Economy grows

But increasing contingent foresees possible recession in '85

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The economy should continue to expand this year, top business executives predicted Friday, but a growing minority warned of a possible recession beginning in late 1985.

However, Martin Feldstein, the chief White House economist, discounted those fears and said he saw nothing on the horizon to suggest a downturn is coming.

The forecast of future economic growth was made at the spring meeting of the Business Council, whose members include the chief operating officers of America's largest companies.

For the short term, the corporate executives saw little to be concerned about. They predicted the economy would keep growing this year, but at a slightly lower rate than previously.

They foresaw inflation remaining under control, and consumer spending, housing construction and auto sales staying strong.

"The executives said, though, that prospective federal budget deficits approaching $200 billion annually threaten to drive up interest rates and bring the economic recovery crashing to a halt.

They remained unimpressed with efforts by the Reagan administration and Congress to make a $150 billion "down payment" on deficit reductions over the next three years. The proposal bogged down this week in the Senate.

"Our consultants do not see in present administration or congressional budget proposals much hope for significant or early deficit reductions," said John R. Opel, chairman of IBM Corp.

The Business Council forecast is compiled by top economists at 19 major U.S. corporations. It is presented when the executives gather twice a year at this plush resort in the Virginia mountains to receive briefings from Cabinet officials and members of Congress.

Opel said that while the corporate economists predicted economic good times lasting through this year and most of 1985, a growing minority issued warning signals of problems looming in late 1985.

"A few economists believe that the recession could begin in the fourth quarter of 1985 absent some resolution of the deficits," Opel said.

Last year, he said, only 25 percent of the economists advising the Business Council were warning of a recession. Now 40 percent said the country could be in a recession by 1986, Opel said.

Feldstein, who met with reporters Friday after the Business Council session, said corporate leaders were fearful because they did not believe — as he did — that a significant first step would be made this year in trimming deficits, with greater progress in 1985.

"The reality is much better than many people in the business community realize," said Feldstein, who is leaving the White House in July to return to Harvard University.

Feldstein said he was more optimistic on both economic growth and inflation than the Business Council was. He noted reports Friday that inflation, as measured by wholesale prices, showed no increase in April while retail sales rose a healthy 2.9 percent.

The Business Council predicted that growth in coming months will average between 3 percent and 4 percent, down from the torrid 8.3 percent pace of January through March.

For all of 1984, the council predicted the

Demos pursue western votes

By The Associated Press

The political landscape tilted toward the West on Friday.

Walter F. Mondale, Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson steered their Democratic presidential campaigns through Nebraska and Oregon, site of primary skirmishes next week, en route to California and the biggest delegate prize of all.

In Omaha, Hart criticized President Reagan for proposing inconsistent economic policies, saying "he can do that because actors are trained to say the most shameless things with a straight face."

As Hart left for Oregon, Mondale arrived in Nebraska to condemn Hart's lack of leadership and his position on arms control.

"He has now taken over the past two years' seven basic inconsistent positions on the issue of our time: it took him nearly a year to endorse the freeze and then he co-sponsored the so-called build-down proposal, which is at war with the freeze," Mondale said.

Before flying west, Jackson continued his plea for a truly international Olympics, saying the Reagan administration had not gone far enough to persuade the Soviets to let their athletes attend the summer games in Los Angeles.

"The things they have done are in the context of the 'evil empire' rhetoric," Jackson said.

Hart, the favorite in both Nebraska and Oregon, hopes to put together a string of late season primary and caucus victories, building on victories this week in his home state of Colorado, Indiana and Ohio, to sway the momentum his way before California's last-in-the-nation primary June 5.

In the interim, Nebraska and Oregon voters go to the primary polls next Tuesday, followed by caucuses in Idaho May 24. But those three states together have only 85 national convention delegates to offer, compared to 306 in the Golden State.

With the stakes that high, 29 Democratic members of the House of Representatives from California called on the three major television networks Friday to withhold primary-day projections that could affect voter turnout in the California primary.

"The congressmen claimed 400,000 California voters stayed home in 1980 after hearing network projections before the polls closed."

Hart, Mondale and Jackson were all converging this weekend at the meeting of the Association of State Democratic Chairs in San Francisco, site of the national convention two months from now.

Youngsters flunking kindergarten

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — School officials have flunked more than 11 percent of this year's kindergartners and are requiring them to attend summer school before they can go on to first grade.

The Minneapolis system is the first school district in the country to require competency tests for promotion to first grade, according to Chris Phipps, a spokesman for the Education Commission of the States in Denver who keeps track of competency testing nationwide.

School officials based their decisions on a comprehensive test of children's skills, administered on an individual basis, in addition to teachers' evaluations of classroom performance, social skills and attendance record.

School Superintendent Richard Green said he hopes half of the 240 pupils held back will make enough progress in summer school to advance to the first grade next fall.

Those who don't will repeat kindergarten or be placed in a transitional program to receive special academic help, he said.

Taylor: Forgotten senator was ahead of his time

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two former Idaho senators died this spring. The death of one was front page news across Idaho — the death of the other was all but overlooked.

Frank Church's April 7 death was a cause for mourning by both national and state political leaders. His dramatic rise to the Senate at the age of 32, his wilderness advocacy and his outspoken criticism of U.S. foreign policy were detailed in newspaper tributes, television specials and radio broadcasts. And his last days at his Bethesda, Md., home were recalled in poignant detail by grieving loved ones.

Glenn Taylor, the cowboy senator from Pocatello, was the forgotten man. Only a brief wire story — published nearly a week after his death of Alzheimer's disease in a California nursing home — marked his death.

Unlike Church, Taylor — a maverick Democrat with a strong populist streak — never rose to a position of power in the Senate. He was defeated after only one, six-year Senate term (from 1944-1950), retiring to an unsuccessful career as a carpenter before finally striking it rich making toupees in California.

Yet Taylor's brief career also left a mark on Idaho and the nation.

"Dr. F. Ross Peterson, a Utah State University professor of history, Taylor was a "prophet without honor," who, like his successor Frank Church, was ahead of his time in recognizing the dangers of the East-West arms race.

Peterson views Taylor as a politician whose career was a vindication of the ancient maxim that ideals have virtue and can be sacrificed only at a loss of honor."

Bob Johnson and Murlin Lancaster, Times-News type composers, remember Taylor as the last of the Idaho senators who was for the little guy.

"When he came to the paper he wouldn't just walk into the editor's office like today's politicians," recalls Johnson. "He would start out by greeting the pressmen, and the composers and only then work his way toward the front office."

Yet Taylor's strong opposition to U.S. Cold War policies and calls for the nationalization of key industries triggered a bitter backlash during the McCarthy era. This backlash was led by Richard Nixon and the Idaho Statesman.

He was labeled as a communist sympathizer by some and outright Communist by others before being ruled rejected by Idaho voters in the 1950 election.

In 1952, then Vice-President Richard Nixon traveled to Idaho during Taylor's first comeback attempt to denounce him as "dedicated to

Panel battles rising Olympic exodus

By The Associated Press

Two more communist nations dropped out of the 1984 Summer Olympics on Friday, but the head of the international competition promised a fight to the last minute to bring the Soviets and their allies to Los Angeles.

The Soviet Union rejected assurances by President Reagan that the United States would do everything possible to protect all athletes, denouncing his statement as "a fig leaf to cover Washington's perfidy and dissemblance."

Claiming the United States was "undermining the Olympic spirit with political maneuvers," Vietnam on Friday fell in line behind Bulgaria and East Germany in joining the boycott, according to the Voice of Vietnam radio.

Mongolia, stepping up what had been a one-day ritual of communist defections, also dropped out on Friday with accusations of "vile, hostile activities in Los Angeles, according to Tass, the official Soviet news agency.

Other Soviet allies, including Poland, Mozambique and Cuba, hinted they would follow their comrades in staying away from the Games. The Czechoslovakian ambassador to Mexico said his country would pull out; there was no confirmation from Prague.

But Olympic leaders — International Olympic Committee President Juan Antonio Samaranch and Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee President Peter Ueberroth and the head of the association of national Olympic committees — and politicians including President Reagan and the Rev. Jesse Jackson marshaled their efforts to stop the flow of defections from the Games, scheduled July 28-Aug. 12.

Jackson on Friday urged Reagan to make a televised address and a personal appeal to Chernenko to welcome Soviet athletes to the Games.

"We cannot just allow this matter to remain a government-to-government operation," Jackson said.

But, White House Chief of Staff James Baker responded that Moscow already has been given "extensive assurances."

Samaranch on Friday vowed to "fight to the last minute," which is June 2 — to change the minds of Soviet officials. Speaking at a news conference in Lausanne, Switzerland, he said he would travel to Moscow as soon as the Soviets respond to his request for a meeting with Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko. He also announced an emergency meeting of the IOC's executive committee on May 18 in Lausanne.

Acknowledging he had "no assurances of success in Moscow," Samaranch promised to "do our best," and read a letter he received from President Reagan pledging to fulfill U.S. responsibilities as hosts of the games. Samaranch said he regarded that letter as meeting the Soviet demands.

The Soviet Union announced the pullout Tuesday, citing security concerns and what it called a "cavalier attitude" by the United States toward the Olympic charter.

Fire sweeps Haunted Castle; at least eight people perish

JACKSON, N.J. (AP) — A fire swept through the Haunted Castle attraction at the Six Flags Great Escape amusement park Friday evening, killing at least eight people and injuring several others, police said.

The fire spread so quickly because of the wind that apparently the victims had no time to escape," said police Capt. Samuel DePasquale.

The dead, burned beyond recognition, all were visitors to the 200-acre amusement park and were believed to be teen-agers, said Police Commissioner Richard Borys.

"Right now we don't think there are any more bodies but we are investigating very carefully to be sure," DePasquale said. "The structure was pretty much destroyed and we have a lot of rubble to deal with."

The bodies were removed and taken to the Ocean County Medical Examiner's Office, DePasquale said. The search through the melted steel and charred wood continued late into the night, but officials don't expect to find any more dead, Borys said.

"I don't think we'll be able to identify them by tomorrow," Borys said. "It's going to be a slow task. We don't know if they were men or women — that's how badly the bodies were burned."

A hotline was set up to handle telephone calls from worried parents.

All of the dead were found near the front of the attraction, he said.

Seven people were treated at Freehold Area Hospital for smoke inhalation and released, a nursing supervisor said.

"We know of eight people so far that perished in the fire. We also know there were several injuries," said DePasquale.

The Haunted Castle, a walk-through amusement, is comprised of seven metal trailers joined by walkways. Some of the charred remains of the structure still smoldered hours after the blaze.

Authorities closed off a street surrounding the darkened ride, in which patrons are surprised by voices and crew-employees posing as scary creatures.

The fire was reported to authorities at 6:35 p.m., and more than 200 fire squad and rescue workers from 11 companies were called to the scene. The blaze was under control by 7:41 p.m.

Evans calls for deficit control

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — Although Idaho is facing its own budget problems, Gov. John Evans focused on the federal budget deficit in a Friday speech to the North Idaho Chamber of Commerce.

The governor said that because unless the federal deficit is brought under control, high interest rates will hurt the Idaho economy.

It is not too late to solve the problem, Evans said.

"However, it is going to be more than rhetoric on the part of the president, the presidential candidates and the Congress to bring about those solutions.

"It is going to take some immediate and decisive action, the same kind of action that any of you would take if you were experiencing financial problems with your businesses," he said.

Honduras expels Nicaraguan

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The government declared Nicaraguan Ambassador Edwin Zablah "persona non grata" Friday and ordered him to leave the country within 48 hours.

The move was a response to the shooting down of an Honduran helicopter Tuesday over Nicaragua, in which four members of the Honduran armed forces and four civilians were killed. Honduras says the chopper was blown off course.

Honduras has said it will break diplomatic relations with Nicaragua unless it receives a satisfactory explanation for the incident, but expulsion of the ambassador does not mean that relations have ended.

Honduras recalled its ambassador to Nicaragua, Col. Isidro Tapia Martinez, on Wednesday.

Utahns wary of more slides

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — With weekend temperatures expected to rise into the 80s, Utahns cast a wary eye on rising creeks and unstable hillsides.

Utah Power and Light Co. officials were monitoring several potential slides in the Fish Lake National Forest Friday after a huge slide caused more than $1 million in damage to major transmission lines earlier in the week.

In Salina, the waters of Salina Creek receded Friday morning after they overflowed the previous evening, threatening several homes, a motel and the city's sewer plant, said Sever County Sheriff Bill Weaver.

"It peaked higher than it ever did last year," Weaver said of Thursday's Salina Creek flooding. "And that was only the first day of runoff we've had."

Stocks limit on pickets

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A federal judge on Friday blocked a state court order that limited pickets outside Strip hotels during a 41-day-old strike by resort workers, and also blocked prosecution of 754 picketers arrested in the walkout.

U.S. District Judge Roger Foley issued a temporary restraining order to block criminal enforcement of an earlier state order that limited picketing at struck resorts, responding to attorneys for the arrested strikers who contended their clients' constitutional rights were being violated by the lower court order.

Foley's order, which was made without comment, blocked the prosecution of the 754 arrested strikers pending a hearing.

"Judge Foley has recognized the constitutional rights of people to peacefully demonstrate," said Cullinary Union leader Jeff McCall. "When people are being arrested for something other than being union members, you certainly have to be disturbed."

Police have clashed with strikers in several demonstrations during the walkout by 12,000 hotel workers, making mass arrests of workers for violating District Judge J. Charles Thompson's order limiting the number of pickets at each resort entrance.

Duarte declared the winner

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The official final results of El Salvador's presidential election gave moderate Jose Napoleon Duarte a clear victory over the ultra-right candidate Roberto D'Abuisson.

The official results gave Duarte 752,625 votes, or 53.6 percent, and D'Abuisson 651,741, or 46.4 percent.

"I call on the people to help me destablize that machinery they (the far right) have in place, which is based on the death squads and in destablizing institutions," Duarte said in a telephone interview earlier in the day.

D'Abuisson's party, the Republican Nationalist Alliance, called the conduct of Sunday's presidential election "fraud," and said it would not accept the results.

Duarte said the attitude of D'Abuisson's party, known as ARENA, "is helping the guerrillas cause trouble. First they said we were communists and now they say we're from the CIA."

The guerrillas he referred to are leftist insurgents who for 4½ years have been fighting the U.S.-backed government for control of this Central American nation.

Doles' taxes exceed salaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert J. Doles, R-Kan., and his wife, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth H. Doles, said Friday they paid more in federal income taxes last year than they received in salaries from the federal government.

In a statement issued by the senator's office, the Doles reported total income of $574,282, including salaries of $152,107, and paid federal taxes of $162,816. State and local taxes claimed another $31,834.

The senator, chairman of the tax-writing Finance Committee, received $188,917 during the year for speaking engagements and gave $92,250 of that directly to charity.

economy will grow 5.6 percent, and would slow to 3.1 percent next year. This compares with a 3.4 percent increase last year as the nation pulled out of its worst recession since World War II.

The council's economic advisers predicted that interest rates would hold at the current 12.5 percent for the prime rate this year and rise to 13 percent next year. The rate has risen three times in the past two months.

This prediction was far from unanimous. A minority of the economists saw the key business borrowing rate rising to 15 percent next year.

The report predicted that the unemployment level, which has been stuck on 7.8 percent for the past three months, will show little further improvement, reaching a low of only 7.3 percent next year.

It said the current 5 percent rate of increase for consumer prices would hold for the rest of the year and edge up to 6 percent in 1965. A budget deficit of $130 billion was expected this year and $182 billion next year, slightly higher than administration predictions.

The administration is pushing a deficit reduction plan that would whittle $144 billion from deficits over the next three years by tax increases and cuts in domestic spending and the president's military buildup.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., told the council he was encouraged by the executives' favorable response to a tax revision bill which he and Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., are sponsoring.

The bill would get rid of many existing income tax deductions while lowering tax rates.

Taylor

a political philosophy opposite from that of the people of Idaho."

Nixon said that Taylor belonged to a "left-wing clique" which had tolerated the Red conspiracy.

The Idaho Statesman, then published by conservative Republican James Brown, also launched a campaign to discredit Taylor, according to retired political editor John Corlett.

Corlett said that his attacks on Taylor were the only time he ever set out under the direction of my publisher an editor, to destroy a person and that person's philosophy."

Taylor's philosophy was a mix of populism and New Deal liberalism, with an occasional dash of demagoguery.

According to Ross, Taylor's desire to translate his philosophy into a political career first began to take shape in the fall of 1936. At that time, Taylor, a struggling actor and country singer, heard Idaho Gov. C. Ben Ross give a spirited campaign speech in his unsuccessful effort to unseat Republican Sen. William Borah.

Taylor decided that he could use his theatrical skills as a tool to help an acceptance for his populist schemes to reform a capitalist system still struggling to shake off the effects of the Great Depression.

His first campaign effort in 1938 was something of a joke to other Idaho politicians. But six years later he was out of a "host of Democratic rivals in a close primary race and went on to win a narrow election to the U.S. Senate."

His Senate career was marked by many humorous incidents that sometimes bordered on buffoonery. When he first arrived in Washington, Taylor took his case to the people.

"Oh give me a home beneath the Capitol Dome, with a yard where the children can play," he sang on the steps of the Capitol in his successful, although somewhat unconventional attempt, to find housing.

Despite the theatrics, Taylor managed to win respect from many Idaho constituents for his strong defense of their interests and efforts to head off a military confrontation between the Soviets and the United States.

But his 1948 decision to run as the left-wing Progressive Party's vice-presidential candidate cost him dearly as the blustering winds of McCarthyism began to gather force.

During the 1950 campaign, Corlett said that the publisher decided "to come out with the Red record of Taylor."

"It was really pretty bad and there is no question that we overdid it," Corlett said, recalling the Statesman's series of anti-Taylor articles and editorials.

"During a campaign meeting in Sun Valley I got up one morning at a Halley Hotel and came down for breakfast and Taylor was reading The Statesman," Taylor said. "I came across and said Glen, how are you, and he said 'you son of a bitch' and just walked away."

This cast-up paper and it was everything about his associations with communist sympathizers. But five to 10 minutes later he came back and apologized. That's the kind of guy he was."

After his 1950 defeat, Taylor made two unsuccessful comeback attempts before finally retiring from political life. In his last comeback effort he led a narrow primary election to an up-and-coming young politician named Frank Church.

After the 1956 defeat, Taylor moved to California. "He decided that if he was to make it really big in politics, he would have to move to a place where people had a lot more money and a lot more vanity," Peterson says.

President takes credit for school reform movement

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan claimed credit Friday for launching a school reform movement he said has ended 20 years of academic decline and "changed our history" by putting education back on the American agenda.

Reagan, in a ceremony on the South Lawn of the White House, celebrated what he called the "electrifying" response across the country to the harsh verdict on U.S. schools rendered last spring by his National Commission on Excellence in Education.

He also presented the first "Presidential Academic Fitness Awards" to 60 students drawn from every state who were picked to represent the more than 217,000 high school seniors getting pins and certificates to honor their scholastic prowess. Reagan modeled the program after the physical fitness awards that President Lyndon B. Johnson started in the 1960s.

Recalling a phrase used by another president, Theodore Roosevelt, Reagan said he had used "the bully pulpit of this office" 43 times to speak on education issues "because we in this administration view education as central to American life."

"We came to Washington believing that education was the key to the American comeback that we wanted to bring about," said Reagan, who has spoken out repeatedly in the last year on the need to improve school discipline, raise standards and peg teachers' pay to their performance.

During his first two years in office, his major education initiatives were futile attempts to dismantle the Department of Education and enact tuition tax credits for private schools, as well as to scale back federal school aid. He made his first visit as president to a public school a year ago.

Education Secretary T.H. Bell released a glossy 229-page report, "The Nation Responds," cataloging recent actions in every state to raise academic standards.

It also included sections on what local schools, colleges, businesses and education groups have done to nurture the reform movement, but mentioned no federal activity other than publicizing the "A Nation At Risk" report.

Mary Hatwood Futrell, president of the National Education Association, the nation's largest teachers union, said in a statement, "Actions speak louder than words... The Nation Responds" conveniently ignores the absolutely dismal track record this pass-the-buck administration has chalked up so far on real support for America's public schools."

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, also derided Reagan's "rhetoric and self-congratulation." He said, "The American public knows full well this administration is the one that's cut education funding, not increased it."

After nearly a full term in office, President Reagan has flunked the course when it comes to education.

Reagan said the "Nation At Risk" report had documented "20 years of decline... in academic standards and declining discipline."

The report warned of the "rising tide of mediocrity" in U.S. schools, likening their condition to "an unflattering act of disarmament" and said that if a foreign nation had imposed such a system on America, it would have been regarded as "an act of war."

Bell told reporters it was "enormously significant" that 34 states and the District of Columbia have moved recently to raise their high school graduation standards, and 13 other states are weighing tougher diploma requirements. An Education Department chart listed only Hawaii, Iowa and Massachusetts as having taken no such steps.

Business executive Grace again pushes cost-cutting

By SALLY JACOBSEN
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — Business executive J. Peter Grace on Friday cited the vulnerability of debt-ridden developing countries to high U.S. interest rates in renewing his appeal for cuts in the federal budget deficit.

Grace, who headed a presidential commission on cost-cutting in government, told a convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors that the budget deficit is keeping interest rates three percentage points higher than they would otherwise be.

"What we're doing with the deficits in this country — we're hitting the poor people" of the world, he said.

He referred to a convention in The New York Times in which Argentina's president, Raul Alfonsín, said rising interest rates in the United States were "madness" and could "jeopardize Argentina's social peace."

Argentina is struggling to repay some $43 billion in foreign debts, and

J. PETER GRACE
Talks to newspaper editors

Alfonsín said the two recent boosts in the prime lending rate of major U.S.

banks had added $600 million to its debt.

Banks often fix their terms of lending "so interest rates are a bit above the prime rate, which is the base corporate lending rate of major banks. It now stands at 12.5 percent after a fresh boost earlier in the week.

Many analysts contend that the competition for credit — both from the government and the private sector — keeps upward pressure on interest rates. They urge reductions in the budget deficit to ease those pressures.

As he has previously, Grace told the editors that his commission found federal spending could be slashed by $24.4 billion over three years. The recommendations ranged from more thrifty buying of major weapons systems to paying 3 cents for screws instead of 8¢.

Without sharp budget cuts, he said, by the year 2000 the budget deficit would soar to nearly $2 trillion and interest on the national debt would hit $1.5 trillion.

Reagan aide won't attend gay ceremony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Edward N. Brandt Jr., the Reagan administration's top health official, Friday dropped plans to appear at an awards ceremony sponsored by the National Gay Task Force after a conservative group called on President Reagan to fire him if he did.

Brandt, the assistant secretary of health in the Department of Health and Human Services, was to present a humanitarian award to a lesbian group called "Blood Sister Project of San Diego." The award, to be made Monday in New York City, honors the group's efforts to collect blood for victims of the deadly disease AIDS. The presentation was to be sponsored by the Fund for Human Dignity, an affiliate of the National Gay Task Force.

In a telegram to the president, Gary L. Curran, director of government relations for the American Life Lobby, called on the president to dismiss Brandt if he made the appearance.

"This is an outrageous legitimization of a lifestyle repugnant to the vast majority of Americans. He should be stopped from participating in this ceremony or fired," Curran wrote.

But Shelle Lengel, spokeswoman for the Public Health Service which Brandt heads, said the telegram sent Friday afternoon had nothing to do with Brandt's decision. Brandt was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Fumes hospitalize 258 in St. Louis

RUSH CITY, Ill. (AP) — Mysterious, noxious fumes that smelled like rotten eggs swept through this suburb of East St. Louis, sending 258 people to a hospital for treatment, officials said Friday.

Hospital personnel speculated the fumes, which spread through the area late Thursday, were sulfur dioxide, but Walter H. Franke, manager of the Collinsville office of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency said authorities don't know what they were.

"It was some kind of gas," Franke said. "We think it must have come from a plant."

Police and firemen carry the body of the woman who officers say shot two people

Woman at Fresno City College kills herself after shooting pair

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A woman opened fire in a hallway at Fresno City College on Friday, wounding a teacher and another student before killing herself, authorities said.

The 33-year-old woman, who was not identified by police, opened fire with four or five shots from a .38-caliber revolver shortly before 3 p.m. in a second-floor hallway of the math-science building of the school, said Detective Dan Martin.

Police said they had no motive for the shooting at the 15,000-student, two-year community college.

Mathematics instructor James Toss, 44, was shot in the back and was paralyzed from the waist down, paramedics said. He was taken to Valley Medical Center where he was listed in guarded condition prior to undergoing exploratory surgery, officials said.

Student Sharon Imperatrice, 23, was grazed on the left temple, police said. She was treated at Community Hospital and released.

After shooting the two, the woman then shot herself in the head, firefighters said.

"She was standing in the hallway and when she passed them, she opened fire on them," Martin said. "The reasons for this, we don't know just yet."

"I was in class, heard several shots, a lady came into the class clutching her head, saying she'd been shot and Mr. Ross had been shot," said student Craig Gaul.

He ran out into the hallway and saw the assailant on the floor.

"There appeared to be life in her still, so I kicked the gun away," he said.

He said he went over to Ross, who also was on the concrete and asked if he could help. "Mr. Ross said he couldn't move his legs," Gaul said. He said he went back to the woman and found no signs of life.

Man arraigned for murder after 12-hour siege at bank

BRECKENRIDGE, Texas (AP) — A fugitive who was tricked and then overpowered when he stepped away from three hostages he allegedly held in a bank for 12 hours was arraigned on a capital murder charge Friday.

He was ordered jailed in lieu of $1 million bond.

Authorities said Richard Donald Foster, 31, shot a man who gave him a ride Thursday, stole the man's car, held an elderly couple at gunpoint, stole their car and then drove 50 miles to Breckenridge where he took the hostages and tried to wait out the lawyers who had surrounded the Citizens National Bank.

Foster was captured Thursday night when he put down his weapons and walked away from three hostages in a bank vault to retrieve a tray of food. The hostages closed themselves inside the vault, and FBI agents and SWAT team members pinned Foster to the floor, authorities said.

"Once he stood outside the vault, he'd had it," said Scott Harris, 35, a senior vice president of the bank and one of the hostages. "It was over. We shut the door on him. Outside, the FBI jumped on him."

No shots were fired and none of the three remaining hostages was harmed. The man Foster allegedly shot, Jack Bellino, 35, was in serious condition Friday in the intensive care unit of Wichita General Hospital in Wichita Falls.

Foster was arraigned on a capital murder charge Friday in the April 15 killing of Gary Mitchell Cox in Springtown, Justice of the Peace Faye Murphree, who earlier had issued a warrant accusing Foster of the killing, set bond at $1 million.

Foster, an Oklahoma native also known as "Stoney Armadillo," also was being held in lieu of $600,000 bond on an aggravated kidnapping charge in Stephens County in connection with the taking of the hostages, said Don Carney, assistant district attorney in Parker County, where the capital murder charge was filed.

Witnesses said it was just before noon Thursday when a gunman waving two pistols stormed into the bank and took seven hostages. Three women hostages were later released and a male hostage escaped when he was allowed to go to a bathroom.

"Heldom" did he (Foster) really threaten us; but when he did... we were scared as hell," said Harris.

Authorities said Foster was hitchhiking earlier Thursday and was picked up by Bellino in Elbert, in Throckmorton County.

Reagan gives medal to Louis' widow

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan presented a medal Friday to Martha Louis, widow of former heavyweight champion Joe Louis, in honor of the 70th anniversary of Louis' birth and in recognition of the accomplishments of one of boxing's all-time greats.

Louis, who died of a heart attack three years ago, was remembered for breaking the barrier of racial segregation in professional sports and for enlisting to serve in World War II at the height of his boxing career.

The private ceremony in the Oval Office was attended by Washington Attorney General Benjamin Williams, musician Lionel Hampton, former boxer Jersey Joe Walcott and members of the Louis family.

Agency restricts use of herbicide

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency on Friday restricted further use of amitrile, a herbicide used primarily for controlling weeds along highways, after tests showed that it produces cancer in laboratory animals.

Only certified applicators wearing protective clothing will be allowed to continue using amitrile while the agency conducts a further review of health risks.

The restrictions, however, do not apply to homeowner products containing amitrile. "Exposure from homeowner uses are estimated to be low," said EPA spokesman Albert Heier.

However, manufacturers of amitrile and homeowner products that contain it are being ordered to include cancer warnings on their labels.

The labels on homeowner products also will have to carry a requirement that gloves be worn during application. Other users will be required to wear long-sleeved shirts, long pants and waterproof gloves. Heier said amitrile is not a widely used pesticide, with only 500,000 to 800,000 pounds sold annually.

While used primarily for controlling weeds and grass along highway rights of way, it is also registered for marshes, drainage ditches, shrubbery and around commercial, industrial, agricultural, domestic and recreational areas.

Its use already is restricted to non-crop sites and no residues are allowed in foods or animal feeds.

Producer backed in Westmoreland case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A CBS News official expressed doubts about the fairness of a producer but later defended him as a "careful journalist" in testimony in retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit against the network, it was reported Friday.

"As you have gathered, we have our own 'suspects' about (producer) George Crile, anyway," Howard Stringer, executive producer of a CBS documentary on the Vietnam War, told TV Guide reporter Don Kovek in a tape-recorded telephone interview in 1982. "(He's) been my nemesis for some time. The tape was released Thursday to the Los Angeles Times. Atlanta bureau by Westmoreland's lawyer, Dan-Burt, who called Stringer's comments "a bombshell" that showed the documentary maliciously libeled the general.

Boise men sent to prison for slaying

By QUANE KENYON
AP Capital Writer

BOISE (AP) — Two Boise men were ordered to prison Friday for what a district judge called the "cowardly and vicious" baseball bat slaying of a sleeping man.

Gary Cleveland Karr, 19, Caldwell, was ordered to serve an indeterminate life sentence and 4th District Judge Deborah Ball said it was her intention that Karr should not be released from prison until he has admitted and accepted responsibility for the slaying of Thomas Kirk, 42.

The brutal slaying is a "warning" that Karr must be considered a "dangerous offender who represents a serious threat to society," she said.

An accomplice, William Smith, 19, Caldwell, was ordered to serve up to nine years for manslaughter, burglary and theft, despite his mother's plea that "my son is not a bad person. I know he's a good boy, loving and kind."

But Judge Ball noted that Smith willingly took part in a plot to burglarize Kirk's motel apartment, while the man slept. She called that "conduct with a high possibility of injury to another" and said she could not put Smith on probation because of the seriousness of the crime.

The judge also scolded police and prosecutors for not charging a third man involved in the incident. Ball said prosecutors apparently agreed not to charge Ernie Carrero after he agreed to testify against the others.

She said she couldn't see any reason for that deal, since Smith willingly confessed his part in the crime.

David Nevin, defense attorney for Smith, said prosecutors "made a deal with the wrong man" when Carrero was let off.

Kirk, a salesman, was beaten to death last August. Both Karr and Smith pleaded guilty without a trial.

Ball said facts in the case indicated Carrero, Smith and Karr broke into Kirk's apartment to steal checks. After leaving, they decided to go back and steal other items.

The judge said Karr took a baseball bat and said he would stun Kirk if the man woke up. Police later found Kirk beaten to death.

Ball said investigation indicated Kirk never woke up, but Karr beat him to death as he slept. She termed that a "vicious and cowardly act."

She said she intended to make certain that any official who considers releasing Karr from prison is given full information on the slaying.

Canadian group to talk Idaho trade

BOISE (AP) — Representatives from four Canadian firms will be in Boise next week to discuss possible trade agreements.

Gov. John Evans will greet the delegation on Tuesday. The firms plan to set up exhibits of their products.

The governor's office said the Canadian firms deal in chain saws, refuse collection systems, acrylic paints and plasters, and motorized dampers for propane and gas furnaces.

Nampa teachers get large pay raises

NAMPA (AP) — Nampa School District teachers will get an average 11 percent salary increase under a newly-ratified contract.

Under next year's contract, new teachers will earn $12,800, while the district's highest-paid teachers will earn $24,500. Teacher ratification of the contract came even though the Nampa Education Association originally requested a 21 percent pay hike. The Nampa School Board approved the contract earlier this week.

Jones: Utility misleads voters

BOISE (AP) — Attorney General Jim Jones says Idaho Power Co. is trying to "mislead" voters in the Magic Valley in an effort to help the election chances of legislators who sided with the utility in a battle over water rights.

But a utility spokesman said the company is trying to make voters understand the impact of subordinating Idaho Power's water rights to upstream use.

"We're trying to point out the consequences of subordination," said Larry Taylor, Boise. "We're pointing out the fact that if our water rights are taken away without compensation, they will pay considerably more for electricity."

Idaho Power launched a series of advertisements this week. Jones said they contained "misleading information" and were an attempt to influence the May 21 primary election.

"The ad deals with subordination and it is an obvious attempt by the power company to rescue candidates who have supported the power company's position in the Legislature," Jones said.

"The ad is misleading because it implies that subordination would dramatically increase electrical rates and benefit big developers," he said, while the opposite is true.

He said Idaho Power is spending "hundreds" and possibly "thousands" of dollars collected from ratepayers in an attempt to improve its profits through the Legislature.

Jones said he planned to take no action against Idaho Power, except to make public its advertisements.

"This certainly appears to be a heavy-handed attempt to bolster the utility's profit picture through the legislative process," he said.

Intermountain Gas considers merger offer

BOISE (AP) — The board of Intermountain Gas Industries Inc. met Friday to discuss a merger offer from a Colorado natural gas company.

But after a long meeting Friday, the company said no public statement will be issued until Sunday.

Intermountain Gas Industries is the parent company of Intermountain Gas Co., which serves most of southern Idaho.

Intermountain received the merger offer in a letter Tuesday from Rocky Mountain Natural Gas Co. Inc.

Walter Smith, Intermountain's president and chief executive, said it is the first time in Intermountain's 28-year history that a merger has been proposed.

Rocky Mountain buys, transports and delivers natural gas for 20,000 customers in 38 Colorado towns, Don Parsons, president and chief executive, said.

Last year the company had revenues of $24 million.

Intermountain Gas had revenues of $133 million last year.

Parsons said his company would pay $4 cash or 2.4 shares of Rocky Mountain common stock for each share of Intermountain stock purchased.

Intermountain would become a subsidiary of Rocky Mountain.

Swan Falls suit hits school

FIRTH (AP) — An eastern Idaho school district has found itself involved in a massive battle over southern Idaho water rights.

Idaho Power Co. has filed a lawsuit against some 7,500 Snake River irrigators and water users, seeking to clarify its water rights.

Bert Nixon, superintendent of the Firth School District, said Friday the district was notified it was involved, because of a well.

The district used to pump water from the Snake River to water its football field and school grounds, but in 1976 drilled a well for the same purpose.

Thursday night, the school board voted to join other defendants in the massive lawsuit, rather than assigning its attorney to the matter.

Governor names insurance chief

BOISE (AP) — Wayne L. Soward, a 10-year veteran with the Idaho Department of Insurance, is the agency's new director.

Gov. John Evans announced the appointment Friday and said Soward, 46, will replace Trent Woods, who resigned.

For the past three years, Soward has been administrator of regulation.

Lewiston, Boise highway still far away

LEWISTON (AP) — Construction of a new highway route that would travel between Lewiston and Boise is still far in the future, state transportation officials say.

The project's estimated cost is $540 million.

The proposed 50-mile route will connect U.S. Highway 56 with I-84 near Boise. It would leave U.S. 56 near Mesa, just south of Council on the present route, cut south through Indian Valley and join I-84 somewhere west of Boise, depending on which of four different plans is adopted.

The new stretch will divert excess traffic from State Highway 55 between McCall and Boise, said William Sacht, District 3 engineer for the Idaho Transportation Department. Sacht said it will be wider and easier to maintain than the older route, which meanders through mountainous stretches along the Payette River.

"Environmentally, we couldn't do more than a good two-lane," Sacht said.

In addition, the new road will relieve traffic on the Horseshoe Bend hill on State Highway 55. Keith Green, highway division administrator, said that stretch has been the division's top priority in recent years. The section has been plagued by mud and rock slides the past three years due to abnormally wet conditions.

Green said the Horseshoe Bend hill needs constant attention. Otherwise, "we could conceivably lose the whole road."

One alternate would put the new road near either Four Mile Creek or Willow Creek in eastern Washington County and into Payette or Gem counties. Farther south, highway officials must decide if the route should go due south through Emmett to I-84 at Meridian, through Black Canyon or to Caldwell.

But officials emphasize that motorists will have to continue to use the present highways for several years.

"With the existing statutes, it takes about eight years from the time a project is first discussed until it can get under construction," said Carl C. Moore, chairman of the Idaho Transportation Board.

Green said that although an environmental impact study was authorized more than a year ago, it is still in the preliminary stages. Public hearings are scheduled, but no dates have been set. He said the study has taken so long because of a lack of funding and staff, and the need to complete higher-priority projects like Horseshoe Bend hill.

"If we could put someone on it without distractions from other projects, it wouldn't take long at all," Green said.

The new road is also expected to divert some traffic that now travels U.S. 95 south of Mesa toward Cambridge, Weiser and Payette. Green said there have been some concerns that traffic will be diverted from business routes in Weiser and Payette.

Most of the land the route will traverse is open country owned by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Fish & Game chief pans use of monies

LEWISTON (AP) — Idaho Fish and Game Department Director Jerry Conley has branded as "wrong" the current way interest money earned by Fish and Game funds is doled out.

Conley also said that an Indian should not be appointed to the Fish and Game Commission just because of race.

Conley's frank discussions came at the end of a meeting Thursday night in Lewiston to discuss proposed big game regulations this fall.

Lewis-Clark Wildlife Club officer Bruce Weal of Lewiston first brought up the interest issue by asking for signatures in support of an initiative for the ballot this fall.

The initiative would restore interest earned each year on the Fish and Game account, which is funded by license fees, to the department. That interest is now divided among other state agencies relying on general fund appropriations.

"It's one of those things that just aren't right," Conley said about the current interest distribution. "It's a good deal, I think, but then I'm biased about it."

The department already pays its own way for services provided by the state government, Conley said. Legislators have acknowledged cutting some programs proposed by the department so those funds could draw interest for use by other agencies, he added.

"When you start managing it that way, it's wrong," Conley said. If the measure attracts enough signatures to make it on the ballot, he predicted it would pass.

He was also asked his opinion on appointing an Indian to the Fish and Game Commission. "I'm not in favor of anyone being appointed because they are a particular color, or because they belong to a particular religion or because they are from a particular interest group," Conley said.

Transplant patient dies

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Blackfoot heart transplant patient Dan Babcock died at the University of Arizona Life Sciences Center Thursday night of a heart attack.

The 33-year-old Blackfoot businessman suffered the heart attack about 9 p.m. MST and died about a half hour later.

Babcock had been listed in critical and unstable condition for two weeks.

He had survived three serious attempts by his body to reject the donor heart he received April 2 from a Northern Arizona woman in her early 20s.

Babcock had been in Tucson since mid-March awaiting a donor heart. He suffered from cardiomyopathy, a degenerative heart condition.

Following the 5 1/2-hour surgery on April 2 to implant the new heart, Babcock's wife, Jackie, was told by physicians that her husband's original heart was nearly the size of a basketball.

At first following the surgery, Mrs. Babcock said her husband felt better than he had in years. He had called his wife less than 24 hours after the surgery and asked her if she wanted to go dancing.

Negotiations resume in FMC strike

POCATELLO (AP) — Negotiations will resume Thursday in efforts to end a strike that began almost two weeks ago at the FMC Corp. plant in Pocatello.

No talks have been held in the Machinists Union strike involving nearly 400 workers since a federal mediator met with the two sides over a week ago.

The union is striking over a cost-of-living clause and pension and health insurance benefits.

Union strike captain Max Foresee said Friday it is "too early to predict" if there will be any movement by either side during the talks.

First water spills from Salmon Falls

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

CASTLEFORD — Spectators gathered at Lily Crossing south of Castleford late Friday to watch a history-making event — the arrival of the first water deliberately spilled from the Salmon Falls Reservoir.

"I'm going to get 20 cases of beer and some hot dogs down there and open a concession stand," joked Jack Lewis, who drove past the crowd Friday on his way home.

The Salmon River Canal Co. opened the "spillway" on its 12-mile-long reservoir about noon Friday as a trial run, said manager Larry Ragain.

"We're spilling about 450-second feet (cubic feet a second) so the guys down at Magic Waters can monitor it," he said. Farmers in the downstream areas needed to find out whether high flows would damage their irrigation pumps and other property, Ragain said.

"The way we've got it figured now, we're going to spill until Sunday morning," he said. But the trial run won't delay the spill — likely to have larger flows — more than a couple days, Ragain said.

While it will set a record, the rush of water also will cause problems. It will place Lily Crossing on Roseworth Road and Balanced Rock Crossing west of Castleford in jeopardy, says Lewis, manager of the Cedar Mesa Reservoir and Canal Co.

If the flows are very large, "it's going to isolate the Roseworth Road from the north," he said. "We'll have to go around (through) Rogerson." The route would force residents in the 5,000-acre Roseworth Tract to make a long circle instead of driving directly north.

Lewis said Friday he has been spilling water from his company's Cedar Creek Reservoir steadily for the past 31 days. So far, it has kept the reservoir from filling to its capacity of 32,000 acre feet.

"What I'm doing is spilling water to anticipate the runoff. I'm at 21,000 acre feet in the reservoir," he said.

But he is expecting runoff from abnormal snow depths in the mountains to increase greatly now because of warmer conditions. For the past two nights, it hasn't gotten cold enough to freeze the water held in the mountain snow packs, he said. The water will drain off more quickly now, Lewis said.

The Antelope Springs Road, which runs between Cedar Creek Reservoir and House Creek Road, already has been washed out for a month, he said.

Cedar Creek flows into Salmon Falls Creek upstream from Lily Crossing. Salmon Falls Creek bed also collects water from Devil Creek on its 40-mile route to the Snake River.

Salmon Falls Reservoir is predicted to fill for the first time in its 74-year history.

County asks jetty remedy

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County plans to take a harder look at requiring recreational amenities as part of the development of small, private hydropower projects, says county parks and recreation director Darrell Heider.

And in a related action this week, the county sent the Idaho Department of Water Resources a letter demanding removal of a rock jetty in the Snake River caused by blasting for the Pigeon Cove hydro-power project.

Heider says the new policy on recreation amenities originated with the county's 10-member parks board.

When Idaho Power Co. has developed hydro sites in the past, several government agencies have required it build recreational facilities with them, he says.

"We've been letting these private people go in with their plants, but they are not having to give up much of anything," he said.

In particular, the board is concerned developments don't block fishermen's access to small streams. Under Idaho law, all land below the high water mark of a stream is public land, Heider says.

Leverage for the policy comes through the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission permit and exemption process. FERC routinely solicits comment from state and local agencies before granting permits and exemptions.

Heider says some projects may not offer much possibility for recreational amenities, and some are located on private land, in which case there is little justification for requiring them.

But he offers the planned Cogeneration, Inc., Aggur Falls project as one where agreement was reached between the developer and government agencies.

A new parking lot, two new fishing and wildlife migration ponds and an access trail to Rock Creek Canyon are planned in conjunction with that 43.8-megawatt project on the Snake River downstream from the Twin Falls wastewater treatment plant, he says.

The county has become concerned with the jetty, because it may affect plans to develop a new "Riverside Park" on 17 acres of Bureau of Land Management land, which the county leases.

The jetty was formed several weeks ago when blasting for a new road inadvertently sent rubble crashing down the cliffs into the river. The rocks extend well into the main stream.

The Bonneville Pacific Corp., a Salt Lake City-based investment banking firm that is building the plant, applied for a stream alteration permit that would allow the rocks to remain.

But in the letter, Board of Commissioners Chairwoman Ann Cover, Heider and zoning administrator Lee Taylor claim the jetty could create new whitewater, which might block some boats from traveling upstream.

The main reason for the park is to provide access to four miles of calm, free-flowing river — two-and-one-half miles of which stretches upstream from the jetty, Heider says.

Officials at the Water Resources Department responsible for reviewing stream alteration permits were not available to comment on the county's letter Friday.

But the commissioners had received confirmation the letter had been received Friday.

A copy of the letter also was sent to the Army Corps of Engineers and other state and federal agencies which might claim jurisdiction in the case.

Sheriff hopeful 'fit' despite old injury

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

JEROME — Larry Gold of Eden, who is seeking the Republican nomination for Jerome County Sheriff in the May 22 primary election, says he is not trying to hide the fact he receives a pension from the Santa Barbara County sheriff's department in California.

He said he has been getting the pension since he was injured in a fall in 1974 in which he suffered three crushed vertebrae.

At that time he was disabled and unable to work in law enforcement during a long recovery period.

In 1981 he would have reached the 20-year minimum service required of law enforcement officers in California, he said. Because of his injury, he was given a choice of full retirement benefits at that time or half of his retirement pension beginning immediately and for the remainder of his life.

After several years of recuperation and work in another field, he said he was cleared by his doctor to accept the Jerome Police and school district position he has held the past year. Gold is — the Jerome — diversion coordinator, working with school children and as a city police officer.

Several individuals have questioned Gold's position in seeking a salary as a sheriff in Idaho while receiving a pension from a former position in California. The Times-News received a call on this matter this week from a Hazelton woman who questioned the situation.

Judge 'roasted' by admirers including ex-coach, governor

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Retired Fifth District Judge Theron W. Ward was "roasted" Wednesday in a Jerome Chamber of Commerce meeting by admirers who ranged from his high school football coach to an Idaho Supreme Court Justice and former governor.

Ward, a native of Jerome, former mayor of the city and Fifth District judge for 25 years was shown several rounds of humorous appreciation for his many years of service to Jerome. Ward practiced law in Jerome and then became probate judge and mayor before being appointed to the district judge position, serving Twin Falls and Jerome counties.

Wall Oulis, his Jerome high school coach and principal, pointed out Ward was better known to his early friends by the unjudicial name of "Swede." He said one of his biggest coaching problems was trying to coordinate Ward, a 210-pound running back, with his 130-pound offensive line. Oulis said Ward was an outstanding athlete and excellent student and served as student body president. Jerry Dellinger, a former Jerome coach and a University of Idaho classmate, said Ward was also student body president at the university and is one of only four Idaho students ever selected to play in the East-West game.

Major Tom Abbey of Mountain Home Air Force Base paid tribute to Ward for his military service, saying he was one of the 50 founding fathers of the JAG (Judge Advocate) department, a group that now numbers 1,300 in the Air Force alone. Mayor Ralph Peters of Jerome recalled Ward's services as mayor of the community in the 1950s. "We are still working on some of those problems you were concerned about back then," he told Ward.

Supreme Court Justice Allan Shepard described Ward as one of the state's outstanding district judges. But, poked fun at the retired official for his reliance on listening to long-winded lawyers argue their cases. He said

Ward could be seen adjusting his hearing aid as he left a lengthy and dull court case, saying it was assumed he was turning it on again. A number of gifts were presented Ward, including a photo of the Air Force Thunderbirds, in recognition of Ward's pilot skills, a plaque from Jerome County presented by Commission Carl Butler and a gift from former Idaho Governor Robert E. Smylie. Smylie served as master of ceremonies, closing the "roast" by wishing Ward and his wife, Betty, a bright new future in their retirement.

Ward's response was to tell the many Jerome citizens attending the luncheon that his years in Jerome, as mayor, probate judge and student, were the happiest of his lifetime.

Panel denies changing farmland into housing

TWIN FALLS — A request to rezone 17 acres of agricultural land for residential development along the Snake River canyon rim northeast of Twin Falls was denied by a 4-2 vote of the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday night.

At its regular monthly meeting, the commission also approved special-use permits for two private hydro-electric power plants.

One permit was for the Twin Falls Canal Co.'s proposed eight megawatt plant on the drop to the Low Line Canal one quarter mile west of the Rock Creek road.

The other was for a 1.8 megawatt plant proposed by local engineer Doug Howard upstream from an existing power project at the end of Rock Creek.

The residential rezoning was proposed by Gene Huggins. He said the piece of property in question was about one-half mile wide and between 220 and 280 feet wide, sandwiched between a county road and the canyon rim west of Pigeon Cove.

Picnic to greet peace march

TWIN FALLS — A potluck picnic will be held in City Park today at noon to honor several of the nine "On the Line" peace marchers passing through the Magic Valley this week.

The marchers are nine women following the route of the "white-trail" they claim delivers nuclear warheads to the U.S. Navy's East and West Coast Trident submarine bases.

They started at the base in Bangor, Wash. March 21, and will walk 5,400 miles to a weapons factory in Amarillo, Texas, then on to the East Coast Trident base in South Carolina. On the route the women meet with interested groups to discuss non-violent methods of demonstrating for peace.

The Twin Falls picnic is only one of several events in the Magic Valley. It is being hosted by the Twin Falls Association of Churches and Fellowship of Reconciliation and the Magic Valley Snake River Alliance.

Because of Medicare reorganization Hospital searches ways to cut costs

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Regional Medical Center may have to look at other ways of organization as it tightens its belt to compensate for less consumer spending on health care, said administrator Bill Burns at a press conference Friday.

Hospitals across the nation are receiving less money because of a reorganization of the Medicare payment system to fit diagnostic related groups, higher insurance deductibles and wider health care consumers, he said.

But private hospitals have a few advantages in dealing with the decreased funds that MVRMC, a county hospital, does not, he said. Yet, if they are non-profit, they still enjoy the same tax benefits MVRMC does.

MVRMC cannot legally enter into a joint relationship with doctors, as some hospitals do, Burns said. For instance, a private hospital could lease space to doctors who would use their own equipment to open a cancer treatment center. Being a county hospital also makes it more complex or impossible for MVRMC to expand into other lines of business, the latest method hospitals are using to gain a competitive edge. Some hospitals own hotels and other non-health care businesses or just sell services they already excel at such as their dietary service or management skills, Burns said.

BILL BURNS
Hospital administrator

The hospital had been approached by Heritage Health Care Corp. to provide laundry service for its proposed Twin Falls mental health hospital. But setting a laundry service may not be legal, Burns said.

Private hospitals also have a marketing edge because plans are not revealed to the press in board meetings, he said, referring to laws prohibiting closed board meetings as his pet peeve.

He advocates a corporate restructuring, he said, emphasizing that was his personal opinion, not an official hospital stand. Placing the hospital under a private, non-profit board "of five to seven of the best business minds and paying them" would allow the board to sell services, he said.

The hospital might also benefit from involving surrounding counties more in its operations because the hospital now serves as a regional hospital, Burns said. Because it is a county hospital, only members from the county serve on the board.

But for now, the hospital is coping with the tightened health care economy by reducing its inventory and supplies, not replacing employees who leave and adding no new employees, Burns said.

Many nurses also are working shorter hours, he said. But he emphasized that the hospital was still adequately staffed with nursing manhours equaling or exceeding the national average.

The hospital is also reviewing its operations to see which are the most profitable. "It's within the realm of possibility that some services will not be here in coming years that are here now," he said.

But that does not mean the hospital will not be expanding. A cancer treatment center at the hospital is still being reviewed, but the money and business it could generate will determine if the hospital decides to develop the center, Burns said.

Use of grants up for debate

TWIN FALLS — An informational meeting on the dispersal of $27 million in federally-funded block grants for 1985-86 will be held Tuesday in Twin Falls.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. at the conference room in the state Health and Welfare Department Mental Health building at 823 Harrison St.

At the hearing, information will be provided on the dispersal of grants covering the following categories: maternal and child health, preventive health, social services, community services, low-income energy assistance and alcohol, drug abuse and mental health.

The grants pay for several health and social programs in the Magic Valley.

The agencies sponsoring the meeting are the department and two government-appointed groups — would like comment on the programs that will receive the grants during fiscal year 1985, said Richard Schultz, director of the Idaho state Health Planning and Development Agency.

The health and welfare department, which makes the final decision on the grant awards, already has set its budget for 1985. But it will solicit comment on the activities within the different categories of each grant award.

The agencies also want comment on how the grant money should be dispersed in 1986, Schultz said.

Only written comments will be accepted, Schultz said. The deadline for submission is May 25.

Copies of the plans for the block grants are available for public review at the department's regional office in Twin Falls.

School district wins lawsuit in 'neighborly' fencing argument

FILER — The Filer School District does not have to build a fence to separate its property from that owned by Lyle and Rubie Abel, Fifth District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt ruled Wednesday.

The Abels had sued the school in a squabble about the partial fencing of a 10-acre parcel of land south of the high school, asking for $20,565 in damages and legal fees and that a fence be installed.

The Abels sold the land to the district in 1977, on the condition that the land be fenced when the district began to use or to build on the property.

The board paid $75,000 for the land, planning to build a new high school on the site. But two bond elections to raise money for construction failed, and the district no longer needed the land, Superintendent Sheldon Kovarsky testified.

The district began to let students in Future Farmers of America farm the land three years after the purchase. That constituted use of the land, Lyle Abel argued, and he began making numerous requests that the agreed-upon five-foot, chain-link fence be installed.

"When the ag boys took it over there, I knew they was going to be several of them out there, irrigating this and that. They are no different from any other kids; they play," Abel testified and described incidents of students being on his property.

But Hurlbutt ruled that student farming did not constitute use as the contract intended. There is no "going to and from the school building or playing on the grounds," he wrote. Until the land is used "for traditional school purposes," the district is under no obligation to build a fence, he ruled.

Police officers begin cross training for fires

TWIN FALLS — Fourteen Twin Falls police officers soon will begin a cross-training program as part of the city effort to consolidate police and fire services, says Public Safety Department Director Tim Qualls.

The program will begin after the middle of the month, after the city's first two public safety officers have reported for work, he says. It will cover fundamental firefighting techniques and the use of fire department equipment.

Within 25-30 days, after the officers have completed the training, they will have the same level of training as a rookie fireman, and be able to provide support to firefighters at fire sites, Qualls says.

The cross-trained officers will carry breathing apparatus and turn-out gear in their patrol cars, he says.

Qualls says two four-hour training sessions will be held each day under the program. City firefighters will conduct the sessions.

Officers will be paid straight time to participate in one session per day, although many would have volunteered, Qualls says.

Those participating will be Les Howells, Jim Massey, Tom Leno, Pat Touchette, Jim Murray, Jr., D.H. Heidemann, Jim Miller, Larry Stroberg, Gary Rinchart, Robert Hodge, Kent McDowell, Calvin Edwards, Kevin Davis and R.H. Saldano.

In the first round of cross-training, sign-up was limited to patrolmen and sergeants, Qualls says.

Registration begins for aquatic school

KETCHUM — Registration will be taken through May 16 for Aquatic School classes scheduled to be held at Easley Hot Springs, north of Ketchum.

Classes will be offered in water safety instruction, advanced life saving, basic swimming instruction, water safety and swimmer aid, first aid, and cardio-pulmonary resuscitation.

For more information, call 788-3229.

Gold

"I know of no law that says anyone receiving a pension cannot work as a law enforcement officer in any state," Gold said.

He pointed out many retired military officers on pensions work as police officers or deputies in other Idaho counties.

His former boss, Sheriff John Carpenter said Santa Barbara County, Calif., verified Gold's eligibility for a partial pension Wednesday by telephone.

Carpenter also said Gold worked on his department and was an outstanding officer, having worked in intelligence, special investigations and various fields of criminal work, performing outstanding duties in all assignments.

Carpenter said his own staff includes a number of retired military officers from the nearby Air Force base. "I know of many pensions and county salaries."

Gold said he participated in the March of Dimes Walkathon in Jerome County over the weekend, running the first five miles and walking the remaining 15.

"I didn't see any other area law enforcement officers participating, even in the walk," he said.

Zoning

The narrowness of the strip made commercial farming impractical, he said. He proposed breaking it into 13, 2.5-acre lots.

His proposal was opposed by a number of neighbors, however.

Missella Dellamater said she had chosen to live in the agricultural zone — with all its attendant advantages and disadvantages — and believed the rezoning, which might add new residents to the area, was "entirely inappropriate."

Fred Decker said he could see no justification for "leapfrogging" development along the canyon rim, when subdivisions closer to Twin Falls are not yet full.

New residential development would pose sewer and water problems and place an additional burden on the Filer Highway District, he said.

Huggins' land has stirred controversy in the past, said zoning administrator Lee Taylor.

"In 1981, the commission turned down Huggins' request for a lot-split, but had its decision reversed by unanimous vote of the Board of Twin Falls County Commissioners."

The land now is divided into two, five-acre lots, one four-acre lot and one one-acre lot, allowing construction of three residences in addition to Huggins' own, Taylor said.

Commission chairman Robert Priddy said the case raised familiar problems since the land was well-suited for inclusion in either the agricultural or residential-zoning zones.

But the majority of the commission appeared swayed by the protests of the neighbors and by the fact there is enough soil to raise a crop on the land.

Commission members Florence Pierce and Lyle Frazier voted to allow the rezoning.

The special-use permits were granted with little controversy.

Canal Company attorney John Rockwell said the hydro-power project at the bifurcation of the High Line and Low Line Canals has been contemplated since at least 1965, when he moved to the area.

Construction in conjunction with the Salt Lake City-based Bonneville Pacific Corp. will provide much needed income with which to repair the canal system, he said.

He said plans call for the project, which will consist of constructing new gates and bypassing one-half mile of the canal with a steel penstock, to be completed by the end of the year.

Howard said the all-concrete powerhouse for his Rock Creek project would be located about 100 feet upstream from the diversion for the existing Cogeneration, Inc. project.

A bridge would be built across Rock Creek south of the powerhouse, and a steel penstock and access road would be constructed across the talus field below the west rim of the canyon to a nine-foot-high diversion dam, he said.

The county parks board wrote Howard asking that the project not block access to Rock Creek for fishermen. Taylor said. Howard said a locked gate near the powerhouse would prohibit vehicles but not fishermen walking up the creek.

The county required special-use permits for the two projects because they lie in the agriculture zone. Power projects in the outdoor recreation zone do not require permits, Taylor said.

Empathy... We sincerely believe that a funeral director cannot render true service to the bereaved family unless there is empathy between them. Few of us are living would be a murderer were we not willing to be murdered so, but people remain human, and they need warmth and understanding in their most trying hour. Therefore, the type of personally kind projects these qualities: honesty and caring.

Korean Buddhist turns Catholic to become 'American'

By SEHYUN JOH
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Song Min-jung had been a devout Buddhist all her life but after coming to New York from South Korea five years ago, she became a Catholic and now worships at a Korean church in the Bronx every Sunday.

"I became a Christian because I'm going to be an American citizen soon," says Mrs. Song, 48.

When told that there are a lot of Buddhists in America too, a traditional Korean faith, she shrugged her shoulders and said: "Somehow, I feel that I had to be a Christian to live in the United States."

The switch is common one for Koreans these days, whether in this country or their homeland, where Christianity has swelled to an estimated one-fourth of the 41 million population, up from only 5 percent 25 years ago. In a tribute to South Korea's growing Roman Catholic community, now numbering 1.7 million, Pope John II canonized the nation's first saints in a ceremony in Seoul last Sunday.

Byun Soo-sup, 44, a greengrocer, says he is not quite sure whether he could call himself a "real" Christian, but nevertheless, he attends services each Sunday at the Westchester Presbyterian Church in the New York City suburb of Pelham.

"It's the only place where I get to meet fellow Koreans and compare notes, so to speak, to adjust ourselves to the new society," he says.

While many Koreans like Mrs. Song and Byun convert to Christianity after moving to the United States, others come as Christians from South Korea's burgeoning Christian congregations.

Their swift increase contrasts with situations in other Asian countries such as Japan and China, where Christians remain less than 1 percent of the populations.

Regarding Christianity's popularity in their native land, some Korean church officials who have immigrated to America point to the insecurity of life in a country with communist troops massed on the border ready to strike at the South as they did in 1950.

"We need faith to sustain ourselves there," they say.

Others cite a prevailing notion that the Koreans tend to associate Christianity with the West and the West with material prosperity.

Whatever their reasons for becoming Christians, thousands of Koreans in the United States are in church every Sunday. Several denominations have developed special programs for serving the growing Korean membership, such as a new Korean hymnbook being prepared in the United Methodist Church.

In the New York area, nearly 50 percent of the Korean community's 120,000 people regularly attend services at 140 churches of various denominations, according to the Rev. Nam Hak-hee, President of New York's Council of Korean Churches.

All but a dozen or so are American churches offering separate services in Korean by Korean clergy after the regular English services.

Many churches in big cities offer foreign-language services, despite criticisms by some American church officials that such arrangements hinder immigrants' efforts to move into the mainstream of American society.

role in integrating newcomers into our society," said the Rev. Charles Sorg of the First Presbyterian Church in New York's borough of Queens.

But he adds that "worshipping God in their native languages keeps them isolated according to their nationality."

But others disagree. The Rev. Amos Rhee of the First United Methodist Church in Flushing, who conducts prayer services both in English and Korean, says: "Man's communion with God is the most natural and intimate thing one can do and it is nearly impossible to do so in a language one doesn't understand anyway."

"At the end we had to compromise," Suh says. "Now our kids go to the neighborhood American church and my wife and I went back to the Korean church in Queens." He adds: "Our home is divided, but we all worship the same God."

John Paul vigorously presses social reconciliation, peace

By SAMUEL KOO
The Associated Press

POPE JOHN PAUL
Wrapping up tour

BANGKOK, Thailand — In his grueling 11-day pilgrimage to the Roman Catholic Church's missionary front, Pope John Paul II has vigorously pressed his campaign for social justice and reconciliation.

While driving home his points in clear, strong language, the pontiff skillfully avoided religious and social controversy by sidestepping potentially divisive issues and carefully carving out a middle ground.

He also sought to convince people steeped in traditional values and culture that Christianity offers "new wisdom" and the activism needed to fashion a more equitable society.

Central to his more than 40 speeches in South Korea, Papua New Guinea, the Solomon Islands and Thailand was a call for the church to be flexible in dealing with local traditions.

"He played 'realpolitik' — the politics of practicality," said one veteran observer of John Paul's career.

During his five days in South Korea, the pope called for "a more human society" and a just wage for workers. But he also counseled Korean Christians to avoid confrontations with the government by playing a moderating role.

In Thailand, John Paul did not even mention birth control, which is strongly supported by the government. On most of his previous foreign trips, the pontiff routinely denounced artificial contraception and "anti-life mentality."

"The major objective of the trip was to confirm and strengthen the Catholics in these countries where they are a small minority and to offer any practical solutions to specific problems," said a Vatican official accompanying the pope on the pastoral visit that ended Friday.

"Obviously, you take a different approach when you talk to the people who are just beginning to understand the church," said the official, who spoke on condition that he not be identified.

John Paul also soft-pedaled the issue of the clergy's active involvement in dissident activities, which has been a sore point in the church's relations with the Seoul government.

He appealed for North and South Korea to reunite.

"The pope got his message across here, but he did it in a manner consistent with his desire to foster reconciliation," said a Vatican analyst.

the pope went out of his way to pay respect to traditional Asian religions by meeting with Buddhist and Confucian leaders in Korea and paying a visit to the supreme Buddhist patriarch at Thailand in Bangkok.

John Paul praised Buddhism's "venerable wisdom" and told the Thais that "the church rejects nothing that is true and holy" in other religions.

However, he indicated that theirs is the "wisdom of this world" and not the "new wisdom" that comes from above which Christianity offers.

He questioned some beliefs often associated with Buddhism by saying the Christian vision of human life does not just fatalism or the concept that the poor and those who suffer are accursed.

In Papua New Guinea, he told primitive tribesmen they can believe in the power of 7-30 p.m. today at Canyon Springs Inn in Twin Falls.

He spoke against polygamy, still widely practiced among natives of Papua New Guinea, including those converted to Catholicism. At the same time, he urged bishops and priests to extend "loving pastoral care" to help the natives into "authentic Christian ways of life."

Wholesale prices steady, retail sales climb

April retail sales

By SALLY JACOBSEN AP Economics Writer
WASHINGTON - Wholesale prices held steady in April and retail sales surged in twin government reports Friday.
They were quickly hailed by the White House and private economists as fresh signs the economy is growing at a strong clip without kicking up higher inflation.

retailers' sales shot up 2.9 percent last month to wipe out a decline in March that had been one of the sharpest in recent years.
The increase was led by sales of new cars and furniture.
The strong showing of retail sales, which caught most analysts by surprise, was quickly seized on as a sign the economy would perform strongly in the April-June quarter. It grew at a robust 8.3 percent annual rate in the first quarter and many analysts had expected a sharp slowdown in the current period.

Capitol Hill, said he sees no signs of recession but cautioned that a too-tight monetary policy by the Federal Reserve could in time push the economy into a decline.
Donald Ratajczak, economic forecaster at Georgia State University, said food prices should advance in the coming months, particularly pork, which were up a sharp 8.7 percent in April.
"Beef prices, which had been rising, turned down, falling 2.8 percent last month. Vegetables prices plunged 26.1 percent and costs of fruit were off 2.2 percent.

Latest request from AT&T could boost telephone rates

By ROBERT FURLOW The Associated Press
WASHINGTON - One day after the government ordered a reduction in long-distance telephone rates, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. applied Friday for depreciation rule changes that could lead to new rate increases.
Meanwhile, Federal Communications Commission Chairman Mark Fowler raised the possibility of long-distance rates falling as much as 40 percent over the next several years through competition and the shifting of phone system costs to users other than long-distance customers.

"I suspect we're going to see more price-cutting in long distance, vigorous cutting over the next several years," Fowler said.
AT&T officials expressed pleasure Thursday with FCC authorization to reduce long-distance rates 6 percent. But the company acknowledged the possibility of a rate-increase in connection with a formal petition it filed Friday with the agency.
In essence, the petition said current FCC depreciation rules spread the schedule for recovering the cost of plant and equipment investment over too long a time, leaving the company at a disadvantage with its less-regulated competitors.

If, in turn, that increase led to higher phone rates for customers - something the company indicated was possible but not certain - those customers could adjust easily by reducing their long-distance calls, calling during cheaper time periods or simply switching to an AT&T competitor, the petition said.
One day earlier, the FCC had told AT&T to reduce its long-distance rates starting May 25.
On the other hand, the agency also agreed to help the company recover some of the resulting lost revenue by authorizing a new 50-cent charge for long-distance directory-assistance calls in excess of two a month and by reducing the access charges AT&T pays to local phone companies for using their lines in long-distance operations.

The FCC also voted to start a new charge of up to $8 per month per line to be paid to local telephone companies by multi-line business customers.
Fowler, interviewed on the "CBS Morning News" program, said: "We're going to see that every phone call we make costs 6.1 percent less and we're going on a program which we hope ultimately over the several years will reduce long distance rates 35 to 40 percent, which obviously is good for all consumers."

"Whatever we are doing is going to cost-based pricing," he said. "That is, we're taking subsidies that have been borne in long-distance rates and putting these costs on the people who cause those costs."
In particular, he mentioned the new business charge.
"We're talking about the wire that connects the business to the telephone office," he said. "That has a cost. In the past, a lot of that cost was paid for in long-distance rates that everyone pays. Now we're saying that business should pick up that cost directly."

Wall Street attempts to pull out of tailspin

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market yanked to pull itself out of a severe tailspin with a late rally but still closed broadly lower Friday. Trading was moderate.
Stocks were closely following a wild session in the bond market, but bonds were more successful in erasing their losses, with some long-term issues closing unchanged after being down nearly 2 points.
The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, off nearly 30 points in afternoon trading, narrowed the deficit to 106.5 at 1:57:14, giving a loss for the week $7.17.

Models lure patrons to lingerie shop

By BOB SPRINGER The Associated Press
BLOOMINGTON, Ill. - A new lingerie shop where the young women model nary underwear in private sessions with men has stirred a tempest in this usually placid Midwestern community.
Talk has suddenly shifted from the weather or corn prices to issues of sex and morality, all because of the shop on the east side that beckons with a large yellow sign reading, "Sexy Lingerie Models."

town" and that the modeling at the Sexy Lingerie shop "violates established local standards of decency."
Steve Cliverger, Sexy Lingerie owner, said, "I do not think it is immoral and I do not think it is sleazy. I think it is a form of selling that most people are just used to."
The shop is in a small, A-frame structure near a busy highway. Inside, from dark-paneled walls in a front waiting room, hang women's underwear, sleepwear and other intimate apparel. A spiral staircase leads to two second-floor modeling studios.
For a minimum $30, models show off garments ranging from tame gowns and robes to sheer nighties, fishnet teddies and see-through panties and bras. For women, everything comes off. By some accounts, models have been letting customers fondle them.

That has provoked plenty of talk in Bloomington and its adjacent twin city, Normal, which have a combined population of about 75,000 and sit like an island amid miles of corn and soybean fields.
The local newspaper, the Bloomington Pantagraph, recently sent a female reporter to the shop to apply for a job.
Reporter Jill Gleason wrote that two female managers told her the models earn little from the modeling - get a small commission on lingerie sales and earn most of their income from other sources.
"I was told to charge about $15 to allow the men to fondle me from $15 to $20 to undress in front of them," Mrs. Gleason wrote.

What's what

Status exists in retirement homes too: Each resident winds up at some level of prestige. The best of health tends to put you high up on the scale. Next come your ability to socialize with the others. Third, it's said, is how often your children come to see you.

More lawyers practice in Chicago than in all of England.

Q. When did women first appear nude on stage?
A. In 1919. At the Folies Bergeres in France. The show so excited the audience of the day that travelers from all over the world converged on Paris.

DIAMONDS

Q. Ostriches once were slaughtered for the diamonds in their gizzards. Why do ostriches eat diamonds?
A. They have no teeth. So they swallow pebbles to grind their food. The brighter the pebbles, the more likely the ostrich will swallow them.

Argument continues over whether you can sue your doctor for making you wait too long in the outer office. Certainly, Don't know the fellow's present whereabouts, but his record at hand shows that a Mr. Con Sellers reportedly collected $85 plus $35 court costs in Small Claims Court when he told one Judge Robert Warren he'd walked out of a doctor's office after driving 42 miles and walking 77 minutes to keep a scheduled appointment.

OPPOSITE TIMES

It's always exactly the opposite time in Denver and Bombay, meaning they're numerically the same but one's a.m. when the other is p.m.

Casanova, the most renowned lover in human history, got his start as a librarian.

Q. Did you ever find out why the U.S. eastern shoreline is usually referred to as the "Atlantic seaboard" while the Pacific side is just called "the Coast"?
A. Am now told seaboard is an English mariners' term, and the East was settled early by the English while "coast" or "costa" is a Spanish term, and the West Coast drew much of its nomenclature from the Spanish.

Albania won't permit commercials on its television, either.

Church leader's marriage dissolved

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A judge on Friday dissolved the 7-year-old marriage of Herbert W. Armstrong, the 91-year-old pastor general of the Worldwide Church of God, and his one-time secretary.

Judge William N. Sherrill of Pima County Superior Court approved the settlement in the two-year divorce battle after a five-minute hearing during which Armstrong testified that he had read the settlement agreement and did not feel it was unfair.

Terms of the settlement were not disclosed, but Armstrong's attorney, Allen Browne, said, "they were not unfair to the parties involved."

Still pending before another Superior Court judge was an agreement to drop criminal charges against Armstrong's estranged wife, Ramona.

Browne had told Sherrill earlier that Deputy County Attorney Kenneth Pearley agreed to dismiss the criminal action on condition that Browne provide an affidavit stating that "a trial would be stressful to Mr. Armstrong and might be very injurious to his health."

The affidavit also would include that restitution has been made for gold flatware, the disappearance of which prompted perjury, theft and trafficking in stolen property charges against Mrs. Armstrong, 45.

The declaration was to be brought Friday to Superior Court Judge Richard Hamrah, to ask for the dissolution.

During pre-trial proceedings in the divorce case Thursday, Sherrill agreed to limit testimony on Armstrong's sexual conduct but to allow evidence on the finances of the Pasadena, Calif.-based church.

The two sides had planned Thursday to present Sherrill a settlement intended to end the divorce battle.

Candy for sweet Ma? Not for this bunch

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Give Catherine Rice anything but candy for Mother's Day.

The 35-year-old Philadelphia is among more than 700 women who help create the Whitman's Samplers, the popular boxes of assorted chocolates.

"No way! Are you kidding?," Rice said Thursday when asked if she wanted chocolates for Mother's Day. "I'd rather have flowers."

She spends eight hours a day on an assembly line, grabbing chocolates in pleated paper cups that roll down a conveyor belt at about one a second and stuffing them into paper boxes.

Mother's Day is the fourth biggest business holiday for the Whitman Co., behind Christmas, Valentine's Day and Easter, according to company president Jim Nixon.

Rice is one of 1,100 hourly workers at the sprawling Whitman's candy factory in northeast Philadelphia. About 70 percent of the workers are women and most, like Rice, are mothers.

Another of them is Sandra Hart, 42, a single mother, who gets up at 4 each morning to do the laundry and plait the hair of her 7-year-old daughter Selena.

Hart, who starts her job as a machine operator at 7:15 a.m. said, "All I can tell you is, I manage. How, I don't know. It's like a rat race."

The plant produces approximately 100,000 pounds of chocolates a day and more than $100 million worth of chocolates a year.

Rice has been working at the plant for 18 years, starting when her oldest child was 2.

"When I first started here, I used to go home at night and cry," she recalled. "My back hurt. My shoulders hurt. Every night I'd say, 'I'm not going back, I can't take it.'"

"But I did it. I did it because I had to. I had two kids to support."

On the line where the Samplers are assembled, 50 packers, all women, face each other across a wide belt. Each woman holds a stack of little brown candy cups, which she expertly flips one at a time with her thumb.

With the other hand, she picks up a piece of candy, drops it in a cup, picks up the cup and candy and puts them in a box.

The pay on the assembly line is $7.61 an hour.

"All the heavy-duty jobs, which are mostly held by men, are more highly paid," Rice said. As union steward, she encourages other women to seek jobs as forklift operators and warehouse workers.

Maureen Laebers, 34, who runs a machine that wraps candy boxes in cellophane, has been separated from her husband for three years and is raising her daughters, ages 14 and 12, alone.

"The money's good, and the job's close to home," she said. "I like working, but I tell my daughters, 'Marry somebody rich.'" children, ranging in age from two to 13 years old.

Auger remained in jail Friday in lieu of $3,000 bail, said Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy Wes Sluder.

"They were apparently living off the land," said Deputy Pat Falls, although he noted there was no hunting equipment at the camp.

"From a preliminary investigation, we think they were trying to make ends meet by panning or mining for gold," he said.

The campsite was situated in "very rugged terrain" where 100-foot dropoffs from narrow paths were common, said sheriff's Detective Mary Breaux.

The common-law husband, Bob Wayne Auger, 27, hiked out 5½ miles Thursday to call authorities. He later was arrested and booked for investigation of endangering their six

Back-to-nature experiment ends in miscarriage, arrest

SAN DIMAS, Calif. (AP) — A family's month-long attempt to live off the land in the Angeles National Forest ended with a woman's miscarriage at a remote mountain campsite and her husband's arrest for alleged child endangerment.

The woman, Linda O'Shay, 33, was listed in stable condition Friday at a hospital where she was admitted for treatment to stop her bleeding after she hemorrhaged and suffered the miscarriage.

Her common-law husband, Bob Wayne Auger, 27, hiked out 5½ miles Thursday to call authorities. He later was arrested and booked for investigation of endangering their six

Pope denounces conditions

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Pope John Paul II offered sympathy and hope to refugees in a Thai camp on Friday, then denounced the conditions in Communist Indochina that have torn a million people from their native soil and driven them to foreign lands.

"My heart goes out to you," the pontiff said, his voice breaking with emotion as he spoke to 3,500 Vietnamese, Cambodians and Laotians gathered under a blazing sun at Phanat Nikhom camp 55 miles southeast of the Thai capital.

Before departing for Rome on his special Alitalia DC-10 jetliner, John Paul made a last stop — at Bangkok's St. Louis Hospital.

In Bangkok — on the last of his 11-day Asian journey — John Paul told an assemblage of diplomats about the "cruel misfortune" of Indochinese refugees.

Hunters slaughter whales

THORSHAVN, Faeroe Islands (AP) — Hunters slaughtered 350 pilot whales in the shallow waters of the Faeroe Islands, following a tradition that is "centuries old," a Faeroese leader said Friday.

The whales were killed Thursday and butchered for their meat. Although the hunt has drawn protests from many quarters, the whales are a significant part of the economy and food supply of the 50,000 inhabitants of these North Atlantic islands.

It was the first major kill of the season. In each of the past two years about 2,000 pilot whales have been killed.

Release sought for captives

BIKFAYA, Lebanon (AP) — The new coalition government on Friday called on civil war combatants to unconditionally free their captives and it agreed on the general outlines of a plan to end the nine-year war.

Prime Minister Itashid Karami told reporters the agreement was reached during a four-hour meeting of the Cabinet held with President Amin Gemayel at the president's summer residence in Biktaya, 10 miles northeast of Beirut.

Karami said the Cabinet decided to ask the International Red Cross to arrange a swap of captives.

A five-man ministerial committee is to meet in the presidential palace in the Beirut suburb of Baabda on Monday to draft a formal policy statement, Karami said. The half-Christian, half-Moslem Cabinet then must win a vote of confidence from Parliament in order to remain in office.

Khadafi criticizes Tunisia

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libya said Friday that terrorists were using Tunisia as a base for attacks on Moammar Khadafi, and told the neighboring North African country that this could harm their generally cordial relations.

A rally for Col. Khadafi, Libya's leader, is planned for today in Tripoli's main square. Government sources who asked not to be identified by name said there also might be demonstrations outside the Tunisian and British embassies.

Marchers decry elections

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Hundreds of demonstrators staged marches Friday calling for a boycott of next week's National Assembly elections. The Roman Catholic archbishop for the Philippines said he feared there would be violence if the government engaged in unfair election practices.

Police blocked about 1,000 protesters from entering President Ferdinand E. Marcos' palace, but no violence was reported in any of the marches in the capital of Manila.

Military reports said 18 people were killed in communist guerrilla activity on the southern Mindanao island during the past two days, bringing to 306 the number killed in violence since the election campaign began March 27.

Newlyweds kidnapped

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — and Sri Lankan officials. The Defense Ministry said Allen was an engineer for the Ruhlin Co. of Columbus, and was supervising a water project in Jaffna sponsored by the U.S. Agency for International Development.

The Jaffna area is a center of Tamil agitation.

Curtis Zeigler, overseas project manager for Ruhlin, said the couple had left for Sri Lanka on March 27, three days after their wedding.

In Stow, Ohio, Mrs. Allen's family said it was her first trip abroad.

Her mother, Katherine Daymon, said this personal confrontation with international terrorism was confusing.

The victims were Stanley Bryson Allen, 36, and his wife Mary, 29, of Columbus, Ohio, according to U.S.

Bruins sweep district track — state's next

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — Having decided the District 4 Class A-1 track championship Friday, Twin Falls and Minico have to wait to see whether they have a chance to win the state girls' title. "It's disconcerting to have to wait," said Bruin track coach Jerry Kleinkopf after his boys' and girls' teams captured the district team titles over Minico and Mountain Home. "We ran our best times in the year in the girls' relays, and it's hard for me to believe we're not going to have one of the best times in the state in those events. But we won't know until Tuesday. The rule with the high school association is 'Don't call us, we'll call you.'"

Kleinkopf will have to wait because his girls' relay teams, among the Bruin girls' strengths this year, were swept by the Spartans in times that in at least two of the races, were the fastest run heretofore in the state this spring. Under Idaho State High School Activities Association rules, the non-district champion relay teams and individuals with the best times and distances also make the state meet. "That's the first time we've been able to (sweep the relays) at district," said Minico track coach Wes Patterson. "Everything just came together for us today. In the mile relay, Charlie (Charlotte Winward) ran a 60-second split on the anchor, and the other three weren't far behind. I assume that Twin's 800 and mile relay teams will qualify, at least." Those extra qualifiers are important because they represent that many more potential points at state. The Bruins qualified 15 individuals girls outright on Friday. Minico, led by Winward's sweep on the hurdles, qualified six individuals in addition to the four relay teams. The addition of two or three relay teams for Kleinkopf and of one or two individuals for Patterson would be important because both schools are in the running for the state A-1 team championship. In the girls' team standings, Twin Falls rolled up 88 points, to 44½ for Minico and 31½ for Mountain Home. For the boys, the Bruins edged Mountain Home for the team title

76-73, while Minico finished third with 36 points. Three of the four girls' relays were horse races; in the medley the Bruins muffed a baton exchange and blew a slim lead. The Spartans won the 400 in 51.2 seconds, edging the Bruins by three-tenths of a second; they took the 800 in 1 minute, 46.2 seconds, beating the Twin Falls by two-tenths of a second, and they won the mile in 4:05.5, 2½ seconds better than the Bruins. According to Patterson, those 800 and mile relay times — from both schools — will be tough for anyone else in the state to beat. "You never know until you get to state because those Boise schools are going to lead up their relays," he says. "But I'm excited to see what happens when our kids get on that track at Bronco Stadium. Among the individuals, Twin Falls Junior Bigl Saller put on a one-woman show, winning all three of the sprints and running the anchor leg on the mile relay in just a shade over a minute. Kleinkopf was also pleased with another one of his newcomers, freshman Eva Talamantes. She ran the third leg on the mile relay in 1:00.6 and finished third in the 100 with a time of 13.16; it was her first-ever high school track competition. On the boys' side, the Bruins had to hold off a very strong challenge from Mountain Home, not falling down the team title until Rod Uribe and McKay Lundgren provided Twin Falls with a 1-3 finish in the mile. "Our boys ran real well," said Mountain Home Coach Neil Hillesland. "We have a couple of freshmen who had outstanding days. Mauri Toy qualified in two events, while Tony Hunter from our team qualified in four." The Bruin boys qualified 10 individuals and two relay teams outright; Minico got seven individuals to state, although Patterson expects Leonard Peralez — who finished third in the 110 hurdles in a time of 15.16 — to have a qualifying time. The Bruins' Doug Zakalyk, a junior who had raced in 14.61, with Mountain Home's Mark Hildston half a second behind. "I don't have any current district meet records, but I don't think there's any question that Zakalyk's time in the highs was the fastest since Ted

Wood River, Tigers win at A-2 track

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Jerome boys' and the Wood River girls' track teams won the District 4 Class A-2 track championships handsly here Friday. The Tigers belted second-place Wood River by 66 points and the Wolverines took the girls' title by 29 points over runner-up Jerome. Wood River's Lisa Bernhagen took honors in three events, the high jump along with the 100- and 200-meter runs in addition to anchoring the 800-meter relay team to a victory. The Wolverines also took the 400 relay. In the boys' events, Jerome's Gary Halsey took the shot put and discus competition, while the Tiger relay squads won all four events with the help of Jeff Klingler, who ran in all four. One upset in the boys' competition came in the 100, where Wood River's Kevin Beagles upset Jerome's Andy Gunning by almost a full second. The boys' 800 provided a lot of excitement when Torrey Sheets from Jerome nipped the Wolverine's Kip Fry by less than one-tenth of a second. Many of the fans on hand waited to see Bernhagen go head-to-head with Jerome's Joni James. The only event that the two participated in was the 200-meter dash where Bernhagen defeated James by five-tenths of a second. Bernhagen clocked a 28.1-second time in the event, an A-2 best this season. In the girls' 1600, Wood River's Mauren McClain clipped almost a full 10 seconds off her previous season best by running the event in 5:36.9. Jerome's Brian Bolich and Buhl's Charles Tennant battled in the distance events in the meet. Bolich had an easy time handling Tennant in the two-mile, but Tennant nipped Bolich at the finish line to win the 1600-meter event. "The relay kids really came through for us," said Jerome's Coach Tim Dunne. "You know, the long jump was the only event we didn't have anybody qualify for state in."

Lewiston dominates state A golf tourney

By DAVE PINSON
Special to The Times-News

LEWISTON — The Lewiston High golf team outstroked the rest of the field Friday as it took a commanding 21-stroke lead during the first round of the Idaho State High School Class A Golf Tournament at the Lewiston Country Club. Weiser took a one-shot advantage in the Class B competition with a 332 score. Valluuey of Caldwell was second at 333 and Jerome and Wallace tied for third at 335 on the par-72 course. Lewiston will take an 18-hole total of 289 into today's final round, 21 shots ahead of Twin Falls at 310. Capital is third at 312 and defending state champ Meridian stands at fourth at 314. Only the top four teams in each class will advance to today's final round. Lewiston's Darin Ball received Class A medalist honors with a 3-under-par 69. Mitch Love of Capital was second with a 70, while Scott Sullivan of Lewiston finished third at 71. Twin Falls' Larry Waldron shot a 72 Friday and was tied at fourth with Lewiston's Beau Davies and Caldwell's Toby Crockett.

Low Wald of Wallace led his squad into third-place life in the B competition with a 72. Wald's score not only gave him B medalist honors but knocked Burley out of running for the state title. The District 4 champions closed the day at 338. Twin Falls Coach Al Rohweder feels that Lewiston is the team to beat. "Lewiston is definitely living up to its reputation," he said. "It appears at this point that Lewiston has it in the bag. It may boil down to who can win second place." Twin Falls was led by Waldron at 72, while teammates Jason Meyerhoefer had 77, Flynn McRoberts 79, and Jeff Sutherland and John Kasmussen both recorded 82s. Lewiston Coach Bob Murphy was pleased with his team's performance and looked for more of the same today. Final-round play begins at 8 a.m. PDT. "I think we would have to completely fall apart for anyone to take over the lead," Murphy said. Jerome Coach Dale Mowrer figures his club is in contention for the B team title. In fact, he's happier being in third place and not having the pressure of having to hold on a lead.

Sugar Ray Leonard makes contact against Kevin Howard

Woodhouse & tennis: a nice match

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

OAKLEY — Oakley, population 663, has no public tennis courts. So who's the tall blond kid with the racquet? "I've never seen Cory Woodhouse play tennis," said his high school basketball coach, Neal Wyatt. "They always play over at his place or in Burley." His high school football coach, Don Tompkins, has seen Woodhouse play. He's an exception. "Cory's a great tennis player," said Tompkins. "If somebody doesn't pick him up for basketball or football, he could get a college scholarship in tennis." Woodhouse, tennis player? "It's just that Woodhouse, an Oakley High School junior and a household word in this Cassia County community, is better known for other pursuits. He came back from an ankle injury midway through the basketball season to lead Oakley — to the Southside sub-district championship, and then second place in the Idaho Class A-4 state tournament. Before that, as a wide receiver on Tompkins' football team, Woodhouse and his teammates came within a game of making the state A-4 football playoffs. "So why isn't he out with Wyatt's track team, running the 200 meters or something?" "I took track as a freshman, and I had fun,"

State tennis action — B2

Woodhouse, sitting alone in the Oakley High locker room on the eve of this weekend's Idaho State High School Tennis Tournament in Sun Valley while many of his classmates were away at the district track meet. "But tennis is just more for me. Besides, in tennis I get to travel to Sun Valley three times each year." Woodhouse's fascination with tennis is more than a phase. He's qualified for state the past two years, last year advancing as far as the Class B tournament semifinals before losing. This spring he qualified for state as the third boys' singles player from District 4, beating out Burley's Jason Garcia for the privilege. "It's ironic that both of us should play for the right to go to state," said Woodhouse, who travels with the Burley-High-tennis team. "We sit together on the same bus and we're more or less on the same team. Last year we played each other a lot; this year we didn't play until the qualifying finals at district." Woodhouse's quasi-official status with the Burley team — Burley tennis Coach Ron Green isn't his coach, but he is Woodhouse's chaplain — makes competing difficult. When Burley travels to a meet or entertains a visiting team, the No. 1 singles player from the other team plays Garcia — Burley's top boys' singles player — first. Then, after taking a rest, he plays Woodhouse if there's time. "A couple of times, when the weather was bad, I didn't get to play," said Woodhouse. "I just had to sit and wait." Sitting and waiting is uncharacteristic for Woodhouse. Last fall, he caught 30 passes for 475 yards on Tompkins' football team as well as filling in for quarterback Dave Pickett at times. In basketball season, he averaged 25 points a game — including a 40-point performance against Hansen in the first round of the sub-district tournament. He averaged nearly 30 points in the Southside and District 4 tournaments, 21 points at the state tournament in Moscow. "Basketball is my favorite sport; that's the sport I'd like to play if I could play in college, but I'd play football or tennis, too, if I got the chance." Woodhouse discovered basketball before tennis, but he's been making up for lost time. "My dad and Uncle Kent put in a tennis court at home, and I just started hitting the ball around," he said. "I really liked it. I used to go down to my uncle's and hit a trash barrel full of tennis balls until my arm got sore." Woodhouse has had some formal tennis instruction — he still takes a lesson occasionally at

Leonard wins — then quits for good

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard came back from a 27-month layoff Friday night, stopped Kevin Howard in the ninth round of a scheduled 10-round bout and then said he was retiring again. Leonard, who had retired in November 1982 after eye surgery, said he knew it was time to hang up his gloves for good when he got knocked down in the fourth round. "It just isn't there," the former undisputed welterweight champion said at a postfight news conference. "I decided to retire when I was knocked down. I looked over and saw my wife and decided then." "After the fight in the dressing room, I took my wife and son into the bathroom and told them, 'That's it.' "I'm not going to take any more chances and fight anyone else," said Leonard, who first retired five months after he had retinal surgery performed on his left eye. He announced his comeback last Dec. 10 and immediately talked about a big money fight between him and Marvelous Marvin Hagler, the undisputed middleweight champion. Hagler was at ringside at the Centrum to watch Leonard stop Howard at 2:28 of the ninth round. Referee Richard Flaherty stopped the bout several seconds after Leonard severely hurt Howard with a left hook to the jaw. Many in the crowd of 10,461 roundly booed Flaherty's decision. Obviously, after the fight, Leonard considered his own safety ahead of his career. "My ability is all right," said Leonard. "My confidence is not there. I was very apprehensive about getting hit and I had cold feet." All three officials had Leonard ahead after eight rounds. Flaherty had it 77-76. Judge David Sammararo scored it 79-74 and George DeFillippo saw it 78-74, all for Leonard. The AP scored it 77-74 for Leonard. Leonard, in addition to the operation on his left eye, also had a procedure performed to strengthen the retina of his right eye last Feb. 13, which pushed back the original date of the Howard fight. Leonard was not marked about the eyes but, while flashing hand and foot speed, he did not appear the fluid, commanding force he had been. In the fourth round, Howard achieved something Roberto Duran, Thomas Hearns and no other pro had been able to do by knocking down Leonard. "I was in control. I just relaxed," said Leonard, who had just landed a good combination and was leaning forward with his jaw jutting out when he got nailed.

In the fourth round, Leonard landed a four- or five-punch series to the head and then mugged at Howard, his chin sticking forward. Suddenly, the 22-year-old from Philadelphia Howard knocked down Leonard with a right to the jaw that folded a pawing left, Leonard hit the seat of his pants, then got up at three to take a mandatory eight count. Howard resumed the attack and landed two good left hooks to the jaw but Leonard was able to withstand them. In the fifth round, Howard motioned Leonard to come to him. Leonard won the round with several hard body shots in the last minute. Leonard also held the edge in the sixth, seventh and eighth and then the former champion won the fight on the force of that tremendous hook in the ninth.

NY even with Celts after 106-104 win

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernard King scored 29 of his 44 points in the first half and the New York Knicks went on to even their best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff series with Boston at three games each with a 106-104 victory over the Celtics Friday night.

The seventh game will be played Sunday at Boston Garden, where the Celtics have won three games in this series by a total of 54 points. But in the regular season, when the two teams split six games, each won twice on the road.

On Friday night, however, the Knicks continued the dominance of the home teams as King bettered the 40-point plateau for the sixth time in 11 playoff games. The Celtics have never led at any point in the last two games in New York, although they managed two ties in the first quarter Friday night and one in the third period of Game 4.

King's 11-for-13 shooting performance in the first two periods lifted New York to an eight-point halftime lead. Boston's swarming defense limited him to five more points in the third period, but the Knicks still managed an 82-75 advantage going into the fourth quarter.

King then poured in 10 points in the first 8 1/2 minutes to lift the Knicks to their largest lead at 104-51, before the Celtics scored nine straight points to make the final score close.

During that run by Boston, Larry Bird, who led the Celtics with 35 points, was fouled as he drove in for a breakaway layup by Rory Sparrow, who was ejected for a flagrant foul.

Boston had a chance to tie it in the final seconds, but shots by Bird and Cedrick Maxwell were off the mark.

Bill Cartwright and Ray Williams both scored 14 points for New York, while Gerald Henderson had 20 and Kevin McHale 16 for the Celtics. All-star center Robert Parish had only six for Boston.

King scored 18 points in the first quarter and the Knicks led 38-28 at the end of 12 minutes although the Celtics hit 11 of 17 shots in the period, 61.7 percent. In the first two played games at New York, they had managed to make just 42 percent of their field-goal attempts.

New York scored eight straight points, four by King, in a span of less than two minutes midway through the second period to take its largest lead of the half, 51-41, and the Knicks settled for a 59-51 advantage at intermission.

Burley's Boyd to Eastern Oregon

LA GRANDE, Ore. — Burley High School senior Greg Boyd has signed a national letter-of-intent to attend and play basketball at Eastern Oregon State College next year.

He was a first-team selection to The Associated Press all-state squad, as well as first-team all-South-Central Idaho Conference.

Boyd, a 6-foot-4 guard, averaged 21 points, five rebounds and three assists last season, leading Burley to the District 4 Class A-2 championship and third place in the state tournament.

"Boyd is a great shooting guard who will be a major contribution to our program," said EOSC Coach Dick Satterlee. "When we use the three-out offense, Greg is big enough to play the swing position and be the third guard.

That gives us a lot of flexibility."

Boyd will join Twin Falls High School senior Darren Stuart in Eastern Oregon's program.

Eastern Oregon is an NAIA Division I school and a member of the Evergreen Conference, the same alignment that includes the College of Idaho and Northwest Nazarene College. The Mounties finished last season with a 5-21 record.

Federals stun New Jersey

By The Associated Press

The Washington Federals, who had won only one of 11 games, shocked the New Jersey Generals 31-17 Friday night as quarterback Mike Hohensee ran for two touchdowns and threw for a third in United States Football League play.

Curtis Bleidsoe rushed for 122 yards and Greg Taylor returned the opening kickoff 91 yards for a touchdown against the Generals 9-3.

The upset ended a three-game New Jersey winning streak. The last-place Federals, winning at home for the first time this year, and for the first time ever over New Jersey, averaged a 43-6 earlier this season in New Jersey.

Hohensee, playing with his left wrist in a cast to protect a broken bone, completed 20 of 27 passes for 214 yards.

The Federals' defense, which had surrendered a league-high 305 points coming into the game, intercepted quarterback Brian Sipe five times and held Generals' running back Herschel Walker to 53 yards. Sipe completed 24 of 35 passes including 11 straight at one point.

Birmingham 42, Jacksonville 10.

Earl Gant, hitting in for league-leading rustier Joe Cribbs, scored twice and threw the key block against two defenders on another touchdown for the Stallions.

Gant ran in twice from the 4-yard line as the Stallions increased their record to 10-2, best in the Southern Division. The Bulls are 4-8.

two Bulls at the 10 to allow Toler to score. Gant started after Cribbs, who gained 1,105 yards in Birmingham's first 11 games, became involved in a contract dispute with the Stallions earlier this week.

Memphis 38, San Antonio 14. Rookie quarterback Walter Lewis threw five touchdowns to tie the USFL record as the Showboats swamped the Gunslingers.

Stoudt tossed five touchdown passes against Memphis earlier this season.

Four of Lewis' touchdown passes came in the first half as the Showboats took a 31-7 lead. The former Alabama quarterback completed 18 of 27 passes for 221 yards. He also rushed for 51 yards before leaving the game early in the final period.

Chicago 29, Denver 17. Fullback Larry Canada bolted for two fourth-quarter touchdowns as the Blitz exploded for 23 points in the final period to upset the Gold.

Chicago snapped a two-game losing streak and raised its record to 4-8, while Pacific Division-leading Denver suffered its fourth straight loss and fell to 7-5.

The game was witnessed by 45,299, a figure that was swelled somewhat by a free concert after the game by the pop-rock group Chicago.
