Military guard carries coffin of former Sen. Frank Church from state Capitol for his funeral

Church family says farewell

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
The Associated Press

BOISE — Frank Church was eulogized Thursday as a man of compassion.

His wife of 36 years laughed at anecdotes about his boyhood — and wept as the couple's son remembered Idaho's U.S. senator of a quarter century.

An estimated 800 people filled a Boise cathedral for the funeral of Church, who died of pancreatic cancer last Saturday at age 59. He died at his home in Bethesda, Md. Church's eldest son, Forrest, said his father's last days were a time for family members to reminisce and celebrate the life they shared.

Thursday's funeral at the First United Methodist Cathedral of the Rockies also was a family celebration, Forrest Church said. He told mourners they were family members, too.

"You really are," he said. "Dad thought of you that way." Forrest Church said his father viewed life as a gift.

"Not only did he teach us how to live," said the former senator's son, "he also taught us how to die. When the time came for him to go, he was ready."

Church's widow, Bethine, seated just a few feet from her husband's flag-draped casket, wept as her son spoke.

The younger of the two Church sons, Chase, held his arm around his mother through most of the hour-long funeral. Mrs. Church placed a rose on the casket at the conclusion of the service.

She laughed as long-time friends recalled boyhood stories about Church, who was student body president at Boise High School, located across the street from the Methodist church.

His friends devised fanciful plans for Church to become United States president and select a cabinet from among his boyhood comrades.

Church was a superb storyteller who had a remarkable sense of humor, said Boise attorney Carl Burke, Church campaign manager. "His life was infectious to those around him, in the sense that you always felt better being around him," Burke said.

Stan Burns, another longtime friend, said that even as a young boy, Church was charismatic.

"From the start, it was obvious Frank was destined for great things," Burns said. But he said being a friend of Church's was easy.

Teachers and others adored him, and would ask "Why can't you be more like Frank Church?" Burns said.

He described the marriage of Frank and Bethine Church as "one of the best." See FUNERAL on Page A2

Funeral for Idaho senator marks generation's passing

By STEPHEN HARTGEN
Times-News (magazine editor)

BOISE — In his eulogy of Frank Church Thursday, the Rev. Fred Venable quoted verses from Ecclesiastes on the praise of famous men whose righteous deeds are not forgotten.

But in the mourning of Church's passing and the celebration of his contributions, the saddened crowd that gathered to honor him might have come together as well to mark the changing of a political generation.

Venable didn't read it, but other simple language of Ecclesiastes might have fit the service, too: "One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth forever."

A source close to the more than 800 that packed the tan, sandstone First United Methodist Cathedral of the Rockies seemed to sense the flowing tide of history.

Most of Church's former staff members were there, flying in from across the nation, hugging and embracing each other for the first time in years — a family reunited in its time of sorrow. Many are still in their 30s and 40s.

Church grew to political maturity in the turbulent middle years of this American century and had an almost clairvoyant ability to lead on the issues of his time: civil rights, the Vietnam War and wilderness preservation.

He understood the potential arrogance of American military power and, with Senate colleagues like J. William Fulbright, sought to curtail

It. The congregation Thursday was drawn largely from that old coalition of Democrats and moderate Republicans who sent Church to the Senate for a quarter century.

It is a coalition now seemingly in eclipse, against whom the nation and state seem to have turned in the conservative torrent of the Reagan years.

Politicians, state and federal officials, attorneys, doctors, judges, educators, journalists. They came from their separate callings to hear Church's boyhood and adult friends and his elder son describe him as a compassionate and principled man who loved Idaho and its people.

"My father lived by a sense of kinship of all people," said his son, the Rev. F. Forrester Church, a minister in New York City. "We share the same home, the beautiful, fragile planet Earth."

Israelis break up bus hijack

ISRAELI OCCUPIED GAZA STRIP (AP) — Arab guerrillas armed with grenades hijacked a bus carrying about 40 Israelis and sped toward the Egyptian border, but Israeli soldiers stormed aboard early today and rescued the hostages.

A military communique said six of the bus passengers were wounded, but made no mention of casualties among the hijackers or soldiers. Sources said earlier that two hijackers were killed.

The communique said bomb experts were searching the bus for explosives.

Sources and witnesses reported that Israeli soldiers pursuing the bus shot out the tires and punctured the fuel tank, then surrounded the immobilized vehicle.

They said several people were wounded and others were held hostage on the bus by three or four armed guerrillas.

The hijackers seized the bus at about 7:30 p.m. after it had left Ashdod on its run from Tel Aviv to the Mediterranean port of Ashkelon. NBC radio said the hijackers demanded the release of 500 prisoners held in Israeli jails and free passage to Egypt for themselves.

Fire from the troops stopped the bus, which seats 42 people and left Tel Aviv nearly full, near the Palestinian refugee camp of Dir el Balah, 10 miles north of the Egyptian border, Israeli sources said.

"Some passengers fled through an open door when the bus was halted, the sources said, and two others — including a pregnant woman — were freed later.

Israeli reporters on the scene and other reliable sources said the bus was parked on a side road near the Dir el Balah camp, between Rafah and Gaza City.

House condemns mining of Nicaraguan ports

By W. DALE NELSON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House joined the Senate Thursday night in condemning the CIA-directed mining of Nicaraguan ports.

After that action, leaders of Congress abandoned efforts to funnel an emergency appropriation to the Salvadoran government — which the Reagan administration says is desperately needed to battle leftist revolutionaries.

By a vote of 281-111, the House, controlled by Democrats, passed a non-binding resolution expressing "the sense of Congress that no additional funds be used to mine the ports or territorial waters of Nicaragua."

Meanwhile, sources said Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., and Speaker of the House Thomas F. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., decided there was not time for a House-Senate conference committee to decide Central American aid issues before a 10-day Easter recess beginning Friday.

A senior State Department official, speaking on condition that he not be identified, said earlier that congressional failure to approve funds for El Salvador before the recess would "create major difficulties for the Salvadoran military."

A source close to the Senate GOP leadership said O'Neill and Baker offered to allow the diversion to El Salvador of $32 million funds appropriated for other purposes as a stopgap until the conferees could meet after the recess to consider the administration's request for $61.7 million.

Marc Weinberg, a White House spokesman, said the administration was "continuing private discussions with members of Congress" on the issue.

Some administration supporters in Congress condemned the delay.

"We continue to procrastinate without a thought of what this will mean to the survival of democracy in El Salvador," said Rep. William Whitehurst, R-Va., during the House debate.

Meanwhile leaders of Congress charted a collision course over whether to continue U.S. aid to Nicaraguan guerrillas, with the GOP leadership of the House vowing to support continued aid and Democratic leaders of the House saying they would fight it.

Opening debate on the resolution condemning mining of Nicaraguan ports, Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., said "This administration has engaged in international terrorism and the world awaits to see if the American people will stand up for international law."

Blaine County passes override

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Blaine County voters have approved a school override levy for the sixth time in as many years.

The Thursday vote was 1,074 favoring and 777 opposing the $925,000 special school-district levy — a 58-percent voter approval.

Superintendent Dick Jones was pleased with the victory. "Very pleased," he said, "it just shows again that the people of Blaine County support quality education."

If the voters had not approved the override, Blaine County School District trustees had said they would not seek a second levy and face the cuts disapproval would demand.

As it is, the district still faces some cuts — involving new equipment and teacher aides — to stay within the $4.6-million budget projected for the 1984-85 school year. Jones had said it would have taken a $1.15 million override to stay even with last year's services. A year ago, voters approved a $900,000 override levy, which was added to a $4.3-million budget.

As usual, the northern precinct's support for the levy was greater than the support of those in the southern reaches for the district.

Carrey barely approved the levy, voting 110 to 108 in its favor.

Bellevee strongly disapproved of the levy, but a stronger showing in its favor, in Ketchum, put the finishing touches on the strong victory.

Bellevee voted 47 to 237 against the levy while Hailey favored the override, 360 to 309, as did Ketchum, 507 to 123.

Jones has strongly criticized the state's formula for distributing its funds to school districts, saying that Blaine County is being short-changed.

Under the system, districts are given state revenue based on their student population. But the allocation to each county is "equalized" by the

Senate OKs higher liquor tax
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, looking for painless ways to slash the federal deficit, voted Thursday to raise the liquor tax by $2 a gallon but backed off adding another 20 cents to the cost of a gallon of wine.

The vote reflected the fact that more than two dozen states have a wine industry of some size while the liquor industry is concentrated in three states — Tennessee, Kentucky and Indiana.

The two industries squared off as the Senate worked through a stack of amendments on a deficit-reduction bill, written by the Finance Committee, that would raise taxes by $48 billion and cut spending by $15 billion over the next three years.

The House, which Wednesday approved its own $48 billion tax bill, debated a $5 billion spending-cut bill that included a disputed provision to freeze for one year the fees the government pays doctors for treating Medicare patients.

Jobless claims reach new low
 WASHINGTON (AP) — New claims for unemployment compensation insurance payments in late March were at their lowest level since June 1979, the Labor Department reported Thursday.

The department's Employment and Training Administration, releasing figures adjusted for seasonal variations, said approximately 336,000 first-time claims were filed with state employment offices in the week ended March 31, a decrease of 30,000 over the previous week.

It was the lowest weekly new-claims total since 335,000 such claims were placed in the week ended June 2, 1979.

Initial claims for unemployment merely show how many jobless Americans sought to collect benefits. They do not indicate how many applicants were cleared of all federal relief payments.

The report also said the grand total of unemployment compensation insurance recipients under a variety of federal and state-run programs was 3,330,400 in the week ended March 24, down 113,200 from the week ended March 17. The total in 1983, the agency said, was 5,817,600.

Thursday's report showed that in the week ended March 24, 2,487,000 jobless Americans were collecting state-paid regular unemployment compensation insurance benefits, down 17,000 from the previous week.

Ambassador blasts Nicaragua
 WASHINGTON (AP) — U.N. ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick Thursday branded Nicaragua an aggressor nation in Central America, and said its complaint to the World Court about mining of Nicaraguan harbors was "blatantly propagandistic."

Calling it a "violation of international law," Mrs. Kirkpatrick accused Nicaragua of moving boundary posts to occupy the territory of Honduras illegally, and of serving as the major arms supplier to leftist rebels in El Salvador.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick said the United States relied on the right of self-defense granted by the U.N. Charter when it removed itself from World Court jurisdiction in cases involving its activities in Central America for the next two years.

Ma Bell managers file lawsuit

DENVER (AP) — A class-action suit by former Mountain Bell managers seeks $300 million in damages on grounds that the phone company used "racketeering activities" to coerce them into early retirement with reduced pensions and benefits.

The suit, filed Thursday in U.S. District Court here, claims more than 800 first- and second-level managers between the ages of 40 and 70 were victims of age discrimination by Mountain Bell. Filing the suit on behalf of the class were Kenneth R. Walker and Howard L. Beesley of Arizona and Clayton Unger of Cheyenne, Wyo.

The alleged coercion by Mountain Bell occurred as the company tried to reorganize itself during the federal-ordered divestiture of American Telephone & Telegraph.

Mountain Bell serves Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming.

Kimberly woman hurt in crash

EDEEN — Doris Dye, 34, of Kimberly, was being taken to Boise by ambulance late Thursday for treatment of injuries suffered in a one-car rollover near Edeen about 4 p.m.

Deputy Sheriff Ray Clark said Dye was traveling on a gravel road just east of the junction of Milner Road and Ridgeway Road when she lost control of her small vehicle. The car rolled over in one and one-half times, coming to rest on its top in a newly plowed field.

Clark said the woman was semi-conscious at the scene but unable to provide information on what had caused the accident.

A condition report was not available Thursday night.

Shuttle pilots set to return

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle astronauts got ready Thursday to come home with an empty cargo bay — a symbol of their twin successes in delivering one satellite to space and repairing another.

The shuttle was to land at Kennedy Space Center at 5:07 a.m. MST Friday, on its 100th revolution of the Earth since launch last Thursday. The shuttle's course will take it across the Gulf of California in Mexico, coming over the United States north of Brownsville, Texas, and across the Gulf of Mexico and central Florida to the three-mile-long KSC runway.

Solar Max, the first satellite to undergo surgery in space, was speeding along at 17,400 mph in an orbit all its own, apparently fully recovered. Challenger released it at 2:26 a.m. MST Thursday, then flew nearby for eight hours, ready to grab it back.

"All things look good, the repairs were successful," said Jim Hillitt, a spokesman for Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland, which is controlling the sun-study satellite and reading its data.

Wilder sought in another case

PENN YAN, N.Y. (AP) — Christopher Bernard Wilder, wanted in connection with the abductions and murders of young women, was being sought in upstate New York on Thursday after being named as a suspect in the kidnapping of a 16-year-old girl, the FBI said.

The Indiana teen-ager had been stabbed several times and was found walking along a road near Penn Yan on Thursday. She was hospitalized in stable condition.

 great political partnerships in Idaho history — maybe in all history."

Mrs. Church was with her husband when he was diagnosed as having cancer in his early 20s. Doctors gave him six months to live.

But friends said the Churches had unwavering resolve in the face of adversity, including Church's final battle with cancer.

"They looked at death and, in a sense, conquered it," Burke said. "They celebrated each waking moment about what they could do today."

Officials at the funeral included most of Idaho's top state officials; Sen. Steve Symms, who defeated Church in 1980; Sen. James McClure; and Rep. Larry Craig. The remaining members of Idaho's all-Republican congressional delegation, Rep. George Hansen, did not attend.

Seated with Mrs. Church and Chase Church were Amy Church, Furze's wife, and the couple's 65-year-old son.

Gov. John Evans read from Matthew 5:3-10 at the opening of the service.

Honorary pallbearers included Evans; former Gov. Cecil Andrus; U.S. District Court Judge Ray McInichols; State Treasurer Marjorie Ruth; Moon; and State Auditor Joe Williams.

The funeral was followed by a private-burial service at Morris Hill Cemetery. Church was buried near the grave of his beloved wife, Sen. William E. Borah, who died in 1940.

Church

 Church's widow Bethine bit her lip as her son talked, his words ringing through the high vaulted cathedral and reverberating from the stained glass windows that record the journeys of Christ.

"The hardest thing we have had to do," Church began, "is to bring my father home. He loved the state very much, and he was a family celebration. You are family. Dad thought of you that way."

Bethine cried as the young man told of his father's last months: "He had learned that life was a gift and not a given," the younger Church said. "It came with a price attached. The price is death. We will all die someday. The question then is how shall we choose to live."

In the end, he said, his father was "ready to go, peacefully, naturally, with sensitivity and grace."

Church's son was followed on the funeral program by solist Sam Thompson, whose moving rendition of "The Impossible Dream" brought tears to the eyes of most of the congregation. In the sanctuary section of the cathedral, former aides to the late senator wept openly.

Like the swell and rip of an ocean tide, the funeral's mood shifted from joy and celebration to sorrow and grief. Church's son was followed on the program, calling on the congregation to "release him to a loving God," and quoting the famous lines from the poet John Donne, "no man is an island, entire of itself."

Gov. John Evans followed with a reading of verses from Matthew.

"Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." The congregation then rose as one and joined in Beethoven's "Joyful, Joyful We Adore Thee" from the great 9th Choral Symphony, arguably the best piece of vocal music ever written.

Friends Carl Burke, Stan Burns and Scott Reed followed, outlining Church's days of growing up on Franklin Street, just two blocks from the church where his flag-draped casket lay.

They recounted his dreams of a life in public service and his romance and marriage to Bethine. Burke referred to Church's "vision of the future," and his belief in "the need to conserve" natural resources, as well as his efforts to stop the nuclear arms race. He called a recent article by Church in the Washington Post "one of the most profound articles on American foreign policy."

Reed, a Coeur d'Alene attorney, ripped into the opponents of Church's efforts to preserve the American wilderness. At one point, he testily compared the state's current all-Republican congressional delegation to the "recalcitrant delegation" from Alaska which fought Church's Alaska wilderness preservation bill that passed the Senate in Church's first year, 1980.

Three of Idaho's members of Congress were present: Sen. Steve Symms, who defeated Church in the 1980 campaign; Sen. James McClure, who last month sponsored a bill to rename the River to No Return Wilderness after Church; and Rep. Larry Craig.

There is an unwritten rule in politics that it is bad form not to attend the funeral of a political foe, but Rep. George Hansen, whom Church beat by his biggest margin in 1968, was not present.

The twin themes of foreign policy and wilderness ran through the ceremony. "Because of Frank Church," said Reed, "we have the Selway, the Bitterroot, the Goshute, the Hump wildernesses," the words rolling off in a cadence that Church, an accomplished orator, would have admired.

Former U.S. Ambassador Warren Manshel turned the mood somber again with his references to Church's battle against the Vietnam War and the involvement "our great country is about to repeat in Latin America."

Manshel praised Church's support of the Panama Canal Treaty giving the canal back to the Panamanians. He said the action has given the United States "a base of popular support in Central America, a factor for which we may come to be grateful."

Church, he said, believed in the essential goodness of the American people, "and in their highest aspirations."

By 3 p.m., the service was over and the pallbearers, all former staff aides, carried the simple wood casket outside into the flat light of a broken-cloud afternoon.

Honored guests, family, and friends all allowed and many walked and talked in small groups in the warm spring breeze for the casket to be loaded into the hearse for its final trip, past Boise High School where Church went to school, to Morris Hill Cemetery.

There, in a private graveside service for family and close associates, the boy senator from Idaho was lowered into the ground, not far from the grave of his boyhood hero, Sen. William Borah, who died 44 years ago this past January.

Means districts with high property valuations, like Blaine County's resort region, are given smaller shares of the state's dole.

Jones has said the distribution formula is "ousting Blaine County schools out of providing a quality education for its students. The district's basic support from the state has dropped to only about $200,000 for the coming year."

Woman produces 17-pound baby

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — The doctor said he was surprised when a woman gave birth to a 17-pound, 3-ounce baby girl.

"I knew it was going to be big, but not that big," said Dr. John J. DeMauro, an obstetrician who delivered 24-inch-long Jennifer — Himes — by Caesarean section Wednesday at 3:15 a.m. "I really thought I was dealing with a 12½ to 13-pounder."

Dorothy Himes, 29, of Erie was in good condition at Saint Vincent Health Center, where she broke the hospital's record for the largest baby, said hospital spokeswoman Jane Anderson. The infant was described as "normal in every way" by DeMauro.

Pentagon's budget reduced in proposal passed by panel

By LEE BYRD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House Armed Services Committee has approved a Pentagon spending of $276.5 billion next year, a record $19 billion cut from President Reagan's original request which scales back manpower and pay boosts and trims production of the MX missile.

The package which emerged Thursday after a weeklong series of closed sessions over the budget includes reducing a proposed 5.5 percent pay boost for virtually all ranks to 3.5 percent, the same as slated for the government's civilian workers.

The panel approved virtually intact Reagan's request for 34 B-1 bombers, costing $8.1 billion, but it slashed a number of other major weapons programs, including the MX and a futuristic strategic defense system, known as the "Star Wars" plan by critics.

The panel called for buying 30 of the multiple-warhead MX intercontinental missiles, dubbed the "Peacekeeper" by Reagan, for $4.45 billion. He wanted 40, at $4.9 billion. It cut $407 million from his request of $1.77 billion for preliminary research on what the president prefers to call his Strategic Defense Initiative — which envisions using such exotic weaponry as laser and energy beams to destroy missiles.

The committee also proposed a $349 million reduction in the military portion of the budget for the Department of Energy, which oversees the production of nuclear explosives. And it cut $1 billion from military construction programs, for overall savings of nearly $2 billion when programs outside the Pentagon budget are counted.

The committee cut three ships from the Navy's proposed buildup and reduced all other procurement by 9.2 percent. But it boosted Reagan's request for nine items, adding 120 M-1 Abrams tanks to the 720 he had asked.

Overall, the panel's package would represent a 6 percent "real" increase in defense spending, adjusted for inflation, over the current year. Reagan originally wanted a 13 percent increase after inflation, but later agreed to lower it to about 7.8 percent as part of a Republican-sponsored deficit reduction plan.

Further cuts are likely when the bill reaches the House floor, probably next month. The Democratic House already has set a target budget of 3.5 percent for defense under budget guidelines approved early this week.

At that, the House committee's action represented the largest cuts it ever has imposed on a president's defense budget. Last year it trimmed Reagan's request by $10 billion, the previous record.

Spending reduced to curb deficit, but House deletes doctor-fee plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Thursday approved a bill—261-162—to cut federal spending by almost $4 billion over three years after cutting out a provision that would have limited the fees of doctors treating Medicare hospital patients.

It rejected by voice-vote an amendment which would set a one-year freeze on doctors' payments for treating hospital Medicare patients, and prevent them from charging more than the fee set by Medicare. The provision would have saved $2.6 billion.

The bill was part of the House's drive to achieve more than $12 billion in savings mandated by a budget blueprint adopted last week.

A statement of Reagan administration policy said it had reservations about the "limit on physician fees, called 'mandatory assignment,'" but supported the one-year freeze and the overall bill.

However, the freeze and assignment were linked in ground rules set down for debate on the bill.

Mandatory assignment means requiring physicians to accept as their full fee whatever Medicare sets as a reasonable charge, and not charging patients an additional amount.

The American Medical Association, which lobbied heavily against the mandatory assignment provision, has urged its members to freeze all fees voluntarily for one year to help combat rising medical costs.

"This is an honest effort to lay before the House the means to save Medicare," said Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., chairman of the Rules Committee. "All we're asking doctors to do is accept the fee the government says is fair fee."

"Reagan budgets have steadily asked the elderly to pay more. Congress responded to those demands in 1981," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. "In 1983 we fixed limits on hospital charges."

But Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, said mandatory assignment is not workable, and may result in physicians refusing to treat any Medicare patients. He said: "Republicans had hoped to offer a provision simply freezing all physician fees, which would save $2.5 billion. They were precluded from doing so by procedural rules."

"If we monkey around so physicians say, 'I've had it with your paperwork and your orders, and opt out of Medicare, then where will your constituents be?'" asked Rep. Henson Moore, R-La.

'unsettling'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government Thursday said an inspection blitz of the airline industry uncovered "some concerns" about the safe operation of at least 44 air carriers, including many of the large ones.

The inspectors gave the airline industry a "good grade" for safety overall, but the 44 airlines — none of which was identified — will be subject to a closer "in-depth" examination over the next few months.

The officials refused to identify any of the carriers that were being looked at more closely by the Federal Aviation Administration.

House frees Meese papers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee voted Thursday to give the special prosecutor investigating Edwin Meese III all materials relating to any role the attorney general designate may have had in Carter administration documents reaching the 1980 Reagan campaign.

The materials — were requested Wednesday by independent counsel Jacob A. Stein, who is investigating questions about the White House counselor's political and financial dealings.

The questions, including whether Meese helped get federal jobs for people who aided him financially, arose last month during confirmation hearings by the Senate Judiciary Committee. The confirmation process has been put on hold during Stein's investigation.

System's checks work in curbing CIA's zeal

From time to time, events within our republic underscore the wisdom of those who designed for us a government based on a system of checks and balances. Such was the case in recent days when Congress clipped the wings of the administration for its mining of Nicaraguan ports.

Americans can and will argue just where the boundary lies between acceptable and unacceptable actions in Central America. We have not reached consensus on that point. But it is clear that the administration has stepped well beyond the point where most of us would place that boundary.

The action placed the CIA — ostensibly an intelligence gathering agency — into the business of waging an undeclared war. That is not an assessment fomented in the squabbles of partisan politics. It came from people of Reagan's own party and from people with conservative credentials every bit as solid as the president's.

If there was any doubt as to how far the administration had transgressed the bounds of acceptable behavior, it was wiped out by the margins by which both houses of Congress voted to condemn the action. In those votes, there was a clear message to the president that he had gone too far in a policy of military adventurism in Nicaragua.

Granted, the vote only a message, because the resolution Congress approved is not binding on the president. But the message carried with it the threat of Congress's adopting some binding action by cutting funds for military activity in Central America, if the president did not clean up his act.

The president got the message and ceased the laying of mines.

The action of Congress on the issue forced that concession, which is how the system of checks and balances is supposed to work. In the case in question, Americans can be glad that it did.

Now the administration should drop the other shoe and repair the damage done by helping in an international effort to remove the mines, before an explosion triggers an international incident.

Movie makers didn't give Emma chance for improvement

BOSTON — Now that it has been duly elected the best movie of the year by the Oscar constituency, it's time for me to confess something. I am one of about three people in America who were underwhelmed by "Terms of Endearment."

Ellen Goodman

Let me say right off that I am a sucker for movies about mothers and daughters. To see "Endearment" I played hooky one afternoon, bought a tub of popcorn and prepared to wallow. But I left a couple of hours and a couple of hankies later feeling swell, thirsty, and just a bit fed up.

Winger, bugs me.

I'm not exactly sure why. In part, I found myself agreeing with the mother, Aurora, who said all sorts of blunt, tactless and true things mothers are not supposed to utter to their grown daughters. To wit, on the eve of Emma's wedding: "You're not special enough to overcome a bad marriage." Or worse yet: "How is your life going to get better if you're going to keep having children with that man?" But Emma was the heroine, the earthly, sexy 1980s heroine of this film. As such, she reminded me of every harried, struggling, overwhelmed and underpaid junior faculty wife of the US. In yesterdays of academe, they had about as much control over their lives as impoverished camp followers. Maybe I'm too close to those memories to find Emma "refreshing."

The ordinary marriage of Emma and Flap — mother knew best — seems like a set piece of the past transplanted into the present. Flap's lack of imagination leads him into the arms of a graduate student. Emma's modest rebellion leads to an affair with a timid bank manager.

I am not saying that "Terms" things don't happen anymore or anywhere. The movie is not supposed to be cinema verite or cinema consciousness-raising. But for those of us who continually hope and believe that something has changed for men and women in the last 30 years, the movie-makers might have given Emma a chance.

The "new woman" portraits were dreadful. The New York professional harpies who defile our Midwestern Gal Emma in one scene are a classic update of the '50s female: Career Woman as Blotch. The graduate student who's having an affair with Flap is almost a parody of the modern we-all-have-to-grow-up-and-change school of homeworkers. Emma's best friend is rich to be a role model. And Mom is too eccentric.

In fact, the script writers wrote themselves and Earthy Emma into a bind. Having set her up as a gritty, caring, connected, real woman (not like those '80s types), she was on the brink of being left with three kids.

I suppose that divorce would have launched the movie abruptly forward in time. The next scene might have shown her driving from the babysitter to her job at the Chippewell to her night class at the university and yelling at Flap over the phone because she's late with his child-support checks.

But the writers were determined not to do Emma all into the clutches of current cliches, solving her problems with divorce, a career or counseling. Nobody who remembers the ending of "An Unmarried Woman" — Give Up Alan Bates? Are you kidding? — can sympathize with that. But the only alternative they came up with was cancer.

I think that is what tingly made me feel manipulated. They preferred to keep this young mother attractive, engaging, soulful and female by letting her die. And die so well. The terms of her endearment were awfully high.

I know, I know, all this is nit-picking. This was a movie about the sinesy of mother-daughter connections. The energy, the humor, the pathos are still worth playing hooky for. When you leave the theater still caring about the characters, the movie-makers have done something right.

But I have a strong sense that the writers gave baby Emma a terminal disease because they didn't know what else to do with her. It was cancer or a life crisis. They didn't want Emma to do what many women have done since the 1950s: take control of their lives — a still wonder-what-Emma would have been like if they'd just let her grow up.

Letters / It's a serious mistake to forget that power can corrupt

Perhaps the IRS is corrupt

First of all, why not consider that the Internal Revenue Service may be every bit as corrupted as George Hansen says it is? (Some of us are beyond the "consider" stage.) In fact, my own studies and, as we have seen, are George's position has forced him to be too reserved in his revelations of IRS graft.

This is not to say that everything and everybody in the IRS are corrupted; most of it is just the result of institutional entropy and governmental hypertrophy. But it is a serious mistake for Americans to forget that power can and sometimes does corrupt and that the hearts of some tax collectors are not always pure.

Secondly, besides being corrupted, the tax laws are extremely complicated. The federal tax statutes alone comprise many rows of law-library shelves. Then the tax laws concerning congressmen and campaign contributions are equally complicated and, as we have seen, are subject to interpretation. Many congressmen have done the same things as Rep. Hansen based on the same, sound legal counsel.

"cheats on his taxes" and/or "allegedly 'there's a word pregnant with journalistic poison' misused campaign funds" then who will believe his revelations about tax corruption?

In the meantime the IRS uses the media for its own ends while that public relations program. Using the blank of "a public service message," the IRS comes on television to tell us how positively helpful they can be as you fill out your simplified 1040 and give them a major chunk of your paycheck. Between the A-Team and Alrworld, the mediocre American is subliminally propagandized into believing that "All is well in Big Brother Government" (albeit a little expensive) and that the patriotic thing to do is hire the IRS to interpret tax laws for you and think of them as the good guys, while they lead one of the most honest patriots and America's fiercest defender of constitutional rights, away to the slaughter.

Roots of trouble remain

An extraordinary will made in north Ireland in 1674.

1. John Langley, born at Wincanton, in Somersetshire, and settled in Ireland in the year 1681, now in my right mind and wits, do hereby my will in my own handwriting, I leave all my house, goods and farm of Blackettle of 253 acres to my son, commonly called stubborn Jack, to him and his heirs forever, provided he marries a Protestant, but not Alice Kendrick, who called me "Oliver's whelp." My new buckskin breeches and my silver tobacco stopper with J.L. on the top I give to Richard Richards, my comrade, who helped me off at the storming at Clonmel when I was shot thru the leg. My said son John shall keep my body above ground six days and six nights after I am dead; and Grace Kendrick shall lay me out, who shall have for so doing five shillings. My body shall be put upon the oak table in the brown room and 50 Irishmen shall be invited to my wake, and every one shall have two quarts of the best aqua vitae, and each one skin, dish and knife before him; and when the liquor is out, nail up the coffin and commit me to the earth whence I came.

This is my will, witness my hand this 3rd of March 1674.

John Langley
Old Henry the VIII was the cause of the trouble in north Ireland. Because he had got rid of his wives by beheading some of them, he was put out of the church. In protest the "protestant" church started.

Many of the people in England and Scotland and Ireland were deprived of their land if they did not agree. This trouble still continues in North Ireland. Langley came from England and took the land so wronger to have some one at the burial, he provided an inducement.

The above record came from an old handbook on Irish genealogy.

Henry established the Anglican Church in 1529. It is still the official Church of England.

Opposition gets support

I was gratified by the response of the people that I called on when presenting a petition to be signed to enable Dan Adamson's name to be put on the ballot for the primaries in May.

Out of 50 homes that I visited and obtained signatures, there was only one person that said he was for George Hansen and refused to sign. However, his wife did. My husband found the same to be true in his efforts to have his petition signed. There was overwhelming opposition to have George Hansen remain in office.

Do not let The Times-News propaganda and the recent letters to the editor that have been making excuses for George Hansen fool you. There is a great number of people in Twin Falls County and surrounding communities that want to see George Hansen defeated and welcome the new candidate, Dan Adamson, for his seat in Congress.

RAE OLSEN
Twin Falls

Hansen has run his course

For the life of me, I cannot understand why you people that have been sending in letters to the editor the past few days are still singing the praises of George Hansen. It has now been said that we change the law to act that his convictions of felony have stemmed from because "Ole George couldn't obey it."

I have often heard the statement that "George always votes right." Who is to say what is right? What is right to some is wrong to another. An honest, God-fearing, conscientious congressman should weigh the facts presented and use his conscience and integrity in the way he votes, and not be swayed by special interest groups that tell him how to vote.

If you or I do not disclose our true earnings to the IRS, we take the chance of being audited, fined or both. In past years, George has been called on the carpet by the IRS and by other infractions of the law. His comic booklet "The Dragonslayer" (the most asinine bit of printed material I have ever tried to get through) attempted to tell the people of Idaho what a big hero he is, by criticizing all those factors that gave him a bad time. His grandstand play in going to Iran to help get the hostages released resulted in making a fool of himself. George Hansen has run his course.

Mr. Hansen is not above the law and should pay the fiddler as you or I would have to do if we broke the law. What does it take to wake up you hangers-on to the myth that he can do no wrong?

Dan Adamson is my choice in the primaries. The Republican Party needs new blood to keep it alive.

JAN R. DISEN

Christ was a liberal, too

Many will remember Frank Church as the best senator that Idaho has ever had. Having been a man for peace, the world will also remember him as one of the greatest statesmen of our times.

He was branded by some as being too liberal, but like all great men he was courageous and fought for what he believed to be right. Most peace-makers do not mind being called liberals even though war-mongers love to call them peaceniks.

In past history, one that could be classified as the greatest liberal that ever lived can be found in The Bible in the name of Jesus Christ.

Press remains the same 75 years later

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Forty-three years ago this month a scared and skinny 20-year-old, having completed his requirements for a degree from Missouri's School of Journalism, boarded a Wabash day coach and set out for a career in the great wide world. This week the kid returned, 43 pounds heavier, still star struck by the wonder and glory of it all.

James Kilpatrick

Not the wonder and the glory of Old Mizou. The university has about tripled in size over the four decades, but things are mostly the same. No, it's the wonder and the glory of news-papery that this week draws the old grads back to town. We are marking the 75th anniversary of the founding of the School of Journalism. We are here to talk about the news biz.

The more things change, says the French proverb, the more they stay the same. Journalism has seen some remarkable changes over the past 40 years. Technologically we have gone from hot metal and hand-set heads to the sometimes doubtful advantages of cold type and the computer. Television has assumed a role of dissemination the news that few of us had foreseen.

determining the who, what, where, when and why of a news event. We are still charged with converting our findings into readable English prose. The perils and problems of the news business today are the same perils and problems we were discussing when Professor Tom Morelock was teaching a course in ethics a long time ago.

We used to talk about the relationship between a reporter and the people he covers. We were talking about the same thing in Washington last week. On Jan. 25, Jesse Jackson visited a Washington Post reporter, Milton Coleman, to have breakfast with him. The ground rule was clearly "background only," which means: no direct quotation, no attribution. During the conversation, Jackson spoke of Jews as "Hymies" and of New York City as "Hymletown." Coleman himself wrote nothing, but he passed the quote to another Post reporter who used it on Feb. 13 in a long story on Jackson and the Jews. Then the roof fell in.

What was Coleman's responsibility? Should he have reported the startling remark at once? Should he have honored the "background" rule? Should reporters and public figures ever be friends? Should we agree to "off the record" and "background" interviews? Should a columnist go to dinner at the White House?

We will talk about other matters this weekend. The adversarial struggle between the press and the judicial system never lets up. To what extent should we be able to protect our news sources from the disclosure orders of a court? To what extent should we have access to pre-trial and juvenile proceedings? We will talk about the lamentable poor image of the press in today's society — about why this image has developed, and how we might best restore the high level of confidence we seem to have lost.

Those of us in the newspaper business incessantly find fault with our business. We make too many mistakes — mistakes of fact, mistakes of interpretation — and we are far too slow about correcting them. Certain irresponsible elements of the press abuse the freedom that the Constitution assures us. Morelock never taught us the techniques of rummaging through the garbage cans behind Ed Meese's house, and for that oversight in our instruction let us be better. Some reporters can be rude, overbearing and vain. And the violence that some reporters and editorial writers do to the English language is enough to make a grown man cry.

With all of that, this assessment is valid: The American press today, both in print and on the air, is better than it ever has been in the past — better in worldwide coverage, better in its relatively non-partisan reporting. The wonder and the glory is that we are free to cover the news while the news is hot, to report that better news and to comment upon it, and to reveal at our part in the production of that daily miracle, the daily paper. We disagree on lots of things, those of us in the press, but all of us old gazers agree on this much: Newspapers are the best of all trades. Nothing else comes even close.

James Kilpatrick writes for Universal Press Syndicate.

Mondale attacks Latin America policy

By CAROLE FELDMAN
The Associated Press

SEN. GARY HART
Capturing Western flavor

Walter Mondale called Thursday for the "demilitarization of Central America."

As the leading Democrat was stepping up his attack on Reagan, Gary Hart was concentrating on the former vice president, cautioning against a "rerun of the 1980 election" in which Mondale ran for vice president with Jimmy Carter.

Mondale, campaigning in San Diego, accused Reagan of blundering in Central America and following a policy that could lead to a "full-scale war" involving U.S. troops.

As all three candidates sought votes west of the Mississippi, Democratic Party Chairman Charles Manatt said he sees "zero" chance that the party's presidential nomination would go to anyone other than one of the three.

Mondale "opened a three-day California campaign by strongly denouncing the CIA-backed mining of Nicaragua's harbors. He also called for the withdrawal of combat troops from Honduras and said future aid to El Salvador should be conditioned on the 'elimination of the death squads and improvement in civil rights and social justice and land reform.'"

He accused Reagan of following a "blundering course" in Central America that was "widening, militarizing and Americanizing the conflict."

Charging that the president and his aides "aren't telling us the truth, Mondale said that if that "pattern of irresponsibility and deception continues, I predict that America could be involved in full-scale war in Central America."

Earlier Thursday, Hart had compared himself to Truman and said "the wrong kind of caution can be dangerous for America."

"We cannot be led forward by those who hold back until consensus forms," Hart told a rally Thursday in Independence, Mo., Truman's hometown.

With a life-size statue of Truman as a backdrop, Hart said, "In the spirit of Harry Truman, let me put this plainly: I don't want the wrong policies of Ronald Reagan by offering failed policies of our own."

Referring to Mondale's run for the vice presidency four years ago, he said,

"Harry Truman saw the imperative of change," he said. "No one better defended the New Deal than he did, but no one better understood the need to move beyond it."

Hart would crack down on Japanese trade

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gary Hart said Thursday that as president, he would crack down on restrictive Japanese trade practices, vowing "to be tougher than anybody we've had, than maybe Harry Truman."

Truman oversaw the final American offensive against Japan in World War II and the subsequent rebuilding of the nation into what has become one of the United States' leading trade competitors.

American presidents, Hart said, "want to crack down on barriers against our products in Japan and elsewhere. They are just not doing it."

At an appearance at a farm outside Kansas City, Hart said the United States needs Japan to defend its interests in the western Pacific.

"Well, they are going to have to defend the western Pacific in their own interest," he said. "We don't need to ease off on unfair trade practices."

In an earlier speech, Hart repeatedly compared himself to Truman, but made no suggestion that he was referring to Truman's decision to drop atomic bombs on two Japanese cities, Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Later, Kathy Bushkin, Hart's spokeswoman, said the senator had no intention to draw any connection between Truman's decision to use atomic weapons for the first time against Japan in World War II and the current controversy between the two nations over trade policies.

"In independence," Hart said, he believes, as did Truman, that "the wrong kind of caution can be dangerous for America."

Opening the second half of his campaign for his party's presidential nomination in Truman's home town, Hart indirectly attacked Walter F. Mondale as a man too timid to make tough decisions.

Poll: Hart bid fading

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Gary Hart's bid for the Democratic presidential nomination is fading because his appeal to independents is not reflected in party primaries, but he still shows more strength against President Reagan than does Walter F. Mondale, pollster Louis Harris said Thursday.

polls say Mondale is very strong among self-identified Democrats, while Hart is strong among Independents.

"Gary Hart has really been running in the wrong primaries," Harris told reporters in a tongue-in-cheek reference to the fact that there are no "independent party" primaries.

A few states do allow independents to vote in Democratic primaries and Hart has done best in those areas.

In Harris' telephone poll of 1,270 likely voters April 5-9 said Democrats back Mondale 63-27 in a two-way matchup with Hart, while independents support Hart 54-42.

Reagan has his own set of problems in this election year, Harris added, saying the GOP incumbent's standing with the public is in danger because of his nomination of Edwin Meese III to be attorney general.

Harris said his national and state

Interest warning issue

DALLAS (AP) — President Reagan, in Texas to celebrate a resurgence in home building, was told by housing industry leaders Thursday that "time is running out" and that the recovery may be killed off by rising interest rates.

During a visit to a construction site and in a roundtable discussion with builders and bankers, Reagan expressed optimism that interest rates will come down again by summer's end, despite what he called an upward recent "furry."

But in a rare public exchange of views with business leaders, Reagan was subjected to some blunt talk about what may lie ahead for the recovery he came to boast about.

His own optimism contrasted sharply with the worried tone of remarks by his "fellow" roundtable panelists. They warned again and again that the notoriously volatile housing industry may soon be choked by continuing high federal deficits, fear of inflation and interest rates that already have begun to cut many would-be home buyers out of the market.

On the second day of a two-day trip to Missouri and Texas to spotlight growth in the economy, Reagan visited a housing development where he told workers building 576,000 homes that the recovery has restored "everyone's dream of wanting to own their own piece of ground and their own house."

"You're out in front of the rest of the United States as to the comeback," Reagan said.

Jackson pans Reagan stand

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson called on Congress Thursday to determine whether President Reagan has committed an impeachable offense by allowing CIA-directed rebels to mine Nicaraguan ports.

"The Congress must show it is at least as serious about stopping the escalating war in Central America as Mr. Reagan is persistent about doing the act of provocation with or without the permission of Congress of the nation."

Defector injured in fall

NEW YORK (AP) — A man using a fire hose to climb down the 23-story Chinese consulate in an apparent defection attempt fell onto an adjacent rooftop and fractured his ankle Thursday when the hose snapped, authorities said.

The man, identified as a Chinese national named Zhang Zhengbo, said he was a dancer, "expressed interest" in political asylum and profusely thanked firefighters who rescued him with a cherry picker, officials said.

He was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, where officials said he would undergo reconstructive surgery and spend about a week recuperating.

Details about Zhang, said to be in his 40s, were sketchy. It was not known whether he lived or worked at the consulate, which represents China's business and commerce interests in the city.

A law enforcement source who asked not to be identified said the man apparently was not an intelligence officer or other high-ranking Chinese official.

"It seems to be some guy who just wants political asylum," said the source, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Federal agents and an interpreter spoke with the man at the hospital, said Joseph Valliquette, an FBI spokesman.

Laure Mahler, St. Vincent's assistant director of public relations, said government officials had told hospital officials the man was a Chinese citizen who "wants to defect."

John Hughes, a State Department spokesman, released Zhang's identity at a news briefing in Washington but refused to say whether he had sought asylum. He said details about the case would not be released in order to protect Zhang's privacy while the Immigration and Naturalization Service handles the matter.

Pageants get FBI warning of fugitive

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — At the request of the FBI, Miss America Pageant officials warned organizers of state contests Thursday to look out for a fugitive posing as a photographer who is wanted in a series of slayings and disappearances of young women.

A letter and an FBI wanted poster for Christopher Bernard Wilder, who is on the bureau's Ten Most Wanted list, were sent to the 51 field executives of the Miss America Pageant, said Albert A. Marks Jr., executive director of the national contest.

"This isn't intended to scare," Marks said. "It's ordinary prudence."

Wilder, 39, is being sought in the murders of three women and the disappearance of four others in Southern and Western states. The Australian-born race car driver also is being sought in the kidnapping of a Florida woman and the stabbing of a 16-year-old girl in upstate New York, authorities said.

Walter Mangiacotti, in charge of the FBI's Atlantic City office, said he asked Miss America officials for help because Wilder "is 'consistent' in seeking out attractive women."

"He poses as a fashion and/or modeling-type photographer," said Mangiacotti, adding that Wilder appears to have "an affinity for shore areas."

Marks said the Toro team executives in each state and the District of Columbia to warn pageant officials at the local and county level about Wilder.

"I don't want to read a story where anybody's hurt, let alone one of our women," Marks said, noting the FBI was "obviously quite concerned."

Harold Glasser, president of Miss Universe Inc., was not in his New York City office Thursday and could not be reached for comment on whether his organization would notify local pageants, his secretary said. Miss Universe Inc. runs the annual Miss Universe and Miss USA pageants.

Wilder is described as white, nearly 6 feet tall, 180 pounds, with a neatly trimmed mustache and beard, thinning brown hair and blue eyes. He has a five-inch scar on his right ankle and is believed to be driving a 1981 Mercury Cougar.

Bus strikes tree, injures 28 riders

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A school bus carrying handicapped children apparently lost its brakes on a hill Thursday and smashed into a large pine tree, injuring all 28 people aboard, officials said.

Police Capt. Connie Pitts said the 26 children, the driver and a adult aide were taken to hospitals "to be safe."

He said their injuries were "nothing life-threatening."

The four hospitals that received the injured described the injuries as cuts, bruises and broken bones.

The bus was delivering the children, who have learning disabilities, to special education classes at different schools.

Broader anti-bias law sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bipartisan legislation to give the widest possible coverage to anti-discrimination laws was introduced in Congress on Thursday, with vocal support from civil rights groups and silence from the Reagan administration.

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., one of the chief sponsors, predicted "overwhelming and speedy passage with or without the administration's support."

One by one, sponsors took turns telling a crowded news conference the legislation would "correct" the mistake of the Supreme Court in a sex discrimination case decided Feb. 28.

In a 6-3 ruling that dismayed women's, civil rights and handicapped-groups—the court said the government may not deprive a college of all its federal aid because it practices sex discrimination in a particular program.

The justices, acting in the case of tiny Grove City College in Pennsylvania, handed down their narrow interpretation to a 1972 law banning sex discrimination at colleges receiving federal aid.

The proposed legislation would clarify not only that statute, but laws protecting the handicapped, the aged and minorities. The language would make it clear they apply broadly to recipients of federal aid, not just to programs or activities.

The administration argued in the Grove City case that a prior decision by the justices supported the narrow focus.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said the administration had no position on the legislation because officials there have not seen its language.

Fifty-six senators, including Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., signed on as sponsors of the Senate bill. Supporters said the House version could receive several hundred sponsors.

Nixon: JFK 'relieved' vote not challenged

By MIKE FEINSLBER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon says he believes John F. Kennedy shared his view that Election Day fraud may have cheated Nixon out of the presidency in 1960 and was "rather relieved" when Nixon told him he would not contest Kennedy's victory.

In another installment of his paid television memoirs, Nixon says he did not challenge the razor-close results in 1960 for the good of the country even though there was "good chance that we could finesse it!" if he had.

He said he may have lost because of "im-mense fraud" in Chicago that tipped Illinois into Kennedy's column and because in many Texas precincts "twice as many voters voted as were on the rolls."

Kennedy won the popular vote by a margin of 114,673 votes out of 68 million cast. Had Nixon carried Illinois and Texas, he would have won the Electoral College.

Nixon said he cannot claim with certainty that election irregularities deprived him of victory because "I haven't the evidence to prove that I was not (the real winner), or was."

"I think President Kennedy felt it was possible, too," Nixon said. "I remember when he came to see me, right after the election, in Florida at the Key Biscayne Hotel, the first words he spoke after the press left and so forth, he says, 'Well, I guess it's hard to tell who won this election. And I said, 'Well, it's pretty clear that it's over now.'"

"I think he was rather relieved when I said that. That meant that, in effect, I was telling him I was not going to contest it."

Nixon tried for the presidency again and won it in 1968 and 1972 only to resign, disgraced by Watergate in 1974.

His comments on the 1960 contest came during a television interview with former aide Frank Gannon that is to be shown Sunday on CBS' "60 Minutes." The network paid Gannon a reported $500,000 and Gannon gave Nixon an undisclosed share.

Kennedy carried Illinois by 8,858 votes and Texas by 46,242. Nixon mentioned South Carolina, which he lost by 5,563 votes, and Missouri, which he lost by 9,983, as other states where recounts could have given him enough electoral votes to win if he also carried Illinois.

Nixon said "many objective observers" thought he was dishonestly defeated in 1960 and outgoing President Dwight D. Eisenhower offered to raise money to pay for a challenge.
"My heart told me to do it, my head said no," Nixon said.

He said he decided against a challenge because the country could not stand to be without a president "for almost a year before the challenges in Illinois and Texas could have been run through" and because he did not want the United States to set a bad example for emerging democracies in underdeveloped countries.

"If, in the United States, an election were found to be fraudulent, it would mean that every pipsqueak in every one of those countries, if he lost an election... would bring a fraud charge and have a coup," Nixon said.

On other topics, Nixon said:
• The Kennedys, "in their own minds, certainly" and in minds of the media, are American royalty. "Nothing else can explain the way that Teddy Kennedy, despite the defeats he has suffered and despite his background, is still a very formidable potential candidate for president of the United States. It's the Kennedy mystique. It's still there. It's going to last as long as one of them is living."

• The Kennedy administration, rather than his own, qualifies as "an imperial presidency." He said of the Kennedys: "They really know how to use power and they used it ruthlessly."

• Robert Kennedy, who was attorney general in John Kennedy's Cabinet, initiated more wiretaps than anyone before or since, and not always for national security reasons. He said a reporter writing a book about Marilyn Monroe was wiretapped "out of fear that something derogatory about the Kennedys might be in the book. He did not identify the reporter."

• He thinks Spiro Agnew, who resigned as vice president in 1973 when he was fined for income tax evasion, took a "bum rap." Nixon said he would have prevented the resignation but he was having his own Watergate troubles. "There was nothing I could do for him," he said. "I only wish I'd been stronger."

Headcount produces curiosities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly four years after the latest national head count, the Census Bureau has issued a "colossal" compendium of the "collective curiosities" it compiled on 226,545,805 Americans.

The 757-page book summarizes 51 volumes of reports published earlier and draws a detailed portrait of the nation's inhabitants in maps, charts and tables.

While the U.S. population now is approaching 235 million, the summary details the findings of the census taken April 1, 1980.

The 1980 census found, for example, that 167,054,639 Americans lived in urban areas on the day of the count, while 59,491,167 made their homes in rural regions. Of the city residents, 47.7 percent were foreign-born, the bureau found, but only 2 percent of country dwellers were born outside the United States.

Here is a rundown of some of the other findings reported in the book, "General Social and Economic Characteristics, United States Summary":

• England figures in the ancestry of more Americans than any other nation. Some 49.6 percent of Americans have at least some English blood. Germany is second at 49.2 percent; followed by Ireland, 40.2 percent; France, 12.9 percent; Italy, 12.2 percent; and Poland, 8.2 percent.

• Foreign-born Americans in 1980 were most likely to come from Mexico. Some 2,199,221 U.S. residents traced their birth to that country, followed by 849,384 from Germany and 842,859 from Canada.

• Five states count at least 15 percent of their residents who speak a language other than English at home. They were New York, California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

• New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island had the lowest birth rates at fewer than 1.2 children per woman.

• Nationally, 66.5 percent of Americans were high school graduates and 10.2 percent had college degrees. The Western states topped both categories, while the South ranked lowest.

Flynt faces mental exam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt was ordered Thursday to undergo a mental examination to determine if he is competent to stand trial in federal court on charges that he shouted obscenities at Supreme Court justices.

U.S. Magistrate Jean F. Dwyer ordered Flynt sent to St. Elizabeths Hospital here even though Flynt told her he had undergone three mental examinations in the past six months.

At a hearing in a heavily guarded courtroom, Mrs. Dwyer said she had read one of the reports, from the federal medical facility in Springfield, Mo.

Mrs. Dwyer set May 30 for a competency hearing.

Rolling back car mileage still common

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although odometer tampering has been illegal for a dozen years, as many as nine of 10 heavily used cars, such as those from leasing companies, may have had their mileage rolled back when resold, federal officials said Thursday.

"As many odometers are being reset today as before the law," Diane Steed, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, told a Senate transportation subcommittee.

Government and industry officials estimated that auto buyers are losing more than $2 billion a year because of false odometer readings. Officials said that "on average, an altered odometer adds $750 to the price of a used car."

The witnesses testified in favor of proposed legislation to require that mileage readings be placed on car titles and that a copy of the previous owner's latest registration card be attached to the new owner's application for registration.

But Joan Claybrook, a consumer activist who headed the traffic safety agency in the Carter administration, said the government should go further and require automakers to make odometers more tamper resistant.

While rolling back odometers probably cannot be prevented through design changes, "you can make it much more expensive, much more difficult and make it noticeable to the consumer."

The safety agency had such a regulation in 1980, during Ms. Claybrook's tenure, that would have required such changes in odometer design, but the rule was rescinded by the Reagan administration.

High court hears plea for 'death, rather than life sentence

BOISE (AP) — For the first time in its history, the Idaho Supreme Court has heard arguments aimed at getting a life sentence in a murder changed to death.

Idaho Solicitor General Lynn Thomas made those arguments Thursday in asking that the case of Dewey Small be remanded to 7th District Court for reconsideration and possible imposition of the death sentence.

The court on Thursday heard a range of arguments stemming from the convictions of Miss Small and Trendy Lynn McKinney in the 1981 shooting death of Robert Bishop Jr. of Blackfoot.

"All arguments were taken under advisement."

Miss Small and McKinney were convicted of first-degree murder in the case. McKinney was sentenced to death. Miss Small received two fixed life terms, which carry no possibility of parole unless her sentence is commuted.

Public cry rising to protect canyons

BOISE (AP) — The debate over how much of the spectacular Owyhee canyons should be preserved as wilderness is continuing with pressure at public hearings building for a plan much vaster than the federal government proposes.

"Let's try, for God's sake and our children's sake, to walk over this ground and leave no tracks," says Jack Trueblood, son of the late outdoor writer and conservationist Ted Trueblood.

Trueblood was among the more than half those testifying in Boise on Wednesday to back an environmentalist proposal to earmark some 1.2 million acres of the high desert country as wilderness, nearly four times the amount proposed by the Bureau of Land Management and almost three times more than the amount of land under review for wilderness designation.

Recalling a summer spent in the Owyhee Canyonlands when he was ignorant of the fragility of the desert, Trueblood said he dug a garden plot to raise vegetables.

"The scar is still there, and I feel guilty when I go there," he said at the hearing.

While the environmentalist plan has been adamantly opposed by ranchers and some other interests, even those groups have endorsed either the BLM or slightly more modest proposals for the region that includes parts of Idaho, Nevada and Oregon.

"We do recommend some form of protection for the Owyhee Canyonland system," said Wally Sterling of the Idaho Trapper Machine Association, which has been opposed in the past to expanding wilderness in a state that already has 3.8 million acres set aside.

"We are more concerned about commercial development than anything else," Sterling said. But he calls for wilderness designation that takes in just under 200,000 acres, a plan that would basically preserve the lands surrounding the isolated, rock-walled Owyhee River canyon.

At the first in the series of hearings Tuesday night in Jordan Valley, Ore., several ranchers and livestock groups endorsed that proposal.

misapplied Idaho's statutes concerning mitigating circumstances.

"Both of these people are equally liable," Thomas said, arguing that Miss Small clearly planned the murder, and enticed McKinney into committing it.

He said that under Beebe's logic, "The district court would find that a person who hired another person to commit a murder would be exempt from the capital penalty."

But Burdick argued that Idaho law does not allow sentences that have been imposed to be changed for the worse upon review.

And she argued that defendants are entitled to an assurance of some finality in a sentence.

Burdick asked the court to change Miss Small's sentence to an indeterminate life term, which carries the possibility of parole.

She said that Miss Small, who is in the women's penitentiary at Carson City, Nev., can be rehabilitated.

Ted Pike, representing McKinney, agreed with Thomas that Miss Small and McKinney share equally liability in the case.

But he said that means that in the interests of fairness, McKinney's death sentence should be overturned.

He said McKinney's sentence is unduly harsh when compared to the life sentence Miss Small received for the same conviction.

Miss Small had also been found guilty of conspiracy to commit murder, and Pike said, "If conspiracy is to be believed, she is as much a participant as Mr. McKinney."

Pike also argued that the trial court improperly allowed certain evidence to be admitted, including admission of hearsay evidence.

He argued that McKinney was at times handcuffed in the presence of the jury, a contention Thomas disputed. And he accused the prosecution of trying to arouse "the passion and prejudice" of the jury.

Citing testimony from a pathologist as to the interval between when Bishop was shot in the chest and when he was shot in the head, Pike claimed that "there is a question all through this record as to who fired the shots into the head of the decedent. Was it Mr. McKinney or was it Dewey Small?"

"The possibility we think is clear that a person other than McKinney could have fired the shots into the head," he said.

Miss Small gave birth to McKinney's baby before she started serving her life sentence. The child, a girl, was adopted by an Idaho family, Burdick said.

'Baby Doe' rules take effect

BOISE (AP) — Emergency rules to comply with the federal "Baby Doe" regulations took effect in Idaho Thursday.

The Idaho Health and Welfare Department has adopted rules that spell out how the agency will respond to complaints alleging abuse or abandonment of children in hospitals, department spokeswoman Linda High said.

The rules were developed in conjunction with the federal Child Abuse, Prevention and Treatment Act. That act requires hospitals to post notices announcing that the facilities may not deny children nourishment or treatment because of existing or anticipated abnormalities.

The law has been dubbed the "Baby Doe" rule after a child whose case has been central in arguments over the federal requirements. Some opponents claim the law infringes on the rights of physicians and parents.

Mrs. High said the emergency rules will be in effect through August. Meanwhile, the Health and Welfare Department will start proceedings for adoption of permanent rules. Those proceedings could include a public hearing.

Mrs. High said the rules are similar to those used for responses to child abandonment and abuse allegations outside of hospitals.

Board responds to criticism

NAMPA (AP) — The local school board, responding to criticism that it failed to give sufficient notice about levy elections, is already beginning to plan the campaign for renewing an existing levy in May 1986.

Superintendent Russell Joki said the board's decision should deter any further criticism about lack of notice.

The board is seeking renewal of its plant facilities levy for financing construction and maintenance projects.

Joki said the district's reserve fund should generate about $1.6 million before expiring with as much as $1 million of that will be needed for repair and expansion of current facilities.

But he said a needed new elementary school costing some $2.5 million cannot be built unless the levy is continued.

Rigby woman dies in wreck

RIGBY (AP) — A 56-year-old Rigby woman has been killed in a two-car collision north of here.

The Jefferson County Sheriff's Department identified the victim as Donnetta Morris. Witnesses told authorities she failed to heed a stop sign.

The Morris car and a vehicle driven by Jackie Sutton, 22, Rexburg, collided on a county road Wednesday. Ms. Sutton was in-fair condition at an Idaho Falls hospital.

Director selected for court

BOISE (AP) — Grant Yee, 42, has been appointed trial court administrator for the 4th Judicial District.

Administrative Judge Robert Newhouse said Yee was selected from 85 applicants. The district includes Ada, Boise, Elmore and Valley counties.

The trial court administrator directs and coordinates the processing of civil and criminal cases throughout the district. He also supervises operations of the Ada County Juvenile Detention Center, the Joint City-County Traffic Facility and county jury operations.

Yee has been assistant court administrator for the district for nine years. Before that, he was administrator for the Ada County Juvenile Center.

Woman suspect given license

BOISE (AP) — A former day-care center operator who police have linked to 20 suspicious fires was issued a state day-care license despite a past record of arrests for arrest and in connection with the death of her own child.

State Health and Welfare officials, who have no authority to run background checks unless applicants agree, said they revoked the license issued to Joyce Riblett, 31, last December after they became aware of her record.

Police arrested Riblett Wednesday after a detective saw a woman ignite the last of five fires set on the back porch of a house in the southeastern section of the city. The fire caused little damage.

But once in custody, authorities said her record showed she had been tried for second-degree murder in the 1976 death of her child and found innocent by reason of insanity by a Louisiana state judge. She was confined in mental institutions both in Louisiana and Idaho until about four years ago.

Trolley could win city aid

CALDWELL (AP) — A trolley replica idled here after the owners decided it was unprofitable could get a boost from the city.

The Caldwell City Council has voted unanimously to apply for a state grant to help fund the trolley's operation. But the council will try to acquire funds only if an organization to operate the trolley is formed outside of city government.

The rubber-tired replica had been a tourist attraction and also was used by senior citizens who needed transportation around Caldwell.

Battle escalates over student fee plan

BOISE (AP) — Campus Republicans fighting what they claim is mandatory student funding for a Ralph Nader-founded organization at Boise State University have enlisted the help of a Denver-based legal foundation.

Annette Glenn, chairwoman of the Idaho College Republicans, said the Mountain States Legal Foundation of Denver has agreed to assist her group in opposing the plan being pushed by the Public Interest Research Group. Organizers of that group, however, say they are just 50 signatures short of having a majority of BSU students backing their plan to include a refundable $3 charge on the basic fees paid by each student at the school. They hope to present the plan to the State Board of Education this spring.

The battle between the two groups, which spilled into the state Legislature this past winter, was waged once before. But four years ago when the Public Interest Research Group submitted a similar plan to the state board, it was rejected and there has been no indication that its fate will change this time.

But Glenn said the legal foundation, co-founded by former Interior Secretary James Watt, has agreed to write the board urging it to maintain that position. The state Legislature also passed a nonbinding resolution stating the same position.

"In the unlikely event that the board would ignore the Legislature and student rights by approving mandatory fees for politics, we're confident the foundation will be willing to represent us in court as well," Ms. Glenn said. She called the fee plan unconstitutional because it forces students who don't believe in the organization to support it.

But Brad Martin, a member of the PIRG organizing committee, said court rulings in other states have upheld such fees. Martin said he believes the proposal "can withstand any and all scrutiny" by the Board of Education.

Horse-club case closed

MOSCOW (AP) — The fourth round of secret testimony into alleged wrongdoing at the Appaloosa Horse Club here has been delayed a month by Latah County Prosecutor William Hamlett.

The magistrate's inquiry — a rarely used judicial process in Idaho that had been scheduled to convene Wednesday — will reconvene May 16. The delay was sought because of scheduling problems and the need for more time to prepare transcripts of previous hearings, Hamlett said.

Hamlett's investigations into horse club activities have centered on allegations that club membership lists — used to mail ballots for elections — were altered, resulting in potentially altered results in several board of director elections as well as a vote to relocate club headquarters to Oklahoma City.

Another vote on the relocation decision earlier this year reversed the 1983 results, yielding the move out of Moscow by a 2-10-1 margin.

Club directors since have hinted at a possible third vote on the issue later in the year.

After the last round of secret hearings in March, a former Appaloosa Club employee was charged with falsifying corporate books. Janis Dian Watts of Pendleton, Ore., later pleaded guilty to reduced charges.

Israel's Shamir wins party backing

By RUTH SINAI
The Associated Press

TEL AVIV (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir won his party's backing Thursday to seek a second term in July national elections, surviving a strong challenge from former Defense Minister Ariel Sharon.

YITZHAK SHAMIR
Low-key style endorsed

ARIEL SHARON
Making a comeback

Sharon received 47 votes or 56 percent from the nominating caucus of the Herut Party's central committee, a party official said. Sharon won 504 votes or 42 percent. Dark horse Aryeh Chertok got eight votes.

Shamir, 63, had hoped for a broad endorsement of his 6-month stewardship and his pragmatic, low-key style of leadership.

Sharon sought, and apparently got, a sufficient show of support to stage a political comeback and win a top job in the next government, should the right-wing Likud coalition be returned to power.

Shimon Peres, 60, was chosen last week by the opposition Labor Party as its candidate for prime minister in the national elections July 23. It is months ahead of schedule. The election became necessary a small group of Likud members voted with the opposition last month to end the government's term early.

Sharon, 56, was forced to step down as defense minister after a government commission accused him of indirect responsibility for the September 1982 massacre of hundreds of Palestinian refugees by Israeli-backed Christian militias in Lebanon.

He remained in the Cabinet, but without a portfolio or real power. The architect of Israel's June 1982 invasion of Lebanon, Sharon repeatedly has denounced the commission's report on the massacres at the Sabra and Chatilla camps in Beirut.

Both contenders voted early. Sharon left the hall shortly after casting his ballot, while Sharon remained to shake hands and lobby for support.

Sharon said, "I think the results of this vote will decide to what extent I can return to the place where the most fateful decisions are made, sometimes about life and death, from which, regrettably, I have been removed." The caucus was opened by central committee chairman Avraham Shechterman, who appealed to former Prime Minister Menachem Begin to resume the leadership of the party.

"Mr. Begin come back to us. We need you," Shechterman said. Begin was not in the hall. He has been in seclusion since last September, when he resigned and was succeeded by Shamir.

While the Herut delegates were meeting in the spacious Tel Aviv Fairgrounds convention hall, members of opposition Labor Party packed into the aging Geli Shem Theater to decide which veteran members of the Knesset, or Parliament, could stand for re-election on the Labor ticket.

Sixteen Labor leaders who served two or more terms in the Knesset needed a 60-percent vote of approval from its 1,200-member central committee to seek another term.

China specialist fills ideological post

MOSCOW (AP) — Oleg Rakhmanin, a 59-year-old China specialist who worked under Yuri V. Andropov in the 1960s, was elected to an ideological post Thursday, Tass reported.

Rakhmanin was elected deputy chairman of the foreign affairs commission of the House of Unions, one of two houses of the Soviet Parliament—the official Soviet news agency said.

Michael S. Gorbachev, at 53 the youngest member of the ruling Politburo, was named chairman of that commission on Wednesday. The chairman's post typically has been held by the party's chief ideologist, who is considered the second most important Kremlin job to general secretary of the Communist Party.

Tass said Vadim Zagladin, first deputy head of the Central Committee's international department, was elected secretary of the commission.

Nicaragua minister in USSR

MOSCOW (AP) — Defense Minister Humberto Ortega of Nicaragua met Thursday with Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov and other officials, Tass reported.

The official Soviet news agency said Ortega, who has been in North Korea, was staying in the Soviet Union on his way to Nicaragua. The report did not indicate that his visit was an official one.

Tass did not carry any report of Ortega's arrival or indicate that Soviet dignitaries met him at the airport, a departure from the usual practice. The news agency said the talks were "friendly" and focused on "questions of mutual interest," but gave no details.

Also at the meeting were Nikolai Ogarkov, the first deputy minister of defense, and Sergei Gorskikh, admiral of the Soviet fleet and a deputy defense minister, Tass reported.

Before leaving Nicaragua for North Korea, Ortega said he would seek "technical and military assistance for our defense" from the U.S., Canada and Soviets. On March 20, a Soviet oil tanker was damaged and five crewmen injured when the ship hit a mine in the harbor of Puerto Sandino, Nicaragua.

The Soviet ambassador to the United Nations has said the Soviet Union would be willing to help Nicaragua sweep its waters of mines deployed by anti-Sandinista rebels who are backed by the United States.

The Soviet Union has not publicly announced military aid to Nicaragua. The U.S. Defense Department says Soviet arms to Nicaragua are funneled through Cuba and other Soviet allies.

Deployment of missiles brings blast

MOSCOW (AP) — The Supreme Soviet closed its spring session Thursday with a denunciation of new U.S. nuclear missiles in Western Europe and approval of a new government under President Konstantin U. Chernenko.

The 1,500-member nominal Parliament also passed a long-debated law that will lower the starting age for school children from 7 to 6 years and increase work training programs in the upper grades.

Chernenko, the Communist Party general secretary who was elected president Wednesday by the Supreme Soviet, took no active role in Thursday's proceedings. The 72-year-old leader smiled and acknowledged the applause with who departs greeted his name each time it was mentioned.

Despair grips Lebanese as civil war enters its 10th year

By STEPHEN K. HINDY
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — After nine years of civil war, most of Lebanon is controlled by foreign armies, the economy is tottering and the resilience of the people has given way to a pervasive sense of despair.

Beirut was the "Paris of the Middle East" before the war, which most Lebanese say began April 13, 1975. On that day, there was a mysterious assassination attempt against Christian leader Pierre Gemayel and a bloody retaliatory attack on a busload of Palestinian refugees.

Today, Beirut is a gallery of the horrors of modern warfare. Its busy commercial center is destroyed. The airport and port are idle.

Analysis

Raw sewage runs through garbage-strewn streets. City electricity is limited to six hours daily.

There is hardly a building unscarred by bullets or shells. People die awful deaths daily. Last Sunday, a Christian family of six was massacred at home in Moslem west Beirut. No one knows why.

Nine years of war have brought changes, most to the detriment of Lebanon's unity. An Arab League-mandated Syrian force controls the north and east. Israel occupies south Lebanon.

The average Lebanese seems convinced of the futility of the fighting but powerless to end it. After some 200 cease-fires and an estimated 100,000 deaths, he or she is skeptical of peace efforts such as the military disengagement deal announced this past Monday.

"The resilience with which the Lebanese have faced the last 10 years of crisis is rapidly wearing out," said a recent U.S. Embassy report.

sectarian feuding has been intensified by the war. The Christians have driven tens of thousands of Moslems from their east Beirut and Mount Lebanon enclaves. The Druse have run the Christians out of the Chouf Mountains.

Some commentators liken the situation to World War II. It was before the 1918-1942 French colonial era, when Ottoman Turks controlled the area and the Christians and Druse had autonomy.

"We took this state from the French mandate, which created it for us, and we couldn't rule and now it is over," said Michel Abu Jaudah, editor of the daily Al-Nahar, in an interview. "But at the same time, no one can get rid of it. No one has an alternative."

Lebanon's warlords were unable to agree on a new power sharing formula at recent talks in Switzerland. The system remains as it has been since 1943 — politically dominated by Christians — even though the Moslems have long since surpassed the Christians as the numerical majority in Lebanon.

Fearful of Moslem fundamentalism, the Christians are, in effect, telling the Moslems that if they do not accede to continued

Christian domination, the Christians will set up their own pro-Western state in east Beirut and Mount Lebanon.

With the disintegration of the Lebanese army in February and the collapse of American efforts to support him, President Amin Gemayel now controls little more than his shell-scarred palace east of the capital.

"It's a vicious cycle — without a cohesive society, you cannot build a strong central government, and without a strong central government, you cannot build a cohesive society," said Adnan Iskandar, chairman of the political science department at the American University of Beirut.

Even in the darkest days of the civil war, the Lebanese nurtured hope that the nightmare would end. Today that hope has almost died.

Druse leader favors Syrian control in embattled Beirut

By FAROUK NASSAR
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Druse chief Walid Jumblatt on Thursday joined other opposition leaders in calling for Syrian troops to intervene in Beirut to end the civil war.

President Amin Gemayel's long-planned summit with President Hafez Assad of Syria appeared delayed once again, and Gemayel met for an hour with U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew.

Police said sporadic sniping and occasional exchanges of mortars and rocket-propelled grenades rocked parts of the mid-city frontier Thursday, the eve of an anniversary of the civil war.

WALID JUMBLATT
Syrians in Beirut

The war broke out April 13, 1975 and the first phase ended Nov. 21, 1976 when the Syrian army rolled into Beirut at the request of Sulaiman Franjeh, then the president of Lebanon.

The Syrians left in September 1982 when the Israeli army laid siege to the Moslem sector but kept an estimated 20,000 troops in the Christian east.

Lebanon, Israel keeps about 15,000 troops in occupied southern Lebanon.

In Damascus on Thursday, Jumblatt told The Associated Press, "The Syrians have intervened in the past and I think for the sake of Lebanon they should intervene again."

Jumblatt, whose militia is supported by Syria, was asked whether he felt Syrian troops ought to move into the Lebanese capital should a newly negotiated agreement to disengage Lebanon's warring factions fall apart.

"I am not optimistic this plan can be implemented," Jumblatt said. He also doubted Gemayel's intentions, saying "a senior Lebanese military official is in Washington negotiating a new arms deal worth $800 million. This is a bad sign."

Opposition leaders have been voicing fears that continued U.S. arm supplies were going to Christian elements of the army and this might encourage Gemayel, a Maronite Christian, to try to stage a counter-attack into west Beirut and the Chouf region.

Former President Franjeh, a Maronite Christian, said Tuesday that a Syrian return to the capital was "the only sensible course of action to stop the fighting" in the renewed civil war.

Grand Mufti Sheikh Hassan Khafed, spiritual head of Lebanon's Shiite Moslem community, and Asssem Kansouh, a Shiite who heads the pro-Syrian Lebanese Bath Party, then voiced their support.

Gemayel administration sources said the return of the Syrians to the capital was unlikely because it could touch off a new confrontation with Israel.

"Syria's occupation of the Bekaa (valley in east Lebanon) is one thing. Syria moving into the capital is another called Beirut... that is a very big decision for them," said one Western official who declined to be identified. "I think they would really think twice."

The Syrians have withheld comment on the issue.

Warring Lebanese factions have agreed on a plan and a timetable to separate their forces along the green line between Christian east and mostly Moslem west Beirut, the Shiite suburbs and the Druse-inhabited hills east of the capital. But no date has been set to begin disengagement.

China claims shellfire cuts down Vietnamese

PEKING (AP) — Heavy shelling by Chinese frontier forces has killed or wounded many Vietnamese troops and destroyed hundreds of military installations, an official Chinese news agency said Thursday.

A diplomat at the Vietnamese Embassy in Peking, who spoke on condition that he not be identified, denied the Xinhua report. "It is nonsense, naturally it is not true," he said.

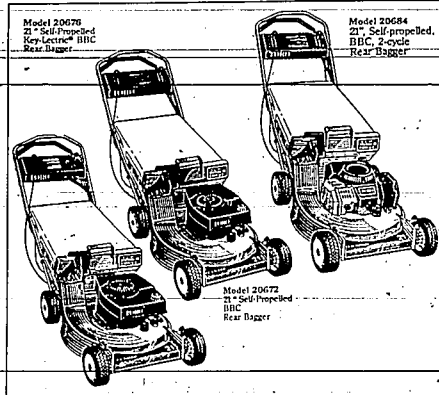

The Chinese news agency said the artillery barrages occurred over the past few days and were in retaliation for persistent Vietnamese provocations.

The Xinhua account said "Chinese frontier guards have over the past few days continued to hit back with artillery fire against armed provocations by Vietnamese troops."

The outbreak of fighting this month has followed weeks of propaganda exchanges between China and Vietnam, which fought a border war in 1979 after Vietnam invaded Cambodia and toppled the Chinese-backed regime of Khmer Rouge leader Pol Pot.

The fighting also coincides with what China claims is a Vietnamese buildup in Cambodia to wipe out Chinese-backed guerrilla bases.

Aussie veterans fight for benefits

By BARRY RENFREW
The Associated Press

SYDNEY, Australia — Many of Australia's Vietnam veterans are fighting to prove they were poisoned during the war by Agent Orange and other toxic chemicals that damaged their health and caused deformities in their children.

They insist they deserve the same benefits as men wounded by gunfire. After years of silence, the government has responded to the charges with an inquiry into the use of chemical defoliants in Southeast Asia. The investigation, which began in January, is expected to take a year.

The Vietnam Veterans of Australia Association, 12,000-strong, contends allied soldiers were routinely exposed to defoliants sprayed by allied planes in Vietnam. Chemical poisoning underlies the physical and mental problems faced by veterans, they say.

The veterans say soldiers who fought in Vietnam are not suffering from delayed reaction to the stress of combat or depression at being shunned by a society that wants to forget the war. What is being diagnosed as emotional problems is neurological and physical damage from herbicides, they say.

"We don't say everything is caused by chemicals. But when we come up with these cancers and deformed children... there were so many chemicals used in such quantities. They must be a factor," John Evans, a retired government chemist working with veterans, told The Associated Press.

Australia sent advisers to the South Vietnam army in the early 1960s and later, when the government became concerned about communist expansion in Asia, sent in army, air force and naval units. Australian forces suffered 494 dead and 2,398 wounded before they were pulled out in 1972.

Many of the 45,000 Australian soldiers who served in Vietnam operated in areas repeatedly sprayed with herbicides, veterans say. Soldiers slept and lay in chemically saturated areas, consuming contaminated water and food, they claim.

Similar complaints are heard in the United States, where thousands of veterans have asked the Veterans Administration to compensate them for physical, mental or emotional disabilities they attribute to exposure to Agent Orange. But the VA says there's still no evidence the substance hurt anyone in Vietnam and is resisting the claims.

A study of 1,045 U.S. Air Force pilots and crewmen, released in February, concluded that men exposed to Agent Orange were not suffering unusually high rates of major diseases. But the study also found unexpectedly high rates of dormant skin cancers, fatigue, anger, fear, anxiety, minor birth defects among offspring and death among infant offspring.

The study found no evidence of unusually high rates of diseases associated with dioxin, the highly toxic substance which was in Agent Orange.

Phil Thompson, head of the Australian association, said a soldier exposed to defoliants and suffering from cancer at the age of 33 should be treated like one crippled by a bullet. "We want them to accept the responsibility of vets who are suffering from these diseases because of chemical exposure," he said. The veterans say victims of chemical poisoning should receive the same benefits as other wounded veterans from full pensions for the disabled to job training programs for those unable to adjust to civilian society.

The inquiry has been told by a succession of witnesses that Australian and other allied troops in jungle operations were sprayed with herbicides during U.S. campaigns to deny cover to communist forces.

Four recreation projects denied state funds

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Four recreation projects in the Magic Valley were denied grants from the state's 1984 share of federal Land and Water Conservation Funds Thursday.

Demand for the money outstripped supply by more than a five-to-one ratio.

The projects left wanting were the Twin Falls city pool, the Twin Falls County Rock Creek Park expansion, Burley's Nielsen Park and the Blaine County Recreation District pool.

The only projects in the area to receive money were a $16,000 addition to Hagerman City Park under the small communities category, and the acquisition of property along the Salmon River near Challis for a new sportsman's access under the annual allotment to the State Fish and Game Department.

Out of 20 projects proposed by small- and medium-sized communities in the state, only three received money.

Grants went to Willow Lane, a multiple-use extension of Boise's green belt, Winton Park in Coeur D'Alene and the city of Salmon's proposed new swimming pool.

Competition for the money was heavy. The state received more than $3 million in applications for its $600,000 federal appropriation, says Jim Paulsen, Chief of the State Parks and Recreation Department's Recreation Resources Bureau.

And there is no real prospect that situation will change next year, he says. "There is a great demand under that program that is not being met," he says. "It is very frustrating to administer a program like that."

The money is distributed among the states from a number of sources, including motorboat fuel taxes, disposal of surplus federal property and oil and mineral leasing receipts.

This year's allocations were approved during a special telephone conference call among the six members of the state parks board Thursday morning. One member of that board is Glen Showmaker of Kimberly.

The Blaine County, Burley, Twin Falls County and Twin Falls City projects were rated four, five, seven and 13, respectively, in their category.

The Hagerman project fell on the line between winning and not winning a grant, in a separate category containing 20 percent of the total state share for communities with less than 5,000 residents.

"It was a longshot going into it," Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney said of the city's efforts to obtain money for the proposed new pool.

But Courtney said the city's plans have changed since the application was submitted this winter, anyway.

Pool plans now hinge on whether the city and School District 411 can reach an agreement on construction of a multi-use athletic complex.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Judy

Felton said the county does not have the money to go ahead with the Rock Creek Park addition on its own. The County had been planning to use the value of land donated from the Twin Falls Canal Co. as its share of the project.

"We will probably refine our application and resubmit it next year," said Felton.

The state board also gave money Thursday to waterways projects. Minidoka County received $4,600 from this source to help pay for a new patrol boat.

Also, the state will order $70,000 worth of docks, manufactured by inmates at the state penitentiary, some of which may be installed at Magic Reservoir or along the Snake River, Paulsen said.

Inmate care brings lawsuit

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—A California county has filed suit to recover $63,162 from Twin Falls County and the state of Idaho for medical care it provided to an Englishman who allegedly wrote a $468 bad check two years ago.

Alameda County, Calif., filed the action last week in a federal court in northern California, said Dennis Voorhees, the Twin Falls County deputy prosecutor.

But Voorhees predicts the "real contest" will be between Twin Falls County and the state because both claim the other is responsible for the costs.

The main character in the litigation is Peter Stanley Shortland, an Englishman arrested on Sept. 6, 1982, in Berkeley, Calif., on a warrant issued by Twin Falls police. Shortland was accused of using a stolen check at a sporting goods store in July 1982.

From Sept. 9 to Dec. 16, Shortland was hospitalized for a circulatory condition at the county hospital, claims George M. Braue, Alameda County deputy attorney. Because of his illness, Shortland couldn't attend hearings on his extradition back to Idaho.

Then on Dec. 16, Twin Falls County notified Alameda County that it had dropped the charge against Shortland and no longer wished to extradite him to Idaho, Braue claims.

The U.S. Immigration Service had become interested in Shortland; who was wanted on charges throughout Europe, Voorhees said. Twin Falls County decided to dismiss the charge and allow Shortland to leave the country, which he did.

Meanwhile, Alameda County had a $63,162 medical bill on its hands. Braue wrote letters to Twin Falls County and the state asking for payment. Based on federal extradition laws, Alameda County could recover costs, he said.

To his inquiries, he received a brief note from the state disclaiming its liability, Braue said.

In his letter to Alameda County, Voorhees said the state should be billed because it was the "demanding authority" under those same federal laws.

Pat Castello, the governor's counsel who was contacted by Alameda County, could not be reached Thursday for comment.

The state Attorney General's office always has provided an opinion of sorts on extradition. Dated Feb. 10, the opinion concluded that the county historically and legally was responsible for the costs of extraditing and housing prisoners.

Voorhees said the opinion has no bearing on the case since it was "partisan," that is, written by one of the parties in the suit.

Twin Falls County and the state now have 20 days to reply to the complaint.

Incumbents to square off

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Incumbent Sens. Claire Wetherell, D-Mountain Home, and Walter Yarbrough, R-Grand View, will likely square off this November for the District 12 Senate seat, representing Elmore County.

The two candidates filed nominating petitions for the post with the Idaho Secretary of State's office Thursday. But their's isn't the only battle of incumbents that will affect Magic Valley representation.

As expected, Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, filed his nominating petition Thursday to oppose Sen. Wes Truon, R-Wendell, for the District 22 Senate seat.

Both contests pit freshmen senators — Wetherell and Truon — against veteran lawmakers. Peavey, minority caucus chairman, will seek his sixth term in the Senate. Yarbrough, chairman of the State Affairs Committee and the state senator with the most seniority, will seek election to his 11th term in office.

Candidates have until Monday to file petitions with the Secretary of State.

Registered and announced candidates for the five districts that represent Magic Valley residents include:

District 12: Elmore and Owyhee counties. In addition to Wetherell and Yarbrough, Rep. Dan Kelly, R-Mountain Home, filed a petition of candidacy for representative seat A — seeking his fifth term in office, this time as a Democrat. Carl Koch, a Hammelt lumber dealer, filed his nominating petition for seat B also as a Democrat.

District 22: Blaine, Camas, Gooding and Lincoln counties. Aside from the Peavey-Truon race, Camas County Democrat Gene Sullivan has filed nominating petition for representative seat A. It is likely he will oppose either Rep. John Brooks, R-Gooding, a five-term lawmaker who chairs the House Agricultural Affairs Committee or Gary Robbins, an announced Republican challenger who is a certified public accountant and dairy farmer from Dietrich.

Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, has filed for representative seat B and has no announced opposition.

District 23: Twin Falls County. Sen.

Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, chairman of the Senate Resources and Environment Committee, and Darroll McRoberts, general manager of the Green Giant Co.'s canning plant in Buhl, have filed as Republicans for Senate seats A and B respectively in this two-senator, four-representative district.

Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls, who is concluding her first term as a state legislator, has announced opposition for representative seat A. Speaker of the House Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, is being challenged in the Republican primary for seat B, however. Retired air force master sergeant and teacher Doug Bashaw has announced his candidacy against Stivers.

Two Republicans and one Democrat have announced or filed their candidacies for representation for Senate seat C. Rep. Roy Brackett, R-Twin Falls, a fifth-term lawmaker who chairs the House Ways and Means Committee, is being challenged by Twin Falls attorney and former magistrate judge Paul Smith in the Republican primary. Buhl engineer Jan van Lindern has announced his candidacy for the post as a Democrat.

Rep. Lawrence Knigge is expected to file his nominating petition for representative seat D. He has no announced opposition.

District 24: Cassia, Jerome and Minidoka counties. Sen. Denton Darlington, R-Deer, continues unopposed in his campaign for Senate seat A in this two-senator, four-representative district.

But former Jerome assessor Bill Kelsey has been challenged for the Republican nomination for Senate seat B — by Paul farmer Lynn Tomninga, who filed Thursday.

Incumbent Reps. Ernie Hale, R-Burley, Vard Chaburn, R-Albion, and Steve Antone, R-Rupert, appear unopposed for House seats A, B and C respectively. Retired Jerome rancher, Waldo Martens filed Thursday for representative seat D. He is likely to oppose Rep. Gordon Hillfield, a five-term Republican from Jerome, for the seat.

District 25: Blaine, Camas, Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka and Twin Falls counties. Larry Anderson, who co-owns an ad of Rep. George Hansen's books on the In-

Speaker targeted

Evans, Stivers clash on primary; Evans cited as having Hansen

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Speaker of the House Tom Stivers says the Idaho Legislature won't meet in special session today primarily because of Gov. John Evans' concern for Rep. George Hansen.

Stivers told the Twin Falls Republican Central Committee Wednesday he had asked Evans that morning to call the Legislature into a one-day special session today to move the date of the Idaho primary election from May to August.

Stivers says that change is needed because recent legislative and judicial actions affecting reapportionment have caused confusion among candidates, voters and election officials.

The Twin Falls Republican says Evans, a Democrat, objected to the proposed special session because of the effect a change in the primary date would have on the 2nd Congressional District Republican primary race between Hansen and Jerome County Prosecutor Dan Adamson.

"He said, 'It would not be fair to George Hansen,'" Stivers recalls of Wednesday's telephone conversation with Evans. "And he said 'Tom, I'm sure you'd agree to that because it would give Dan Adamson too much of an advantage over George.'" Stivers said during a telephone interview Thursday.

Jean Terra, Evans' press secretary, called Stivers' recollection of that telephone conversation "a little bit of a slanted version."

Terra says Evans has been informed of Magic

REP. TOM STIVERS
Delay needed to end confusion

Valley-based support for delaying the state's primary election to improve Adamson's chances to beat Hansen in the primary. "The governor said the change in the primary date should not be used in that manner — to enhance one candidate's chance over another," Terra said.

Terra adds that the governor is supporting Rick's College Professor Richard Stallings, a Democratic candidate, for the post.

Stivers acknowledges Adamson's chances for winning the primary.

"It would give Adamson more exposure," he says, "but that's not the reason I wanted the date moved to August."

"I've always supported George Hansen before," Stivers says, but adds "I'm not going to support him if he's in prison."

Adamson's campaign manager, Rich Hendricks, says neither the challenger nor his organization has sought to have the primary date moved. "We've looked at it. I think it would help us," he says.

But Hendricks says "there are advantages both ways. We would like more time in the general election than in the primary." He says the Idaho Democratic Party would probably prefer to run Stallings against Hansen than against Adamson.

"They've got a story to tell there. With us, it's Mr. Clean," he says.

"I don't think the governor would allow that to influence his decision," Hendricks said of any prospective decision on a special session to move the primary date back to August.

But if the regularly-scheduled May primary date is more of benefit to Hansen than to Adamson, Evans' reported reluctance to reschedule the preliminary contest could be considered consistent with the best interests of Democratic challenger Stallings.

"I think we'd all rather see that," Idaho Democratic Party Chairman Mel Morgan says of a Hansen-Stallings race in November's general election.

Primary opponent says Stivers moving 'too far from the people'

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Retired Air Force master sergeant and teacher Douglas J. Bashaw is seeking to unseat Speaker of the House Tom Stivers in the May 22 primary election.

"I have found that Mr. Stivers, in his industrious search for power in government... has moved a little too fast and a little too far from the people who elected him," Bashaw, 61, said in an interview Thursday.

But Bashaw, a Twin Falls resident, says his campaign will be one of issues — not one of personalities.

"It is not (a case of) running against the speaker," he says. "This is not a personal race. It is a race of political philosophy."

Bashaw emphasizes his belief in the concept of "popular sovereignty," which he defines as "the right of the people to control their own destiny."

He says an example of the electorate being denied that control occurred during the past legislative session on the issue of a state lottery.

"There is substantial support for a state lottery, and there is also substantial opposition," he says. "The only way to find out what people believe is to put it to a vote," he adds.

Stivers was among the most vocal of opponents of the many lottery proposals that surfaced in the 1984 legislative session.

Bashaw says popular sovereignty was also challenged by efforts of agricultural and industry groups to make the process more difficult for groups attempting to place initiatives on the state's ballot.

"It is not too difficult to get an initiative on the ballot," he says in response to the argument used by the Idaho Farm Bureau and the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry to promote two proposals to make initiative efforts more difficult.

Both of those proposals were approved by state lawmakers — Stivers favored both — but both were vetoed by Gov. John Evans.

Bashaw calls the processes of initiative, referendum and recall, "the right of the people."

He says, if elected, he'll lay down his personal philosophy "to fit the philosophy of the people I represent."

Bashaw also says he thinks Idaho's cities and counties have been refused the autonomy they need to provide the services required of local governments because of the state's control over the "purse strings."

Bashaw, a Minnesota native, was raised in Oregon and has lived in many corners of the globe, including Panama, Nicaragua and Alaska. He says his experience as a teacher in Kimberly and Filer has given him insight into the concerns of Twin Falls County residents.

Cassia schools ask additional levy

By SARAH MURPHY
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The Cassia County School Board is once again going to voters to try and solve its financial needs.

Wednesday's meeting, the board set May 15 as the election date for a $475,000 supplemental levy.

The move comes just weeks after the defeat of an $8.5 million bond issue. The board Wednesday indicated it does not have enough money to satisfy the acute educational and maintenance needs of the district.

Also on the May 15 ballot will be a $185,000-per-year plant facilities levy.

School Superintendent Norman Hurst says the $475,000 override levy is a 5 percent increase over last year's override allocation. He says the money is needed to allow the district to maintain and operate its schools.

Hurst said the override money would go into the district's general fund, which provides for the basic operating costs, such as textbooks and teaching supplies.

The override levy can be passed by a simple majority vote, said Hurst; it is presented only on a one-year basis.

On the other hand, the plant facilities levy requires a two-thirds majority vote to pass. It is being presented this year to extend the maintenance operating funds for school buses and general repairs for another 10 years.

The present funds were provided by district voters in a levy election in 1973 and will run out at the end of this school year, said Hurst.

Since the $185,000 levy will be an extension of funds already in use, taxpayers will not be significantly increasing the amount of taxes they are already paying if the levy should pass, said Hurst.

Bar fight, B-B gun shooting lead to suits

TWIN FALLS — Injuries that resulted from a bar fight and the firing of a B-B gun were the basis of two lawsuits filed last week in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls.

Clarence N. Piccard, who resides in Twin Falls County, is seeking $240,000 from Robert Latham and his son, Robert Jr., of Twin Falls. Piccard, who is part-owner of the Royal Lounge in Twin Falls, claims that on the evening of Dec. 22, 1982, a disagreement arose between some patrons and the bartender. He attempted to quell the quarrel, but the younger Latham "interfered" and struck one of the bar employees, Piccard states in his claim.

When Piccard ordered Robert Latham Jr. to leave the bar, he was confronted by an "argumentative" Latham senior. The elder Latham then hit his left eye and caused loss of substantial vision, Piccard claims.

Piccard also accuses the younger Latham of striking him in the jaw, resulting in injury and "humiliation."

Besides damages, Piccard is seeking attorney fees and costs.

In another case, Jerald G. and Sharon Wachal, who reside southwest of Twin Falls, have filed a $630,000 lawsuit against a minor, Charles McCall.

Mr. and Mrs. Wachal claim their minor son, Douglas, had visited McCall on Aug. 26, 1983, at his residence. During the visit, Douglas Wachal was struck in the eye with a BB fired from an airgun by McCall, the suit alleges.

The injury resulted in the permanent loss of their son's left eye, the couple claim.

Mr. & Mrs. Wachal are demanding a jury trial.

Hearing set for alleged gunman

JEROME — A preliminary hearing scheduled for Timothy Ager, 25, one of two Washington men charged with a shooting spree in Jerome and Twin Falls counties last month, was canceled Tuesday.

Court officials said Ager waived the preliminary hearing shortly before it was to take place in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Jerome.

Ager, who is represented by Attorney Robert Galley of Twin Falls, is in the Jerome County jail in lieu of $250,000 bond. He is charged with four counts of aggravated assault with intent to commit a serious felony, battery, burglary and grand theft.

Ager and a companion, Jeffery Morris, 26, both of Washington, were arrested following a chase Thursday the two-county area. During the incident, one officer was wounded and several injured persons in what vehicle windshield were struck by bullets.

Both suspects also are wanted in Washington and other states on armed robbery charges.

Burglary investigation goes on

JEROME — Investigation into the safe burglary at the Travelers' Oasis restaurant and store near Eden Monday has moved into Nevada.

Sheriff Elza Hall said two of his officers were in Nevada Wednesday to question a group of possible suspects. He said officers there stopped 12 vehicles and 16 people, all women and children except for one man. The vehicle and individual descriptions fit those given Jerome County officers by witnesses at the store in Oasis Monday.

Shortly after the group, described as gypsies, left the store in several vehicles, it was discovered the safe had been opened and one money bag containing an undisclosed amount of cash and checks was missing.

Hall said Chief Deputy Larry Webb and Deputy Jeff Poole were questioning the individuals in Las Vegas about the missing money bag Wednesday and planned to also check out leads in Utah before returning home late today.

Health agency ponders changes

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Health Systems Agency will hold a special meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Twin Falls to discuss how the regional advisory councils should be changed.

The way the statewide agency's purpose and direction are changing also will be discussed at the meeting. It will be held at the Region IV Development Association at 1300 Kimberly Road.

Truck strikes, kills 120 sheep

RUPERT — A dump truck killed 120 sheep Wednesday afternoon on a county road four miles east and one mile north of Rupert, according to the Idaho State Police.

At 3:16 p.m., a truck driven by Verio Wickard, 35, of Rupert, was driving over a rise when it collided with sheep standing in the road, the state police report.

The sheep were owned by Henry Eichevery of Rupert. The amount of loss was estimated at $8,000.

Woman hurt in three-car crash

JEROME — A 58-year-old woman was hospitalized Thursday afternoon after three cars rear-ended each other on Highway 179 in front of Cindy's Restaurant near Jerome.

Thelma Fink of Gooding, who was a passenger in a car driven by her husband, was reported Thursday evening in stable condition at St. Benedict's Family Medical Center.

According to an Idaho State Police report, 54-year-old Richard Fink's car was southbound on the highway at 12:40 p.m. When he stopped to turn into the restaurant, his auto was struck in the rear by a vehicle driven by Larry Ernest Floyd, 36, of Jerome. Floyd's car then was struck by a vehicle driven by Robert Reid Larsen, 17, of Jerome.

Mrs. Fink was the only person injured in the collision. Floyd and Larsen were cited for following too closely, the report states.

There was $1,700 damage to Fink's vehicle, $350 to Floyd's and $400 to Larsen's.

Community-action election set

JEROME — Two people who will represent low-income families on the board of the South Central Community Action Agency will be elected Tuesday in Jerome.

One will fill a regular two-year term and another is needed to complete a term for a board member who resigned, said Mary Lee Pfeiffer, the SOCCA specialist for Jerome County. Two alternates also will be elected.

The board members will represent low-income families in Gooding, Camas, Lincoln, Jerome and Blaine counties.

The people elected to the board do not have to be low-income, but they must be aware of problems facing low-income families, Pfeiffer said.

The election will be held at the agency office, at 226 N. Lincoln St. at 1 p.m.

The 18-member South Central Community Action board also includes people who represent the public sector, such as county officials, and the private sector, which includes civic groups and churches.

The board governs the agency, which offers such diverse services as the Head Start program, Winterization and Low-Income Emergency Assistance programs and food distribution.

Correction

HAZELTON — Because of incorrect official reports given to The Times-News, a story in Tuesday's edition said that a foreclosure by Idaho First National Bank had forced occupants to move from a farm where 14 animals later were found dead in a corral.

Actually, renter Ronald Sellers left the farm early in December when his lease was not renewed by the owners, property managers and Jerome County Sheriff Elza Hall said. Officials from Idaho First also said Thursday that the bank does not hold any mortgage to the farm. Idaho First also has not exercised any liens in connection with production loans extended to Sellers, said Bernice Simmons, assistant manager of the bank's Hazelton branch.

Hall said interviews with Sellers and other witnesses indicated the animals died during the severe

Crenshaw leading Masters

By BOB GREEN
AP golf writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Ben Crenshaw played an almost errorless 5-under-par 67 and took the lead, one stroke in front of Lee Trevino, after the first round of the 48th Masters golf tournament Thursday.

"It was a very good round of golf today," said Crenshaw, "so often a challenger but not yet a winner in golf's Big Four events."

"But," said the man who is noted among his peers as one of the finest putters in the game, "it could have been better."

"I felt like I left a few shots out there. It easily could have been two or three shots better—and that's conservative."

He hit 17 greens, reached two par-5s in two and did not make a bogey. The problem, said Crenshaw, lay with the putter, often the most potent weapon in his arsenal. This time, however, he made only two putts longer than 30 inches.

"I'm perplexed," said Crenshaw. "I had the putts at the right angle. I was putting from where I wanted to be. But I just missed 'em. The putter hasn't been that good this year."

Trevino, like Crenshaw fascinated with the possibility of winning this title — which ranks with the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA as the game's major events — scattered seven birdies across his card in a swaggering, arm-swinging journey over the rolling hills of Augusta National.

It was, he said, his best effort ever over the course he once vowed he'd never play again.

But Trevino, 44, a runnerup in the Tournament

Players Championship, said he's changed his mind and now ranks a victory in the Masters as one of his prime goals.

"After the way I played the last three rounds in the TPC, I reached way back and decided there's no place I can't play," he said.

The international group of four at 69, one back of Trevino and two behind Crenshaw, included Tom Purtzer, Mark Lye, the Japanese veteran Isao Aoki, and David Graham.

Graham, an Australian now living in the United States who has scored previous victories in the U.S. Open and PGA, had a share of the lead until he drove into the woods on the 18th, rattled around in the trees for a while and emerged with a double bogey-8.

Ray Floyd, a former winner here, holed out from the fairway for an eagle-2 on the 14th and topped the group at 70.

Also at that figure were George Archer, Tom Kite, two-time U.S. Open champion Irvie Tjirk, Nick Faldo of England and Gary Koch, the only two-time winner on the PGA Tour this season.

There were some other late challengers. But they found that Augusta National, wet from early-week rains but still possessing very fast greens, was not completely without its teeth.

Gary Player, the South African who has won this title three times, once got to four under for the sunny day. But he played the next two holes three over and drifted back, finishing with a 71.

And there was portly Billy Gasper, now a regular on the Seniors Tour and the winner of this tournament 14 seasons ago. He got it four under par for a while — then ran afoul of the little 18th.

He hit into a bunker on the par-3 hole, skulled the sand shot into the pond, played another into the bunker — and eventually wandered away with a quadruple bogey-7. He had a 73.

But they were not alone in their difficulties.

Arnold Palmer, 54, the first four-time winner here and competing for the 30th time in this event, struggled to a 77.

U.S. Open champion Larry Nelson couldn't recover from a double bogey on the first hole and shot 76.

Tom Watson, a five-time British Open title-holder and one of the pre-tournament favorites here, did not make a birdie in his round of 74. Hal Sutton, the current PGA champion, had the same. So did Johnny Miller, who is on the mend from injuries sustained last week in an auto accident.

Jack Nicklaus, who counts five Masters among his record collection of 17 major professional titles, was three over par after four holes and had to rally to salvage a 73. Defending champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain also was one over par.

Crenshaw, winner of nine tour events, has had two runner-up finishes in the Masters, twice was second in the British Open, once led the PGA in a playoff and had a chance to win the 1975 U.S. Open. All escaped him.

And Crenshaw, an acknowledged expert on the history of golf, has admitted that his fascination with the majors may have, in the past, interfered with his performance.

"This time, however, he took a different approach. "I've never masked my feelings about the game, about the history of the game, about my love for it," he said.

No clear-cut Northside boys winner

Bliss girls win in convincing style

CAREY — The Bliss girls were convincing in winning the girls' division but there wasn't really a clear-cut advantage owned among the boys in the Northside Conference's weekly all-conference meet.

The Bliss girls, getting double wins in the Northside Conference's weekly all-conference meet, piled up 120 points to leave Carey well back in second place at 92. But the boys' division was 17 points covering the first six places. Mackay wound up with the crown with 801 over host Carey, which went without senior sprinter Brad Tinney who was making a basketball visit to Ricks College.

Mackay was led to the boys' crown by triple winner Lloyd Rosenkranz who took the high hurdles, 400-meter dash and long jump. His 15.1 time in the high was the best individual effort of the day.

Ritchie Graves took both the short sprints to lead Bliss to a third-place finish with 70 points while Mark Conrad topped Carey's runner-up effort with victories in the high jump and shot put.

Hobby claimed the short sprints in helping the Bliss girls to their team title. Camas County's Marge Lemons again had her rare double — the 3200-meter run and the 3000-intermediate hurdles.

All of the Magic Valley teams participating will take part in the Magic Valley Classic at Jerome Tuesday. Carey will host the Northside Conference finals on April 26 and a new addition — a special meet for qualifying for district — the first week of May.

Turnaround

Seattle sprints to 6-1 mark in hot start on home field

By JIM COUR
AP sports writer

SEATTLE — In one of baseball's most surprising turnarounds, the Seattle Mariners are off to a blazing 6-1 sprint out of the gate, the best start in the American League franchise's eight-year history.

"We're doing some pretty good things, even when we're doing some pretty bad things," says Manager Del Crandall.

The Mariners were baseball's worst team last season, dropping 102 games. Owner George Aronson incurred the local fans' wrath by firing skipper Rene Lachemann and replacing him with Crandall in June. He then fired Dan O'Brien, his president and general manager, at the end of the season.

Seattle now goes on the road, after its first seven at home.

The fifth straight win came Wednesday night, 5-0 over the Red Sox. Crandall, who noted the club had its first winning spring-training ever and taken seven of its last nine Cactus League starts.

On Wednesday, veteran Al Cowens demonstrated the hustle that has characterized Seattle. In the fourth inning of a scoreless game, he came up with runners on first and second and hit a grounder to second baseman Larry Remy that looked like a sure inning-ending double play.

But Cowens he beat the throw and rookie Alvin Davis followed with a three-run homer.

"Cowens' hustle was what got our entire spring training and preparation for this season was all about," said Crandall. "His effort was our entire message in one play. It's what we've got to have if we're going to succeed and it is uplifting to see it work like that."

The pitchers have allowed only 21 earned runs in the first seven games, with 13 coming in the lone defeat — a 13-5 setback in the season's second game.

And the Mariners are finding ways to win — even when they don't deserve to. They made four errors last Sunday against Milwaukee — and won 5-1.

They departed Thursday with a team batting average of .294, 54 points higher than last season. Seattle averaged 4.6 runs in its first seven games, compared to an average of 3.4 runs last season.

The success has come despite the absence of three players who figured to be regulars.

Rookie Darnell Cole, expected to be the third baseman, has been sidelined with strained ligaments in his left hand. He has been shipped to the minor leagues for rehabilitation.

First baseman Ken Phelps hit two home runs in the first three games but on the disabled list with a broken finger in his right hand. Veteran David Henderson has lost his centerfielder's job to rookie Phil Bradley, a one-time Missouri quarterback.

Understandably, Boise State lost what gumption it had left over from that inning and saw three of its batters be put out in as many trips to the plate. Carter struck out three batters in the final inning, giving away only one hit. Boise State salvaged what was left of its pride by earning a double play on a second-and-first plate matchup to end the game.

Taking the lopsided win for CSI was Charlie Carter. The loss was credited to Schaffer.

CSI's next test is today at 4 p.m. with Treasure Valley Community College. Tim Peters will take starting mound honors. A doubleheader with TVOJ is scheduled for Saturday at Frontier Field beginning at noon.

CSI's biggest inning, though, was the fifth after Boise State switched pitchers. With Este now in the game the Eagles ran rampant, starting with a double by Crayor. Jensen then

Eagles bombard BSU club squad

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — CSI outslugged and outpitched Boise State University in every inning to complement efficient fielding, smothering the club team 26-6 Thursday night.

BSU's Terry Schaffer and Jack Este absorbed the onslaught, in which the Broncos in return were held to zeroes in four of the seven innings.

"You just hate to beat a team by 20 runs," said Eagle Coach Jim Walker. "Sure, it was good to see us hitting the way we did, but in the long run it doesn't help us. I have yet to really see us play with real poise in tight situations."

The Eagles may not have tested their nerve in that manner but Jeff Leake and Blake Jensen must've had a heck of a good time at the plate. Leake in the first inning belted a homer worth two RBI's to put the Eagles in front 3-1.

Blake's moment in the sun came in the bottom of the third when he repeated Leake's feat by bringing in Jim Crayor and Frank Miller.

CSI's biggest inning, though, was the fifth after Boise State switched pitchers. With Este now in the game the Eagles ran rampant, starting with a double by Crayor. Jensen then scored Jeff Schow with a blast to left field.

The left fielder's plights were just beginning. Leake, sensing a soft spot in Boise's deep area, sent another ball sailing to the left corner to lock on a couple more runs for the Eagles.

Schow doubled, sending in the inning's final two runs. Mercedly, Blake Jensen was thrown out at first to end the eight-run spree.

Boycott emotional subject

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Four years later, the United States' boycott of the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow still is an emotional subject.

William E. Simon, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, calls the decision "tragic." USOC executive director F. Don Miller said he "never had a more exciting experience in my life."

Carol Brown, a rowing competitor who was deprived of perhaps her only chance to participate in an Olympics, said she remains "bitter" about the boycott, which she and other athletes feel "didn't accomplish anything it set out to do."

If there is a lesson to be learned from the boycott, it is, as Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee president Ueberroth said last week, "Boycotts don't do anything but hurt athletes."

Under pressure from President Carter, the USOC's House of Delegates voted by a 240-1 margin here on April 12, 1980, not to send its athletes to the Moscow Games in protest of the Soviet Union's military presence in Afghanistan. A similar boycott by African nations protesting the racial policies of South Africa was at the 1976 Summer Games in Montreal. Neither protest produced the desired changes.

"1980 had no effect on Afghanistan," said Ueberroth. "1976 had no effect on apartheid."

Nevertheless, Simon, the former Treasury Secretary in the Nixon and Ford administrations, swayed many votes that day by urging the USOC delegates to support Carter's proposed boycott. Walter Mondale, who was vice president, had carried Carter's message to the delegates, but it was Simon's stirring 20-minute plea that many delegates felt made the difference.

"I deplore the use of the Olympics as a foreign-policy tool," Simon now says, "but I felt it behooved all Americans to stand behind the president. I felt it was our patriotic duty. I gave a speech asking that we support President Carter on this issue, and it was overwhelmingly approved — tragically."

"I don't think anything will wash away completely the bitter taste of the boycott. For the athletes who had only one shot at competing, it was tragic. And the decision still asks the crew of the International Olympic Committee; they are incredibly disappointed in the United States."

Miller said the months leading up to the boycott vote represented "the most disappointing period of my life. I went through two World Wars, and I've never had a more exciting experience in all my life. There were so many conflicting factors. Congress voted almost unanimously that we shouldn't go, and 72 percent of the American public agreed. On the other side was the Olympic movement, which is supposed to be above political considerations, and the athletes, the pain they suffered."

In general, the athletes accepted the decision gracefully. Some were angry, some cried openly. Others, like Brown, were disbelieving.

"I remember when Carter first proposed the boycott in February," said Brown, 31, of Seattle. "We all sort of ignored it, felt it was ridiculous. It couldn't happen. We were training in Europe when the final decision was made, and even when they put us on a plane to come home we still believed there was a chance."

Anty Toro, a U.S. canoe coach and four-time Olympic competitor who serves on the USOC's Athletes' Advisory Council, is still angry about the decision.

Schaffer (26) and Wood (20) were the only pitchers to pitch in the game. Carter (18) and Schaffer (18) were the only pitchers to pitch in the game.

Dantley scores 31 points to propel Jazz to championship

By The Associated Press

Adrian Dantley scored 31 points and Darrell Griffith became the National Basketball Association's best three-point scorer in one season Thursday night as the Utah Jazz beat the San Diego Clippers 115-94 to clinch the Midwest Division championship.

The Jazz, which raised its record to 45-36, earned its first-ever divisional title after a second-place Dallas loss 111-107 on Monday.

Roy Turner III scored 20 points and Thurl Bailey scored 20. Griffith had 19 and guard Green 17 as the Jazz broke an 82-78 third-quarter edge by as many as 14 points in the fourth quarter en route to winning the first division championship in the franchise's 10-year history.

San Diego got 17 points from Ricky Pierce and 16 from Bill Walton.

Griffith hit his 91st three-point goal of the season to top 200 by the third quarter to break the mark of 90 set by Brian—23:38—Taylor in 1978-1980. He received a foul during overtime from a not-crowd of 12,687 and threw the game ball.

In addition, two free throws by Dantley at the outset of the third quarter gave him over 800 for the season, only the fourth time an NBA player has done that.

Utah led 28-23 at the end of the first quarter. The Jazz, using its transition offense to maximum efficiency in the second quarter, raced to a 61-46 halftime lead. The Clippers, meanwhile, shot just 37 percent for the quarter.

But San Diego outscored the Jazz 15-6 in the first 7:10 of the third quarter. The Clippers cut Utah's lead to 67-61 on two free throws by James Donaldson. San Diego narrowed it to two points on Terry Cummings' baseline shot with four minutes left in the quarter. But Utah wound up with an 82-78 advantage.

Kings 71, Spurs 102

At Kansas City, Eddie Johnson scored 16 of his game-high 31 points in the fourth quarter to help the Kansas City Kings register a 114-102 victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

The victory keeps alive the Kings' slim hopes for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Western Division. Kansas City must win its final game and the Golden State Warriors must lose two of their three remaining games for the Kings to earn the final berth.

The Kings held an 85-84 lead heading into the fourth quarter when Johnson took control of the game. He scored the Kings' first 14 points of the quarter as Kansas City opened a 99-90 lead with 7:43 left and never trailed.

The Spurs scored the next two baskets to cut the lead to 99-94, but that was as close as they could get.

The Kings led 33-21 at the end of the first quarter, but Mike Mitchell and Ediger Jones teamed up for 18 points in the second period to cut Kansas City's lead to 60-58 at the half.

Suns 119, Clippers 118

At Phoenix, Larry Nance sank a free throw with five seconds left to give the Phoenix Suns a 119-118 victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

The loss kept Dallas from clinching the No. 4 berth in the Western Conference playoff race while Phoenix won its season-high fifth straight game.

Trailing 90-87 after three periods, the Suns tied it on Walter Davis'

The lead then saw-sawed with the score tied eight times — the last at 118-118 on Rolando Blackman's stuff with 15 seconds left.

After Nance's foul shot, the Mavericks set up a last second play but Pat Cummings botched an easy layup from underneath the basket as the buzzer sounded.

Mark Aguirre, the NBA's second-leading scorer, finished with a game-high 34 points but only two coming in the fourth period. He had 13 in the first period for a 29-22 Dallas lead and 20 by halftime as the Mavericks led 58-50 at intermission.

Alvan Adams had 13 of his 25 points for Phoenix in his first start.

Unbeaten Tigers extend winning streak by downing Texas

By The Associated Press

Detroit's Jack Morris is glad that his personal brush with history is now taking a back seat to the Tigers' triumph over Texas.

Alan Trammell, Chet Lemon and Lou Whitaker hit home runs as Morris and the unbeaten Tigers defeated Texas 5-4 Thursday, extending Detroit's winning streak to seven games, the best start in the club's 84-year history.

"The Tigers' best previous start was 6-0 in 1911.

"The record speaks for itself, we're not going to worry about it. We want eight now. We're playing again Friday. We want to win that one, too."

Morris, 3-0, in his first start since his no-hitter last Saturday in Chicago, pitched a single to leadoff hitter Mickey Rivers on a 2-2 pitch, "one minute into the game."

"I got kind of lucky," Rivers said. "But I was pretty sure he wasn't going to pitch another hitter."

Morris allowed seven hits, struck out two and walked one in seven innings. He got "reel help" from Aurelio Lopez and Willie Hernandez.

Baseball

"I didn't have the greatest stuff today," Morris said, laughing. "But, I'm a crafty son of a gun with six runs out there. A good pitcher is supposed to win on the day when he doesn't have his best stuff. There's a lot of confidence among out pitchers, knowing that sooner or later our team is going to get them some runs."

Angels 3, A's 2

At Oakland, Doug DeGisi stretched his hitting streak to eight games and Gary Pettis had a double and scored two runs as the California Angels edged the Oakland A's 3-2.

California left-hander Geoff Zahn, in his first start of the season after two months on the disabled list with a pulled right muscle, scattered eight hits in 6-2-3 innings, struck out four and didn't walk anyone in picking up two points on Terry Cummings' baseline shot with four minutes left in the quarter.

Dave Kingman's towering homer to left after Bruce Boche's single in the seventh inning was the only extra-base hit off of Zahn. After Mike Heath singled with two outs, Jim Slaton relieved Zahn and got pinch-hitter Gary Hancock to pop up and end the threat.

Twins 3, Yankees 0

At New York, Mike Smithson and Ron Davis combined on a six-hitter, and the Minnesota Twins struck together five straight hits with two out in the second inning to beat the New York Yankees 3-0.

Smithson, at 6-foot-8 the tallest player in the majors, yielded a leadoff single to Omar Moreno in the first inning, a one-out double to Roy Smalley in the second and then held the Yankees hitless until Willie Randolph opened the sixth with a single.

Tim Laudner's sharp single produced one run, and Gaetti scored on Lenny Faedo's bloop double over first, Darrell Brown's single made it 3-0, but left fielder Don Mattingly cut Faedo down at the plate for the final out. Other than the second inning, the Twins did not get a runner beyond first base.

Padres 6, Braves 1

At San Diego, Kevin McReynolds homered to lead off the bottom of the seventh inning, snapping a 1-1 tie and sparking the San Diego Padres to a 6-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

The Padres continued the best start in their history in running their record to 7-1 while the Braves lost their third straight.

McReynolds lined the first pitch by Pete Falcone, 0-2, in the seventh inning over the right field fence for his second homer of the year. Luis Salazar then singled, was sacrificed to second and scored on Garry Templeton's single for a 3-1 lead.

San Diego added three runs in the eighth as Tony Gwynn led off with a single, chasing Falcone. Steve Garvey singled off reliever Donnie Moore and Terry Kennedy followed with a two-run double. Kennedy took third on the throw home and then scored on Moore's wild pitch.

Wrist shot gives Capitals victory

By The Associated Press

Craig Laughlin flicked in a wrist shot as he fell to the ice with 1:02 remaining Thursday night to give the Washington Capitals a 3-2 triumph over the New York Islanders in the opening game of their National Hockey League playoff series.

The Quebec Nordiques, Edmonton Oilers and Minnesota North Stars took 1-0 leads in their division final series.

Quebec downed the Montreal Canadiens 4-2, Edmonton stopped the Calgary Flames 5-2 and Minnesota edged the St. Louis Blues 2-1.

The second games of the best-of-seven series will be played Friday night at the same sites as the opening games.

With Islander defenseman Denis Potvin draped all over him, Laughlin fanned on a shot with the score tied at 2-2. Then, as he fell to the ice with 1:01 left, he held his stick and managed to flick the puck over goalie Billy Smith's right shoulder.

The Washington victory came after the Islanders jumped out to a 2-0 lead on goals by rookie Pat Flatley and Mike Bossy. Therin Alan Hawthorth scored just 85 seconds into the game, which knotted the score at 2-2 in the third period, setting the stage for Laughlin's winner.

Blake Wesley's goal late in the second period snapped a 2-2 tie and Quebec went on to down the Canadiens in a series billed as the Battle of Quebec.

Louis Sleigher added an insurance goal, while Marian Stastny and Jean-Francois Savard scored Quebec's first two tallies. Chris Nolan gave Montreal an early 1-0 lead and Mark Hunter put the Canadiens up 2-1 midway through the opening period.

Dino Ciccarelli's third-period goal carried Minnesota past St. Louis. Ciccarelli, who assisted on the first North Stars goal, collected the game-winner with 11:37 to play when he hit a 10-footer.

Nathan Aspinall scored for the first 32 minutes until Mark Napier gave Minnesota a 1-0 lead. Then, six minutes into the final period, St. Louis tied it on a short-handed goal by Pat Hickey Hickey.

Minico runs away from SIP field for double victory

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

RUPERT Minico took 11 individual titles in the boys and girls events Thursday afternoon in runs away with the South Idaho Press Invitational track meet.

The boys thumped runner-up Valley by 101 points. In the girls, Minico won 119 points over second-place Declo.

Five participants came away with two titles each for the Spartans.

On the Minico boys' squad, Sam Melson took honors in both the 100 and 200-meter dashes. Steve Perez won both hurdle events.

Girls double winners were Rose Stuart in the shot put and discus events, Charlotte Winward in both the 100 and 200-meter dashes. The Spartan relay team took first place in three relay events.

Burley's Laura Tegan, however, was the top point-getter taking first place in the long jump along with the 100- and 200-meter dashes. She won the 100-meter dash by less than a tenth of a second over Minico's Winward, but Tegan's Coach Mac Mills says he wasn't surprised at her victory. "Last time Winward beat her it was real close," just a few inches apart. "Laura does coming out of the blocks. If she gets a good start, she usually wins and in that race she got out of the blocks fast."

Tegan finished the 100-meter event in 12.66 seconds and breezed to an easy win in the 200-meter dash in 27.2 seconds.

Sports briefs

Jerome hosts triangular today

JEROME — The Jerome J-Club Invitational, slated to begin at 2:30 p.m. today, has dwindled to a triangular meet with the withdrawal of three teams. Only the host Tigers, Twin Falls and Highland will compete after three area schools decided to forego the invitation, said host Coach Tim Dunne. "The meet thus becomes a replay of a triangular held in Twin Falls three weeks ago with the exception that Highland reportedly is planning to divide its team in some way to compete at Jerome and at the Tiger-Grizzlies Relays in Idaho Falls Saturday. "We're kinda disappointed," said Dunne. "The J-Club has always been one of our bigger meets. But the competition will be good."

Twin Falls Coach Jerry Kleinkopf said the withdrawal of Mountain Home was a disappointment for the Bruins since "this would have been our one chance to get a look at them before district."

Mountain Home joins Twin Falls and Minico in qualifying for the state finals.

Twin Falls was strengthened this week by the return of two sprinters, Eric Watson, out for three weeks with a muscle pull, and Junior Bigl Spitzer, a first-year trackster who has missed two weeks with a stress fracture.

"Eric will run in the two sprints," Kleinkopf said. "We've been pleased that he's been able to come back with quickly. Usually those him pulls take a lot longer. So we're not going to jeopardize it with too much work."

Spitzer has been on the track just once, impressing the Bruin staff with her potential as a sprinter. "We'll be about as healthy as we can get for this one," Kleinkopf said after a spring of injuries. "It's also a good meet for our girls, because Jerome has a strong girls' team and we have just one or two meets left to learn a few more things about our girls' team."

The meet will begin with the 3200-meter run and field events at 2:30 p.m., with the running finals slated for 3:30 p.m.

Gooding cage coach quits

GOODING — Gooding High basketball Coach Don Fowler has resigned that position to devote more time to his family.

Fowler, who led the Senators to a third-place finish in this spring's A-3 tournament, said "I wrote the letter a couple of weeks ago but the board just got around to acting on it Wednesday night."

"My reasons were just personal and family priorities," he said. "I have two small children and a wife I want to spend more time with."

Fowler said he would remain on the Gooding faculty as a teacher.

Buhl women lead inter-city

BUHL — The Buhl women's team jumped into the lead in the opening match of the Magic Valley Women's Inter-City Golf Tournament Thursday.

The second match is scheduled for April 28 at Twin Falls Municipal.

April 19th; 2. Twin Falls 11th; 3. Blue Lakes 16th; Canyon Springs 6th; Rupert 8th; Jerome 7th; Gooding 9th; Burley 7th.

Academy transforms from dream to reality

By PAT BEAN
Times-News writer

'The Renaissance Academy of the Arts is for the 8-year-old violin player who doesn't yet know he's going to enjoy playing the violin.' — Gary Towle

TWIN FALLS — A dream hatched while sitting on a log in Fairfield is how Brian Clark describes the beginning of the Renaissance Academy of the Arts.

The dream is a combination of artistic and business ambitions, with the artistic dream continuing, while the business venture has turned into simply a desire to recoup the investment.

The arts dream is mainly that of Rick Strickland, who until just recently has almost single-handedly managed the day-to-day operations of the academy. He has seen the reality of his dream take shape as today somewhere between 150 and 200 students of dance, voice, musical instruments and drama use the academy facilities during an average week.

Also, the academy offers a stage to local artists, providing one or two concerts on an average each week, occasionally bringing in nationally recognized performers, such as Chris Proctor, national guitar fingerpicking champion.

The academy is the tangible efforts of four men.

Strickland, a musician (the cello being his primary, but not his only instrument) who wanted a home — a place to become involved in classical music and not just the honky-tonk road stands that tend to dominate a musician's life. He also wanted to make Magic Valley a place of the arts, a place to find good entertainment regularly without having to travel to or Salt Lake City. These are the things he told Clark as the two of them sat on that log in Fairfield.

Clark, another kind of dreamer, a psychologist and sometimes marriage counselor, a partner in C&T Investments (a small business that buys and renovates small properties to resell), and a man who knows about putting a building together. Clark wanted to make his friend's dream a reality, sharing a commitment to Magic Valley. Clark is a talker, a doer, a charmer, an energizer.

Gary Towle — the "IT" in C&T Investments — a quieter, more of a realist than a dreamer, but still one who believes in bringing the arts to Magic Valley. "I'm really into Idaho and into Magic Valley — and you can quote me on that." Like both Strickland and Clark, he was raised on a Magic Valley farm. Towle admits, however, he has "panicked" and is the one of the group who would just like to recoup the investment.

Fred Dolsen of Portland, Ore., also raised on a farm. Say Clark and Towle of Dolsen, who is just a friend who thought it might be nice to invest in Magic Valley arts. "He just quietly sends his $200 check a month."

Touching on the finances of the academy, the three Magic Valley men say, based on community comments they've overheard, there are some misconceptions.

The truth of the matter, they add, is far from the concept "we've got a neat thing going and just raking in the money." Clark says that from that log conversation came the decision to find a building and give the arts in Magic Valley a home. The building they found was the former St. Edward Church and school and a house on adjoining property. The church building by this time was owned by the Assembly of God Church, which had bought it from the Church of God.

Clark says the buildings cost $50,000 and $20,000 was allocated for remodeling and repairs. "We quickly spent $30,000 on repairs," he adds.

From the first, the Renaissance Academy of the Arts has had a non-profit status and has been kept separate from the business side of the venture. The academy simply leases the facilities, which is owned jointly by Clark, Towle, Strickland and Dolsen.

Strickland says the goal has been for the academy to totally pay for itself, but so far that goal has not quite been reached.

The rent, which is the same amount as the mortgage payment, plus utilities and other monthly upkeep for the academy, facilities runs about $1,600 a month. Since the academy has not yet become self-supporting, the four investors have had to kick in the difference.

"The hardest bit of the toll has been Strickland, who has thrown the money from

Book recounts past of historic Idanha

By DALE STEWART
Times-News writer

'The Idanha: Guests and Ghosts of a historic Idaho Inn' by Dick d'Easum ($9.95, published by Caxton Printers, Caldwell)

For more than 84 years, the turrets and towers of the Idanha Hotel have marked the northeast corner of 10th and Main streets in downtown Boise.

These turrets and towers have been as much an architectural curiosity to the casual visitor to the Idaho capital city as they have a landmark to the Idahoan or Boise resident familiar with the history and delights of what is perhaps the oldest operating traditional hotel in the state.

Now, Boise author Dick d'Easum — perhaps best known in recent years for his "Sawtooth Tales" about Idaho's mountain country — has recounted the saga of the Idanha from its roots in the territorial years of Idaho to the flowering of Woody Nelson's 1980 presidential

Many of the personalities who flavor the tales in this 200-page softcover volume are well known. Others aren't. But their contribution to the lore of Boise and Idaho are told in a readable style by d'Easum, who tosses a few harpoons at the would-be creators of "The New Jerusalem."

Students serving up dramas

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls high school students will serve up drama and dessert Thursday.

Their production will showcase the sketches that declamation students have won awards for this year, plus premiere a choric reading and a one-act play.

The choric reading, "I Will Not Go Back," is a poem about man's enlightenment, recited by the students separately and in unison. But there is nothing static about it.

As 15 students drop and pick up the chart, mist rolls across the stage and the students crawl out of the ooze and slime to become dinosaurs and then man.

I seek, I fall and I become man, the students declare. "And I will not go back," they say, reciting the names of the world's great thinkers from Beethoven to Dante.

The piece is "a declaration of humanity," says drama teacher Brent Blackburn, who is directing the night of drama. "It asks if we are the unique species we think we are."

Bizarre vacations a fun alternative

By JOE NEAVE
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Among the highways and byways Americans will be exploring this summer there are some unusual — if not downright weird — opportunities for vacation fun.

Sure, it's great to pack up the kids and head for Yellowstone, but if you hunger for something out of the ordinary here are a few suggestions. The prices for these excursions do not include airfare, and be sure to visit your local travel agent or contact the companies listed for further information.

MURDER WEEKENDS: For devoted followers of Sherlock Holmes and Hercule Poirot, murders are staged year-round in English hotels complete with suspects, murder weapons and false clues.

Accommodation for two nights, meals, and one murder are available for $130. Contact: British Tours and Theater Center, 19 W. 44 St. #718, New York, N.Y. 10036, (212) 719-1223.

always next year. Running for 11 days in April, you can travel by plane and dogsled to the top of the world. Along the way you'll learn how to build an igloo and hear informal lectures by Dr. George Llano, one of the National Science Foundation and color commentary from various Inuit Eskimo hunters.

The cost? A paltry $8,050, which includes airfare from Edmonton, accommodations (such as they are), meals, lectures and dogsled. Contact: Society Expeditions, 723 Broadway E., Seattle, Wa. 98102, (800) 426-7794.

SISEKEL AND EBERT WEEKEND: Film critics Sisekel and Ebert screen five movies and deliver their usual pithy review, but this time you get the chance to disagree with them in person.

Limited to 200 participants, held in October at the Arrowwood Conference Center in Rye Brook, N.Y. $325 includes movies, room and meals, lectures, recreational facilities. Contact: Arrowwood of Westchester, Anderson Hill Road, Rye Brook, N.Y. 10576, (212) 581-5757.

BALLOONING IN NAPA VALLEY: Flights seven days a week over California's Napa Valley. An hour-long journey by balloon, followed by a champagne celebration (once you've been found by the cast team). Reservations required, cost is $95 per person. Contact: Balloon Aviation of Napa Valley, 520

Ornduff St., Napa, Ca. 94558, (707) 252-7067.

CAMEL TREK: Five days by camel and on foot through Kenya's most remote country. Limited to 10 people per trip, you have 26 camels to choose from. Trek departs from Nairobi every Monday morning, running from July 1 to Oct. 31. Meals, transport from Nairobi, and camel cost about $130. Contact: Flamingo Travel Ltd., Box 45070, Nairobi, Kenya.

Greystoke

jungle yodels be blessedly gone in this version, which is a closer adaptation than any others to the persons and times penned by Burroughs.

The film begins not in a jungle, but on the bleak, frequent because of the Greystoke in the 1800s: A nobleman, played by Sir Ralph Richardson, is bidding a goodbye edged with doom to his son, who is heading to the tropics.

The premonition of disaster is realized when the younger lord is lost. However, the son's child is saved by a group of apes who inhabit a danger-filled jungle.

Peace is infrequent because of the natural brutish forces that are the daily business of survival. Yet, the boy flourishes and even becomes master of what he surveys.

Into this primitive surrounding comes a group of Englishmen, whose sport is butchering all the animals in sight. Among the party is a Belgian officer, who becomes stranded after an attack of typhoid. The officer is saved and adopted by the creature, played by newcomer Christopher Lambert.

In this while-marbled forest, John must learn another method of survival. His life especially is complicated by Jane, portrayed by the fragile-like Andie MacDowell. Jane is the American-raised ward of his grandfather.

From the outset, the tarzan mold is stomped into the ground in "Greystoke." Hugh Hudson, who directed the award-winning "Chariots of Fire," has offered an eloquent and exciting yarn.

His cameras are as much at home in the wilderness as on the rolling hills of Scotland, capturing a sense of both.

The supporting cast is notable, particularly the multi-faceted Ian Holm as the Belgian officer. This was the last film of Richardson, who effectively plays the nobleman with the emphasis on the man.

Only MacDowell appears as an unobtrusive fixture among the velvet and lace. Her part could have used some substance along with the lovely costuming.

Yet, all Hudson's adept direction and casting could have gone down the tubes if the ape man was handled by a prima actor. Such was not the case. Lambert triumphantly supports "Greystoke" like his character sports the body of a leopard to his ape-followers.

He takes in the role and is authentic when railing in ape-like excitement, tormenting at being torn between his upbringing in the savage wilds and his inheritance as a man.

"Greystoke" is a beguiling adventure.

Brawley and Joe Regan: The series of dramatic performances is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the high school cafeteria, and admission will cost $2.

Abner Martin, "is just as serious even if it does have some light moments, Blackburn says. It stars senior Clint Burgess and Abner Martin, an unemployed man with a good job and a good marriage.

But one day he climbs a tree, sticks his head in a noose and jumps. That would have been the end of Martin if the rope did not break, leaving him hanging in a precarious position.

Despite the urgings of his wife, played by senior Sall-Kal Mullins, and a neighbor, played by senior Julie Ott, Martin refuses to come down. "It's an enviable position, suspended between life and death, and nobody can touch me," Martin says, pondering the choices that have shaped his life.

Mid-life crisis is an unusual choice of a topic for students too young to have made many life choices, Blackburn says, but is good choice to stretch their acting skills.

"We work for empathy, to put ourselves in the place of someone else and feel what they do. For empathetic response it is an excellent script," he says.

who have left sizable sections of downtown Boise vacant in recent years.

Among the better known figures from Idaho's history who figured in the Idanha's past are politicians such as governors Frank Gooding and Frank Steuneger, reformed bomb builder Harry Orchard, lawyers William E. Borah — this was before his senatorial terms — William Jennings Bryan and Clarence Darrow and entertainers Ethel Barrymore, Will Rogers and Sally Rand.

Some of those who are lesser-known but who played a role in the inn's past are Hagan the Sift, one of Boise's more colorful nebrates, an escaped python, a ghost, trenchman Charles Groat and one-time Greek marathon runner George Cordes.

Cordes may best be remembered by many long-time Idanhans for his management of the hotel's cafe and restaurant, his free holiday dinners for the down-and-out, and his sponsorship of athletic teams half a century and longer ago.

The Idanha has won and maintains a place in the hearts of Boiseans and in the history of the capital city and the state, surviving competition from other major hotels, the motel explosion and changes in travel patterns and modes.

Idanhans — native or transplanted — will find d'Esam's anecdotal style of telling the story of this historic nostriety and of those who have contributed to its lore highly interesting springtime reading. If they don't get around to it until fall or winter, they will still find it an entertaining book.

Dale Stewart is a wire editor for The Times-News who formerly worked for a Boise newspaper and knew some of those whose names and deeds appear in the book.

Man and 'dummy' speak up for show

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

JACKPOT — Willie Tyler is a firm believer "keeping your mouth shut pays." After watching a performance of Paul Winchell with his dummy sidekick, Jerry Mahoney, Tyler says he decided to take up ventriloquism as a hobby at the age of 10.

Tyler says he began working variety shows in school and entering amateur contests around Detroit where he grew up. After high school, he enlisted in the Air Force and, since he was assigned to special services, was able to improve his ventriloquist skills.

Speaking of his dummy, the ventriloquist says "Lester was born in the woods and worked his way out." As proof, the duo have appeared on the Merv Griffin Show, Tonight Show, Jefferson, HBO specials and many more television spots. They've also worked with Frank Sinatra, Lina Ron, Sammy Davis Jr. and Dolly Parton.

Keith Evans — Evans and Associates, a production company, says Tyler has it all going his way.

Willie Tyler and Lester will perform in Jackpot April 20-22

"He just did an HBO special with fellow ventriloquists Jay Johnston of "Soap" and Jay Nemeth. "He's one of a kind. He's very hot with the college kids. Recently touring the college circuit with George Carlin, he was a smash with the students."

Evans notes that Tyler and Lester often host the Saturday morning ABC Weekend Special as well as do commercial spots concerning drunk driving, Alcoholics Anonymous, United Way and the Olympics.

"Willie has worked to hone his craft for at least 15 years, doing comedy clubs, conventions, even fairs. It takes forever before people get to know an entertainer's name," Evans says. "But he's really come on his own in the last six years."

Tyler not only throws his voice, but also sings with it as well. He is a song writer and an actor who made his first screen appearance as a Vietnam veteran in the movie "Coming Home."

Magic Valley residents will be able to see Tyler and Lester in person April 20-22 at Cactus Pete's in Jackpot. Evans says it's really a different act for this area and expects a great response.

Ice Capades come to Idaho

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — The Ice Capades rousing new musical revue, "Hello World, Hello!" will be staged for seven performances in the Boise State Pavillion, April 18-22. They will also be holding auditions following the Friday performance, April 20.

Billed as a spectacular, the show will be headlined by world professional champion and Canadian ice skater Ron Shaver. The skater presents a compelling and dramatic performance on ice. His powerful style and professional presence have awarded him approval from audiences everywhere that he has appeared.

Joining Shaver are three-time Canadian Ice Dance Champions, Lorna Wighton and John Dowling. They were among the stars of the 1980 Winter Olympics. Also, the pair team of Frank Swedling and Beth Flora will appear along with newcomers David Fee, Karen Melton and her partner, Bill O'Neill.

Opening the show under the theme of "Hello Broadway, Hello," will be the Ice Capettes and Ice Cadettes showcased by Lisa-Marie Allen who is a three-time U.S. National Silver Medalist known for her unusual interpretive skills and technical expertise.

For the kids as well as the young at heart, adult skaters will be a "Smurfed Revue Talent Show." Papa Smurf, Smurrette and the whole smurf gang promise to get into icy exploits while trying to outwit greedy Gargamel and sly cat Azrael.

There will also be a magic carpet ride in one-act called "Flight to Kismet." The world-famous Corps de Ballet, costumed in a king's ransom of gold, spin and tumble in a darkened hall to lend their own magic to this fantasy.

Other acts will be a stroll down memory lane in "A Slice of Apple Pie" followed by "Music American." "That's Jazz" and a spectacular finale where the performers glow in the dark, "Viva Vegas, Viva."

Also featured as a part of the extravaganza will be acrobats, Mike Cours and Titch Stock, Tommy Miller and juggler David Lee.

At 10:30 p.m. after the Friday performance, those wishing to audition are asked to bring their own skates and comfortable apparel. Prospective skaters must be 18 or accompanied by parent or guardian. The minimum performer's height for women is 5 feet 3 inches, while men should be at least 5 feet 9 inches.

In addition to figure and freestyle skating, appearance and enthusiasm, as well as a background in ballet and or modern dance training are important. If accepted, skaters, of course, must be free to travel on tour.

Performances will be at 8: p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, with a 2: p.m. matinee Saturday and Sunday. The final show will be Sunday at 6: p.m. Ticket prices run from $7 to $9 with discounts for youths and seniors. They can be purchased at the Pavillion ticket office or, for information, call 385-3535.

his cell lessons into the pot to keep the academy going. It was he who talked the others out of selling the building for a profit a few months ago, although he admits it would have dug him out of his own financial problems.

Jokingly, Strickland says maybe he's responsible for the "hippie image" that has somehow been associated with the academy. "Maybe my hair's a bit long, but who can afford a haircut?" he laughs.

Towle says it would be better for the academy to own the building, then people would know any donation they made would be going to Magic Valley arts and not into someone's pocket.

"Although there is no way for that to happen now. With its non-profit status, any donations made to the academy can benefit only the academy," explains Towle.

The goal of all four men is for the academy to somehow be able to purchase the facility it leases. But the necessary financial backing is not there. The academy is looking at the possibility of obtaining grants, but that takes time. The grants also may only be able to be used for performers and not for capital purchases.

The academy first opened its doors for a concert in October of 1982, just six weeks after the building was purchased.

"We were still sweeping sawdust off the floor five minutes before people started coming," says Strickland.

With Towle and Mark providing the vast majority of the labor, the former church was transformed into an auditorium area, which is also used for dance lessons, and four individual classrooms. The building's original wooden pews provide movable seating.

"There's a lot of energy in this old building," says Clark. "While doing some of the remodeling, he discovered a hole in a wall where students had tossed old test papers, some of which were dated in the 1930s."

He says the building was originally built around 1915 and that it had once burned quite badly.

"The real find in this building is the acoustics," says Clark, demonstrating how a whisper can be heard anywhere in the 25 by 52-foot room.

"That's because of all the insulation, we put in," adds Towle. From the first, the academy has attracted a "good bit" of community support — chief of which has been Mary Mead, who is on the board of directors.

"Once people come down here and see what we're trying to accomplish, they're very supportive," says Mead, who is known in the community for being a starter.

The newest of the additions at the academy is Raymond Miller, who says he got involved because he attended "a couple of meetings and opened his mouth."

Miller has taken over the business management of the academy, freeing Strickland for more arts involvement. Miller says his job is to keep the roof from leaking, promote the concerts and market the facility to the community. One of the first things he did was to get a 24-hour answering service and begin putting together a directory of artists available for bookings.

A writer and producer with a master's degree in marketing, Miller expounds on the advantages of a place where people, especially young people, can see live performances.

"It's a misconception of reality if all they are exposed to is television," Miller says, adding that the advantage the academy has is the intimate experience the small auditorium provides between a performer and the audience.

All the people involved with the academy stress its major advantage is providing a place for local talent to get a start; to develop stage presence and to be able to put on a resume that they've performed a concert.

Another emphasis of the facility is for the training of young talent, an opportunity to expose them to the arts. It's for the 8-year-old beginning violin player who doesn't know he's going to enjoy playing the violin, says Towle.

"There's going to come a time when performers will take pride in saying 'I played a concert at the Renaissance Academy of the Arts,'" says Clark.

"I'm sure you're aware, we're not giving up," Clark adds, sitting on one of the hard benches in the academy's big room with his two Magic Valley partners.

"Our dream's not just a dream anymore — it's a facility."

Alternative civilizations explored

TWIN FALLS — Anecdotes, personal experiences and colorful legends highlight "The Primal Mind," a look at the dynamic differences between American Indian and Western/European traditions and the legacies the two cultures share.

The one hour documentary airing Wednesday on PBS at 9 p.m., was filmed on location in the southwest and northeast United States.

"The greatest difference between people isn't space, it's culture," says writer and host of "The Primal Mind," Jamake Highwater. "This program is about some of the alternative ways of attaining civilization; different truths, different myths, even different realities. And it's also about people living outside the Western civilization who have some important lessons to teach us all."

"The Primal Mind" is unique because it identifies what is distinctive and dynamic about Native Americans compared to Europeans, without suggesting that one culture is necessarily better than the other. For example, according to Highwater, Americans of European descent may tend to view evolution away from their cultural origins as positive and progressive, while Americans, on the other hand, strive to maintain their cultural identity.

These different perceptions have plagued Caucasian and Native Americans for centuries and have provoked misunderstandings about time, space, art and language. "The Primal Mind" explores the roots of many of these misunderstandings, and explains how they have created significant problems between the two cultures.

Auditions for 'Snoopy' open

TWIN FALLS — Auditions for junior and senior-high students for parts in "Snoopy," a musical comedy, will be held at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 25, at the Renaissance Academy of the Arts at 505 Second Ave. E. in Twin Falls.
Tryouts will include the singing of a two and one-half minute selection from a Broadway musical, and reading from the script. Seven characters will be double cast.
"Snoopy" will be performed Sept. 21-23 in the Fine Arts Center at the College of Southern Idaho.

Wagon Days poster sought

KETCHUM — The Wagon Days Committee is looking for designs for a poster for the Wagon Day celebration to be held this summer. Deadline for entries is May 1. Committee members have decided the poster design should portray Ketchum's mining days and be formatted on black on white. Two colors may be used in overlay fashion.
The winner will be awarded $100. For more information, call Wendy Jaquet at 726-5501.

Applications for artists open

BOISE — The Idaho Commission of the Arts is accepting applications from potential sponsors and artists for the Artists-in-Education program for the 1984-85 school year. Artists must submit their applications by April 16, and sponsors must submit their applications by May 15.
For more information, contact Betsy Bidwell, Idaho Commission of the Arts, 304 W. State St., Boise 83702, or call 334-2119.

Student art open to viewing

TWIN FALLS — The Annual College of Southern Idaho Student Art Exhibition, an exhibit of art works by CSI students, will be on display April 17 through May 10 at the art gallery in the Herrett Museum.
Dr. Miles Friend, professor of art at Idaho State University, will jury the exhibition this year. Friend will select works from a variety of styles and media submitted by the students' including drawing, painting, photography, pottery, sculpture and handmade paper.
The public is invited to attend a preview opening for the artists at 7 p.m. April 17 in the Herrett Museum.
Regular museum hours are from 9:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday; 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

Cable television firm expands

TWIN FALLS — The Federal Broadcasting Commission recently granted a license to Channel View to increase its power to 100 watts. The company is the common carrier for Idaho Home Theater, a Twin Falls business.
Idaho Home Theater carries ON-TV, a 24-hour, non-commercial satellite transmission program channel.
Idaho Home Theater advises all ON-TV subscribers that their service will be temporarily interrupted while a new $50,000, 100 watt transmitter is installed at the Jerome Butte.
This increase from 10 watts to 100 watts will greatly improve the transmission quality and capabilities of the ON-TV channel.

Tuning bodies purpose of class

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Beginning Monday, Sally Towle and Sheila Long will provide an opportunity for area men to forego their lunch or midday nap in exchange for tuning up their bodies.

The pair are planning a men's aerobics class, to be held during the noon hour on weekdays at the Magic Valley Dance Center in Jerome.

The men's class will differ from the usual women aerobics class in that there will be no leotards or dancing. The men simply wear T-shirts and shorts — or whatever is comfortable.

Towle and Long say the classes are designed for the person whose occupation is primarily sedentary.

"The idea for the men's class occurred to Towle when she visited the Aerobic Institute for Research (the mecca of aerobics) at the Cooper Clinic in Dallas, Texas.

She says she discovered many of the aerobic teachers down there are men.

"The classes were totally co-educational, and it was really fun."

Towle says "the word aerobic itself just means with oxygen. When you increase your aerobic capacity, your body is using oxygen more effectively, and you can go longer and everything is better."

She says the exercises will include a warm-up session, an aerobic part, and then calisthenic-type floor work and cool-down at the end. Testing sessions will be held at the beginning of the classes.

Towle, who is a nurse, says it is important in an exercise program to make sure participants have normal blood pressures and heart rates, and normal responses to exercises.

"Everybody should work at their own level in any aerobic class. You determine your maximum," she says.

"We take a pulse rate quite frequently during the exercise sessions, and if you're above your pulse rate you take it easy, and if you're below your pulse rate, then you add a little more oomph to it. That way each person monitors their own."

Long says, "I think we need to encourage people not to give up after the first or second day because they are sore or because they're too tired. They need to set a goal for themselves to do it for three months before making a decision, even if they hate it and think it's too much hard work. At the end of that time, then decide whether or not to continue."

Towle says aerobic exercise makes dieting easier because, after you're out, it is a lot easier to resist eating fattening foods.

Dog owner worries 'fixing' will spoil pet's personality

DEAR ABBY: Regarding your St. Valentine's Day column: You wrote, "Be a sweetheart — spay your dog, neuter your cat, etc."

I realize that you are all for spaying and neutering dogs and cats because there are too many starving animals in the world, but I hate to do this to our dog, "Rocky." He's a 2-year-old male, and we've heard if we neuter him he'll get fat and lose his playful personality. Also, isn't it cruel to deprive a dog of sex after he's already experienced it?

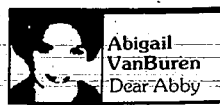

Will it ruin Rocky as a watchdog? Rocky isn't vicious — he just barks at strange noises and people he doesn't know. We like that because we feel safe when he barks. Rocky also has a very playful personality, and we don't want him turned into a fat, lazy, eating and sleeping machine.

Are we right or wrong about these fears?

DEAR UNSURE: My chief veterinarian consultant, Dr. James J. Isaacs of Encino, Calif., says: "It's not true that dogs will become fat as a result of having been neutered or spayed. Animals, like humans, need proper diet and exercise to stay lean and healthy."

"(Incidentally, spaying a female reduces her chances of uterine infections or breast cancer.)"

"Because a spayed or neutered guard dog will have fewer distractions, it will be a better guard dog. (A male dog that doesn't have sex on his mind will not be roaming around seeking females in season nor will he get into fights with competitive males over females.)

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

"Does it change a dog's personality? Only for the better."

DEAR ABBY: My husband demanded that I change from a male doctor to a female doctor. He said he didn't want another male ogling my naked body.

I changed doctors to please my husband. Recently we were divorced. I am now living with my female doctor, and we couldn't be happier!

— IT TAKES ONE TO KNOW ONE

DEAR ABBY: I was married last October. At present I am legally separated from my husband. Should I send thank-you notes for the wedding gifts? If you think I should, is it necessary to mention the legal separation? (It may end in divorce, but what if it doesn't?) If you think thank-you notes are in order, how should they be signed?

My husband and I aren't even on speaking terms, so I can't talk it over with him. Thanks for any help you can give me. Have a nice day.

— DECIDED IN WINNETKA, ILL.
DEAR UNDECIDED: Thank-you notes are not only in order, they are overdue. Inasmuch as the wedding gifts belong to both you and your husband, he is equally responsible for acknowledging them, so ask him (in a letter, since you aren't on speaking terms) to acknowledge the gifts from his relatives and special friends and you will take care of yours.

You may be reconciled with him, so don't mention your legal separation in the thank-you notes.

CONFIDENTIAL TO SORRY, SORRY, SORRY IN NEW, NEV.: No experience is all bad if you have learned from it. Don't dwell on it. Regret is the cancer of life.

Lonely? Get Abby's updated, revised and expanded booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. Send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularly, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Force pinned to concessions

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — The size of the work force at a plant for making disposable diapers depends on tax concessions from the state, officials say.

Ground-breaking ceremonies for the 430,000-square-foot Kimberly-Clark plant to be built in the Ogden-Weber Industrial Park were held Wednesday.

Kimberly-Clark executive officer Darwin E. Smith said at least 250 new jobs will be created by the plant, which will produce Kleenex Huggies diapers.

But Smith said the ultimate size of the operation will depend on how much the company has to pay in sales and use taxes on highly specialized equipment.

Renovated Boise district sold

BOISE (AP) — The 8th Street Marketplace, a commercial renovation in Boise's warehouse district, has been sold to a group of Illinois investors, whose attorney said $9.5 million for the property.

Real estate developer Winston Moore, the managing partner and majority owner of the development, announced the transaction Wednesday. But he declined to disclose the sale price or the reasons for the sale.

Chicago attorney Jay Canel, who was in Boise earlier this week to close the sale, said a limited partnership paid $5 million for the multi-building development because "it was a good investment."

"The agreement with the partnership whose members operate apartments, condominiums and shopping centers in several states, calls for Moore's company to continue as project and property manager."

Interest rates, deficit linked

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Interest rates could remain fairly stable if Congress before July makes at least a "down payment" on the federal budget deficit, says the president-of-the-National Association of Realtors.

Donald H. Treadwell told Utah business and political leaders that with some congressional action interest rates probably will rise only about 1 percent, to the 14-15 percent range.

"The agreement with the partnership whose members operate apartments, condominiums and shopping centers in several states, calls for Moore's company to continue as project and property manager."

Treadwell said that if Congress could implement a program this year to eliminate the deficit, interest rates would likely drop 3 percent.

Potato assessment approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commercial potato growers have approved an increase in assessments to finance research and promotion projects; the least two thirds was required for approval.

Those in favor of the increase represented 74.1 percent of the production of those voting in the referendum, he said.

The vote authorizes an increase in the maximum assessment rate from the current one cent per 100 pounds of potatoes to one-half of 1 percent of the past 10-year average price received by growers as reported by USDA.

At the current price average, that would mean a maximum assessment rate of about two cents per 100 pounds. It also would raise about $5 million a year for the potato research and promotion program, double the current revenue, Brader said.

Incorporations break record

NEW YORK (AP) — A record 600,000 new businesses incorporated in 1983, up 5.9 percent from 1982, D&B Bradstreet Corp. says.

New York, Florida, California, Texas and Illinois had the most new incorporations, while New Jersey, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Virginia and Kansas had the biggest increases from 1982 levels, the business services company said Wednesday.

Eight of the nation's nine geographic regions reported higher levels of new incorporations last year. The Middle Atlantic, South Atlantic and West North Central regions of the country reported increases of close to 10 percent.

Retail sales plunge in March

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Retail sales in March took their sharpest nosedive in more than a decade, the government reported Thursday.

Analysts said the 2.2 percent decline is the closest sign yet that the economic recovery is slowing down.

The Commerce Department said retail sales fell to a seasonally adjusted $103.3 billion last month, the second monthly decline in a row and the biggest drop since a 2.4 percent fall-off in December 1973.

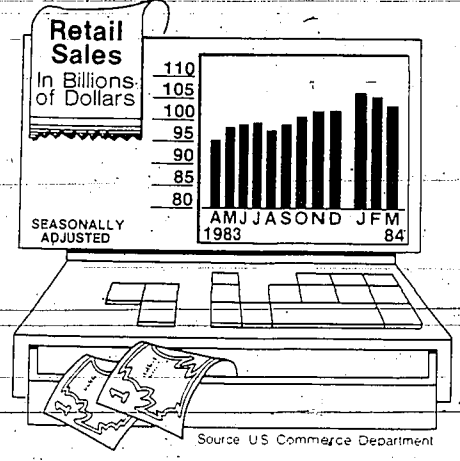

The strong surge in consumer spending has been the main force driving the nation's recovery from the 1981-82 recession. While economists for some time have expected consumer spending to moderate, most were surprised at the extent of the March decline, although some blamed it partly on the weather.

A sharp 7 percent drop in auto sales contributed the most to the poor showing, but virtually all categories of sales were down for the month.

In addition to reporting the March decline, the government revised its earlier report on February sales downward from a slight 0.1 percent drop to a 0.8 percent decline.

"We have had for some time that the pace of economic growth would moderate significantly," said Ben E. Laden, chief economist for T. Rowe Price Associates Inc., an investment counseling firm. "The financial markets need these kinds of numbers to relieve the gloom that has been building that we were growing too fast, overinvesting."

Those fears were fueled by the preliminary government report last month, that economic growth from January through March was at a surprisingly strong 7.2 percent. Many economists said Thursday they now expect that number to be revised downward substantially in light of the retail sales numbers and other reports.

Laden predicted economic growth in the first quarter would be between 6.5 and 6.8 percent and would drop to growth from the retail sales figures. Richard Rahn, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, called the March report an "aberration" which he blamed on severe March weather and a late Easter which held down sales.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige also blamed the weather and attributed part of the decline to the unsustainably high level of January sales. The department revised the January increase to 4.1 percent, the biggest monthly jump since a 4.7 percent surge in December 1983.

Even with the February and March declines, the January pace lifted sales for the first quarter 3.4 percent higher than in October through December.

Baldrige predicted that because consumer spending will moderate in coming months, "it will continue to support economic expansion."

Ed Friedman, an economist with Chase Econometrics, predicted "steady but not explosive growth" from consumer spending for the rest of the year.

"While the consumer is not going to lead the recovery, it is not going to go to the point of hindering it either," Friedman said.

The $2.3 billion decline in March sales reflected a 3.6 percent slump in sales of durables, such as cars. It was expected to last three or more years — and a 0.5 percent drop in nondurable goods sales.

Automotive sales were down 7 percent in March, the sharpest drop since June 1982. However, the sales level still remained 17 percent above that of a year ago.

Robert Westcott, an economist with Economics Today, said some of the decline in auto sales in March and February could be consumer resistance to higher car prices.

Election may be good for Wall Street

Sluggish, bumper stickers, heated debates, the political conventions, are ahead in 1984 — the stock market? Will this, too, perform according to tradition, whatever that is? Go up, down, sideways?

Below is what the clearest analysis of this always fascinating subject I have come across.

1) Election years are good for the stock market, especially when a Republican wins.

While postwar election years have been good for the market, this has been particularly true when a Republican wins. "There have been 11 Republican victories in presidential elections since 1900," says Anne Gregory, publisher of the subscription-only Merrill Lynch Market Letter, who did extensive historical research to help answer my questions. "The Dow Jones industrial average rose in 10 of those years. Since World War II, the market advanced in all five years in which a Republican won."

The record in years of Democratic victories has been more mixed. The Democrats have won 10 elections since 1900 and the Dow industrials rose in five of those years. Since 1948, there have been four Democratic victory years and the market rose in two.

2) The year after a presidential election often is not a good one for the stock market.

The record from 1901 to 1981 demonstrates this. Following Democratic victories, the market was up five, down five; since World War II, up three, down five.

3) Every year ending in the number 5 has seen solid gains in the market.

This is the sort of mathematical mumbo-jumbo that makes me shiver — but I must admit Gregory has some statistical backing for her observation. Solid, even extraordinary, gains were followed in 1905, 1925, 1945, 1965 — all following presidential election years.

The usual pattern would suggest that 1984 will be the up year and 1985 will be the down year for stocks, but Gregory sees the usual market patterns reversed in this election-year cycle. Under the scenario she forecasts, 1984 could end on a strong note, but the Dow industrials average would not exceed the 1287 record high posted in November 1983. Then, in an uncommon turn for the year after an election, the market would show renewed strength for 1985 as the economy continued to advance, and the Dow industrials would reach a new peak of 1400 to 1500.

4) The stock market has displayed an extraordinarily bumpy performance so far in 1984.

One factor that may account for it is that the bull market that began in 1982 was one of the strongest ever, breaking through a 17-year trading range — roughly 900 to 1000 on the Dow industrial average — that dated back to 1965. Some kind of reaction from that powerful momentum was inevitable.

A second factor is that the phenom-on of strong markets in presidential election years has become so widely publicized that institutional investors may have sold early this year. That sort of "electroshock" has become common as major market participants try in increasing numbers to anticipate future events.

While the impact of the 1984 election is still down the road, says Gregory, "economic and stock-market underpinnings are in place, support solid gains later this year and next."

With these excellent prospects for the market, Gregory's opinions on what to buy cry out for reporting. She recommends better grade capital-goods companies (producing goods for business) as corporate spending increased this year. And she turns unexpectedly "respectable" as she suggests stocks with a history of good earnings gains and good prospects as the likely leaders in the next phase of the bull market. Who could quarrel with that?
