Reagan seeking boost in exports On China trip

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
AP White House Correspondent

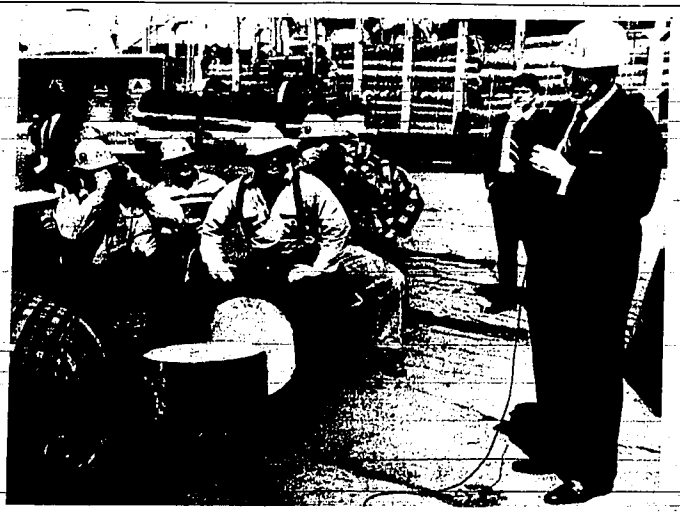

TACOMA, Wash. — President Reagan, setting out Thursday on his journey to China, pledged to do what he could to boost U.S. exports to the world's most populous nation and praised the Japanese for resolving trade problems with the United States.

"I go as something of a salesman, doing everything I can up to the limit of putting a 'Buy American' sticker on my bag," Reagan told a group of exporters and business leaders.

The stop-in-the-center-of-the-nation timber town of Tacoma is one of four on the president's more-than-11,000-mile trip to Peking, his destination next Thursday. He was planning to spend the rest of this week traveling and studying at his ranch northwest of Santa Barbara, Calif., and will follow a similar routine in Honolulu on Monday.

Reflecting on China's current trend toward a freer economy, the president said "the change that has occurred there, their willingness to collaborate with private enterprise, is an amazing change."

Reagan pointed out that the United States is China's third-largest trading partner — in 1982, the latest year for which statistics are available, the two countries completed $2.2 billion in two-way trade — and that the United States is the leading foreign investor in China.

"We want to further improve the investment climate," he said, referring to talks he will hold in Peking on tax and financial investment agreements.

"There are other trade issues we're still resolving with China," he said. "The truth is, in any growing relationship there will be some growing pains."

In his discussion with the exporters, the president said he was aware of their problems, including the difficulty of competing with "state-subsidized goods from other nations — some of which are doing this in violation of international agreements."

"Then there is Japan," he said, raising a subject that has become particularly sensitive in the world of international trade as a result of Japan's successful efforts to sell its automobiles, electronic gear and other products far beyond its borders.

"Japan's been a fine friend to us in many respects," the president said. "We still have a lot of trade questions to work out with Tokyo, but we've made some major progress in the last two years."

He pointed out that Japan had agreed to nearly double the amount of beef it will import from the United States and to ease restrictions on citrus imports.

Economy posts gain; jobless rise

By The Associated Press

The economy grew at a surprisingly robust 8.3 percent annual rate in the first three months of 1984, the government reported Thursday.

Economists called the surge temporary and predicted growth will slow for the rest of the year.

The Commerce Department last month cautions economists by surprise with a "flash" GNP estimate that put growth for January to March at a rate of 7.2 percent. And when business activity headed sharply lower in March, many said the preliminary estimate would be revised downward substantially, to perhaps as low as 6 percent.

But instead, the department boosted the estimate of growth in the inflation-adjusted gross national product to 8.3 percent, which would make January-March the second best quarter since the recovery from the recession began in November 1982.

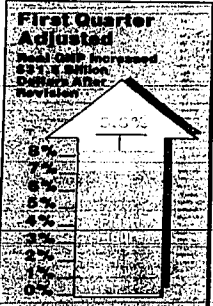

Last month's initial estimate raised widespread concern that the economy was growing too fast, threatening to overheat and trigger sharply higher inflation.

That concern was not evident Thursday even with the higher figure because of a belief that consumer spending, which has powered the recovery so far, is beginning to slow considerably.

The Reagan administration concerned that fears of renewed inflation could push interest rates higher, stressed its belief that economic expansion was slowing to a moderate, more sustainable rate with inflation under control.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said "we expect a moderation of the GNP growth in the second quarter. . . . It's obvious the economy will remain strong with low levels of inflation."

Undersecretary of Commerce

Sirney L. Jones said the first quarter only a "temporary acceleration" predicted GNP growth of 4 percent in the second quarter. He said the administration saw no reason to change its estimate of 5 percent growth for the whole year. In 1983, the real, or inflation-adjusted, GNP grew 3.4 percent.

In other economic news Thursday: The nation's basic money supply rose $3 billion in early April, the Federal Reserve Board reported. The rise followed a sharp drop the previous week and economists said the report did not raise new concerns about further increases in interest rates in the weeks ahead. The Fed said M1 rose to a seasonally adjusted $536.4 billion in the week ended April 9 from $533.4 billion the previous week.

Assets of the nation's 293 money-market mutual funds fell $610.8 million in the latest week, retreating

Britons maintain their positions as Libyans demand withdrawal

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
The Associated Press

LONDON — With Britain and Libya in a diplomatic standoff, Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafi said Thursday he'd settle for "nothing else" but a lifting of the siege of his nation's London embassy.

Britain stuck to its demand to question the trapped Libyans and search the building for arms. And it crushed aside Khadafi's claims that British police were to blame for Tuesday's fatal shooting of a policeman during an anti-Khadafi demonstration outside the embassy.

"His allegations are totally false," a Foreign Office spokesman said after Khadafi charged in a U.S. television interview from his capital, Tripoli, that British police and helicopters had attacked the embassy Tuesday.

The crisis began when a gunman firing from the embassy sprayed 70 anti-Khadafi demonstrators with bullets, killing the policeman and injuring 11 protesters.

"We have no gunman here in this building and we have no guns or ammunition," insisted a man answering the phone at the embassy Thursday night. He refused to identify himself.

"We are innocent. We have not harmed anyone nor broken any laws in this country," he said.

In Tripoli, Libyan-Foreign-Minister-All-Abdussalam Treiki met with British Ambassador Oliver Miles, the Libyan news agency JANA reported.

Tripoli radio, monitored in London, quoted Treiki as saying Britain's demand to search the London embassy is "unacceptable and is contrary to international traditions."

But JANA said "a common wish was confirmed at the meeting to deal with this matter and settle it amicably."

The British Foreign office said the meeting's atmosphere "was good, and both sides indicated that they were looking for a peaceful solution."

Miles said in a telephone interview with the British Broadcasting Corp. "I think that the problems here reflect what's happening in London. But the central negotiations are going on in London."

British officials were asked about a report on ABC television that U.S. intelligence had intercepted and passed on to London a radio message from Tripoli ordering the embassy to use force against Tuesday's demonstrators.

"We had no specific information to lead us to believe that an incident of this kind would occur," the Foreign Office said in a formal statement. A spokesman refused to elaborate.

However, Britain's Independent Television News, in a report from Washington, said an unidentified American intelligence source had confirmed that a call between Tripoli and the London embassy was monitored at the U.S. National Security Agency headquarters at Fort Meade, Va.

"The same source adds that information from that call concerning the possible use of force was passed on," ITN reporter John Snow said.

He said between 10 and 15 Britons work at the NSA, and "they would learn almost immediately of any development affecting Britain."

As darkness fell, a police spokesman near the embassy said contacts with those inside were continuing and were "stable." He did not elaborate.

Home Secretary Leon Brittan, after heading two meetings of the Cabinet's crisis committee, visited police at London's hushed St. James's Square, where sharpshooters' rifles are trained on the five-story embassy and its estimated 20-30 occupants.

"We don't know. They may have killed some people inside the bureau because we don't know now what is happening inside our bureau. The people who attacked this place are responsible for anything that took place there. Anyhow, our bureau is not responsible at all."

Khadafi said the British in Libya "are OK and in good conditions. . . . We try to make our masses here quiet. . . . Not to do anything against these people. Our people is very, very angry and we hope we can control that situation."

Redistricting plan disappoints Evans

By BOB FICK
The Associated Press

BOISE (AP) — Gov. John Evans, concerned about the expense of running in huge multicounty legislative districts, said Thursday he has "serious reservations" about the latest reapportionment legislative policy makers submitted to him earlier in the day.

The governor's comments came as the state Supreme Court refused to delay the primary election and stay imposition of a court-ordered reapportionment plan and a three-judge federal panel dismissed for lack of jurisdiction a challenge to that court-ordered map filed last month by legislative leaders.

Those actions leave a pending appeal before the U.S. Supreme Court as the only body that can stop the election on the court plan if Evans turns his back on the Legislature's latest alternative.

"I had earlier forewarned legislative leaders that large multimember legislative districts are they have designed are unpopular," Evans said after meeting with Rep. Vard

Khadafi claims gunman shot at demonstrators in self defense

NEW YORK (AP) — Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafi said Thursday that British police were responsible for the gunfire at the Libyan Embassy in London and that it is up to the British to end the siege of the building.

Khadafi said the gunman inside the building who sprayed submachine gun fire on a crowd of demonstrators outside the embassy Tuesday was responding to an attack.

Eyewitness reports and videotapes of the incident indicate the protest by anti-Khadafi demonstrators was peaceful, that the protesters were behind police lines and that no shots were fired at the building.

One policewoman was killed and 11 protesters were wounded by the gunman.

"I think the British policemen killed themselves.

Because they shot our bureau during the attack. They are responsible for the killing of this woman," Khadafi said in a live interview from Tripoli broadcast on the NBC-TV "Today" show.

British forces have surrounded the embassy, which the Libyans call a "people's bureau," demanding that the Libyans leave voluntarily and permit a search of the premises.

"British police force and helicopters and British armed forces must withdraw immediately and release our people there. Nothing else," Khadafi said.

Asked who was responsible for the gunman's action, Khadafi said:

"The world knows that this area of the building of our bureau is considered as a part of our territory.

Therefore any embassy or people's bureau like this has the right to defend itself against any attack. And British government committed this attack. . . . And British government is responsible for any accident that takes place there.

"We don't know. They may have killed some people inside the bureau because we don't know now what is happening inside our bureau. The people who attacked this place are responsible for anything that took place there. Anyhow, our bureau is not responsible at all."

Khadafi said the British in Libya "are OK and in good conditions. . . . We try to make our masses here quiet. . . . Not to do anything against these people. Our people is very, very angry and we hope we can control that situation."

Reagan administration takes partial credit Drop in crime attributed to aging baby-boom generation

By MICHAEL J. SNIPPEN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration took partial credit Thursday for the largest drop in reported crime in a generation, but academic observers attributed most of the decline to the aging of the post-World War II baby boom generation.

Releasing preliminary figures for 1983, the FBI said the number of serious crimes reported to police in the United States dropped 7 percent, the second significant decline in two years and the largest drop since 1969.

"This marvelous news proves we are beginning to win the battle against crime with some of the most significant initiatives and results in years," Attorney General William French Smith said. "The public is getting tougher about crime. So are we."

Smith hailed the administration's campaign against drug traffickers and said, "It is no coincidence that the decreases come when prison populations are at an all-time high.

But academic experts, some of whom predicted the decline eight years before it happened, said demographic changes explain far more of the drop than other contributing factors, like declining employment, career criminal programs or citizen crime watch programs. They said the other factors are not felt so uniformly across the nation.

Most largely discounted a federal role, primarily because the vast majority of crimes are state and local, not federal offenses.

The 1983 preliminary figures showed declines in all seven major crimes on the FBI Crime Index, in every region and every size community.

The 7 percent decline compares to a 3 percent decline in 1982. There was a decline in 1981 that officials considered insignificant.

The FBI report said violent crimes of murder, rape, robbery and aggravated assault declined 5 percent from 1982. The far more numerous property crimes of burglary, larceny-theft and motor vehicle theft dropped 7 percent.

University in Pittsburgh predicted in the 1970s that baby boom aging would cut crime in the 1980s. "The relatively fewer people born in the late 1960s are now occupying the high crime ages of the mid- to late teens," Blumstein said. "So there are fewer people in the ages that have the highest propensity to commit crimes."

Prof. Marvin Wolfgang of the University of Pennsylvania made a similar prediction in 1976. He also studied the impact of the consumer price index, unemployment and the ratio of police officers to residents on crime patterns since 1950.

Heavy rain, snow pelt Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah's brief period of spring-like weather ended abruptly Thursday as heavy rain and snow pelted the state, overflowing city storm drains and increased slide problems.

Heavy rain and wet snow caused a rash of traffic accidents, and the Utah Highway Patrol said two people died and five were injured in a crash on a slick highway near Point of the Mountain south of Salt Lake City.

By evening, the Salt Lake City International Airport had received 7.5 inches of precipitation. The rain was expected to turn to snow, with 4 to 6 inches predicted for valleys and mountains expected to receive up to 2 feet of new snow on top of a record snowpack.

The National Weather Service issued a winter storm warning for the entire state Thursday night and today.

Snake River flooding in Oregon

ONTARIO, Ore. (AP) — Waters from the rain-swollen Snake River undermined Interstate 84 just east of here in Idaho Thursday evening, injuring a truck driver when his vehicle crashed into the highway's center divider, Oregon State Police said.

The driver of the trucking rig was taken to Holy Rosary Hospital in Ontario where he was listed as being in stable condition. Witnesses at the site of the washout reported that the entire highway had collapsed in both directions.

Meanwhile, more families were evacuated from a mobile home park Thursday as water from the bulging Snake River pushed through an earthen dike in Eastern Oregon.

"They don't have the water coming over the dike; it's coming through it," said National Guard Sgt. Gary Getman.

Trucks loaded of sand were placed along the dike, which was within inches of being topped by the river.

Michael Jackson recovering

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Pop music star Michael Jackson was "doing fine" a day after laser surgery to repair his scalped head, a hospital spokeswoman said Thursday.

"Michael is resting very comfortably," said Diane Sherman, spokeswoman for Brodman Memorial Hospital in this suburb west of Los Angeles. "He's doing fine. He should be ready to go on his tour in June."

Thousands of Jackson's fans have jammed the hospital's switchboard with get-well calls, she said.

Hope offered in Vegas strike

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A union leader offered a glimmer of hope Thursday as negotiators met in a lengthy session searching for an end to a bitter 10-day hotel-casino strike that has idled 170,000 workers.

"There is movement," said Jeff McCall, secretary-treasurer of the Culinary Union. "We could be here a long time. We'll negotiate all night if they want to stay."

McCall had been pessimistic following anxious negotiating sessions, calling them a farce and a waste of time.

But Las Vegas Hilton executive Henri Lewin promised that the proposal given union leaders Thursday "should excite everybody."

West offers new troop-talk plan

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The Western allies, in what they called "a clear demonstration of flexibility," unveiled a new plan Thursday for ending the stalemate at the Central European troop reduction talks, the longest running East-West disarmament forum.

A Warsaw Pact spokesman criticized the plan as merely a new twist to previous ideas put forth by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but said the Soviet bloc would accept it. A formal response was not expected until the next plenary session of the Mutual Balanced Force Reduction talks on May 24.

The talks began Oct. 20, 1978.

Presented to reporters by Canadian Ambassador Thomas Hammond, the latest NATO proposal drops a longstanding Western demand for a starting-point agreement on the total number of opposing troops in the region.

It calls for withdrawal of 13,000 American troops and 30,000 Soviet soldiers from Europe as a first step in a five-year plan of phased pullouts.

Woman faked her abduction

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A woman who claimed she was abducted from a psychiatric hospital was charged Thursday with filing a false report and public drunkenness, and police say they consider the incident a hoax.

Bebbe Bryant, 51, was found unharmed, alone and semiconscious in the parking lot of a suburban shopping center Thursday morning, 25 hours after she called her supervisor claiming she had been abducted by two teenage boys, said Bobby Yates, a spokesman for county police.

He said the case was considered a hoax.

Brad Hughes, a spokesman for the Cabinet for Human Resources, which oversees the hospital, said Mrs. Bryant was notified earlier this week that she would be fired from her job there as a part-time clerk.

U.N. force in Beirut extended

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council extended the life of the U.N. peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon for another six months Thursday, a few hours short of a midnight deadline.

The council voted 13-0, with the Soviet Union and the Ukraine abstaining.

Extensions have been voted regularly since the 10-nation U.N. Peacekeeping Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL), which now has 6,000 soldiers, was sent into southern Lebanon in 1978 to keep order and oversee the withdrawal of Israeli troops.

Reporter arrested, beaten

MCALLEN, Texas (AP) — A reporter who had written a series of articles critical of Mexican federal police said Thursday he was arrested, beaten and tortured with a cattle prod by Mexican authorities while covering a strike rally.

Scott Lind, a reporter for The (McAllen) Monitor, said he was held overnight Tuesday in a Mexican police office building, blindfolded, beaten on the head and shocked with a cattle prod.

Judge: Courts under confinements when ruling on case of downed jet

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge, acting in a suit arising from the Soviet downing of a South Korean jetliner, ruled Thursday that the courts have no authority to act on "political questions" about decisions made by the U.S. armed forces.

Chief U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. made his decision in dismissing parts of lawsuits against the federal government arising from the shooting down of Korean Air Lines flight 007 over the Sea of Japan last Sept. 1.

Robinson said, however, that relatives of the 289 victims may review government files to uncover "the extent of a legal duty to warn or advise civilian aircraft in the position of KAL 007."

U.S. officials have been accused of negligence in many of the 81 lawsuits filed in this court by families of the 240 passengers and 29 crew members who died. Other defendants include the Boeing Co., which built the plane, and Citron Industries, which manufactured the navigation equipment.

"The court finds that these claims present political questions which the judicial branch should decline to review," Robinson said in a 14-page decision. "Moreover, decisions which affect the national security with respect to the Soviet Union involve policy considerations beyond the scope of judicial expertise."

One of the accusations is that the U.S. government "negligently" deployed military planes in the vicinity of the flight path of the Korean airliner.

But Robinson said: "The court may not appraise the necessity or desirability of conducting the reconnaissance activities alleged by plaintiffs. Such appraisal would involve the court in foreign policy determinations calling for non-judicial discretion.

"To attempt to decide such a matter without the necessary expertise and in the absence of judicially manageable standards would be to entangle the court in matters constitutionally given to the executive branch," he continued.

—Emphasized to them — that they reduce the size of the fleet," the chief executive said. "They didn't come up with that kind of plan, and I have serious reservations that it will be acceptable."

But Evans told Chaburn and other legislative leaders that he would not flatly reject the proposed 37-district plan until he has discussed it with fellow Democrats across the state. He said he will deliver his answer in the next several days.

Also at the meeting were House Speaker Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, House Majority Leader Jack Kennick, R-Boise, and House Minority Leader Harold Reid, D-Craigmont.

Chaburn said he came away from the meeting believing there was only a 50-50 chance that Evans would endorse the latest alternative to a court-ordered plan and recall the Legislature into special session to pass it.

The five lawmakers were among members of the Legislative Council, which earlier in the day voted to submit the latest plan to Evans even though Risch expressed doubts that it would be acceptable. Stivers called it "one final, desperate effort" to head off imposition of a controversial court-ordered map.

But in the unlikely event that Evans backs the plan, Risch and Stivers said lawmakers will be polled immediately to determine if they'll pass it in a quick one-day special session. Evans is demanding that kind of consensus before he will recall lawmakers. A delay in the primary until late June at least would also be part of the package.

U.S. automakers have scheduled the assembly of 124,410 cars this week, down 25.5 percent from the 176,835 cars built last week, Ward's Automotive Reports said. The trade journal said schedules were cut because of the holiday-shortened workweek.

Driving offender faces prison

LEWISTON (AP) — A 20-year-old Lewiston man may be the first Idaho resident sentenced to prison for a felony charge of driving with a suspended license, state officials say.

Jeffrey A. Wood had 11 prior convictions for driving with a suspended license or driving without privileges. When he appeared before District Judge John H. Maynard on his 12th conviction Wednesday, it was for a felony charge, not a misdemeanor.

Denise Crabtree of Information Services of the Idaho Department of Corrections at Boise checked the department's records for other felony convictions on the same charge and said she could find none.

Boise mail box explodes

BOISE (AP) — Officials were investigating a Thursday explosion that blew a mailbox apart near a Boise home.

There were no injuries.

Deputy Fire Chief Ken Vargason said the woman who owns the mailbox had taken her mail out of the box only 10 minutes before it exploded. She was in her house at the time of the explosion.

No further information was immediately available.

Meanwhile, Nampa Police were investigating an explosion that occurred late Wednesday night in a trash can on the baseball diamond at Northwest Nazarene College.

Prison escapee charged anew

CALDWELL (AP) — A May 1 preliminary hearing has been set for Steven Thomas Burk, an Idaho penitentiary inmate accused of escaping from the Canyon County Jail in January.

Burk was arraigned on a felony escape charge Wednesday. The preliminary hearing will be held to determine whether there is sufficient evidence for him to stand trial.

Officials at the penitentiary south of Boise said Burk, 35, was transferred to the jail from the prison on Jan. 3 for his safety after he told authorities of an alleged escape attempt involving Claude Dallas Jr. Dallas is serving a 30-year term for the deaths of two state game wardens.

State gets funds for cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The state of Idaho is getting $7.2 million in federal funds for community development.

Idaho's congressional delegation on Thursday announced the grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Gov. John Evans scheduled a news conference Friday to discuss the funds.

Cities with populations of less than 50,000 can apply for the funds, which can be used for projects like housing rehabilitation, streets, sewers, and economic development.

Ricks has record graduation

REXBURG (AP) — Ricks College has graduated a record number of students in ceremonies that featured Elder Neal Maxwell of the Council of the Twelve of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-day Saints.

The junior college awarded 1,621 associated degrees Thursday to students from 13 states and 17 foreign countries. Idaho residents accounted for 1,311 of those degrees.

Last year, the two-year institution awarded 1,411 degrees.

County threatening suit over EnviroSAFE

GRAND VIEW (AP) — Owyhee County is threatening court action if federal officials don't "properly" handle alleged violations by EnviroSAFE Services Inc., operator of a Grand View hazardous waste site.

Efforts to reach EnviroSAFE officials for comment Thursday were unsuccessful.

County officials have accused ESI of 11 violations of federal requirements for training employees.

County Prosecutor Clayton Andersen said unless federal officials "properly deal" with the problem, the county may go to court to seek fines, a court order, or perhaps curtailment of the company's main operation near Grand View.

Most of the alleged training violations concern alleged improper record-keeping or lack of records.

An April 13 letter from county officials to EnviroSAFE says that personnel files of 17 employees "indicate no training in either evacuation procedures" or steps to take in case of a fire or explosion.

Andersen said the charges involve more than just paperwork and said county officials believe there is an actual lack of training.

"We see this as a significant safety problem, not only for workers at the site, but for people in the neighborhood," he said.

Develop a budget, then determine levy

There may be times when school districts need to ask their communities for override levies to maintain the quality of education in the district. But such a decision in Twin Falls at this juncture would be, in our view, premature.

We have two reasons for suggesting that the Twin Falls School Board delay a decision on the proposed levy of $375,000 to $475,000.

Our first and best reason is that the levy might not be needed. State Superintendent of Schools Jerry Evans, in town this week, told local superintendents that an estimated $15 million in new money will be available this year. Of that, $2 million is available for books.

Budget estimates were previously based on an $11 million figure, under which a levy might have been needed. The difference is significant. In an April 2 memo to state superintendent, Evans said that when the state surplus is added in, the state increased educational support this year by almost 15 percent.

Twin Falls' share of the larger number isn't exactly known, but the bottom line is that the state went a long way this year in funding public education.

Most Idahoans are aware that teachers will get healthy pay raises this year, but what they may not be aware of is that support was increased in other areas, too. That was Evans' point as he called the funding year a "good year for education." He outlined increases of more than $41.4 million to education alone, which, we agree, is "not bad."

Given increases of that size, we think it would be prudent for local districts like Twin Falls to wait until their money is in hand before they come asking for yet more taxes to fund local education.

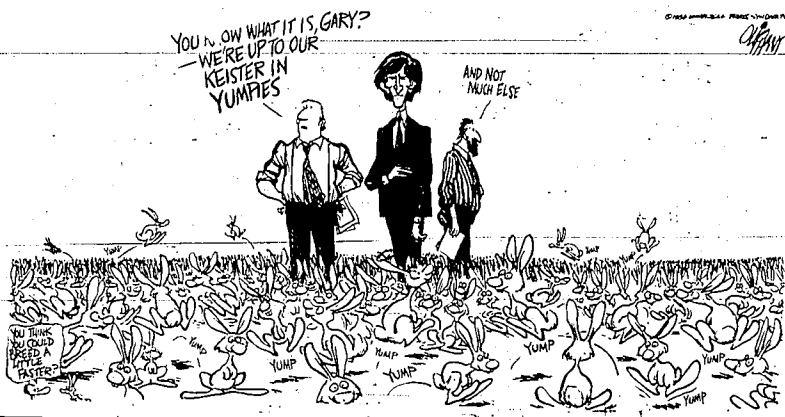

Second, we think it is premature for any district to ask for an override without a budget in place against which people can judge both income and expected expenditures.

The Twin Falls school administration has not yet set out a formal budget, nor has it negotiated a contract for next year with its teachers. Until it does at least the first, we believe it is premature to come to the taxpayers for additional money.

It is true that the district, like many others, has deferred needed building maintenance, book purchases and dipped into a contingency fund in years past as a way of scapping by. It is also true that such practices cannot be done year after year.

But it is also true that the public's support for education is limited by the depth of the tax pocket.

Despite our long-time support for education and educational funding, we think the Twin Falls district should restrain from asking for more money until it develops a budget, sees what the real needs are, and determines what it will get from an already "good" year in funding support from the state.

New candidates offer voters a choice

I had been led to believe Magic Valley legislative races would all be over on May 22. But when Monday's deadline ended, it became apparent my premonition was unfounded.

Workers at the secretary of state's office dug out from beneath the avalanche of filings left from 60 last-minute legislative candidates, including several local educators.

Not only did there appear to be contested races among the all-powerful Republicans in this area. But thanks to those educators, a new breed of politician — all but unknown in Magic Valley legislative circles — emerged: the Democrat.

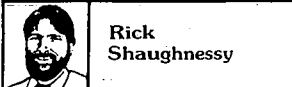

Now, from past reports, I find that folks calling themselves Democrats have run for office in these parts in the past.

And in fact one has been elected twice. Sen. John Peavey of Carey has served two terms as a Democrat. But he cut his political teeth in the Republican party, having served three of his five terms in the Senate with the GOP.

Except for Peavey, Democratic legislative candidates in the area typically haven't fared well in the valley. Peavey is the only Democrat among the 15 members of the local delegation.

This year, however, the eight-county delegation might include a few more members from the state's minority party. And if it does, it's likely a good percentage of those new legislators will be educators.

Five of the 10 Democratic candidates from the eight-county area are educators, four of whom surfaced during the final day of filings. Three of the four hold or have held leadership positions in their respective teachers' unions. "Our desire is to encourage democracy," Terry Gilbert, Magic Valley regional director of the Idaho Education Association, told Times-News reporter Annette Gory this week. "The candidates received encouragement from us and others," he said.

The filings were not the result of formal deliberation by the association, but resulted from informal discussions among local union members last week, he said.

Among the candidates are Joyce Houston, president of the Twin Falls Education Association; Lee Wilson, former president of the Kimberly Education Association; and Nick Nicholson, a former member of the negotiating team for the Twin Falls Education Association.

John J. Hurley, chairman of the business department of the College of Southern Idaho, rounds out the list of the four educators who filed nominal petitions on Monday. Gene Sullivan, a teacher from Camas County and one of the first candidates to file, is the fifth educator on the Democratic slate.

Sullivan's chances should be considered the best of the five in terms of the voting habits of the area's legislative districts.

Under the court-ordered reapportionment plan now in effect, Sullivan resides in a district that voted 56.9 percent for Democratic Gov. John Evans in 1982. It is the only district, among the four districts that include the eight Magic Valley counties, to have favored Evans over Republican challenger Phil Batt in that race.

Evans' next best showing in that race was for the eight-county region as a whole where he received 46.7 percent of the vote. That area comprises the Magic Valley floor district in which Hurley and Nicholson will face off for the Democratic nomination for senator.

Twin Falls County, in which Wilson and Houston will seek office, gave Evans 45.7 percent of its support in 1982. Those candidates will face Speaker of the House Tom Stivers and Rep. Donna Scott, respectively, in the November election.

It is likely the educators' candidacies will be closely scrutinized by those who believe the teachers' union is counterproductive to efforts to attain quality education in Idaho. Gilbert says the topic of discussion during the informal talks among union members "was better representation for everyone, not just teachers."

One thing is for sure: The new candidates give voters a choice in November and may breathe life into the two-party system in the Magic Valley.

Hair dryer awaits orbiting repairmen

BOSTON — For many years, my favorite line about the space program came from a local consumer reporter who said, "If we can put a man on the moon, we can make a panty hose that doesn't rip."

But after last week's space venture, starring Astrojax's Goodwrench, I have decided that it's time for an all-new slogan: "If we can get a satellite fixed, surely we can get a hair dryer fixed."

As an average American, surrounded by the litter of my own technological life, I watched the flight of the Five Repairmen with a certain degree of awe and even envy. It wasn't the space trip that impressed me. I have grown used to that. But this time I witnessed a real life service call. A group of repairmen had cheerfully gone out on a job, determined the problem and solved it.

When the work was complete, the five appeared at a news conference wearing T-shirts that read "Ace Satellite Repair Co." I kept hoping that someone would flash their 800 number onto the screen.

Okay, it took the space agency 3 1/2 years, from the time Solar Maximum broke down to the time the repairmen arrived, but who are we to complain about that?

The way I figure it, as the Celestial Handymen were repairing the Solar Max in space, the average broken-down American household had no less than five mechanical items in various stages of chronic non-care. The difference was that most of these will never get any better.

In fairness, there were some things about the space repair mission that I can't claim as earthly experiences. The first visit was a failure; they couldn't get a grip on the problem. The men explained their failure in full-TT repairman-speak: "Current opinion is that the failure to dock with the Solar Max Mission triumph pin Sunday was due to a thermal blanket retaining stud which extended out over the trunion pin."

Nevertheless, the stunning accomplishment of this air-shuttle mission is that NASA succeeded where consumers failed.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Unquoted parts of Kress-Martin memo raise credibility

I read your piece in Sunday's Times-News. You might be making a valid point about the evidence for the meeting between Kress and Martin, but in outlining a legitimate criticism about the state of the evidence, you seem to be working very hard to suggest that it couldn't be true.

For your private peace of mind, Howard Martin checked into an Idaho Falls motel on the day in question. On that same day, Mr. Kress visited the same motel without any scheduled campaign business there. (No, he wasn't registered. Yes, there were witnesses.)

But back to my observations on your piece. You very skillfully put the allegation in the same class as Lenin and the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy. I guess that is your privilege, but it does look a little like loading the case against the truthfulness involved in quoting the memo. I think that the parts of the memo which you do not quote raise the credibility of the whole item considerably. For instance, "Also, present... were an Idaho Falls agent and his supervisor. The supervisor was removed the week following his admission during the arbitration hearing to two additional such meetings with candidate Kress."

Certainly, it is no great feat of journalistic investigation to determine whether an Idaho Falls IRS supervisor was abruptly removed or transferred between 1975 and 1980.

In other words, Steve, you know as well as I that the memo is a great deal more than a mere unsubstantiated claim. Too many facts are stated. Too many easily verifiable items are stated. It is either a tissue of lies or a bald statement of serious facts.

Plug another item into your thinking, Stan. Kress and Howard Martin are plainly named in the memo. Others in the employ of the IRS are identified clearly enough to require a little work to put names to the references. Very prominent Idaho political types and very prominent federal employees are flatly stated to have been involved in activities related to publicizing tax information about another person. I'll bet you can search information listed as a federal felony in Title 26 United States Code. So is receipt of that information.

Although I am a biased observer, I submit to you that the ingredients of a major story have been spelled out. Enough, at least, to set a newsman's nose twitching. Even stronger, one of the participants in the alleged meetings has used the threat of libel to try to suppress any reference to the sordid mess. Libel is universally a dirty word to press types. Yet on this one, not a word about how libel is used and how it works against the First Amendment right to know and the right of the press to inform. Your last paragraph is so vague that it doesn't even read like a defense of the right to publish so dear to the heart of newspaper board rooms.

You were not around, but during the congressional campaigns of the '70s, false information from the same IRS sources was used without any question as to the truth by your newspaper buddies. Only two persons, as far as I know, are listed in how you handle information about Hansen and information about his opponents over these several years. The first is that the ethics of your trade have improved over the years. Allow me to be skeptical about that one. The other is "that a criterion other than the news value of a story inflects these decisions: It seems plain that you have decided long ago that Hansen is a bad guy, so everything he does is under a microscope. In that mindset, anyone opposed to Hansen is by your definition a good guy and to be protected at all costs. I can hear you shout fantastic, ridiculous, insulting all the way back here.

At no time was I in a little less all alone by myself in a dark room, switch the roles in the current case. Stallings surfaces in the memo. The name in the memo is Hansen instead of Kress. Would your press buddies have treated it as they have treated this one? We both know the answer to that one, don't we?

But this on paper because I think that your instinct for fairness is getting in the way of you savaging Hansen. If you are a fair man, I think that you will agree that if that memo speaks the truth, everyone involved in the events of that period are disqualified from public life. If you don't agree, I would really appreciate your reasoning. If doing wrong can be justified in the name of good, then the burden is on you in the media to set that reasoning before the public and let them in on the basis of such informal censorship.

James T. McKenna is chief legislative assistant and staff counsel for Rep. George Hansen in Washington, D.C. He did not intend this for publication, but agreed to its release when requested by The Times-News.

Letters/ 'It must depend on whether you're dealing with a banker or a Bunker'

Common sense comes first
Now we have George Hansen's children defending him — shades of Richard Nixon, when one daughter vehemently (and pathetically) said that her father had never lied. This was on the steps outside the White House not long before he finally released the tapes which showed otherwise.

It is understandable that Mr. Hansen's children do not have the objectivity that a judge, jury or constituents must have. But as young adults, it is incumbent upon them to begin thinking independently when it comes to plain facts.

Keep in mind that they have surely spent more of their lives in the East than in Idaho. If Washington, D.C., is such an evil place, why did they all choose to live there as adults and derive their income from what the IRS collects? At minimum, two of them (besides George and Ronnie) are in the government payroll. They effect, I suspect, that the jury did consist of his peers. Should it have been composed of only congressmen? If so, which ones — only those who have been on trial? They would indeed be his peers, but the selection was made (and each one agreed to by his own attorney) in the same manner as for everyone else, and since Hansen never wants to be singled out, it would be wrong.

It is probably true that the members of the jury couldn't identify with his lifestyle. Neither would the average Idahoan.

How many of us could, while heavily in debt, borrow thousands and thousands of dollars, and then just never pay back one loan of $50,000 without explanation to the lender — after repeated dunt?

It must depend on whether you're dealing with a banker or a Bunker. Interesting how he can be so fed up with bureaucratic mismanagement and "special interests."

It's simply incredible that the whole government would get so worried about one congressman from a state with as small a representation as that which they would pull out all the stops to unseat him.

If critics are such a threat to them, why weren't they gone after a Proxmire (Golden Fleece Award) or a Goldwater? If they are, they must not have discovered anything questionable.

Loyalty is admirable from children, but please, Idahoans, don't let sentimentality take precedence over common sense. This isn't a popularity contest — it reflects your integrity, too. If you don't believe it, stop and think — what do you think of Kennedy supporters? His family stood behind him, too; but do you believe his claim of confusions at Chappaquiddick?

Powerless to fight trends
I find it inconceivable that the city council could even consider giving up some of our pretty Little City Park for a new Chamber of Commerce building. In comparison with other towns, Twin Falls hasn't many parks and certainly no large park dedicated to a good guy and the Idaho Falls City Park which was built with WPA funds during the Depression.

Once a park is gone, there is no way to replace the lost land!
I have sat and watched in horror as the powers that be in Twin Falls have torn down all the trees and the landmarks that made Twin Falls unique. At one time driving northwest on Shoshone was a pleasant experience. Trees bordered the street and at the end was pretty Washington School.

Now many of the trees are gone and, of course, the school is replaced by unlovely stores. Blue Lakes Boulevard which once held promise of being comparable to Harrison Boulevard in Boise is now a treeless street of fast food joints and car dealerships to which an unneeded shopping mall will soon be added.

Each time we elect a new school board or city council, they seem bent on tearing out some lovely old building and replacing it with some extravagant new non-functional edifice.

The plans for the new grade school sound as frivolous as the new O'Leary Junior High School is. And alas, we the taxpayers are powerless to fight this trend!

Second man quizzed, freed by agents guarding Mondale

By JERRY ESTILL
The Associated Press

DEARBORN, Mich. — Secret Service agents, in the second such incident in recent weeks, hustled an armed union official away from Democratic presidential contender Walter F. Mondale during a campaign appearance Thursday.

The man offered no resistance and was released a short time later, the Secret Service said.

He was identified by the Secret Service as William Polakowski, in Washington, Secret Service spokesman Jack Smith said agents released Polakowski after questioning him and deciding there had been no threat to Mondale.

Smith said Polakowski had a permit for the gun he was carrying in a pocket.

In Detroit, a United Auto Workers spokeswoman identified Polakowski as an international representative working out of Detroit.

He was reaching over some people between himself and Mondale, apparently to shake hands, when agents noticed a gun in his rear pocket. Mondale was talking to Polakowski at the time.

One agent locked the man's arm behind his back and rushed him into a men's room at the rear of a banquet hall where Mondale had been speaking to a $50 per person reception.

Ray Majerus, UAW secretary-treasurer, said Polakowski had a permit for the pistol and had forgotten he had the gun with him.

Majerus described Polakowski as "a very harmless man with a gun."

The incident occurred as Mondale had finished brief remarks and was working his way toward an exit, shaking hands as he went.

The man's father, Bill Sr., appeared in the hallway outside where his son was being held.

"My son carries a gun and so do I. He has a permit," the father said.

Agents questioned the man in the men's room for about 15 minutes, and Mondale went on to a private, scheduled event.

Pact made for Los Angeles water

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An often-bloody 50-year feud over Los Angeles' rights to take water from a valley more than 200 miles away has ended with an agreement that one official called "the beginning of a new era."

The peaceable settlement approved by the Los Angeles City Council on Wednesday was in sharp contrast to the strong-arm tactics the two antagonists employed against each other in the past, some of which were chronicled in the Roman Polanski movie "Chinatown."

The pact is to lead over five years to permanent rules on how groundwater from the Owens Valley will be divided between Inyo County residents and the thirsty metropolis to the south.

Mayor Tom Bradley immediately signed the agreement, which was approved by the Inyo County Board of Supervisors three weeks ago.

"The plan" marks the beginning of a new era of relations between Los Angeles and Inyo County," said Los Angeles City Councilman John Ferraro, chairman of the council committee in charge of water.

"This is the first time we've really had an opportunity to sit down and realize we're here together and have to live together."

The Owens Valley has been the city's major source of water since the early 1920s.

Bush: Soviets still cool

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush said Thursday the Soviet Union might be tempted to "sweat it out" and wait until after this fall's U.S. election in hopes it might be able to cut a better arms control deal with a Democratic president.

But the Republican vice president indicated he believes the Soviets would be ill advised to count on the defeat of the Reagan administration and a reversal of its arms policies.

"If I were a Soviet leader and I felt the Americans were going to have that position (next year), you might decide to sweat it out," he said. "But I don't think they will. I don't think that's necessarily going to be the position of the next administration."

However, Bush said the temptation to wait out the election might be strong if Moscow believed a new American administration might approve a nuclear freeze, scrap the B-1 bomber and the MX missile, or reduce the numbers of U.S. troops in western Europe.

The three major Democratic presidential candidates — former Vice President Walter Mondale, Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson — oppose the B-1 and MX and support a nuclear freeze. Mondale has called for maintaining a powerful U.S. military presence in Europe, but Hart and Jackson have said they would cut American forces in Europe.

"If I were a Soviet leader I might think seriously about waiting" before resuming suspended nuclear arms control talks, Bush said.

Jurors shown tape in De Lorean trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors in the John Z. De Lorean drug trial saw a videotape Thursday in which a financial deal involving cocaine was proposed to the automaker, and he responded, "It looks like a good opportunity."

The videotape was recorded Sept. 8, 1982, two months after the government began a "sting" operation involving De Lorean.

It was played as the government opened its audio-visual show with judge and jurors listening through large black earphones to the recordings that allegedly tie the maverick automaker to narcotics.

Republican wants Meese ousted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Paul S. Trible, R-Va., called on President Reagan Thursday to withdraw his nomination of White House counselor Edwin Meese III for attorney general.

Trible is the first Republican senator to say publicly that Reagan should withdraw the nomination of Meese, the president's top policy adviser. Several Democrats had previously urged him to do so.

Meese's nomination has been put on hold pending the outcome of an investigation by independent counsel Jacob A. Stein into allegations involving the presidential counselor's financial affairs and other matters.

Questions have been raised about Meese's financial dealings and his receiving loans from people who later got federal jobs, but Meese has denied any wrongdoing.

"It's my judgment the nomination ought to be withdrawn," Trible said.

"The last thing we need now is the continuation of this controversy."

The Republican senator, usually a staunch Reagan supporter, added: "However, I am not the president."

Trible also added that Reagan "has submitted the matter to a special counsel for investigation and I will await the results of that investigation before making up my mind on whether to support the nomination or not."

Workers laid off at nuclear plant

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Hundreds of newly laid off workers from the Seabrook nuclear power plant jammed a makeshift unemployment office Thursday, while the project's builder eliminated stock dividends and cut salaries in efforts to avoid bankruptcy.

The board of the Public Service Company of New Hampshire, meeting in Manchester, voted to cut the utility's workforce by 11 percent, reduce by 10 to 15 percent the salaries of management who earn more than $35,000 a year and reduce by 15 percent the fees paid to outside directors, said Robert Harrison, Public Service president and chief executive.

The reductions, which Harrison said could save $30 million in first-quarter dividends and $8 million annually in salaries, came a day after the utility abruptly halted work on its first reactor, laying off 5,200 of the 9,200 plant workers. Work on the second reactor was halted in September, and the company gave no indication when work on either might resume.

The board "will continually review its dividend policy," Harrison said. Cancellation of the dividend, "will create a special burden for the people, many of them elderly, who depend on our dividend for their income. But it is a decision that had to be made in an attempt to maintain the viability of the stockholders' investment."

Hundreds of workers were outside the National Guard Armory in Portsmouth on Thursday morning when an emergency claim processing office opened, said George Teller of the Department of Employment Security. The office planned to handle only workers whose last names began with the letters "A" through "H" on Thursday, with the others to be processed today and Saturday, Teller said.

Public Service, which owns 36 percent of Seabrook, attributed the shutdown to "financial pressures" that it declined to explain.

Salvador refugees told to relocate

By FREDDY CUEVAS
The Associated Press

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A day after a helicopter carrying two U.S. senators was fired upon, the Honduras government said Salvadoran refugee camps near the border have become sanctuaries for leftist rebels and that it will move them to the interior.

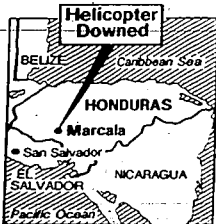

Col. Abraham Garcia Turcios, coordinator of the National Commission on Refugees, said Thursday that refugees from Colomonegua and San Antonio, two camps within a few miles of the border, would be shifted after the Easter holidays.

"The Salvadoran refugees have two choices: allow themselves to be relocated, or be expelled from Honduras," he said.

On Wednesday, ground fire hit the helicopter carrying Sens. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., and forced it to land as it approached the Colomonegua camp. They were not injured. A second helicopter carrying Diana Negroponte, wife of U.S. Ambassador John Negroponte, was fired on but not hit, the U.S. Embassy said.

Salvadoran rebels claimed responsibility for the attack in a broadcast Thursday over clandestine Radio Venceremos, which says it originates from Morazan province, a rebel stronghold across the border from where the helicopter was downed.

The broadcast said rebel "anti-aircraft units" fired on the helicopters after they crossed the Honduran border into Morazan province and flew 10 miles into guerrilla-held territory.

Ambassador Negroponte, who was not traveling with the senators and his wife, agreed Thursday that the refugee camps should be moved from the border.

"This incident shows the need to move the Salvadoran refugee camps into the interior of Honduras," he said at a news conference with the senators before they left Honduras for Panama.

Garcia Turcios, head of the Honduran commission on refugees, said the Salvadorans would be relocated despite opposition from some.

"Those immigrants, whom our nation has received with open arms, constitute a real danger for Honduras simply because they occupy a pocket of territory still disputed by El Salvador and Honduras," he said.

Envoy swap still troubled

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government says it will accept the credentials of the new U.S. ambassador to Nicaragua despite the Reagan administration's refusal to accept Nora Astorga as Nicaragua's ambassador to Washington.

The Foreign Ministry statement said that "despite the attitude" of the U.S. government it will accept the credentials of Harry Bergold as the replacement for Ambassador Anthony Quinlan.

Bergold, a former ambassador to Hungary, is waiting for U.S. Senate approval to the Managua post.

A Foreign Ministry statement issued late Wednesday said the U.S. rejection of Astorga "shows once again the lack of will to begin a direct and sustained dialogue" between the two countries.

Astorga, who was a heroine of the revolution that brought the leftist Sandinistas to power in July 1979, currently serves as deputy foreign minister. She has freely admitted her role as a Sandinista militant in the 1978 slaying of Nicaraguan Gen. Reynaldo Perez Vega.

Protesting sailor reinforced by Vietnam vets

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Today former sailor Dave Newman will get reinforcements for his siege of the U.S. Navy Recruiting Office in Twin Falls.

A former Marine and probably some ex-Army troopers will march beside Newman in protest of his discharge from the Navy.

The former soldiers and sailors — all members of the Vietnam Veterans of America — volunteered to help the 16-year, Navy veteran fight for reinstatement after hearing his story Wednesday night.

Some other important ears were listening. A staff member from the office of Rep. George Hansen took notes throughout the evening. Those notes could turn into a Congressional inquiry, Newman hopes they do.

It's been 2½ years since the radioman was discharged "for the convenience of the government." Technically, Newman requested discharge as an alternative to a transfer, offered by the Navy.

But Newman, a Twin Falls resident, says he was forced out of the service. He claims a chief petty officer, whose job was to keep sailors in the Navy, cost him his career.

The petty officer, a career counselor, skillfully wielded his influence first to grab a plum assignment on the battleship U.S.S. New Jersey and then to exclude him, Newman says.

If Newman had been successful, Newman could have transferred to the U.S.S. New Jersey and kept custody of his children, he says. Instead, he was forced to take an automatic discharge provision included in his request for a transfer because of family hardship.

He doesn't blame the Navy itself, Newman says. He claims the Navy, too, was hoodwinked.

"If the Navy would look at it, they would see it also," he says.

But he is angry.

After listening to Newman's evidence — some of it hard facts contained in Navy documents and some of it his own accounts of conversations with various Navy officials — some VVA members were ready to join the picket line.

"If it's an inconvenience to the Navy, that's too bad," said ex-Marine Dan Hart of Twin Falls. "They've done an inconvenience to him."

The Navy doesn't see it that way. Navy spokesman Lt. Jack Ward said the case eventually had been reviewed as far as the Vice Chief of Naval Operations — "not a normal avenue of appeal."

That review, which was sparked by Sen. James McClure, and earlier ones came to the conclusion that Newman was "inflexible" because he would only accept the assignment to the battleship. Ward said. He also reinforced earlier Navy statements that Newman pursued a hardship transfer knowing that it might result in his discharge.

Hansen staff assistant Ellen Anderson said Wednesday the congressman would be told about Newman's case and given his documents.

Newman's friends who are veterans will be walking alongside him after work or when they have time today, they say.

Newman says he wants to be reinstated with the opportunity to keep his children. "I'd probably spend another 13 years in the Navy, given the opportunity," he said. He also hopes the Navy will take a closer look at his case.

Newman also intends to present his case to the Twin Falls Veterans of Foreign Wars in May.

But, according to the Navy, the choice now is clear. He is out of the service and, as a civilian, new rules apply.

Newman could re-enlist at his old rank, Radioman Petty Officer 1st Class (E-6), but if he does, he can't have custody of his children.

Navy rules are firm, says Ward. A single parent cannot enlist in the Navy unless custody of the children is transferred to his former spouse, parents, another responsible adult or an accredited child care agency.

McClure greets a supporter while his wife, Louise, left, hugs a friend soon after arriving at the airport.

Amid hoopla, McClure launches bid

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Amid much hoopla — balloons, banners, supporters sporting buttons and a banjo and guitar duo — Sen. Jim McClure announced Thursday he'll seek a third term in the U.S. Senate.

The stop at the Twin Falls airport was one of seven such announcements across the state. McClure, 60, and his wife, Louise, mingled briefly with a partisan crowd of about 40 supporters and well-wishers.

In addressing the crowd, McClure stressed positive images.

"Sometimes we make the mistake of concentrating on the negative things," he said. "Every once in a while we need to stop and take stock in what is right in America."

"The prime rate dropped this morning, which indicates we are on a sound economic base," he said. McClure said the progress made by the Reagan administration and a stronger Republican influence in Congress has resulted in a situation where inflation is not a problem affecting Americans today.

He said if Congress is successful in reducing the nation's budget deficits, inflation can be tamed in the future.

"Tip O'Neill is an honest man," McClure said. "Tip really believes the American people ought to have more services from government." He said, adding that the Massachusetts Democrat also believes the American people should be taxed more to pay for those services.

McClure — to no one's surprise — said he disagrees with O'Neill on that point. And he says he doesn't think the American people should pay more taxes to alleviate the deficits caused by current levels of spending. McClure said Congress needs to reduce expenditures and cut the burden of government.

The issue of allocating Idaho's water — a subject which preoccupies the Idaho Legislature this year — is an equally important issue in Washington, McClure said in an interview following the assembly.

A moratorium on interbasin transfers of water into the Colorado River basin will run out in 1988. McClure, who, as a congressman, helped Sen. Frank Church and Sen. Jordan shepherd that bill through Congress in 1978, says he will, at the least, seek to have the moratorium extended.

"It's already being questioned," said the chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee. "There are some very specific questions (being asked about) interbasin transfers," he said.

McClure said popular western states facing water shortages are politically powerful. "There is always the danger from areas short of water and with lots of people," he said.

"Idaho's water should be Idaho's resource," he said.

In his comments to supporters McClure also backed the Reagan administration's foreign policies.

"We are respected overseas today," he said. "If somebody kicks us we're not going to say 'thanks, I needed that,' he said.

Flood area grows Wood River threatens city

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

GOODING — Gooding police are watching the flooding Big Wood River around the clock. In case homes need to be evacuated or sandbags put out north-west of town, police chief Bill Bunn said Thursday night.

Some fields north of Gooding began to flood a week ago, but the flooded area is growing larger, said Alta Harris, who lives on a farm fronting the north side of the river. Wednesday the water reached her farm, and now, 80 acres are flooded, she estimates, and her house is surrounded by water.

"It looks like we are sitting on an island," she said. "You step off the steps, and you are in water."

She and her husband Dale had moved some of their livestock to higher ground when the water "was up to their thighs," and she had a sump pump running in her basement. But there was not much else she could do except be thankful that she had not started planting yet as some other farmers had, she said.

Watermaster Reid Newby said farmers were being flooded with water pouring through wide-open gates at Magie Reservoir. The gates had been open since April 9 when runoff from the Comas Prairie hit the reservoir, catching officials by surprise.

"The reservoir is full, and water is leaving the reservoir at the rate of 5,720 cubic feet per second, the same rate that is pouring in, he said.

"It's just Mother Nature's way. We don't have any more storage," he said.

"The Comas Prairie is putting out way too much to handle," he said.

There is little that can be done except to hope for a cold spell that will slow the runoff on the prairie, he said. People who have flown over the area recently report that the east end of the prairie is fairly dry but snow on the west end has not melted much yet, he said.

According to his records, last year more water was flowing through the Big Wood River, even though farmers are telling him that this year's flood is worse, he said.

"It's not too bad of a thing," he said. "But for the people who have fields under water, it's a crisis, there is no denying that."

In 1952, nearly twice as much water poured out of the dam at its peak, he said. But farmers were not plowing and building houses as close to the river as they are now.

The gates of the reservoir were open this year, at least partially from Dec. 5 to Feb. 5, Newby said. But then officials became concerned that not enough irrigation water was being saved and closed the gates until April. Water from the melting snow in the Sawtooth area has not yet reached the reservoir, he said.

Former deputy sheriff selected as police chief

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

BUHL — Lester Cochran will take charge as chief of police in Buhl on May 1.

The 37-year-old deputy sheriff from Gem County will replace former Chief Dave Hartway, who was not rehired in January.

Cochran, who was unanimously approved by City Council earlier this week, has been in law enforcement for the last 6 years.

In January he was named the outstanding law enforcement officer of the year by the Emmett Chamber of Commerce for his work as a deputy sheriff.

Cochran said he received the award for coordinating neighborhood watch and student fingerprinting programs and for serving as a school resource officer.

Working with students made a "real positive attitude between kids and police," Cochran said. It helped "to break stereotypes young people may have about law enforcement."

In 1979, Cochran was president of his police officers standards and training certification class at the police academy in Pocatello.

Before becoming a deputy sheriff, Cochran worked for two years at Boise Cascade.

From 1964 to 1976, he served in the Army as an instructor and a drill sergeant and received a purple heart in an infantry squad in Vietnam.

In the military, Cochran he taught management of "men, money

Apathy upsets vo-ed leaders

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A low turnout at Idaho's only public hearing on vocational education scheduled for this year has officials concerned.

Wednesday night the annual hearing of the State Advisory Council on Vocational Education was held in Twin Falls for the first time in several years. But only seven people, most of them on the state's advisory council or a task force on vocational education, offered testimony.

Don Brennan, head of the state council, says maybe that is because Magic Valley residents are satisfied with the quality of vocational education in the area. But it may also be complacency at a time when many changes are affecting vocational education in the state, he believes.

One of his worries, shared by council member and Rupert Mayor Bill Whitton, is that federal money for Idaho programs will be cut. This year the U.S. Senate bill to pay for vocational education has been so heavily amended that even its sponsors have it pigeonholed, Brennan says.

Now $3 million in federal money is being sent to Idaho for vocational programs. But with problems with the bill and the Reagan administration cutting federal funding to states, he fears that amount could be sliced.

That could be devastating for post-secondary education, which depends completely on federal and state funds rather than property taxes, he says.

Vocational education did receive an 8 percent increase in state funding this year, but Brennan does not believe that is enough.

"There has been a lot of talk about additional funding for programs," he says. "A lot of people think we received quite a bit, that we won't have to reduce, but hold to status quo. But business and industry is not status quo."

But keeping up with business and industry is expensive, and Idaho is already not doing as well as he would like in keeping programs current or just having enough programs, he says.

"At the post-secondary level, 823 students were turned away in six schools," he says. "There were no posts open. It's done at all the schools. They don't have the money to expand."

Part of the need is to develop, new programs, particularly in electronics, an area in which Idaho will need more workers, Brennan says. The state also needs more programs to train service workers like custodians and food personnel, areas that should employ more people in coming years.

Brennan and several of those who testified were concerned about how the push for excellence in education would affect vocational education.

"I feel the state board has reacted to admirable intent to improve the quality of education," said Buhl principal Dale Thornberry, about new, stiffer graduation requirements. "But they reacted without much foresight, particularly to how they affect students in vocational programs."

Drop out rates of students who cannot earn the "C" required in core classes may jump to 25 or 30 percent, he predicted. And fewer students will be taking vocational education classes, because they will have less time for electives, he said.

"I just hope in two or three years, people have good memories," he said. "The schools aren't doing this, we're just carrying out what we are told."

Conservative candidate targets time-wasting legislative actions

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

BUHL — Buhl real estate agent John Roberts, a candidate for state representative, casts a conservative profile.

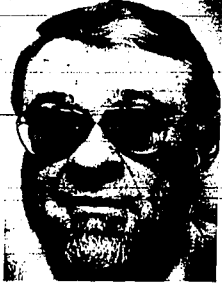

The 49-year-old St. Maries native, a member of the Lifestyle Evangelism organization, says the 1984 Idaho Legislature wasted a lot of time passing legislation that requires motorists to place children in safety seats. He says the time and effort could have been better spent addressing more substantive issues facing the state, particularly child abuse.

"It's almost impossible to monitor or enforce," says Roberts, who has lived the last 24 years in the Magic Valley. He compares the newly-passed law to motorcycle helmet laws or automobile inspections, which he considers ineffective.

"As a representative, you represent the people and what the wishes of the people are," he says. "I wouldn't want to pass legislation to help a few and hinder a bunch," he adds.

One bunch he would like to hinder, however, are repeat offenders of state laws.

JOHN ROBERTS
Buhl real estate agent

"Adequate punishment is a deterrent to crime," he says, adding "through technicalities people get off."

And Roberts says stricter punishment won't necessarily result in more crowding in Idaho's jails and prisons. In fact, he says it will result in reducing the crowding in those facilities.

"If the punishment is severe enough, the next time the offender will think twice about it," he says. And the costs of detaining criminals could be further reduced by requiring prisoners to perform work, such as road cleaning, he adds.

He says the work details would also keep prisoners from sitting around in an idle mind in the "devil's playground," he says.

Roberts says he would be reluctant to radically change or toughen the requirements of the initiative process. "An idea must be sold a proposal by the Idaho Farm Bureau to require geographic distribution from the signers of an initiative petition is a good idea.

Nine head of cattle killed

Truck crashes; driver injured

HAZELTON — A truck hauling 43 cattle to a slaughtering plant crashed on Interstate 84, early Wednesday morning, killing nine animals and slightly injuring the driver.

The truck driven by Brent Freeman, 24, of Murphy, Idaho, and its trailer left the shoulder lanes of the Interstate one mile east of Valley Road, said Cpl. Mike Burgess of Idaho State Police. The trailer separated from the truck and slammed into a roadside fence, while the truck returned to the highway, and slid on its side, police reported. One westbound lane was blocked for about four hours.

Freeman, who was driving for Engum Truck Co. of Caldwell, told police the crash occurred when he suffered a charley horse in his leg and tried to attend to it. State police cited him for inattentive driving, according to the report. Freeman was treated and released at St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome.

Nine cattle either were killed in the crash or were destroyed after being examined by a veterinarian, Burgess said. A farmer helped round up other head that escaped into a nearby field. Damage to the truck and the livestock was estimated at $65,500. The truck was bound for the Armour Food Co. slaughterhouse near Nampa, state police said.

No charges filed after fatality

TWIN FALLS — Criminal charges will not be filed against a 20-year-old Kimberly man in connection with the death of a teenager in an auto accident two weeks ago. Justin Aubrey Gull, 14, of Eden, sustained head injuries in a two-car accident April 4 on U.S. Highway 30 east of Twin Falls. Gull died the following day at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise.

Gull was a passenger in a vehicle that collided with a truck driven by James Brockman of Kimberly. Investigating officers reported that Brockman pulled out from a stop sign and into the path of a car driven by Rexann McCalmon, 16, of Hansen.

Brockman and four persons in the McCalmon car suffered minor injuries. Another passenger, Suzie Johnson, 14, of Hansen, was hospitalized. She was listed in stable condition Thursday at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Harry DeHann, Twin Falls County prosecutor, said vehicular manslaughter will not be filed against Brockman because no "gross negligence" was involved.

Depending on the degrees of negligence that can be proven, a vehicular manslaughter charge may be filed as a felony or misdemeanor.

72-year-old woman hurt in wreck

FILER — A 72-year-old woman was seriously injured and two other people suffered minor injuries Thursday morning when two cars collided on U.S. 30 two miles west of Filer.

Heleen Beem, 70, of Buhl, was hospitalized at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center later in the day. Her husband Jasper, 78, who was driving one car and Carole Ragan, 52, a passenger in the other vehicle, were treated at the hospital and released.

The Beem auto was traveling east on U.S. 30 and attempted to turn north onto the road beside U.S. Steel Farm Service Center, state police said. John Ragan, who was driving westbound in an International Traveler, could not avoid striking the Beem vehicle when it crossed his path, police said. The impact of the crash plowed the Beem auto against a roadside fence and overturned.

Late filings bring newcomers into Jerome County politics

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Late candidate filings in Jerome County brought in two newcomers to county politics, but failed to spark more than the lone primary election race involving the sheriff's position.

The election contest between Veteran Sheriff Elza Hall of Jerome, who will be opposed in the May 22 primary election for the Republican nomination by Larry Gold of Eden is creating interest in the county. Gold is a former California and New York police officer and now serves in a combination position as city police and school resource officer in Jerome. His title is "community diversion officer."

Hall has served as Jerome County sheriff for the past 12 years and prior to that served as a deputy and as a Buhl police officer.

A third sheriff hopeful, running unopposed on the Democratic ticket, is James Weaver—who recently established his home in Hazelton. He is a former California police officer and is currently involved in security work in the Los Angeles area. He has not been available for comment and background information.

One candidate is seeking the office of Jerome County prosecutor to succeed Dan Adamson, a candidate for U.S. Congress in the 2nd District. He is Francis Mark Gause of Jerome, who holds a law degree from the University of Idaho. He has passed the Idaho Bar exam but is not currently practicing law. He owns and operates a bait business known as the Happy Hooker Worm Farm Inc.

Another late filing is that of Bruce Verstraete of Jerome, who is running unopposed for the Democratic nomination for the 1st District county commissioner position. Running unopposed for the Republican nomination in that district is Henk Bekker of Jerome. Carl Butler, incumbent finishing his first two-year-term, is not seeking re-election.

Bekker, a long-time fairboard member is the owner of Countrywide Feed and Supply in Jerome. He also ran for the office two years ago, losing in the primary to Butler.

Verstraete is an engineering technician for the Bureau of Land Management, working in Shoshone. He resides south-west of Jerome and is interested in zoning and land use, especially involving the problems of dairies and rural housing development.

Other unopposed candidates on the Jerome ballot are Pamela J. Smith of Jerome, incumbent 2nd District commissioner, and Gerald M. Ostler, incumbent coroner. Both are running on the Republican ticket.

South can count on eight top tricks in today's trump game. He can develop a ninth in either minor; how does he choose the safest way to keep West off lead?

South refuses the first two spades, wins the third and must decide on how to play the minor suits. The quick way to a minus score is to play three rounds of hearts, hoping that East will win the third club or that West started with only a four card spade suit. Neither dream comes true and the defense scores a giveaway one down.

Obviously, it's better to play the other minor. But how should South play this suit? If he plays the ace, creating first, an alert East can break a problem. If East jettisons both his high honors, South must guess to play his three high hearts, leaving West with no safe discard. Obviously, a third round of diamonds will give West the same five tricks.

The best way to play the diamonds is to lead the suit towards dummy's honors. West plays the nine or ten, dummy wins and South returns to his hand to repeat the procedure— sooner or later, a diamond can be ducked safely to East and the fortunate tie of the dia-

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

We attribute our failures to bad luck and our success to superior judgment. Arnold Glasov.

If South loses today's excellent slam... If South draws Trumps quickly he will find that West was void and that East had three.

If South draws Trumps quickly he will find that West was void and that East had three. The odds now favor finessing against West in diamonds since it's more probably that West was void in diamonds than East.

South eliminates all guesswork if he plays the hand carefully. After winning the spade king, a club is led to dummy's ace and a club is ruffed.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 12343, Dallas, Texas 75213. Self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

Kansas City ends Detroit's win streak after nine straight

By The Associated Press

Detroit lost for the first time in 1984, the victim of a two-run homer by Frank White that helped the Kansas City Royals beat the Tigers 5-2 Thursday.

That ended a nine-game, season-opening winning streak by the Tigers, who got off to the best start in their 84-year history. Detroit opened the 1984 season with six straight victories. "We knew we weren't going to win 102." Tigers center fielder Chet Lemon said. "But we played good ball to go 9-0, and we just want to keep on playing good ball."

White's homer came in the eighth inning with Steve Balboni aboard via a walk, giving Kansas City a 5-1 lead. Dan Quisenberry earned his fifth save of the season for the Royals despite giving up a ninth-inning homer to Kirk Gibson.

Joe Orta and Hal McRae drove in runs in Kansas City's two-run ninth inning against Dan Petry, who made his first start in nine days because of rainy weather. The winner was a Royals rookie, Bret Saberhagen, who pitched six innings.

"Nobody wanted to be the one to pitch when the streak was broken," Petry said. "I guess it was me, though I pitched well enough. I have no complaints."

The Royals scored an unearned run in the sixth after two errors by Tigers third baseman Howard Johnson, and Detroit got its first run in the first inning off Lance Parrish's RBI groundout.

In other American League games, Garth Irtig tripled in a ninth-inning run with his fourth hit of the game to give the Toronto Blue Jays a 2-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles and a sweep of their three-game series. Jim Clancy scattered seven hits in his first complete game of the season.

Texas rallied for three runs in the ninth inning to snap a 4-1 tie and beat Boston 7-4, handing the Red Sox their seventh straight loss. Mickey Rivers and Wayne Toler, each had bunt passes to keep the inning going. The RBI came on a bases-loaded walk by Bobby Jones by Mark Clever, Billy Sample's single and a run-scoring groundout by George Wright. Tony Armas homered twice for Boston.

Richard Dotson pitched a five-hitter, and Harold Blaines scored twice to lead the Chicago White Sox over Milwaukee, 3-1. Dotson walked one and struck out one. Balnes doubled and scored in the fourth on Greg Luzinski's single; then walked and later scored on a sacrifice fly by Vance Law in the ninth.

In the National League, Hube Brooks hit a two-run homer with one out in the eighth inning to rally the New York Mets to a 7-5 victory over Montreal. A two-run homer by Gary Carter in the seventh had given the Expos a 6-5 lead. Carter also had a two-run single, and George Foster drove in two runs for the Mets with a single and a homer.

At night in the National League, San Diego was at Los Angeles and Cincinnati played in San Francisco. New York-Cleveland in the American League was rained out.

Young regrets speculation

CHICAGO (AP) — Los Angeles quarterback Steve Young said Thursday that he felt "horrible" about all the attention given his prediction that the struggling United States Football League "may soon fall by the wayside . . . sooner than you think."

"I got involved in league politics and I shouldn't have," said Young, who recently signed a $40 million contract with the Express to become the highest paid player in professional football.

"I learned my lesson, and I'll bear the brunt for it. I hope people don't make a big deal of it. . . I'm not perfect. But you've got to be careful what you say. I will from now on."

In a telephone interview with Chicago reporters the day before, the 21-year-old quarterback said he thought the National Football League "is just going to quietly take on about four or five teams . . . very exciting ballclub . . . and then watch the rest of the league fall by the wayside. And it might happen sooner than you think."

But at a news conference Thursday evening, after arriving for Friday night's game with the Chicago Blitz, he pleaded guilty to talking too much about things he shouldn't have.

"I guess I threw an interception there, but we'll just have to recover," he said, adding that speculation of how many teams would likely survive a merger with the NFL is "just guessing along with every other sports fan in American about what's going to happen."

He says he has no regrets about signing with the USFL Express and emphasized that "I'm having the time of my life out there on the field." Earlier Thursday, the USFL issued a sharp response out of its New York office. "His comments were unfortunate," Jim Byrne, the USFL's director of communications, said in a prepared statement. "They obviously were the remarks of an inexperienced young man who probably had little concept of the impact they would have."

Young, who set out 13 NCAA passing records while at Brigham Young University, agreed.

"I take total blame for anything bad that comes out of this," he said. "I feel horrible . . . I'm still young and haven't learned what you can say and what you can't."

He added that he was dismayed that the publicity "turned out so negative."

Hobart coming off bench for Bulls

KEN HOBART
Ex-Idaho quarterback

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Jacksonville Bulls defensive back Chester Gee, whose team is riding a three-game losing streak, says Friday night would be a good time to start winning again in the United States Football League.

And to help get that program underway, Bulls Coach Lindy Infante has named former University of Idaho quarterback Ken Hobart as his starter.

The 2-6 Bulls play host to the 2-6 Memphis Showboats. The loser will wind up in the cellar of the USFL's Southern Division.

"Anytime is a good time to start winning," Gee said. "It would be especially nice against Memphis because we should have beaten them the first time. If there's a starting point it has to be now.

The Showboats defeated Jacksonville 27-24 on March 31, with Memphis kicker Alan Duncan connecting on a 32-yard field goal as time ran out.

At the time, it was the Bulls' third loss in the final seconds. Not only that, but leading rusher Willie McLondon was lost for the season with a knee injury — one of several key players lost to injuries that have hampered the Bulls in their first season as a USFL expansion team.

Infante's team subsequently lost a close game to Birmingham, 24-17, then got blown out by San Antonio, 20-0, last week.

Infante said it's been such a short time since the Bulls and Showboats played, he doesn't think Memphis has changed game plans that much. He said he still expects a challenge from Memphis quarterback Walter Lewis.

From the last meeting, key Lewis is a great athlete," Infante said. "It will be a challenge to our defense to corral him."

Infante will start Hobart in place of Robbie Mahouf, who was the regular signal caller after starter Matt Robinson was injured

March 10 against Tampa. But Infante said Hobart played well enough in last week's fourth quarter to deserve a start.

The Showboats have been in a position to win in at least three other games, including last week's 23-17 overtime loss to Los Angeles.

"The loss to Los Angeles was maybe one of the most disappointing we've had all year," Coach Popper Rodgers said.

Rodgers said the Showboats and the Bulls are about equal as far as talent is concerned.

"I don't want to sound like I'm counting my wins before they get there," he said, "but I'd like to think we have a chance against the likes of Jacksonville, Pittsburgh, Washington, San Antonio and Oakland."

76ers going back to school

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The defending champion Philadelphia 76ers went back to school Thursday.

"We went over what we have to do to get ourselves back in the series," said coach Billy Cunningham, whose team is seeking to become the first to repeat as National Basketball Association champions since 1969.

The 76ers trail the New Jersey Nets 1-0 in the first round of a best-of-five NBA playoff series. The Nets won the opener Wednesday night, 116-101.

"We went over some of their set offense," Cunningham said after practice. "We worked on some things we want to do defensively against them. We went over some offense of our own."

Cunningham said he talked with his squad about basics and some things he felt the team had to do against the surprising Nets.

"They played a great game and I didn't think we played very well, especially at the defensive end of the court," Cunningham observed.

"We just allowed, especially in the first period which really got them going, too much out of transition, too much penetration. We didn't react very well to each other at the defensive end of the court."

Cunningham said that hopefully his team will be able to turn some of those things around in the second matchup, here Friday night.

The third game and a fourth, if necessary, are on New Jersey's court Sunday and Tuesday. A fifth game would be in Philadelphia Thursday.

Cunningham disclosed that playmaking guard Maurice Cheeks, who is suffering from tendinitis in the right knee, didn't practice Thursday.

"We'll just have to wait and see. I'm not sure what his status will be ..."

Cunningham said. "I took him out once because he looked like he was in such pain."

Cunningham also said that the 76ers did as much to contain 6-foot-10 center Moses Malone as the Nets did.

"We didn't show patience in getting the ball in to Moses. We should have made the extra pass."

Malone was held without a basket in the second half and got just two shots: He scored 20 points, 16 in the first half on six-for-12 shooting and four free throws.

New Jersey's Buck Williams, whose 25 points and 16 rebounds triggered the Nets' first playoff victory in the eight years the team has been in the NBA, said it was important for his team to keep everything in perspective.

Walton fires career low during classic

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Robin Walton, a six-year veteran chasing her first professional victory, fired a career-low 66 Thursday to take a two-stroke, opening-round lead over four other golfers in the $150,000 LPGA S&H Classic.

The former University of Washington star playing in her early threesome, birdied seven holes on the 6,028-yard Pasadena Yacht & Golf Club course and her 6-under par total held up for an 18-hole advantage over Vicki Ferguson, Vicki Alvarez, Lori Dahl and Sandra Spunch.

Two-time defending champion Hollis Stacy was among four players one shot farther back after rounds of 3 and under par 69.

The others bunched with Stacy, who is trying to become the second woman to win three straight in the oldest continuous event on the LPGA tour, were Debbie Meisterlin, Becky Pearson and Lori West.

Kathy Whitworth, a five-time winner who is not entered in the 31st renewal of the S&H, won three straight titles here in 1968-70.

Walton, whose best previous finish was a tie for seventh in the United Invitational in Costa Mesa, Calif. last month, started the day on the back nine, where she made three birdies and suffered her only bogey on the par 3, 142-yard 17th hole.

"I hit my tee shot into the bleachers," she explained. "I sort of dropkicked hooked it. Obviously it was way off line. It hit a young girl in the leg."

Walton recovered, though, dropping a 5-foot putt for birdie on No. 18 and followed with birdies on four of the nine holes on the front side of the course.

Devil's Bag runs to first

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Heavily favored Devil's Bag, rebounding from an upset loss nearly seven weeks ago, led wire to wire and breezed to a 15-length victory Thursday in the $25,900 Forerunner Purse, at Keeneland.

So Vague came on from fourth in the home stretch to finish second, 1 1/2 lengths ahead of Triple Sec. Pacesetter Sun was fourth, four more lengths up the track, followed by Dempsey's Brand.

Devil's Bag, the 1983 juvenile champion who finished third in the Flamingo Stakes his last time out, went off a 1-10 favorite with the crowd of 13,113 and paid $2.20 on a $2 win bet.

No place or show wagers were accepted.

Eddie Maple, hand riding except for one right-handed swat on the stretch, guided the winner around the seven furlongs on a good track in 1:23.5, two seconds slower than Devil's Bag ran the same distance in February.

Whether the colt can handle two turns won't be decided, however, until the Kentucky Derby, if he runs.

Trainer Woody Stephens took the blame for the Flamingo finish, saying he'd let the Halo colt get fat over the winter.

Stage group serving up a double headliner

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho Drama Department is offering a double treat for local theater lovers April 26, 27 and 28. Director Fran Tanner says that her Readers Theater group will present an hour and 20-minute version of Ray Bradbury's "Dandelion Wine," followed by a twenty-minute short play, "Shel-Game."

Adapted from Bradbury's novel by Duane Hunt and Leslie Coger, "Dandelion Wine" is the story of a 12-year-old boy becoming aware of his own aliveness — an awakening.

The boy, Douglas Spaulding, makes his wonderful discovery on the first day of summer, 1928. Before him are three months of unguessed wonders; he will watch, listen and savor the bitter-sweet life that surrounds him in his small Illinois home town.

Because of his new awareness, Douglas finds a procession of extraordinary people passing through his life that summer. Among them are an ingenious inventor who almost takes the pleasure out of life by building a Happiness Machine; a handsome young reporter who falls in love with a charming 90-year-old lady; a dying old gentleman whose last act is listening to the clang of a trolley car going around a corner two thousand miles away.

In special poetry and poignancy, even the seasonal rituals, become very special to Douglas; bending the rugs, setting up the porch swing, bottling the dandelion wine which will hold the essence of summer until it is opened on a cold January evening.

"The boy becomes aware of life — including the woes of life when he loses a good friend," Tanner says. "The story is a process of maturation," she says, adding that Bradbury has a way of making the ordinary become unordinary through his words.

Although the prolific Bradbury is best known for his science fiction works, Tanner says, "This is not science fiction at all. I wouldn't be surprised if it was autobiographical."

"The actors enjoy Ray Bradbury very much. We did a piece of his last year. I think they can empathize with the material. They especially enjoy the character who is an old man in the play with memories of the Civil War. Nobody remembers it now, but in 1923 there could still be somebody who could remember that war."

Tanner says the cast was chosen from the Readers Theater and has been rehearsing since mid-March. Calling it "Presentational Theater," she says "one student may take several roles and that the play is presented in such a way with noise and body movements the audience can fill in the details in their minds."

"It's presentational theater that evokes the imaginative process of the audience," she says, adding that it is very much like radio drama except with visual included. "Many people like it better than conventional theater because it's imaginatively done in the audience's mind."

Tanner, a charter member of CSI, says she has directed over 50 plays at the college and that she likes to concentrate on Readers Theater. "It's very fine training for an actor," she says. "And you can use all types of literature. It doesn't have to be just plays. We can use poems, newspaper columns and novels. It's not limited to dramatic literature."

"Shel-Game" has been the CSI Forensics entry for competition this year. "This show has won first place at each contest entered, and it received the gold medal at regionals held at Dixie College in St. George, Utah. This short presentation will be enacted following "Dandelion Wine."

Tanner calls it, "A humorous and imaginative experience that touches the child within all of us."

Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. in Theatre 110 of the CSI Fine Arts Center. Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $1.00 for students and senior citizens. Tickets may be purchased at the CSI Bookstore or by calling 735-9544 extension 231.

Book examines a new age

By KARYN RIEDEL
Times-News correspondent

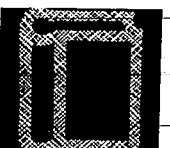

BOISE — "The New Age: How Entering the Aquarian Age Affects You and the World... Today" is a book that outlines the challenges of the coming Aquarian Age.

The book's author, nationally known astrologer Johnny Lister of Boise and former Magic Valley resident, died Jan. 19, 1983.

The book's editor, Randall McCarthy, says "This book is different from the usual astrology book."

Lister believed we are leaving a 2,000-year period in which conformity and group activities were the norm and entering a new age in which individuality will be important.

"The new age will mark the rise of the individual rather than the importance of the masses. People will be more accepting of differences.

Instead of big revolutions, such as the industrial revolution and was, individuals will become very important," McCarthy said.

Lister argued that people today are becoming more accepting of differences and said this trend will become even more pronounced.

McCarthy says "In the last few months, the sign of Scorpio has entered into Eluto. As the sign of death and sexuality, Scorpio symbolized rebirth."

There are also separate chapters on the changing nature of business, relationships and sexuality.

Also included are Lister's suggestions for dealing with today's teen-agers. Lister explained why teenagers today are both "proper and rebellious."

Born on a Fairfield ranch, LeRoy Hallowell bluntly says 'I paint what appeals to me.'

Remembering cowboys, cattle through one painter's memories

By APRIL BISHIOP
Times-News correspondent

BLISS — LeRoy Hallowell's paintings bring back memories of the past, a way of life of cowboys and cattle that has long since turned to dust.

A Bliss resident since 1960, Hallowell was raised on a ranch in Fairfield. Ranch life provided inspiration and the mountains surrounding his boyhood home feature prominently in Hallowell's work.

He leans towards the western motif in his art, saying "I paint what appeals to me."

"Deserts are quite intriguing because of the shadows," the artist adds. A self-taught artist, Hallowell started painting with oil house paint and cardboards. While in school, he painted everything from school play backdrops to murals on local restaurant walls.

Then Fairfield school Superintendent Harry Durall bought him a point set.

"He marched into study hall and slapped the paint set on my desk," recalls Hallowell with a smile.

Durall then ordered "LeRoy to do something with these."

With family and friends encouraging him, Hallowell did just that.

When he and his wife, Carol, moved to a ranch north of Bliss in 1960, he found his painting time confined to after work hours.

"Many is the time I'd come home after work, eat my supper and paint until one or two in the morning," remembers Hallowell. "Then I'd get up in the morning and start all over again."

But Hallowell never gave up. He kept painting for the pure joy of it.

"It's quite a therapy for those who enjoy it," he says. Hallowell prefers realism to abstract painting, saying abstract is a completely different form of expression. He once refused to enter a Boise art show because the two forms were to be judged against each other.

For years, Hallowell used a palette knife, rather than a brush because he liked the effect of the textures. But the technique had its drawbacks, chiefly it took too long to dry, he says.

Hallowell hasn't confined himself to paintings in his artistic endeavors. He has dabbled in wax sculptures and even created metal figures from scraps with a

'Pavilions' surpasses most series epics

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

Review

TWIN FALLS — Devoting one's precious television time consecutively to a multi-part series is a relatively new phenomenon.

First there was "Roots," which justly resulted in watchers fleeing home after work, hurrying through dinner and forgetting to change to live through the slave days of Kunta Kinte.

With the increased number of series, the quality began to fluctuate from interesting epics like "Shogun" to deplorable wastes of time such as the "Winds of War." Inevitably, most TV-epics were based on bestselling novels.

Not to be outdone or underdone, Home Box Office launches this Sunday its own multi-series epic with M.M. Kaye's book, "The Far Pavilions," which is set in the exotic locale of 19th century India.

"Gandhi" it is not. It is however, the best produced and acted piece among the genre of the television epic.

The main character, and there are many, is Ashwin Felham-Martyn. Ash is the son of English aristocrats born in tumultuous India. When he becomes orphaned, Ash is raised by an Indian woman and becomes a servant to an Indian prince. Among his childhood friends is Princess Anjuli, a "half-caste" or mix of Indian and Russian blood.

Because of treachery, Ash and his Indian mother must escape from the palace.

Years later, Ash returns to India as a dashing officer.

Played by Ben Cross, Ash has the land and traditions in his blood. He is more at home with his old Indian friends, but knows he never will be truly accepted.

Despite adventures in-between, the real meat of the story begins when Ash is ordered to escort a caravan taking two princesses to meet their aging husband-to-be.

Here Ash is reunited and drawn to Anjuli, portrayed by Amy Irving who was nominated for her work in "Yentl."

Although in love with Ash, a devoted Anjuli says she has promised not to leave her spoiled sister, who is terrified of suitor.

Though outlived by the ruling British, suitor demands wives to throw themselves into the burial pyre of their husbands.

A desolate Ash returns to the military, which is embroiled in an explosive situation in neighboring Afghanistan.

Later Ash hears the old ruler will soon die and his two wives will follow in flaming glory.

With such a plot and even more twists and turns, it takes an effort to watch "Far Pavilions." Fortunately, the acting and direction makes it easy and fun.

AMY IRVING
Oscar nominee from "Yentl"

BEN CROSS
Known for "Chariots of Fire"

Cross, who played the Jewish runner in "Chariots of Fire," organizes the story as a hero full of folkies. His crusty British veneer is constantly and attractively splintered with emotion.

As Anjuli, Irving shows the sensitive strength and integrity of her character. Both play the romantic figures without the tragedy or soap.

As for the remaining all-star cast, they deserve plaudits. With such a large number of characters, one expects — and has been in the case

Returning to the 'epic' scene is veteran actor Omar Sharif before — that actors often give small efforts to such small parts.

In "Far Pavilions," the supporting casts provide sustenance to the leads. It's especially good to see Omar Sharif, as Ash's Indian father, in a worthy role.

There are some sloth-like and cliché moments, such as the couple's slow motion ride in the desert. Come on, now.

Yet, "Far Pavilions" maintains a firm pace throughout its six hours. The production successfully projects the mystery and beauty of Indian without losing the reality of the character's problems. And, it keeps its epic proportions alive on the small screen.

Most importantly, it proves there's a much needed place for romance, intrigue and adventure in the land of sit-com and reruns.

CBS retaining its own dynasty in latest round of television ratings

By JERRY BUCK
The Associated Press

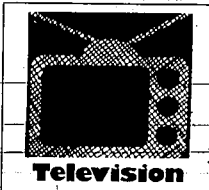

LOS ANGELES — The CBS dynasty rolled to its fifth consecutive victory in the networks' annual ratings race, winning the 1983-84 prime-time season with the help of America's perennial top two shows, "Dallas" and "60 Minutes."

The victory, by nine-tenths of a point over ABC, was much easier than expected. ABC's two weeks of Winter Olympics broadcasts did not perform well, and CBS was buoyed by its regular series and well-received miniseries, such as "Master of the Game" and "Chiefs." The season ended on Sunday.

In the final ratings for the regular 29-week schedule, released Tuesday, CBS had an average rating of 18.1 to ABC's 17.2 and NBC's 14.9. Last year, it was CBS, 18.2, ABC, 17.7, and NBC, 15.1. Each network lost ratings, and, in all, the networks dropped eight-tenths of a rating point from last season.

A rating, as compiled by the A.C. Nielsen Co., measures the percentage of the nation's 83.8 million TV homes watching during any given minute of prime time. Industry observers say that, over the course of a season, each rating point represents $40 million to $50 million in gross revenues.

CBS won 19 of 29 weeks during the season. ABC finished first seven times, and NBC once. CBS and ABC tied twice, including last week. "Dallas" was the season's top-rated series with a 25.7 rating and "60 Minutes" was second with a 24.2 rating, marking the fourth straight season in which the CBS leaders finished one-two. Last season, "60 Minutes" was first.

For 1983-84, ABC's "Dynasty" was third, NBC's "The A-Team" was fourth and CBS' "Simon & Simon" was fifth. Others in the season's Top 10: CBS' "Magnum, P.I.," sixth; CBS' "Falcon Crest," seventh; ABC's "Hotel," eighth; CBS' "Knots Landing," ninth; and the ABC Sunday Movie, 10th.

The season's top miniseries in order were CBS' "Master of the Game," CBS' "Chiefs," NBC's "Celebrity," CBS' "George Washington," and NBC's "Kennedy." CBS' Grammy Awards coverage was the top special; ABC's Academy Awards coverage was second.

In the final week, CBS and ABC tied with an average rating of 17.5. NBC was third with 12.8.

The highest-rated show of the closing week was ABC's coverage of the Academy Awards ceremonies. Its companion show, "The Barbara Walters Special," was fifth. The first two parts of the CBS miniseries "George Washington" were in the Top 10.

CBS claimed victory through a mixture of such series as "Dallas," "60 Minutes," "Simon & Simon," "Magnum, P.I.," "Falcon Crest" and "Knots Landing," specials including the top-rated Grammy awards, and such miniseries as "Master of the Game," "Chiefs" and "George Washington."

The return of "Cagney & Lacey" and such midseason additions as "Kate and Allie," "Suzanne Pleshette Is Maggie Briggs" and "Four Seasons" strengthened CBS' position.

CBS has won the ratings every year since the 1979-80 season. ABC was first for three years, from 1976-79. Before that, CBS was first every year from 1956 to 1976, except for the 1970-71 season when NBC was first.

Here is the Top 10 for the final week: ABC's Academy Awards, first; CBS' "Dallas," second; CBS' "Simon & Simon," third; NBC's "The A-Team," fourth; ABC's "The Barbara Walters Special," fifth; ABC's "Dynasty," sixth; the ABC movie "The Ten Commandments," seventh; CBS' "Magnum, P.I.," eighth; CBS miniseries "George Washington," Part II, ninth; Part III, tenth. NBC's "Father, Murphy" was the lowest-rated show of the week.

Idaho artists display works

By KARYN RIEDELL
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Two exhibitions featuring Idaho artists are on display at the Boise Gallery of Art through May 15. "Sawtooth and Other Ranges of Imagination: Contemporary Art from Idaho" is an exhibition of works by 20 Idaho artists and "The Sculpture of Rod Kagan" features the metal sculpture of Ketchum artist Rod Kagan.

The "Sawtooth" exhibit was recently shown at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Modern Art in Washington, D.C. The exhibition was curated by Barbara Shissler Nosanow, after she traveled throughout the state and met with over 100 artists.

"We chose not only native-born artists," Nosanow said, "but other artists who live and work in the state as well. We wanted to get the widest variety possible of Idaho art."

Alberto Mayo of the Boise Gallery of Art said the exhibition consists mostly of paintings and drawings, along with some sculpture, handmade paper and mixed-media art. Some of the paintings are of landscapes, such as Utah's Spudfield by Marilyn Harris, "Snow on the Sawtooths" by Cheryl Shurtleff, and "10th and Main" by Michael Miller.

"There are also portraits and imaginary portraits, such as William L'Hote's portrait of a gambler. There are some abstract works, too," Mayo said.

"Some of the works are mixed-media, which can be anything. Usually you have paper or canvas and you add to it. David Giese's work consists of imaginary countries formed from plaster and masonite glued on in a collage method. Catherine Collins cuts magazines into strips and weaves them back together," she said.

The idea for a national exhibition of Idaho art first came from Sen. and Mrs. James A. McClure. The exhibition and state-wide tour were made possible through donations of funds and services from businesses and individuals.

Rod Kagan's exhibition includes 24 sculptures. A resident of Ketchum since 1973, Kagan started the North Fork Iron Works for architectural welding and for sculpture. His sculptures are in copper, brass, stainless steel, aluminum, bronze and steel.

"He is one of the few Idahoans sculpting in metal," Mayo said. "I've seen many woodcarvers here, but he is the only one sculpting in metal that I know of."

Highlighting the exhibition are works from Kagan's series of totems and columns.

"The tallest of these is 12 feet, although most of them are about 10 feet high and six inches wide. "Traditionally, totem poles are anthropomorphic, and everything is curved," but Kagan's totems have more angles than curves. They are square or triangular in shape," Mayo said.

In addition to the totems, there are columns in three series: "Doric," "Ionic" and "Corinthian." These are based on the classical columns of Greece.

Catalogs are available for both exhibits. The gallery is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and on weekends from noon to 5 p.m. The suggested admission donation is $1 for adults and 50 cents for senior citizens, children and students. Tours of the exhibition will be offered at 12:15 p.m. on Wednesdays and on Sunday, May 13 at 1:30 p.m.

Cloggers return home after winning honors

TWIN FALLS — The Sawtooth Country Cloggers returned home this week with honors including a first place trophy for their team performance after competing with more than 500 cloggers from the Intermountain region at the Ricks Clog Championships in Rexburg.

After 12 hours of vigorous competition, the Twin Falls group earned four honors: first place in team competition, 12 to 17 years; first place in duets, 17 to 18 years; and second place in singles freestyle, 30 years and older; and second place in duets, 21 years and older.

The group's directors, Ed and Vickie Austin, say the competition was fierce this year.

"We went to the event with high hopes of doing well this year," says Austin, "but when we saw the other groups perform, I was worried about even making the finals." The competition was very close, and the dance troupe had to work hard for each honor it won, he added.

The group has won other honors including a team gold medal won at the Intermountain Clog Championship in 1983 and a third place team win last year at the Ricks Clog Championships. They have also toured southern California, dancing at Disneyland and Knotts Berry Farm.

Members of the team are Lisa Christley, Caryn Crowley, Diana Crowley, Gina Butry, Julie Muir, Sally Pettigill, Shelle Tardor, David Grace, Matt Thompson and Scott Van Buren. The Twin Falls groups was one of only three groups competing from Idaho.

Team's humor is offbeat

TWIN FALLS — The specialty of a San Francisco comedy team is what one might term "nuclear-holocaust humor."

And the Magic Valley will have the opportunity to catch the team of Fran Peavey and Charlie Varon when their off-beat show is on-stage at the Renaissance Academy, at 505 Second Ave. E. in Twin Falls, on April 26.

The skills of Varon and Peavey are fueled with the stuff that scares others, such as atomic fallout, war and accidents.

One skill involves an interview with a real estate developer concerned with the effects of nuclear war on his property values.

In another piece, they have concocted a character who splits his time between playing pro-baseball and a nuclear power plant, where he works in the off-season.

Although the topic of nuclear war is seemingly unfunny, Peavey said it allows people to share their fears.

The "Washington Post" has described the team as reminiscent of Bob and Ray or Carl Reiner and Mel Brooks.

The comedy team also takes aim at government and other aspects of contemporary life, says Rick Strickland, the director of the academy. The show is recommended for adults because of the material, he adds.

Peavey and Varon will perform at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 per person. Call the Renaissance Academy for reservations at 734-0719.

Advanced tickets may be purchased at The Sunshine Corner, Ann's Hallmark Store, Warner Music and The Music Center in Twin Falls.

Beer 'bible' a new guide

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Tired of white wine? Soured on sweet drinks? A new book can turn all you-sippers into guzzlers — it's a veritable bible of beer, with instructions for 50 drinking games, 75 synonyms for "drunk" and 35 ways to say "get sick."

"The Complete Book of Beer-Drinking Games" can guide even the strictest "ferm bar" devotee into the gutter, say its authors.

KITCHEN COSMETICS

A lady writes: "When I was a 16-year-old in an amateur play, the cosmetic experts removed my cake makeup with Crisco. It worked well. Ever since, I've used it on my face before bedtime, tussling it off, and every morning, after washing my face with soap and warm water, I rub my skin with an ice cube instead of using a commercial astringent. Now at age 72, my skin still appears free of wrinkles, and apparently my complexion is unusually good, if one believes the compliments. I've used kitchen cosmetics for 56 years."

LISTER described his book as "a collection of philosophical essays based on astrological findings." The book is based on a series of lectures Lister presented on the coming of the Aquarian Age.

Lister was a long-time Idaho resident, known for years as a band leader and musicologist in Sun Valley before becoming an astrological lecturer.

McCarthy describes Lister as "a good teacher and assimlator." The book, published by Entheos of San Francisco, is being distributed to bookstores nationally by the American Federation of Astrologers and is available in bookstores in Boise and Sun Valley.

Hallowell

Hallowell has a story to tell. The Hallowells have a shy thunderbird figure at their home in Bliss. The figure was brought from their ranch when they moved to town. The body of the bird is made from a discarded hot water tank, a gas spout forms the beak and parts of a truck hood form the outstretched wings. But Hallowell prefers painting. He sees a trend towards prints rather than originals, which is disappointing to him. "There is a lot of good art you could buy for just a little more than a print. And the painting could last for generations," said Hallowell. "You would have a one of a kind picture, rather than something that everyone has on the walls."

Despite his preference, Hallowell has had one painting made into a print. But he felt the procedure was too long and time consuming to be repeated. Hallowell, who works on a commission basis, has paintings in all 50 states and even one in England. The painting in England is one of the originals at Elk Creek above Fairfield. The client that purchased the canvas wanted to show her brother in England what the American West really looked like. However, most of Hallowell's commissions are here in southern Idaho and northern Nevada. Since Hallowell often makes two or three trips to an area, he has been commissioned to paint, the cost for a painting is higher. But Hallowell has a solution to the problem of high prices—bartering. "When we were on the ranch, I traded paintings for lumber, mechanical parts and even meals in restaurants," laughs Hallowell.

During one of Hallowell's showings in Burley, a Salt Lake City couple wanted a painting but didn't have the money. When he discovered the couple operated a lighting fixture outlet, the Hallowells traded for five light fixtures for their home.

Valley life

Host miffed by guests who don't wash

DEAR ABBY: People come to you with every conceivable problem, so I'm encouraged to present one that is so touchy I've never seen it mentioned in your column.

How do you get people to wash their hands after using the bathroom? In our home, the bathroom is right off the kitchen, and when the water is turned on, it can be heard in the next room.

Guests have gone into our bathroom, used the toilet (I can hear it being flushed), and they come out without having turned on the faucet, so I know they haven't washed their hands. Then after supper they offer to help me dry the dishes! (I always say no, thank you.)

Worse yet, where I work there's a cafeteria, and I've seen some cafeteria employees walk out of a bathroom stall and go straight out to serve the people without having washed their hands!

Abby, please explain how dangerous this is. If you print this, I promise to frame it and hang it above our toilet. Thank you.

—PLEASE WASH IN WINONA

DEAR PLEASE: I cannot stress too emphatically how important this one specific area of hygiene is to good general health. Children should be taught to wash their hands (with soap) after using the bathroom, and adults should have made it a lifelong habit.

Last November, the Mayo Clinic,

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

the medical mecca of the world, sponsored an "Infection Awareness Week" program. As part of its campaign, prominently displayed along the corridors of the Mayo hospital complex were posters showing a pair of hands under this terse message: "The 10 Most Common Causes of Infection."

To remind doctors, nurses and employees of the Mayo Clinic to wash their hands frequently were other posters bearing this catchy message: "A milligram of handwashing is worth a kilogram of antibiotics."

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I differ on a point of etiquette. We are both seniors. He says that on being introduced to "a lady," if the lady extends her hand, he should shake it. If she does not extend her hand, she expects to be kissed on the cheek, whereupon he kisses her to avoid embarrassing her.

I say, if the lady extends her hand, the gentleman should shake it; if she doesn't extend her hand, there is no need to kiss her on the cheek. What do you say?

—NO NAME OR ADDRESS
DEAR NO NAME OR ADDRESS: Your husband is wrong. Handshake or no handshake, a gentleman does not kiss a lady on the cheek (or anywhere else) unless she initiates it.

DEAR ABBY: We were having a discussion about drugs in our class and we decided to ask you why kids do drugs. Thank you.

—DIANA
DEAR DIANA: This may be an oversimplification, but most kids begin using drugs out of curiosity. They've heard how great it feels to get high and they want to find out what they're missing.

Some kids take drugs in order to avoid facing their problems; it's a quick and easy way of avoiding reality with all the painful thoughts and feelings.

The very young try drugs because they want to be "one of the crowd." They think everybody's doing it. (They're wrong — everybody is not doing it.)

And some kids take drugs because the more they take, the more they need, until finally they're hooked.

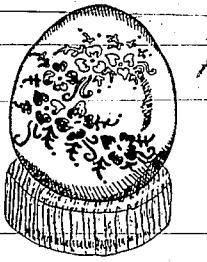

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with check or money order for $2.50 (postage is included) to: Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38823, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)
