U.S. citizens 'dig in' Marine style

By EILEEN ALT POWELL The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Disturbed by the kidnappings of three Americans and the slaying of another, some members of the American community in Beirut say they are being more careful. Diplomats have moved into the U.S. Embassy and Lebanese guards are keeping an eye on professors and journalists.

at the American University of Beirut, as he stopped for a beer at Uncle Sam's Restaurant near the campus. His colleague, Joseph Zaiden, agreed: "After you've been here for a while, you get street wise. You know people and you know how to act. It just isn't a problem."

the start of the civil war in 1975.

After American University President Malcolm Kerr was murdered near his campus office Jan. 18, several businesses and banks withdrew their remaining American staff.

A major exodus of Westerners began Feb. 6, when Shiite Muslim and Druse militias wrested control of west Beirut from the Lebanese army.

Those Americans who remained felt relatively secure until the unexplained disappearance of the three U.S. citizens, without claim of responsibility, demand for ransom or a clue to their motive.

American University engineering professor Frank Regier was taken at gunpoint from a street near his west Beirut apartment Feb. 10.

Jeremy Levin, the Beirut bureau chief for Cable News Network, has been missing since he failed to report to work March 7. William Buckley, a U.S. Embassy political officer, was abducted Friday as he was driving to work.

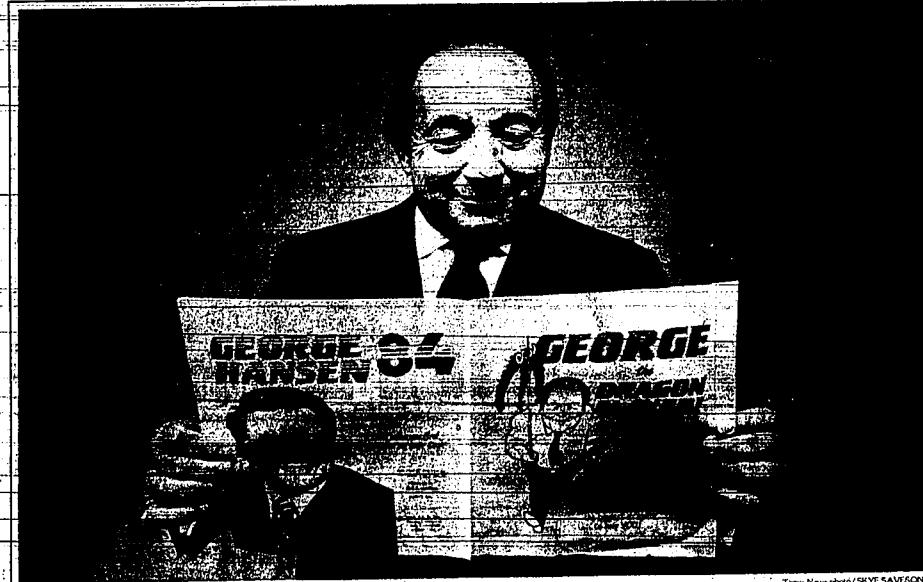

Robert Fugh, the embassy's first deputy, blamed what he called a "precariously balanced anarchy in west Beirut."

While the Shiite and Druse militias try to exercise control in the area, "there simply is no real, overall authority here," he said. After Buckley's kidnapping, the embassy staff was asked to move from their apartments to the embassy compound, which is guarded.

"I'm afraid we're going to end up like the Marines — dug in and not of much use to anyone," said an embassy employee, referring to the 1,600-member Marine contingent of the multinational force which was withdrawn from its bunkered Beirut airport base to U.S. ships offshore last month.

"People are concerned, of course," added the embassy worker, who asked not to be identified. "But I'm not convinced that Americans have become a target. We will just have to see."

One of the Embassy's Marine guards, who also asked that his name not be used, said his unit had been given a refresher course in how to deal with kidnapping. "Asked what he was taught, he said, 'bottom line — cooperate with the kidnappers.'"

Ouster of campaigner triggers free-speech cry

By DAVE LEWIS Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A campaign worker for congressional candidate Dan Adamson of Jerome says the sponsor of the "Twin Falls Home and Energy Fair" violated his freedom of speech by preventing him from passing out campaign literature at the fair on Saturday.

Mark Stubbs, a Twin Falls attorney working for Adamson, who is running against Rep. George Hansen in the primary, says KEEF radio station owner Dave Capps also threatened to get a temporary restraining order to stop his campaigning and threatened a "negative" news campaign against his candidate.

Stubbs says Capps' threats violated his freedom of speech to campaign for a political candidate in a public place.

However, Capps denies he threatened a negative news campaign against Adamson. He says he threatened to run only one story on Saturday's incident if the campaign workers did not leave the fair.

The radio station owner says he threatened the restraining order because Stubbs and the other workers were harassing people as they came into the Twin Falls High School gym, where the event was held.

Capps, who leased the gym for the fair, says that participating candidates should pay for space at the fair, just as participating merchants did.

"Everybody who is here and soliciting is paying to do that," he said Sunday.

It was the first time he had dealt with political activity in the eight years of the fair, Capps said. And he said he did not think such activity was appropriate given the fair's theme.

However, Stubbs says the courts allow such activity in "quasi-public places." For example, he says, the courts allow political campaign workers, religious activists and others to pass out literature in such places as privately owned shopping malls because they are used by the general public.

Since the public was not paying to enter the fair, Stubbs says he had the right to conduct political activity there, just as he would in a shopping mall.

Despite redistricting Legislators will run again

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY Times-News Capitol Bureau

BOISE — Uncertainty over reapportionment has Idaho Valley legislators moving slowly and cautiously in circulating nominating petitions, although the filing period for those petitions begins today.

At least one area legislator has indicated that he or she will seek re-election, or at least is leaning that way.

Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, announced in September that he would not seek re-election. Last week, he said he is sticking with that decision.

Other than Barker, however, area legislators are almost unanimous in their confusion over what area they will seek to represent.

According to the secretary of state's office, petitions for candidacy must be filed under the "14-B" redistricting plan, that was ordered by a north Idaho district judge last summer.

A lawsuit — filed by Speaker of the House Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, and Senate President Pro-Tem James Risch, R-Boise — is attempting to overturn that plan. The legislative leaders contend that large discrepancies in district populations under the plan is a violation of the one-man, one-vote requirement of the U.S. Constitution.

Mondale wins big; Jackson troops on

By CAROLINE PELOMAN The Associated Press

With fresh victories in Michigan and Arkansas and her belt, Walter Mondale outpolled Gary Hart by a 99-1 margin in Puerto Rico's primary Sunday to give him added momentum before the crucial contest in Illinois.

At the same time, the Rev. Jesse Jackson insisted Sunday that his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination was getting stronger and "we're moving up every day."

"This is not a 30-yard dash. It is a marathon event," Jackson said. "I am in the race to stay."

Jackson spoke to the American Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee in Washington before heading to Chicago to debate Mondale and Hart. The three remaining candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination — at one time, there were eight — were focusing on Illinois in preparation for its Tuesday primary, when 171 delegates will be at stake. The state is the largest prize thus far in the still young presidential election year.

In Chicago, the three survivors met for a debate in which they jockeyed at each other on civil rights, with Mondale claiming a "dramatic difference" between himself and Hart on that issue. Hart retorted that he is unwilling to let "Mondale or anyone else in this country gauge my intensity of commitment to civil rights."

Mondale also took on Hart's claim to be the candidate of "new ideas," saying, "I suggest that in the race for Forty-eight of Puerto Rico's 54 del."

Trapped by war, civilians disappear

By CHARLES J. HANLEY The Associated Press

AYACUCHO, Peru — Tears streak Sophia's broad Indian face. Her hands pulse nervously in her lap. She crosses and re-crosses dust-caked feet as she tells her story.

The day before, she says, a neighbor rubbed over with news that Sophia's 17-year-old son had been spotted on the street by "stichis," anti-insurgent national policemen. For the rest of the day, Sophia walked from one police post to another, told each time that her boy, Raul, was not there.

Now she is reaching out to her listener, a stranger. "Papal, Papal! Help me find my son!" she implores. In the two-mile-high valleys of Peru's towering Andes, desperately poor people are trapped in a struggle between extreme leftist guerrillas and the security forces of President Fernando Belaunde Terry's centrist government.

More than 2,000 people have been reported killed in two years of violence. But hundreds more are listed as "desaparecidos" — disappeared. Perhaps thousands of other disappearances, in backward Indian hamlets deep in the rocky uplands, have not been reported, local authorities say.

The guerrillas — of the "Sendero Luminoso" — Shining Path — have waged an often brutal war against civilians who "collaborate" with the government.

But local community leaders say the people here now dread the military and national police forces even more, as these young soldiers and security men hunt round-the-clock for suspected guerrillas and sympathizers among the Andean Indians, the insurgency's base of support.

"They can kill you like a dog in the street, and nobody will do anything," Leonard Zamora complained to a visitor in Ayacucho, a dusty colonial town — population 65,000 — about 200 miles southeast of Lima at the heart of the embattled area.

Mrs. Zamora said anonymous telephone tips and doctored suspicions are enough for the army and police to seize Ayacuchoans. Bodies, often unidentified, regularly are found in the surrounding countryside, usually shot in the head.

But army Brig. Gen. Adrian Huaman, who commands the 20,000-square-mile military zone in southeast Peru, said in an interview last year, international human rights organizations became alarmed.

"Peru is now the most worrisome situation in South America," Juan Mendez, Washington-based Latin American specialist for the Americas Watch Group, said in a recent telephone interview.

The human rights group Amnesty International has appealed to President Belaunde to put a halt to what it says are "disappearances" or extrajudicial executions ... carried out by combined military and police forces ... with impunity."

Amnesty-International's report detailed scores of disappearances and other cases — including alleged cold-blooded killings by security forces in villages believed sympathetic with the guerrillas.

It was rejected as "false and slanderous" by the government. Interior Minister Luis Perovich accused the human rights group of "saying nothing" about reported guerrilla atrocities.

The Amnesty international document did detail killings by the guerrillas, including the slaying of at least 67 villagers in the Lucanamarca area last April.

The Maoist insurgents, one of whose captured members has been quoted as saying 40 percent of the population must be exterminated before a "new Peru" can be built, have periodically raided Indian communities, put alleged government collaborators on "trial" and killed them.

Peruvian soldiers patrol a small town bordering the Andes.

Agency begins Meese probe

Briefly

Sky West drops some flights
IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Too much competition for passengers flying from Idaho Falls to Boise has forced Sky West airlines to drop its service between the two cities.
 Ron Reber, Sky West's director of marketing, says the airline's three daily flights between Idaho Falls and Boise will end Friday. The company, based in St. George, Utah, has since Dec. 1, 1983, operated only one flight a week, which offers service from Twin Falls to Salt Lake City, will continue its service from Idaho Falls to Salt Lake City.
 Horizon and Cascade airlines still offer daily flights from Idaho Falls to Boise.

Three jailed for beating death
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Three men were jailed for investigation of a brutal homicide early Sunday following the apparent beating death of another man during a party, police said.
 Lt. Keith Tolman of the Salt Lake City Police Department said the badly beaten body of a 41-year-old man was found about 1:30 a.m. Sunday in the back bedroom of a central city apartment.
 Tolman said the man apparently had fatally injured during a beating he suffered during a party 10 to 12 hours earlier. The victim's identity was withheld pending notification of relatives in New Mexico.
 Officers had been called to the scene by a woman at the apartment.
 Tolman said about 10 to 15 people had been at the apartment, all at 518 S. West Temple, when the beating took place. He said drinking there apparently continued after the victim had been carried into a bedroom and covered with a blanket. Tolman said a black stocking had been pulled over the victim's head.
 Tolman said the victim had been hit and kicked over his entire body.

Gang rape cited at fraternity
WINDHAM, N.Y. (AP) — City police are investigating the reported gang rape of a 24-year-old Potsdam State College student by members of a Clarkson University fraternity.
 Police Chief Clinton R. Matott said Sunday that no charges have been filed and no arrests have been made.
 "There isn't any doubt that something happened," the chief said.
 He refused to name the fraternity house.
 Matott said the victim reported the rape and sodomy to police last Sunday, saying the attack occurred early that morning at a fraternity house on the Clarkson campus.

Man tried to warn of shooting
BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — An unidentified man called authorities and tried to warn them that someone might try to harm a kidnapping suspect, minutes before the suspect was shot by the father of an alleged kidnap victim, according to a sheriff's deputy.
 And, sheriff's Sgt. Ricky Murphy said, the same caller was apparently on the phone moments later with Gary Plauche, 39, when Plauche turned and fired the shot that killed Jeffrey Doucet, 25, the alleged abductor of Plauche's son, in front of television cameras.
 After Doucet died about noon Saturday, sheriff's deputies charged Plauche with booking from an attempted second-degree murder to second-degree murder.
 Plauche will try to post a property bond Monday so he can be released, according to his attorney, Foster Sanders III.
 Officials and witnesses said Plauche, after he shot Doucet, said: "If I were your son, you would have done the same thing."

Truck plunges from bridge
KIPTOPEKE, Va. (AP) — A tractor-trailer plunged off the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel into the water 60 feet below Sunday, and the Coast Guard began a search for survivors, according to police.
 Police were unsure how many people were in the truck, which drove off the bridge shortly after 12:30 p.m., said an officer with the bridge-tunnel police who asked not to be identified.
 At 6 p.m., three boats and a helicopter were searching the Chesapeake Bay for survivors from the truck, which left the bridge about 7 1/2 miles from its north end, said Coast Guard Lt. Les Sterling.

New York archbishop sworn in NEW YORK (AP) — John J. O'Connor, a career Navy chaplain, was sworn in Sunday as eighth Roman Catholic archbishop of New York City.
 O'Connor, 64, asked an audience of 3,000 priests, nuns, brothers and seminarians at St. Patrick's Cathedral. "I wish I were far, farther, far wiser. But here I am for what I am."
 Archbishop Pio Laghi, the pope's representative in the United States, read John Paul II's letter appointing O'Connor, formerly bishop of Scranton, Pa. He succeeds the late Cardinal Terence Cooke as head of the archdiocese of 1.8 million Catholics.
 A more elaborate ceremony was planned for Monday, when O'Connor would be installed as archbishop, a post he has formally held since the Vatican announced his selection in January.
 "Can you believe this is happening? I can't yet," said O'Connor in his first homily as archbishop.

Confirmation for Meese
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Justice opened a preliminary investigation Sunday to determine whether a special prosecutor is needed to investigate attorney general designate Edwin Meese's financial transactions.
 The Justice Dept. disclosed the investigation, immediately sought and received Senate permission to postpone hearings on his nomination.
 The decision, which followed extraordinary meetings on Saturday and Sunday by agency officials to discuss the Meese affair, could postpone the Senate vote on Meese's confirmation for some time.
 Meese himself disclosed the investigation by having an aide call news service reporters at home Sunday night and read the text of a letter which Meese had read Sunday evening to Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.
 Thurmond, through an aide, said he would grant Meese's request to postpone the confirmation hearings. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said "The president is sorry about Mr. Meese."
 Meese told Thurmond that the Justice Department would be investigating "certain matters pertaining to the filing of information concerning the $15,000 loan received by my wife in connection with stock purchased for our children's education."
 The White House counselor was referring to an interest-free $15,000 loan he received in December, 1980 from Edwin J. Corman, who later became an aide to Meese in the White House and is now regional director of the General Services Administration in San Francisco.
 Corman's wife, Gretchen, also works for the federal government in San Francisco.

Only Sen. Wes Tronson, R-Wendell, has expressed an interest in even considering seeking the floater seat.
 Tronson and Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, are the only two Magic Valley legislators who would be put into a common district under 14-B. If one of them runs for the floater seat, the potential showdown would be "I would consider it," Tronson says. "I'm planning on running, but I'll look the whole situation over before deciding."
 With only a three-week filing period, however, Tronson and the others do not have a lot of time for observation.
 Here are the prospective incumbent candidates for the 1985 Legislature, under the court-ordered plan: District 22 — Blaine, Camas, Gooding and Lincoln counties. One Senate seat. John Peavey, D-Carey; Wes Tronson, R-Wendell. Two Representative seats — John Brooks, R-Gooding; Mack Nelbaur, R-Fall. District 23 — Twin Falls County. Two Senate seats: Laird Nob, R-Kimberly.  Referring to Saturday's results, Mondale said, "This was a very good day for my campaign because I think there's evidence the issues I'm talking about are starting to bring support to me."

 Only the candidate's name and the county of the petitioners — planning to fill in the appropriate district number when it is certain.
 In the event that the 14-B plan is not approved, the Magic Valley County delegation to the Legislature also is seeking court action to divide District 23 into two legislative districts of one senator and two representatives each. Under 14-B, two senators and four representatives would be elected from the county.
 One challenger, Fairfield Democrat Eugene W. Sullivan, plans to file his nominating petition for the seat. Sullivan's name is on the ballot for the seat 22-A in the House, under the 14B plan. That would mean he probably would oppose either John Brooks, R-Gooding, or Mack Nelbaur, R-Fall, for that seat.
 The 14-B plan includes seven large "floater" districts, one of which includes all eight Magic Valley counties.

 He also charges that Capps, the owner and manager of radio stations KZLW and KZZL, threatened to use his position in the media to deny his freedom of speech.
 "It's totally ironic to me that a member of the media in Twin Falls is threatening to censor my free expression of speech in a public place," Stubbs says he and other campaign workers — Admanson's mother, Louise, and Uarda Paskett — were in the gym's foyer hanging out literature and asking people to sign Adamson's nominating petition.
 Stubbs said Saturday the three stayed in the foyer and did not enter the gym. Most people were receptive to their advances, he said.
 However, both operators interviewed by The Times-News on Sunday said the campaign workers did enter the gym.
 On one occasion, Gary Bowyer of Snake River Pool and Spa, said he asked the campaigners to leave when they entered his booth area and started talking to the customers. He said he talked to Capps about the incident.
 At about 2:30 p.m., Capps said he asked the three to go outside because they were aggressive and harassing people. He said the workers entered the gym seeking signatures and he had received complaints from both operators and the public.
 When the workers refused to leave the foyer, Capps called his lawyer, Robert Palne of Twin Falls, and Twin Falls police.
 The police came but left to get advice from their superiors. Police Chief Tim Qualls and Capps called Prosecutor Harry DeHann for advice. DeHann said later that he had planned to go to the fair to try and settle the disagreement.
 In the meantime, Stubbs says, the workers went outside to continue their campaigning.
 Then, Capps and Palne came out of the gym with a prepared story on the state cover the radio, and Palne said that district judge Daniel Meehl was prepared to issue a restraining order against the workers if they didn't leave, according to both sides.
 However, Meehl said that no one contacted him about the incident, and Palne refused to talk about it.
 Stubbs and the two women left before the police returned and before DeHann could reach the gym.
 DeHann said later that he understood the problem was resolved to the satisfaction of both parties.
 However, he said the law covering such situations has a number of "grey areas" to it.
 Campaign workers' rights in a particular situation depend on a number of points, including whether they were only in the foyer or had entered the gym, and whether or not the fair was free, he said.
 "You can see why I wanted to come down and arbitrate the situation," DeHann said. "It's not a clear-cut case."

Other views Key premise violated

Suppose President Reagan had read in the Washington Post this morning that the Marine Corps commandant, still chafing under having to send his troops into Lebanon against all sound military judgment, had secretly sought a meeting with Walter Mondale. Suppose, further, the general's avowed purpose was to "blow Ronald Reagan out of the water."

Probably the general would be sacked by the end of the day, and might even face a court martial as well. And you'd hear no squawk — at least not from this corner.

Yet evidently, just such a scenario may have occurred four years ago. The hearings on confirmation of Edwin Meese as attorney general produced a memorandum from a key Reagan campaign aide in 1980, reporting that Gen. Richard H. Ellis, then head of the Strategic Air Command, "has requested a sit-down with the governor (Reagan) to discuss the deterioration of the Strategic Air Command. Due to his rank and position he cannot formally institute the meeting, but if a meeting were requested by RR, he would be happy to sit down with him. . . . The general has said he 'wants to blow Jimmy Carter out of the water.'"

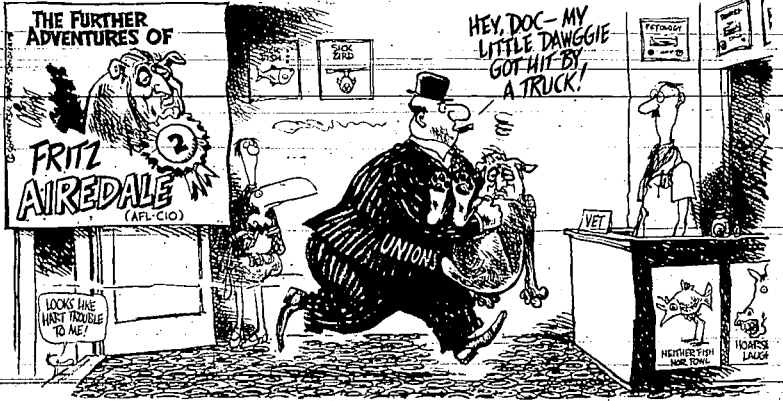

The author of the memo was Max Hugel, whose subsequent forced departure from the CIA may tarnish his credibility somewhat. But it is noteworthy that Ellis, now retired, declined to deny the substance of the report. Moreover, Ellis now holds a presidential appointment to a standing committee on nuclear-arms compliance.

Now, it's hardly news that military people hold political views, nor is it surprising that they would gravitate toward those candidates who promise the military the moon. But when they begin to act upon those impulses to the extent that they become involved in efforts to oust their commander-in-chief, you are no longer talking about mere "insubordination." The closer definition is "coup."

If Gen. Ellis felt so strongly about his commander-in-chief, he had an honorable recourse: resignation. But if he did as the Hugel memo suggests he did, he violated a fundamental premise that in America, the military shall not become involved in partisan politics. This episode deserves more than a "no comment."

Democrats go their usual rowdy way

Events in the wonderful world of politics these recent weeks have provoked a certain amount of snickering and giggling within the confines of the Republican camp. Those folks are being treated to the quadrantal spectacle of Democrats flailing away at one another like Godzilla and King Kong. . . . Laugh if you must, but be advised, my GOP friends, that your boy Reagan is going to face a toughest candidate in November as a result of the altercations you witness now.

I, as one who is not inclined to sign up with the Reagan forces, must admit that the entry goings of the battle gave me a certain cause for alarm. Conventional wisdom has it that the Democratic nominee would be best served by toping to the convention. The sages say that presents the sitting president with the proposition of facing a rested candidate unmailed by the inevitable name-calling and mud-slinging of the primary race.

Well excuse me, sages, but I see a couple of problems with that hypothesis. The first is that it deprives us poor groundlings of the great entertainment that we have come to expect in even numbered years. Partisan politics is the second most popular spectator sport in our land, and if you happen not to like football, it's the only game in town.

In depriving us of a ringside seat for this show would be just plain cruel. But more importantly, this suggests that is now grabbing our attention serves to make better candidates. Gary Hart and Walter Mondale are sparring partners. One of them is going to run against Reagan with benefit of some pretty severe on-the-job training in the field of running for political office.

That is especially true of Hart, who is in no way ready to do battle with the great communicator. That is not to say that he won't be should he win the nomination. But he desperately needs the punishment he is taking right now to whip him into shape for the main event.

Mondale probably could mount a credible campaign against Reagan without the testing he is getting. That's because he was planning a conventional effort with all the accoutrements of the Democratic machine. Mondale learned his politics at the knee of the great war heeler — Hubert Humphrey. From all appearances, he was getting ready to use his lessons to give one more turn on the crank of the crazy old machine.

But then along came New Hampshire, Gary Hart and something new. If Mondale beats back the Hart challenge it will only be because he responds by doing something new himself. That will make him a better candidate.

And then there is Hart's case. I like Gary Hart. I think he is an attractive candidate, which is why I cringed as he made a few of the blunders that have been the focus of coverage of him the past few weeks. Hart's problem was he was not yet ready to run on the fast track.

The national press corps is a pack of hounds tamed to the scent of anyone who smells like a frontrunner. As soon as Hart took on that aroma, the pack set up a chorus of yammering and yowling such as you have never heard. Hart wasn't ready for that. He's not yet used to the intense heat generated by his new-found status as a serious candidate for the presidency.

And because he was not used to the heat, he has suffered a few minor burns. That's all right. He will heal. And he will learn the tricks of playing with fire without getting burned.

Those tricks will serve him well, should he emerge as the Democratic nominee. All this fighting and yelling that is giving so much comfort to devotees of the Grand Old Party is not what it seems. It is simply the way Democrats go about the business of selecting a nominee.

Kids, computers unsettle president

WASHINGTON — President Reagan sat at the kindergarten desk and found himself staring at a computer screen.

It was an unsettling experience for the 73-year-old president, who is in the midst of a re-election campaign that could bring him face to face with a 47-year-old Democrat who calls himself the candidate of "new ideas."

Several hours after sitting down with the youngsters at an elementary school on the outskirts of the nation's capital, Reagan said in a speech back at the White House, "the most humbling experience was in the kindergarten: The kindergarten computer class."

"I don't know the first thing about those things, but those 5-year-olds did. There they all sat in front of their computers. Finally, the one was sitting beside said, 'Go ahead and push the button.' I was scared to death," the president said.

The visit to the Congress Heights elementary school was hardly a leading event on anyone's political calendar. But sitting there at the desks using computers for their earliest school lessons; Reagan was caught in a contrast with Gary Hart, who has raced into a tritip position in the contest for the Democratic Party's presidential nomination.

Hart, the senator from Colorado who is locked in a battle with Walter F. Mondale, is offering his vision of a high-tech future in the campaign, trying to draw a distinction between himself and the former vice president and the current president — so far, against Mondale, has stressed his own optimism for the future — as he did in the 1980 presidential campaign — while looking backwards to the four years in which Mondale served as Jimmy Carter's vice president. What if the general election election campaign hinges on the age of the candidates? "I don't see any need for any generational struggle in here; but there is, maybe we can settle it with an arms struggle," the president suggested in an interview with editors from newspapers primarily in the Southeastern states.

Reagan's travel schedule is relaxed for a presidential candidate. He campaigned in Columbus, Ohio, and in New York one day last week, but there is no more campaign travel planned until next month. Still, elements of a campaign are just below the surface throughout the day at the White House.

But today, he said, "America's economic engine is pulling this nation forward again."

Letters/ Constitution describes rights of all Idahoans

Tax revolts offer answer

Article 1 Section 1 of the Idaho Constitution puts all of us equal with inalienable rights. All political power is inherent in the people according to Article 1 Section 2. Government was instituted for equal protection and benefits of the people who have a right to alter, reform or abolish this government when they deem it necessary, no privilege or immunities shall every be granted that Congress cannot alter, revoke or repeal. Section 3 says Idaho is an inseparable part of the American Union and the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land. Anytime a state enacts regulations that the U.S. Constitution does not sanction, it cannot be a law. We have had these inalienable rights which we exercised for decades but we ignorantly, maybe peacefully, allowed ourselves to be placed under the jurisdiction of fictitious regulations by signing unnecessary contracts for which we pay. These contracts then tell us we have the privilege of exercising that right we already had. Now it is that simple, and it is all because the system we bowed to is wanting money, more money. When a government is for protection of the people, when these regulations are for the protection of the people, there will never be conspiracy, via no laws often. The following information is known by some but more people are not fully aware or the tax revolt would get in high gear. This is over and greater than government waste in America. In 1982 the U.S. taxpayer footed the bill to provide 96 countries with a big $12 billion foreign aid bill. In the United Nations there were 34 countries voted less in favor of American policies than for the Soviet Union. Of these 34, Mexico was one receiving $8.5 million, voting in United States favor 19.9 percent; Panama $18.5, 20 percent. Two countries recrossed blame the United States $2.1 billion. Egypt was sitting in favor of the United States $6.2 percent and should have voted 100 percent. Egypt voted in U.S. favor 26.2 percent for the near $2 billion. Liberia received $23.1 million, voting 20 percent for the United States. Kenya $93.1 million, voting for the United States 22.4 percent; Uganda $7.4, voting 17.9 percent; Communist Angola $23.3, voting 14.2 percent; Communist Zimbabwe $75.1, voting 12.8 percent; Communist Ethiopia

$2.5, voting 12.2 percent pro; Tunisia $114.4, voted 24 percent support. In Asia 21 nations are supported by the U.S. taxpayer. None but Israel supported the United States in the world body more than one out of three times. Philippines $198.3 million, in favor for 30.2 percent; Burma $15.9 million for 28.0 percent; Burkina Faso 3.8 for 28.0 percent; Thailand received $117 million for a 26.6 percent favorable vote. Communist Cuba has gone behind the Iron Curtain; El Salvador received $268.1 in 1982 and still more in 1983. Poland got $35.3 million, voting in our favor 18.9 percent to El Salvador's 32.9 percent. Nicaragua got $1.8 million for 17.5 percent of vote. The Soviet Union voted with the United States 21 percent.

Add this up and then consider the sacrificial conditions the U.S. taxpayer stands under. We have only so many million away that million which was once a seldom used number has become commonplace in the government's language while the taxpayers become silent, willing slaves to those who are in truth the servants, as well as their foreign cohorts. Time to wake and act! Long overdue since voting leaders into office is doing nothing for us. When people refuse to foot the bill this waste will have to stop and then a seemingly only way left to handle it, Tax revolts. How long can, how long will the people endure without rising up in unity? Don't we love our children and their children love, respect and honesty? MR. AND MRS. E.H. RICE Edna

Cenarrusa's job with Reagan-Bush campaign looks easy

PETE CENARRUSA No complacency in efforts

BOISE — Pete Cenarrusa, secretary of state and chairman of the Reagan-Bush campaign in Idaho, appears to have the easiest task in state politics this year. After all, what could be hard about running a campaign for a man who three times has gone before Idaho voters, and each time captured a smashing victory? Eight years ago, Reagan swept through southern Idaho on a campaign swing. He drew an overflow, enthusiastic audience to Idaho Falls Civic Auditorium, did well in Twin Falls and spoke to a huge gathering in Boise. That paid off with a 3-to-1 drubbing of an incumbent Republican president, Gerald Ford, in the 1976 Idaho presidential primary. It was the same in 1980. Reagan didn't campaign in Idaho, but swamped everyone else in the presidential primary. He drew 111,868 votes to 13,130 for John Anderson. In the general election four years ago, Reagan polled 290,699 votes to 110,192 for the incumbent Democrat, President Jimmy Carter.

It's fair to say Idahoans like Ronald Reagan, Cenarrusa, and even Democratic leaders, say it's likely Reagan won't break his winning streak in Idaho this year — but keeping it intact will be more difficult. "I think the four electoral votes from Idaho are pretty well assured for Reagan," said Cenarrusa. Just how well Reagan carries Idaho may depend on the economy. Some segments of agriculture are in trouble this year, Cenarrusa said, and Reagan may be hurt there. But other farmers are having a fine year. "Northern Idaho is an area to be concerned about," he said, because the timber and mining industries continue to be depressed, and some voters may blame the incumbent. "Mining appears to be picking up, with more people going back to work," he said. But complacency won't be part of Reagan's Idaho effort this year. Behind-the-scenes organizing work is being done now, and by the end of the month the Reagan-Bush campaign will open its Boise headquarters. Cenarrusa, one of the most successful vote-getters in state history, is heading the campaign. And his finance chairman is the popular Republican Lt. Gov. David Leroy. Neither has ever tasted defeat in a statewide election. Already Cenarrusa is lining up regional chairmen for the two congressional districts, which will find Reagan-Bush chairmen for each county. The state campaign's budget is only a modest $30,000, since most of the presidential advertising will be on the national level. Cenarrusa says the emphasis this year will be to get people registered and out to vote on election day. Idaho's presidential primary may be May 22. But then again it may not be held there — or at all. The Legislature is considering a bill August, and cancelling the presidential primary for this year. That bill passed the House and is pending in the Senate.

Quane Kenyon

But even if Reagan may have lost some ground in the last four years, Cenarrusa says there appears to be plenty of volunteers for this year's campaign. "I've never heard of before are willing to work for Ronald Reagan," he said. If Idaho has a presidential primary, 80 percent of Idaho's 21 delegates to the GOP national convention will be selected by ballot. The other five will be selected according to party rules, at the state convention June 28-30 at Sun Valley. Names of 21 nominees, plus 21 alternates, must be submitted to the national party by May 12, and it's from those lists that the convention delegates will be picked. Just how the campaign will run and the direction it takes will be determined by who wins the Democratic nomination. But Cenarrusa feels all the leading Democrats will be tough opponents. "They're extremely well-organized and well-financed. We have our work cut out for us this year."

Hansen comic book makes its own charges

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "George the Dragon Slayer" is a comic book depicting Idaho Democrats and a state Supreme Court justice engaged in illegal activities and characterizing U.S. Rep. George Hansen as a dragon-slaying hero is inserted in today's Times-News.

The booklet, a political advertisement paid for by the George Hansen for Congress Committee, is the creation of Dick Hafer, a Washington, D.C.-based conservative political cartoonist.

Hafer may be familiar to Idaho readers for his lampooning of Gov. John Evans in the 1980 gubernatorial election, with a comic book that depleted Evans as a puppet of "union bosses and special interests."

Two daily newspapers in Hansen's congressional district — The Idaho State Journal in Pocatello and the Post-Register in Idaho Falls — refused to carry the comic book, apparently because management considered the material potentially libelous.

Two other dailies, the South Idaho Press in Burley and The Idaho Statesman in Boise, accepted the advertisement and distributed it Sunday.

One of those mentioned in the book is Mel Morgan, the chairman of the Idaho Democratic Party, who, according to the book, "was condemned by the courts for illegally taking George's credit report in 1974."

"One thing I can say that he (Hansen) can't say," Morgan said Saturday. "Is whatever charges I've faced, I've been acquitted by a jury of my peers. I think he's libeling me and I'll have my lawyers ahead the situation."

Of the comic-book format, Morgan said, "Finally, George got where he belongs — except there isn't anything funny about it. I'm sure this will do for his campaign what it did for (former Lt. Gov. Phil) Batt in his race for governor."

Post-Register publisher J. Robb Brady says the references to Morgan and the depiction of Idaho Supreme Court Justice Robert Hanley "in bed" with an Internal Revenue Service official prompted that paper's attorneys to advise that the booklet be refused.

The paper recently ran a correction to a letter-to-the-editor written by a Hansen campaign official that contained some of those same allegations he said.

Brady said he understood the Idaho State Journal declined to distribute the book for the same reason. However, Al Ricken, publisher of the Journal, declined to specify why his paper decided not to carry the book.

Hafer, contacted in Dallas, where he is in the process of creating yet another book, says the material is not libelous. He says he verified the allegations contained in the book with press clippings, documents and taped interviews with Hansen.

Hafer, 46, has produced about 25 such books on political issues, candidates and products and services. His political comics always embrace conservative philosophies, while his advertisements tend to be political, he says.

He says he met Hansen in connection with the congressman's trip to Nebraska to defend the operators of an unlicensed church school.

Hafer says he arrived in Nebraska a week after Hansen, and then phoned Hansen to express his appreciation for support of the church school.

"He (Hansen) said why not do a book on me for my re-election." After conducting inquiries into Hansen's background, Hafer says he agreed.

Richard Stallings, the Ricks College professor who opposed Hansen in 1982 and who is campaigning for the job again this year, says he thinks the book is insulting to constituents.

Youths go to state historical contest

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley will be well represented at the upcoming Idaho History Day.

Twenty-two regional winners were picked Saturday to represent the area in the state contest.

Saturday's regional judging involved elementary, junior-high and high-school students from around the valley. It was the second year for the History Day fairs, which are sponsored by the Idaho Historical Society.

The area winners now will compete at the state fair on April 28 at Boise State University, against the winners in the six other regional contests.

State winners will be eligible to compete in the national fair in June in Washington, D.C., says Kathleen Carney, a fair coordinator.

Competition categories included: essays, individual and group projects, individual and group performances, and a media category.

This year's fairs are using the theme "The Family and Community in History," Carney says. The intent is to provide students with the opportunity to understand their own history and to realize it is ongoing — not just a part of the past, she says.

"I was most impressed with the papers and the essays," Carney said, "particularly with the youth group. They had a tremendous presence with the audience" when read during the competition.

Carney singled out three outstanding essay readings. They were:

- Tami Archibald of Oakley, who presented a project on her great-grandfather, Jacob Lloyd, a pioneer in the Oakley area.
- A demonstration on cooking on a woodstove by Julia DeBoard of Twin Falls, in a performance, "The Colonial Kitchen."
- Amylee Severe in a performance titled "How Music Became Part of the Severe Family."

First- and second-place winners by group and category were:

- Youth: Essays, April Lelford of Malta and John

Marshall of Jerome; Individual projects, John Clark of Oakley and Dawn Walquist of Paul; group projects, Archibald of Oakley and Angie Wilgmat of Twin Falls; individual performances, Melinda Critchfield of Oakley and Allison Lelford of Malta; and group performances: Severe of Oakley and DeBoard of Twin Falls.

Junior high: Essays, William Prentke of Twin Falls and Jennifer Merritt of Wendell; individual projects, David Walls of Oakley and Mitch Moffitt of Twin Falls; and group projects, Eric Rees and Karen Hult, both of Wendell.

Senior high: Essays, Jon James and Rob Larson, both of Jerome; individual projects, Joseph Schaefer and John Wells, both of Oakley; group projects, Alysaann Martin of Oakley; and group media, Howard Surber and Steven Barber, both of Oakley.

Carney says the overall winner in the state competition will receive the Governor's Trophy, which last year was won by a group from Twin Falls.

For Eagle Rock Dam Utility drops power project

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

MALTA — Plans for the controversial Eagle Rock Dam hydroelectric project have been abandoned by the Raft River Rural Electric Cooperative and the Pacific Northwest Generating Co. of Portland.

Last week, officials for those two bodies, which jointly had proposed the 47.8-megawatt project on a popular, free-flowing stretch of the Snake River near American Falls, said a continuing surplus of electricity in the Northwest was to blame.

The final blow was a decision by the federal Bonneville Power Administration not to acquire rights in electricity produced by the project, according to Raft River assistant manager Bud Tracy.

Acquisition of those rights — as a result of "option" under the 1982 Northwest Conservation and Electric Power Plan — would have guaranteed a market for the project's power, he said.

The Eagle Rock project was placed in serious jeopardy last September when the staff of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission recommended the agency's commissioners "take no action" on a permit to build it.

Staff members cited the energy surplus, as well as their belief that "the unavoidable losses that would be incurred by the project outweighed the benefit... derived from development."

The project had been opposed by a coalition of southern Idaho fishermen, sportsmen and environmentalists. They had compiled more than 6,000 signatures on a petition against the project.

The dam would have flooded 4.7 miles of free-flowing river, about eight miles below the American Falls Dam.

PNGC, a group of 13 rural cooperatives in four states, and Raft River now plan to withdraw their application, according to Tracy.

He said that $300 million has been spent on the expected $36 million project, which cannot be recovered.

The dam was planned, Tracy said, during a period when the BPA was telling cooperatives it could not assure them enough electricity to fill all of their needs through the 1980s.

Redressed building opens to the public

HAILEY — The historic Fox Building in Hailey held its grand opening Saturday, after having been reinforced, remodeled and nearly doubled in size.

Although work is not yet complete on the second floor and the exterior, the downstairs, housing the relocated Atkinson's Market, opened for business Saturday morning.

The building owners, Hughes and Janet Brown, hope the upstairs office space will open the latter part of April.

Workers have restored the brick building that was built in 1920 as the town's hospital. Construction also included a brick addition to the south of the building, on what was an empty lot.

The addition and restoration take up nearly a half-block in downtown Hailey between Croy and Bullion streets.

Each floor of the building has about 9,000 square feet. A new 5,000-square-foot basement also was added, says architect Jim McLaughlin, who designed the new portion.

McLaughlin says he designed the additions to be compatible with the 1920s, when most of the existing downtown buildings were constructed, following a fire that destroyed most of the business area.

The building had been condemned and businesses moved out in 1961, after structural weaknesses were found that threatened the safety of the occupants.

Atkinson's Market moved four doors from its old location in the same area to occupy the first-floor space. The upstairs will serve as professional and business offices, Mr. Brown says.

Schools seeking money

Teachers request part of pending override levy

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Blaine County teachers want a raise, and they are asking the school board to include it in the district's anticipated override tax levy.

Last week, the teachers asked the board to delay setting a date for the override election — and its amount — until after they can negotiate a pay increase that can be included in the special levy.

The board responded by setting a special meeting to discuss the matter.

Board members also indicated they wanted to wait until the Legislature establishes an education budget, so they will know how much state support will be available for the 1984-85 school year.

The special meeting will be held at noon next Monday, March 26, in the district's administrative office building. If sought, this year's override levy would be the district's sixth straight.

The teachers association told the board it will seek a substantial pay increase for next year, despite the fact it could increase the amount of the override substantially.

Teacher Dave Newman said that in the previous years, the board has set the amount of the override levy. However, salary increases were considered — and at a level where only small pay increases were possible.

"It doesn't pay us to negotiate any longer," Newman said.

Although the teachers association did not officially authorize the delay request, Bob MacLeod, the chief negotiator for the teachers, said many had asked him to bring it before the board.

However, the organization is united in seeking a pay increase, MacLeod said.

Association President Pat Butterfield said it will take a 16 percent increase to bring the district's salaries even with those in neighboring states.

Asked by board Chairman John Tracy if the teachers were aware that if the override failed, some teachers would lose their jobs, MacLeod said they were.

If the override fails, the district will not seek another, said Superintendent Dick Jones. However, he said that if the district seeks a second, lower override, voters will believe it was possible all along and will lose confidence in what the board and the administration are telling them.

"The result will be a whirlwind of failed override elections that will cut deeper and deeper into the district's programs," he said.

"We're not going to get into that ball game because it ruins the school district faster than anything," Jones said.

In previous years, the board deliberately has set the override at a level that would give the district what it needed to maintain its level of education and still be acceptable to the voters, Jones said.

"Because of the budget pinch in recent years, the teachers have taken small raises the last couple of years. This year, they received a 3.3 percent increase, and the year before it was about 4 percent, Jones said.

Teachers' salaries make up about 54 percent of the district's $4.3 million 1983-84 budget, he said.

BURLEY — The Cassia County schools are in a crisis, says school board member Gene Coltrin.

"In fact, we're in a lot of trouble," he says.

Speaking at a public meeting last week to explain Tuesday's upcoming school bond issue election — for either $5.5 or $8.5 million — Coltrin illustrated his point by displaying charts that showed the population growth in Cassia County over the past six years.

He says there has been a high correlation between the number of births at Cassia Memorial Hospital and the number of first-grade students enrolled in the district six years later.

Projecting from these statistics, Coltrin said that during the next four years, the district will have to accommodate 210 more students than are now enrolled in the first grade.

According to Coltrin's charts, by next year, Burley will need six additional elementary classrooms, while the district's other schools will need 10.

At present, all elementary classrooms in the district, with the exception of one at Almo and one at Albion, are filled beyond capacity.

To accommodate immediate needs and to plan for needs over the next five years, the district is offering the bond issue in two phases, Superintendent Norman Hurst explained.

Hurst said that Phase I, which is for $5.5 million, will cover the needs for additional classrooms for the next five to six years. Starter schools would be built, to which additional rooms could be added in the 10-year period covered by the bond issue, he said.

Phase II, an alternate bond-issue proposal for $8.5 million, would provide for the additional classrooms needed by the district over the next 10 to 12 years, he said.

The basic cost to the taxpayer for Phase I would be based upon a rate of 86 cents per $1,000 of assessed market value of their property, Hurst said.

At this rate, Phase II would cost taxpayers a little more than Phase I, on an assessed value of $60,000, he said.

School board member Ralph

Rasmussen summed up the board's reasons for seeking the bond issue.

"We are trying to do our best for the minimum amount of money. We've got to do something now. We don't have the luxury of thinking on a long-range basis. We need classrooms now," he emphasized.

Rasmussen said that although the tax system is inequitable, it doesn't change the problems being faced by the district.

"Everyone pays taxes, property owners and renters... we're all responsible for our kids."

When asked what would happen if one of the bond issues doesn't pass, Hurst said the alternatives were: overcrowd the classrooms, hold split sessions, hold year-round sessions or redistribute students into the junior-high and high school, as has been done in the Minico district.

Hurst emphasized that voters need not be registered to vote on Tuesday. Persons who have been residents of the county for 30 days and who are at least 18 are eligible to vote, he said.

He also pointed out that it is important that voters mark their ballots "yes" or "no" for both Phase

Lebanese faction chiefs make progress

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Lebanon's Christian and Muslim politicians suspended a full session of their peace conference Sunday in favor of private talks reportedly to end a deadlock over political reforms.

Despite the dispute, a Lebanese government was expected to be announced Monday with approval of a final text announcing a new "government of national unity."

He also said France had agreed in principle to allow its troops to man a buffer zone in Beirut between the warring factions and help maintain the cease-fire.

Sunday's discord apparently centered on a Moslem call for the creation of a Lebanese vice presidential post, sources said.

Christian and Moslem leaders also appeared unwilling to bargain on a key reform demanded by the opposition — secularization of top posts in the government, army and security, the sources said.

The nine conference delegates have met behind closed doors and declined to disclose details of their meetings.

But Druse opposition leader Walid Jumblatt gave an indication Sunday that the talks were troubled.

"This is surrealistic theater," Jumblatt told reporters. "I am fed up ... In my opinion, the conference will end halfway with a compromise. It will be simply a paper that will not be applied."

The conferees met for three hours Sunday morning and began a plenary session Sunday evening but adjourned after 15 minutes to allow bilateral meetings, said Michel Samaha, adviser to President Amin Gemayel.

Gemayel remained in the conference room along with Syrian Vice President Abdul-Halim Khaddam to receive heads of delegations, Samaha said.

Samaha said the next full session would be held Monday, but the time had been set. He said he expected the conference to end Monday with announcement of the formation of a new government and a list of "guiding principles" to help consolidate the cease fire and restructure the country's political system.

Iran says Iraq again dropped chemical bombs

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq and Iran reported fierce battles Sunday along the southern sector of their battlefield, and Iran again accused Iraq of using chemical weapons.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency — IRNA — claimed the Iraqis dropped bombs containing "probable and nerve gases" during the Saturday fighting in the Tuz, Tash and Zeld regions, wounding 400 Iranians.

IRNA report, monitored here, said a United Nations team investigating earlier reports of Iraqi chemical attacks "convinced its delegation that Iraq and Iran were trying to inspect the effects of the latest attack.

Iran launched a major offensive in the marshes north of Basra and in the zone east of the Iraqi city on Feb. 21.

Some of the heaviest fighting has centered on Iraq's Majnoon Islands 90 miles north of Basra.

Iran claims that Iraqi chemical attacks have killed or wounded 2,100 Iranian soldiers, including those on Saturday's attack.

IRNA said at least 200 of the casualties of Saturday's attack were suffering from convulsions and nervous disorders and the others had "burning eyes — skin — lesions — blisters — and particularly loss of vision."

Iraq has denied using chemical or biological weapons, but the United States, the Red Cross and doctors treating Iranian casualties sent to hospitals in Europe say there is strong evidence that Iranian soldiers have been exposed to mustard gas. Laboratory tests in Europe also have revealed the victims were exposed to micotoxins, or "yellow rain."

Iraq issued a communique Sunday saying its helicopter gunships and ground soldiers had attacked Iranian forces east of Basra, killing 119 of the enemy, destroying nine military vehicles, five bulldozers and four ammunition depots.

Iranian gunners shelled Basra, Iraq's second-largest city, and the central border town of Mandali, killing one civilian and "inflicting damage to an apartment building and other civilian installations," the Iraq communique added.

On Saturday, both Iraq and Iran reported heavy fighting near the Majnoon Islands. Iraq said its forces crushed an Iranian attempt to advance in the region, killing 1,000 Iranian soldiers. Iran claimed its troops killed or wounded 5,000 Iraqi soldiers in the fighting.

Neither claim could be independently verified. Foreign reporters are seldom allowed near the battlefield.

Iraq also said Saturday the Iranians were preparing for a massive attack against "specific targets" inside Iraq, and vowed the attackers would be "torn apart."

Inmates force way out of prison

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Prison inmates broke out of a prison near the Hague on Sunday, forcing guards at gunpoint to open the prison gates, a police spokesman said.

Five prisoners were recaptured, police spokesman Marnix Eysink said. The identities of the escapees were not given, but he said they had all been in pre-trial detention at the Prison in Scheveningen, a North Sea coastal resort two miles northwest of the Hague.

Two gunshots were exchanged, and the only person injured was a guard who was pistol-whipped when he came for help, the spokesman said.

Several of the escapees were being held on drug trafficking charges, and others on homicide charges, he said.

According to Eysink-Smits, the escape began about 9 a.m. when one of the prisoners, outside his cell at the time, asked a guard to accompany him to another prisoner's cell.

The man in the cell was behind the door with a pistol and captured the guard, who yelled for help and brought the other guards running.

The prisoners forced the guards at gunpoint to open cell doors, freeing 13 other prisoners, and then locked all but one of the guards in cells.

The escaping prisoners then forced the remaining guard to unlock doors and help them out the main gate.

Two escapees were recaptured in the immediate vicinity of the prison, and one in a taxi downtown. Another was caught after a car chase in the vicinity of Rotterdam.

IRNA said at least 200 of the casualties of Saturday's attack were suffering from convulsions and nervous disorders and the others had "burning eyes — skin — lesions — blisters — and particularly loss of vision."

What's what

English etiquette dictates that a butler be addressed by his last name only. One of the butlers at the U.S. Embassy in London is a man named Kenneth Dear. When uninformed Americans visit the place, it's said, they tend to get funny looks on their faces whenever one of the diplomats speaks to the butler.

The shark swallows the foot-long fish called a spiny urchin. The urchin inflates its body, thus to rip up the shark's interior, then breaks through completely, and swims away. What's left of the shark sinks. That's how it's done - a few fathoms down.

The tendency to get dark circles under your eyes - if that you do - is another inherited trait.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime finds you able to get things done correctly by using your best analysis, for you are apt to have poor judgment and need to double-check any decisions that you make.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study statements given to you by a partner who is trying to pressure you into a new arrangement. Be happy with your mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Find out what a new amusement will cost before you get into it, then forget it and be with an interesting person.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make sure you do not misunderstand a comment of a family tie and start an argument unnecessarily. Have fun.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A letter from afar could bring trouble so use care in answering it. Make phone calls early and get rid of tensions.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You had better be careful in money matters since some wrong figuring could be costly. Don't take any more expenses.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

I have never refused my husband, but he knows how I feel about sex and doesn't bother me very often. I thank God for such a kind and understanding husband.

I offered to give him a divorce, but he said he loves me and doesn't want one. He also said he didn't want to take a chance on another woman — she might deny him sex ALL the time. He's not very demanding, so I try to accommodate him now and then. I really do love him.

DEAR FRIGID: A marriage between a frigid wife and a kind and understanding husband who doesn't "bother" her very often must have been made in heaven. You are indeed of the people some of the time, and some of the people all of the time, but you can't please all of the people all of the time.

Thanks for writing. I learn more from criticism than I do from praise.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago I read a letter in your column from a grunting son. In it was this line: "If I could turn back the clock, I would buy my mom the new coat she needed so badly and take her anyplace she wanted to go."

Please print it again. Someone I know needs to be reminded that he has a mother.

— YOUR FAN IN ARIZONA
DEAR FAN: Here it is: DEAR ABBY: Yesterday was the saddest day of my life. I buried my mother. And now many thoughts come to mind that make me even sadder.

I recall the many times I meant to call her and ask if there was anything she needed, but I seldom got around to it.

I recall the day I ran into Mom in the bakery. Her winter coat looked so shabby and worn, and I thought, "Gee, I've got to take Mom downtown and buy her a new coat." But I never found the time. I was too busy.

On her last birthday I sent her an azalea plant, but I forgot to enclose a card. I had wanted to get over to see her, but there was a football game that day, so I never made it.

The last time I saw Mom was at my cousin's wedding. She looked so old and tired. I told myself, "I must send Mom to Florida to visit her brother and get a little sun," but I just never got around to buying the tickets.

If only I could turn back the clock, I'd buy Mom that coat and spend every birthday with her and take her anyplace she wanted to go. But it's too late now and I am heartless.

Please print this letter. Maybe if I had seen one like it, I would have done things differently.

lucky to have found each other.

DEAR ABBY: I've enjoyed your column for many years. It was so witty, with just the right answers to some very real problems. Will you please return to those days and skip all the lectures and sermons you've been running of late?

Also, please let the Food and Drug Administration buy space in newspapers and medical journals to warn people about combining drugs with certain foods, etc.

We need you as you were.

Fair workers wearing 'Don't panic' buttons

By BILL CRIDER
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — With the gates set to open May 12, the New Orleans World's Fair is in what one executive calls the "shock mode" — smooth and calm on the surface, paddling like crazy underneath.

Big buttons worn by fair employees say: "Don't Panic."

Out there in the mud, in what used to be a war-torn district beside the Mississippi River — in the middle of town, the site of the fair still looks like a war zone.

Bill the shape of this $330 million exposition is beginning to show. For two months, a cash flow pinch gripped the fair. Now Petr Spurney, the fast-talking president of the Louisiana World Exposition Inc., says a fresh infusion of $10 million from the city and the Deck Board means the fair's money worries are over.

The place is as busy as an ant hill kicked by a kid.

With foundation work complete, or deeply so, "shanty" and "cork" concessionaires were moving in as fast as construction traffic would allow.

"An event like this is sort of like a giant stage set," said Jim Brandt, vice president of planning.

"I would guess 5,000 people are working on the project now on a full-time basis.

"All that stuff snaps into place in the last three or four weeks, including the landscaping, the paving, the filling of the watercourses, the lagoons and the lighting," he said.

"On opening day, be careful where you sit because the paint might still be wet. But we will open as advertised, completely ready."

A monorail train system, designed to move 3,500 people an hour, has made test runs loaded with engineers and sand bags instead of tourists.

The theme of the 82-acre fair will be "The World of Rivers; Fresh Water as a Source of Life." It sounds pretty dull but it has been gussied up with such attractions as a 1939-style aquacade in the old Billy Rose style featuring the cleanest beauties in town. They will thrash around "in a water ballet, six shows a day, seven days a week.

In addition to lagoons and bays, there will be weird fountains, a real offshore oil drilling rig, an undersea aquarium filled with former denizens of the Gulf of Mexico, riverboats and a "kid wash" where you send the children through the water spray, clothes and all, and they come out the other end blown dry.

Countries to be represented by exhibits include Australia, Canada, Egypt, El Salvador, France, Israel, Italy, Japan, Liberia, Mexico, China, Korea, the Vatican, Peru, Belgium, Denmark, West Germany, Greece, Ireland, Luxembourg, Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Sans Sampson, Cavs dispose of Arkansas

By DAN BARRERO
Dallas Morning News

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — It must have felt good for Virginia Coach Terry Holland to step in front of the microphones and not have to listen to another reporter ask him for the 3,000th time, "Why couldn't you get the ball into Sampson more, coach?"

Yes, the extra-large shoe was on the other foot this time.

Maybe Holland learned something from watching opponents play in zone defenses — for four years — against Ralph Sampson, his former All-America. For this time, the reporters were asking "him how" his team did such a good job keeping the ball from the other team's big man.

And they were asking Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton why his Razorbacks, 53-51 losers in overtime, couldn't find a way to get the ball inside to 6-11, 250-pound Joe Kleine. Especially against a team that finished fifth in the Atlantic Coast Conference, just nine of its last 15 games and had a 1.1 second-journey record, the worst among the 24 all-league teams.

"We are not a very good perimeter-shooting club," said Sutton. "If I'm playing Arkansas, I would pack it in and try to keep the ball away from Joe Kleine."

Using a formidable 1-2-2 zone defense, Virginia (19-11) won that battle Sunday in a second round East Regional game at the Meadowlands Arena. Kleine had just four points in the first half, when Virginia set the tempo, and 15 in the game, three below his average.

Funny thing is, the eighth-ranked Razorbacks still could have won the war. They didn't because of 11 one questionable call, 11 one terrible pass and 11 one unlucky block. So, it will be Virginia that plays Syracuse Thursday night in the semifinal round of the East Regional in Atlanta, Arkansas (25-7) goes home.

With 1:13 to play in regulation, Arkansas had a 49-48 lead and the ball. Near mid-court, guard Ricky Norton — Virginia's Ricky Stokes, who went down as if Randy White had hit him with a forearm.

Referee Beth Reauch of the Mid-American Conference bought it, calling a player-control foul against Norton. Virginia ball. "That might be the thing that drives me to the NBA — college officiating," said Sutton.

With 15 seconds left, Virginia guard Othell Wilson, who led his team with 13 points, made one of two free throws to tie the score, 49-49, and sent the game into overtime.

With the score tied, 51-51, and 1:30 left in overtime the Razorbacks went into a semi-delay. It didn't last long, though. With 50 seconds left, forward Leroy Sutton tried to hit Robertson with a pass near center court. Honus Wagner couldn't have fed Sutton's groundball aimed at Robertson's feet. "I misjudged where Alvin would be," said Sutton.

Virginia's Stokes picked up the loose ball. From the bench, Holland called for Wilson to penetrate and either put up a last-second shot or pass off. Wilson passed off — sort of. He went up for a 15-footer and Robertson, who had already made eight steals and two blocks in addition to scoring 14 points, knocked the shot away. Fortunately for Virginia, Robertson knocked it right into the hands of Rick Carlisle on the right baseline.

"Luck," said Kleine. "That's all the NCAA (tournament) is. Luck."

Carlisle fed a 12-footer. "Ricky and I both came out at him," said Robertson forward Charles Balentine. "He put a real high arch in the shot. I thought it might come up short."

Instead it went right through the basket to give Virginia a 51-58 lead with four seconds left. After a timeout, Robertson rushed the ball up the court and took an off-balance 25-footer that banked hard off the rim. It was a shocking loss for a team with Final Four aspirations. With just seven minutes to play, Arkansas appeared to be in good shape, when Kleine's short jumper gave the Hogs a 45-40 lead. But the Razorbacks got only one more field goal the remainder of the game, and the Cavaliers, who hit 65 percent from the field in the second half, got hot. "We had our chances to take control," said Kleine. "But we let them hang around and hang around and hang around." And win.

Louisville blows away Hurricane

By The Associated Press

Guard Matt Wagner sank a 12-foot shot from the right baseline with five seconds left in the game to lift Louisville to a 69-67 upset victory over 12th-ranked Tulsa in the quarterfinals of the NCAA Midwest Regional Tournament Sunday.

Louisville, 24-10, advanced to the semifinal round Thursday against Kentucky at Lexington, Ky.

Louisville appeared to have the game under control after Billy Thompson hit two free throws with 3:45 to go for a 65-64 lead.

But the Hurricanes, behind the shooting of guards Ricky Ross and Steve Harris, put on a furious rally down the stretch. Harris hit a baseline jumper and Ross followed with a three-point play to cut the deficit to 65-59 with 3:07 to go.

After Louisville's Lancaster Gordon hit two free throws for a 67-59 advantage at 2:30 left, the Hurricanes scored eight straight points to tie the game 67-67 with 34 seconds.

Louisville got its final possession, following Harris' tying free throw, and worked 29 seconds off the clock before Wagner's winning basket.

Washington 80, Duke 78

In Pullman, Wash., Washington's Dettlef Schrempf scored 30 points and the 18th-ranked Huskies survived several late scares to edge No. 14 Duke in the second round of the NCAA West Regional.

Washington, the Pacific-10 Conference co-champion and one of two western teams still alive in the tournament, plays Dayton Friday night in the West Regional semifinals in Los Angeles.

The Huskies, 24-6 and seeded sixth in the West, trailed 43-33 at halftime after taking an early eight-point advantage.

Duke, runner-up in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, was absented 19 to start the second half.

Washington led the game at 45-45 on Paul Frazier's stuff shot with 18:23 to play.

The hot-shooting Huskies slowly took control over the next few minutes, building a 70-60 margin when Alvin Vaughn hit one of two free throws with 7:24 minutes to go.

The Blue Devils, 24-10 and seeded third in the West, charged back behind the play of Mark Alarie, pulling within one at 73-78 on Alarie's 16-footer with 1:04 remaining.

Schrempf lost control of the ball with 20 seconds to play, but Duke freshman Tommy Amaker missed a 12-footer with eight seconds to go.

Reggie Rogers of Washington missed one of two free throws with six seconds to play, giving Duke a last chance to tie the score.

Schrempf broke up a Blue Devils pass, but he stepped out of bounds with one second to go. A Duke lob pass under the basket at the buzzer failed.

Georgetown 37, SMU 38

In Pullman, Wash., Michael Jackson's free throw with eight seconds to go gave Georgetown a victory over surprising Southern Methodist Sunday in the second round of the NCAA West Regional.

Jackson made the front end of a foul-free throw situation to put the Hoyas, No. 1-seeded team in the West, ahead 37-34.

Jackson missed his second free-throw opportunity and Carl Wright of the upset-minded Mustangs hit a 25-foot jump shot with one second left.

By winning, Georgetown, 30-3, advanced to the West Regional semifinals against 13th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, 29-5, in Los Angeles Friday night.

Two-time All-American center Patrick Ewing's inside defense keyed a second-half Georgetown comeback after Southern Methodist, 25-9, left the court with a 24-16 intermission lead.

The 7-foot junior made a key offensive play with 51 seconds to go in the game when he tipped in a missed Gene Smith free throw to break a 34-34 tie.

The score of Sunday's game was low because of SMU's deliberate style and the fact that Georgetown tried to take the Mustangs, from the Southwest Conference, out of a zone defense in the second half.

Carrying a torch for amateurism

Greeks ask United Nations to halt America's fund-raising Olympic flame relay

ANCIENT OLYMPIA, Greece (AP) — An international conference of athletes and academics held in this western Greek village on the site of the first Olympic Games Sunday called on the United Nations to stop "commercialization" of the Olympic torch relay for this summer's Los Angeles Games.

In a joint communique issued at the end of the two-day meeting, the 350 delegates from 15 countries, including the United States and the Soviet Union, said they "adamantly opposed the sponsorship of the Olympic torch relay through the United States."

The torch is scheduled to pass through the Magic Valley en route from New York to Los Angeles in late June.

Spyros Fotinos, mayor of Ancient Olympia and one of the conference organizers, said, "We are appealing to the United Nations to protect the Olympic flame from commercial exploitation."

He said the meeting received a telegram from U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar's office in New York: "wishing us good luck in achieving our aims."

The conference was called to discuss ways of preventing an American plan to raise $30 million for charitable youth sports programs by allowing sponsors to pay $1,000 for each kilometer covered by Olympic torch bearers running through most of the 50 states.

"The Olympic flame must not become an opportunity to gain profit, charitable or otherwise," said Emil Zatopek, Czechoslovakian triple long-distance gold medalist in the 1952 Helsinki Olympics.

The conference also accused the sponsorship plan of violating article 62 of the International Olympic Committee's founding charter.

According to the final communique, article 62 does not permit "events organized during the journey of the flame to be used as objects of advertising or exploitation."

Elena Petuscova, vice president of the Soviet National Olympic Committee and 1972 Olympic dressage gold-medal winner, said, "Selling the Olympic flame is a dangerous precedent and if it is allowed to happen once then other countries will do the same thing. Why should only U.S. sports benefit?"

Last month Greece's National Olympic Committee threatened to withhold the Olympic flame from the Los Angeles organizers if they did not cancel their sponsorship scheme.

Fotinos said last week that the 700 villagers of Olympia also would refuse to cooperate in the traditional flame-kindling ceremony and American organizers would have to "come and get the flame themselves."

The weekend conference, organized by the "International Center for Peace and Culture," a newly formed group of Greek intellectuals, athletes and leading members of peace movements, also called for the revival of the ancient custom of holding a torch during the Olympic Games.

"We should show some respect for the original intentions of the flame ceremony and call a world truce of warring countries during this summer's Games," said quarterback Guy Benjamin of the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League.

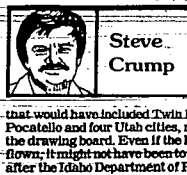

The Olympic flame traditionally is kindled from the sun's rays by a Greek actress, dressed as an ancient priestess, in an elaborate ceremony at a wooded sanctuary near the site of the first Olympic Games of 776 B.C.

Remember the Pioneer League? It remembers Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — Minor league baseball has been gone from Twin Falls for 13 seasons, but it may not be for many more.

The Pioneer League, the 45-year old collection of small cities in Idaho, Utah, Montana and the Canadian province of Alberta, has already expanded southward for next season. And indications are that it will expand further in this direction.

Just a year ago, the city's chances of getting professional baseball back seemed remote. A "one-team" short (Class A) league, proposed by Salt Lake City businessman Dennis Job Recreation said the city could not lease Frontier Field to a professional baseball team — leaving anyone interested in developing minor league baseball here the expensive task of upgrading 50-year old Harmon Park.

But earlier this winter, a consortium of California businessmen that operated a Pioneer League franchise in Lethbridge, Alberta, pulled up stakes and relocated their team to Pocatello, where it will play next summer. Moreover, they moved into a facility (500-seat, city-owned Halliwell Park) that will require nearly as much work — and money — to develop as Harmon Park would for use by a professional team.

The league itself, which has since 1977 been concentrated in Alberta and Montana, now has just two Canadian members — Calgary and Medicine Hat, Alberta. It will operate in seven cities this summer, four of which (Billings and Butte, Mont., Idaho Falls and Pocatello) are closer to Twin Falls than to Calgary.

The Medicine Hat franchise (a farm club of the Toronto Blue Jays) is thriving, but the owners of the Calgary team (a farm club of the Montreal Expos) have for years been seeking to get their city into the Class AAA Pacific Coast League, of which the Alberta provincial capital of Edmonton is a member.

If Calgary drops out, the Pioneer League would have four choices.

The first would be to operate as a six-team league, which would be expensive with member cities as far-flung as Medicine Hat and Pocatello. The second would be to try to put a team back into Lethbridge or Helena, Mont., cities which have not supported the

Zurbriggen clinches World Cup

LARE, Sweden (AP) — Marc Girardelli, an Austrian skier for Lienz, won a men's World Cup slalom here Sunday. But Swiss Pirmin Zurbriggen took the big one, the overall title, despite only finishing 15th.

The 21-year-old Zurbriggen added three points for an unbeatable 251-22 point lead over Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark with three races left in the series in Norway next week.

Stenmark likely will finish runner-up overall for the fifth consecutive season. History's greatest slalom and giant slalom racer with 79 World Cup victories under his belt, Stenmark faced a virtually impossible task to win a fourth overall title going into the race. He had to win not only Sunday's slalom but also the season-ending GS and slalom at Oslo next weekend and hope for Zurbriggen's misfortune in the slalom here.

The American team, now without the retired Maure three-time defending champion Phil and his brother Steve, had a disappointing day. Only Cory Carlson finished the race.

Cooper falls in Czechoslovakia

JASNA, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Austria's Roswitha Stelner held off a late challenge from Perrine Pelen of France Sunday to win the World Cup season's third-from-last slalom and take over the standings lead in the discipline.

With a total time of 1:25.23, the 19-year-old Stelner finished ahead of Pelen, who was eighth the first time down but fastest on the second run of 59 gates with 46.95. Pelen was timed in 1:35.22.

Stelner's victory gave her a narrow lead in slalom standings over Swiss ace Erika Hess, who failed to complete the first run of 57 gates, with a vertical drop of 126 meters (415 feet).

Stelner had 90 points after the race, just one point ahead of Hess. U.S. ace Tamara McKinney of Squaw Valley, Calif., also missed a gate on the first run, but held on to third place in the standings with 87 points.

Christin Cooper of Sun Valley, Idaho, (also to complete the course.

Records fall for Caulkins

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tracy Caulkins set an NCAA and meet record in the 200-yard butterfly and then helped Florida's 400 freestyle relay team set an American and U.S. Open record during the final session of NCAA Women's Swimming and Diving Championships here Sunday.

Earlier in the meet, she retained her 200- and 400-individual midley titles and captured the 100-breaststroke.

Texas, which finished third last year, claimed the team championship with 324 points. Defending champion Stanford finished second, with 322 points, followed by Florida with 313 and Southern California with 292.

Earlier, junior Marybeth Linzmeier of Stanford won the 1,650-yard freestyle for the third consecutive year.

Parsons wins Coke 500

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Benny Parsons ended a two-year victory drought Sunday, outdueling Dale Earnhardt and Cale Yarborough to win the Coca Cola 500 Grand National stock car race.

Parsons, driving a Copenhagen-sponsored Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, wrestled the lead from Earnhardt seven laps from the end of the 25th anniversary race at Atlanta International Speedway.

It was the first victory for the former Detroit cab driver since a race in Richmond, Va., on Sept. 13, 1981. The triumph ended a string of 47 races without a victory for Parsons, who was on the verge of retirement during the 1983 season.

Cancer claims Charlie Lau

MARATHON, Fla. (AP) — Chicago White Sox Coach Charlie Lau, considered one of the best hitting first basemen in the major leagues, died Sunday age 50 at his home after an illness, an official of the American League club said.

Lau took a leave of absence from the team in June and underwent a battery of medical tests. It was determined at that time that he had cancer of the colon, said Roland Hemond, White Sox general manager.

Panthers extend mastery to 10 games

Bobby Hebert fired three touchdown passes, including two to Deek Holloway, as the Michigan Panthers edged the Arizona Wranglers 31-26 in a United States Football League game Sunday.

The victory kept the Panthers undefeated in four games this season and extended their overall winning streak to 10 games over the last two seasons. The Wranglers slipped to 2-2 in making their first road appearance this season.

Hebert connected with Holloway on a 10-yard scoring pass in the first quarter and on a 60-yard scoring pass play in the third quarter. The signal-caller also hit tight end Mike Cobb with a 13-yard TD pass in the third period.

The Panthers led 14-6 at the half but Arizona closed the gap to 14-13 early in the second quarter when Larry Lott's quarterback Greg Landry hit receiver Lenny Willis on a 9-yard touchdown pass.

Michigan came right back, going 87 yards in five plays, with Hebert hitting Cobb for the score.

The Wranglers inched to within 21-19 when Kevin Long burst nine yards for a touchdown. But Arizona missed the two-point conversion when Landry's pass to Long was broken up.

USFL

Atlanta is the third period.

Nick Boljivo added a 47-yard field goal late in the fourth quarter after Arizona closed the gap to 28-26 on Long's second TD, a 1-yard run with 7:34 left.

Pittsburgh 16, Washington 7

In Washington, Tony Lee's 18-yard field goal and Jeff Delaney's 50-yard interception return for a touchdown, both in the fourth quarter, lifted the expansion Pittsburgh Maulers to their first victory ever, a triumph over the Washington Federals.

Lee's field goal, with 1:56 to go, was set up by a 62-yard pass from Glenn Candry to Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier.

Rozier, slipped past the Washington secondary to catch Carano's pass at the Federal's 40. He was pulled down from behind at the Washington 3-yard line.

Delaney led the victory, picking off a Reggie Collier pass — the fourth Mauler interception of the day — and raced 50 yards down the sidelines for the game's final score.

The victory moved Pittsburgh, 1-3, one game ahead of the Federals, 0-4, in the race for third place in the Atlantic Division.

Philadelphia 28, Oakland 7

In Philadelphia, Kelvin Bryant ran for 173 yards and scored two touchdowns to lead the Philadelphia Stars to a victory over the Oakland Invaders in the Stars' home opener Sunday.

Oakland opened the scoring on a 2-yard run by Otis Brown with 9:17 left in the first half.

But Bryant erased the deficit with two third-period touchdowns, running for 74 yards on nine carries during the two drives.

He scored first on a 4-yard dive up the middle with 8:32 left in the third quarter, and David Trout's kick tied the game at 7-7.

The 6-foot-2, 195-pound Bryant gave the Stars their go-ahead touchdown on a 2-yard run with 4:07 left in the third quarter.

Houston 32, New Jersey 25

In Houston, the Gambler's Sam Harrell scored two touchdowns and cornerback Will Lewis intercepted two passes, returning one 34 yards for a touchdown, to lead the Gambler's to a victory over the New Jersey Generals.

The Generals' record dropped to 3-1 and the Gambler's boosted their won-lost mark to 3-1 before a home opening crowd of 35,532 fans in the Astrodome.

Lewis returned an interception 13 yards to the General 1-yard line in the second quarter prior to Harrell's 1-yard plunge in the second touchdown run that gave the Gambler's a 15-7 halftime lead.

Lewis intercepted Generals' quarterback Brian Sipe again in the fourth quarter and ran untouched to the end zone.

Although plagued by three interceptions, Sipe rallied the Generals in the closing minutes with a 5-yard touchdown pass to Clarence Collins and a 1-yard touchdown dive by Herschel Walker.

Denver 36, Tampa Bay 30

In Denver, cornerback David Martin picked off a John Reaves sideline pass and returned it 33 yards for a touchdown with 6:34 left, lifting the Denver Gold to an upset over the Tampa Bay Bandits.

Martin scored just 37 seconds after Denver quarterback Craig Penrose had flipped a 13-yard TD pass to Leonard Harris that, coupled with Brian Speckman's extra-point, tied the score at 30-30.

Martin then stepped in front of Tampa Bay tight end Marvin Harvey, picked off Harvey's poorly thrown ball, and ran untouched into the end zone.

Tampa Bay held a 14-3 lead midway through the second quarter after Reaves fired a 13-yard scoring pass.

Michigan came right back, going 87 yards in five plays, with Hebert hitting Cobb for the score.

The Wranglers inched to within 21-19 when Kevin Long burst nine yards for a touchdown. But Arizona missed the two-point conversion when Landry's pass to Long was broken up.

Pioneer League teams they had for the past six years. Thirdly, the league could seek a smaller Canadian town like Red Deer, Alberta (pop. 27,000), or try to develop a facility in Missoula, Mont., a city that is still struggling to raise the money to build an adequate football stadium for the University of Montana.

The latter alternative would be to look south and west, to Twin Falls or Ogden, Utah, or to the Treasure Valley.

Ogden (pop. 125,000) has a good ballpark, and it has also had a long record of failing to use it (Ogden's last professional baseball team, a PCL farm club for the Oakland A's, folded after two seasons in 1977). Boise, which was a short-lived entrant in the Class A Northwest League in 1975-76, can offer only the Borah High School field — where the city council has steadfastly refused permission for the sale of beer or Simplot Stadium in Caldwell or Rodeo Park in Nampa. Whatever the facilities, the Treasure Valley is still more than 800 miles from Billings, the Pioneer League's sole professional franchise.

Unofficially, Twin Falls is the Pioneer League's next logical stop.

It was just that for the better part of 25 years before 1971, when the league expanded into Canada. The next Valley Cowboys' final seasons, in fact, were part of a league that included Caldwell, Idaho Falls, Great Falls and Billings.

But convenience doesn't raise the considerable capital that it takes to operate a minor league baseball club, especially if remaking Harmon Park is part of the tab. A group of local investors was actively interested in putting up the money for a ballclub in Job's league a year and a half ago, but they were assuming that a deal could be worked out for the use of Frontier Field.

The catch to using Frontier Field is that some of the money that was used to develop it came from federal recreation funds; money that was provided with the stipulation that nobody could make money from the park. The ruling that a minor league baseball team is a commercial enterprise is, however, a judgment call by the state Parks Department and is hence — theoretically — reversible.

Moreover, the state said that it's possible that a minor league ballclub could use Frontier Field while it was in the process of developing its own facility. If nothing else, that would provide the basis for a minor league team sinking roots here.

Nonetheless, whether a minor league team plays at Frontier or Harmon, a lot of extensive — and expensive — upgrading would have to be done. Lighting and parking facilities would have to be improved, concession facilities expanded, dressing rooms built, restrooms upgraded and seating capacity expanded.

Since entrepreneurs discovered that money can be made in minor league baseball, however, finding that kind of bucks isn't as daunting a prospect as it used to be. The California group that will operate the Pocatello team started in January with a ballpark that is inferior to Frontier Field, and by the time the season starts in June it will have all of the aforementioned improvements. And it won't cost the city of Pocatello a nickel.

The roots of professional baseball in Twin Falls are deep, and it's been a lot of years since there haven't been Twin Falls Cowboys' alumni playing in the major leagues. Maybe by the time Mickey Rivers (who played here in 1969) and Jerry Remy (class of '71) retire, their replacements will be playing ball in Twin Falls.

Pitt, Virginia Tech advance

By The Associated Press

Al Young's only basket — a tap-in with three seconds left — gave Virginia Tech a 66-65 victory over South Alabama Sunday night in a second-round National Invitation Tournament basketball game in Greensboro, N.C.

In the first game of the second-round action, George Allen and Bill Culbertson hit six free throws in the final three minutes to lead Pittsburgh to a 66-63 triumph over Florida State.

South Alabama's Willie Jackson's follow shot with 1:36 left, with the Hokies in a delay, Perry Young scored on a layup to give Virginia Tech a 66-65 edge.

NIT

Pittsburgh 66, Florida State 63

Earlier in Greensboro, George Allen and Billy Culbertson sank six free throws in the last three minutes to lead Pittsburgh to a victory over Florida State in another second-round NIT game.

The Panthers, 10-12, led 37-29 on Clyde Vaughan's jumper with 18:27 left. Led by David Shaffer and Alton Gipson, the Seminoles clipped away until Shaffer's layup with 9:52 left tied the score at 49.

The score was tied three more times before Curtis Alken's one-hand jumper with 4:24 left gave Pitt a 58-56 edge.

Florida State had a chance to tie the bonus at 4:06.

Pitt's lead swayed between two and four in the next few minutes, the last time when Allen hit two free throws with 27 seconds left.

Florida State then cut the deficit to 64-63 when Tony William hit two foul shots and Vince Martello hit the front end of a two-shot foul. But the Seminoles were forced to foul again and Culbertson clinched the game with two more shots.

In Lincoln, Neb., Tyrone Corbin scored 19 points and Kenny Patterson had 14, leading DePaul to a victory over Illinois State in the second round of the NCAA Midwest Regional. The victory sends the 27-2 Blue Demons into the Midwest Regional semifinals at St. Louis Friday against Wake Forest.

Syracuse 78, Virginia Commonwealth 63

In East Rutherford, N.J., sophomore guard Rafael Addison scored 24 points as 16th-ranked Syracuse broke open a tight contest in the final six minutes for a victory over Virginia Commonwealth in the second round of the East Regional. Syracuse, 23-8, will meet Virginia in the semifinals beginning Thursday at Atlanta with top-ranked North Carolina and Indiana meeting in the other game.

Illinois 64, Villanova 56

In Milwaukee, swingman Doug Altamberg scored eight of his 12 points in the second half to help sixth-ranked Illinois turn back Villanova in the quarterfinals of the NCAA Midwest Regional. Illinois, 25-4, advances to the regional semifinals at Lexington, Ky.

Nuggets surge toward playoffs

By The Associated Press

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 15 of his game-high 30 points in the final quarter to lead Denver to a 107-104 National Basketball Association victory over Chicago Sunday, the Nuggets' third straight win.

With the victory, the seventh in nine games in March for Denver, the Nuggets, now 23-7, moved to the eighth and final spot in the Western Conference playoff race. Chicago, which was ending a six-game road trip, fell to 25-11.

Vandeweghe's basket with 48 seconds left opened a 105-102 Denver lead, but a pair of free throws by Dave Corzine at the 37-second mark cut the deficit to a point.

NBA

Denver trailed from early in the game, until late in the third period. Dan Issel got the Nuggets off quickly in the second half, scoring 16 points in the opening seven minutes of the third quarter.

Seattle 126, Golden State 89

In Seattle, guard Gus Williams scored 14 of his game-high 28 points in the third quarter Sunday as the Seattle SuperSonics pulled away in the second half to trounce the Golden State Warriors.

The victory, Seattle's first in four tries against the Warriors this season, extended the Sonics' winning streak to three games while handing Golden State its fourth straight loss.

Kansas City 108, Cleveland 97

In Richfield, Ohio, Mike Woodson scored 27 points in the second half and his Kansas City Kings overcame a 14-point halftime deficit to defeat the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Using long jump shots and spinning layups, Woodson scored all 11 of the Kings' points as Kansas City outscored the Cavaliers 11-2 at the end of the third quarter and the beginning of the fourth. He finished with a game-high 33 points.

Milwaukee 109, Washington 101

In Milwaukee, Junior Bridgeman scored five points during a 13-2 spurt at the start of the fourth quarter to lift the Milwaukee Bucks to over the Washington Bullets.

Milwaukee, leading 80-76 after three periods, scored the first five points of the fourth quarter before Washington's Greg Ballard scored on a jump shot to cut the lead to 83-78 with 10:57 to go.

The Bucks came back with consecutive baskets by Bridgeman, Marques Johnson, Paul Pressey and Paul Mokeski to open a 93-78 bulge 2 1/2 minutes later.

In a late game, it was San Antonio at San Diego.

At Bay Hill Classic

Koch comes from nowhere again

By BOB GREEN
The Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — For the second time this year, Gary Koch came from six strokes back to win on the PGA Tour.

His victory in a playoff Sunday at the Bay Hill Classic was almost, though not quite, a repeat performance of what he had done in the San Diego Open.

"At San Diego, the thought of winning never crossed my mind until the 72nd hole," Koch said.

"Here, I never thought I'd be able to shoot a round low enough to catch the leaders."

"I was just hoping for a finish in the top 10 and a good check. It wasn't until I birdied the 13th that I felt I had a chance to win," Koch said and he had gained a tie with a brilliant 8-under-par 63 in the final round, then birdied the two playoff holes to beat George Burns for the title.

For the day, Koch made 10 birdies in 20 holes in his best performance as a pro.

"It's hard to beat those 63s," said Burns. "I wasn't really expecting to play well, and I wasn't expecting to win, so I'm not at all disappointed."

Koch also came from six shots back in the final round at San Diego, gained a tie on the final-hole and then beat Gary Hallberg in a playoff.

"When you're that far back," Koch said, "it's a little easier. You're just out there, relaxed and easy and trying to play your best, and you don't put the pressure on yourself that you can when you're fighting for the lead."

Koch, who came within a single stroke of the course record on Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill Club course, and Burns each finished the regulation 72 holes in 272, 12 under par.

On the first playoff hole, the 15th, Koch put his approach some 15-18 feet from the flag and Burns, hitting second, got his some eight feet from the flag. Koch rapped his birdie putt into the back of the cup. Burns, needing to make it to stay alive, also birdied, the ball falling in the right corner.

On the 16th, another par 4, Koch hit a great snor some three feet from the cup. Burns couldn't match it. He went through the green to the fringe. His putt ran about four feet by, and he missed coming back, then tapped in for a 3-putt bogey.

Koch, the pressure off, rolled his little putt home and became the first two-time winner of the PGA Tour this season. It completed a sensational exhibition in which Koch birdied 10 of the 20 holes he played.

The victory, Koch's fifth on the Tour, was worth $72,000 from the total purse of $400,000 and made Gary the season's leading money-winner with $194,767, the best of his career.

Burns, who separated himself from a desperately scrambling pack with a 67, including three consecutive birdies on the back nine, had to settle for second money of $43,200.

Hal Sutton, the PGA champion who held the third-round lead, Australian shark-shooter Greg Norman, winner of 31 worldwide titles, and graying little Sammy Ratchko each had share of the lead at one time or another. And Ray Floyd and Bernhard Langer of West Germany were within one shot at some stage of the final round.

One by one, they fell victim to their own mistakes—or the demands of the course that plays to a much greater degree of difficulty than that experienced by Koch.

It was, at times, a bizarre performance.

Norman, for example, pitched in for an eagle-3. Seven holes later he had to make an eight-foot putt for double bogey. For the day, he had an eagle, double bogey, two birdies and four bogeys.

Johnson registers second win in a row

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Chris Johnson fired a 6-under-par 66 Sunday and won the $150,000 Tucson Open tournament — LPGA Open golf tournament by six strokes for her second consecutive victory after a three-year dry spell.

Johnson, a 25-year-old Tucson native who won last week's Samaritan Turquoise Classic in Phoenix, became the first LPGA player to win her first-ever titles in successive events since Nancy Lopez in 1978.

The fourth-year pro and former University of Arizona All-American posted a 272 total on her home course — the 6,346-yard Randalph North Golf Course — and pocketed another $22,500 top prize.

Lauri Peterson, a 23-year-old Phoenix native and ex-Arizona State standout shooting for her second career victory, birdied the last three holes for a 1-under 71 and a 278 total. She won $9,750.

Becky Pearson finished seven strokes back at 279 after firing a final round 71 while Barb Bunkowsky carded a 5-under 67 for a 280 total.

Debbie Massey, a co-leader with Johnson after Saturday's third round, ballooned to a 3-over-par 75 and wound up at 281 along with Patty Sheehan, who had a par 72. Sheehan was a co-leader after Friday's second round.

Defending champion Jan Stephenson, experiencing more putting problems, blew to a 77 and finished 16 strokes off the pace at 288.

Johnson opened up a two shot lead over the 33-year-old Massey on the par-4 6th when she birdied the hole and Massey bogeyed it.

Gas water heating makes more sense than ever...

DOLLARS AND CENTS!

Gas water heating offers you significant benefits.

1 If you have a gas furnace and an electric water heater, change to gas water heating and your gas rate for both heating and water heating will go down 10% to 20% year around depending on the price of electricity in your area.

2 Gas heats water twice as fast as electricity. Wouldn't it be nice not to worry about running out of hot water? You can with a gas heater. Electric models heat 18 gallons an hour. Gas heats 37 gallons an hour. It's just that simple!

3 New gas water heaters have greatly improved efficiency. Older models have efficiency ratings around 65% or less. New high efficiency gas heaters are rated up to 85% efficient. Better insulation reduces heat loss. New burner design provides better combustion efficiency and improved flue design retains more heat in the tank.

A new gas water heater is easy to own.

1 Zero interest financing* We'll finance the water heater and installation at zero interest, no money down, payments of $15.00 a month. (Maximum amount for financing, $450)

2 $100 Cash Rebate* If you purchase a new gas water heater without using Intermountain's finance program, we'll give you a $100 cash rebate.

3 Financing for new furnace and water heater* If your gas furnace is 15 years old or older, you should consider installing a new high tech heating system. It could lower your heating bills by 25% to 40%. We'll finance your new furnace and water heater for no money down, payments as low as $20.00 a month.

* Subject to certain conditions including a gas water heater must replace an existing electric model and be rated at ASHRAE 90-75
