Sen. Gary Hart won presidential primaries in Florida, Massachusetts and Rhode Island on Super Tuesday...

Hart also was winning an apparent caucus victory in Oklahoma, adding impetus to his surge out of the Democratic field.

The Colorado senator dismissed Mondale's comeback claim and said he had taken a "grand stride" toward the nomination by demonstrating support in the South and the West.

That left Hart, Mondale, Sen. John Glenn of Ohio and the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Glenn insisted he'd keep trying despite showings that peaked at second place in Alabama, though an aide said it would be Wednesday at the earliest before the Ohio senator decided on the future of his debt-ridden campaign.

Jackson said he would continue the campaign "to the end and beyond" as the "conscience" of the Democrats.

He was third, with 20 percent of the vote, in Georgia, and the percentage was crucial, for it would preserve his entitlement to federal campaign subsidies.

Gary Hart romped in the Northeast primaries Tuesday, but Walter Mondale's victories left him ready for the rest of the fight.

In Florida, Hart was capturing 40 percent of the vote to Mondale's 33 percent. In Massachusetts, it was Hart 40 percent, Mondale 26 percent.

In Alabama, Hart was second narrowly ahead of Hart, both at 21 percent. In Georgia, it was Mondale with 31 percent, Hart 28 percent, as the count neared completion.

The count of delegates gave Hart 132 and Mondale 128. Delegates pledged to former Sen. Jesse Jackson won 49 slots in Florida, and Hart said he expected many of them to swing behind his candidacy.

Jackson had 24 delegates. McGovern won 22 and Glenn was winning 16.

Hart said the election results were a victory for his candidacy. He said the voters had declared again, as in the four states he had won before, that "the politics of the past will not address the problems of the 1980s."

Hart gains steam, but vote puts Mondale effort back on track

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Returns from the state primaries and caucuses Tuesday night strengthened Gary Hart's role on the Democratic presidential nomination, but gave Walter F. Mondale encouragement to keep fighting.

Hart carried the two biggest states holding "Super Tuesday" primaries — Florida and Massachusetts — and also won Rhode Island. His strong showing in Florida gave him the breakthrough he wanted in the South.

Mondale, shut out in the previous four contests against Hart, got back on the scoreboard with a victory in Alabama and a narrow win in the Georgia primary.

Analysis

But perhaps the brightest news for the former vice president during the busy night was the network polls that said Mondale was gaining support and Hart dropping in the last few days.

For Hart, the results established that the New England victories that propelled the Colorado senator to the forefront of the Democratic field were no fluke.

For Mondale, who once expected to lock up the nomination on "Super Tuesday," the results gave his backers new hope with a round of the network polls that said Mondale was gaining support and Hart dropping in the last few days.

momentum generated by victories in New Hampshire, Maine, Vermont and Wyoming would become a landslide that would make the Colorado senator unstoppable.

While "Super Tuesday" failed to deliver a knockout blow for either Hart or Mondale, it ended the hopes of three other candidates that they could stop the Democratic contest from becoming a two-man race.

George McGovern was short of his goal of finishing second in Massachusetts, the only state to support him when he was the Democratic presidential candidate in 1972.

Sen. John Glenn was battling to edge Hart for second place in Alabama, but wasn't close to the leaders in Georgia or Florida.

The network exit polls offered Mondale hope that he might make a strong showing in caucuses in Michigan, Arkansas, Mississippi, Kentucky and South Carolina on Saturday.

"There was an enormous fall-off in Hart support in the last few days," said Laurily Epstein, the polling consultant for NBC News.

"In all five states he peaked and dropped. In the states he won he was so far ahead that the drop didn't matter."

Said ABC News' pollster Jeff Alderman: "A lot of people were making up their minds at the last minute, and they were trending toward Mondale."

Based on exit polling by ABC News, Mondale's experience was his biggest asset in each of the primary states.

The characteristic cited most often by voters who supported Hart was his independence — followed by the belief he would bring needed change.

Block North Dakota banks

Farmers use tractors to protest nation's agricultural policy

By JEFF MEYER THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JAMESTOWN, N.D. — About 70 farmers drove tractors, trucks and cars into town Tuesday, blockading bank parking lots and federal agencies in demand that the government help improve the sagging agricultural economy.

"We're fighting an infested disease called 'cancer in government,'" said farmer James Lacinia. "We've got to get everybody, businessmen, implement dealers, farmers together on this problem," he said.

The farmers issued a statement saying they are incensed by high interest rates, low prices, high fuel costs and a cheap food policy.

"American farmers cannot continue any longer to support the entire U.S. economy by subsidizing the balance of trade with their hard-earned equity," the statement said.

"Each and every year has continued to be worse for the farmer, and this must stop now."

The statement called for the government to take 25 percent of the military budget for an "agriculture products reserve to assist in exporting food to hungry nations."

The farmers drove about 60 tractors, trucks and cars through Jamestown, a town of 16,000 people in eastern North Dakota, and blockaded three banks and the offices of the Agriculture and Stabilization Conservation Service and the Farmers Home Administration at about 11 a.m. They also clogged the parking lot of the Production Credit Association, a federally chartered private lending institution.

"They're pretty well dispersed about town," said Mike Killoran, Sullyman County's FmHA supervisor.

The blockade is intended to draw attention to the farmers' economic plight so that Congress will take action, said farmer Warren Rittenbach, 37, who said he helped organize it.

The farmers plan to keep up the protest for five days if necessary, Rittenbach said.

"We're going to shut Jamestown down, or try to," said farmer Freddie Mifscher. "We would like to get out and pay our debt, but we can't with the way farm prices are now."

The demonstration was peaceful and traffic moved normally through town. The farmers were asked to move a tractor or two blocking a drive-up window at one of the banks and "they've been quite cooperative," said assistant police chief Ed Sackler.

"We've had no problems and we don't anticipate any," he said.

Gov. Allen Olson sent a telegram to U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block, telling him of the protest.

"The demonstration drives home their point," Olson's message said. "Farmers across the nation, not just in North Dakota, are frustrated with the seeming inability of the federal government to develop a new farm program."

Many are still waiting for word on their FmHA loan applications before they can make plans for this spring's planting, Olson wrote.

The governor's office said Olson would send a letter to President Reagan asking him to "help agriculture, the nation's single most important industry, in this time of very serious need."

Pentagon tells Senate panel Salvador army on the ropes

By ROBERT PARRY The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Without congressional passage of $33 million in emergency military aid, the Salvadoran army "will either go back to the barracks or collapse," the Defense Department has warned.

A Pentagon document distributed to the Senate Appropriations Committee last week said that the army has enough ammunition to last through the March 25 election and into early May, but could suffer a "devastating psychological perception of U.S. abandonment" if emergency military aid is not approved.

The warning of a possible military "collapse" is the strongest language yet used by the administration about the situation in El Salvador, although President Reagan has said the aid is "urgently needed" and that "democracy in El Salvador depends on it."

An administration official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said the reference to "collapse" was dropped in a later Pentagon "fact sheet" but that the concern remains. The initial eight-page report was sent to the Appropriations Committee last Thursday. A copy was obtained by The Associated Press on Tuesday.

"Reagan wants the Appropriations Committee to attach the $33 million in Salvadoran military aid to a House-passed bill to provide emergency food relief to 18 drought-stricken African nations. The president says the move is necessary because Congress has balked at his earlier requests for more military aid to El Salvador. The panel is scheduled to consider the request Wednesday."

The Defense Department report accompanying the new request said, "There is an urgent and time-sensitive requirement for support of El Salvador which must be decided upon before the end of March."

"We now have an urgent need for $33 million ... to sustain the (Salvadoran armed forces) through the middle of this summer while Congress acts on the remainder of Reagan's $178 million military aid package."

"Without these funds, the (Salvadoran armed forces) will either go back to the barracks or collapse."

Local crime rate on the rise

By DAVID MOFFAT Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — The number of reported crimes in Twin Falls increased 5 percent in fiscal 1983, according to a report released Tuesday by the Police Department.

The report shows an increase in the frequency of all reported crimes other than petty theft, robbery and assault. Total reported crime rose by 112 cases, to 2,313 cases, while the number of arrests declined by 112, to 1,810.

The report also shows that police detectives successfully concluded 43 percent of their investigations, a significantly higher percentage than that reported as the national average by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

assistance, 1,750 more than in 1982. This amounts to 31.2 more calls per eight-hour shift, says Public Safety Director Tim Qualls.

If the trend continues, eventually it could lead to a slower response time by officers, Qualls says.

By specific crime, the incidence of reported grand theft — the theft of items valued at more than $50 — increased from 211 to 269 cases, including 95 auto thefts — 12 more than in 1982.

The number of reported cases of embezzlement increased from 15 to 22, shoplifting from 34 to 44, burglary from 418 to 462, vandalism from 471 to 498, arson from eight to 10, sale or possession of drugs from 40 to 67 and check forging from 105 to 125.

The number of citations issued by police remained relatively stable, at 4,322. This included an increase from 457 to 1,061 in the number of minor speeding tickets.

Among other highlights of the report were:

- Friday between noon and 4 p.m. is still the most hazardous time to drive in Twin Falls.
- The number of auto-related injuries increased from 259 to 330. There were six traffic fatalities.
- Arrests for driving under the influence declined, from 275 to 230.

McGovern quits after Bay State result

By CLAYTON HASWELL
The Associated Press

BOSTON — George McGovern said Tuesday night he intends to withdraw from the race for the Democratic presidential nomination because of his third-place showing in the Massachusetts primary.

The former South Dakota senator recalled his commitment two weeks ago to get out if he did not finish at least second in the Bay State voting and said "That is what I intend to do."

McGovern told supporters at a Boston hotel that he had written two statements — one to cover a third-place finish and one for delivery if he ends up coming in second. "If the trends and projections change," he said, his supporters could come back Wednesday morning to hear the other statement.

"I said two weeks ago here if I did not place first or second, I would withdraw," McGovern told a crowd of enthusiastic, but disappointed supporters. "That's what I intend to do... With all good grace, I fully accept the verdict of my special friends, the voters of Massachusetts," he said.

Massachusetts was the only state McGovern carried as the Democratic presidential nomination in the 1972 general election.

Easier, a more optimistic McGovern had braved a late-winter snowstorm, greeting commuters outside the Park Street subway station.

"I think we're going to do very well," McGovern said, his cheeks rosy from the cold and snow clinging to his tweed hat. "My exit poll from the station has us ahead so far."

After placing fifth in the New Hampshire primary, McGovern focused on Massachusetts, leaving the state only once — for a debate with the other Democratic presidential hopefuls in Atlanta last Sunday.

"I've always felt a special relationship with the people of Massachusetts and I'll abide by their verdict," he said.
In both his 1972 and 1984 campaigns, McGovern presented himself as a peace candidate. This year, he pledged to institute an immediate nuclear freeze and cut military spending by 25 percent.

McGovern also pledged to restore full federal funds to the student loan program, expand the food stamp and Aid to Dependent Children programs, and revitalize the nation's railroads.

He repeatedly appealed to voters to look to their consciences rather than the polls.

Buoyant Mondale calls it a race to the finish

By ANN BLACKMAN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Walter F. Mondale called his "Super Tuesday" victories in Alabama and Georgia a turning point in the campaign and declared Tuesday night that a month ago his race for the presidency was a bandwagon: "Tonight it's a crusade."

Addressing a cheering, stomping rally at the Capital Hilton, a few blocks from the White House, the former vice president declared: "It's easy to jump on a juggernaut, but it takes class to stand by your man." With late night results showing that Mondale had won Georgia and Alabama while losing Massachusetts, Florida and Rhode Island to rival Gary Hart, Mondale told supporters: "When this race began, it looked like Mondale doing a 100 yard dash. Then it looked like Hart doing a 100 yard dash. Tonight all that has changed. It's going to be a marathon all the way."

Mondale said the race will be tough on the candidates and drew laughs when he added, "It's been a little tough on me. But I've discovered something. A tough fight makes me a better candidate."

After watching — the campaign carpet pulled out from under him in the last four contests against rival Gary Hart, Mondale was forced to change campaign tactics and fight for the nomination that once seemed would be announced.

With his wife, Joan at his side and red, white and blue balloons overhead, Mondale declared: "Tonight was a turning point in the campaign because people asked one question... The crowd roared in response: "Where's the beef?"

Obviously buoyed by the exuberance around him, Mondale continued: "A month ago this campaign was a bandwagon. Tonight it is a crusade."

"In this campaign, we are fighting to halt the arms race," Mondale said. "We are fighting to restore America's economic strength. We are fighting for justice for the American family that has been left out in the cold. And we're fighting to defeat Ronald Reagan."

Hart claims victories reaffirm his politics

WASHINGTON (AP) — A jubilant Gary Hart said Tuesday night that his victories in primary elections in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Florida — demands nationwide approval for his campaign theme of installing a "new generation" of politics in America.

"The politics of the past will not address the challenges of the future," Hart told a cheering crowd of about 800 people in the ballroom of a Washington hotel after the results from "Super Tuesday" contests became clear.

Blue-and-silver heart-shaped balloons floated everywhere, and a huge American flag served as the backdrop for Hart's 10-minute speech to shouting supporters.

Hart walked into a mob chanting "Go, Gary, Go, Gary."

The Colorado senator, with his wife Lee at his side, said Tuesday's voting demonstrated that people want to be rid of environmental problems like acid rain, put the hard-core unemployed back to work and "most of all to end and reverse the dangerous nuclear arms race."

Repeating his oft-made claim that voters are weary of politicians from both parties who are too closely linked to special interests, Hart said: "The politics of yesterday stand between us and our national interest."

Hart said his string of wins in New England and in Florida will give him momentum in coming primary elections in Illinois and New York.

He made no mention, however, of Michigan, where caucuses will take place Saturday, many of them held in limited Auto Workers union meeting halls.

Hart has repeatedly charged that Walter Mondale's endorsement by big labor unions reflects the former vice president's loyalties to them rather than to the majority of the voters.

Hart's campaign manager, Oliver Henkel, conceded that in Michigan, "it will be difficult" to win. Hart was scheduled to begin his campaign day Wednesday in Detroit.

Hart introduced about a dozen members of Congress who have now endorsed his candidacy, including Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn.

Let residents vote on Gooding hospital

Little by little, the Gooding County Commissioners appear to be inching toward imposing — without a public vote — a special levy on county residents to bail out the Gooding County Hospital, now in debt over $210,000.

The motive for such a tax levy is laudable: saving a public health institution which has served the community well for many years.

But the time may have come, we believe, for a thorough reassessment of whether that hospital is genuinely needed in Gooding County and whether the people of the county should pay for its continuance.

Those are decisions county residents should help make. The commissioners should not impose a hospital levy without a vote or bond issue.

If for no other reason, the commissioners should hesitate to do so because of the large amount of money involved. The hospital is already the largest item in the county's annual budget, taking 60 percent — $2.6 million of the county's total budget of $4.3 million — in 1983.

The 1983 budget had an increase of $394,000, of which $317,000 went to the hospital. That was just six months ago. Now, they're going to add another $210,000 to a hospital where the patient load fell to one person one day recently?

Rather than pour more of the taxpayers' money down this drain, maybe the commissioners should begin to look at how to get out of the hospital business.

The changing face of American hospital economics means that the small, community hospital that served so well for decades may soon be a creature of the past. Hospital finance experts say that, nationally, one in three such facilities will not be here in five years.

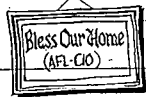

In a meeting this week, commissioner Will Thomas asked rhetorically why the county shouldn't provide a "life-saving service like the hospital?" If it provides public defender, ambulance and medical indigent services.

The answer, at least in part, is cost. Nor is the hospital as directly "life-saving" as it once was. Transportation, improved regional medical care and closer medical cooperation have mitigated the need for a full service hospital in Gooding when Jerome, Boise, and Twin Falls are within an hour and a half away.

Put bluntly, maybe it's time to pull the plug at the Gooding facility. It might remain in a reduced form, perhaps as an emergency clinic, but we believe the free market and county residents should essentially determine its future. The role should not be government's alone to determine.

"WHAT HAVE YOU DRAGGED IN NOW??"

Candidates show some thin thinking

WASHINGTON — The wild fluctuations in the polls that preceded the "Super Tuesday" Democratic primaries were characterized by the pollsters repeatedly observing that "the support for (fill in candidate's name) is thin."

Describing everyone's support as "thin" is very useful to a pollster, because it enables him, after the fact, to explain any errant prediction by saying that all that thin support moved somewhere else.

There is, however, a great deal of truth in the observation. Gary Hart's followers tend to be young and idealistic — George McGovern's crowd of 1972 reborn. McGovern's troops grew older, and lost some of their idealism and vitality. They still love McGovern, but with a love too thin to vote for him.

Walter Mondale's support surely was wide and thin, otherwise it could not have eroded so fast as it did. Mondale was liked, trusted and respected, but not loved. He didn't light anyone up.

The only Democratic candidate who can really excite an audience is Jesse Jackson. In the five-candidate debate in Atlanta on Sunday, Jackson got the only spontaneous burst of applause of the entire evening, however, has excited a thin segment of our population.

The least exciting candidate has to be John Glenn. In Atlanta, he demonstrated once again the language that has caused voters' eyes to glaze over. Glenn began his closing argument this way:

"I do regret something that George has just brought up here, that we have not had more of an opportunity to talk a little bit more about foreign policy because I think that's so important, what happens around the world, nuclear armswise that I mentioned earlier, but I do not agree that this is a generation gap of some kind."

Your closing statement is the one you have armwised that I mentioned earlier? Snore.

If the support for all the candidates was thin, it was because the debate was thin, the differences between the candidates were thin, and the issues were thin.

It is accepted Democratic doctrine that Ronald Reagan wants to increase defense spending too much — 19 percent after inflation.

Hart, Mondale and Glenn all want to increase defense spending, too — the first by 2 1/2 to 4 percent, the second by "about 4 percent," the third by "about 6 percent." Such thin differences do not create any fire in the gut or inspire undying loyalty.

John Chancellor asked each of the five candidates what he would do if he were president and a Czechoslovak airliner full of people ignored warnings from our interceptor aircraft and proceeded toward our strategic air command bases.

Hart said he would look inside, and if the people had uniforms on, he would shoot it down. If they were civilians he would just let them keep going. He did not say what he would do if the shades were down, or address the possibility that some military men might have chosen not to wear their uniforms on that particular occasion.

Glenn said that's not the way interceptors work: "You don't go pecking in the windows to see if they have uniforms on." He did not say what he would do, only that Hart would do was wrong.

Mondale didn't say what he would do either, only that it was a ridiculous question. He said the odds against that happening were long and that if the Russians were to attack us, "they would throw everything they had at us." The others were happy not answering the question, either.

The trouble is, it is not a ridiculous question. It involves fundamental thinking on a matter of fundamental policy. The Russians have never thrown everything they have at us, in Korea or in Vietnam, or anywhere. They do constantly probe our air defenses. It was not a ridiculous question, it was a tough question. We got one ludicrous answer and four evasions.

THE BEST OF THEM: Thinking that evokes thin support and allows erring pollsters to say, "See, we told you his support was thin."

Otis Pike, a former congressman, writes for Newhouse News Service.

This year, Legislature must decide revenue on its own

State lawmakers will have to make the hard decisions themselves this session. Gov. John Evans has absolved himself of the responsibility of acting as the conscience of the Legislature.

He did it last year and says he won't do it again.

In the 1983 legislative session, Evans repeatedly blew the whistle on the Republican-dominated Legislature. He vetoed several proposed budgets for education and other social programs that he deemed too low.

The Legislature responded with larger budgets and two temporary sales tax increases. Lawmakers passed those new tax and appropriation bills and left town. But Evans, still dissatisfied, vetoed the budgets and called legislators back to Boise for a special session.

The 73 Republican lawmakers then turned ugly. Actually some were ugly before that but

Rick Shaughnessy

Senate lasted three days. Evans had requested the opportunity to address a joint session of the two chambers and that request was less than respectfully declined.

Both houses accomplished little. And in their hurry to snub the governor and leave town lawmakers failed on a second attempt to successfully patch up the shoddily drafted, drunken andiling legislation they had passed during the regular session.

But this year, there will be no special session. Evans said Thursday he considers the $484 million budget being touted by Senate Republicans too low.

But when asked if he would call a special session if the Legislature passed such a budget and then left town, Evans said he would not.

The governor says he doesn't expect such a budget will meet with the approval of the entire Legislature. If it does, however, "I'm not inclined to call them back into a special session," he said. "They'll have to face the electorate this fall." He added:

Charles Evans is allowing lawmakers their out. If they can gain a consensus in the two legislative chambers, they can ignore the power of the executive branch of state government — a branch intended to be their equal. But they still have to go back home and be reelected.

They could become local heroes for allowing the state sales tax to return to 3 percent. Maybe they would be similarly lauded at home for failing to reform the state's personal and corporate income tax structure or for failing to remove the exemptions from the sales tax that are enjoyed by those who purchase or contract certain services.

These latter items, however, benefit individuals in a different economic class than those whose interests are served by a reduction in the sales tax.

But taxing is just one-half of the proposition of government. Spending is the other half that means providing goods or services in a manner that the marketplace cannot.

Evans wants to improve on certain of those services, most notably education, industrial recruitment, local government support and health and welfare. He thinks Idaho voters support him on these goals.

His legislators assess the sentiments of voters will be displayed in the next couple of weeks. Should they differ with Evans, as is likely to be the case, and if they take the easy out and leave town over his objections, we'll have to wait until November to see who's correct.

Rick Shaughnessy covers politics and state government for The Times-News.

Rejoicing in the continuity of extraordinary moments

Children gazed at the world, drink it down through all their senses. Childhood is a time of heightened awareness. And heightened expectations of the unexpected.

Children climb to that rarified altitude of wonder partially because of a sense of magic energized that room of the American Museum where, for the first time, I confronted a creature whose jaw bones seemed larger than I. Quiet awe dropped over me. I let go of my mother's hand.

The giants which stomped around in my imagination were midgets next to between house and jungle was a street. No fence. There was house, street, curb, then jungle. The contrast between the regulations and order of a military post and the mystery of unfamiliar animals and jungle vegetation thick with vines and bamboo has never left me. As a poet I have always searched for that boundary within each of us which separates order from mystery.

From my bedroom window I could see a giant three-toed claw hanging upside down in a tree, chewing leaves. He hung there for a few days, moving slowly from tree limb to tree limb. Then he disappeared.

The untidy jungle steamed and thrived with life. Although I was forbidden to, I sometimes crossed the boundary myself, my pant legs stuffed into boots, a borrowed machete in my belt. I pushed and hacked my way into the jungle, but not very far.

Sometimes jungle eased across boundary. Howling monkeys cried in tree tops, black panthers prowled garbage cans under the carport, iguanas scampered across our yard and up our front steps. And everywhere the humid, musky odor of rotting plants. The tarnish boundary required no passport. What wanted to cross, passed by our house.

Later, as a writer, I would have made it my intent to record boundary crossings. My own and others.

Sometimes the magic of a moment is hidden. During the year that I was in seventh grade I changed schools three times. It is painful to make friends and lose them, then repeat the effort, then again, but for a shy child it was agonizingly difficult. I wrote my first poem that year. A lonely child's cry of anguish.

In spite of the dark, emotional impulse, I remember my pride in this first writing based on need. I felt relief. I felt that something I could not speak aloud was spoken. I had established a deeper communion with myself. A kind of meditation.

My loneliness led me to writing. Just as some paleontologists were jolted into their progression by tyrannosaurus, many writers have germinated from the seed of loneliness.

If that first exploration of feelings in a discarded notebook began a tentative journey as a writer, I set my course when I wrote my first love poem.

We were seniors in high school. I had had a crush on her all year, a colonel's daughter. I hated Latin, yet I signed up for the Latin club to be in the same room with her. I was shy and insecure about myself, but enrolled in the drama club because she was a member. I followed her around like a puppy hounding for attention. And figured that she probably thought of me as a pest.

On the last day of school she brought me her yearbook to sign. Embarrassed, but ardent, I quickly wrote her a poem. A love poem. A poem which spoke all those emotions which I had silently displayed. Then I closed the book, handed it to her, told her I had to see a teacher, and ran into her arms around my neck door open. I stood behind the closed door waiting until she would have read the poem and left.

Not long enough, for when I left the room she was waiting for me. She was crying. She ran over to me, put her arms around my neck and kissed me hard. In that enchanted instant, my direction as a poet was probably set.

If we can no longer grasp the wonder of the world as seen by children, we can rejoice in the continuity of extraordinary moments which have brought us to where we are not. If we like where we are, it is time to seek enchantment again.

Wave pool promoted

The Times-News is right, "Facts needed before leap into pool water." The people of Twin Falls want a new pool but not a new gymnasium. As an interested citizen at the city council swimming pool committee meetings last year, I was told by our city manager that Twin Falls was not going to build and operate a city pool. Now our city government would like to pass off the issue to the school district, or preferable, see it die a final death along with the gymnasium.

They have a good reason for it, too. Conventional swimming pools, at best, may break even. The Harmon Park pool didn't break even and it was obsolete long ago. The pool that passed was an obsolete design out of the fifties. What we really need is a pool for the eighties, nineties and the turn of the century. Sall Lake City build a wave pool called Wild Wave, a fan-shaped pool with waves like the ocean, that produced hundreds of thousands of dollars of revenue for the city, and recently they were to sell it to private investors at a profit. The wave pool is the thing of the future and would cost nothing inferior. Waves will be popular until the ocean ceases to create them.

The wave pool is versatile. The simulated white water is good for Evans and Attorney General Jim Jones in their attempts to subordinate the Swan Falls water to upstream development. Last year the price of a wave pool was between $600,000 and $800,000, add $1 million for a cover. The same price we are going to pay for the one that passed.

Canada has built indoor wave pools near schools, shopping malls and public libraries. The success has been astounding. They stay busy from 7 a.m. until 11 p.m., seven days per week.

Get all of the facts, people of Twin Falls, we may have to pay for this issue for the rest of our lives. We don't plan it right and run it in the black.

Evaluating cancer

We should all appeal to our legislators to regain control of education in our local school districts. We should demand that our state conform to the federal laws regulating candidates election funds. We should see that our doctors can again use their best medicines which do cure diseases and eliminate cells, presently banned by the FDA. We should ask for laws protecting our doctors from high court costs by setting a limit and new regulations, thus lowering medical costs to all. Some years ago our former Sen. Frank Church asked the National Cancer Society at Bethesda to evaluate my contention that cells are the cause of cancer.

They did nothing but send me some booklets. I could have told that I was really the first instigator of chemotherapy back in the 1940s and could prove it. The research centers of the West now use Cytotoxic (cell poisoning) drugs together with the surgery and radiation with success. Dr. Pauling asked me to become a member of the Pauling Research Society. He believed that vitamin C would prevent and treat cancer. His wife died recently of cancer.

I told him of the true morphology of cells. He is now trying to raise $1 million to search for the cure. I do not think money is the solution. The Bible tells the way. Contrition and prayer will reveal the truth of "The leaves of the tree shall be used for the healing of the nations and there will be no curse any more." Revelations 22:2.

When the train comes

What to do in case the "white train" cometh. Meet it, greet it and wish it well as it passes through our community then say a word of thanks for its existence. If it does not exist, neither will we. I place far more confidence in the government of the United States than I do in the government of any other nation in the world. I place no confidence in the doomsday prophets who preach the theory of eternal life yet publicly display their concern for any thing that could have the potential of causing them to test their theory.

Not a one party man

Regarding your editorial of March 6 in The Times-News. I believe this to be the greatest single article I have had the pleasure of reading. You gentlemen admire Sen. Church as much as I. I also have a great respect for Sen. McClure. No state has ever had two better men. No doubt you have guessed. I am not a one party man. I vote for the man and not the party. I admire congressmen for what they stand for.

Don't subordinate Snake River water

It is very difficult to be in opposition to people whom one admires and respects. However, when values are at risk that will very likely lead the people of Idaho down the primrose path that is clearly not in their best interest to follow, we have no choice.

We do not agree with Governor Evans and Attorney General Jim Jones in their attempts to subordinate the Swan Falls water to upstream development.

From the consumers' viewpoint, the reasons are:
1. The December 1983 study into the economic impacts of this subordination done by Joel R. Hamilton and R. Ashley Lyman, University of Idaho, shows a potential increase of 47 percent in electrical costs to the irrigators in southern Idaho if only 195,000 acres of new land were developed. This is only the tip of the iceberg, for the Idaho State Water Plan calls for the development of 800,000 acres of new land.

2. This increase could be spread over all classes, thus increasing the irrigators' expenses by 14.7 percent and other consumers by 12.6 percent. As the cost of energy rises all around us, one very strong inducement to attract clean industry to Idaho is cheap power. This development of despoiled land will not only require additional energy, but will also deplete the hydrobase of the Snake and will place in jeopardy one of the best entitlements of clean industry to our state — cheap energy.

3. Food supplies are in surplus in American and land is being taken out of production in order to help present farmers to realize better prices for their crops. The contemplated new development will be in conflict with the present governmental plan now in operation.

4. We are beginning to see the attractiveness of our hydro power to outside interests and the advantage it can bring us. The City of Seattle is willing to make a major investment in Idaho and a commitment of continued expenditures in the Lucky Peak venture. A member of the California Commission of Energy has indicated an interest in purchasing firm hydro power surpluses from the Bonneville Power Administration at anywhere from six to nine cents a kilowatt. This could bring in enough income to the region to insulate every home . . . thus creating a new source of energy, many jobs and retail health for our building supply outlets.

It is particularly for these very valid reasons that we do not favor subordination of the Snake at Swan Falls. As a final warning, if we do go ahead and develop new land, we do so knowing full well that our options are irreversible and.

Polls: Hart's support waned near end

Primaries

Idaho primary status remains undecided

BOISE (AP) — Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa has less than 10 days to decide who will be on Idaho's presidential primary ballot.

But Cenarrusa said Tuesday he isn't making any decisions — at least until after the Legislature decides what it's going to do with the presidential primary.

Idaho's presidential primary is scheduled for May 22. Idaho election laws say the secretary of state — the state's chief election officer — has sole authority to decide who goes on the ballot.

Cenarrusa must do that 60 days before the election — which will be March 22.

But the House voted Tuesday 50-18 for a bill cancelling the presidential primary this year and moving the regular primary election back to Aug. 27. The measure now goes to the Senate.

Rep. Jack Kennevik, R-Boise, said the delay was to give the Legislature more time to work on a new legislative redistricting plan.

Gov. John Evans has vetoed a redistricting plan passed this session and the issue may be headed to the federal courts.

By TIMOTHY HARPER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Despite his strong Super Tuesday showing, Sen. Gary Hart lost support in all five primary states in the days leading up to the halting, according to television network after surveys.

"There was an enormous fall-off in Hart support in the last few days," Laurie Epstein, the polling consultant for NBC News, said. "In all five states he peaked and dropped. In the states he won he was so far ahead that the drop didn't matter."

The beneficiary of much of that lost support, according to the exit polls, was former Vice President Walter Mondale, whose victory in Alabama was his first of the Democratic presidential primary campaign. Mondale was also in a close race with Hart in Georgia.

Hart, who had won four straight primaries, was leading in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Florida on Tuesday.

"A lot of people were making up their minds at the last minute, and they were trending toward Mondale," Jeff Alderman, ABC News' pollster, said.

In the NBC News poll, for example, the people who said they waited until election day to make up their minds split 32 percent for Mondale and 23 percent for Hart. In contrast, among those who had made up their minds in the previous month, 43 percent went for Hart and 22 percent for Mondale.

In Georgia, those who decided on election day went for Mondale over Hart, 36 percent to 22 percent. Those who had decided in the previous month went 47 percent for Hart and 19 percent for Mondale.

And in Massachusetts, those who decided on election day split between Hart and Mondale with former Sen. George McGovern close behind, while those who had decided in the previous month split 59 percent for Hart, 18 percent for McGovern and 17 percent for Mondale.

The ABC News polls said the Rev. Jesse Jackson got strong support from black voters — almost 2-1 over the rest of the field. In the three Southern states, but got few votes from whites. Most of the rest of the blacks went for Mondale, while Hart had little black support.

McGovern's strong showing in Massachusetts, where he hoped for second place, was due to his solid support among people who favor a nuclear arms freeze, according to the ABC News poll.

And Hart's strong performance in Florida was due at least in part to Mondale's disappointing showing among elderly voters. He had been expected to outscore Hart heavily among voters over age 65, but the two candidates instead split the elderly vote.

In the Southern states, much of the support for Sen. John Glenn was from voters who had voted for President Reagan in 1980. The ABC News poll in Alabama, for example, said two-thirds of Glenn's vote came from those who voted Republican in 1980.

The NBC News polls in all five states said that Mondale had a sharper but more negative image, while Hart had a fuzziest image.

"Mondale's negatives are stronger than Hart's," Mr. Epstein said. "He is more clearly perceived by voters, they know more about him. But his image is more negative. Hart's more blurred."

She said almost half the voters polled said Mondale had made too many promises to special interest groups, while about half said Hart has not made himself clear.

For example, in Alabama, where Mondale won, voters were asked how they thought each candidate would perform as president. Twenty-seven percent said Mondale would be very effective, while 38 percent said he would not be very effective and 11 percent were not sure. Nineteen percent, meanwhile, said Hart would be very effective, while 33 percent said he would not be very effective and 19 percent were not sure.

In Alabama, two of three people who voted for Mondale said they think he will get the Democratic presidential nomination, while only half of the people who voted for Hart said he would get the nomination.

TV networks stifle projections until polls close

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Dan Rather urged "CBS Evening News" viewers Tuesday to vote if they hadn't yet done so, then went on to characterize the likely winner as the secretary of state. But none of the television networks made outright projections in states while their polls were still open.

At 8:01 p.m. EST, when the polls had closed in all the primary states except Rhode Island, ABC and CBS went on the air with special broadcasts and projected that Sen. Gary Hart would win in Florida and Massachusetts, while former vice president Walter Mondale would win Alabama. Both networks said Georgia was too close to call.

A congressional subcommittee has held hearings questioning whether the networks should tell voters how they voted before the polls closed.

On Tuesday night, CBS seemed the most sensitive to these concerns. During the 7 p.m. broadcast of the "Evening News," Rather said: "It's still early, very early, this Super Tuesday voting day. Many polls are still open, although many ballots have been cast. If you have not cast yours, we urge you to do so."

All the polls in Georgia closed at 7 p.m. EST. Voting ended at 8 in Alabama, Florida and Massachusetts. The polls in Rhode Island closed at 9.

None of the evening newscasts face projected a winner at 7 p.m., although Rather "estimated" that Mondale would be the winner in Alabama — "the apparent winner," he added. He said it was a close race in Georgia and, as for Florida, there was "not enough information to pass along."

Twin-Breaker on the "NBC Nightly News" said Hart was winning three of the five primary states: Peter Jennings of ABC's "World News Tonight" said that Hart "appears" to be leading in Florida, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Jennings also said that ABC's policy was not to project a winner until all the polls in a state had closed and

Jennings noted, "the polls are still open."

The three networks have been under pressure from Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee. He is concerned that the projections of ABC, CBS and NBC may serve to inform the voters how they voted before they have finished voting.

In 1980, the three networks declared Ronald Reagan the "winner" over Jimmy Carter before polls on the West Coast had closed.

The secretary of state of Massachusetts, Ritchie J. Connolly, last week asked that the media not make projections of the winner or likely winner in his state until after the polls closed.

Despite showing, Glenn says he's still in race

By The Associated Press

John Glenn, deep in debt and still without a primary victory, said he was still in the presidential race Tuesday.

The Ohio senator and former astronaut, was looking for a political place in the Alabama or Georgia primaries to avert the financial collapse of his campaign and to rekindle interest in his candidacy.

He was in fourth place in Georgia with 33 percent of the precincts reporting. He was running in second place in Alabama and in fourth place in Florida. He was running far back in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, his percentage of the vote in single digits in both those states.

Still, Glenn said in Atlanta that his campaign for president "remains very much alive."

Glenn, who bills himself as the "only moderate left" in the Democratic race, borrowed $2 million from four Ohio banks to make his stand in the South.

Many delegates still available this month

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic presidential candidates who survive Tuesday's battle over 511 delegates will have 816 more to fight over in 14 primaries and caucuses in 14 other states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands during the rest of March.

In addition to pledged delegates, each state is also entitled to send some party and elected officials to the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco July 16-19.

There will be 3,933 delegates at the convention. The candidate who has the allegiance of at least 1,967 will be the Democrat's standard-bearer.

Here is a rundown on the rest of the contests in March:

MARCH 14 (28 pledged delegates): Delaware Caucus 14 pledged delegates; 18 total.

North Dakota Caucus 14; 18.

MARCH 15:

Alaska Caucus 11; 14.

MARCH 17 (304 delegates):

Arkansas Caucus 35; 42.

Kentucky Caucus 53; 63.

Michigan Caucus 138; 155.

South Carolina Caucus 41; 48.

Latin American Democrats Caucus 35; 35.

MARCH 18:

Puerto Rico Primary 48; 53.

MARCH 20 (246 delegates):

Illinois Primary 171; 124.

Minnesota Caucus 75; 86.

MARCH 24:

Kansas Caucus 37; 44.

MARCH 24-26:

Virginia Caucus 68; 78.

MARCH 25:

Montana Caucus 19; 25.

MARCH 27:

Connecticut Primary 52; 60.

MARCH 31:

Virgin Islands Caucus 3; 6.

By month's end, the Democrats will have chosen 1,429 delegates, or 42 percent of all delegates.

Some 705 more will be at stake in April, including big primaries in New York on April 3 (252 delegates) and Pennsylvania on April 10 (172). Some 645 will be chosen in May, including 169 in Texas' caucuses on May 5 and 154 in the Ohio primary on May 8. And on June 5, 486 delegates will be chosen in five state primaries, including California (306) and New Jersey (107).

Battle in Poland over crucifixes

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
The Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church and Poland's Communist authorities squared off Tuesday over the government's order to remove crucifixes from high schools, and both sides insisted they would not back away from the fight.

Cardinal Jozef Glemp convened his senior bishops in Warsaw and later issued a statement saying "crucifixes should be returned where society demands so that the rights and demands of believers be respected."

"The church will not retreat," said a statement read by Bishop Jan Mazur to more than 4,000 cheering teenagers at a Mass at the Church of the Transfiguration in Garwolin, a town 40 miles south of Warsaw where the controversy broke out last week.

In Warsaw, government spokesman Jerzy Urban declared "religious symbols cannot be displayed in schools. This is government policy and it will not change."

"The government does not want a war of the crosses and will avoid drastic measures," Urban told a news conference. However, when asked if Communist authorities planned to remove crosses from all state-owned schools, he answered "Yes."

Urban blamed "zealots" among priests and lay Catholics in Garwolin and the neighboring village of Mielno for inspiring "manifestations of clericalism" among high school students who occupied one state-run school last Wednesday and boycotted classes at three others on Thursday.

Local authorities maintained pressure on the students, their parents and priests. An outspoken Garwolin priest, the Rev. Stanislaw Binko, said he received a summons to appear at the police station Wednesday to testify in an unspecified case. The government often uses such tactics to frighten political opponents.

Marine wounded, 27 killed in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A U.S. Marine was shot in the back Tuesday in an apparent sniper attack, and police said at least 27 civilians had been killed and 115 wounded in two days of shelling in Beirut's Muslim and Christian neighborhoods.

Christian and Moslem factions negotiating in Lausanne, Switzerland announced that all sides had agreed to a cease-fire as of 8 p.m. (2 p.m. EST). The cease fire took effect in Beirut shortly after the deadline.

The Lausanne conference is aimed at ending the fighting and restructuring the Lebanese government.

The wounded Marine's name was withheld until his family could be notified. He was treated on the USS Guam, off the Lebanese coast, and reported in stable condition.

Army Maj. Don McClary, the chief U.S. military spokesman in Lebanon, said the other "was shot in the upper back, one round" while he was off duty.

McClary said the shooting occurred "east of Beirut," but he declined to be more specific or to say what the Marine was doing at the time. He said it was the second shooting of an American serviceman since the 1,600-man U.S. Marine contingent of the multinational force was moved out of Beirut to U.S. ships off Lebanon Feb. 28. On March 5, a U.S. Marine officer was hit by a bullet in front of the Hotel Riviera on the seafont boulevard where U.S. and British Embassy offices are located. Although the Marine contingent has been moved, about 100 Marines remain ashore to guard the U.S. Embassy offices in Beirut. There also are about 30 U.S. Army officers helping train Lebanese army units.

The Marines also have about a dozen men attached to their headquarters staff in the suburb of Yarze, east of Beirut. And Marines have been seen at hilltop positions in the mountains east of the capital, where they are believed working as spotters for U.S. ships.

Among the civilians killed in the latest shelling of Beirut residential areas were 12 children, including three members of one family in nearby Mdein west Beirut: 8-month-old Fimam Ballout, her brother Mohammed, 2, and sister Fatima, 6.

The three Ballout children died in their beds when a shell slammed into their house shortly before midnight Monday.

Their father, Hassan Ballout, 42, a Shiite Moslem, lost both legs in the explosion and was rushed unconscious to a hospital along with his injured wife, police said.

Rival Christian and Moslem militias blamed each other for starting the shelling attacks on populated areas, which began Monday evening, raged past midnight, slackened briefly at dawn Tuesday and then picked up.

One salvo of four shells struck close to the only open crossing point between Beirut's Christian and Moslem sectors at midmorning Tuesday, causing panic among hundreds of motorists lined up at both ends of the crossing.

Rebels rip American maneuvers

By ANNIE CABRERA
The Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Leftist rebels charged on Tuesday that planned U.S. troop maneuvers in Honduras near the Salvadoran border represent a step toward "direct intervention" in this country's civil war.

The rebels' Christiane Radio Venceremos said Honduras and the United States were preparing an "operation of great scope."

The Reagan administration has justified this action by saying it is an attempt to suppress the violence of elections March 25, the broadcast said.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday a military exercise involving 400 to 600 U.S. troops will be staged in Honduras later this month. In Tegucigalpa, Honduras, a source close to the U.S. military said the exercises will be held "sometime between the 22nd and the 26th of March."

Eight Salvadoran parties, ranging from centrist to ultra-conservative, are fielding candidates for president and vice president in the March 25 elections.

The Salvadoran rebels have said they do not plan to disrupt the March 25 voting. In March 1982 they tried unsuccessfully to block voting in Constituent Assembly elections.

The Venceremos broadcast said the U.S. maneuvers this month will take place on the border with El Salvador's northeastern Morazan province, a longtime rebel stronghold.

The rebels warned that "if the presence of U.S. troops near the border is a method for intimidation, we will respond by deepening the war until achieving victory — even if we have to do it by battling and defeating invading troops from the United States and their puppet, the Honduran army."

In Washington, U.S. officials confirmed that unarmed U.S. Army reconnaissance planes have begun flying into Salvadoran air space from Honduras, searching for concentrations of leftist rebels who might attempt to disrupt the elections.

Pentagon officials said the United States also will soon resume cruises by major U.S. naval units off the Central American coast.

Pentagon officials said the number of U.S. military personnel in Honduras increased to about 1,700, the biggest force since a series of exercises ended in early February. They said most of the American troops are at Palmerola Air Base, 50 miles northwest of Tegucigalpa.

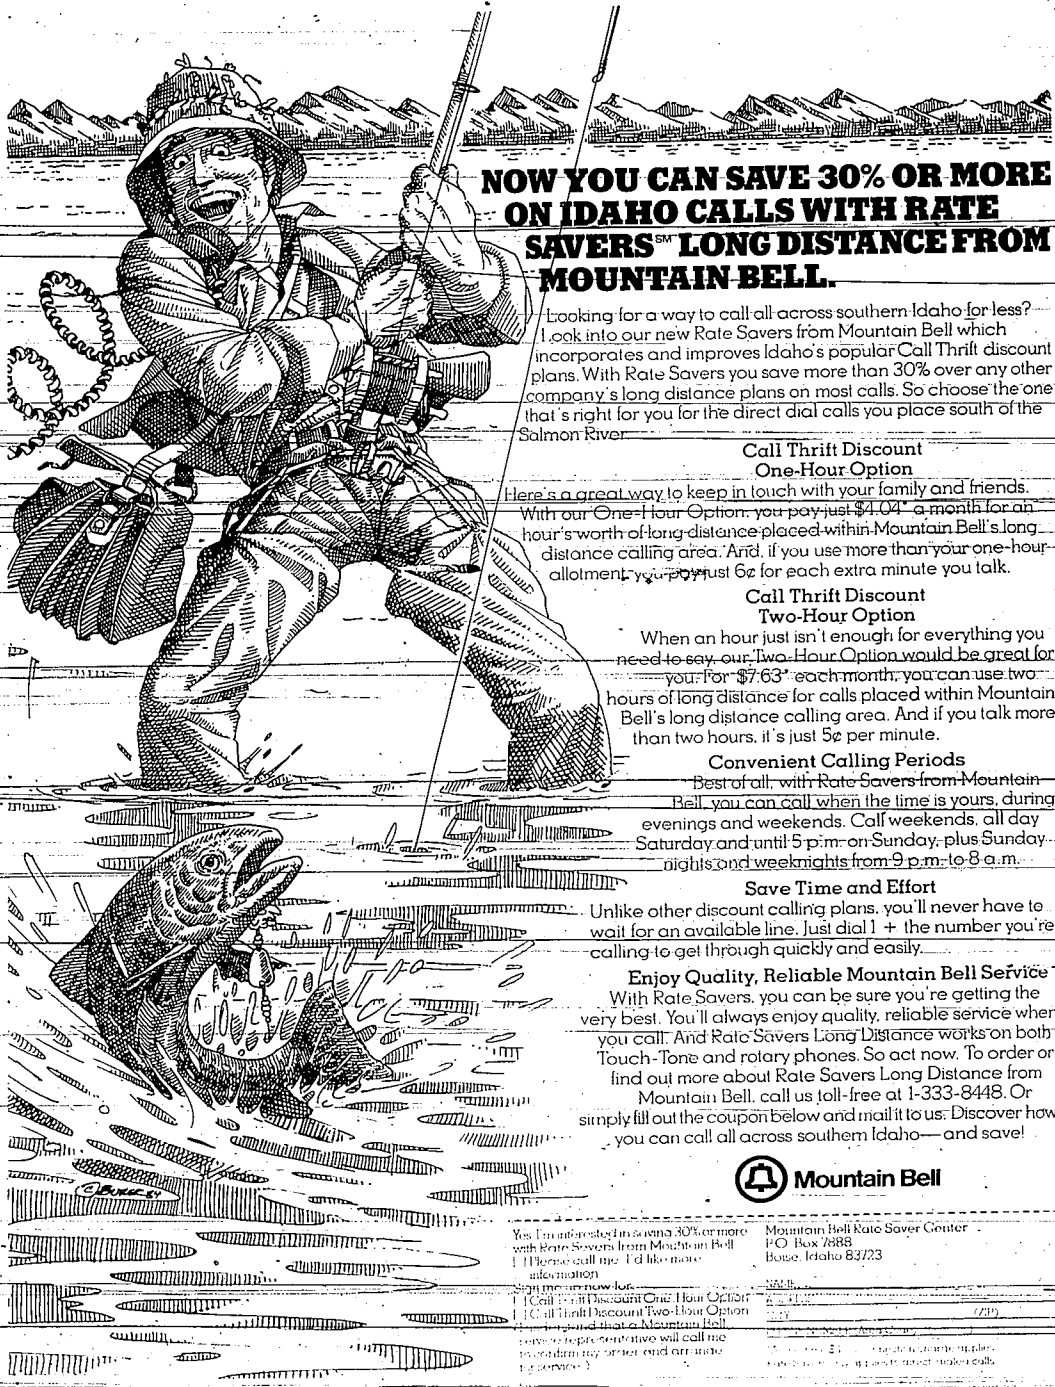

China income up

PEKING (AP) — The per capita income in Chinese urban families last year averaged 500 yuan — $250 — up 6 percent from 1982, the government announced Tuesday.

Some of the increased income was spent on food, a report from the State Statistical Bureau said. It said sales of color televisions rose 136 percent and sales of refrigerators increased nearly 94 percent.

Although the average per capita income was $250, that includes people without jobs. Many skilled workers now earn close to 1,000 yuan — $500 — a year.

An average family spent nearly $150 on food in 1983, an increase of 8.4 percent, the statistical bureau said. As living standards rose, people showed a preference for such low-fat foods as lean meat, eggs, poultry and fish, it said.

Reagan tries selling Jews arms plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan appealed Tuesday to American Jews to support increased military aid to Jordan, arguing that it poses no danger to Israel and is necessary to counter Syrian attempts to dominate the Middle East "through terrorism and intimidation."

In his first election-year speech to a major Jewish organization, Reagan portrayed Jordan as a moderate Arab nation essential to the Mideast peace process which is facing security threats from Syria and Iran.

"Since the security of Jordan is crucial to the security of the entire region, it is in America's strategic interest — and I believe it is in Israel's strategic interest — for us to help meet Jordan's legitimate needs for defense against the growing power of Syria and Iran," Reagan said.

"Such assistance to Jordan does not threaten the prospects for Mideast peace by reducing the dangers of the radical threat," Reagan said in a speech to about 3,000 people at the young leadership conference of the United Jewish Appeal.

There was scattered hissing in the crowd when Reagan called for increasing arms aid to Jordan. He won a standing ovation by promising the United States would walk out of the United Nations if Israel were ever thrown out of the organization.

Reagan has upset Jews by proposing to sell portable Stinger and aircraft missiles to Jordan and Saudi Arabia. In addition, the administration is seeking about $200 million from Congress to finance creation of an 8,000-man Jordanian strike force that could be dispatched anywhere in the Persian Gulf where trouble flares.

On Capitol Hill, Rep. Larry Smith, D-Fla., said he would lead a fight Wednesday to block the Stinger sales. He said he has the backing of about 50 House members, but acknowledged he may not succeed within the 30 days allowed for congressional veto of an intended arms sale. A similar move is under way in the Senate.

Smith said the United States had taken a "carrot and stick approach" toward Jordan. "We give them all the carrots they want and then beat us over the head with the stick."

To block the sales, both the House and Senate must pass separate bills forbidding the deals. If they are vetoed by the president, two-thirds of both chambers must vote against the sales to override his veto. However, the deals could be thwarted after the 30-day deadline if delivery — rather than sales — of the missiles is prohibited by Congress.

Committee approves more Nicaraguan funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Intelligence Committee voted Tuesday to set aside an additional $21 million for aid to anti-government rebels in leftist Nicaragua and allow the Reagan administration to spend $7 million of it immediately.

A committee source said the compromise plan, which still requires approval of the Senate Appropriations Committee and the House and Senate, was accepted by the administration, which is pressing hard for more aid to Central America.

Under the compromise, proposed by Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, the remaining $14 million would go into a contingency fund controlled by the director of the Central Intelligence Agency. The director would have to get approval of Intelligence Committee members before spending it.

The committee sent word of its action to the Appropriations Committee, which meets Wednesday to consider the requested funds along with $33 million in emergency assistance to El Salvador, which is fighting a leftist insurrection.

The Intelligence Committee met in closed session. A source, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said there were no votes against the administration request.

Last Thursday, the Appropriations Committee rejected by a 15-14 margin a motion to add the $21 million for the Nicaraguan rebels, known as "contras," to a bill providing emergency assistance to poor people in the United States to buy fuel to heat their homes.

Another bill, appropriating emergency funds for starving people in Africa, was put over until this week so that the administration could attempt to attach the Salvadoran aid appropriation to it.

The administration's tactics drew fire from both Republicans and Democrats in Congress, including members of the Senate Intelligence Committee, which was bypassed.

On Monday, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said the administration was "willing to exploit the misery in Africa to advance its own political agenda."

Meese relents, will testify again at hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edwin Meese III agreed Tuesday to return to testify at re-opened hearings on his confirmation as attorney general after Senate Democrats pressed for new sessions on his nomination.

Senate Judiciary Committee spokesman Mark Goodin said Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., committee chairman, had asked Meese to return, and that the White House counselor, through aides, "has indicated he will return if it is necessary."

Thurmond asked Meese to come back before the panel shortly after Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said Senate Democrats had pressed at a party caucus for Meese to return to testify.

Byrd said several senators had expressed unhappiness with some of Meese's written answers to members of the committee about the transfer of intelligence agencies by the Carter re-election campaign to the 1980 Reagan campaign, and about loans arranged for Meese by acquaintances who later got federal jobs.

White House deputy press secretary Peter Roussel said "it is my understanding that Mr. Meese will be coming back and will be willing to testify if the committee can work out the arrangements."

Goodin said a date for a re-opened hearing had not been set, but that negotiations were under way "to work out a date convenient to all parties." Thurmond was also trying to press the Democrats to agree to a firm date for the panel vote on Meese's nomination, which had been scheduled for Thursday. Goodin said Thurmond believed that "it would be beneficial for Meese to re-appear and resolve outstanding questions" from some of the senators.

When asked whether the Meese nomination was in trouble, Byrd replied: "Could be." However, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., has predicted the Senate will confirm the nomination.

Random shooting claims Dallas vagabond

DALLAS (AP) — A group of people cruising "for kicks" apparently shot and killed a 41-year-old man who collected aluminum cans and newspapers to make a living, police say. "As far as we can tell, there was no connection between the victim and the person who shot him. It appears to be a random 'killing,'" said homicide investigator Bob Alexander said.

"Apparently they just did it for kicks," he said. Four people were arrested after the death of Joseph Jones, who was shot in the chest Monday by a passer in a car that pulled up beside him as he walked down a street — a block from his home.

Homicide Sgt. H.M. Rice said Tuesday the four — two 14-year-old boys, a 27-year-old man and a 22-year-old woman — were being held while authorities continued their investigation but formal charges had yet to be filed.

Witnesses told police someone called out to Jones and he was shot as he approached a car carrying four people. "Police arrested four people in a car about two blocks away a short time after the shooting," Alexander said he was told the four were "riding around and having a good time" at the time of the shooting.

Billy Ray Jones, a brother of the victim, said his brother "told me a few months ago, he had some trouble with some people that always tease him and mess with him as he picks up the cans."

Jones said his brother never married and lived with their mother, Gwen Jones. "They called him the 'can man.' He was just a hustler. He was just a guy trying to make an honest dime," the brother added.

School prayer talks slowed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiations aimed at scheduling a Senate vote this week on a school prayer amendment broke down Tuesday with backers of an amendment disagreeing over what form the prayer should take.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. said he had hoped to get unanimous consent from senators to schedule a vote Thursday on a constitutional amendment, strongly supported by President Reagan, which would permit organized voca prayer in the nation's public schools.

But Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the minority leader, said some senators wished to offer amendments permitting only silent prayer or meditation and allowing equal access to public facilities by voluntary religious groups.

"If everybody is going to try to piggyback on (the original amendment), we're right back where we started," Welcker said.

Defense opens case in gang rape trial

By FRED BAYLES
The Associated Press

FALL RIVER, Mass. — Saying that a purported gang rape started out as "a joke," the defense attorney told a jury Tuesday his client tried to have sex on a bathroom pool table with a willing woman who then asked to go home with him.

Everyone thought it was just a joke," Edward Harrington, the attorney for Daniel Silvia, told a jury in opening arguments.

Harrington, a former mayor of New Bedford, told the jury that the attempt at sex between his client and a 22-year-old mother of two "was consensual in nature."

He said Silvia would take the stand to testify, "there was no screaming, no crying, until the others came around the pool table."

When the woman got off the pool table to leave, "she came back to him and put her arms and legs around him and said 'take me home,'" Harrington said.

Harrington said Silvia had met the woman prior to the night on March 6, 1983, when the woman said she was attacked and raped by a gang of strangers at Big Dan's, a bar in New Bedford's North End.

When they met at the bar, Harrington said, "one thing led to another and they started talking about making love."

The defense attorney said the two had been drinking and fell to the floor as Silvia tried to unbutton the woman's pants. Others crowded around and removed Silvia's boots.

He said his client then carried the woman to the pool table as she shouted "just him, nobody else."

laughing, joking men surrounded them.

"He was very embarrassed because he couldn't perform," Harrington said. "He tried to leave but he couldn't get up because she had her arms around him."

Harrington's opening arguments came as the defense opened its case in an afternoon trial of Silvia, 27, and Joseph Vieira, 22.

Four other men are being tried in a separate morning trial, at which the prosecution it still presenting its side.

Earlier Tuesday, the jury in the morning trial heard testimony that another defendant told the woman, "I'm sorry for what I did to you," when she confronted him in a police station hallway.

His Grace said Cordeiro had come to the station on his own to tell of his role in the attack at Big Dan's tavern on March 6, 1983.

De Lorean maintains innocence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Z. De Lorean said Tuesday as his cocaine trafficking trial opened that he expects to be acquitted because "I'm absolutely an innocent man."

"I'm a fighter. ... I don't think there's any way when the truth comes out that I can be found guilty," the silver-haired De Lorean told reporters outside the federal courthouse during a brief break in jury selection.

De Lorean, accompanied by his wife, model Cristina Ferrare, and attorney Howard Weitzman, said he feels he is the victim of "a pure frameup" and spoke bitterly about the government's role in the case.

"They're trying to take me away from my kids," De Lorean, 59, said in an emotional voice.

He was arrested in an FBI "sting" operation in which agents posed as drug dealers and recorded meetings on videotape. The nine-count indictment alleges that he conspired with several people to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine in an effort to pump funds into his sports car company in Belfast, Northern Ireland, which was failing and has since gone into bankruptcy.

"I'm a Christian man, very close to his family," De Lorean said, "and it's a very nerve-racking, awesome experience."

"I never in my life thought in this country with the contributions I've made to minorities and blacks and everyone else, I never believed I could be brought into a situation like this."

If convicted on all counts, he could face a maximum of 72 years in prison. The first jury candidate questioned Tuesday before U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi said he believed De Lorean is more likely guilty than innocent.

De Lorean, glasses perched on his nose, leafed through notes as the prospective juror was questioned.

Evolution ruled science

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Board of Education rules requiring public school textbooks to present evolution as "only one of several explanations of the origins of humankind" are unconstitutional, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox declared Tuesday.

Mattox's opinions are non-binding, but are traditionally obeyed by state agencies.

The rules on evolution "can be explained only as a response to pressure from creationists," Mattox said.

"... The inference is inescapable from the narrowness of the requirement that a concern for religious sensitivities, rather than a dedication to scientific truth, was the real motivation for the rules," he said.

His opinion was requested 4½ months ago by state Sen. Oscar Mauzy, a Dallas Democrat who said a 1974 rule was a concession to longtime textbook critics Mel and Norma Gabler of Longview, "that rule was modified slightly in 1983."

A woman who answered the phone at the Gablers' home said Mel Gabler was in Chicago and could not be reached and that his wife was out and also could not be reached.

Mattox's opinion "is a truly significant national victory for science education, religious liberty and the First Amendment," said Michael Hudson, Texas coordinator for People for the American Way, an anti-censorship group.

"Texas' anti-evolution textbook rules are merely one part of the national creationist crusade to replace science with religion in science classes throughout our public schools," Hudson said. "If allowed to continue, this extremist movement could threaten the scientific literacy of our schoolchildren as we move into the era of expanding technology."

What's what

"Put 'em on a ledge" is scriptwriters' jargon. It means: If you need suspense in a scene, write your characters into some precarious physical position high up. This is supposed to tap the basic fear of falling felt by everybody in the audience. It tings their nerves. It intensifies their attention. In how many shows have you witnessed a late big scene wherein the hero chases the villain onto a cliff or steel girder or shaky footbridge? It's that word: "Put 'em on a ledge" mechanism.

To find out if the man has construction experience, ask him, What's the traditional color to paint a wooden ladder? The new hand may shrug. But the savvy soul will say, No color - you never paint a wooden ladder. Paint covers flaws. Paint gets slippery.

In old Anglo-Saxon, "ang" meant pain, and "naeg" meant nail. That's where we got the word "hangnail."

FOOD FOIBLES

People who go to church regularly aren't as fussy about their food as people who don't. Studies seem to prove this, but they don't explain why.

Some college scholars tend to worry more than others, naturally. And psychology students at the University of Texas wanted to find out which worry most. Those in engineering? Journalism? Business? Science? Education? Math? Psychology students fretted over that project for months. Biggest worriers, they learned, were psychology students.

PART AND PENCE

Mr. Hart married Miss Pence. In Colonial days, this. They combined their names to become Mr. and Mrs. Hartpence. And so named, too, were many generations of their descendants, including young Gary Hartpence, who didn't decide to drop the last syllable until he was 24 years old. You know him now as Colorado Sen. Gary Hart.

Q: I've read that John Wayne in an early movie was the first singing cowboy. How come he didn't sing in any others?

A: He couldn't. He didn't sing in the first, for that matter. A singer named Smith Ballou actually did that early vocalizing for Wayne.

John Lennon wrote in bed.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES - You have very lofty thoughts and you would like to make notations of them since you will find some frustrations in putting them in motion; they are too valuable to neglect.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Plan how to get your best ideas working even though it may take a long time to do so. The fun you were planning may be delayed.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study the situation at home, and do whatever will improve conditions there. Not a good day for entertaining.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have much correspondence to handle, but be sure to use the right words if you want to get the best results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Your potential for making money is quite good, but be unusually clever at this time. Take it easy tonight.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You have good ideas how to gain your finest aims, but may suffer delays because of interruptions from others. Be happy at home later.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may have a time with you getting out of some unpleasant condition, but it may take longer than you think. Help your loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have to study that problem with a friend a little more before you can handle it wisely. Get busy with aims that will take time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure to handle whatever your job is with precision since higher-ups are watching you. Take it easy at home tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 21 to Dec. 21) New situations are all right now, but take care you do not get into any new interests as yet. Learn more about them first.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you follow your intuition today, you could get yourself into quite a pickle. Meet the expectations of your mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't endeavor to get your ultra-modern ideas over to one who is ultra-conservative or you get nowhere fast.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar 20) You want to make changes in your surroundings, so draw up plans, and then be patient in case of delays. Be tactful.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY, he or she will be one whose ideas will be great and the imagination likewise, so encouraging in this, even though it may be much later in life before his or her dreams can be realized. Praise for an especially good work that is done.

Woman's rough day: hit by bus, robbed

By ELISSA MCCRARY
The Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A 28-year-old woman stepped off a sidewalk into the side of a bus and lay helpless between its wheels as a teen-ager made off with her purse and the $2,000 inside, police say.

A passer-by gave chase and recovered the money, and the youth was arrested Tuesday after being identified by an off-duty police officer who spotted him leaving the scene.

Linda Manion of Morrisville, Pa., who was dragged about 100 feet by the bus, was in a guarded condition in the intensive care unit at Helene Fuld Medical Center with fractures of the pelvis, clavicle and wrist, a hospital spokesman said.

The 15-year-old boy, whose name was not released because of his age, was being held at the Mercer County Youth House and was scheduled to appear at a hearing Wednesday.

According to police, Ms. Manion had just cashed a $2,000 check and received in a civil suit settlement at a downtown bank when she stepped off the curb into the side of a bus.

"She said she was on her way to meet a friend," said police Sgt. Robert Orlovski. "I don't know if she was preoccupied or what. She just walked into the bus."

Ms. Manion was trapped under the bus near the left rear wheel and it took rescue workers about 15 minutes to free her, he said.

"She was conscious and she saw this guy grab her pocketbook and she started to scream for somebody to stop him," said Orlovski. "She didn't call about anything but getting the money back. Even when we went to the hospital to talk to her later, all she wanted to know about was her money, if it was safe."

Police said the bus driver, Raymond M. Kirby, 40, did not see Ms. Manion.

Kirby said a witness to the accident ran up to the bus door and said, "You just hit a lady and she's under the bus."

"I jumped out of the bus and ran around the back to see what had happened, and all I could see was her head sticking out from behind the wheel," Kirby said. "It really shook me up. She was screaming and I said, 'Just stay quiet, don't try to move, and I ran back and radioed for all the help I could get.'"

Meanwhile, a teen-ager passing by spotted Ms. Manion's purse, grabbed it and ran. Another passer-by, Martin Flesch, 38, of Trenton, chased the youth and grabbed him, Orlovski said. He said the youth dropped the money but slipped away from Flesch.

Flesch returned the money to police at the scene.

Police Detective Howard White, who was off duty at the time, saw the youth and was able to identify him.

"It was just fortunate that I was there and recognized him," White said. "I made it easy for us to apprehend him."

The bus was carrying about 50 Trenton Central High School students at the time of the accident. Sheila Ward, a spokeswoman for Mercer Metro bus lines, said Kirby had a scheduled day off Tuesday.

She said "Mr. Kirby did nothing wrong" and, as far as the company is concerned, "there's no problem with his continuing to drive the bus."

The latest in yearbooks: a video style

ALTON, Ill. (AP) — Members of the video generation will be able to re-capture the sounds as well as the sights of their high school years in Alton with a taped "yearbook."

Copy Cat Video partners Claudia Walters and Sue Wilson, both of Godfrey, are working on a 14-hour Alton High School's sports, dances, plays, awards and graduation.

Since the high school homecoming, the first activity to be taped, the women have recorded more than 25 hours of videotape. They have more than three months to go before graduation.

"Since this is a pilot project, we are really learning as we go along," Mrs. Walters said. "We used to go to a game or a dance and stay for the entire time. Now, we stay for about half an hour and pick out the highlights."

The Video Yearbook, which will cost students $40, will not replace the regular high school Yearbook. But unlike the printed yearbook, the videotape will include events from the entire school year.

"For instance, the proms and graduation will not be in this year's printed yearbook because of press deadlines," Mrs. Walters said. "Everything will be on videotape, including the teacher strike, which delayed the start of the school year."

For an additional $5, seniors may buy a personalized videotape featuring interviews and footage of them accepting their diplomas.

"The audio portion of the tape will really add another dimension to the yearbook," Mrs. Walters said. "Sound captures the style of music that is popular this year. It also captures the scholastic. When we first started taping at dances, they tended to get as far away from the camera as they could. At the last dance, when I turned on the light the kids came flocking around so they could be on camera."

Videotape of that dance, a Feb. 10 "beach party," shows students doing the limbo dressed in Hawaiian shirts, shorts and sandals.

If the project is successful, the women, who got the idea after reading about a similar project in California schools, will take on two more schools next term.

Stepfather likely won't don costume

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — It's not likely that Bill Johnson will obey a subpoena instructing him to wear tights to his stepdaughter's wedding. Even the judge realizes that.

"I suspect that Bill will be here in his Western-cut suit," said Sedgewick County District Judge David Kennedy, who signed the subpoena and will be performing the ceremony for his friend's stepdaughter.

Johnson was served Monday with the subpoena, requiring him to attend the March 31 ceremony at a lake "in costume of the Shakespearean era."

Valancy "Thumper" Vant Leven, and her fiance decided to get married in costume since they are both involved in the city's "Shakespeare in the Park" program, which presents the city's plays on a mobile outdoor stage in city parks, the judge said.

According to Kennedy, when Miss Vant Leven told her stepfather she was getting married in costume, he said, "That's fine, I'm wearing my suit."

"So we decided what we needed was a subpoena. Thumper drew it up and I signed it and got a uniformed civil process server to serve it," the judge said.

'Phone bandit' tales persist

BEDFORD, N.Y. (AP) — Telephone bandits using credit-card numbers of two families ran up more than $170,000 in long-distance calls during February, and other New York state customers are reporting similar experiences.

Charges of $61,180 in a 550-page bill arrived last week at the home of John and Connie Weinstein in Goldens Bridge, the couple said.

The report Monday came one day after Jane Landenberg of New Bedford said she received a 2,800-page February bill for $109,504 last week.

The New York Times reported in Tuesday's edition that two other customers, one in Chappaqua and the other in New York City, also have complained of similar experiences.

The Chappaqua resident, the Times said, did not want to be identified but told of getting a bill for more than $16,000 in fraudulent credit calls made in February.

And Barbara Zerzan of Manhattan said she got a 710-page bill listing February calls totaling more than $35,000.

New York Telephone Co., which acts as billing agent for American Telephone and Telegraph's long distance charges, said it was investigating, but had no idea who the culprits were.

Speculation ranged from college pranksters to international drug dealers.

Iran claims Iraq is using chemicals

By JOSEPH PANOSIAN
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran charged that Iraq used chemical weapons again Tuesday in an attack on its forces in the Majnoon Islands east of Basra, and injured "tens" of Iranian soldiers.

The accusation came as a United Nations team arrived in Tehran to investigate earlier charges by Iran that Iraq had employed chemical warfare in the six-year Gulf war. Iran has denied the earlier charges and offered to cooperate in any investigation. It did not immediately respond to the latest accusation.

In Baghdad, a scheduled meeting of Arab League foreign ministers in Baghdad had been postponed until Wednesday morning.

Mohammed Saad, undersecretary in Iraq's foreign ministry, said members agreed to continue deliberations on a draft resolution and wait for the arrival of the foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia and Morocco, who were expected overnight.

Nineteen Arab countries have agreed to attend the meeting. Baghdad radio, monitored in Cyprus, also claims heavy fighting in the Basra front and day-long raids by Iraqi jets and helicopter gunships against "Iranian troop buildups."

It claimed the bodies of 1,095 Iranian soldiers had been counted after Monday's battle. That brought to 2,252 the number of Iranian soldiers that Iraq claimed it killed in its latest offensive.

In Tehran, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, IRNA, said the use of chemical weapons Tuesday left "minimal" casualties and less contamination than the attacks Friday and Monday, primarily because of strong winds and better protection of Iranian soldiers.

The use of chemical weapons in warfare is outlawed by a 1925 Geneva protocol.

The four-member U.N. team of experts in chemical weaponry was asked to visit the Majnoon Islands immediately "to inspect the site of the incident and the evidence of today's Iraqi chemical bombing," IRNA reported.

It said team members inspected the bodies of 10 Iranians killed in the chemical bombings and talked to Iranian doctors.

A U.N. spokesman in New York said the team would spend five days in Iraq. It was dispatched by Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar last week because of his "moral obligation in this matter."

Iran says nearly 1,700 of its people have been wounded and many killed by toxic chemicals during fighting over the oil-rich Majnoon Islands. Iran seized the islands in the first days of its latest offensive, which began Feb. 21 along the southern sector of the battlefield.

The government in Tehran has sent several victims of the alleged chemical attacks for treatment in Sweden, Austria, Britain, France and Japan. Five have died in Swedish and Austrian hospitals, and doctors there reported some evidence that the Iranians had been exposed to mustard gas and mycotoxin, or "yellow rain."

Cyprus fights U.S. aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading Cyprus politician Tuesday accused Turkey of using nearly $200 million a year in U.S. aid to maintain its troops on Cyprus.

Alexis Galanos, chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the Cyprus Parliament, told reporters that despite U.N. efforts to work out a settlement, "unfortunately so far there are no hopeful signs."

Turkish troops invaded Cyprus in 1974 and have remained, controlling more than one-third of the island. The House Foreign Affairs Committee last week voted to cut $39 million from the Reagan administration's military aid request for Turkey next year.

The administration opposed the move, which would still leave Turkey with $720 million, a boost of $2 million over this year.

Galanos said the administration overestimates Turkey's role in maintaining stability in the eastern Mediterranean and "underestimates the bitterness and frustration of the two other parties in the triangle—Greece and Turkey."

He is on a one-week visit here to see members of Congress and administration officials, including Aitchison, assistant secretary of defense for international security planning, and Richard Burt, assistant secretary of state for European affairs.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar is to meet in New York on Friday with Rauf Denktaş, head of the Turkish Cypriot community which declared its independence as a state in November. Only Turkey has recognized it.

Cyprus has proposed a federation that would give the Turkish-Cypriots control of 25 percent of the island. Denktaş offered in January to allow Greek Cypriots to return to part of the city of Famagusta, which they fled during the 1974 invasion. However, Cyprus would have to recognize his separate state.

Perez de Cuellar is trying to arrange for the refugees to return to Famagusta. Galanos said "we are waiting very anxiously to see if the secretary-general can undertake any initiative with the hope of success."

Galanos said 45,000 Turks were resettled in Cyprus after the invasion and that the Turkish Cypriot secession was a step toward eventual annexation of the island.

He said the administration had taken a strong stand against recognizing the Turkish Cypriot state but also was trying to boost U.S. military aid to Turkey. "We realize the importance of Turkey's stability," he said. "But we believe justice should be done in Cyprus and the rule of law realized."

Soviets aren't budging

MOSCOW (AP) — West German opposition leader Hans-Jochen Vogel said Tuesday that the Soviet Union, Konstantin U. Chernenko and other Soviet leaders showed no change in the Kremlin's tough stand in the superpower dispute over nuclear missiles in Europe.

Vogel, a member of the Communist Party, and other Soviet officials stressed that the initial deployment of new U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 nuclear missiles in Western Europe last year was "a heavy blow to East-West relations," Vogel told reporters at a news conference.

The Soviets said they want the American missiles out of Europe before they will resume talks on limiting nuclear weapons. They also "got rid of any other ideas" that they might be willing to compromise, Vogel said.

The position of the Soviet side was very firm. That they are not willing to return to the bargaining table before the United States goes back to the situation of November 1983, when the first of the new medium range missiles were deployed, he added.

Vogel and members of his Social Democratic Party in West Germany called an hour Monday. Vogel talked alone with the Soviet party boss for 20 minutes afterwards.

On Monday, the Soviet news agency Tass said Chernenko told Vogel that arms limitation talks can be resumed if the United States removes "the obstacles" it created by deploying the new weapons.

Vogel said Chernenko struck him as "a personality who is aware of his responsibilities." He refused a reporter's request to compare the new leader with his predecessor, Yuri V. Andropov, with whom Vogel met on his last visit to Moscow in January 1983.

Gunman kills school janitor

ROME (AP) — A man shot and killed a school janitor, then held a teacher and 15 children hostage for six hours Tuesday before surrendering to Rome's mayor, who told the gunman: "Give me the gun."

After negotiating the safe release of the hostages, Mayor Ugo Vetere said: "Sure I'm happy. But I'm too tired and I want to go home. I didn't do anything special, I just did my duty."

The gunman, identified by police as Maurizio Nillo, 32, was being held for questioning.

The standoff began at about 10 a.m. Tuesday when a man burst into Ignazio Silone school and was confronted by Ernesto Chiovini, a 46-year-old janitor.

When Chiovini tried to block his way, the man pulled a 12-gauge, pump-action shotgun from under his coat and opened fire, killing the janitor. School Principal Giulia Marchetti called Chiovini "a true hero" for trying to save the children.

The gunman then herded a teacher and 15 children into a second-floor classroom.

Police surrounded the school, which is in Rome's Nuovo Salario district and includes both elementary and junior high grades.

Sharpshooters patrolled nearby rooftops and firefighters used ladders to evacuate dozens of students and teachers.

Officials brought Nobile's mother to the school, but he would not talk to her. Vetere, 59, twice offered to substitute himself for the hostages, but was refused. He and others negotiated from the bottom of a staircase inside the school.

Judge: Bean fire conspiracy likely

By The Associated Press and The Times-News

SALT LAKE CITY — The U.S. District judge presiding in the trial of the two California men who are facing criminal charges as a result of the 1978 Beans Inc. warehouse fire in Filer said Tuesday that "more likely than not" a conspiracy existed between the men.

Judge David K. Winder said that federal prosecutors had presented enough independent evidence to support a conclusion of conspiracy between James R. Woods, a former mayor of Sallinas, and Martin K. Taylor of Madera, his business associate.

Woods and Taylor have been charged by a federal grand jury with mail fraud as a result of insurance claims they filed following the fire.

Winder's ruling allowed testimony from a former attorney hired by the insurance companies to be applicable to both defendants.

The judge, speaking with the jury out of the courtroom, said that although he thought the evidence showed a likelihood of a conspiracy, the verdict still would rest with the jury.

The government claims Taylor set the fire at the request of Woods.

Woods is the owner of Commodory Marketing Inc., the parent corporation of Beans Inc. According to the indictment, Beans Inc. was missing 26,676 bags of beans and was facing an audit by the state. The fire was started to hide the shortages, the government contends.

Winder said he could not allow defense attorneys to question the witness, Douglas Balfour, on whether Idaho or Utah authorities ever were able to prosecute for a variety of alleged charges, as requested by Woods' attorney, Lowell V. Summerhays.

Summerhays argued against Winder's conspiracy decision, stating that Balfour had been part of prosecution teams in Idaho that were unable to bring the case to trial. He said that neither Twin Falls County nor the Idaho attorney general's office, as well as Salt Lake County, were able to generate enough evidence to prosecute Woods and Taylor.

Summerhays also alluded to the role of Michael Christensen, an arson investigator for a private company, as well as a deputy Salt Lake County attorney.

Christensen is now the defendant in a separate civil suit stemming from his involvement in other arson investigations. He was ordered to remove himself from the investigation of the Beans Inc. fire because of an "appearance" of conflict of interest.

Summerhays also threatened suit should his client and Taylor be acquitted. "If we win, we're going to file a civil action; this is a miscarriage of justice," he said.

Summerhays called Balfour a "hunter" who has stalked his client unsuccessfully.

But Winder said he would not allow such testimony before the jury.

Prosecutors are expected to conclude their case today, with the defense scheduled to take several days.

Defense attorneys believe shortages existed, although in smaller amounts. They also alleged the employees stole liberally from the Idaho warehouse.

They contend the fire was a result of spontaneous combustion.

The case is being heard in Salt Lake City because insurance companies involved in the case are based there.

Wood River High School's Phil Homer will be president of the Idaho Association of Secondary School Principals in 1986

Wood River principal says Idaho's frugality hurting students

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Wood River High School Principal Phil Homer is disappointed in the Legislature's reluctance to give more money to education. He had hoped that this would be the year the lawmakers would end their allegiance to the taxpayers' "revolt" of recent years and allocate more money to the cause of education in Idaho.

"But it doesn't appear at this point that that's going to take place," he says.

Homer was recently elected second vice president of the Idaho Association of Secondary School Principals for the next school year.

The problem facing the schools are two-fold, he says.

First, elementary and secondary schools are being asked to become involved in preparing students for a high-tech society, which some say will be the nation's and the state's economic future.

The schools also are being asked to re-emphasize the basics, particularly in the sciences and mathematics.

Second, to meet these demands, schools need more money to purchase textbooks and equipment, and to hire teachers with special training and skills, Homer says.

Homer, 44, has spent 22 years in education in Idaho, and he has been a principal in Blaine County schools for 14 years. He will move to the first vice president's position the following year and become its president during the 1986-87 year.

In that capacity, he hopes to continue a recent tradition of political activity by the association, particularly to convince the Legislature that Idaho's public schools really do need more money.

"We've got to know our needs," Homer says. "We need to explain those needs fully and see if we can't get some help for the problems we have."

State suffers syphilis 'rash'

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An outbreak of syphilis in the Magic Valley has health officials concerned.

Since Dec. 1, six cases of the venereal disease have been detected in the eight-county area, says Judy Bean, a registered nurse at the South Central District Health Department.

Two of the persons had primary syphilis, meaning they had been infected in the last year, she says.

Twelve other cases of primary syphilis have been reported during the same time in Nampa and Boise, according to information released by the state Department of Health and Welfare.

Last year, only two cases were reported in the state during the same months, and only 13 were reported during all of 1983.

Syphilis is known as the "great imitator," because symptoms such as rashes mimic other diseases and may be misdiagnosed by doctors or dismissed as not serious by the infected person, Bean says.

Because of that, many infected people aren't aware they have syphilis," says Stephen Schindler, of Health and Welfare's venereal disease division. "That fact is apparent when we look at the cases reported during the current outbreak."

Two of the Idaho men experienced none of the usual symptoms of primary syphilis, Schindler says. Yet, one of the men infected his sexual partner.

Two of the cases in Idaho have involved pregnant women and were detected by prenatal screening for syphilis. Pregnant women with untreated syphilis will bear stillborn children or babies with congenital syphilis, he says.

The best protection against syphilis is to be careful about choosing sexual partners, Bean says. One infected person with many partners can be responsible for an outbreak, she says. But in the Magic Valley cases, at least three were caused by separate infections.

All doctors in the state have received an update on the problem from the Health and Welfare Department, and the South Central District Health Department has sent letters to doctors in the Magic Valley who diagnose or treat patients directly, Bean says.

Persons wanting information about syphilis can call the venereal disease national hotline at 1-800-273-8222. Or, they can call Bean at 734-5900.

The department holds a venereal disease clinic at varying hours from Monday through Thursday. No appointment is necessary, and fees are based on a sliding scale, Bean says.

Chemical spills on 75; no damage is reported

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

STANLEY — Environmental officials and crews from Cypress Thompson Creek Mine were mopping up the last traces late Tuesday of a hazardous chemical that fell Monday night from a truck onto Idaho 75.

A bag of sodium bichromate, which is used in processing ores, dropped from the truck about a half-mile south of Stanley, spilling about 110 pounds of the orange crystal substance onto the pavement and into snow beside the road, officials said Tuesday.

A second bag fell off the truck about two miles northwest of Stanley, where Idaho 75 skirts the banks of the Salmon River. However, it did not break open.

Idaho State Police officers and sheriff's deputies from Custer and Blaine counties closed the highway between Challis and Gatens Summit during the early morning hours Tuesday. Traffic was restricted to one lane in the case of the spill throughout the day.

Although state Division of Highways employee Sid Edwards of Stanley was checked by medical officials, he handled the unopened bag, no one was injured during the clean-up, said Steve Cole, the Stanley fire chief, who also is a part-time highway employee. Officials also reported no significant environmental damage. None of the chemical entered the Salmon River, which runs about 150 yards from the road at that point.

"There is a degree of toxicity" to sodium bichromate, said Warren Boddy, a senior environmental specialist for the District VII Health Department. He was coordinating the clean-up.

"It is fortunate it went off the truck where it did, instead of any closer to the river," he said.

The chemical reacts vigorously with water and also is suspected of causing cancer, officials said.

The shipment, which originated in Richmond, Calif., was bound for the Cypress Mine on a truck operated by Leutham Brothers Trucking Co. of Salt Lake City, said Darryl Koch, the chief environmental specialist for Idaho's Hazardous Materials Bureau.

The first bag was found by Edwards about 5 p.m., but the second lay on the highway for several more hours before being reported to Cole by some Stanley residents.

After finding it, Cole and Custer County Sheriff's deputies called in environmental officials.

Mine authorities volunteered a clean-up crew from their facility near Challis.

At first count, some 10 bags were reported missing, and police alerted authorities in several states.

"We were prepared to search from California to Idaho," said Bill Froulet, a hazardous-spills team leader for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

However, a second check found only two bags missing, the ones picked up near Stanley.

For buildings

Council wants to 'relax' rules

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council wants to make "issuing permits a little easier for buildings that do not meet the national Uniform Building Code.

At a special meeting Monday, council members directed Fritz Wenderlich, the city attorney, to draw up an amendment to a municipal ordinance that would allow the council to grant exceptions to the Uniform Building Code for individual buildings.

"We need the Uniform Building Code," Councilman Erik Andersen said. "But we should have some ability to vary it to specific incidents. We should use it for standards, and change it to fit our needs."

At present, the only way the council can exercise discretion over the code is to pass a separate ordinance for each building.

The request for general ability to waive certain requirements of the code arose Monday as the result of a request for a building permit by Henningsen Cold Storage, a company located behind Idaho Frozen Foods.

Several weeks ago, the board of directors of the city industrial development corporation had approved the company's request for $2.5 million in industrial revenue bonds, so it can double its warehouse space.

But the expansion would have violated a Uniform Building Code requirement that says industrial buildings must have 60 feet of easement on all four sides — to allow fire trucks access and to prevent fires from spreading.

In the case of Henningsen's, the council was forced to pass a motion allowing all cold storage buildings having similar building specifications as the one proposed by Henningsen's, to have 60 feet of clearance on only one side.

Council members said granting the permit would have economic advantages for the community and cause little danger.

"If it was on fire right now, the risk would not be that much bigger than with an addition," Andersen said.

City needs flexibility

New food-stamp rules are causing some benefit delays

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Recent changes in food-stamp eligibility rules have not caused as much chaos as expected, but the Magic Valley is feeling the effects.

In February, the government began requiring most food-stamp recipients to file a monthly income report. The reports are used to determine the following month's assistance level.

State Department of Health and Welfare employees in Twin Falls have been able to keep up with the increased paperwork, so far, says Willie Uhrig, a local Health and Welfare official.

"It's a struggle," he says. "No stamp allotments have been delayed because Health and Welfare workers fell behind, he says.

A larger problem has been persons who have filed their monthly reports late or not at all. About half the persons who have filed out the reports have had problems or did not include the correct verification of income, Uhrig says.

The reports are due by the seventh of the month, but if the reports are not submitted or submitted incorrectly, food-stamp recipients have 10 more days to file.

Those who file toward the end of the grace period can expect to have their food stamps delayed by about a week and a half, Uhrig says. He estimates that about 20 percent of all recipients have filed late, and half of those persons have had their stamps delayed.

Another 30 persons — out of the 500 eligible for food stamps in this region — did not file or did not correct their forms. They have had their stamps discontinued, he says.

The South Central Community Action Agency has filed in with donated food baskets for some families who received their stamps late or had them withheld because of the new procedures.

But there have been fewer problems than anticipated, says Ann Anderson of the C.A.A. However, seasonal employment here this year may cause some problems, she thinks.

Since food-stamp allotments now are based on income from the month before, those who find work for a month and do not stock up on staples may be dependent on area food pantries, she says.

A spokesman for the Salvation Army says its food pantry has given out more food each month since last year. However, no significant increase could be directly tied with the new food-stamp requirements.

Other areas of the state are feeling the new eligibility rules more than the Magic Valley. In Boise, Health and Welfare employees have so far up with monthly reports that new applicants for food stamps are having to wait as long as a month for an appointment, according to Wanda Michaelson of the Idaho Hunger Action Council.

But at least there should be fewer applications, in both Boise and Twin Falls.

Food-stamp recipients used to have to reapply for food stamps as often as every 60 days. Now, they are applying less often because they are being granted eligibility for six months at a time — with the monthly evaluations.

Kimberly man charged in theft

TWIN FALLS — A Kimberly man has been charged with the Feb. 13 first-degree burglary of 50 pounds of sausage, tools, money and keys to a van that were stolen from Kimberly Cold Storage.

Kevin Duane Eckdahl, 21, of 307 Lincoln St. in Kimberly, was arraigned Monday in Fifth District Magistrate Court in being held in lieu of $15,000 bail in the Twin Falls County Jail.

Other arrangements Monday included: • Terry K. Peters, of Skyline Mobile Park in Twin Falls, was arraigned on charges of grand theft, for allegedly taking a chain saw from Taylor Rental Center in Twin Falls.

According to a complaint filed against him, he rented the chain saw and then pawned it for $40. Bond was set at $5,000.

• William Thomas Powell, 25, of Castletroff was arraigned on charges of writing a check for $566.30 to Barger-Mattson Salvage in Twin Falls, when he had insufficient funds to cover the check.

• Michael Edward Nogler, 25, of 234 N. Washington St. in Twin Falls, was arraigned in Twin Falls County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bond. He was arraigned on charges of aggravated battery.

According to the complaint filed against him, he cut a man on the arm with a buck knife.

Gooding man admits theft

JEROME — Larry M. Bills, 25, of Gooding, pleaded guilty in Fifth District Court in Jerome on Tuesday to grand theft charges involving a gun that was stolen Dec. 30 in Jerome.

He had been charged with burglary for a break-in at the home of George Meyer and with grand theft for stealing several guns from the Meyers' home. However, the burglary charge was dismissed at the request of the prosecutor.

No date has been set for sentencing.

Police nab stubborn trucker

JEROME — Richard Lee Moran, 36, of Billings, Mont., who refused to leave his truck after being stopped for speeding near Hazelton on Saturday, will return to North Dakota to face a back-check charge.

Moran was arraigned in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Jerome on Monday, and he waived extradition proceedings.

He was arrested by Cpl. Mike Burgess, of the Idaho State Police, after Burgess and Jerome County sheriff's deputies waited for an hour when he refused to leave his truck after the traffic stop.

Moran was charged with driving 70 mph in a 55-mph zone on Interstate 84. When he refused to get out of the truck as ordered, officers checked his identification and found he was wanted in Stark County, N.D., for illegal checks, amounting to more than $500.

Magistrate Judge Roger Burdick of Jerome County ordered Moran held in the county jail for 10 days, to allow North Dakota authorities to pick him up.

Wendell board chief quits

By TERRELL WILLIAMS Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — After serving on the school board for 10 years, Jim Campbell, its president, has decided to resign.

The resignation will become effective June 30, one year before his term expires.

Campbell made his announcement casually at Monday night's board meeting.

"My last kid graduates this spring. I've been here 10 years, and that is long enough for anybody."

Campbell, who has been president of the board about six years, has a son, Calvin, who is a senior, and two older children who already have graduated.

He commented that the most significant improvement during his tenure on the board was getting the district's finances "in the black."

New buildings at the elementary school, Campbell said, are "portable but very good," and they are being paid for with money the school board has budgeted, rather than with money from a bond issue.

Campbell also says that students have changed little in the last decade.

"Maybe, they've gotten a little smarter. Basically, they're all good kids."

Campbell said he will have mixed emotions about leaving the board, but it is "time for someone else to help keep the school progressing."

In other business at Monday's meeting: • Board members agreed to change their monthly meeting time from 7 to 8 p.m., on the second Monday of each month.

Architect Bob Unrau presented drawings of two increased portable classrooms and two special-service rooms to be built at the elementary school this summer. The board approved the drawings and the building specifications, authorizing them to be released to bidders.

Superintendent Glen Gilbertson said that numerous applications have been received for the high school principal's job, now held by Chuck Meyer, whose contract was not renewed by the board last month.

Most of the applicants, Gilbertson said, are qualified but are inexperienced as principals.

The board has scheduled interviews with five of the applicants for next Monday and Thursday evenings. Teachers Gay Petersen and Blake Walsh will help interview and evaluate the candidates.

Jerome school principal resigns

JEROME — Donald Daw, a veteran Jerome educator and the current principal of Washington Elementary School, informed the Jerome school board last night that he plans to retire at the end of the school year.

Daw received praise from Superintendent Stephenson Youngerman and members of the board for his devotion to education. Youngerman said Daw graduated from Albion Normal School in 1947 and taught first at Osgood, near Idaho Falls.

For about seven years, he was a teacher at former Camas School in Jerome County. He then returned to school, himself, to obtain his master's degree from the University of Idaho in 1954.

Daw also served as principal at the old Lincoln School before becoming principal of both Washington and Jefferson elementary schools. He has been Washington principal since 1973.

Three more face poaching charge

By BOB FREUND Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Lincoln County officials now have charged four men with poaching violations in connection with the out-of-season killing of an elk north of Shoshone in January.

One of the men, Marty Doble, no age given, of Shoshone, also faces felony charges of burglary and grand theft in an unrelated incident.

Lincoln County Prosecutor Doug Rose said Tuesday that the four men have been accused of killing an almost-lame elk on a county road north of Shoshone, where some of the animals had come to find refuge.

Officers from the Idaho Fish and Game Department and the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department also seized blood and hair samples from a Shoshone residence during the investigation.

Doble is charged with — actually having shot the elk, Rose said. His alleged companions, Joseph Peterson of Shoshone, Richard T. Ridinger of Shoshone and Matthew Hubbs of California, all have been charged with possession of an unlawful animal, he said. The men's ages were not available Tuesday.

Peterson, who was arrested in January, already has pleaded guilty, Rose said.

The poaching charges are misdemeanors and carry criminal fines of up to $200 or six months in jail, Rose said. Poaching charges also carry hunters also can face civil penalties of up to $500 per animal as reimbursement to the state, and their hunting licenses are revoked for a year.

Hubbs, who lives in California, cannot be extradited on the misdemeanor charge, but he could be arrested if he returns to Idaho, Rose said.

However, Doble was arrested in California, waived extradition and was returned to Lincoln County last week to face felony charges arising from a break-in on Feb. 11 at a Shoshone store.

Early that morning, a burglar entered Janie's, which houses the state liquor store, and took three cases of liquor, valued at $300. Doble is to appear today before Fifth District Magistrate Judge J. William Hart for a preliminary hearing on the burglary and grand theft charges, Rose said.

Two arrests made for arson

TWIN FALLS — An 11-year-old boy and a 25-year-old man have been arrested by Twin Falls police in connection with a recent series of arsons. Public Safety Director Tim Qualls says the boy is alleged to have attempted to burn a house at 554 Fifth Ave. N. and a bush at 555 Fifth Ave. N. In addition, the officer said the boy has admitted starting fires in 15 garbage cans in the past few weeks.

Terry L. Kissinger, 25, has been charged with second-degree arson in connection with a fire on Quincy Street last week.

Qualls said weeks were placed against a shed owned by Mary Petersen, of 177 Quincy St., and ignited. Kissinger appeared in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls on Monday afternoon. Bond was set at $5,000, and he was returned to the Twin Falls County Jail to await further court action.

Both arson suspects are from Twin Falls.

Over the past two or three weeks, a number of other fires have been started in vacant buildings in Twin Falls, Qualls said. But the two suspects now in custody are not believed to be involved in these, which still are under investigation.

Principal

Continued from Page B1 To get more money, the legislative deadlock over providing more state support must be broken, he says.

But the Montpelier native says, "I don't know when that's going to change in this conservative state."

State and national committees have been joined by business and industrial groups in asking for improvements to education. At the same time, the Legislature generally has supported business and industrial development in the state.

But Homer believes, the Legislature is selling those interests short by not providing the money to provide Idaho students with the skills to stay at the forefront of industry, particularly in the area of high technology.

"They (the educational goals of business and industrial leaders) seem to be falling on deaf ears at this point," he says.

However, he also believes that Idaho students have the resilience to overcome any handicap they may have by not getting hands-on training with high technology.

"They are given a solid, basic education. They seem to overcome what we as adults can't give them," Homer says.

Homer sees more to his position with the principals' association than just dealing with the schools' funding problems. He sees a need for leadership in other areas.

But the principals' association out there is a viable, forward-looking education resource.

Homer says he wants to promote secondary education in the state and provide independent sources of funding that can be given to school administrators to improve education.

"We've got to be, in some sense of the word, politically active in providing leadership in our secondary schools."

A really rude awakening

TWIN FALLS — Steve Broehl, 525 Sparks St., Twin Falls, had a rude awakening early Monday morning. He was asleep in his home when a car came crashing through the wall of his house.

Police say James Lee Fiora, 26, was arrested on charges of driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages. He was traveling north on Sparks Street at 1:34 a.m. Monday at what officers say was a high rate of speed when his vehicle went out of control.

According to police reports, Fiora's 1974 pickup truck hit a power pole, then a tree, brick fence and platter at the residence of Edythe Smith, 533 Sparks St., and then crashed into the Broehl home.

Police said Broehl rents the home from his owner, Robert Wright Jr., of Piler, who is currently in Arizona.

Damage estimates to the two residential properties had not been made Monday, but officers said the pickup truck damage would reach $2,500. Fiora was uninjured.

Sawtooth Forest offers youth jobs

TWIN FALLS — The Sawtooth National Forest will sponsor summer jobs this year for 15-18 year olds through the Youth Conservation Corps (YCC).

Eleven jobs are offered this year in three areas of the forest, says Ron Stoleson, forest supervisor. These are three jobs in the Malta area, four in the Twin Falls area and four on the Sawtooth National Recreation Area (SNRA) north of Ketchum.

Participants in the program will live at home and will commute each day to a job pick-up point. Forest Service personnel will transport them to work sites, Stoleson says.

The jobs near Malta and Twin Falls will last seven weeks, while the recreation area jobs will last eight weeks.

Stoleson says the jobs will vary by location and include campground maintenance, litter collection, wildlife activities, range improvement and timber activities.

Applications are available at Forest Service offices in Burley, Twin Falls, Ketchum and the SNRA headquarters eight miles north of Ketchum.

The applications must be completed and returned to the agency by April 13. A random drawing will determine the participants, Stoleson says.

The YCC program is open to young men and women who are at least 15 years old and who will not turn age 19 prior to August 31, 1984.

"The YCC program offers an excellent opportunity for young people who are interested in gaining a personal insight into the management and protection of public land," Stoleson says.

"In addition, "participants can learn new work skills and develop an understanding and appreciation for the natural environment," he said.

'Glenns Ferry is Great' fest to unfold beginning Friday

By DIANA HOOLEY
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY — Glenns Ferry residents will be celebrating "Glenns Ferry is Great" Friday and Saturday.

The celebration coincides with the grand opening of Idaho Circuit Technology and a Glenns Ferry School carnival and mortgage burning.

Students from the Glenns Ferry schools are participating in an essay contest on why "Glenns Ferry is Great." Two winners will be chosen from each grade and presented with a "Glenns Ferry is Great" T-shirt Friday.

Ron Crone, coordinator for the activities, says the T-shirt awardings and winner announcements will be put on videotape and broadcast locally on a cable channel.

Crone also said local merchants will be having "special sales" for the "Great" days celebration.

City and school officials, as well as several statewide guests including representatives from the governor's office, will attend a special breakfast held for the school mortgage burning ceremony and the grand opening of ICT.

The breakfast will begin at 7:15 a.m. Friday at Hanson's Cafe in Glenns Ferry.

Glenns Ferry School Superintendent Jim Reed said a mock mortgage will be burned for the ceremony, to be attended by Lee Trull, president of the school board when the building was built in 1965, and Jerry Bybee, current school board president.

Following the breakfast, Janice

Heath says ICT will be holding tours from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. ICT will be manufacturing circuit boards for computer hardware.

Heath, co-owner of the business, says Bill Lindner, manager of the new plant, will serve as guide for the tours and refreshments will be served.

The Glenns Ferry School carnival will be held from 5 to 9:30 p.m. Friday, and will include a silent auction and a chili-hotdog feed as well as the usual carnival activities. Proceeds from the event will be used for the school.

'Hayplow' used in Jerome

JEROME — Deputy Sheriff Larry Webb called out an Idaho Division of Highways snowplow Monday afternoon although there was spring-like weather in Jerome County.

Instead of snow, the plow was used to clear the highway of hay.

A Gooding trucking concern, hauling a load of baled hay to Oregon, had the truck loaded too high, Webb said. As it passed under the overpass at the U.S. 93 and Idaho 84 interchange, the upper three layers of hay bales were scraped off and dumped on the northbound lanes of U.S. 93.

The unidentified trucker continued on his way, leaving an assistant at the scene to try to move the bales from the traffic lanes.

"I couldn't think of a way to clear the highway in a hurry, except to call out a snow plow," Webb said. "The highway department cooperated and plowed the spilled hay out of the way in a matter of a few minutes."

Trade agency representative to speak

TWIN FALLS — Janet Lenz, field representative at the U.S. International Trade Administration's new office in Boise, will discuss the agency's services at a noon luncheon meeting of the Idaho World Trade Association Thursday in the Canyon Springs Inn.

House denies loggers ton-mile break

BOISE (AP) — Farmers are getting a break because of House-approved amendments to a bill replacing the old ton-mile tax on trucks.

But members of the House refused minutes later to give a similar break to loggers.

The House has been working on a bill replacing the old ton-mile tax based on a truck's weight and mileage, with a flat annual registration fee.

The new procedure is expected to generate about the same amount of income, $14 million. But sponsors said it's easy to cheat on the ton-mile tax because the state has so few auditors, and some truckers are not paying their share.

Tuesday, the bill was up for amendment. Approved were:

- An amendment to allow Idaho truckers to buy 8-hour trip permits. The bill originally allowed only out-of-state truckers to buy temporary trip permits.
- Removal of a provision that said a vehicle's registration could be suspended for six months for violations.

• An amendment allowing farmers to register their vehicles quarterly, rather than the whole year, if the vehicles are not to be used year-around.

There was little opposition to that proposal. But when Rep. Richard Adams, D-Grangeville, urged a similar provision for loggers, it was turned down.

The vote was not recorded, but appeared to be southern Idaho farm interests against northern Idaho legislators supporting truckers.

"What's fair is fair," said Adams, urging equal treatment.

Also rejected was a proposal from Rep. Raymond Parks, R-Blackfoot, to allow truckers to get an annual permit for half price, if the vehicle is to travel 16,500 miles per year or less.

But three sponsors of the ton-mile bill urged defeat of the amendment, and it was rejected by a voice vote.

Rep. Noy Brackett, R-Twin Falls, said he favored Parks' amendment until he learned it would cover 16,000 trucks and would cost the state $1.25 million per year in revenue.

Proposals could be considered soon willfully violate the law. However, it also would allow public agencies to be awarded legal fees if they are subjected to frivolous legal challenges.

Sen. Roger Fairchild, R-Fruiland, sponsored the bill to provide penalties for violators of the law and led the opposition to the hospital exemption bill. Fairchild says he has asked Little to "link the two bills together" for the purposes of hearings in the House.

"If they hear one, they should hear them both. If they don't hear one, they shouldn't hear the other," he says.

"As far as I'm concerned, there's been a lot of wrong impressions and misunderstandings with the enforcement bill.

"It's better to have status quo than to have the hospital bill go into law," he says.

Agricultural groups to oppose utility proposal

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News Capital Bureau

BOISE — Two agricultural groups have decided to oppose a bill that could increase the bills of utility customers.

Idaho Fair Share, a consumer activist group that is sponsoring the legislation, had hoped the Idaho Water Users Association and the Idaho Irrigation Pumps Association would support the bill.

However, Sheri Chapman, a spokesman for the two associations, said Monday that the organizations will seek to defeat the measure, which has been dubbed the "Fair Representation Bill."

The bill would allow the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to award a group that intervenes in a utility rate case up to $20,000 to cover its legal and associated costs. But to qualify for the money, under the proposal, the group would have to have had materially assisted the commission's deliberation of the case and have insufficient finances to afford the intervention.

"The costs would be passed on to the class of customers whose interests were represented by the intervening group.

"It's a free ride for consumer groups that have the ability to derive their own funding," Chapman said.

"If they're going to intervene, they should pay their own way just as anyone else could," he said.

The bill is awaiting a hearing in the House State Affairs Committee. Rep.

Walt Little, the committee chairman, says he probably will hold a hearing on the bill. But first, he says, he will appoint a subcommittee to determine how the bill might affect small utilities.

Little says he has heard from representatives of several small utilities who are afraid the provisions of the bill could swamp their companies, financially.

The commission has no official policy on the proposal. But Commission President Conley Ward says he favors it personally.

Hard feelings may endanger judges' pay hike

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News Capital Bureau

BOISE — Some legislators appear to harbor hard feelings toward Idaho judges for past decisions and consequently, an effort to boost the judges' salaries may not be implemented.

"There's nobody cranking on me, saying, 'I want that bill; I want to be the sponsor,'" says Sen. Roger Fairchild, R-Fruiland, the chairman of the Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee.

The bill in question would raise the salaries of state Supreme Court justices to $85,000 a year from $71,300 a year, a 38 percent increase. District judges' salaries would increase 28 percent — to $88,000 a year from $45,300 a year.

"If it passed, I'd be surprised," says Robert Koontz, a Boise attorney who represents the Idaho Bar Association on the issue of judicial pay. He says the proposed salaries will have to be reduced to gain passage.

But like Fairchild, and the chief justice of the Supreme Court, Charles Donaldson, he recognizes the legislative climate is not particularly conducive to judicial salary increases.

Fairchild adds to that list of cases the overturning of the "implied consent" provision of the drunk-driving law passed by the Legislature last year. That law originally was overturned by former Lincoln County magistrate Judge Daniel Hurlbutt, who now is a district judge.

"There's a lot of splitting fine hairs when legislative intent and common sense are quite evident," Fairchild says.

Donaldson says the pay increases are justified.

Committee passes Indian exemption

BOISE (AP) — A bill making it clear that state sales taxes will not be collected on Idaho Indian reservations has been sent to the House floor for a vote.

A recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling held that states could collect sales taxes on reservations on items sold to non-Indian, and on items produced off the reservation.

One Indian leader, Benson Gibson, former Shoshone-Paiute tribal chairman on the Duck Valley Reservation, indicated Indians feel the state has no tax authority on Indian reservations.

"Have fun," he told committee members. His reservation lies half in Idaho and half in Nevada, and Nevada has an absolute exemption on taxes, he said.

He implied the state wouldn't get far if it tried to collect sales taxes on the portion of the reservation in Idaho.

Tuition tax credit measure in House

BOISE (AP) — A measure billed as a way to give people a choice in education while relieving pressure on public schools will be introduced in the Idaho House.

The House State Affairs Committee on Tuesday voted to introduce a revised version of a tax-credit plan sponsored by Rep. J.F. Chadbond, R-Idaho Falls.

The committee rejected an earlier version after the Idaho attorney general's office said it contained constitutional flaws over the issue of separation of church and state.

public schools will be lessened as private-school enrollment increases. The proposal also provides a tax credit for contributions to certain public school programs.

Chadbond estimated the state can save at least $3 for every $1 it loses through credits of $700 for elementary school pupils in private schools, and $1,000 for secondary school students.

But claims about the credits plan patterned after a Minnesota law were opposed by public school officials who testified before the committee on Tuesday.

money merely because several hundred children withdrew to attend private schools. The district still would need to keep schools open and would continue to face overhead expenses, he said.

Other opponents included the Idaho Parent-Teacher Association, which attacked the reasoning of the measure's supporters.

State PTA President Maryann Hosler of Emmett disputed claims that providing help for private school patrons will foster healthy competition in education.

Mishap kills children

EAGLE (AP) — Ada County officials say two toddlers were killed when a pickup truck rolled over them while they were playing on a hill near Eagle.

had dropped the children off after getting a load of sod and had turned the pickup around to unload it, Spec. Dave Putman of the sheriff's office said.

Ada County Coroner Mike Johnson said Joshua Tomlinson of Boise and Mandy Lynn Kramme of Eagle, both age 2, died of head injuries on Monday.

—Both men got out of the pickup and then saw that it was rolling backward, Putman said.

Ada County Sheriff E.C. "Chuck" Palmer said the children's fathers, Bill Tomlinson and Michael Kramme, were unloading sod on a hill four miles north of Eagle.

Kramme said he thought he had put the pickup in park but later realized he had put it in reverse, Putman said.

Kramme, who was driving the pickup, and Tomlinson, apparently

"He (Kramme) tried to jump back in but missed it," Palmer said.

You can't win 'em all

BOISE (AP) — State legislators have unlimited power — well, almost. During discussion on a tax bill Tuesday, a Revenue and Taxation Committee member asked State Tax Commission member Darwin Young if the Legislature could pass a law banning Indians from opening car agencies on reservations.

"The Legislature can do anything it wants," said Young, a former representative from Blackfoot.

"Except reapportion itself," noted Chairman Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert.

Jury convicts power company of fraud

SEATTLE (AP) — A unanimous federal jury Tuesday convicted the Washington Water Power Co., its former chief lobbyist and the former head of a construction company of mail fraud in an alleged money-laundering scheme.

In addition, the U.S. District Court jury found the utility and WWP Vice President Jeremiah Buckley, formerly the company's chief lobbyist, guilty of a second count of obstruction of justice.

In Spokane, a WWP spokesman said utility officials were "shocked and amazed."

The 12-member jury, which received the case Monday, deliberated for a little more than a day before returning the verdicts, which ended a five-week trial in Judge Donald Voorhees' Seattle courtroom.

"Dirty," was the only comment Ellsworth Sargent, former head of the defunct Sargent-Tyco Construction Co., offered when asked his opinion of his conviction. Buckley declined comment, as did lawyers for Sargent and WWP.

"We are shocked and amazed that the jury could have handed down this verdict on the basis of the evidence presented by the government," said WWP spokesman Rob Strenge in Spokane.

Verdicts set sentencing for 9:30 a.m. April 20. Prosecutors said the maximum jail penalty on each count was five years. A maximum $5,000 fine is possible on the justice obstruction charge; mail fraud carries a maximum $1,000 fine.

A somber Buckley and Sargent left the courtroom quickly, free on their own recognizance as they had been throughout the trial.

Lawyers for Sargent and WWP said no decision had been made on a possible appeal but Strenge said, "Mr. Buckley and the company are innocent of the charges and we will immediately explore our option for an appeal on both counts. We remain confident of our ultimate vindication through the appeal process."

Prosecutors said the money was raised by Sargent-Tyco by adding 10 percent to bids for day-crew-work-contracts that were awarded by WWP.

Bishop presents defense

By BOB MIMS
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Arthur Bishop's sexual lust for little boys may have been a psychological cover for "murderous impulses" that triggered the abductions and slayings of five youths, a defense psychiatrist said Tuesday.

Dr. Robert Greer said Bishop's real motive for abducting the boys, ages 4 to 13, was possibly an unresolved sibling rivalry stemming from his own childhood in a family of 11.

Greer, who twice examined Bishop for the defense, said he felt Bishop saw young boys as "objects of anger," and that the youth convicted Bishop's sexual advances. "He was left at the mercy of his murderous impulses."

However, in his confession to police, Bishop repeatedly said he killed the boys because he was afraid of being revealed as a child molester.

Bishop, a 32-year-old bookkeeper, has pleaded innocent to five counts of first-degree murder, five counts of aggravated kidnapping and one count of sexual abuse of a minor. If convicted, he could be given a death sentence.

Defense attorneys Jo Carol Nessel-Sale and David Biggs do not contest the child's confession, but claim Bishop should not be convicted of a capital crime because of a mental disturbance. Instead, they argue Bishop should be convicted of manslaughter.

Meanwhile, a man arrested late Monday, after a note threatening Bishop was passed to 3rd District Judge Jay Banks, was charged with interfering with an official proceeding, a Class B misdemeanor.

Robert F. Argust, 40, was charged in a complaint signed by Salt Lake County Detective Kathy Diamond. Ms. Diamond said the note, forwarded to Banks, was passed to the judge through a bailiff just after Monday's proceedings recessed.

The note read in part: "If you let that bastard get off, then by God, we will kill that no good sucker."

Greer began his testimony late Monday, saying Bishop found his Mormon baptism by immersion at age 8 frightening. Then, and a picture of a naked man in a Bible, may have contributed to Bishop's becoming a homosexual pedophile — and the confessed slayer of five boys between 1979 and 1983, he said.

Under cross-examination Tuesday by Deputy Salt Lake County Attorney Creighton Horton, Greer elaborated on the religious theme.

The Salt Lake City psychiatrist said Bishop was "scared out of his mind" when baptized, and that fear may have been a factor in Bishop's drowning of some of his victims in his bathtub after beating them into unconsciousness with a hammer.

Strikers win benefits

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Union leaders were jubilant after a federal judge on Monday prohibited Phelps Dodge Corp. from cutting off medical benefits to 1,500 Arizona copper workers who have been on strike more than seven months.

Nathan R. Nigamli, who represented Phelps Dodge at Monday's hearing before U.S. District Court Judge Alfredo C. Marquez, said he did not know if the company would appeal.

Monday's ruling was labeled a victory by Angel Rodriguez, a union official in Clifton and a member of the unions' bargaining committee.

He said the decision was an indication that the "tide is turning in the unions' favor," adding that sooner or later the company would realize the strike is costing too much. "When that happens," said Rodriguez, Phelps Dodge will return to the bargaining table.

The company, which serves as its own insurance carrier, has wanted to end all benefits at midnight Monday. Phelps Dodge's contracts with 13 striking unions required the company to pay 100 percent of medical benefits.

Phelps Dodge has continued to operate its copper facilities with newly hired workers and union members who have crossed picket lines since the walkout began on July 1, 1983.

Add a touch o' green to St. Patrick's Day

Holiday menus uncomplicated

Here are two menus to serve for St. Patrick's Day festivities Saturday. The first is a stylish dinner; the second a regaling brunch. Both feature uncomplicated recipes that the hosts as well as guest will enjoy. And both combine popular foods that lend a wee touch o' green to the day.

For an unusual, and marvelously untraditional dinner, top snowy white, poached Alaska halibut with a crunchy emerald sauce. Kiwi potato vinaigrette provides a flavorful complement to the halibut. For dessert, bake a spicy pear cake, adorn it with pastel green frosting and canned pear slices.

If entertaining at brunch fits your lifestyle better, serve halibut in a cream sauce sparkling with a "confetti" of green peas in flaky puff pastry shells. Round out the menu with St. Patrick's fruit platter, a combination of kiwifruit and canned bartlett pears, arranged on lettuce and drizzled with flavorful poppy seed dressing.

POACHED HALIBUT WITH EMERALD SAUCE

1/2 cup minced parsley
1/2 cup chopped almonds
1/2 cup olive oil
3 tablespoons lime or lemon juice
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1/2 teaspoon each garlic, salt, coarsely ground pepper and crushed basil
6 (4 to 6 oz. each) hot, poached Alaska halibut steaks*
Lime wedges
Combine parsley, almonds, oil, lime juice, cheese and seasonings; blend well. Serve over hot, poached halibut. Garnish with lime wedges. Makes 6 servings.

*Poaching Directions: Place single layer of halibut steaks in large skillet or poaching pan. Cover with boiling water. Add 1/2 cup white wine vinegar, 1 sliced small onion, 2 sprigs parsley, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 4 peppercorns. Cover and return to boil. Reduce heat and simmer 5 to 6 minutes or until halibut flakes easily when tested with a fork. Remove carefully with slotted spoon.

KIWIFRUIT POTATO VINAIGRETTE

1 pound red-skinned new potatoes, cooked and sliced
1/2 cup thinly sliced celery
Vinaigrette dressing
2 to 3 kiwifruit, pared and sliced
Combine potatoes and celery. Add vinaigrette dressing; gently toss together. Cover and refrigerate several hours. Add kiwifruit; mix gently. Makes 6 servings.

SPICY PEAR CAKE

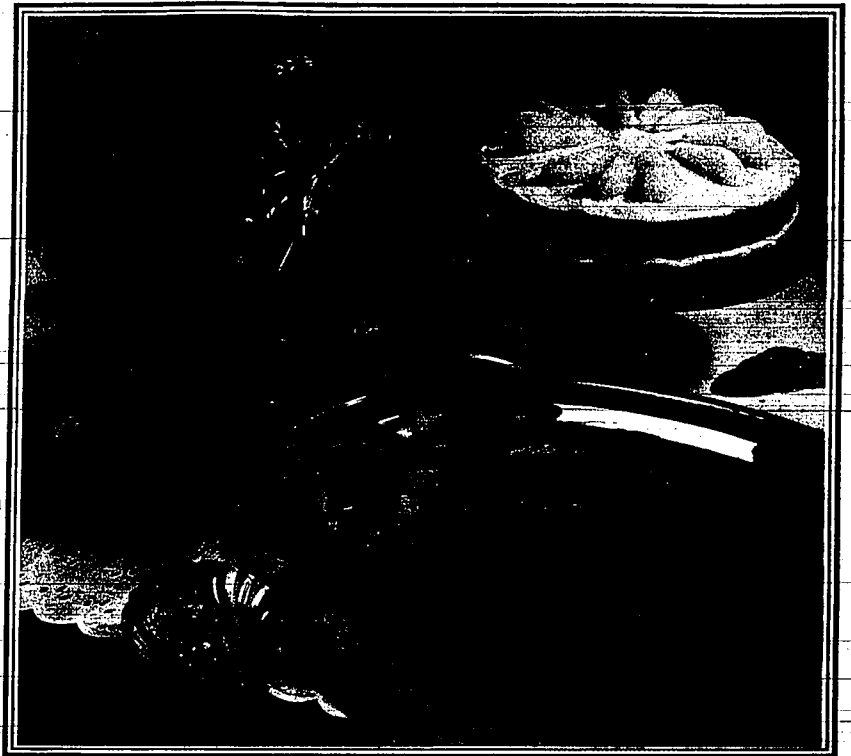

1 can (16 oz.) Bartlett pear halves
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon each baking soda and baking powder
1/2 teaspoon each ground cinnamon and nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 1/4 cups sugar
3 eggs
3/4 cup buttermilk
Cream Cheese frosting
Drain pears; reserve 1/4 cup pear liquid and 4 pear halves. Slice each reserved pear half in thirds; puree remaining pears. Combine flour, baking soda, baking powder, spices and salt. Cream butter and sugar until light. Add eggs one at a time; beating well after each addition. Combine buttermilk, pureed pears and reserved pear liquid. Add flour mixture and buttermilk mixture alternately to creamed mixture.

Pour into two greased and floured round 9-inch cake pans. Bake at 350 degrees F. 20 to 30 minutes or until wooden pick inserted near center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes on wire racks; remove from pans and cool thoroughly. Frost top of each layer with Cream Cheese Frosting. Place one layer on top of the other layer. Drain sliced pears thoroughly; arrange on top of cake. Makes 12 servings.

For some, St. Patrick's celebrations continue for weeks

By SHARON SANDERS
Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — For Irish Lynch, St. Patrick's Day isn't so much a holiday as it is an end-of-winter festival.

Even if you didn't know that Lynch and her husband Jack's grandparents were from County Mayo and County Kerry, you might guess the Irish connection from their daughters' names.

The Lynch girls are Kerry: 4, Kelly, 6, Tracy, 16 and Tara, 17. Even daughter Kelly's Cabbage Patch Doll is Irish. Her name is Katy Rose.

Commemorating the feast day of St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland, is a Lynch family tradition.

The St. Patrick's season starts after Valentine's Day when Lynch sets pots of live shamrocks throughout her home. The celebration culminates on March 17 with the Lynchs' annual parade and an outing to the Chicago St. Patrick's Day Parade.

The event will be extra special this year because daughter Kelly will appear in the parade with the Mary Ann Curran Irish Dance Troupe.

The St. Patrick's season gives Lynch a theme on which to look several parties. Even with her busy schedule as a homemaker and mother, Lynch loves to entertain often with large sit-down dinners.

For a St. Patrick's Day dinner party, she serves a roast leg of lamb with mint gravy, parried potatoes and buttered peas. O'Connor's Irish soda bread, shamrock gelatin and frosty Irish parfaits, a menu that combines her own creative ideas with elements of traditional Irish cooking.

Most of the food is prepared in advance, which allows the cook to enjoy the party. This do-ahead philosophy is a trademark of Lynch's entertaining style.

The roast leg of lamb is the centerpiece of the feast and remains Lynch's lamb for her son, cream and raisins in a fluted butter. Lynch likes to bake the loaf in a fluted growing up in the South Side neighborhood of Beverly.

"As roast beef is the traditional meat of England, so roast lamb or mutton is the traditional meat of Ireland. Many travelers have remarked on its succulence and flavor," says Theodore Fitzgibbon, the Dublin-based author of "Irish Traditional Food" ($14.95, St. Martin's Press).

Mint, many varieties of which grow wild throughout Ireland, is the traditional accompaniment for lamb. Fitzgibbon says, "In Lynch's recipe, the lamb is seasoned simply with mint, garlic, salt and pepper. Strips of bacon baste the meat as it roasts. The subtle mint flavor of the shamrock gelatin is a refreshing counterpoint to the richness of the lamb. Lynch developed the recipe using lima gelatin, mint and whipped cream. During chilling, the gelatin separates into contrasting green layers — one opaque and one clear. The side dish is pretty, garnished with fresh shamrock leaves."

The soda bread recipe comes from Lynch's close friend Hannah O'Connor, a native of County Cork, Ireland, or O'Connor's daughter-in-law Anne. No one remembers for certain who made the recipe first but it has become an O'Connor and a Lynch family favorite.

This soda bread is richer than most. It calls for sour cream, curraway and raisins in the batter. Lynch likes to bake the loaf in a fluted tube pan but it also can be done in a loaf pan. Dessert is a spirited finale that's easy to make. Vanilla ice cream is layered in glasses with Irish cream liqueur or creme de menthe. The parfaits are frozen for several hours. Just before serving they are garnished with whipped cream and a sprinkling of green sugar.

Chocolate parfaits are a good substitute for the wee ones (children not toprechnans) at the party.

ROAST LEG OF LAMB WITH MINT GRAVY

4 sprigs fresh mint or 2 tablespoons dried mint
1 clove garlic, minced
1 leg of lamb (5 to 6 pounds)
4 bacon strips
Salt and pepper to taste
Shamrock gelatin in 1/2 cup boiling water for 5 minutes. Strain and reserve liquid. Dissolve garlic in mint liquid. Pour over roast. Wrap bacon around top of roast. Roast in a preheated, 350-degree oven, basting frequently, for from 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 hours (about 20 to 30 minutes per pound depending upon desired degree of doneness).

Remove from oven and set aside for 15 to 20 minutes before carving. Shim-let-from-pan juices. Season pan juices with salt and pepper to taste. Serve roast with pan juices, accompanied by buttered, parried potatoes and green peas or Brussels sprouts. Serves 6.

O'CONNOR'S IRISH SODA BREAD

3 cups flour
1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
3 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 cup buttermilk
1/2 cup sour cream
2 eggs
6 tablespoons margarine, at room temperature
2 teaspoons caraway seeds
1 1/2 cups currants or golden raisins
Mix dry ingredients. Mix with liquid ingredients and margarine. Mix in curraway and raisins. Pour into a greased fluted tube pan or loaf pan.

Bake in a preheated, 375-degree oven for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees; bake for about 45 minutes until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Cool on a wire rack. When pan is cool to the touch invert over serving platter. Makes 1 loaf.

SHAMROCK GELATIN

4 sprigs fresh mint (plus sprigs for garnish) or 1 tablespoon dried mint
2 cups boiling water, divided
1 1/2-ounce package lime gelatin

For vegetables or flowers, hybrid seeds yield more

REXBURG — One of the best quality indicators in selecting seeds is the word hybrid. Hybrid varieties have been produced from selected parents resulting in greater yield, vigor and uniformity.

The hybrid seed production process is complicated, making hybrid seeds more expensive. But the increased yield more than pays for the small difference in seed cost. For example, a packet of hybrid tomato seeds may cost $1.49 instead of 70 cents. It only takes two or three extra tomatoes to pay for that difference.

With flowers, the hybrid advantage is usually in greater vigor and uniformity. Flower beds look nice if they are uniform in height, size and flower color. More vigorous plants reach full size sooner and are more resistant to pests.

Hybrid varieties are almost always better than the word hybrid or F-1 hybrid somewhere on the packet or in the catalog description. Hybrid varieties are available for almost all vegetables except lettuce, peas and beans.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Hybrid types are available for about 70 percent of flowers commonly grown. Hybrids have become so dominant in some cases that a non-hybrid is hard to find. This is true for sweet corn and petunias.

You will seldom find a hybrid on some of the cheaper seed racks because their appeal is primarily price. Most seed racks have only a small number of hybrid varieties. They are becoming more widely available as their advantages become better known. For a wide selection of hybrids you usually must go to a nursery or garden store or order from a catalog.

Another good indication of quality is the AAS award designation. AAS stands for All-American Selections, an Independent, non-profit-testing organization for new flowers and vegetables. Similar organizations also test roses and gladioli.

Each year dozens (sometimes hundreds) of new varieties are tested by these organizations in comparison to the best current varieties. Test grounds are located throughout the country so only the best, which perform under a wide range of conditions, win awards.

All-America winners in 1984 include Sugar Ann snap pea, Celebrity tomato and Border Beauty Rose zinnia. The All-America rose winners this year are Olympiad, Intrigue and Impatiens.

I have a list of vegetable varieties which perform well in our area. Hybrid varieties are marked and seed sources listed for hard to find varieties. The benefits are gastronomical

It's tasty working at home

By ROB KASPER
The Baltimore Sun

Lately folks who have been busy buying home computers and taking tax deductions for heating their dens have been telling me about the benefits of working at home.

So while laid up with a bum foot — the doctor claimed it was a sprained ankle, I contended it was incipient gout — I made a study of the home as workplace.

The first advantage of working at home was unlimited access to ice cream. Specifically the half-gallon of mocha-chip ice cream I found in the refrigerator. You can't get mocha-chip at the office. Moreover, you can't get half an overripe banana — the kind left over from breakfast — at fancy office lunch spots. Mix that banana in the mocha-chip, and you've got the perfect picker-upper, a cure for mid-afternoon slumps in production.

Another plus of working at home was the coffee. Now the coffee at my office is good. But when I want to lace it with something, the only available lacing agent is something powdered and instantly dissolved to soybeans. At home I discovered I could lace it with thick whipping cream. I found a whole carton of the stuff on the second shelf of the fridge, behind the pickles.

My coffee consumption quickly increased. And coffee consumption, as in "this is a three-cup morning" is a standard office measure of workload. A surprise benefit of working at home was the availability of olives. As workplace research has documented, olives are hard to find at lunch. There are sightings of an occasional Spanish olive on a sandwich, or a black olive at the bottom of a salad. But big, green olives, covered with garlic, are never found in office cafeterias.

I found them in a little white box in my fridge. I had bought them a few days earlier at an Italian grocery, Trinacria on Paca street, and had done such a good job hiding them in the fridge that I had given them up for lost.

While working at home I discovered the olive hideaway, behind the jelly jars, and enjoyed a surprise feast.

At the office I usually avoid lunch, for philosophical reasons. My colleagues tend to think of lunch as a pause in the middle of the workday. They stop for an hour, then go back to work. I regard lunch as a two-to-four hour celebration of the fact that work, at least all the work I am going to handle, has ended.

Moreover, at the office one is expected these days to eat "a light lunch." That means any combination of cottage cheese, lettuce and raw vegetables.

I like a heavy lunch. At home my lunch lasted through several courses.

I started with olives, then followed with more olives, this time stuffing them with slices of ham. For the main course there were leftover meatballs, served two ways. First on toasted rye bread sprinkled with fresh parmesan cheese. Then on overstuffed rye bread, sprinkled with parmesan cheese. Somewhere in there was half a hamburger that my kid didn't want.

The dessert course consisted of Girl Scout cookies accompanied by several cups of tea laced with more whipping cream.

I know that motivating workers is a big problem. At my office my main motivation to finish my work is to escape. I can't wait to get outside, especially on sunny days.

While working at home, I came up with a much better method of encouraging production. A stack of cookies.

For each paragraph I finished I rewarded myself with one cookie. Encouraged by these tangible re-

Odd-looking couple's humor overcomes embarrassment

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Older Than I Look in Tucson" and want to add my experience.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

I am a woman in my 40s but could easily pass for 18 or 19. My husband is 43, but looks older. We are constantly mistaken for father and daughter. At first we were embarrassed and even annoyed when strangers made this mistake, but we have learned to handle it with humor.

For example, if we are in a restaurant and the waiter turns to me and asks, "And what would your father like to drink?" I reply with a sly wink: "He's not my father — but please don't tell my husband."

And if someone asks my husband, "What will your daughter have?" he replies, "That's not my daughter, that's my son, and frankly I'm worried about him."

If she becomes a Seventh-Day Adventist and holds to the teachings of that church, she will be expected to abstain from:

1. Reading fictional material.
2. Playing cards or games that involve rage or stimulate competition.
3. Wearing jewelry.
4. Using cosmetics.
5. Using tobacco in any form.
6. Drinking alcoholic beverages, coffee and tea.
7. Having marital relations on the Sabbath, which begins at sundown on Friday night and ends at sundown on Saturday. It is considered a sin to seek pleasures on the "day set aside to worship the Lord."

wants checked at times. As the workday — including the home — is free from hazards, I discovered that working at home put a new strain on my marriage. Questions like "What happened to all the ice cream?" and "Is that all you do all day, eat?" were now heard at home. These kinds of questions were once left at the office.

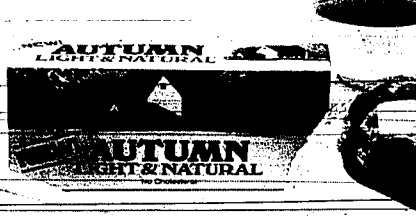

What's more, there were disappointments, like having to eat ham for supper. The same ham you had for lunch.

And so after working at home for a few days I took stock of the situation. The cookies were almost gone. The tea bags were gone. The olives were but a memory. And the mocha-chip had disappeared in the night.

I decided my study had ended. It was time to return to the office. At least until somebody in this house goes to the grocery store.

Goat cheese proves handy

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

A friend of mine, visiting France a year ago, was attracted by the way chevre (goat cheese) was displayed and sold in some Paris food shops. Standing on store counters, were glass jars filled with rounds of chevre marinating in olive oil and herbs.

After she had tasted some of the herb-flavored cheese, she determined that when she returned home she would create a recipe for a similar combination — and she did. Her family loves the bonus they get from her chevre jar. She uses any pieces of the goat cheese that break up, along with the olive oil from the jar, plus lemon juice to make dressing for green salad.

HERB-MARINATED GOAT CHEESE
1 pound uncoated goat cheese (in log shape), sliced ½-inch thick
2 cups olive oil
2 1/2 teaspoons dried thyme, crushed
2 1/2 teaspoons dried marjoram, crushed
1 teaspoon dried rosemary, crushed
¼ teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
2 bay leaves, crumbled
2 garlic cloves, crushed

Place cheese slices in a wide-mouthed container that has a tight-fitting cover.

In a 1-quart liquid measure thoroughly stir together the olive oil, thyme, marjoram, rosemary, red pepper flakes, bay leaves and garlic; pour over the cheese. Add additional olive oil if needed to cover the cheese. Cover tightly; carefully turn jar over several times.

Refrigerate for 7 to 10 days. Each day, let jar stand at room temperature until oil liquefies; turn jar over; return to refrigerator.

An hour before serving time, remove cheese from oil and let stand at room temperature. To serve, arrange on cheese board or platter with crackers or sliced French bread.

Recipes for fixing venison helpful

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: Do you know of a cookbook with recipes for venison? My son has just given me ground venison and venison roast, but without any cooking directions. The meat is in my freezer now. — GRATEFUL

DEAR GRATEFUL: You might want to check your bookstore or library for a copy of "The Wild Game and Fish Cookbook," by Jim Bryant (Little, Brown). Written recently by an expert-gamewoman who loves to cook, it contains about 30 recipes for using venison in all its forms.

You may also be interested in a booklet about venison published by Cornell University's Cooperative Extension Service. Adapted from bulletins published by the Cooperative Extension Service of Oregon State University, it contains tips, recipes and photographic illustrations of boning and cutting techniques. The following recipe is from the Cornell publication.

DEERBURGER
2 pounds ground venison
¼ pound ground beef fat
1 chopped onion
4 slices fresh bread broken into small pieces

Seasonings (to taste)
Mix the venison, fat, onion and bread. Add seasonings. Make into patties and fry or broil as for hamburgers.

Do not overcook. Deer meat has short fibers that toughen quickly if overcooked or cooked at too high a temperature. Plan to serve venison medium to well done, never rare or overdone.

Coffee purveyors try to grab youth market

By ERIKA SANCHEZ
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Change is brewing in the habits of American coffee-drinkers.

They're not drinking as much coffee as they used to, and when they do crave a cup of java, they no longer rely on the traditional two-pound can in the pantry.

More people are drinking decaffeinated and flavored coffee, or they are buying whole "gourmet" beans to grind at home.

While coffee remains America's most popular drink, consumption has declined steadily among people of all ages since 1962. The most dramatic drop, however, has been in the under-30 age group. A whole generation simply has never acquired the coffee-drinking habit, opting instead for soft drinks.

"Coffee is not a 'pop the top and run to the beach' experience," says Bill Brooks of the National Coffee Association. "It's a contemplative drink. It gives you time to think while you're going next."

In an attempt to reach young people, generic coffee ads promote the drink as "part of the lifestyle of achievers," while brand-name ads focus on coffee as an important ingredient in sociability.

In another move to make coffee more palatable to the younger set, companies have been adding such flavors as cinnamon, coconut, chocolate, almond and orange.

General Foods' International Coffees, which come in several flavors, are very popular among college students, says Jack Whiteinan, the company's public affairs manager.

Stores that sell whole beans also are bowing to the trend. "I wasn't going to prostitute my coffee with cinnamon or chocolate, but I changed my mind," says Carolyn Day, co-owner of Coffee Ltd., a Dallas specialty coffee store. "It introduced coffee to a generation that wouldn't ever drink it."

With names such as Swiss Almond Chocolate, Chocolate Vanilla Almond, French Cinnamon and Irish Cream, some of the flavored coffees sound more like ice cream than a drink. In fact, many of them are sipped at the end of a meal as a dessert substitute.

"It's great for people on diets," says Day. "Coffee has no calories. If you add cinnamon and cocoa, you may get a little extra fat, but it will satisfy any sweet tooth."

How could a drink that once was considered a stimulant now be perceived as a "relaxing" beverage? Partly because of advertising and partly because, in many instances, the stimulant has been removed.

The consumption of decaffeinated coffee in the United States has increased significantly in the last 20 years. In 1962, only 4 percent of all Americans chose decaffeinated; last year, 15.3 percent did.

"It's the fastest growing end of the market," says Whiteinan of General Foods. His company, which already sells Sanka and Brim, is about to introduce decaffeinated Maxwell House and Yuban, as well.

Decaffeinated coffee has become more popular, in part because many Americans are concerned that caffeine may cause health problems. Scientists, however, are backing away from this point of view.

Many coffee drinkers also want to enjoy the taste without getting the caffeine "lift." And decaffeinated whole beans, as well, are luring more people away from regular coffee.

That's because the beans — whether or not they have caffeine — taste better than their commercially ground counterparts.

"People are beginning to realize that commercial coffee aren't even that good," says Doug Balne, a coffee expert who owns The Coffee Exchange in Fort Myers, Fla.

The best-tasting coffee, whether regular or decaffeinated, starts with high-quality beans. Botanically, there are two major species of coffee: Robusta and Arabica. Ironically, the poorer-grade Robustas (widely used in commercial blends) have double the caffeine content of Arabicas.

The world's best coffee comes from high altitudes where the beans are difficult to cultivate. That explains why coffee from the Blue Mountains of Jamaica, for example, sells for about $20 a pound. Besides the Caribbean, the best coffees come from South America, East Africa, Indonesia and Hawaii.

Buying fresh beans is essential to brewing a tasty cup of coffee. "Coffee begins to deteriorate right after it's roasted," says Balne. "The oils begin to break down and get rancid."

Balne advises buying beans from the roasters themselves or from someone who knows exactly when the coffee was roasted. He also recommends that shoppers try to buy the coffee on the day it's delivered to the store.

La Creme de Cafe, Dallas' only coffee-roasting firm, roasts high-quality beans for restaurants, hotels and specialty stores, but plans to open to the public before the end of the year.

"Coffee shouldn't be stored in open bags in the store," says Balne. Instead, he says, it should be in Lulie canisters or canning jars. Coffee beans stay fresh for about a week at room temperature, says Balne, but freezing prolongs life. "For every 20 degrees you reduce the temperature, you double the shelf life of the coffee."

He suggests keeping coffee beans in an airtight container in the freezer and putting them directly into a grinder without thawing them. Coffee stays fresh less than 24 hours after it has been ground, so it's better to grind the beans at home.

Most coffee experts favor the drip method over the percolator because the water passes over the coffee grounds only once. When water circulates through the grounds, it sticks unsaturated butter (4 ounces), room temperature, quartered 1/2 cup milk

"A dizzying variety" of drip machines is on the market, from the simple plastic funnel and filter to an electronically programmed maker that actually grinds the coffee, then brews it in the same unit.

Espresso, a dark-roast coffee that's popular in Europe, recently has been gaining favor on this side of the Atlantic, as well. With this trend comes a host of new paraphernalia. "Espresso makers are a hot item," says Balne. "As are cappuccino machines that steam milk. The milk cuts down the strength of the espresso."

Purists such as Balne stay away from the flavored coffees sold in stores because they've been sprayed with aromatic essences. Instead, he suggests adding a flavoring such as almond or peppermint extract after the coffee has been brewed.

Here's a recipe for Cafe Brulot, a flavored coffee served at the Fairmont Hotel in Dallas:

- CAFE BRULOT
2 cinnamon sticks
2 ounces brandy
Peel of one lemon
Peel of one orange
8 whole cloves
2 sugar cubes; divided
2 ounces orange-flavored liqueur
3 cups strong black coffee, hot

Soak cinnamon sticks in brandy for at least 30 minutes. Cut lemon and orange peel into spirals and insert cloves at intervals in each peel.

Put lemon peel, orange peel, cloves, cinnamon sticks, 2 sugar cubes and 1/2 ounce of brandy into a 4-inch deep saucepan or Brulot pot and heat slowly, taking care not to burn the sugar. Over a 15-minute period, slowly add remaining ingredients except coffee. Flame the mixture and stir to enhance the flame, slowly adding the coffee. Reduce heat and let simmer 5 to 10 minutes. Strain to remove bits and pieces of flavorings. Serve in demitasse cups. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

PECAN LOAF

- 1 1/2 cups "unbleached" all purpose flour (7 1/2 ounces)
1 cup pecans (4 ounces)
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 large eggs
1 cup sugar (7 ounces)
1 stick unsalted butter (4 ounces), room temperature, quartered
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon maple flavoring

Fifteen minutes before baking, place the rack in the center of the oven and preheat to 350 F. Butter a 5- or 6-cup loaf pan and coat it with flour. Tap out any excess flour.

Using the food processor fitted with the metal blade, process the flour, pecans, baking powder and salt until the nuts are coarsely chopped — about 5 seconds — and reserve the mixture. Process the eggs and sugar 1 minute, stopping once to scrape down the work bowl. Add the butter and process 1 minute. With the machine running, pour the milk and maple flavoring through the feed tube and process 10 seconds. Add the reserved dry ingredients and pulse once. Run a spatula around the inside of the work bowl to loosen the mixture and pulse once more — just until the ingredients are combined. Do not overprocess.

Transfer the batter to the pan and smooth it with a spatula. Bake until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean — about 1 hour. Let it rest in the pan 5 minutes, then turn it out onto a wire rack to cool. The Pecan Loaf can be made in advance. When it is completely cool, wrap airtight in a plastic bag and hold at room temperature for up to 3 days, or in the freezer for up to 4 months. If frozen, allow to thaw in the plastic bag; remove the plastic bag and wrap in aluminum foil. Place it into a cold oven and turn the temperature to 300 F. Bake until heated through — about 30 minutes.

JAMOCAN COFFEE

- 1 and one-third cups milk
4 ounces sweet chocolate, broken into pieces one-third cup sugar (2 x ounces)
1 1/2 teaspoons cinnamon
3/4 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
2 3/4 cups very strong freshly brewed coffee
1/2 cup whipping cream

Bring the milk to boil, then keep it at a simmer. Using food processor filled with metal blade, pulse the chocolate, sugar and cinnamon together 3 times; then process continuously until the chocolate is as fine as the sugar. With the machine running, pour the milk and vanilla through the feed tube and process 10 seconds. The Jamocan Coffee can be prepared up to 2 days in advance to this point, covered and refrigerated.

Reheat gently before finishing the recipe. Combine the chocolate base with the hot coffee and stir well. Using the metal blade, with the machine running, pour the cream through the feed tube and process until it is thick. Serve cups of the Jamocan Coffee with a dollop of whipped cream. Makes 6 servings.

Studies allay suspicions

The Dallas Morning News

"Coffee is the calm moment that lets you think," according to an on-going coffee advertising campaign.

But coffee contains caffeine, a substance that stimulates the central nervous system. How can it calm you down?

Despite the coffee promotion, even the advertisers won't deny that caffeine is a stimulant. It has been around for centuries and is one of the world's most widely used drugs.

Caffeine has been the center of controversy for several years. It has been linked to such health problems as heart disease, hypertension, birth defects, fibrocystic breast disease, bladder and pancreatic cancer, not to mention such complaints as insomnia and anxiety.

Recent reports, however, have the scientists backing away from their earlier suspicions.

According to an article in "Nutrition and the M.D.," "many of the studies that indicted caffeine in the past did not distinguish between habitual and non-habitual users of caffeine, and between moderate and excessive use."

Also, scientists now say that any adverse effects coffee may have could be related to substances other than caffeine.

"With the possible exception of pregnant women in the latter stages of pregnancy, people have the ability to tolerate the chronic consumption of caffeine without harmful effects," says John Smith, professor of nutrition at the University of Tennessee.

Of course, any dietary excess can cause problems. Drinking eight cups of coffee a day can produce anxiety, headaches, dizziness and trembling. By contrast, drinking one or two cups simply increases alertness.

The amount of caffeine in a cup of coffee usually is around 100 milligrams, depending on how it has been brewed; drip coffee contains more caffeine per cup than percolated coffee.

Epcot Center features the ultimate in Disney experiences

Awakening to the song of birds and looking out the window to see a cardinal or a bluebird is always a joy, but did you ever gaze outdoors at a bird morning to see a gorgeous peacock with his feathers fanned out in regal splendor? This is what Skipper and I saw last week from the windows of a Treehouse Villa in the woods of Wall Disney World in Florida.

Dorsey Connors

At first we thought we were seeing things, or that the NBC peacock had escaped from the TV screen. But no, further perusal proved that it was a family, two peacocks and four peahens, roaming throughout the grounds, making their morning rounds of the villas. This was just the beginning of the sights and wonders that we experienced in this Vacation

Kingdom of 43 beautiful square miles ... a kingdom that caters to the imaginations of children and adults.

Epcot represents the ultimate in Disney concepts. The "Future World" exhibits include the Universe of Energy, where you are transported back to the days of the dinosaurs, up to the present and on to examine the energy forces of the future ... all with a multitude of special effects ... the World of Motion, which takes you on a thrilling ride through milestones in transportation history and gives you a kaleidoscopic view of a futuristic landscape ... and Journey Into Imagination, which catapults you into a fantasyland of art, literature, science and technology.

These are just a few of the fabulous adventures of Epcot. In World Showcase, a group of architectural wonders, each structure represents a nation, with houses, shops, artifacts and restaurants. We found the Italian restaurant especially good. And for a night of excellent entertainment and good dining and dancing, try the "Top of the World" on the roof of the Contemporary Hotel. For kids of any age, a visit to the "Magic Kingdom" is a must. You can't leave this enchanted land without saying "Hi!" to your old friends, Mickey Mouse, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, Donald Duck and all those other nifty guys!

BEAUTY BRIEFS: Make your eyelashes look thicker with eyeliner. Apply the liner not in a straight line but with tiny dots. Look down into a hand mirror, and apply the liner with a fine-tipped brush, going from the outer corner of the upper lid three-quarters of the way toward the inner corner where the lashes start. Then, use a finger tip or a cotton swab

Artichokes growing popular despite their inconveniences

By ELIZABETH LARGE
The Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE — In this era of fast food, the artichoke is one of the slowest foods of all.

You pull off the so-called leaves one by one (they're actually petals; you're eating a bud that could have flowers), dip in melted butter or sauce, and scrape off the tender pulp at the base — drawing the leaf between your teeth.

Each leaf renders up a tidbit — if that — of edible vegetable with an odd, delicate flavor. You discard the rest. As you approach the center you get more of the soft, pulpy meat until you reach the core of light-colored leaves that covers the fuzzy, inedible choke.

The choke (aptly named; don't swallow any of it) has to be scraped off with a knife or spoon, not always an easy task. In melted butter or sauce, and scrape off the tender pulp at the base — drawing the leaf between your teeth.

What you have left is the heart or bottom. This is what you get when you buy frozen artichoke hearts, but a solid, round chunk of vegetable you eat with a fork.

It's not easy to sell the idea that it's worth going to all this trouble to consume what's basically a cultivated thistle bud — especially when that thistle bud can cost $1 or more.

But "artichokes are coming out of the closet," Michael Boggialto feels. Boggialto should know because he grows them. He's general manager of Boggialto Packing Company in Castroville, Calif., the city that calls itself the artichoke capital of the world. That's what you find in the produce aisle; by Castroville, the cool, foggy coastal area south of San Francisco, contains the 11,432 acres that produce nearly all the commercially grown artichokes eaten in this country.

Sales are up, and artichoke acreage this year increased nearly 5 percent over 1982-83. Artichokes are hardly a new gourmet item, but it seems as if some people are just now discovering them.

There are dozens of kinds of artichokes, ranging in color from light green to deep red; the only domestic variety is the red one, called Italian. Growers experimented with a red one, but it didn't go over. "We have enough trouble just selling the green," says Boggialto.

In all but the largest markets like

New York, consumers don't get much to choose from as far as size goes, either. That's too bad, because while size is no indication of maturity, the smallest artichokes — two inches or less in diameter — often have no choke and can be eaten whole.

"I have my choice of any I want to bring home," says Boggialto. "And the smallest are the best eating value. With the larger you're throwing weight away." His favorite way to fix small chokes is to trim and cut them in wedges, then saute them in butter and olive oil with garlic.

Small artichokes are as mature as larger ones; they simply grow on a different part of the plant. The largest chokes grow at the top center stem; smaller ones are found on side branches. "Tiny, full-grown artichokes are located at the base of the plant. Most of the smaller ones go to eastern Canada, the growers' largest market.

We're just coming into the height of the artichoke season — March, April and May — when prices will be at their lowest. What we eat is the bud of a bushy perennial (about five feet high at the peak of production) with long, finger-shaped leaves and three or four stalks that shoot out of the foliage. Several buds grow on each stalk; if left alone they produce a beautiful flower ranging in color from deep crimson to a purplish blue.

Not all the buds on a stalk mature at one time, so the picker has to return to the field periodically to check them. That's one reason artichokes are expensive: the process involves so much hand labor. Each bud is harvested by hand with a knife, then carried in special backpacks.

So what do you do with this costly thistle once you've bought it and brought it home?

CRAB-STUFFED ARTICHOKE
(Serve these as a main course for a company lunch, with soup to begin with and homemade biscuits or cornsticks. Eat the crab salad by scooping it up with the leaves.)
4 artichokes, cooked
12 ounces crabmeat
¼ cup minced celery
2 tablespoons chopped black olives mayonnaise as needed
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon curry powder
salt, pepper to taste

After cooking, turn the artichokes upside down to drain. Spread the leaves at the top carefully and remove the choke with a spoon. (A serrated grapefruit spoon works well). Spread the leaves to form a cup.

Combine the rest of the ingredients and fill the artichokes with the salad. Makes 4 servings.

PORKCHOPS WITH ARTICHOKE ITALIAN-STYLE
2 tablespoons olive oil
6 loin pork chops
3 medium artichokes, trimmed
1 garlic clove, minced
¼ teaspoon basil
¼ teaspoon oregano
salt, pepper to taste
2 ½ cups Italian plum tomatoes

Saute the pork chops in the olive oil until nicely brown. Pour off excess fat.

Cut the trimmed artichokes in thin slices and arrange them around the chops. Add the garlic, seasonings and tomatoes.

Simmer, covered, for 45 minutes to an hour or until the chops and artichokes are tender. Makes 6 servings.

ARTICHOKE-VEGETABLE MEDLEY

1 large or 2 medium artichokes lemon juice
4 small carrots, sliced lengthwise
1 cup small white onions
½ cup mushrooms, cut in half
½ cup diagonally sliced celery
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup dry white wine
¼ teaspoon thyme
¼ teaspoon marjoram-salt, pepper

Bend back the outer leaves of the artichoke until they snap off easily near the base. The edible portion of the leaves should remain on the artichoke heart. Continue to snap off and discard thick leaves until the central core of pale green leaves is reached.

Trim about 1 inch off the top of the artichoke; discard.

Cut the artichokes lengthwise into sixths. Trim the outer dark green layer from the artichoke bottom. Cut out the center leaves and choke. Discard. Rub all surfaces with lemon juice.

Saute the carrots, onions, mushrooms and celery in butter about 5 minutes, or until golden. Add wine and seasonings; cook and stir 1 minute. Add artichokes; simmer, covered, 25 minutes or until tender. Serves 4.

Coupons buying vegies

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Dear Martin: I've been an avid coupon clipper and refunder for more than two years now, and I've enjoyed every moment, especially when I open up the mailbox and receive refund checks and free products. However, I have met a few critics who say, "Aw, the only foods you can use your coupons on are junk foods and highly processed items that aren't nutritious."

Supermarket Shopper

I have a little shocker for them. I am a vegetarian and avoid most refined food products and sugar! One would think that there aren't that many refund offers open to me, but there really are. Besides paper products and pet foods, I regularly receive refunds on the many packaged foods I do use, from orange juice to wheat germ and natural cereals.

In fact, at the health food store in my neighborhood, I've even noticed that the natural food manufacturers are jumping on the refund bandwagon. Last week I saw a refund offer for Essene Sprouted Wheat Bread, and I immediately ripped a form off the pad. I was overjoyed! — Lisa Swann-Hogak, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dear Lisa: It's nice to hear that health-conscious people, like yourself, are getting their fair share of the coupon and refund savings. The past few years have seen people become more aware of the value of "healthy" foods. This trend hasn't been lost on the major brands and the smart supermarket operators. The major brands are now coming out with "lite," low sodium, and "healthy" foods. The big new supermarkets often have large health and natural food sections. I like it!

The "health nuts" of America have been a wonderful influence on all of us and I hope the trend continues. Dear Martin: Why do stores that advertise double coupons refuse to give you change if double the coupon value is more than the price of the item? For instance, if a Del Monte item is 79 cents and the store is supposed to double my 50-cent coupon, why don't they give me the item and 21 cents change? — Lois McCoy, Stuart, S.C.

DEAR LOIS: The store doesn't want to give you the change for a simple reason. It comes right out of their own pocket. In your Del Monte example, the store is going to get 50 cents back from Del Monte for the coupon (plus a small handling fee), and it will take the additional 29 cents out of its own pocket in order to give you the item free.

Most stores that offer to double the value of coupons have the attitude that if you are getting the produce free, that should be enough to satisfy you. Since the store pays for the second part of the discount, they're free to make the rules. Frankly, I am more than satisfied with this arrangement. If it sounds like I'm saying don't let me get in the mouth, that's exactly right.

Down home recipe

NEW YORK — Move over, French cuisine! Ditto for classic Italian cooking. American menu specialties are taking the spotlight, built around traditional foods favored by pioneer forefathers. Once considered "just down home cooking," these recipes are taking on glamorous tones, here and abroad.

Southern Fried Chicken and Gravy with Rice is probably the most classic example of them. The South, as a matter of fact, has made a significant contribution to the newly popular "American cuisine."

Rice, because it has been cultivated in the southern states since the mid-1600s, is a natural complement to many dishes from that region.

Easy to prepare, rice is the ideal accompaniment to old-fashioned standards as well as gourmet recipes. It stands on its own or serves as an excellent "padding" real economy to the daily menu.

When trying new versions of old family dishes, to put the American cuisine into practice, have a cooked rice in your refrigerator. It stores well there, covered, for six or seven days; reheats in 4 to 5 minutes by adding two tablespoons of liquid for each cup of cooked rice.

Join the chefs of the world by serving this Southern specialty... Fried Chicken and Gravy with Rice.

SOUTHERN FRIED CHICKEN AND GRAVY WITH RICE

- 12 choice chicken pieces (2 1/2 to 3 lbs.)
- 2 cups buttermilk, divided
- 3/4 cup plus 3 tablespoons flour, divided
- 2 teaspoons paprika
- 2 1/2 teaspoons salt, divided
- 1 1/4 teaspoons ground pepper, divided
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon powdered mustard
- 1/2 cup chicken broth
- 2 tablespoons snipped parsley
- 3 cups hot cooked rice

Dip the chicken in 1/2 cup buttermilk, then in 1 cup flour, paprika, 2 teaspoons salt, and 1 teaspoon pepper in plastic bag. Add the chicken, a few pieces at a time, shaking to coat. In a large skillet, saute chicken in oil over medium-high heat, turning to brown evenly. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer 30 minutes. Uncover; cook 15 minutes longer. Remove chicken; drain on paper towels; keep warm. Pour off fat from skillet; return 2 tablespoons. Stir in remaining flour; cook until roux turns light tan. Add sugar, mustard, broth and remaining buttermilk, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring, until thickened and bubbly. Add parsley. Serve chicken and gravy over beds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings.

Microwave Method

Prepare chicken according to conventional directions. Pour off fat from skillet; add 2 tablespoons to a 4-cup glass measure. Stir in remaining flour. Cook on high (maximum power) 1 minutes, or until roux is light tan, stirring every minute. Add sugar, mustard, broth and remaining buttermilk, salt and pepper. Cook at 70 degrees power 1 minutes, or until thickened and bubbly, stirring every minute. Add parsley. Serve chicken and gravy over beds of fluffy rice.

CLASSIC HOPPIN' JOHN

- 1 cup dry blackeye peas
- 2 teaspoons salt, divided
- 8 slices bacon, diced
- 3/4 cup chopped onions
- 1 cup uncooked rice
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper

Rinse the peas and combine with 4 cups water and 1 teaspoon salt. Bring to a boil, boil 2 minutes, remove from heat, and allow to stand 1 hour. (Or, combine peas, water, and salt; allow peas to soak overnight.) Simmer peas 30 minutes, or until tender. Drain peas; reserve liquid. Meanwhile, cook bacon in large skillet until crisp; drain on paper towels. Pour off fat; return 2 tablespoons to skillet. Add onions; cook until tender. Stir in reserved liquid, reserved black pepper, and remaining salt. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer 15 minutes, or until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed. Add peas and cup reserved liquid; heat through. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Microwave Method: Rinse peas and combine with 4 cups water and 1 teaspoon salt in deep 3-quart microwaveable dish. Cover and cook peas at 50 degrees power 20 minutes, or until tender. Drain peas; reserve liquid. Set peas and liquid aside. Add bacon to 3-quart dish; cover and cook on high 4 minutes, or until crisp, stirring every 2 minutes. Drain on paper towels. Pour off fat; return 2 tablespoons to dish. Add onions; cook on high 1 minute, or until tender. Stir in rice, 2 cups water, bacon, garlic, peppers, and remaining salt. Cook on high 5 minutes, or until boiling. Cover and cook at 50 degrees power 15 minutes, or until rice is tender; heat on high 2 minutes, or until heated through.

"What's the best day to run my ad?"

The Times-News

Everyday is a good day, because people's needs are always changing. You never know when they will be looking for what you have to sell.

The important thing is to keep your ad in long enough to give people a chance to see it and call you.

LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF MEETING TO NOMINATE A GROWER MEMBER OF THE IDAHO POTATO COMMISSION.
Notice is hereby given that on the 4th day of April at 7:00 p.m. at the Best Western Canyon Springs Inn, Twin Falls, Idaho, nominations for one grower member of the Idaho Potato Commission from District 2 may be made by qualified potato growers residing in Minidoka, Jerome, Lincoln, Blaine, Gooding, Valley, Boise, Cassia, Twin Falls, and

LEGAL NOTICE

Elmore counties. Each grower may nominate three or more qualified growers for each vacancy from which one will be appointed by Governor John V. Evans. IDAHO POTATO COMMISSION.
PUBLISHED: Wednesday, March 14, and 26, 1984.

LEGAL NOTICE

that on the 5th day of April at 7:30 p.m. at the Burley Inn, Burley, Idaho, nominations for one grower member of the Idaho Potato Commission from District 2 may be made by qualified potato growers residing in Minidoka, Jerome, Lincoln, Blaine, Gooding, Valley, Boise, Cassia, Twin Falls, and Elmore counties. Each grower may nominate three or more qualified growers for each vacancy from which one will be appointed by Governor John V. Evans.

Write a want ad that sells

Give Facts

Put yourself in the buyer's place. What would you want to know? List the item's age, condition, size, brand name, model and approximate value. If you're selling a car, state the type of transmission, mileage, it's low, and special equipment.

Don't Embellish

It's risky business to exaggerate and it won't increase your chances of success. Misleading information may get a buyer to your house. It may also get you a punch in the nose.

Include Price

Surveys indicate that buyers are more interested in merchandise when they know the price. This applies to everything from household furnishings to automobiles. Good merchandise, priced fairly, is the best guarantee of success.

Be Available

A telephone number is fine if you're at home when your ad is published. If you're not going to be home, state the time you will be. Most people won't call back twice.

Princeton stuns San Diego as NCAAs open

Opening round includes four other confrontations

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Junior forward Kevin Mullin scored a career-high 33 points to lead Ivy League champion Princeton over San Diego 65-56 Tuesday night in a preliminary round game of the NCAA basketball tournament.

The Aggies will meet Nevada-Las Vegas on Thursday night in the West Regional. Mullin, who averaged just five points a game last season and 16 points this season, dropped in 15 of his points in the first half. Princeton led 33-24 at halftime.

Princeton held a 41-28 advantage with 16 minutes remaining in the game, but San Diego whipped the margin to 47-42 on a jumper by John Prunty with 5:14 left.

Two free throws by Mullin made it 49-42 and teammate Howard Levy got two more foul shots to put the Tigers back in control by nine.

Princeton, known for its patient offense, used only two substitutes, both in the first half.

San Diego, the West Coast Athletic Conference champion, was led by Mike Whittemarsh with 17 points and Prunty with 10. The Toreros finished 18-10.

Northeastern 90, LIU 87
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Wes Fuller scored 22 points and Reggie Lewis added 21 to lead Northeastern over Long Island University 90-87. Northeastern, 7-4 and the East Coast Athletic Conference North Atlantic champion, advances to meet Virginia Commonwealth in the tournament's opening round Thursday.

The Huskies ran off the last 12 points of the first half for a 38-34 lead at intermission. Fuller, a freshman making his first start for the Huskies, scored four points and Quinton Dale came off the bench to add four more in the spurt.

LIU's Blackbirds came close several times, the last with 47 seconds left when a long jumper by Robert Brown brought them within 88-85.

Northeastern then tried to stall, forcing LIU to foul Lewis went to the free throw line, but missed, giving the ball to LIU, the ECAC Metro champion.

But Brown's shot was baited away and Fuller then drove down the court to end the threat.

Brown scored 27 points to lead LIU, which finished at 20-11.

Morehead 70, N.C. A&T 69
DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Guy Minnifield's jumper from the top of the key with four seconds to play gave Morehead State a 70-69 victory over North Carolina A&T.

Minnifield's shot, his only two points of the game, put the Ohio Valley Conference champions ahead for the first time since the game's early stages.

Eric Boyd of the Aggies attempted a last-second shot, but it bounced off the rim.

Morehead, 25-5, goes to Milwaukee for a first-round Midwest regional game Friday night against Louisville. Morehead lost 65-50 at Louisville on Jan. 3.

Morehead kept things close throughout the game, never trailing by more than five points in the second half.

Eddie Childress, with 20 points, was Morehead's leading scorer. Also in double figures for the Eagles were Jeff Tipton with 16, Arthur Sullivan, 12, and Earl Harrison with 11.

Boyd, with 23, lead the Aggies, 22-7. Jimmy Brown, son of the former National Football League great Jim Brown, had 16 and Joe Blinton, 10.

Harrison made both ends of a one-and-one situation for Morehead to tie the score 69-68 with 3:30 to play.

Both teams then went into a stall until A&T's James Horace was fouled with 26 seconds left.

He missed the first shot and made the second, giving A&T a 69-68 lead and setting the stage for Minnifield's winning shot.

Richmond 89, Rider 85
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John Newman scored 25 points and Kevin Johnson added 22 as Richmond defeated Rider 89-85.

Rider missed its first six shots, allowing Richmond to roar ahead 16-2 six minutes into the game. By halftime, the Spiders were ahead 40-27, and they led by at least 16 points throughout the second half.

Richmond hit 69 percent of its field-goal attempts, while Rider hit 39 percent. The Spiders also out-rebounded the Broncos 47 to 42.

Newman, a 6-foot-7 sophomore forward, finished just two points shy of the 1,000-point mark in his career.

Senior forward Bill Fyfe added 19 points for the Spiders.

Rider, the East Coast Conference champion, was led by junior forward Jim Belger with 16 points. Derrick Lamar and Ray Burke added 10 points each for Rider, 20-11.

Richmond, the East Coast Athletic Conference South champion at 21-9, will meet Auburn Thursday in the first round of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Morehead State's Arthur Sullivan, 15, tries to go around North Carolina A&T's Jimmy Brown forward, finished just two points shy of the 1,000-point mark in his career. Senior forward Bill Fyfe added 19 points for the Spiders.

Rider, the East Coast Conference champion, was led by junior forward Jim Belger with 16 points. Derrick Lamar and Ray Burke added 10 points each for Rider, 20-11.

Richmond, the East Coast Athletic Conference South champion at 21-9, will meet Auburn Thursday in the first round of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Eddie Archie 12 and David Clayburn 10 for the Braves. The Southwestern Athletic Conference champions, 22-9, literally ran away with the game in the second half, using their speed to wear down Houston Baptist.

Alcorn 79, Houston Baptist 69
DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Michael Phelps scored 21 points to lead four Alcorn State players in double figures as the Braves posted a 79-69 NCAA basketball tournament preliminary-round victory Tuesday night over Houston Baptist.

Alcorn goes to Omaha, Neb., on Friday to play Kansas in a first-round Midwest Regional game.

Aaron Brandon added 15 points, Alcorn's leading scorer.

It's the second straight time Alcorn has won an opening-round NCAA test at the University of Dayton Arena. Last year, the Braves defeated Xavier, Ohio, 81-75 before losing to Georgetown.

Anicet Zavadram, an import from the Central African Republic, was high scorer for Houston Baptist with 14 points. Terry Hairston with 12 was the only other double-figure scorer for the 24-7 Huskies, who are the Trans America Athletic Conference champions.

Alcorn State led only 29-27 at halftime and the game was as close as 49-46 with 10:10 to play. The Braves then scored 10 of the next 12 points to go up 59-48 with 7:28 to play and expanded their lead from there.

Refs rely on replays

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Officials at Tuesday night's NCAA basketball tournament preliminary round game between North Carolina A&T and Morehead State used a television replay to determine who would attempt two foul shots in a crucial situation late in the game.

With 26 seconds remaining and the score tied 68-68, Earl Harrison of Morehead State was charged with a deliberate foul. Officials said Harrison pulled the jersey of one of the opposing team's players, but they could not determine who that player was.

At first, the officials said Eric Boyd of A&T was to go to the foul line after they decided to view the replay provided by ESPN, the national cable sports network, which awarded the shots to James Horace.

Horace missed the first and made the second, giving the Aggies a 69-68 lead.

Morehead went on to win 70-69 on a shot from the head of the key with four seconds remaining by Guy Minnifield.

The officials, Mickey Crowley, Jim Burr and Tim Higgins, issued a joint statement after the game.

"It was a deliberate foul. The player came across and grabbed him. The shot was made. A two-shot foul," the statement read. "We wanted to be sure we had the correct man at the line. We had a controversy, we were not sure, so we got clarification from TV and justified our selection."

"Our fans have never heard of them and that sometimes carries over to our players," DeVoe said. "The team is obviously proud, and I'm very impressed after watching the video tapes. What's critical is that we are fresh, alert, excited, and not overconfident."

St. Peter's is 25-5 and on a 16-game winning streak, living long and La Salle for the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference title at 11-3.

Utah State will let it all hang out against Southwestern Louisiana, according to Coach Rod Tuelier.

"We're going to run and play up-tempo against them," Tuelier said.

Irish seek redemption, Lamar wants respect as NIT opens

By The Associated Press

Notre Dame's basketball team will be looking for redemption while Lamar will be looking for some respect as the 47th National Invitation Tournament opens tonight at regional sites across the country.

In hosting Old Dominion, 20-11, in one of the opening round of the nation's oldest post-season basketball tournament, Notre Dame, 17-11, will again try for the NIT title after losing in the first round last year.

Because the 32-team NIT field contains 13 teams who are 20-game winners along with North Carolina State, last season's NCAA champion, Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps thinks the tourney will be an "interesting march to New York City for all the teams involved."

Meanwhile, New Mexico, 24-10, hopes to improve on its best basketball season in six years in the opening-round game against Lamar, 24-5. Lamar is the reigning team in the NIT field and probably the most irate at having been passed over by the NCAA.

Cochran Pat Foster, who also is the school's athletic director, said this week the Cardinals may drop out of the Southern Conference because Foster believes the league doesn't carry enough clout within the NCAA. Lamar won the conference's regular season title with an 11-1 record but was upset by Louisiana Tech in the finals of the postseason tournament.

In other first-round games tonight, it's Georgia, 17-12, at Tennessee-Chattanooga, 23-6; Florida, 18-12, at South Alabama, 22-7; St. Peter's, N.J., 23-5, at Tennessee, 19-13, and Southwestern Louisiana, 20-8, at Utah State, 19-10.

On Thursday night, it's Florida State, 19-10, at North Carolina State, 19-13; Georgia Tech, 18-10, at Virginia Tech, 16-12; Wichita State, 18-11, at Michigan, 18-10; Nebraska, 17-11, at Cregilton, 17-13; Ohio State, 15-13, at Xavier, Ohio, 20-9; Marquette, 16-12, at Iowa State, 16-12, and Santa Clara, 22-9, at Oregon, 15-12.

The opening round concludes Friday night with three games — Boston College, 17-11, vs. St. Joseph's, 20-8, and Pittsburgh, 16-12, vs. La Salle, 20-10, at Philadelphia, and Fordham, 19-14, at Weber State, 22-8.

The second and third rounds will also be played at regional sites. The four surviving teams will advance to the semifinals and finals to be played at Madison Square Garden on March 26 and March 28.

Tennessee has never played St. Peter's, and Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe is well aware of the Peacocks' reputation for tough defense. "Our fans have never heard of them and that sometimes carries over to our players," DeVoe said. "The team is obviously proud, and I'm very impressed after watching the video tapes. What's critical is that we are fresh, alert, excited, and not overconfident."

St. Peter's is 25-5 and on a 16-game winning streak, living long and La Salle for the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference title at 11-3.

Utah State will let it all hang out against Southwestern Louisiana, according to Coach Rod Tuelier.

"We're going to run and play up-tempo against them," Tuelier said.

Holmes-Coetzee in doubt

NEW YORK (AP) — The Larry Holmes-Greggie Coetzee fight announced for June 1 or June 8 might not happen at all, promoter Don King said Tuesday.

"It's not set," King said by telephone from Cleveland. "I thought it would happen, but it might not."

But Kenneth Bonds, president of JPD Sports, which wants to promote the fight with Murad Muhammad, said he had a letter from Charles Lomax, King's attorney, agreeing to the match.

The fight will take place at Las Vegas, New Orleans or Houston, Bonds said.

King said he has an agreement to promote all of Coetzee's title fights.

"It's all conditional," said King, who wants $1 million non-refundable now and then a letter of credit for $7 million.

With the $7 million, King said he would pay Coetzee, the World Boxing Association champion from South Africa, $3.2 million and give $2.2 million to promoter Cedric Kushner, who also has connections to Coetzee.

DON KING
"It's all conditional"

Holmes, who relinquished the World Boxing Council title, and now is recognized as champion by the International Boxing Federation, reportedly will receive $9 million. As part of a two-fight deal with JPD and Muhammad, Holmes also is to receive $3 million to make an IBF title defense against John Tate on April 6 at Reno, Nev.

King said he is interested in promoting a fight between Coetzee and Tim Witherspoon, who last Friday won the WBC title vacated by Holmes on a 12-round majority decision over Greg Page.

Despite ACC playoff loss

North Carolina retains No. 1 rating

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite its loss in the Atlantic Coast Conference playoffs, North Carolina is still No. 1 with the voters in The Associated Press college basketball poll.

The Tar Heels, who started the season in the top spot, finished their Tuesday night in the final AP poll despite their second loss of the year last week — to Duke in the semifinals of the ACC tournament.

And they did it rather comfortably, as a nationwide panel of 62 sports writers and broadcasters rewarded the 27-2 Tar Heels with 51 first-place votes and 1,227 points.

That was more than enough to beat out Georgetown, 29-3, which remained in the No. 2 position, collecting eight first-place votes and 1,169 points after winning the Big East tournament over the weekend.

The points system is based on 20 points for each first-place vote, 19 for second, etc.

It was the second time in three seasons that Coach Dean Smith's team was the No. 1 preseason choice and wound up the regular schedule in the same position. The 1981-82 team also did that and went on to win the NCAA championship.

As a tribute to their No. 1 ranking for most of the season, the Tar Heels were awarded the top-seeded berth in the East Regional of this year's NCAA tournament. Georgetown, meanwhile, was seeded No. 1 in the West by the NCAA committee.

"I think I'll leave that up to you," said North Carolina guard Michael Jordan when asked if he was surprised the Tar Heels kept the poll's top spot. "I thought we would drop and we would go out West."

"I saw the Georgetown game and thought they played well," he added. "I felt they would be put in the East. I just think that wherever we go, we'll be ready to play."

The other top-seeded teams, Kentucky and DePaul, which drew two first-place votes in the AP poll, held to their third and fourth positions in the final poll, while Houston remained fifth.

Kentucky, which received one first-place vote, was No. 1 for one week during the season, the only time that North Carolina was not in first place.

Illinois moved up a notch to No. 6 in the poll and Oklahoma dropped a spot to No. 7. Arkansas and Texas-El Paso stayed at Nos. 8 and 9, respectively, while Purdue, co-winner of the Big 10 title, moved up to No. 10.

USFL's Invaders fire Ralston, coach & GM

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Invaders on Tuesday fired head coach and General Manager John Ralston and replaced him with Chuck Hutchison, the United States Football League team's offensive line coach and director of player personnel.

Ralston will remain with the team, however, in an undisclosed capacity. The Invaders, who have scored just seven points in losing the first three games of the 1984 season, made the announcement at a news conference Tuesday.

Hutchison, 35, earns the distinction of being the youngest head coach in the two-year-old football league. He joined the Invaders in 1982, following three years as offensive line coach of the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

The new coach spent six years as an offensive guard with the St. Louis Cardinals and Cleveland Browns of the National Football League.

Hutchison replaces Ralston, the Invaders' first coach and general manager, as well as the first full-time employee of the new league. Ralston coached the Denver Broncos for five years before jumping to the new league. His decision to join the Invaders added credibility to the new league when it began forming in 1982.

Ralston's duties as general manager have also been taken away. Those responsibilities will now be divided between Hutchison and Ted Taube, the Invaders' president, according to spokesman Gene Effler.

Ralston will remain with the organization, Effler said. "But his duties are undefined."

The departing coach attended the news conference that named his replacement. Ralston said he was "disappointed that the team was not achieving its goal of winning."

Last year, during the USFL's first season, Ralston led the Invaders to the Pacific Division Championship with a 9-9 record. But this year the team is 0-3 and its lackluster offense has scored just one touchdown.

Ted Taube, who has had several changes are in the works in an attempt to salvage the remainder of the season.

Last week, the team fired Ray Malavasi as offensive line coach. Malavasi was hired by the Los Angeles Express on Tuesday as defensive co-ordinator.

Ruland helps lift Washington over Nuggets

By The Associated Press

Jeff Ruland scored 12 of his 25 points in the fourth quarter to lead Washington to a 103-93 National Basketball Association victory over Denver Tuesday night.

Greg Ballard added 17 second-half points as the Bullets won for the second time in five games. After making up a 10-point halftime deficit, the Bullets took the lead for good when Ruland made a three-point play with 10:17 remaining in the game. Ballard followed with a jump shot to make the margin 77-81, and the margin climbed to eight points with three minutes to play.

Kiki Vandeweghe led Denver with 25 points and Alex English added 24. Denver entered the game having won seven of its last nine contests. Vandeweghe scored 19 points before intermission to help the Nuggets take a 56-49 halftime lead, but Washington opened the third quarter with a 12-4 scoring streak to get back into the game. Led by Ballard's 10 third-period points, the Bullets took a 87-77 lead into the final quarter.

Knicks 117, Suns 96
At New York, Louis Orr scored a season-high 25 points, becoming only the second New York player besides Bernard King to lead the team in scoring in the last 19 games, as the Knicks routed the Phoenix Suns 117-96.

Orr, who also had 10 rebounds, hit seven of 11 field goal attempts and 11 free throws during the fourth quarter for the sixth time in his last seven games and beat the Suns for the first time in six meetings over the last three years.

King, now the NBA's fourth leading scorer after averaging 20.5 in 23 games since Jan. 1, finished with 21 points, nine of them during a 2-1 third-quarter streak.

ProBasketball

The Suns, who got a team-high 20 points from James Edwards, had cut an 18-point deficit to 64-55 early in the second half before the Knicks started their decisive spur, which gave them an 85-62 lead with 2 1/2 minutes to go in the third period.

Phoenix got as close as 11 points early in the fourth quarter, but the Knicks responded with 15 of the next 17 points to go ahead 110-86. New York built a 54-36 advantage in the second quarter with a 16-4 streak and a three-point goal by the Suns' Rod Foster with three seconds left cut the halftime deficit to 62-51. The Suns narrowed the margin to 64-55 before King led the 21-7 streak.

Cavaliers 82, Hawks 83
At Richmond, Cliff Robinson scored 13 of his 29 points in the fourth quarter as the Cleveland Cavaliers returned home for a 92-83 victory over the Atlanta Hawks following a witness scoring tie at half.

The victory improved Cleveland to 19-12 at home and 25-40 on the season, matching the total number—of victories the Cavaliers registered last season. Robinson, whose leading scorer, Dominique Wilkins, missed all seven of his first-half shots and finished with six points, lost for the eighth time in nine games. Free agent John Davis hit two free throws to open the game, but World B. Free sank a three-point shot to put Cleveland ahead 3-2, and the Cavaliers did not trail again.

The Hawks fought back to tie 52-52 with five minutes left in the third quarter on Wilkins' only field goal, but Jeff Cook put the Cavaliers ahead for good at 56-54 with a jumper about a minute later.

Sixers 121, Pacers 106
At Indianapolis, reserve forward Sam Williams scored 11 of his 15 points during a nine-minute stint in the first half, sparking the Philadelphia 76ers from eight points down to a 121-106 victory over the Indiana Pacers.

The victory, topped by Julius Erving's 31 points, was Philadelphia's 12th straight at Indiana and eighth straight against the Pacers overall. Erving had eight turnovers in the first quarter, fell behind 36-28 after Indiana rookie center Steve Stipanovich scored on a fast-break slam dunk.

But the 6-foot-8 Williams, who entered the game after starter Marc Iavaroni picked up his third foul, got the last basket of the period and scored five points during an 11-2 spur by Philadelphia at the start of the second quarter.

A stuff by Williams gave Philadelphia its first lead of the game at 40-38. The Pacers got consecutive baskets by Butch Carter and George Johnson and two free throws by Sidney Love to regain a 44-41 lead, but the Sixers then outscored Indiana 14-2 over the next four minutes for a comfortable 58-41 lead.

ran off 10 straight points, but another basket by Erving and two free throws each by Malone and Williams gave the 76ers a 76-68 advantage midway through the period.

Bucks 116, Pistons 95
At Milwaukee, Paul Pressey sparked a 15-0 run by the Bucks in the first half of the game to help Milwaukee break a three-game losing streak with a 116-95 victory over the Detroit Pistons.

Milwaukee moved ahead of the Pistons by one-half game in the Central Division standings with a 39-27 record. The Pistons fell to 32-37 as their four-game winning streak ended.

Pressey scored seven points toward the 13-0 lead, and later scored a three-point play to widen the margin to 22-7 with 6:34 left in the first period. Milwaukee, with Pressey scoring 12 points, led 31-22 at the end of the period.

The Pistons trimmed the gap to 43-35 on Terry Tyler's baseline jump shot with 6:24 left in the half. But Milwaukee surged to a 59-41 lead at intermission.

Detroit outscored the Bucks 29-14 in the first eight minutes of the game, but cut the margin to 73-70. Milwaukee recovered to lead 87-76 at the end of the quarter.

Rockets 117, Clippers 109
At Houston, guard Allen Leavell scored seven of his 22 points and passed out six assists in the third quarter to help the Houston Rockets to a 117-109 victory over the San Diego Clippers.

Houston held a 67-62 halftime lead before cranking up its running game in the third period. Paced by Leavell's five points and two assists, the Rockets opened the half with a 12-4 spurt for a 75-66 lead with 8:53 left.

Rodney McCray's dunk with 5:19 left in the third quarter gave Houston a 94-74 lead, but the Clippers closed to 100-93 by the end of the third quarter. Terry Cummings, who led all scorers with 37, brought San Diego to within 108-103 with his dunk with 4:51 left.

Houston, which scored only 17 points in the first period, got stuffs by 36-foot guard Ralph Sampson in the final two minutes to preserve their victory.

Spurs 137, Mavericks 131
At San Antonio, guard John Lucas scored 16 points, including six in the second overtime, as the San Antonio Spurs outlasted the Dallas Mavericks 137-131.

The overtime ended at 125-125 when Dallas center Pat Cummings sank a free throw with 42 seconds remaining. His second shot bounced off the rim.

Dallas led by three points late in regulation, but the Spurs made a free throw, deliberately missed his second, and San Antonio's Fred Roberts sent the game into the first overtime by battling a crowd under the basket to sink a layup with one second left. Forward Edger Jones kept the Spurs in contention as the lead seced throughout the game, scoring 10 points and pulling down a career-high 25 rebounds.

'83 champ N.C. State hopes NIT showing will save year

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Jim Valvano is trying to pick up the fragments of North Carolina State's 1983 national championship season and put it all back together again.

"I don't know if it will save the year," Valvano said. "I'll find some way to make it worthwhile." First, Valvano has to find the ingredients that will stop a six-game losing streak, all against Atlantic Coast Conference opponents.

The defending NCAA champion, 19-13, will host Florida State Thursday and Virginia wants very much to go back to New York, back to a tournament he's now since childhood, back to a tournament he played in. And he wants to come back a winner.

In the middle of a six-game slide, Valvano sees a goal. Nobody has won an NCAA and NIT championship in consecutive years.

"I wanted this team to set its own identity," Valvano said. "I didn't say this year is not a success if you don't make it back to the NCAA's. I didn't want them to have that pressure."

Fact is, it's a tournament, and that's good enough for Valvano. "Get eight squads together and go to Fuquay-Varina—it's a tournament," Valvano said. "Can I cut the nets down? Let's go."

Fuquay-Varina is a rural Wake County town 18 miles south of the N.C. State campus.

To go, Valvano said the Wolfpack needs to get on a roll. The stumbling block is that Florida State is a team already on a roll.

The 19-10 Seminoles have won five of their last six games, including two victories over Virginia Tech. They lost only two to Memphis State and beat Louisville by 15 during mid-season.

Al Gipson, a 6-foot-10 freshman center, was the Metro Conference Player of the Year and has been the leading scorer for Florida State in 22 of its 29 games. He averages 20.7 points per game and 6.8 rebounds.

Valvano said forward Vince Martello and guard Dan Shaffer could also be trouble. Martello is the second leading scorer on the team with 12.7 points, and Shaffer averages nearly 10.

But the big trouble, Valvano said, is "they're hot and we're not." "The problem for the Wolfpack in recent weeks has been the sticky defense on 6-9 forward Lorenzo Charles. Though he averages more than 18 points per game, he has been held below that in the last five games.

"The burden then falls on the N.C. State guards, 5-7 Anthony 'Spud' Webb, 6-0 Terry Gannon and 6-5 Ernie Myers.

"If our guards don't shoot, we lose," Valvano said. "When our guards shoot, we win." Valvano said N.C. State's exclusion from the NCAA's was its own fault. The 20th victory never came, and neither did the bid. But this is a chance for redemption.

"I don't want an '84 tournament only in the eyes of people who haven't suited up," Valvano said.

Sonics say 'sucker punch' laid injured Thompson low

SEATTLE (AP)—Teammates of guard David Thompson of the Seattle SuperSonics say the veteran National Basketball Association player was victimized by a "sucker punch" as he sat in New York's Studio 54 over the weekend.

Thompson suffered a broken tooth and knee ligaments that will sideline him for the rest of the season.

Sonics General Manager Les Wilson said Thompson was "hit in the face by a punch" on Saturday morning incident at the elite disco SBT was under investigation by the Sonics.

Thompson could not be reached for comment in Seattle. His wife said the Sonics preferred Thompson not talk about the incident until the team's probe is completed.

Habegger said Thompson told him he was not fighting, and teammates said Thompson was struck by a Studio 54 employee who stepped out halfway up the stairs.

"I didn't see the actual punch, but I guess he was sucker punched," said Seattle center Jack Sikma. "He was on the stairs—talking to some lady about halfway up the stairs. Somebody came up from behind him and hauled off and cracked him one."

"David fell to the bottom of the stairs and to the time we got there, the punch was already there, grabbing him."

Studio 54 manager Neil Wilson said Thompson had attempted to "make a pass" at a hot chick girl. "It was some physical contact, Wilson said.

He said Thompson tried to follow the woman, but an employee he identified as Martin Santiago stepped in and threw Thompson into a hospital where he was treated and released.

Thompson's knee was swelling and he was taken to Roosevelt Hospital where he was treated and released.

Habegger said the injury was to Thompson's left knee, which had not been previously been injured. Thompson has had a problem with swelling in his right knee from another injury.

An operation on the knee probably would be scheduled in the next few days, Habegger said.

Thompson, Sikma, Danny Vranes, Tom Chambers and Jan Sundvold went to the celebrated disco after a bus ride from Philadelphia following "Friday night's game."

Teammates said Thompson was the victim in the incident.

"David was yelling the whole time that he had been attacked," said Vranes. "He was hot and kept yelling, didn't do anything, I didn't do anything." David wasn't fighting, he was just going to the restroom."

Chambers said the club told the players the man who pushed Thompson was an employee, "and they had to go on his word."

"It's just not right," said Chambers. "David was not out of control. We'd been there about an hour and a half, and he was a perfect gentleman. They said he tried to pinch some girl. I didn't see him do it."

Habegger deferred questions about Thompson's behavior until after the conclusion of the Sonics' investigation.

"It's very unfair to make all kinds of suppositions until we have the answers," he said.

Wilson also said it was too early to say what effect the injury would have on Thompson's contract, which runs through next season.

The question of any legal action during the disco was up to Thompson, Habegger said.

ABC insures Olympic TV

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Broadcasting Co., which paid $225 million for television rights to the 1984 Summer Olympic Games, has insured its coverage for $200 million, a network spokesman said Tuesday. The insurance, purchased from Firemen's Fund of San Francisco, "covers the network against revenue loss at the bottom line," Tom Cooney said. "It also covers to the extent that revenues meet all costs." Osenton said the network was not covered against the pullout of specific countries or against the loss of advertising revenue because of disappearing ratings.

In 1980, NBC's insurance policy with Lloyd's of London enabled the network to recover $68 million of the $87 million it paid for coverage of the Summer Games at Moscow. The network's legal camps after the United States boycotted the Games to protest the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan.

USFL files eligibility appeal

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States Football League said Tuesday it had filed an application for permission to appeal a federal court ruling that the league's eligibility rule barring underclassmen constituted a "group boycott" in violation of antitrust law. Doug Kelly, information manager for the USFL, said the application was filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles. In its press release, the league said it filed the appeal application "on the advice of outside counsel."

In a Feb. 29 ruling, Judge Laughlin Waters said the USFL's refusal to let former University of Arizona punter Bob Boris play last year because his college class had graduated was an unreasonable restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. But he also said: "There is substantial ground for difference of opinion" and urged the USFL to appeal.

Tate won't fight Holmes

NEW YORK (AP) — John Tate injured himself while training, causing his fight against Larry Holmes set for Reno, Nev., April 6 to be called off, Kenneth Bonds, president of JPD, the promoter, announced Tuesday. The bout was to have been for the International Boxing Federation title, held by Holmes, who last December relinquished the World Boxing Council title. Tate, the former World Boxing Association champion, hurt a shoulder while training in Knoxville, Tenn., Bonds said. "In view of the fact that the championship bout is to be held in early June between Holmes and Coetzee, the decision with respect to date of a rescheduled fight will be delayed until completion of the Holmes-Coetzee fight," Bonds said.

Berbick takes London bout

WEMBLY, England (AP) — Canada's Trevor Berbick, the Commonwealth heavyweight champion, outpointed Mark Lee of Carson City, Nev., in a 10-round fight at London's Wembley Arena Tuesday night.

Berbick, who holds the distinction of beating Muhammad Ali in the former-world-champion's final fight in December 1981, was never in trouble against the 24-year-old Lee. Lee, who has lost once in a 28-bout career, was pinned against the ropes and submitted to the head and body frequency by Berbick, who had a 12-pound weight advantage.

In the eighth round, Berbick, of Halifax, Nova Scotia, launched his most-furious assault of the fight. As Lee soaked up a stream of punishing blows, Berbick turned to referee Harry Gibbs in a bid to have the contest halted. The victory left the 31-year-old Berbick, ranked sixth by the World Boxing Council, with a 25-14 record.

Foreign star picks Kentucky

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Gunther Behnke, the highly recruited center from West Germany, has decided to play college basketball for Kentucky, his father revealed Tuesday. George Behnke told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from his home in Puhlheim, West Germany, that his son had chosen the University of Kentucky over more than 30 other U.S. schools that had made offers. "He made this decision last evening," the elder Behnke said. "He is quite glad. He seems lighter since he made up his mind — the pressure of all those offers was bothering him."

Kentucky officials could not confirm Behnke's decision, noting that NCAA rules prohibit them from making any release until the April 10 national signing date. But with 6-foot-11 center Melvin Turpin and 7-1 center-forward Sam Bowie playing their final season this year, Coach Joe B. Hall has been looking for a center to replace his "win" players. "If that's true and if that holds up, we would be very pleased," Hall said after hearing that Behnke's father had broken news of the commitment.

Frustrated Lamar may jump league

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Lamar University may drop out of the Southland Conference in order to get some respect, Pat Foster, athletic director and head basketball coach.

Foster says in light of the snub his Cardinals basketball team received from the NCAA college basketball tournament, Lamar may try to join a new conference, form a new conference or just become an independent. The Cardinals were 23-4 and won the regular season Southland Conference championship. But the automatic NCAA berth for the conference went to the conference's tournament champion.

Lamar University made up Lamar 68-65 in the championship game and got over the NCAA berth. Lamar was passed over by the NCAA tournament selection committee and eventually accepted an invitation to play in the National Invitational Tournament. "The problem that is evident to everyone is we have an image problem. That's an understatement, really," Foster said. "I think the problem is more acute with the conference than with Lamar."

"We are going to actively pursue another course of action," Foster told the Beaumont Enterprise Monday. "We've got to do some serious thinking and study the other sports. There's more to this than just basketball." Louisiana Tech upset Lamar 68-65 in the championship game and got over the NCAA berth. Lamar was passed over by the NCAA tournament selection committee and eventually accepted an invitation to play in the National Invitational Tournament. "The problem that is evident to everyone is we have an image problem. That's an understatement, really," Foster said. "I think the problem is more acute with the conference than with Lamar."

Basketball

Foster said he met with Lamar President Robert Kemble and other university officials Monday to discuss options open to Lamar, including dropping out of the SLC.

The university could become an independent, could join another existing conference or attempt to join with others in forming a new conference, Foster said.

The basketball coach also said he discussed the situation with coaches of other sports to determine what such a move would involve in their sports. All, he said, agreed that there is a problem and something must be done. Foster said he would seek input from other coaches, university officials and even Lamar fans.

Louisiana Tech finished third in regular conference play while Lamar went 11-1 in conference play en route to the title.

Lamar faces New Mexico at Albuquerque in a first-round NIT game Wednesday night. The postseason conference tournament concept has been opposed by Foster since its inception, but he indicated Monday that the tournament is not the only problem.

Vance Law drilled a three-run homer and Tim Luetz added a two-run shot to power the Chicago White Sox to a 10-1 romp over the Braves. Lou's three-run homer was a big hit in Chicago's five-run first inning. Carlton Fisk also homered for the White Sox and Glenn Hubbard provided Atlanta's only run with a solo shot. Greg Brock belted Los Angeles' first pre-season homer and drove in the tie-breaking run with a two-out single in the ninth inning, leading the Dodgers to a 9-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox. Jim Riter slammed two homers and a double for the Red Sox, whose relief ace, Bob Stanley, gave up five runs on five hits, a walk and two hit batters in the wild ninth. For Montreal pitchers — Chris Welsh, Greg Barger, Gary Lucas and Dick Gauthier — combined on a 4-0 Expos shutout of the Houston Astros. Mike Stenhouse, who has 11 hits in 23 at-bats in pre-season play, drove in a pair of runs with a double and single. Tom Lawless had three hits and three RBI to pace the Cincinnati Reds past the Philadelphia Phillies 10-4. Bo Diaz had a two-run homer for Philadelphia.

Ex-BC cager accused of taking fix money

By LARRY ELKIN The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Former Boston College basketball star Ernie Cobb received $2,000 in return for helping to fix three games in the 1978-79 season, a federal prosecutor charged Tuesday.

Cobb's lawyer acknowledged that the 27-year-old Stamford, Conn., native accepted money from gamblers but denied that he was in on the plot to alter summer games and shave points, or was involved in the odds-makers expected, in others. The statements came in opening arguments as Cobb went on trial in Brooklyn federal court along with Peter Vario, a 47-year-old Brooklyn man whose father, Paul Vario, is a reputed captain in the Lucchese organized-crime family. A third defendant, Richard Perry, described as a New York bookmaker, fled before he was indicted.

Cobb, a 5-foot-11-inch who became the Eagles' third-highest career scorer, and Vario each face up to five years in prison if convicted of conspiring to commit sports bribery. Vario also is charged with interstate travel to further the conspiracy, another five-year count. The case outlined by Jerry Bernstein, an attorney with the Justice Department's Crime Strike Force, marks the first time the government has released details of Cobb's alleged role in the conspiracy for which one of his former teammates, Rick Kuhn, already is serving a 10-year prison sentence. Four gamblers were convicted with Kuhn in 1981. Kuhn, who is seeking to have his sentence shortened, will testify for the prosecution against Cobb, while Cobb will take the stand in his own defense, lawyers in the case said.

Bernstein said the plot originated in the summer of 1978 with two Pittsborough drug dealers, Anthony Perla and Paul Mazzei. Perla's younger brother, Rocco, was the former roommate of Kuhn's who remained on friendly terms with him while Kuhn was a reserve guard for the Eagles.

Mazzei, after concluding that games could be fixed, contacted an old prison acquaintance, Henry Hill, to help arrange for New York bookmakers to place bets. Hill, a longtime friend of the Vario family, allegedly brought Vario, Perry and others into the plot.

Initially only Kuhn, a reserve forward, and Jim Sweeney, a guard who was Cobb's backcourt partner, agreed to fix games in return for bribes, Bernstein said. An attempt to shave points in the Dec. 6, 1978, game against Providence, foreshadowed when Cobb scored more than 20 points and led BC to an 83-64 victory. Cobb was the team co-captain and averaged 21.3 points per game that season. Good players from Utah tryouts with the New Jersey Nets and the Utah Jazz of the National Basketball Association.

Rocco Perla and Kuhn approached Cobb, who agreed to help shave points in the Dec. 16 game against Harvard, Bernstein said. BC, a 12-point favorite, won by three points and Perla gave $1,000 to Cobb's girlfriend, Laverne Masely, who gave it to Cobb. Bernstein said Kuhn later gave Cobb $200 in payments of $50 each. Cobb, he said, agreed to help throw the Jan. 10, 1979, game against Rhode Island, which BC lost 91-74, and to shave points in the team's 71-64 victory over Fordham on Feb. 3.

Cobb's lawyer, David Golub, acknowledged that Cobb took the $1,000 but said it was in return for "information" — specifically, a prediction that the Eagles would win the Harvard game.

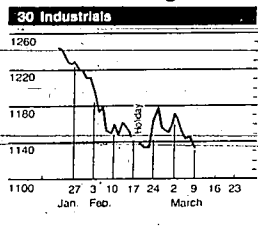

"He never shaved points," Golub told the jury. "You will judge whether someone who is trying to make the pros as a high-scoring guard shaves points for peanuts."

Joel Winograd, Vario's lawyer, attacked the credibility of Hill, a career criminal who became a government informant in 1980 and sold his story of the Boston College conspiracy to Sports Illustrated in 1981 for $10,000. Government investigators have said they learned of the conspiracy from Hill, who also is expected to be a witness. Winograd referred to Hill as "the captain of the conspiracy, the paragon of virtue, the dope dealer." No documents exist, he said, to link Vario to the meetings at a Queens, N.Y., bar and at August's race track in November 1978 when the go-ahead for the conspiracy was given, he contended. The trial is expected to take at least three weeks.

Retail sales fall slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales edged down a slight 0.7 percent in February but remained well ahead of the sales pace a year earlier, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

Both government and private analysts said the February decline was not unexpected given a 3.3 percent sales increase in January, the largest monthly jump since May 1975.
