of Lebanon's largest Christian party said Thursday he will not discuss a reduction of Christian power with Muslim negotiators at next week's reconciliation conference in Switzerland.

Pierre Gemayel, leader of the right-wing Phalange Party and father of President Amal Gemayel, was quoted by the party's "Lebanese news agency" as saying Lebanon must be "liberated" before internal reforms can be debated. He apparently meant the withdrawal of Syrian and Israeli troops from Lebanon.

The agency said former president Camille Chamoun agreed.

Gemayel and Chamoun will represent Lebanon's Christians at the conference scheduled to begin Monday in Lausanne, Switzerland.

At issue is the power-sharing formula in Lebanon that Moslems say does not give them a fair share of political power in the country.

Opposition leaders met again in Damascus Thursday on what they will seek at the Lausanne meeting. It has been widely reported that they will demand the president's term be reduced from six to three years, and the creation of a senate that would elect presidents in joint session with the Parliament.

The proposed Senate reportedly would be composed of equal numbers of representatives from Lebanon's six main religious communities: Maronite Catholics, Greek Orthodox, Roman Catholics, Sunni Moslems, Shiite Moslems and Druse, who are an offshoot of Islam.

New conflict over killing

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Two witnesses on Thursday contradicted the official version of Benigno Aquino's assassination, saying he was shot on a plane stairway instead of on the ground.

The testimony suggested that a soldier might have been the killer, because official accounts of the murder said that only soldiers were on the stairs when Aquino was shot in the back of the head.

Andres Narvasa, chief counsel panel investigating the slaying, called the testimony "direct" evidence that Aquino was shot on the stairs.

Iranians repel offensive

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran said Thursday its forces repelled overnight the second Iraqi border counteroffensive in three days in the oil-rich marshland islands of Majnoon, killing or wounding most of the attackers.

The Iraqi attempt to regain control of its Majnoon oil fields in the southern sector of the front resulted in great loss of life, Tehran radio said. It gave no specifics.

The radio said that most of the armored and mechanized Iraqi forces taking part in the assault were killed or wounded and their vehicles destroyed.

It also said Iranian troops wiped out Iraqi forces stationed at the Shalid Hamid Bridge leading to the southern Majnoon island.

Elsewhere along the 730-mile border, Iraq said Iranian gunners shelled Iraq's southern provincial capital of Basra and the central towns of Mandall and Khanaqin, killing four civilians and wounding 18.

Iraqi newspapers said Iran was massing forces at two frontier sites east of Basra and a few miles to the north. Iraq has said repeatedly for two weeks now that it believes Iranian troops are gathering at the border in preparation for a major battle in their 42-month Persian Gulf war.

Iran seized the Majnoon Islands soon after driving across the Iraqi border late last month. Iraq said Tuesday it was launching a major effort to recapture the islands, but since then has said nothing about fighting in the Majnoons.

Cargo ship strikes mine in seaport

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A Mexican ship entering the port of Corinto on Nicaragua's northern Pacific coast struck a mine that damaged its hull, sources said Thursday.

The cargo ship carrying 2,500 tons of iron did not sink and there were no reports of injuries in the incident late Wednesday at Nicaragua's major port, 100 miles northwest of Managua, sources in Managua and Puerto Corinto said.

"We have orders not to give out information because the case is in the hands of state security," said Cesar Delgado, an employee of the Nicaraguan port authority. Other sources refused to be identified for security reasons.

Meanwhile, a military commander reported that a helicopter and two speedboats tried to destroy oil tanks at San Juan del Sur, on Nicaragua's southern Pacific coast, in an attack Wednesday night. No damage or injuries were reported.

It was the first reported attack on San Juan del Sur, 80 miles southeast of Managua.

Anti-leftist rebels based in Honduras and Costa Rica have attacked the country's other ports in the past — Corinto and Puerto Sandino on the Pacific coast and Puerto Cabezas and Bluefields on the Caribbean coast.

The Honduran-based Nicaraguan Democratic Force, which receives aid from the Reagan administration, and the Costa Rican-based Revolucionaria Democratic Alliance claim to have mined the country's ports.

Student protests spread in Poland

GARWOLIN, Poland (AP) — Hundreds of students opposing the removal of Crucifixes from their school defied riot police Thursday and took their demonstration to the neighboring town, where the protest spread to three other schools.

Some 3,000 people attended two Masses in the Roman Catholic Church of the Transfiguration in Garwolin to protest at the removal of the crosses and the decision by authorities to close Stanislaw Staszki agricultural school

Drive stirs to bring resort-tax bill to hearing

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News Capital Bureau

BOISE — A bill that would allow residents of resort cities to vote for a local sales tax is likely to be given a committee hearing in the Senate after all.

The legislation — proposed at the request of officials from Ketchum, Sun Valley and other Idaho resort cities — was approved by the House Feb. 21. It then was assigned to the Senate's Local Government and Taxation Committee.

However, Sen. Dore Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, who chairs that committee, has said the panel may not have time to consider the legislation.

But six of the 10 committee members say they would like to see the legislation on the committee's agenda. And five of those members say they would support a motion to place it before the committee.

"I don't think it has to be on Friday," says Sen. Vern Lannan, D-Pinehurst, one of the five. "But the chairman should, in the next week or so, put it on the agenda."

The committee's three other Democrats and Sen. Wes Trueman, R-Wendell, join Lannan in expressing support for forcing the issue out of Watkins' possession and onto the committee agenda.

The sixth member, Sen. William Ringert, R-Boise, says he, too, supports giving the bill a public hearing. And while he does not rule out a vote to bring the measure before the committee, he says the bill may be forthcoming without forcing it.

Sun Valley has enough support for it that I might ask the chairman to pull it out," Ringert said Thursday.

A simple majority of committee members is needed to force a bill to be considered by a committee. However, veteran lawmakers say that tactic is rarely used because it is a public affront to the chairman, who normally sets a committee's agenda.

Generally, a committee chairman is told in private that such a motion can be supported — an action that results in the bill being placed on the agenda.

"There hasn't been any orchestrated effort to get the bill out," says Gail Bray, a Boise Democrat. "Those of us who don't have a vested interest in the bill aren't going to be clamoring for it," she says. But "discussion on the issue ought to occur."

Sun Valley and Ketchum voters expressed strong support for a local sales tax on advisory ballots cast in the November election. The cities now levy a limited sales tax on hotel rooms and liquor sold by the drink — but they face "pressure and litigation" from resort owners who want the tax reduced or removed.

City officials say broadening the base of the sales tax to include items other than rooms and liquor would allow for a reduction of the existing 5 percent rate.

The bill — which would allow a local sales tax in resort cities of up to 25,000 population after approval by 60 percent of the voters — was guided through the House by Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, the chairman of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

But in the Senate, it faces an uphill battle. Watkins has achieved a reputation for his efforts, mostly successful, to bottle up legislation that his committee has been assigned, but which he opposes.

Lannan says he will ask Watkins today to provide committee members with a list of bills assigned to the committee and the date they were assigned.

Bray says she's also concerned with the number of bills in Watkins' possession. "There's a number of bills up there in the hopper that ought to get out," she says.

Upset parents balance costs, school needs

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — More than 100 persons attended Wednesday night's public meeting of the Jerome Special School Committee to discuss overcrowding in the schools and to air their differences on how the problem should be solved.

Moderator Bill Hart said after the failure of three bond issues in recent elections, the committee of 24 was set up for three purposes: to study possible sites for a new school, to study alternatives and to improve public relations.

Wednesday's meeting, he said, was held to improve public relations and to learn how residents felt.

Hart, who shared the stage with Superintendent Stephenson Youngerman and school board member Alvin Chojnacki, asked that the audience limit their comments to physical facilities only.

Many educators in the audience — a count taken by Hart revealed about 40 percent of those in attendance were either educators or committee members — stuck together in their opinions. Their primary theme was that the Jerome schools are overcrowded and relief is needed now — not in five or 10 years.

One by one, school principals stood to tell of overcrowded classrooms, split lunch schedules and too few teacher's aides.

FAA experts study Burley bid for site

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Burley's bid to become the "new" information point for pilots in Idaho could hinge on what a team of experts from the Federal Aviation Administration saw this week.

Officials from the FAA's regional office in Seattle inspected the proposed site at the Burley municipal airport on Monday, and later in the day, they met with a group of 25 government officials, business leaders and community representatives.

"We think we gave them a good presentation," says Truman Bradley, a city councilman and the chairman of the Burley Industrial Commission.

The FAA evaluation team also complimented the city in putting together its bid, he said.

Details of the bid have not been released.

The FAA currently has a night service station at the Burley airport. However, its operations and those of the two other stations — at Boise and Idaho Falls — are to be consolidated at one sophisticated night service center, which will serve the entire state, the FAA has announced.

Other cities reportedly vying for the center are Pocatello, Lewiston and possibly others. The FAA intends to lease space in a building at whatever city is chosen.

Several groups of Twin Falls investors had discussed putting together a bid, but have been discouraged by the federal agency's desire for a one-year lease, instead of a multi-year one, says Mike Dolton, the executive director of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce.

One Twin Falls group still may be interested, but it has not revealed its intentions, Dolton said this week.

The Burley City Council has pursued the pilot information center aggressively, hiring its own engineers to design plans for a building.

"We think the city could gain quite a lot of prestige from having it here, because it's the only one that's going to be built in the state," Bradley said Wednesday.

The city also is anxious to keep the families of the eight FAA staff members who currently are stationed in town, and to gain the workers that will come with the new station, Bradley says.

The 24-hour operation for will employ 36 workers at its peak and an average of 23 over its 20-year life, the FAA has estimated. The payroll will approach $17.2 million during that time.

Pilots from around the state will call the computerized center for information about weather, FAA procedures, routes and other data.

Although a city will be selected by October, the center itself will not be opened until 1988, according to a FAA official.

Testing the waters

CSI project studies warm-water fish production and its future

By ANNETTE GARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho is testing the waters of warm-water fish production.

It's a promising industry for the Magic Valley, says Leo Ray, the owner of Fish Breeders of Idaho. "He has been growing and marketing catfish and tilapia — a type of fish common in the tropics — for 12 years in water from geothermal wells in Buhl."

"One of the main reasons the industry hasn't grown is the only place for people to get advice was from me, and they consider me a competitor," he says. "There was no place else for them to go for technical assistance."

There are also few workers in the area trained to raise catfish, tilapia, fresh-water shrimp and tropical fish for aquariums, Ray says.

Other potential businessmen worry about a steady supply of geothermal water.

But a new program at CSI may solve some of those problems.

Students in the college's fishery technician program will be gaining experience by caring for catfish, tilapia and shrimp in six oversized tanks recently installed in the Vocational-Technical Building.

Water to fill the tanks comes from the college's geothermal wells. But in an experimental program, Terry Patterson, the fisheries technology professor who developed the program, is trying to raise the fish in water that already has heated the college's buildings.

"We want to see if the geothermal water can be used in conjunction with higher priorities like heating and energy," Patterson says.

A third of the catfish in the experimental program are living in geothermal water straight from the well, but mixed with tap water to bring 100-degree water to a catfish-pleasing 82.

Another third are in water that already has heated the building, and the final group are in geothermal water that has been run through the building's heating system, and then a coil of copper to simulate the copper pipes found in other college buildings.

Ray, who is working closely with the college on the project, says he doubts the copper pipes will add enough copper to the water to harm the fish, even though "copper is very toxic to fish."

Patterson says he and students will be checking fish growth rates and how many die in each pond.

And if the fish thrive in the water from the college's heating system, building warm-water fish ponds by the well — near the maintenance building — is a strong possibility, says Orval Bradton, CSI's dean of vocational-technical education.

Now most catfish are grown in the South, on acres flooded with water and warmed by the sun, Ray says. And there are a lot of catfish grown — as many as all other types of commercially grown fish put together, he says.

But a catfish "is like a sponge," Ray says. "If you take a catfish out of a sewer, he tastes like a sewer. If you take him out of fresh water, he tastes fresh."

That makes fish grown in geothermal water easier to market than those grown in Southern Idaho, where water cannot be changed, Ray says.

Idaho geothermal water is also ideal for tilapia, he says. Although the fish has a better flavor than trout, Ray believes few persons grow them because if the water temperature drops to 60 degrees, the fish die.

That leaves farmers in tropical countries and those with access to warm water left to supply the fish to gourmet restaurants, he says.

Geothermal water should also work for raising fresh-water shrimp, Ray believes, as Patterson has shown with a small-scale project that was started in August.

"The problem is that the food that a prawn likes better than any food is a prawn," Ray says.

Patterson says cannibalism has been a problem with the shrimp, but he plans to continue to include them in the warm-water fish program because they sell for several dollars a pound.

Judge: Court verging on 'malpractice'

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The court system in Twin Falls County is in danger of "judicial malpractice" if adequate court personnel are not hired soon and existing staff members are not used more efficiently, says Fifth District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt.

But Hurlbutt, who serves as the district's trial court administrator, believes the problem can be resolved through "professional, modern, basic business principles" that will not require increased taxes.

"The public has made one thing perfectly clear: It takes too long to get a case decided," he says.

The role of the judiciary has changed in the last 25 years, Hurlbutt says. He believes cases can no longer be managed by attorneys for judges; judges must become active in managing the courts, so disputes can be resolved quickly and efficiently.

Hurlbutt already has hired one legal secretary for the five judges who are based in Twin Falls since he was appointed as a district judge in January. Another secretary will be hired soon, as part of a College of

JUDGE DANIEL HURLBUTT
Looking for reforms

Southern Idaho word-processing program, he says.

Next, he believes, law clerks must be provided. Clerks, usually recent law-school graduates, can perform basic, researching and opinion writing, freeing judges to try more cases and stay current with the law, he says.

He would like to hire one clerk this summer to maintain two clerks on staff beginning next year.

Twin Falls judges did not have either secretaries or clerks at the beginning of the year, even though the state Judicial Council had said each district judge should be allowed one or each, Hurlbutt says.

And he says further personnel changes may be needed in the area of probation officers.

"The Twin Falls courts need three probation officers not two, he says. But these officers' duties should not be rigidly defined, because they can perform many functions, such as serving as bailiffs or monitoring payment of fines, he believes.

The result of these changes would be speedier trials, more efficient use of judges and fewer reversals of decisions by the appeals court, Hurlbutt says.

And if expenses are monitored closely and priorities are set, the changes can be funded without increasing the drain on the county's district court fund, he says.

This special fund, supported by fines and fees imposed by the courts, pays most of the day-to-day expenses of the courts.

Hurlbutt believes savings can be achieved by "streamlining" court purchases, perhaps by designating a purchasing agent whose job would be to reduce the amount paid for supplies.

And he says there are other places where savings can be found, such as in the county law library. The county now spends about $33,000 a year to stock the library, while no survey has been done recently to determine if all the books routinely purchased year after year are needed, he says.

So far, the Twin Falls County commissioners have reacted favorably to Hurlbutt's plans to reorganize the mechanics of the court system.

"He has discussed ... his philosophy with us, and we are all for it as long as we can stay within the budget," says Commissioner Judy Felton. But she says the commissioners are still drawing the line at a special levy.

State law allows counties to levy a small property tax to support the courts, but it never has been collected in Twin Falls County. It is to be collected.

Filer considers fee for irrigation water

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

FILER — The Filer City Council is considering charging residents for the use of irrigation water and installing an underground irrigation system.

Mayor Perry Dyke has proposed that the city charge a flat rate of $10 per year for use of the irrigation water.

The city spends half its time and money maintaining the irrigation ditches, so there should be some compensation, the mayor said at Tuesday night's council meeting.

"Other towns are getting a fee," he said.

Councilman Ron Stokesberry also suggested the city install a gravity-fed, low-pressure, underground pipe system to replace the city's open irrigation ditches.

There are approximately six miles of irrigation ditches in the city, and most of those are open, he said.

By having an underground system with controls, Stokesberry said it would be easier for the city to determine who should be charged for using the water.

Residents also would use less water because not as much would be lost in a piped system, he said.

In addition, Stokesberry said, open ditches are not only unsightly, they pose safety hazards to children.

"These ditches should have been covered a long time ago," Dyke agreed. "I look at it as a never-ending problem."

Stokesberry said that portions of the underground pipe could be purchased yearly from the city's street budget, starting this spring.

"Even if you purchase $1,000 worth of pipe, it's a good way to get started," he said.

In other business at the council meeting, the council discussed adopting an ordinance that would make it

Rupert man faces rape charge

RUPERT — A 24-year-old man has been charged with raping a teenage girl in Rupert early Thursday morning.
 Samuel Curriel, of 1724-D-88 in Rupert, was arraigned Thursday afternoon in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Rupert, according to Tim Spencer, the Minidoka County deputy prosecutor.

Curriel has been charged with one count of rape.
 The incident occurred sometime Thursday at an apartment near Curriel's residence, Spencer said. The victim was a 14-year-old girl, who notified police at 3:30 a.m. from a neighbor's house, he said.
 With identification from the victim, Curriel was arrested by Rupert police.

within two hours, Spencer said. In addition to the alleged rape, the girl also suffered a bruise on her face, Spencer said.
 Curriel is being held in the Minidoka County Jail, in lieu of $25,000 bond.
 A preliminary hearing has been scheduled for March 22.
 The public defender has been appointed to represent Curriel.

Courts

 collected — under the tax ceiling imposed by the One Percent Initiative — it would cut into the funding of other departments, Felton says.
 County Clerk Dick Pence also cautions against increases in expenditures for the courts.
 The Twin Falls courts produce about $200,000 annually, in fees and fees for the district court fund, he says. However, yearly payments from that fund are now about $140,000 per year.

This means the current surplus in the fund, about $80,000, is being whittled down year-by-year, Pence says.
 If court expenses were to jump to $200,000, the surplus would be gone in a little more than a year, he says. Then, it would be one, short step from there to red ink, he says.
 Hurlbutt, however, says the question is one of budgeting, but of providing adequate courts.
 The Legislature gave the courts the power to demand funding from counties in order that they might remain a separate, but equal branch of government, he says.
 For example, the Twin Falls County Judicial Building never would have been built if former Judge Theron Ward had not ordered it, he says.
 But Hurlbutt says his style is not to be confrontational, especially when the commissioners are willing to listen to the judiciary's problems.

And he feels a recent report from a special committee of judges and county officials may clear up some traditional problems between courts and counties in the administration of district court funds.
 That committee was appointed by the Idaho Supreme Court last May, after a bitter legislative debate over whether the courts or the counties had final say over the spending of the funds.
 Among the committee's recommendations is that an administrative judge or other court official administer the court budget, but that the budget be prepared by the judge or clerk in consultation with the clerk of the district court, and submitted to the county commissioners in the same manner as any other county budget.

 One problem in Twin Falls County, Hurlbutt says, is that Pence, who also serves as clerk of the district court, traditionally has felt responsible for overseeing the district court fund.
 Hurlbutt says he is in a better position to do this than Pence, and that the public expects the courts to

Innovation by Minico makes a difference

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — Tradition and innovation merged Thursday afternoon for the Minico Spartans as they outlasted the Bonneville Bees 57-54 in the opening round of the Idaho Class A-1 Boys' Basketball Tournament.

Tradition was embodied in the good, old-fashioned hustle that the Spartans displayed, particularly in the final quarter. Twice Minico worked feverishly to secure loose balls, each recovery resulting in key points.

Innovation came in the form of the three-point basket, this season's state-wide guinea pig. The Spartans made just one such shot, but it was a decisive one: Carl Bailey's bomb from the left side with 2:46. It gave Minico a 51-46 advantage, which, considering the Spartans' typically tough defense was safe enough.

Now 17-0 overall, the Spartans will meet the top-ranked Borah Lions, who routed Lewiston 78-54 earlier Thursday in today's semifinal round, to-night at 8:25.

The other semifinal will match Coeur d'Alene, which defeated Meridian 78-68 on Thursday, against Highland, which beat Caldwell 54-48 in the final first round game. The Coeur d'Alene-Highland contest is scheduled for 9:45 p.m.

Minico Coach Craig Dexter acknowledged the importance of his team's getting the loose balls.

"We did come up with a good percentage," he said. "Looking back on it, that might have made the difference."

Of course, Bailey's three-pointer also helped. That basket by the 6-foot senior guard came as something of a surprise since the Spartans previously had been passing the ball around endlessly before taking a shot.

"He's still trying to find himself a little bit (after suffering a broken foot in early February during a regular-season game against Bonneville)," Dexter said of Bailey. "But we're not going to go on it" this tournament unless Carl Bailey hits from the outside."

Minico might not have gone on to today's semifinals without 8000 free throw shooting. The Spartans made 18 of 24 attempts from the line (75 percent), compared to Bonneville's 8-for-13 effort. Dexter termed it as a characteristic performance for Minico, which he said generally shoots between "70 and 72 percent" at the line.

And, as usual, the Spartans succeeded at keeping the tempo at their favorite pace — deliberate. Occasionally, Minico appeared overly hesitant in attacking the Bees' 2-1-2 zone defense.

"We were awfully tentative sometimes," Dexter admitted. "But if you look at it from one point of view, we were tentative; from another we were looking for a good shot."

There weren't too many shots of any kind during the first half. The teams battled through eight ties before Richard Black scored a three-pointer with three seconds left in the half, giving Bonneville a 27-24 edge at intermission.

Minico stayed in contention during the second period with 6-for-9 shooting from the line. An 8-2 spurt fueled by Brad Croft's two baskets and one niple from Kent McKean and

Bobcats shun shooting woes to thump St. Maries, 74-61

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — Surviving foul trouble and free throw shooting woes and thriving on Greg Boyd's 32 points, the Burley Bobcats thumped the St. Maries Lumberjacks 74-61 in Thursday's opening round of the State Class A-2 Boys' Basketball Tournament.

The Bobcats, now 18-1, will face Madison in the first of today's semifinal games at 4:45 p.m. Madison defeated Middleton 62-52 in another first-round game.

Elsewhere in the tournament, Rigby whipped Moscow 71-51 and American Falls edged Bonners Ferry 57-56. Rigby and American Falls will meet in the other tournament semifinal game at 8:00 p.m.

Two Burley starters, point guard Scott Barrett and center Ryan Hull, fouled out in the fourth quarter. This provided hope for St. Maries, which had trailed the entire game except for one brief third-period deadlock.

Barrett's absence could have been particularly crucial, considering St. Maries' reliance on a full-court press that had given the Bobcats problems.

But Burley weathered the Lumberjacks' pressure and its own shooting problems from the charity stripe thereafter. After Hull fouled out, St. Maries' Jeff Ferguson sank a free throw to narrow the difference to 56-48 with 3:42 left. But Carlos Escobedo scored unassisted for a 58-48 Bobcat advantage.

Twice afterward the Lumberjacks came within eight but never got closer, despite Burley's missing three front ends of one-and-ones opportunities in the closing minutes.

"Whenever the Bobcats rallied, Boyd was usually behind it."

"Every time they made a run at us, he hit very key baskets," Burley Coach Gary Swan said. "It was more important when he scored than how many he scored. He scattered them throughout the game."

The 6-foot-4 senior sank the game's first shot, a three-point bomb which started Burley on a 7-0 tear.

Two minutes later, after St. Maries had reduced a 19-8 deficit to 22-20, Boyd opened and closed a 9-0 Bobcat streak by hitting three-point shots.

But St. Maries narrowed that 11-point disadvantage to three, 33-30, by halftime, scoring the last eight points of the quarter, including a three-

Stall by Malad allows Gooding scoring drive to tip game

By FRANK HILL
Special to The Times-News

MOSCOW — For 3/4 quarters here Thursday night, District 3 champion Malad played Gooding to a standstill. Every move the Senators made, the Dragons countered with an equally effective gambit.

All evening, the two teams played as if they were one unit. Yet it was Gooding that prevailed 59-56 in a first-round game at the Idaho Class A-3 Boys' Basketball Tournament.

The reason? Malad's hesitation. With just over four minutes to go in the game, Malad Coach Jerry Jones stopped shooting a little too soon. I thought we kept our composure well. But while Malad stopped shooting, Gooding got the hot hand, tanking

"The stall, it wasn't that bad of an idea," said Fowler. "They just stopped shooting a little too soon. I thought we kept our composure well. But while Malad stopped shooting, Gooding got the hot hand, tanking several clutch free throws late in the game to put Malad away and move into a 10:45 p.m. (MST) semifinal matchup with either Polatch or Fruittland, who played in Thursday's late first-round game.

Eight hours earlier, Filer's Greg

Hall and Lee Chadwick connected on four straight free throws in the final minutes to lead the Wildcats to a 61-60 win over Homedale and into a 7:25 p.m. (MST) matchup with Lapwal in the other semifinal game. Lapwal earned that right by beating West Jefferson 69-60 in the other first-round contest.

"We never gave up," said Gooding's Fowler. "Our third quarter was weak. We stopped trying to penetrate. But we got it together again in the fourth quarter."

Leading the well-balanced Gooding, attached was senior point guard Mark Jones. Jones put down 16 points, and led the win with two pressure-packed free throws in the closing seconds of the game.

The narrow Gooding victory may have started to reverse the trend in established in losing close ballgames this season.

"We've lost eight games by a total of 16 points," said Fowler. "Maybe this is the game we were looking for to turn it around. My players did an excellent job."

The Senators, appearing totally dead with 4:35 to play, turned the game around with steals and tough defensive pressure.

Filer 61, Homedale 60

Filer's victory was also filled with some minute heroics.

With Filer leading 61-57 and just five seconds in the game, Homedale's Dan Turner netted a three-point jumper to cut the Wildcats' lead to one point. But Filer managed to in-bound the ball cleanly and run out the clock. In beating Homedale, Filer was forced to overcome the full-court press and a deficit of as much as six points in the fourth quarter.

"With Homedale's press-type defense, we came back and beat them at their own game," Filer Coach Lloyd Garey said. Garey credited his bench for preserving the Wildcats' upset win.

"We had four guys coming off the bench, and that makes a difference," Garey said. "The differences in our benches were the key factors in our win."

With 1:13 remaining in the game and Homedale leading 57-55, Andy Sackett was fouled, went to the free throw line and coolly sank free throw

Wayne Lind of Oakley makes a shot despite tight coverage by Rockland's Kevin McMichael

Cold shooting topples dreams for Castleford

By FRANK HILL
Special to The Times-News

MOSCOW — "This was probably our worst ballgame shooting-wise we've played this year," lamented Castleford Coach Kelly Murphy following his team's 65-50 loss to Salmon River here Thursday night in the first round of the Idaho Class A-4 Boys' Basketball Tournament.

Oakley, by contrast, found its shooting touch in the second half of its opening-round game against Rockland, pulling out a 64-54 victory.

The first-round loss in the state A-4 tournament knocked the Wolves into the consolation bracket and lowers the team's overall record to 20-4. Castleford will play District 1 champion Plummer, a 36-47 loss to Highland in another first-round game, in a loser-out contest, this afternoon at 1:20 p.m. (MST). Oakley will confront District 3 champ Greenleaf Friends Academy, a 52-42 victory over Kendrick in one of the tournament semifinal games at 5:45 p.m. (MST).

The other semifinal will pit Highland against Salmon River at 9:05 p.m. (MST).

"We are better than what the score shows, we really are," Murphy lamented.

But what the score showed that the Wolves were in trouble from the beginning, falling behind 19-3 at the end of the first quarter. At halftime, Castleford trailed by 20 points — 38-18. Not until then did the Wolves begin their comeback.

"We came back pretty hard with lots of hustle in the second half," Murphy said. "In the first half we were pretty pathetic."

Castleford led the lead to just seven points, midway thru third quarter, thanks mainly to senior forward Alan Sample.

"Alan Sample kept us in the game single handedly," said Murphy. "He did a great job. Sample scored nearly half of Castleford's total points, bagging 21 and leading the team in rebounds with eight boards.

"For our own game, we have no real game plan," Oakes said. "I just plan to tell the kids to relax."

Oakley 64, Rockland 45

Oakley learned a valuable lesson about mental mistakes in the first half of its opening-round game against Rockland Thursday.

In the first half, the Hornets could muster little offensive scoring punch, and for a while it looked as if they would be blown out.

But high school basketball games are not won in just 16 minutes. In the second half, the Hornets cut down on their turnovers and beat the Bulldogs.

The Hornets had to come from eight points down at the end of the third quarter, outscoring the Bulldogs 28-10 in the final stanza as Wayne Lind with 13 points and John Oldham with a dozen bolstered Cory Woodhouse's 19-point scoring effort.

"I think the kids played a real live second half," said Oakley Coach Neal Wyatt. "They came back in the second half and played a smart game."

Wyatt added that during halftime he stressed the importance of thinking about what the team was doing on the court.

Oakley's biggest edge was in rebounding. The Hornets outboarded the Bulldogs 42-24, and many of their second-half points came after missed

Weber still favored, but rivals tough

By KEVIN MCCULLEN
The Associated Press

OGDEN, Utah — Neil McCarthy offered a foreboding prediction Tuesday as his defending league champion Weber State basketball team prepared to host the ninth Big Sky Conference basketball tournament.

The Wildcats, winners of their last two straight games and 22-4 overall, play Nevada-Reno at 7 p.m. in the final game tonight while rivals Montana and Montana State later will play the decisive game in their season series.

"The winners advance to the championship game Saturday night, with the victor earning an automatic berth in the NCAA tournament."

Weber, the tournament's No. 1 seed after finishing 11-1 in the league, downed Idaho 67-56 in an opening round game Tuesday to advance, while Montana eliminated Northern Arizona 63-54, Montana State edged Idaho State 66-64 and Nevada-Reno defeated Idaho State 64-59.

The Wildcats beat Idaho and their previous four opponents despite averaging 45 percent field-goal shooting. But at the same time, Weber held its opponents to 42 percent shooting and McCarthy now sees the mediocre offensive display in a more positive vein.

"A lot of teams would have lost at least two of those five games," said McCarthy, 179-87 at Weber. "Some time before the season ends, we'll have a good shooting night and beat someone badly. If this team puts together a good shooting night, they'll be a wrecking crew."

McCarthy, while acknowledging his club is the tournament favorite, says the league tournament has become more competitive each season because of an overall improvement in conference teams.

"The Big Sky is more balanced than it has been in several years," he said. "All the teams are capable of beating each other. Many conference games this year have been decided by one point. We won four games by a total of five points."

Weber revolves around seniors John Price, Randy Worster and Greg Jones. Jones and Price made the all-league tournament team last year when Weber beat Nevada-Reno at Reno for the championship, while Worster has paced the team in scoring with 11.7 points per game.

Nevada-Reno, 7-7 in conference and 15-13 overall, is led by guard Curtis High. He has averaged 12.3 points per game and is the conference assists leader with 6.5 per game.

Weber owns two wins over the Wolf Pack this season, but McCarthy is wary.

"It's tough to beat a team three times," he said. "And they've got as good a bunch of athletes as anyone in the conference, maybe better than everyone else."

Montana's Mike Montgomery will take his Grizzlies into the tournament semifinals for the sixth straight year, but this time against a Montana State team that has been impressive under first-year Coach Stu Starnes.

Forward Larry Krystowiak helped lead Montana to a 9-5 league and 22-8 overall record by leading the Big Sky in scoring with 17.8 points and in rebounding with 10.5.

"Montgomery, 110-58 at Montana, believes the Grizzlies will need a maximum effort from Krystowiak and his colleagues to overtake MSU."

"There are a lot of similarities in player matchups and team concepts," Montgomery said. "It all comes down to individual performances and who plays well."

Montana State, 7-7 in conference and 14-14 overall, is led by guard Chris Brazler's 12.6 points per game. The Bobcats, which split the season series with Montana, won their last two games on final-second baskets and Starnes sees that as an omen.

"Anytime you win it's good, and the way we've won our last two games gives us a special kind of confidence," Starnes said. "We're playing very solid basketball right now."

Razorbacks eyeing track NCAA throne

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The Arkansas Razorbacks could be ready to trade in their bridesmaid costumes and ascend to the throne room for the first time in NCAA track and field competition.

The Razorbacks, champions of the Southwest Conference each of the past four seasons, have yet to win an NCAA crown, but they are today's national collegiate indoor championships at Syracuse University's Carrier Dome as one of the favorites.

However, Arkansas Coach John McDonnell shrugs off the favorite's mantle.

"They're just being nice to us," McDonnell said about those who have installed the Razorbacks as among the top choices, along with seven-time champion Texas A&M, Indiana and Alabama.

"I feel we have a pretty good team, but we have no lock on it (the title)."

The Razorbacks do, however, have excellent talent in their 13-man squad.

The key personnel are Mike Conley, the defending champion in the triple jump and the third-place finisher in the long jump in last year's World Championships; high jumper Bill Jasinski; shot putter Marty Kobza; 1500-meter runner Tom Moloney; and pole vaulter Mark Klee.

The Razorbacks also have an outstanding distance and relay team of Liam Looney; Bill DuPont; David Swain and Moloney.

Nevertheless, McDonnell is bemoaning the loss of half-miler Ed Williams and long distance runner Paul Donovan.

The Razorbacks are expected to compete in the NCAA indoor track and field championships in Albuquerque, N.M., Feb. 16-18.

The Times-News incorrectly reported Wednesday that Scott Wilson of Bull scored 22 points in Tuesday's 58-49 loss to Robert Stuart in the Magic Valley ninth-grade basketball tournament. Kyle Wilson had the 32 points.

Filipinos perform, show off expertise

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Four Filipino musicians currently performing in the Twin Falls area can play more than 500 songs in four-part harmony. Although the group "Mix Emotions" is only three years old, the individual musicians have long backgrounds of musical experience. Bass guitarist Demy Hapayan and drummer Eddie Botoy have been performing together for 15 years, traveling to Okinawa, Hong Kong, Japan, Bermuda, Canada and other countries as well as performing on cruise ships.

"Little Benny" Pulgado, a fluent lead guitarist, has traveled around the United States with several bands. He says his repertoire of some 700 songs includes "funky soul, pop, country and jazz, all from the '50s to the '80s."

Tony Pulgado, Benny's brother, plays keyboards and sings distinct harmonies. He says he favors popular music and "do-wop" songs. "Being all Philippine natives, most people wonder, the first time they see us on stage, what we can do,"

Tony Pulgado on the keyboards, lead singer 'Little Benny' Pulgado, drummer Eddie Botoy and bass guitarist Demy Hapayan

Benny Pulgado says, "So we normally open up with two instrumentals such as "Meditation Wave" or "Girl from Ipanema." Then I normally stutter to introduce our first song and then we do a hard-core harmony, which normally loosens the audience and everyone in the group. Then the fun starts. "The group is asked what kind of band it is and we find it's hard to answer that question," Pulgado says, explaining that the name "Mix Emotions" reflects the group's versatility.

"We get young, middle-aged and young at heart crowds," he continues. "We get a kick out of doing something like "Two Much Time On My Hands" to "Tennessee Waltz." Benny Pulgado, a Wendell resident, says his band practices regularly to perfect harmonies and learn new songs. "Eddie (Botoy) is probably the most versatile in the group," he comments. "He can sound like Elvis and likes to do falsettos and does songs like "Sherry, Baby." "Mix Emotions" plays country songs-of-Ricky Scaggs, Alabama, Ronnie Milsap and, of course, many more. A few of their most recent top 40 pop songs are Michael Jackson's "Billie Jean," "Up Town Girl" by Billy Joel, "You Don't Want Me Any More" by Still Breeze and "Heart and Soul" by Huey Lewis and the News.

Seattle poet prods, entices reluctant pupils

By ROBERT DOYLE
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Wise to the ways of teen-agers, poet Emily Warn asked first before sharing a student's work with the rest of the class. "Mark, this assignment is very good. May I read it?" she says, as Mark stumps in his chair, nodding consent at the same time.

What she read was a short essay on school, which used descriptive language in a manner Warn considered impressive. She read one more student's paper, then distributed a copy of one of her poems to each class member, asking if the words created a mental image.

The students respond reluctantly, but Emily's probing questions soon involve a majority of the class — and in 20 minutes everyone has contributed a thought or feeling. With 10 minutes of class time remaining, she

"Landscape and imagination, imagination and landscape. They're interchangeable."
— Emily Warn

asks, "In our last 10 minutes together, what would you like to do?"

Twenty-five voices answer in unison: "Read us more stories (poetry)."

The scene took place at Wood River Junior High School in Hailey, Warn, a Seattle poet who is spending six weeks in Blaine County as an Artist in the Schools. Her visit is sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts, the Idaho Arts Commission, the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and the Blaine County School District, each of which has underwritten a portion of her salary and expenses.

As do many artists and writers who can't make a living from their craft alone, Warn pursues a host of professions and avocations in addition to her work as an artist-in-the-schools.

"Right now, I'm working on my first novel and I'm cooperating on a book," she says. "But I'm a poet, first, and that's where I'll always return."

"I love the outdoors, and I still work part-time for the National Parks Service, a job that first brought me here to the Northwest," she says.

Warn says she has "taught all grades, kindergarten through twelfth. So I see the changes that occur as a child progresses through the various grade levels. If I ask for descriptive words in a second-grade classroom, the list goes on and on as the children practically tumble over one another offering words in a totally uninhibited fashion.

"At the junior high school, children seem to be preoccupied, exploring who they are and how they relate to others in their age group. I sometimes think a break from school might be appropriate for this age child, for they then seem to get back on the track by their high school years, able at least to momentarily look outside themselves," she says.

"Their imagination is active enough," she continues, "it just isn't directed toward diagramming sentences or doing science fair projects. So when I'm working in the junior high, I keep changing my approach, finding something that works; and if it doesn't, quickly moving on to something else."

The poem Warn read to the class was from her book of poems, "The Leaf Path," the title correctly suggesting nature is the subject of much of her work. However, the poem distributed to the junior high class was about her father.

"Landscape and imagination, imagination and landscape, they're interchangeable, one for the other. And they are the inspiration for much of my work. I also tell my students that their own experiences are the greatest source of subject matter in writing. It's just a matter of capturing those experiences. But you must write every day, even if it's just a letter, if you expect to gain some mastery of this craft," she says.

To read a book or a poem, to see a painting, to hear a piece of music, all may extend a child's learning. But to have a book or a poem's words stand in front of you and explain his or her work, to have an artist put brush to canvas before your eyes, to hear a musician play, that's an experience, say proponents of the artist in the schools program.

Touring Mexico in the right way

Industrious people made visit successful

EDITOR'S NOTE: Correspondent Grant Hansen and his wife recently took a vacation to Mexico City. Following is his report of that visit.

By GRANT J. HANSEN
Times-News correspondent

It was the perfect time to visit Mexico City — the U.S. dollar was buying a lot of pesos and the weather was 75 degrees and sunny. And as usual, there was a lot to see: the pyramids at Teotihuacan, the Ballet Folklorico, the National Museum of Anthropology, the Chapultepec Castle and Park, the National Cathedral and the markets.

We changed our money at the National Bank of Mexico at the airport, getting an exchange rate of 165 pesos per U.S. dollar. A cabbie offered to take us to our hotel in the Golden Plaza, in the Zona Rosa (Pink Zone) for 1,000 pesos ($6) and I got to practice my Spanish with him on the way in.

He told me Mexico City is the second largest city in the world and has a population of 17 million people.

The Pink Zone is an area in the central part of the city that caters to tourists. A hotel room for two in the area is $70 and up. But tourists can get less expensive hotel accommodations in other hotels outside of the tourist area for $28 and up.

Our hotel was modern and clean with a good restaurant serving Mexican, American and European food. We could buy nice meals in the hotel restaurant for $3 to $5. Food outside of the hotels is less expensive. Transportation in the city was excellent — the taxis inexpensive and most of the cab drivers could speak some English.

And Mexico City has one of the safest, cleanest and least expensive metros (subway systems) in the world. A person can travel anywhere in the city on the metro for one peso 30 centavos, which is less than a penny. The ticket seller provided maps and gave us good directions.

There were car rental agencies, but we decided not to drive ourselves, because the traffic was chaotic, and the drivers unpredictable. Surprisingly, however, we never saw any accidents.

In the city, we saw vendors everywhere on the streets and in the plazas and subway stations selling food, newspapers, maps, souvenirs, balloons, toys, flowers, dolls, blankets and many other items.

Our first morning in Mexico City, we went to the Central Market, where we found silver and brass goods, items made from leather, baskets, wood carvings, embroidered clothing, handcrafted toys, multicolored sombreros, handwoven blankets and serapes (ponchos).

The prices were set by the Mexican government and no bargaining was permitted. Just the same, the prices were reasonable. In the afternoon, we took the metro to the Zocola, or the Plaza de la Constitución. Around the square are the National Cathedral which was started in the 16th Century, the Supreme Court of Justice Building and El Palacio Nacional, where the president resides and has his office.

Quilting evolves into art

By JOANNE CRANER
Times-News correspondent

Buhl — Mary Briles is an artist — a quilting artist.

"To create exotic art while living a simple lifestyle is the rainbow in my life," says Briles, who lives in Buhl.

An exotic batik creation by Briles, which carries a $1,000 price tag, is currently in the spotlight at a contemporary quilt and wearable fiber show at the Hissing Goose in Ketchikan.

The batik method is accomplished by transferring a design to the fabric using hot wax. The fabric is then dipped into the dye, in this case two separate dye lots, until the proper color is achieved.

The hot wax transfer is then peeled off leaving a design in the original color of the fabric.

The piece on display is an 81-inch by 81-inch quilted wall hanging or bed covering of Hawaiian motif and worked in 13-inch squares. It is done in two shades of turquoise on an off white 100 percent cotton fabric.

It is just one of many items Briles has completed since moving to Buhl one and one-half years ago.

Quilting, to Briles, is a serious art or perhaps a science, as is evidenced by her second piece on display at the show. It is a Cathedral Window quilt, which Briles has worked on now for four years. Each tiny piece is designed differently and the entire quilt is intricately stitched by hand.

This exhibit carries a "not for sale" sign, but Briles admits that if some

Library fee sparks outcry

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — Saying his proposal was a trial balloon that "has gone over like a lead balloon," Mayor David B. Musante Jr. announced that he's abandoning a plan to raise city library fees by charging library borrowers 25 cents a book.

Musante said Wednesday that he's gotten the message "loud and clear" about the proposal he made at last week's budget hearings.

He said a book-loving voter, among the many who called to protest, told him, "Mayor, you have a lot of great ideas, but this one is downright crazy." Others suggested the fee might be unconstitutional.

"My brother-in-law, Ken Provencha, stated that charging for library books—is akin to installing meters to sit in Pulaski Park," the mayor said.

"To all of those folks who have called my office in opposition to the proposed fee, please be advised that I get the message loud and clear and will not pursue it any further," he added.

"I find it very gratifying to work in an institution that has so much support," said library director Blaise Bisalillon.

The library, across the street from Smith College, circulates about 300,000 books a year, Bisalillon said.

Quilter

one "absolutely can't live without it," that for $2,000 they could probably take it home.

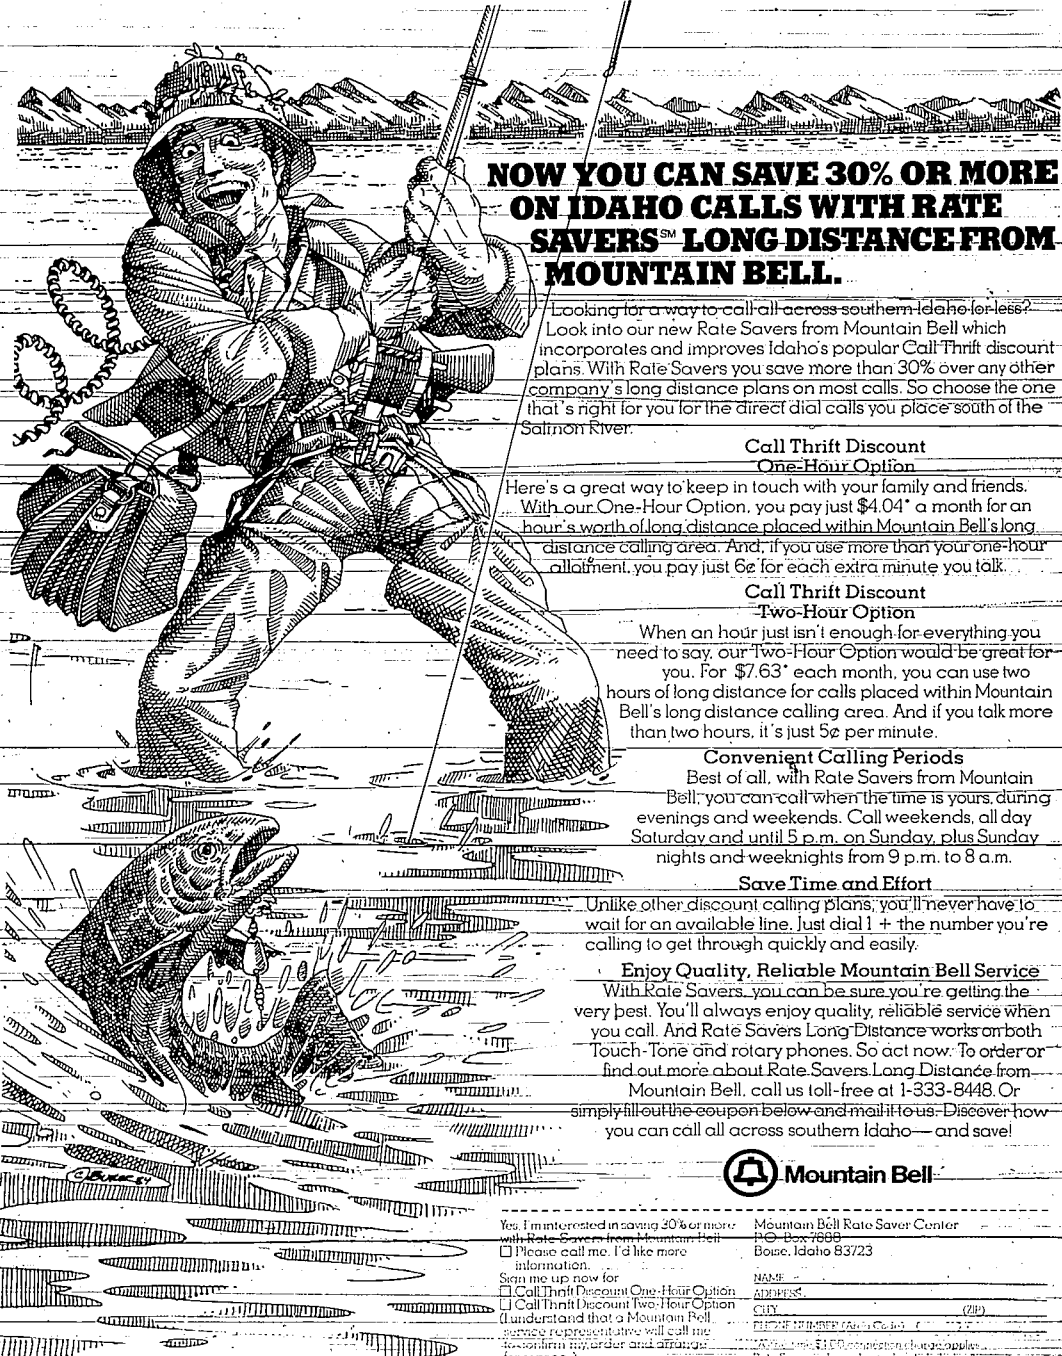

"It's the kind of thing you seldom see," she said, "because of the amount of work that requires." In addition to Briles work, the show features the work of Chris Wolf of Edmonds, Kan., a well-known lecturer and juried show exhibitor; Nancy Erickson of Montana, whose works are ecological statements; Judy Foster of Oregon, who interprets Navajo legends in her works and is currently writing a book on textiles; and Nancy Dice of Washington, who produces very optical and graphic pieces.

Hissing Goose owner, Barbi Lindsay, says the other artists have all had quite a judged-by-juries, but Briles is a fresh new artist. "I was very excited to be the very first time I saw Mary's work. She is a very committed artist," adds Lindsay.

Briles has found that by devoting many hours each day to her craft/art, she has been able to charge the burden of repaying college. She graduated with a bachelor's degree in fine arts and a teaching degree from the University of Northern Iowa.

Her husband, Ed Briles, is establishing a veterinarian practice in Buhl. The couple have a two-year-old son, Tyler.

Home-grown Idaho actors rival spuds for national praise

By MICHAEL HOFFERBERK
UI news bureau

MOSCOW — Idaho is famous for its potatoes. Its cool climate and rich soils are ideal for growing spuds. Now the state is also getting praise for its actors, a crop of talented young performers sprouting up on stages and screens around the country — many of which are recent graduates of the University of Idaho's Theater Arts Department.

In the past two months, UI acting alumni have appeared in a new off-Broadway musical, secured the leading role in a plot for a new television series, and performed in major motion pictures.

Actor Bruce Good, who once performed in the Collette Theater at UI, played Henry in "Henry V" at the Oregon Shakespeare Festival in Ashland, Ore., last year and Rex Rabold, another Idaho product, acts at regional theaters such as the Empty Space in Seattle, Wash.

Other UI actors include Peggy-Mead Gerdin who just finished work on a new film called "Quirks" in Hollywood, Brent Wagner who heads the musical theater program at Syracuse which produced last year's Miss America, Ray Fenning who acts with a professional theater company in St. Louis and Norman Scribner, currently appearing at the Folger Theater in Washington, D.C.

In addition, five other recent UI graduates are enrolled in professional actor training programs designed to introduce them into acting careers. Actors from the tiny UI-theater department, with only about 50 majors, have won the coveted Irene Ryan Award for student actors in the Rocky Mountain region three times in the last 11 years.

John Morgan, now attending the Professional Actor Training Program in Seattle, placed second in the nation in the competition last year and his partner, Mary Jo Dan Blumenshain, was the country's top scene partner.

This year, Leigh Seltzer, a graduate student in theater, again won the Irene Ryan Award for UI and will be appearing with 12 other regional winners at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C.

His scene partner, David Borrer, was rated the best in the region this year.

This success, coupled with the achievements of UI's acting alumni, indicates that something special is happening in Idaho, said Roy Fluhrer, chairman of Theater Arts.

"This program has to be reckoned as one of the reasons for the success of UI's training centers in the Northwest," Fluhrer noted proudly. His students had been remarkably successful at gaining acceptance into professional actor training conservatories, for which the competition is keen and the work intense.

"We give our students the basic training that prepares them very strongly for a graduate program," he said.

"They are here for us to take what they have — show it to them if they haven't seen it — and to help them embody it."

An actor whose talent Fluhrer helped embody is Bill Faggerbakke, who last fall found his New York debut in "The Last of the Knukeleens."

Faggerbakke, who grew up in Rupert, first came to UI to play football. At 6 feet, 7 inches and 235 pounds, he was a prime candidate for gridiron stardom before an injury sidelined his athletic career.

After a semester of indecision, he turned to theater education in his studies, figuring he would teach after his graduation.

Fluhrer and the other three acting coaches at UI, however, recognized acting talent in the former football player.

"For his size he has great sensitivity and great vulnerability," Fluhrer said. "He was never afraid to reveal his feelings."

Fluhrer said it took some convincing to show Faggerbakke he had a future as an actor. Only after appearing in the Hartung Theater in several leading roles did he begin to realize he could develop marketable skills and a marketable talent in the theater.

In his senior year at UI, he acted professionally in the UI Summer Repertory Theater and played the role of Hal Carter, an ex-football player, in "Picnic." It was one of his finest performances.

"I really miss Moscow," Faggerbakke said in a recent telephone interview. After graduating from UI, he was accepted into a professional actor training program at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas.

That training led to an opportunity to audition for agents in New York last spring, where he was again "discovered." He is now appearing in "Backer's Audition" at the Manhattan Theater Club, an off-Broadway house.

"The show experience I received at Idaho was incredible, and the quality of the direction was very good," Faggerbakke says.

His success so far, he said, can be directly attributed to the training he received at UI.

Other professional actors who graduated from UI are likewise complimentary of UI's program. Judy Dickerson, who appears in the movie "Terms of Endearment," and Jim Cash, who is working on a pilot for a new television series, both noted the nurturing they received at UI as being invaluable.

Sheila McDevitt, a 1982 graduate of UI and a second-year student in the Professional Actor Training Program in Seattle, attributes the success to the department's intimate size and the diversity of its faculty.

"You have the same quality of faculty at UI that you have at the larger schools, but they are dealing on a smaller scale," McDevitt said.

That training led to an opportunity to audition for agents in New York last spring, where he was again "discovered." He is now appearing in "Backer's Audition" at the Manhattan Theater Club, an off-Broadway house.

"The show experience I received at Idaho was incredible, and the quality of the direction was very good," Faggerbakke says.

Fluhrer and the other three acting coaches at UI, however, recognized acting talent in the former football player.

"For his size he has great sensitivity and great vulnerability," Fluhrer said. "He was never afraid to reveal his feelings."

Fluhrer said it took some convincing to show Faggerbakke he had a future as an actor. Only after appearing in the Hartung Theater in several leading roles did he begin to realize he could develop marketable skills and a marketable talent in the theater.

In his senior year at UI, he acted professionally in the UI Summer Repertory Theater and played the role of Hal Carter, an ex-football player, in "Picnic." It was one of his finest performances.

"I really miss Moscow," Faggerbakke said in a recent telephone interview. After graduating from UI, he was accepted into a professional actor training program at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas.

Mexico

We visited the Chapultepec Castle, which was built on a hill in the park and was the home of Emperor Maximiliano and the Empress Carlotta of France, who ruled Mexico in the 1860s.

Maximiliano ruled Mexico for a few years and was executed by the Mexicans. Carlotta went insane and returned to Europe.

At the entrance to the park, there is a monument to the six boy heroes who defended the military college, which used to be in the castle. The boy heroes were among the students who helped defend the castle against the invading American armies in 1847. Rather than surrender, the six boy heroes wrapped themselves in Mexican flags and threw themselves over the castle wall and off the cliff.

Probably the most important museum in the park is the modern National Museum of Anthropology, which is considered to be one of the 10 finest museums in the world. It's most impressive display is the Aztec Calendar Stone, which is a diameter of 15 feet. It was found by the Spaniards in the Zocalo. The museum had displays of countless ancient Indian statues and artifacts from all over Mexico.

The highlight of our trip was our tour to the pyramids at Teotihuacan. These tours are offered in all of the large hotels. Ours cost about $10 a person. The pyramids are located about 30 miles southeast of Mexico City. In a desert valley, and the tour took us about four hours.

The pyramids were built between 1 and 10 A.D. by several unknown groups of Indians who predate the Toltecs and Aztecs. Teotihuacan was abandoned suddenly in the year 1000 A.D. and were ancient ruins in the time of the Aztecs.

First we toured the Temple of the Jaguar, which has been reconstructed in part. Then we saw the Pyramid of the Moon, the second largest pyramid at Teotihuacan and walked down the Avenue of the Dead which has numerous smaller pyramids on each side.

As we walked along the Avenue of the Dead from the Pyramid of the Moon to the Pyramid of the Sun, Mexican vendors tried to sell us their wares — sculptured clay whistles, silver bracelets, objects d'arts made from obsidian, daggers and handcarved dolls. They were persistent and followed us.

The Pyramid of the Sun is the second largest pyramid in Mexico and is larger in volume than the Egyptian Pyramid of Cheops. The Pyramid of Cholula is larger.

Although we were out of shape we climbed the 246 stairs to the top in about 10 minutes. The view from the top of the Pyramid of the Sun was spectacular as we looked at the numerous ruins in the hazy valley below.

Our guide showed my wife the entrance to a newly discovered secret underground tunnel that goes several hundred yards from the Pyramid of the sun to the Pyramid of the Moon.

That night we decided to go on a tour to the Ballet Folklorico in the Palacio Nacional de Bellas Artes.

The program consisted of traditional Mexican folk dances from different regions of the country and depicting the different periods of Mexican history.

The costumes were bright and colorful and the lighting well timed and placed to help the dancing explode on the stage. The dances were charming, entertaining and informative as to the people, their history and culture. The Ballet Folklorico added an important cultural dimension to our trip.

On our last day in Mexico City, a taxi driver named Armando, agreed to drive us to the Central Market, the "Convent of Carmen," the University of Mexico and the Xochimilco Floating Gardens and finally to the airport for our departure.

After our trip to the market he drove us to the well preserved Convent of Carmen at San Angel, which was founded in 1615. The convent has a beautiful chapel fountain and a cloistered courtyard. In the basement of the convent, our guide showed us the remains of deceased monks who had been placed in sepulchres below the floor hundreds of years before and whose caskets and remains had been discovered and displayed.

On our way to the floating gardens, we drove past the Olympic Stadium (1968 Olympics) and the University of Mexico with its beautiful library of distinctive architecture. The outside of the administration building has murals painted by the famous Mexican artist Diego Rivera.

At the Xochimilco Floating Gardens, we took a colorful boat with a covered top on it. The canals were built by the Xochimilco Tribe hundreds of years ago to help expedite transportation.

A boatman-pushed us with a pole up the canal. It takes about three hours to go through the entire canal system, but we could only stay for 40 minutes.

After four days in Mexico City, we were on our way to the airport to catch our flight home. We had had a wonderful vacation, but were tired and were looking forward to our first drink of water in the United States.

We had seen much of the city and many tourist attractions in a short time, but we had missed the bullfights, the open market, many museums, the old city around the Zocalo and much of Chapultepec and Alameda Parks.

We gained a greater appreciation of Mexico, Mexican culture, and the Mexican people. We had learned that the vast majority of Mexicans people are mestizo, mixed Indian and Spanish blood.

These Mexicans that we met were courteous, helpful, genuinely friendly, outgoing — an industrious and hardworking people. They are a proud people — proud of their rich ancient Indian heritage and their more modern Spanish culture. Mexico City is an evenly balanced blend of both cultures — it was well worth seeing.

What's what

During World War I, an American soldier named Pvt. Joseph Oklahoma, a full-blooded Choctaw Indian, single-handedly captured 171 Germans in a battle near Saint-Etienne, France. You say you never heard of him? He did that thing the same day Sgt. Alvin York killed 20 and captured 132 Germans. You've heard of him.

Would you pay $30,000 to get that independent commentator Paul Harvey to speak at your association's next banquet? Some do, some do. That's his fee.

Here's to the mother elephant, that patient pachyderm, who nurses her baby for five long years — clink!

If that newborn infant needs a diaper change 80 times a week, it's just average.

LIVE YOUNG?

Q-What's the only kind of bird that gives birth to live young?

A. Trick query. No birds do that. Eggs are their only way.

You and I know better than to try to name the best motion pictures ever filmed. Haven't seen them all, for one thing. And "best" in what ways? Still, when the query was put to Jane Fonda, she identified "Citizen Kane," "Les Enfants du Paradis," "Paths of Glory," and "The Grapes of Wrath." Curiously, I would've named those films, too, and tossed in "Dr. Zhivago" and "Gone With the Wind" maybe. How does your roster read?

SHORTSPEECH

Field Marshal Gebhard Leberecht von Blucher served with the combined British-Prussian army that was about to whip Napoleon Bonaparte on June 18, 1815, at Waterloo. But the field marshal didn't get into that fray. Immediately after he made a short speech to his troops, he was taken into protective custody and hustled away from the front. What he said in that speech was he'd just discovered he was pregnant and about to give birth to an elephant.

Those who love golf might give some thought to retiring to New Zealand. It has more courses and golfers per capita than any other country.

Under the law of Ashland, Wis., little boys there can play marbles, but not for kicks.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Although you are mentally alive, alert and awake now, you still need to keep in mind that there are confusing conditions about you and you need to keep very much on your toes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be most careful in handling communications

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Before dashing out on some personal pursuit, know what you really want. Don't get dragged into something you don't approve of.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 31) Do not indulge anything confidential, or you can get into trouble. Avoid a confrontation with your loved one.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You may not feel right about some interest in which a friend is trying to get you involved. Steer clear of an argument.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Find more efficient methods of operating for greater income. Not a good day to seek support from a bigwig.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have fine ideas but they need further study before you can put them into operation. New contacts may seem superficial.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Go over any questions about some account before doing anything. Your mate may be working some trick to get own way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 21 to Dec. 22) A partner, who is trying to make a contract with you, has the upper hand, so be careful!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be sure of the work you have assigned to you. A fellow worker has a plan that is full of holes, so forget it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 18) You feel that some amusement will relieve you from worries, but it could cost you more than you think.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't take anything for granted at home. Be sure of where you stand with kin. Demonstrate poise and charm with guests.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY, he or she will be one who will want to study everything twice or more to be sure that there are no flaws in it before buying. The nature is very idealistic and should have the benefit of courses in ethics and practical matters.

Book's outrageous plot Wedded cousins causing legal uproar

By ROBERT A. BASSI
Chicago Staff Writer

J.R.R. Tolkien devoted two decades to creating a new world out of the world from Evil Incarnate, Robert Ludlum does it once a year.

No sooner do the Chicago Cubs promise that this season will be different than Ludlum launches yet another equally impossible premise: That a good, decent man will somehow overcome fiendish villains beyond redemption even by an hour on the "Love Boat."

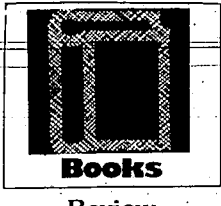

This spring's two-pound thriller, Ludlum's 11th, is "The Aquitaine Progression." Its plot is outrageous, its characters two-dimensional and you won't be able to put it down. (Don't ever begin a Ludlum novel if you have to go to work the next day.)

Joel Converse, former fighter pilot, has put behind him the years he spent as a prisoner of war in Vietnam. Now a prominent attorney specializing in international law, he goes to Switzerland to negotiate a merger. There he is confronted by Press Halliday, a friend from prep school days and his adversary in the negotiations.

But Halliday is playing for greater stakes than a mere multimillion-dollar multinational merger. His real purpose is to induce our hero to track down—you guessed it—an international cabal plotting to rule the world.

Their plan: "A prolonged series of massive, orchestrated confrontations designed to spin governments out of control and destabilize them." The chaos would be the general's excuse to march in and declare martial law. "It's multinational fascism... and the countdown has begun."

This is no ordinary cabal, however. These caballeros, representing power-mad military fanatics from half-a-dozen countries, are led by "Mad Marcus Delevane, the Butcher of Danang and Pleiku." The mildy psychotic general's gung-ho tactics sent thousands of our troops to wasted deaths "or worse." He was also responsible for Converse's years as a POW. That alone is enough to interest Converse in stopping this "global Third Reich."

Since Aquitaine's highly placed minions are entrenched throughout western governments, Halliday wants Converse to build legal briefs that show Aquitaine's leaders to be mere lawbreakers and subjects of ridicule. The plotters are to be neutralized by embarrassment.

By now, Converse is on the case, bodies are dropping and we're only on Page 52. That leaves another 700 pages for Ludlum's hero—now branded "a pariah, a man hunted for crimes so insane his madness is unquestioned"—to career across Europe, unraveling Aquitaine and dodging death. Not bad for a man who speaks only English.

But if danger lurks everywhere, friends—an American actor, a German student, a French lawyer, a Dutch prostitute, an ex-CIA agent, an ex-wife, a German cabdriver—even a New York cabdriver!—also pop up when needed.

DEAR ABBY: After all these "culpas," you asked, "How does one go about rescinding not only a 'mea culpa,' but a 'maxima culpa'?"

I have the answer: "Ego te absolvo." Go your way, and sin no more.

—FATHER ANDREW L.J. JAMES, ATHENS, OHIO

DEAR FATHER: Thank you. I need all the absolution I can get. Read on.

DEAR ABBY: You have published a number of letters about the first cousins from Massachusetts who got married in a state where first-cousins legally marry, and then returned to Massachusetts, which forbids such marriages.

Your first response: "A valid marriage is valid in every state."

Then Elaine Trudeau, a registrar from Boston, challenged you with a Massachusetts law that stated otherwise, and you promptly withdrew your comment with a "Mea culpa. Mea maxima culpa."

Next, one Robert Turner of Hopewell, Va., wrote to say that the U.S. Constitution upheld your original position—you were right in the first place!

Abby, Mr. Turner is mistaken.

—JAMES A. MARTIN, PROFESSOR OF LAW, UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

DEAR PROFESSOR: Let's review this: First I said, "A valid marriage is valid in every state." Then Elaine Trudeau, a Boston registrar, wrote to say that I was wrong, so I apologized. Then a Robert Turner advised me that I was right in the first place and Ms. Trudeau was wrong.

Now you tell me I was wrong in the first place—and Mr. Trudeau was right, and that Ms. Trudeau was wrong to say that I was right.

Should I rest my case? Or take it to a higher court?

—UPSET UNCLE

DEAR ABBY: My nephew was married and I attended his wedding. I put $200 in cash in an envelope with a note saying it was from me. I gave it to the newlyweds at the reception and they put it in the wedding box with the rest of the envelopes.

I gave cash because I remember the trouble I had trying to cash a personal check on my honeymoon, and I didn't want that to happen to them. (Do you think I should have given them a check instead of cash?) It has been a year since this wedding took place and I still haven't had any kind of thank-you. I don't know if they got the money or not.

Don't you think it is up to the parents of the married couple to make sure the kids thank the people who gave them gifts?

—FIRST-GRADE TEACHER

DEAR ABBY: After sharing that letter about the 6-year-old who walked over to his mother, unbuttoned her blouse and started to nurse, I suggest that you publish a warning-to-first-grade teachers in Hawaii:

"Wear blouses that button down the front at your own risk."

—FIRST-GRADE TEACHER

Ted Koppel: TV newsman more like the fellow next door

By BILL CARTER
The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON — Ted Koppel is having a rough time of it. He was stuck in Baltimore with a car whose alternator decided to stop alternating at the wrong time.

He has made it back down to the ABC News Bureau in Washington, but he has had to leave his wife, Grace Anne, behind to see to the reluctant alternator. He is concerned about what the repair is going to set him back, which is refreshing in light of the fact that television news is generally assumed to be in the category where the cost of gold on the international market is a concern, but automotive repair is not.

But if you didn't know more about him, you might expect that Koppel rides to work daily in one of those limos that are often at the disposal of the prominent "talent" of news.

But Ted Koppel has distanced himself from pretension with the same grace he has used to distance himself from obnoxiousness in any of the thousands of subjects he discusses nightly on what has become the most consistently praised, least criticized, most distinctive news broadcast on television, "Nightline."

His office is sizeable but far from regal, set off in a corner on the third floor of the ABC bureau. It is in mild disarray; a few scraps of notes on the desk, a book (Ted Koppel's "Maverick") accompanied by a note that says simply, "Ted, it's fun!" The decorations tend toward mementoes from previous assignments, most notably several souvenirs from his time in China, including a huge red Chinese flag draped across the wall facing his desk. Mostly it is the office of a man who has a lot of things to read. It is not, in an obvious way, the office of a star.

This evening, in between trips to the studio to do the evening promos, Ted Koppel shows pretty much the same concern about malfunction on an 8-year-old Datsun that the fellow who works next to you at the office might. Grace Anne calls back several times to report progress on the alternator. He offers moral support: "I don't know what the hell is wrong with that part," he says. "Once you get past putting air in the tires, I'm out of my league."

Presumably this would not be the case if the price of alternators were an issue of national import, one that might be discussed on "Nightline" by several parties involved in the alternator controversy. Then Koppel would research the matter fully.

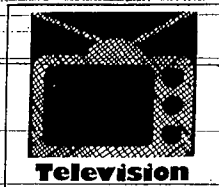

This past week he happens to have spent less time on his research, not because there is less to know, but because this week "Nightline" returned to its half-hour format. It is a little less than a year as an hour-long broadcast. The development has not left Ted Koppel feeling any less successful. He does not regard the cut-back as any sign of failure on "Nightline's" part, blaming it mostly on an ABC News decision to try to keep an extra half hour of time after its original programming idea, "The East Window," was rejected. The interview show with Phil Donahue and Greg Jackson, collapsed much faster than ABC expected.

So, Koppel says, ABC News president — the one who made the move back to "Nightline" staff thought it would be possible to expand to a full hour. "Roone, to his credit, said 'Let's not do anything that will damage the show.' We thought we could do it and so we tried."

What then happened did damage the show, but it was not something the show itself did. "Some of our affiliates decided they didn't want it at an hour and other decided to do it at midnight or else took us off altogether. Now once that starts to happen you can say, 'we're going to stick to our guns, and maybe in a year or so you won't have a show anymore. So you can't go down this road, go back to the half-hour and see how many affiliates you can get back.'"

The thing that has made Koppel happy about making the move back to a half-hour is that the stations are already coming through. "This is our first week back at a half hour and already 25 to 30 stations have either stopped delaying us to midnight or put us back on the air."

That result, he says, will be instantly dramatic. "Our ratings will go boom this week," just like that, because we'll have more stations and we'll only be rated for a half hour. Our first-half-hour—has always been great."

Koppel says the shift back to a half hour has meant "a slight adjustment" in his work process. "It's always easy to do less," he says. But the style of the show is inevitably different at a half hour. "I am already remembering back a year or 18 months ago when it seemed like I was always telling some guest, 'I'm sorry but you're down to your last three seconds.'"

Koppel's mention of the greatness of the first half hour of "Nightline" is consistent with some opinion expressed about the quality of the show, which, it has been said, was as deeply affected by the move to an hour as the ratings were. Specifically, the show and its anchorman-interviewer were said to have lost something of their aggressiveness when there was no clock to race.

Koppel does not dispute the point. "When you've got more time you can certainly let the person ramble a little," he says that rambling probably did affect the perception of how aggressive he was being with his questions. "There were a lot of changes in the hour format that hurt us. Certainly if we had a full show it was a lot worse at an hour." And, he says, it just could no longer work to tell someone they had to get right to the point "when they all knew we had 40 minutes left in the program."

But Koppel also believes the expansion to an hour was used as an excuse by some stations to start showing "Nightline" out of the 11:30 p.m. spot. The real reason was that they wanted to make more money. The time period has become an area of significant profit for television stations. As Koppel put it: "There's an enormous difference in the amount of money you can make at 11:30 from what you can make at 12 or 12:30."

Koppel is into the pragmatic side of "Nightline" because it just makes sense to him to ensure that his show's life is preserved. He knows, for example, off the top of his head, which major ABC stations still do not carry "Nightline" at 11:30. "At the moment, there are three—Atlanta, Dallas and Baltimore."

Producers and phone calls interrupt Koppel with regularly because he is actively involved with the content of each night's program. He carries an "editorial manager's" title as well as his anchorman title and that side of the job involves him in the decisions of which guests will be most appropriate and which will best balance the night's discussion.

Koppel takes great pride in the praise the show has received for its basic fairness. "We have had favorable pieces written in everything from The Village Voice to The National Review," he says. "People of all political hues realize we try to be fair."

"It's good journalism and it's good programming. Who would watch a show where everyone is agreeing with one another? I really think the show created the slogan, that the promotional department wrote for us: 'It Brings People Together Who Are Worlds Apart.'"

"That's true not only in the sense of the technology but also in terms of bringing people together who under normal circumstances don't have much to say to each other."

Koppel also feels the show has allowed him to play the objective journalist as no other show could have. "I defy my fans or my critics to identify my personal point of view," he says.

Clearly this is a man who has absolutely no reluctance to go to work each day—even if not in a limousine. He is ecstatically happy to be doing exactly the job he has. "I can't think of anything I'd like better. If someone came to me and said you can have all the money you would ever need and a free reign to come and do any kind of program you want, that would not tempt me because it's what I'm doing right now."

He acknowledges that many of his colleagues are jealous of the position he has—and they should be, he says. His enthusiasm for the position ought to have put to rest years ago the stories that Roone Arledge would eventually tap him for the prime news position, evening news anchorman.

Koppel denied wanting that anchor job about every other day following the emergence of "Nightline" as a successful show. But the rumor came up anew following the death of Frank Reynolds.

"Frankly," he says, "You could do both Peter (Jennings), the man who did get the ABC anchor job, and me a service by pointing out that despite all those times I had to say I didn't want the anchor job, when the time came for it to be filled, Peter really was the first choice."

He says he was never offered the anchor job by Roone Arledge after Frank Reynolds died, though he does admit Arledge called him about it once. "It was the night when he knew he was going to offer it to Peter and he just called in a joking manner to say 'You sure you don't want to change your mind?'"

No suspects in silly theft

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Police say they have no suspects in a burglary in which the thieves helped themselves to a pot of coffee and then took only a quarter of the money in a bank bag that had $75 left in it, and they made themselves a pot of coffee." Capt. George Pavlicek said Wednesday, noting that the burglars had to have seen the rest of the money.

The burglary took place over the weekend at the Country Arts Collectives, an antique and specialty store located in a large building that housed other stores on several levels, Pavlicek said.

The thieves were not as generous as Morrie's Mercantile, another store in the same building. Police reported that $300 was taken there — all the money available.

Burglars gained entrance to the stores by taking the screws out of folding metal doors that close the stores off from the main building, Pavlicek said.
