House blocks nerve-gas production

chemical weapons agreement with the United States.

WASHINGTON — The House turned aside a last-minute plea from President Reagan Thursday and refused for the third straight year to allow the Pentagon to buy chemicals and other material needed to resume U.S. production of nerve gas.

The 247-179 vote trimmed the $93 million nerve gas plan from the $207.2 billion defense authorization bill for fiscal 1985.

Reagan, trying to end a 15-year moratorium on such purchases, argued that the weapons were needed to replace an inadequate stockpile and to prod the Soviet Union into a

Reagan wants to replace the current chemical weapons supply, which consists of munitions that contain lethal gas, with an arsenal made up of two relatively harmless chemicals that would become deadly only when they are combined.

The size of the current nerve-gas stockpile is estimated to be between 30,000 and 40,000 tons. The chemical shells were produced from 1955 to 1963. President Richard M. Nixon cut off production in 1969.

The vote came on the third day of House consideration of the defense authorization bill, which covers military procurement, research and development, operations and maintenance, and civil defense in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. Attempts to delete $53 million for the purchase of anti-satellite weapons are expected next week.

In a letter to the top-ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Committee, Rep. William L. Dickinson of Alabama, Reagan said that the nation's chemical weapons supply was "inadequate in militarily usable munitions and has been inadequate as leverage in our arms-control efforts."

"This modest offensive modernization effort is needed to keep the pressure on the Soviet Union to negotiate a meaningful agreement," the president said in his letter, which Dickinson read to the House during the three-hour debate.

Reagan last month dispatched Vice President George Bush to Geneva, Switzerland, with a 66-page draft treaty to destroy chemical weapons and to ban them throughout the world. The Soviet representative at the meeting said that the proposal would be studied.

"To obtain such a bilateral agreement, I submit that it is essential that the United States continue its program of chemical modernization in order to provide an incentive for the Soviet Union to negotiate a meaningful agreement," Reagan wrote.

Rep. Ed Bethune, R-Ark., led the effort to eliminate funds for the weapons. Responding to assertions that the measure would permit the purchase of the material for the weapons while prohibiting actual production, he argued that it would put "in place all the parts that you need" to manufacture the gas. That production would take place at the Pine Bluff Arsenal, near Bethune's district.

The vote is favor of Bethune's amendment, 18 hours after the House pared Reagan's request to buy 40 MX missiles next year, represented the second time in two days that the House had cut sharply into the administration's defense budget requests. However, funds for both weapons could be approved by the Senate.

Victims assess damage

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Residents of the area near Miracle Hot Springs northwest of Buhl Thursday began assessing the damage caused the day before when debris-laden floodwaters surged down Salmon Falls Creek following the washout of the Beaneand Rock Grade.

Among the casualties appeared to be a property recently described as one of the most scenic in southern Idaho.

But almost every property owner in the area suffered some form of damage, and several were without insurance.

A magazine recently described 25 acres at the mouth of Salmon Falls Creek belonging to Jim Fowler as "without doubt the choicest piece of real estate along this part of the Salmon River."

Thursday, Fowler said the lower end of his land was covered with silt and debris "from one end... to the other."

His large home was untouched, but two duplexes, which he intended to rent to hunters and fishermen, suffered considerable damage, while the walls of a storage barn were "blown out," he said.

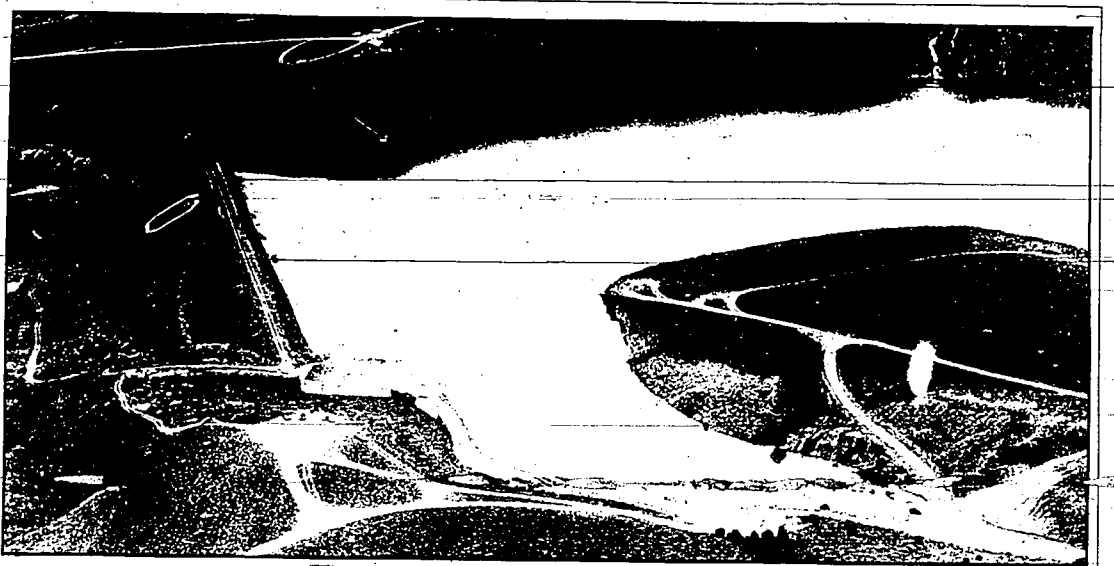

During the flood, the water reached four feet on the sheetrock in the lower house, destroying appliances, tearing away a porch and destroying most agricultural improvements to the property as well, he said.

Fowler had paid 10 members of the Hagerman High School football team to place close to 1,000 sand bags on the property which were quickly submerged.

Others suffered a similar fate. Farmer Bob Ring said his pumps were all right, but he might as well bulldoze his corrals. "I tried to get insurance since the first of the year, but you can't get it in this county," he said.

Cheap federal flood insurance is unavailable here because Twin Falls County has yet to pass a flood plain ordinance.

Larry Olsen, owner of the Miracle Hot Springs resort, said debris was piled 10 feet high against his

County seizes land to avert flood

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — An army of trucks and earthmovers was called into action Thursday as Cassia County's mobilization for approaching floodwaters from the Oakley Reservoir reached a fever pitch.

County commissioners passed an ordinance declaring a state of emergency and then exercised police powers granted them under the Idaho Constitution to condemn land needed for a new drainage channel. They hope the channel will be able to contain floodwaters expected as early as Sunday.

The county ordinance gave heavy equipment operators the go-ahead to begin carving the new channel through prime farmland across county roads and along an abandoned railroad grade to discharge flood waters into a Snake River drainage west of Burley.

By late Thursday afternoon, more than 100 construction workers had completed more than three miles of the emergency channel. But no one can say for certain whether the new channel "will be large enough and strong enough to contain the floodwaters.

Army Corps of Engineers officials are using the best available data to try to build the channel big enough to contain the flood. But previous runoff data, used to build an earlier diversion channel, at Mullanigh Lake, drastically underestimated creek flows. And Terry Bingham, the Cassia County disaster relief coordinator, has developed a healthy mistrust of the expert's numbers over the past week.

Burley city officials hope the diversion project will work. But they have also mustered volunteers to fill about 14,000 sandbags that will be used in the event of flooding to protect key buildings or seal off breaches in the channel.

County residents who live in the natural drainage path of the reservoir also are preparing for possible flooding. Sandbags surround many homes and earthen dikes have been built around potato cellars, grain elevators and other farm buildings. And some residents have gathered their belongings and evacuated to higher ground.

The weather cooperated with flood control efforts as cool temperatures began to slow the torrents of water that have been pouring into the reservoir during the last few days.

Reservoir levels had been rising by as much as one inch per hour over the past few days, but had slowed to less than one-eighth of an inch per hour by Thursday afternoon, according to Oakley Canal Co. measurements.

But even with the slower inflows, there is not much time left to complete the new channel; the reservoir is nearly full.

By Thursday afternoon, the reservoir rose to 133.29 — within less than six feet of the newly raised spillway level. The Thursday afternoon-reading represented more than a two-foot increase in the reservoir level from Tuesday's 130.6 reading.

Flood predictions were further complicated by a malfunctioning gauge, which underestimated by more than 33 percent inflows into the reservoir earlier this week, according to Burke Scholer, a Soil Conservation Service official.

The faulty gauge readings were the basis for a faulty Army Corps of Engineer computer analysis that concluded the reservoir would not fill until May 26, Scholer said.

"The computer prediction gave officials a false sense of security on Wednesday evening that was rudely shattered Thursday morning when the inaccurate gauge readings were discovered."

Tom Tate, a corps official helping build the diversion, said Wednesday he now expects the reservoir level to top the spillway by Tuesday, if water is not released through the new incomplete channel.

With the accuracy of the inflow gauge readings in question, canal company officials have placed a 24-hour watch on the reservoir levels. The level sightings — rather than the flow gauges — now apparently offer the most accurate indication of drainage rates into the reservoir.

Corps officials hope that the new canal diversion can be completed by Sunday. Crews are expected to work on an around-the-clock basis to finish the project.

WASHINGTON — Reagan administration officials said Thursday that they have launched a diplomatic campaign to head off a more serious crisis in the Persian Gulf as they weighed U.S. military action in case diplomacy fails.

The officials said the effort includes discussions with European allies, messages to friendly Persian Gulf countries and indirect messages through third parties to Iran, where there are no U.S. diplomats. At this stage, the officials said, there is no U.S. diplomatic discussion of the situation with the Soviet Union, which has major stakes and relationships in the Gulf area.

Under present circumstances, according to official sources, a public request from Saudi Arabia and the other friendly countries in the area would be necessary for the United States to send or use additional military forces.

No such request had been received as of Thursday, the sources said, and U.S. warships in the Persian Gulf and Arabian Sea were reported to be pursuing routine duties rather than gearing up for an emergency action.

A National Security Council meeting at the White House produced no indication that early U.S. military intervention is likely, although officials said a full array of options was under study.

Earlier, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "We have under way an active diplomatic effort to reduce tensions in the area."

Asked about any military plans, Speakes said, "We are confident of our ability to cope with any eventuality... While we are not going to discuss contingency plans, our goal is that of friendly nations in the area remains to prevent closure of the Strait of Hormuz."

Study says criminals inherit bad traits

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A psychologist who studied the children of convicts has published a controversial study arguing that they are more likely than other youths to become criminals because they inherit a biological tendency to break the law.

But University of Southern California psychologist Sarolf A. Mednick emphasized that his study, published in Friday's issue of the Journal of Science, suggests that only a small number of the children of criminals are likely to turn to a life of crime.

He added that social factors such as poverty or an unstable home life still play the major role in determining who will become a felon and that any hereditary tendency toward criminality probably has an influence only on children who also grow up in a bad environment and become career criminals.

Mednick first reported his findings two years ago when he spoke at a scientific meeting in Washington.

"The roof caved in," he said, recalling harsh criticism from researchers and "civil libertarians" who feared the study might be used to justify forced treatment of children identified as potential criminals.

Mednick, who jokingly called himself "a misdirected liberal," said he waited until now to publish the study because further analysis convinced him of its validity. However, critics remain unconvinced by the study.

"I'll bet the study is full of holes," said Burt Neuborne, an attorney who has argued against the study.

Mondale, Hart in New Jersey

By The Associated Press
Walter F. Mondale asked several New Jersey congressmen on Thursday for their assistance in his Democratic presidential bid, while Gary Hart declared toxic waste "hazardous" killer as he toured two dumps in the Garden State.

The people of New Jersey deserve protection against toxic waste and cleanup of the hundreds of dump sites in this state," Hart said as he stood at the edge of a Mount Holly dump that local residents call the source of poisons seeping into the ground. Mondale spent an hour talking to six Democratic congressmen from New Jersey. "We talked about political things, about working together during the campaign," he told reporters as he emerged from the Washington meeting.

Nicaragua reports attacks

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The government charged that rebels mounted new attacks on three border posts from Costa Rica, but a Costa Rican security official denied the claim. A Nicaraguan military source said Thursday that the army sent reinforcements to the border area. The Costa Rican public security minister, Angel Edmundo Solano, denied that any attacks came from his country's territory. The charge was contained in a Nicaraguan government communique issued here.

PITMAN, N.J. (AP) — A retired professor who sailed the globe without modern navigational aids arrived on the New Jersey coast Thursday for a private family reunion before returning to the Delaware River site where he began the voyage in December 1982. Marvin Creamer, 68, was about a week behind schedule in his round-the-world journey in the 36-foot cutter rig Globe Star, said his wife, Blanche, 63, in a telephone interview from her home here. Creamer's son said his father docked at a private berth in Cape May, at the southern tip of New Jersey.

Chopper aid plan given up

The Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration planned to send military helicopters to El Salvador secretly through the CIA but dropped the idea when House Democrats objected, congressional sources said Thursday.

The sources, who refused to be quoted by name, said that the administration proposal appeared to be an attempt to increase military aid to El Salvador without going through the normal procedure of requesting a foreign aid appropriation. The proposal for about $20 million included 14 helicopters, some armed for combat and others outfitted for medical evacuation missions, congressional aides said.

Militia fires on protesters

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli-supported militiamen twice opened fire on demonstrators in a Palestinian refugee camp Thursday, killing a woman and wounding three teen-age boys, witnesses said. The demonstrators were protesting an Israeli sweep of the Ein el-Hilweh camp on Wednesday. The Israelis had blown up some houses, seized weapons and arrested young men in an action that left 20 people injured, residents and United Nations relief officials said.

Israeli military sources in Tel-Aviv said neither the Israeli army nor any Israeli-backed militia was involved in the clashes Thursday.

Talks help understanding

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid had a farewell meeting Thursday and agreed their talks over the past three days had improved mutual understanding on Central America and other issues. "I believe that we both sharpened our perceptions and, at the same time, know we deepened our personal friendship," Reagan said. De la Madrid said, "We have made progress in coming to a better understanding of each other and also in keeping each other better informed and bringing about certain solutions." The two leaders, after an hour-long breakfast meeting, spoke to a closed White House gathering of Mexican and American legislators. A text of their remarks was released by the White House.

Canadian broadcaster dies

TORONTO (AP) — Gordon Sinclair, the crusty Canadian broadcaster who told off the world in the dark days of the early 1970s for not appreciating the United States, died Thursday in a Toronto hospital. He was 83. He was admitted to Queenway General Hospital's intensive care unit Tuesday after suffering a heart attack in a restaurant. Sinclair became a folk hero in 1973 to many Americans — who were battered by the energy crisis, embarrassed by Watergate and still in the throes of the Vietnam war — with a broadcast in which he castigated an ungrateful world for turning against the United States after accepting billions of dollars of aid from it.

Closed ethics panel session hears Hansen offer defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ethics Committee met in closed session Thursday to hear Rep. George Hansen defend his failure to report financial transactions, omissions that led to his conviction last April. Jim McKenna, a staff aide to the Idaho Republican, said Hansen spoke "for the better part of an hour" using "precisely parallel" arguments to those presented at his trial.

"He laid out for the committee how he got into this, why he committed the way he reported," McKenna said. "We were very pleased. We were received positively by the whole group."

The Committee on Standards of Official Conduct — the ethics panel's formal name — determines whether a congressman violated House rules and, if so, whether the panel should recommend a punishment to the full House. The punishment could range from reprimand to expulsion. Hansen, a seven-term congressman running again in Tuesday's Idaho primary, was found guilty April 2 of failing to report $333,978 in personal loans and other transactions on financial disclosure documents.

A federal court jury found him guilty of four counts of filing false financial disclosure documents, with each count carrying a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and $10,000 fine. He has filed a motion for a new trial.

Hansen's lawyer said at the trial the congressman omitted the transactions from the forms from 1978 through 1981 because his lawyers advised him to do so. Three of the counts charged he failed to report loans and transactions made in the name of his wife, Connie.

with the help of Texas oilman Nelson Bunker Hunt. The fourth count says he did not report three loans from three men in southern Virginia. According to defense arguments, Hansen was advised he did not have to report his wife's financial transactions because the couple had signed a property separation agreement. He also was advised, the defense contended, that funds going to the non-profit Association of Concerned Taxpayers need not be reported. Hansen founded the group.

Hansen was the first elected public official charged with violating the 1976 Ethics-In-Government Act, which requires major government officials to disclose annually their financial holdings, liabilities and transactions.

greenhouse," while his orchard "looked kind of weird." The flood ripped out pipes bringing hot water to the resort "as if they weren't even there." The hot waters were still under four feet of water Thursday, he said. Ironically, the worst economic damage may have been sustained by the owners of land which wasn't even flooded. Lost pumping plants in the canyon may mean no crops may be grown on some lands to the west this year. Some felt they had been fortunate not to have suffered greater damage.

Idaho Power employee Jack Miller said one bank of transformers at the Balanced Rock pump station washed downstream, but another might be salvaged. All the company's facilities at the Magie Water pumping station were intact, he said.

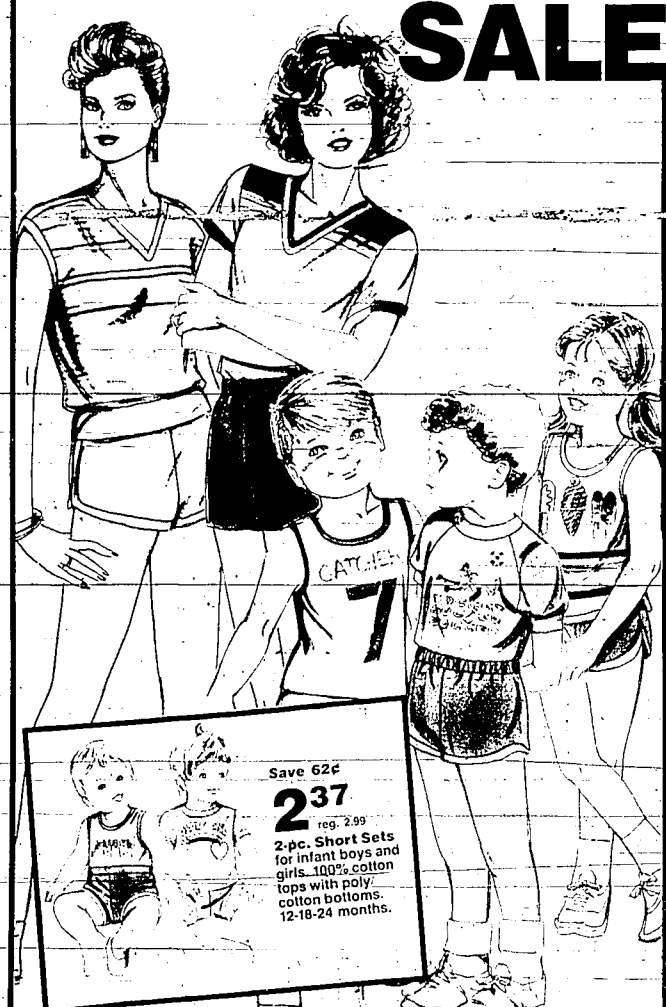

A crew from the state Department of Transportation spent Thursday dumping thousands of boulders into the creek to shore up banks beneath the U.S. Highway 30 bridge. The bridge was undamaged by the flood, and the rocks were to prevent further erosion, district supervisor Howard Johnson said.

Governor tours flood area under sympathetic temperature

By The Associated Press

Gov. John Evans toured flood-plagued areas of eastern Idaho Thursday as cooler temperatures stabilized most rivers but high water continued threatening residents throughout the region.

Thousands of acres of land was under water, roads were closed, sandbagging was under way in many places and Union Pacific officials feared a rail line could be undermined.

Four families were routed from their homes in Camas by the rising waters of Camas Creek, and volunteers and property owners built temporary dikes around other homes north of the community after dikes along the creek broke in two places.

"They're frantically working at this time with sandbags," said Lois Poole of the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department. Pressure was eased somewhat after 10,000 acre-feet of flood water was diverted into the Camas National Wildlife Refuge.

Crews shored up a dike along the North Fork to end any immediate flood threat to the community of Sugar City.

Union Pacific Railroad officials planned to inspect for the possibility of water softening the track roadbed. A flood warning was issued for the Snake River at Shelley as water spread over low-lying farm fields from Idaho Falls to Blackfoot.

But Weather Service meteorologist Scott Kiser said the main Snake, Henry's Fork of the Snake River and Teton rivers created above the town earlier in the day and the immediate flood threat should pass by Friday. Nonetheless, flood warnings remained in effect for portions of the Snake, the Portneuf River at Pocatello, the Bruneau River at Bruneau Hot Springs and the Owyhee River below Owyhee Reservoir. A flood warning for the Teton River was lifted on Thursday.

Officials in Blaine County, where Pocatello and other communities have been spending $7,000 a day to battle high waters, urged Evans to issue a state disaster declaration for the area, freeing state money and manpower to fight the high waters.

Below-normal temperatures ease Utah's too-high runoff

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A third straight day of below-normal temperatures Thursday kept melting from Utah's record mountain snowpack at a minimum and eased flooding conditions, but the potential for mudslides remained critical.

Temperatures Thursday were in the 50s and 60s, but 80-degree weather was predicted for the weekend and beyond and volunteers in northern and central Utah filled sandbags in preparation for expected flooding from the warmer temperatures.

"If we were to stay in the mid 80s or a little higher into midweek, we're going to begin having widespread flooding problems again," said William Alder, National Weather Service meteorologist in charge.

However, Salt Lake County officials said the worst might be over for Salt Lake Valley creek flows.

Terry Holtzworth, the county's flood control director, said Red Butte and Emigration creeks may have peaked, but he wants to wait until after the weekend to make any assessment.

Meanwhile, state geologists Thursday surveyed a suspected unstable earth mass in Salt Lake's Emigration Canyon and confirmed it was a slide.

In Cache County, Richmond residents were told they no longer need to boil drinking water.

North Logan also turned to well water when runoff undercut a water line in Green Canyon and it broke at a joint. Crews were building a road to the area to fix the line.

Keith Nelson, Cache County emergency management director, said Mendon Road and Utah 101 through Blacksmith Fork Canyon were still closed by higher water, along with Utah 238 between Logan and Nibley.

Water rising in Baggs

BAGGS, Wyo. (AP) — The few people left in Baggs watched four feet of water from the overflowed Little Snake River recede and then rise even more Thursday, and 400 residents who fled a day earlier were told it will be next week before they could return.

Don Nelson, emergency coordinator for the southern Wyoming town, said Thursday he expected the water to recede during nighttime cool temperatures and then rise as the day's warmth melts snow from the Medicine Bow Range.

People forced to evacuate Wednesday by a failed dam upstream were advised not to count on returning any time soon, Nelson said, despite earlier predictions they might be able to start coming home Sunday.

"We've still got a lot of snowpack to come yet," Nelson said.

The Army Corps of Engineers sent an engineer to Baggs to look at levees along the Little Snake that now are under water. Mayor Linda Fleming said, She wasn't sure what the Corps could do for Baggs, aside from giving technical advice, without a federal disaster declaration.

Meanwhile, Nelson said no serious injuries had been reported, and everyone apparently was able to evacuate the flood area safely.

The Army National Guard, meanwhile, brought in another 10,000 sandbags by helicopter to Baggs, where residents have fortified the Little Snake River School against the floodwaters with sand-filled plastic bags.

Democratic primary has good candidates

Earlier this week, we endorsed florial Senate district candidate Michael Dahmer in the Republican primary, believing he has considerably more work and political experience than his opponent, Larry Anderson.

Today, we give our nod to Democrat R.L. "Nick" Nicholson, for the same seat, although the differences between him and his primary opponent John J. Hurley are not nearly so sharp as those between the moderate Dahmer and ultra-conservative Anderson.

Nicholson, a Twin Falls High School debate teacher, avid river runner and outdoorsman, is particularly well versed on issues involving both education and the environment.

He says he favors subordination of the Snake River water at Swan Falls on the basis of agricultural needs, power generation and stream flow maintenance for fish and recreational use.

But he negotiates with Idaho Power Company, which he thinks will come about when the issue begins to move back into the courts. Realistically, he says, he sees nothing wrong with new water users who come on line carrying some of the burden for increasing power costs.

Hurley, an economics professor at the College of Southern Idaho and a resident of Dietrich, is also an attractive Democratic candidate for the Senate seat. He too supports subordination of the water at Swan Falls, but says he prefers state condemnation and therefore payment for the right over outright taking of the water by the state's police power.

Both men are conservative Democrats and we think either could provide a good alternative to their Republican counterparts on the issues, particularly to Anderson.

Nicholson and Hurley, for example, both support education reform and adequate funding. Hurley is an outspoken advocate for CSI. Nicholson, we think, has the better feel for educational issues at the public school level.

This choice is not an easy one. For the first time in years, valley Democrats have two attractive candidates from which to choose in a major primary; overall, we like Nicholson a bit more, but we think either would be a credible candidate in the fall.

Utility's motives questioned

What is Idaho Power Co. doing? Our utility company has launched a major media campaign to obviously help candidates who have supported them in the past.

Their ads would sound as though our rates have never gone up in the past. My power rates have risen consistently since I moved my family to Jerome.

Idaho Power has singled out agriculture as the one they are trying to stop from future development. It appears to me they are stopping everyone. Look closely at who they sued over the water rights issue. It stretches from domestic users, schools, churches, resort areas, boy scout troops, business and farmers just to mention a few of the areas. Even the city of Jerome is affected by this issue.

What will happen if Idaho Power gets control of the Snake River and I want to bring my industry to Jerome? They will take away water in a consumptive way then that new industry would be denied water according to the legislation Idaho Power supports.

How can the people set idly by and allow Idaho Power Co. to spend our money to actually campaign on an issue like this in their attempt to get their supporters re-elected and take over the control of the Snake River... which is Idaho's.

GORDON J. PRAIRIE

Ad campaign a 'cheap shot'

I strongly object to Idaho Power using rate-payer's money to run political ads, namely, their anti-subordination campaign. I think it's a cheap shot.

Insist on water subordination

I find it difficult to express how important the Swan Falls issue is to the State of Idaho. As election day approaches, we the voters can influence which direction this issue goes. Yes, the water rights battle directly affects thousands of farmers and other water users, but just as importantly, it will affect the number of future job opportunities and the health of business operations within our state.

The Cogswell reapportionment plan which has been forced on us by the court has nullified some incumbent state legislators into new districts. It is true that the courts plan was to not effect... because they were unhappy with the legislature for not giving them a pay increase? Ho Hum...

Anyway, many of our voters have now had a chance to hear these candidates views. I would like to urge all voters to pay close attention to what they are saying as they try to convince you that their voting record has been in your best interest.

I know some of these legislators will stand before you and seriously say Idaho Power is only doing what the laws require. That's right, just don't forget who wrote those laws. Idaho Power has always had a strong lobby which has enabled them to influence legislation in their best interest.

And when the voters hear the Idaho Power radio ad saying developers want control of Snake River water, remember who encouraged the Bell Rapids farming project and all electric homes. Who is calling who developers?

I have closely watched Idaho Power actions ever since their big push to build a coal power plant. I will have to say they have done everything they can to benefit their stockholders and the company (a Maine corporation) has not taken into consideration what is best for Idaho.

Watch out, our water and our power could be sold out of state should a private company gain control. We must insist that Idaho Power's water right is or will be subordinated. All candidates who have voted in favor of turning over our State's water to Idaho Power should be defeated.

PATTY HOOPER

Swan Falls issue complicated

Mr. McNevin would like the voters of Southern Idaho to believe the water rights issue at Swan Falls to be as simple as "subordination." I am, after all, an irrigator and pumper. I have very deep concerns about this complex problem and believe that any decision made by the Legislature would be very far reaching and may take several years to settle in the courts.

Members of Congress are required to file two disclosure reports. One discloses campaign finances and is required by the Federal Election Commission. The other discloses personal financial information and is required under the Ethics in Government Act.

Taken together, they provide voters concerned about the effect of money on politics with meaningful information on the separation of a candidate's finances.

Separately, they are less informative and in a situation such as Hansen's, the absence of one report denies voters the opportunity to determine if the candidate was able to loan his campaign $30,000.

The last personal report filed by Hansen provides enough information to suggest that perhaps Hansen is not in a position to make such a loan.

And if he is not able to make the loan, challenger Adamson's allegation that he is sheltering a contributor or creditor gains

If this issue was just subordination of Idaho Power water rights at Swan Falls, it would probably be a minor problem and could be brought about with less consequence, but legislation that has been proposed will subordinate all Idaho Power generation plants the full length of the Snake River. If this is the case, it would cost rate payers millions of dollars in increased rates and would cancel the proposed generating plant at Milner and would ultimately cost the stockholders of the North and Southside Canal Districts millions of dollars in lost generating revenue.

I would first of all like to see the thousands of people who have made substantial investments be released so they can get on with their projects. Next, a study should be made to determine the amount of water remaining that can be put to beneficial use and allocate it accordingly.

The Snake River is one of the great working rivers in the West and I would like to see it further developed upstream where it can be used over and over before it leaves the state.

I believe another area that deserves study is a State Water Bank; this has been used successfully in some other states and could possibly help solve some of our problems here.

Another area that should be of concern to everyone is the subject of rate increases. Studies by the PUC, the Idaho Dept. of Water Resources, and the University of Idaho agricultural economists have estimated electric rates for irrigation customers could increase between 52% and 133% within three to five years of subordination. This increase would be on top of any other increases the utility might receive for its normal operations.

In the past, the PUC has been reluctant to require irrigators to pay their full cost of service in recognition of agriculture's fragile economy. Since the water controversy arose, the commissioners have said future rate increases will probably fall on irrigator customers because if water rights are taken for new irrigation, irrigators would be responsible for causing the increases. The Idaho PUC now seems to have large industrial users. The bottom line is we must decide how much increase in electricity costs we are willing and able to pay in order to bring more land under development.

I feel that if elected, I should go to the Legislature uncommitted so I might be more effective in developing a reasonable, feasible compromise on water rights.

Baxter best qualified candidate

The race for Twin Falls County Prosecutor is drawing to a close. Throughout the campaign the issues and qualifications have been well presented in the media. There are, however, two points that I feel should be kept in mind.

First, the point concerning a full time prosecutor is not how big one's apple orchard is or whether or not they teach skiing, but whether the candidate will continue to do private legal work outside of the prosecutor's duties.

When the office had a lower salary and the duties were not as demanding or complicated, there was an understanding that the prosecutor could maintain an outside private practice.

This is not the case today. For the salary now being paid and the demands of the position, the residents in Twin Falls County deserve a prosecutor who will concentrate all their time on that position. It has been reported in this paper by interviews with the candidates that only K. Baxter is willing to do this.

Secondly, the issue of experience. Frank Dykas 29 years old when he first ran for prosecutor in 1976 and at that time only had one year of legal practice which was as deputy prosecutor and none in private law practice. Gordon Bennett, though he has had experience in the military, has no prosecutor experience in the public sector and a majority of his private practice has been as a defense attorney. I question whether or not he will be able to make the philosophical switch to prosecutor work. K. Baxter is 28 years old, however, has had two years of demanding and in-depth prosecutor experience as a criminal deputy prosecutor in the King County (Seattle, Wash.) prosecutors office in addition to two years private practice with the law firm of Decker and Hofffield in Twin Falls. I have visited with both the legal professionals and laymen who have had the opportunity to work with her and believe that her experience very adequately qualify her for the position of Twin Falls County credibility.

In 1981, Hansen listed his income — above his roughly $20,000 a year Congressional pay — as a single $500 speaking fee and interest income of less than $1,000 earned from government securities.

He listed no holdings in real property held for profit.

But Hansen did list an extensive debt burden for a man of his income and holdings. He reported owing between $135,000 and $360,000 — not including the $135,000 in personal loans he received from a West Virginia businessman. The omission was the cause of one of the four felony convictions.

Since he has stopped filing the disclosure forms required under the Ethics in Government Act, Hansen has been involved in the extensive — and expensive — legal battle with the Justice Dept.

In an interview last month, Hansen's Congressional staff attorney Jim McKenna

Prosecutor. K. Baxter is an extremely intelligent and committed attorney and cares about people in Twin Falls County. She will serve us all as an outstanding prosecutor. I urge you to consider all of the facts and vote Tuesday for K. Ellen (Waeglin) Baxter.

Change the Constitution?

Congressman George Hansen claims to be a strict constitutionalist yet, he cries foul, unfair, "I should be tried in Idaho" when it comes to his own trial and conviction. He is aware that in the Bill of Rights (passed in 1790) the 6th Amendment to the Constitution states, "In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed."

Hansen's district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to be confronted with witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense.

Should the Constitution be changed because the congressman was found guilty?

Roberts preferred for seat

I am writing in regard to the state Representative race in Legislative District 25A. I have known John Roberts for twenty years. I know him to be one of the most honest, hard-working, and God-fearing men I have ever met. I know the Times News feels that Mr. Callen is their choice; however, it is hard for me to believe there is a candidate more qualified than Mr. Roberts. John Roberts has been a success in the fields of insurance (Charter Life Underwriter), real estate (Past President of Buhl Board of Realtors and Director of Farm Land Institute), as well as sawing and farming his own farm.

In addition, Mr. Roberts has served on the curriculum committee for the Buhl School District and places a high priority to the needs of education.

Mr. Roberts believes Idaho's water should go to the people of Idaho and not some "special interests" group. He believes that you can get power from sources other than water, but it is impossible to irrigate farmland with anything but water.

I feel we should trust the management of our monies to people who are successful with the management of their personal finances. John Roberts has always been financially successful.

In summation, John Roberts will represent all of the people of the District. He will always be informed on any issue and vote for what is best for the people of District 25A.

Wonderful afternoon of music

The exciting performance of almost 100 young people playing violins on stage at the CSI Fine Arts Building Auditorium last Saturday afternoon, May 12th, was like nothing else I have ever seen or heard in my many years of appreciating music!

These charming, talented young violinists, boys and girls, had memorized perfectly and all played in unison special selections of some 15 different classical composers, 23 numbers and four folk songs, including four by Johann Sebastian Bach! The youngest musicians must have been about four or five! They demonstrated how to bow on each of the four strings! The piano accompanists played from sheet music scores.

The concert was the Second Annual Suzuki String Invitational workshop with William Starr as guest instructor. He played violin and conducted right along with all the students.

The performance was sponsored by the Twin Falls Suzuki String Association, Judy Call, president, and the College of Southern Idaho Music Department.

May I say "thank you" to all teachers and students for giving me and the many parents and friends of the violinists for giving us such a wonderful afternoon of great music! I praise you for realizing the deep meaning and significance of classical music.

Hansen report should signal a warning to district voters

Errors on George Hansen's latest campaign finance disclosure report may be exactly what the Congressman contends, an oversight.

But the misinformation the report contains and its explanation from Hansen should signal a warning to voters in the 2nd Congressional District.

Hansen misrepresented the two largest items in his campaign's pre-primary report to the Federal Election Commission.

The report states that the two companies that produced his "George the Dragon Slayer" campaign comic book had extended nearly $30,000 in credit to his campaign. In fact, no such credit was extended.

And so it appears Hansen — who was found guilty by a jury of four felony counts of failing to disclose personal financial information, including personal loans — has found a new way to batch his required paperwork.

Now he is reporting loans that never existed.

Rick Shaughnessy

The claims by his opponent, Dan Adamson of Jerome, that the loans are a smoke screen deserve more attention than to be just brushed aside as political mudslinging over another technical error.

Hansen says the money was contributed from his own personal funds. But as a matter of policy and as a result of his legal battle over the disclosure of personal finances, Hansen has declined since 1981 to file the required reports that would indicate whether his explanation is true.

Members of Congress are required to file two disclosure reports. One discloses campaign finances and is required by the Federal Election Commission. The other discloses personal financial information and is required under the Ethics in Government Act.

Taken together, they provide voters concerned about the effect of money on politics with meaningful information on the separation of a candidate's finances.

Separately, they are less informative and in a situation such as Hansen's, the absence of one report denies voters the opportunity to determine if the candidate was able to loan his campaign $30,000.

The last personal report filed by Hansen provides enough information to suggest that perhaps Hansen is not in a position to make such a loan.

And if he is not able to make the loan, challenger Adamson's allegation that he is sheltering a contributor or creditor gains credibility.

In 1981, Hansen listed his income — above his roughly $20,000 a year Congressional pay — as a single $500 speaking fee and interest income of less than $1,000 earned from government securities.

He listed no holdings in real property held for profit.

But Hansen did list an extensive debt burden for a man of his income and holdings. He reported owing between $135,000 and $360,000 — not including the $135,000 in personal loans he received from a West Virginia businessman. The omission was the cause of one of the four felony convictions.

Since he has stopped filing the disclosure forms required under the Ethics in Government Act, Hansen has been involved in the extensive — and expensive — legal battle with the Justice Dept.

In an interview last month, Hansen's Congressional staff attorney Jim McKenna said Hansen's debts stand at "around $300,000." He added that Hansen's legal bill from his case against the Justice Department will come to about $250,000.

If Hansen's loans are made at prime rate — the rate banks charge their best corporate customers — he would pay over $30,000 a year in interest alone to service his debt.

Connie would have to save a lot out of their butter and egg money to make a $30,000 interest payment, pay the household expenses and throw $30,000 into the re-election campaign on George's $60,000 a year salary.

The erroneous report raises more questions and is more serious than the Hansen campaign will acknowledge. It is unfair to voters, however, that those questions will probably not be answered before Tuesday's primary election.

K. Baxter, Frank Dykas get support in county prosecutor's race

Supports K. Baxter

Political letters to the editor tend to bore people, especially long ones, so when I feel the unshakable urge to write one, I try to brief!

K. Ellen Baxter is an outstanding Republican running for the office of Twin Falls prosecuting attorney. She is qualified and tough enough to do the job and do it well.

K. is a competent lawyer, has experience as a deputy prosecutor, and has an unbelievable amount of energy and determination. All three candidates are good - but K. Baxter is the best. Let's send our best to the court house - vote for K. Baxter on Tuesday.

DONNA M. STALLEY
Twin Falls

Baxter works hard

I'm glad to see you endorse the right candidate for the right job. I've worked with K. Ellen Baxter for the last two years at Decker and Hofffield. She is well qualified as a prosecuting attorney. I believe she will bring organizational and administrative skills to that office. I also believe that the Twin Falls County could not have a better prosecutor than K. Her courtroom manner is excellent.

K. works hard on her case load, gives complete attention to her clients and gives them full measure. She will not short change Twin Falls County residents.

K. will not use this position as a training ground. She already knows what the job entails. She's done it before. Give your support to K. on May 22, 1984. You won't be sorry!

DONNA S. ALLEN
Twin Falls

Baxter is best choice

I have been watching with interest the race between K. Baxter, Golden Bennett and Frank Dykas for Twin Falls County prosecuting attorney. What most people don't realize is that this primary election on Tuesday will probably be the final decision as to who will hold the prosecuting attorney's office.

Since there is no Democrat running and the present prosecutor is retiring, Twin Falls County will need to fill this office starting June 2. The county commissioners will probably appoint the prosecutor's vacancy to the person who wins the primary.

Therefore, it is imperative for the voters to know the qualifications of these three candidates.

I have been particularly interested in this election and have studied the qualifications of each candidate.

Without a doubt, K. Baxter is the best choice - and will be an asset to the county of Twin Falls.

DEBBIE GORE

Twin backs Baxter

I am writing on the behalf of K. Baxter, who is running for county prosecuting attorney. As president of our church youth group, I have worked with K. and her husband, Bill, extensively for two years. Through various projects, I have seen K. relate to many people, young and old, and all have been drawn to her. She listens, understands, and tries to help any way she can.

Many times a candidate's personal qualities are overlooked while seeking credentials. I hope that by this, another good side of K. Baxter is exposed; the caring one.

Backs Frank Dykas

No one plans to end up in a courtroom - that sort of thing happens only to the other fellow. Unfortunately that idea is merely an illusion and many of us will, in one capacity or other, become personally involved in the judicial system. I can only say that if circumstances demand my presence in the Twin Falls County courts in whatever capacity, I would feel the case would be handled as quickly and competently as possible with Frank Dykas as prosecuting attorney.

It has been nearly three years since I first met Frank in the offices he shares with his law partner Bob Weaver in Buhl. Since that time our attorney-client relationship has included an entangled maze of wrongful death suits and counter suits and most recently progressed to a three-day trial in the U.S. Court House in Boise before a federal judge. The defendant was the United States of America represented by attorneys from both the attorney general's office and the United States Air Force. Mr. Dykas presented a rational, intelligent case based on technical and scientific data from the best expert witnesses available to us. He did not feel it was necessary to resort to emotionalism and histrionics and we respect him for his approach to our trial.

The point of what I am trying to say is that I perceive Frank Dykas to be an intelligent, legally acute person of integrity, maturity and experience. These characteristics, his high energy level and the fact that, by his own admission, he enjoys working quality him for the demanding position of prosecuting attorney. And besides, when did it become a crime to grow trees?

BARBARA COTHERN

Backs George Hansen

I have read and heard a lot of opinions and rhetorical statements with regard to George Hansen's candidacy and trial. I would like to submit some thoughts that I feel have not been adequately addressed by the media.

One of the most important issues that has all but overlooked is the fact that George filed Income Tax Returns on all of his and Connie's income, and they pay taxes on all of that income. George was not convicted for failing to file proper income taxes, as I believe is supposed by many, but rather for not properly filing the disclosed forms that are now required under the 1978 Ethics in Government Act.

As was brought out in George's trial, some of the paperwork and questions are so ambiguous that the experts can't agree on how they should be answered. George even obtained the professional help of attorneys, accountants and the ethics committee itself to ensure that he filed properly.

Bob Dole has admitted his fear of this Act and what it could do to him, and Sen. Eagleton of Missouri, who is considered "Mr. Clean" of the political world says even he could have problems with the Act. Our own Jim McClure has had to file 5 pounds of paperwork just to try to protect himself. As soon as George Hansen's investigation was made public 140+ of our political representatives filed amended forms.

If it is that difficult to adhere to the regulations and paperwork required by the 1978 Act, then there is something criminally wrong with the Act.

There is much more at stake here than simply the election of a man to a public office or the good name and reputation of a man. It is so difficult to obey the laws of the land, and so easy to make an honest man a criminal. How many honest people are going to put their liberty and their good name on the line to be our elected representatives and fight for what we believe?

If you like the way George has represented you in his battles with OSHA, the IRS, the Justice Department, etc., and his voting record in Congress, let that be your criteria for voting FOR George in the Primary election.

DEBORAH HENRIE

Who's kidding who?

Who's kidding who? You mean that George Hansen's personal account (why won't George tell who he is?) paid $30,000.00 for campaign expenses out of George's personal bank account and George didn't know until the Times News reported it 60 days (2 monthly bank statements) later. You've got to be kidding. No one, no campaign makes that size of payment without discussion with the candidate. Would your account take $30,000.00 out of your personal account and not tell you? Wouldn't you find the returned check after receiving your bank statement? LEON BELLETT

Senate approves deficit payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stirring from nearly four weeks of slumber, the Senate on Thursday approved a three-year, $144 billion deficit payment plan endorsed by President Reagan for trimming federal budget deficits.

On a critical 65-32 vote, the Senate cleared the way for passage of the election-year proposal that provides equal doses of higher taxes, domestic spending cuts and a curb on planned increases in military spending.

There were 53 Republicans joining with 12 Democrats in support while 32 Democrats voted against it.

A final vote of 74-23 simply affirmed the earlier tally.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the top Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, reflecting the feelings of several Democrats, said he reluctantly switched from "no" on the earlier test vote to "yes," on the final tally because this measure was the "last hope for having any spending reduction" this year.

The package that Reagan worked out with senior Senate Republican leaders in March and announced in a White House Rose Garden ceremony calls for about $48 billion in tax increases.

It also includes ceilings on annual domestic and military appropriations over the next three years. Military spending would be held to about 7 percent growth after inflation. Domestic spending would be frozen next year and allowed to grow only at the rate of inflation in the following two years.

The plan still has a long way to go before it can have an impact on the deficits, which are projected to total about $600 billion over the next three years.

The House already has approved the outlines of a separate, $182 billion deficit-reducing plan over the next three years that includes a similar tax boost. The House plan calls for a defense spending increase of 3.5 percent but does not include multi-year ceilings on appropriations.

House and Senate negotiators are expected to meet in June to work out a compromise version of the two complex plans.

Internment suit denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge, ruling that the statute of limitations had long since expired, on Thursday dismissed a suit seeking $24 billion from the U.S. government for internment of 120,000 Japanese-Americans during World War II.

"It may be that timely claims on their behalf would have prevailed," said U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer. "But it is now close to 40 years after the (internment) camps were closed, and almost that long after the facts essential to those claims were published. Much time has passed, memories have dimmed and many of the actors have died."

In dismissing the suit filed more than a year ago by the National Council for Japanese-American Redress, the judge suggested that the group should petition Congress for the money.

"This ruling is not a fresh appraisal of the merits of the wartime decision, based on what now appears to be a questionable rationale of military necessity, to intern 120,000 citizens and residents because of race," said Oberdorfer in his 59-page opinion.

"The careful spadework which plaintiffs have done in the prosecution of their claims in court should contribute to making their argument to Congress more persuasive. And it may be that Congress will focus more closely on these claims once plaintiffs have exhausted their possible judicial remedies."

The lawsuit was filed in March on behalf of all the internees and asked for $24 billion in compensation, or $200,000 for each internment.

Attempts to reach council officials for comment by telephone were not immediately successful.

The internees spent an average 1,100 days each in secluded camps in the West. The council said all "suffered great financial and psychological injury and irreparable losses of liberty and other valuable constitutional rights."

In addition to compensation, the suit sought a judicial declaration that the United States violated the constitutional and civil rights of the internees.

In dismissing the suit, Oberdorfer said the court has no jurisdiction to consider claims against the United States that fall outside the six-year period after the right of action first takes effect.

He said the council, in filing suit last year, argued that the United States fraudulently concealed information which was not revealed until December 1982 with the publication of "Personal Justice Denied," a report on the internments by the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians.

Klansmen cited for violations

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Ten Ku Klux Klansmen, including top leaders of the hooded organization in Alabama, were charged Thursday with federal civil rights violations in a bloody 1979 clash with black protest marchers and police in Decatur.

A lawyer who filed a suit that led the U.S. Justice Department last July to reopen the investigation called it "the largest indictment of Klan leaders ever."

The indictment by a U.S. District Court grand jury charged nine of the Klansmen with conspiring to disrupt a Southern Christian Leadership Conference march held in support of a black man charged with raping a white woman.

SEC: Reporter tipped friends

NEW YORK (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission filed suit Thursday charging that a former Wall Street Journal reporter tipped off four other men about his upcoming columns, helping them to make $913,000 in illegal stock profits.

The SEC asserted that two stockbrokers paid another $31,000 to the reporter, R. Foster Winans Jr., 35, for leaking advance tips about the Journal's influential "Heard on the Street" stock analysis column.

The civil suit filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan charges the defendants with securities fraud and seeks a court order requiring them to give up all illicit profits.

The U.S. attorney's office will conduct a separate investigation to find out if any criminal laws were broken, said spokesman Bart M. Schwartz.

Embattled bank gets boost

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal agencies and other banks provided an additional $3 billion in financial aid to embattled Continental Illinois Bank & Trust Co. on Thursday, and bank Chairman David G. Taylor said Continental is considering the possibility of merging with another big bank.

A consortium of 16 big banks previously set up an emergency line of credit totaling $4.5 billion after rumors about Continental's health caused widespread worries last week among the bank's depositors.

Taylor said Continental would make a decision as quickly as possible to "relieve uncertainty."

He added, "This bank is not insolvent, it's not about to fail... it just needs a little more time."

Smoking warnings approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — A compromise bill to require four rotating health warnings on cigarette packs, including specific admissions that smoking can cause lung cancer, heart disease and birth complications, won the unanimous approval Thursday of the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

The 24-vote sent the legislation, the product of months of negotiations among health groups, the tobacco industry and members of Congress, to the House floor.

The new warnings would have to be affixed to cigarette packs and placed on billboard, newspaper and magazine ads starting one year after the bill's enactment. Each message would be rotated every three months.

Lyme disease is spreading

ATLANTA (AP) — Lyme disease, a sometimes-serious illness carried by ticks in warm weather, is spreading to new areas, government scientists say.

The disease, first recognized nine years ago in Connecticut, is characterized by distinctive skin lesions and often accompanied by other flu-like symptoms including fever and headache. Multiple skin lesions may occur, and some patients later develop arthritic, nerve or heart complications that can last for months.

Although 226 cases of Lyme disease were reported in 1980 and 487 were reported in 1982, early data indicate that more than 500 cases occurred last year, the national Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday.

Comatose birth

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A woman who has been in a coma nearly five months gave birth to a healthy 9½-pound boy, hospital officials say.

The mother, Donna Brenner, who will be 25 Monday, collapsed in her home last December from a tangle of nerves in her brain similar to an aneurysm, hospital officials said. Her husband, Ralf, found her.

Scientists debate plan for releasing bacteria

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists continue to debate the safety of a plan, now blocked by court order, to release genetically engineered bacteria into the environment to control frost damage in potato plants.

The National Institutes of Health, which approved the release of the organisms, says a thorough study shows there is no danger.

Critics led by the activist Jeremy Rifkin and his Foundation for Economic Trends in Washington charged in federal court that the National Institutes of Health did not adequately consider the possible hazards.

The genetically engineered bacteria could become an ecological nightmare, they said, impossible to recapture once released and having unpredictable consequences.

Other scientists said such concerns were unfounded and that no such nightmare is possible.

On Wednesday, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica issued a preliminary injunction blocking the experiment until the court can determine who is right.

Rifkin said he was "very pleased." An attorney for the University of California, where the research had been planned, said he was "very disappointed."

The university plans to appeal the decision.

State won't spend to battle predators

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission backed up its director Thursday and voted not to spend $30,000 to help livestockmen fend off predators.

The Idaho Legislature this year directed the Fish and Game Department to divert $30,000 in revenue from the sale of hunting and fishing licenses to predator control.

But Director Jerry Conley told the commission Thursday he has a basic objection to diverting sportsmen's revenue to benefit private groups. Conley said the action would set a bad precedent by diverting the license revenue to other state needs.

After discussing the matter much of the afternoon, the Fish and Game Commission voted to approve the department's spending plan for the year starting July 1.

And that includes a provision that the $30,000 will not be given to livestockmen, but will be put in a suspended account.

The Idaho Woolgrowers Association asked the 1984 session for general fund revenue to help with predator control. But the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee eventually voted to order the Fish and Game Department to put up the money out of revenue from license sales.

But Conley said Thursday that could jeopardize the state's federal funding for wildlife programs.

He said federal laws say that if money from sportsmen is diverted to programs that are not controlled by the state, all the federal funds could be withheld.

Conley said there would be no change in another $21,000 spent on predator control. That's been in the budget for many years, although some commission members called the payment "an appeasement thing" toward livestockmen.

The agency will spend $22,803,400 in the fiscal year starting July 1. The current budget covers $20.6 million, and the Legislature approved a special $30,000 appropriation to pay for emergency feeding of wildlife last winter.

Editor to join water board

BOISE (AP) — Northern Idaho newspaper publisher Robert Hammes has been appointed to the Idaho Water Resource Board.

Gov. John Evans said Thursday he has picked Hammes to succeed former Sandpoint mayor Sally Cupan on the board. She resigned when she moved from the district.

Hammes, 65, must be confirmed by the Idaho Senate. The Water Resource directs state water policy and development, and has control of the State Water Plan.

Hammes, a native of Minnesota, moved to Idaho in 1948 and has been editor of the weekly St. Maries Gazette-Record since 1958. Before that he published weekly papers at Rupert and Aberdeen.

His term on the Water Resource Board runs until 1987.

Synagogue blast decried

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's Advisory Committee to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission has denounced last month's bombing of a Boise synagogue, calling for an "effective law enforcement response."

But police still have no hard leads in the April 29 blast that damaged the kitchen at Ahavath Israel Synagogue but caused no injuries.

In a statement, the advisory committee said, "There should be no doubt that such incidents will be neither tolerated nor condoned."

Chairman Rudy Pena said the panel has just completed a study on intimidation and violence in Idaho and will release it after it's reviewed by the full Civil Rights Commission.

LaRouche: Win one way or another

GARDEN CITY (AP) — Lyndon LaRouche, claiming the Democratic Party and the frontrunners for its presidential nomination are conspiring against him, is warning his supporters to vote against the party if denied the nomination.

"I expect to win by one trick or another," LaRouche told reporters Thursday during a stop in southwestern Idaho. "I'm not really that good but I seem terribly good when compared with the other fellows."

Taking a broad brush to questions about specific issues, LaRouche again zeroed in on leading Democrats, accusing them of links with the Soviet Union and conducting a well-financed campaign of dirty tricks against him.

He called it a pure waste of time to mount any delegate effort in next Thursday's Idaho Democratic caucuses and said the vote total he gets in Tuesday's nonbinding presidential preference primary will belie his true support.

"There isn't an honest election in the United States," he said flatly.

Oil nations denounce Iran

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Six Persian Gulf oil nations, deeply concerned about missile attacks that threaten Gulf shipping, denounced Iran on Thursday and agreed to seek the Arab League's help to safeguard the sea lanes.

After a five-hour emergency meeting prompted by recent missile attacks on oil tankers, the foreign ministers of the Gulf Cooperation Council announced they would take their case to an Arab League emergency meeting already scheduled for Saturday in Tunis, in the hope of mustering a united Arab front against Iran — a non-Arab nation that has been fighting Iraq for 3½ years.

The ministers also decided to refer the question of navigation hazards in the Gulf to the U.N. Security Council because the attacks "constitute a threat to international peace and security," the official Saudi Press agency reported.

The meeting of the Gulf alliance — Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar, and Oman — was called by Kuwait after two Kuwaiti tankers were hit by missiles this week.

A Saudi tanker was hit Wednesday while in Saudi territorial waters. The U.S. State Department, which has access to information from AWACS radar planes in the region, said there was "pretty good evidence" the attack planes were Iranian.

Iran has repeatedly said that it cannot export its oil from Gulf terminals, it will prevent other countries from exporting their petroleum.

Libya hunts dissidents

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy's regime said Thursday that suicide squads are being created to hunt down and kill Libyan dissidents abroad.

"The masses have decided to form suicide commandos to chase traitors, fugitives and stray dogs wherever they are and liquidate them physically and without any hesitation," the official news agency JANA said in a dispatch.

Agents of Khadafy are blamed for the killings of at least nine Libyan dissidents in Western Europe in 1980.

Bush arrives after raid

KHAYBER PASS, Pakistan (AP) — Soviet MIGs and helicopter gunships bombed an Afghan village Thursday shortly before Vice President George Bush visited a Pakistani border post seven miles away, border guards and local officials said.

Bush, as told of the attack, was on a helicopter. He responded: "Oh boy, this brings the Afghan war close to home, pretty much."

President Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq and Foreign Minister Sahibzada Yaqub Khan accompanied Bush on the border tour, traveling by helicopter.

While the bombing took place, they had been at Zahir Dagh, a camp for Afghan refugees 20 miles east of Mielni Candao and five miles west of Peshawar, the capital of North-West Frontier province.

The reported attack on the village of Lalpura coincided with the scheduled arrival of Bush at the border post of Mielni Candao, seven miles west of Lalpura in the historic Khyber Pass. But he was running about 90 minutes late and the bombardment was over before he arrived.

East-West chill deep

LONDON (AP) — East-West relations are in their worst state since the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, and there is little hope for a quick reversal of the growing use of violence around the world, the International Institute for Strategic Studies said Friday.

"Rarely has the need for effective crisis resolution seemed so great and the prospects for achieving it so limited," the institute said in its 1983-84 Strategic Survey.

The survey said the U.S. and Soviet governments remain bogged down in their own ideological notions and rhetoric. "Excessive rigidity has been shown by those of the world's leaders who might be able to halt, perhaps even reverse, the increasing resort to violence," it said.

The independent, London-based institute is a think tank that issues annual assessments of the world strategic situation, as well as detailed country-by-country analyses of military strength and periodic papers on specific issues.

Hercules income sets record

MURRAY, Utah (AP) — A record first-quarter net income increase of 74 percent, or $47.7 million, has been marked by Hercules Inc., operator of the aerospace division headquarters here and the Bacchus Works in Magna.

A.F. Glacco, Hercules chairman, president and chief executive officer, said the record income for the first three months of 1984 compared to only $27.4 million in net earnings for the same period in 1983.

Glacco credited the gains, which amount to 86 more cents a share, to the worldwide demand of the polypropylene resins and fibers businesses.

Hercules' first quarter sales amounted to $619 million and profits from operations were $47 million. Glacco said those figures represented a 14 and 35 percent increase, respectively, over last year's first quarter — after excluding the polypropylene resin business from 1983's figures.

Hewlett-Packard earnings up

BOISE (AP) — Hewlett-Packard Co. reports a 30 percent increase in both sales and net earnings for its second quarter.

The computer manufacturer said sales totaled $1.52 billion for the quarter that ended April 30, compared with $1.17 billion during the same period last year.

Net earnings were $141 million, or 55 cents a share, compared with earnings of $109 million, or 43 cents a share, during last year's second quarter. Earnings for 1983 have been restated to reflect the company's 2-for-1 stock split in August 1983.

Second quarter incoming orders were $1.81 billion, up 30 percent from the same period during fiscal 1983. Domestic orders amounted to $953 million, up 33 percent, while international orders were $656 million, up 25 percent.

All four of the company's business segments showed second-quarter increases in orders over the same period in 1983. The computer products group was up 27 percent. Hewlett-Packard's Boise Division and Boise Memory Division are part of that group.

Hewlett-Packard is based in Palo Alto, Calif.

Yakima plant revamping set

BOISE (AP) — Boise Cascade Corp. has announced a $16 million modernization project for its Yakima, Wash., wood products manufacturing complex.

Manufacturing processes will be computerized and equipment updated in an effort to improve efficiency and the plant's chances of successfully competing in the wood products industry, according to officials of the Boise-based company.

The project is expected to take two to three years to complete.

Visitors' center stays closed

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Kennecott says it can't afford to re-open its popular Visitors' observation Center at its open-pit Bingham Canyon copper mine this summer.

Company spokesman K.C. Hochstetler said the decision was made because of public safety and financial considerations.

In order to reach the observation center under current mining plans, the public would be exposed to unacceptable risks while crossing through active mining areas, he said.

Hochstetler said that at a time when Kennecott is incurring heavy losses and many of its employees have been laid off, the company can't justify spending the money necessary to keep the center open and safe for visitors.

Oil imports, demand climb

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. oil imports rose 9.9 percent in April, climbing to an average of 4.99 million barrels of oil daily from 4.54 million a year earlier, the American Petroleum Institute says.

For the first four months of the year, imports were up 42.2 percent from 1983 levels, rising to a daily average of 5.77 million barrels from 3.91 million, the industry trade group said Wednesday.

The organization cited growing demand for petroleum products, mostly crude oil, for the increase in shipments to the United States.

Total U.S. petroleum demand was up 4 percent in April at 15.57 million barrels of oil a day, and climbed 5.2 percent for the first four months of the year to an average of 15.73 million barrels a day.

Sub-minimum wage pushed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is reviving his push to legalize paying teen-agers $2.50 an hour — 85 cents below the minimum wage — for summer jobs.

"More and more people recognize the problem the minimum wage causes for our unskilled young people," Reagan said.

The bill favored by Reagan would amend the Fair Labor Standards Act to permit employers to pay youths aged 16 to 19 a $2.50 hourly wage between May 1 and Sept. 30.

Personal income up in April

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans' personal income rose 0.5 percent in April and would have risen higher except for a sharp decline in farm income.

Consumer spending was up a strong 1.1 percent during the month, recovering from lackluster performances in February and March, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

The department said the $14.8 billion rise in personal income came despite a $15.6 billion decline in farmer earnings, which reflected the end of the government's payment-in-kind subsidy program.

Without the farm decline, personal income would have risen more than 1 percent, based on strong wage increases, economists said. Wages and salaries rose $20.8 billion in April, compared with a $6.1 billion rise the previous month, in a reflection of substantial gains in hours worked and hourly compensation.

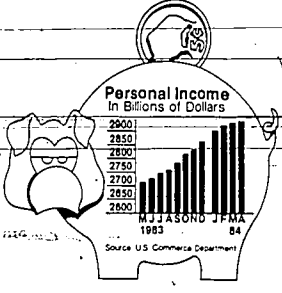

The overall 0.5 percent income advance matched a similar performance in March and compared with a 0.7 percent gain in February.

Economists said both the income and spending side of the report showed an economy which was continuing to grow, but at a slower pace.

"This rounds out a month of economic data which was quite strong," said Commerce Department chief economist Robert Ortner. But he predicted spending gains for the rest of the year would not match the 1.1 percent April rise.

"To a great extent, consumers were leading the economic recovery last year," Ortner said. "From here on, I think they will settle back and be more participants than leaders."

Economists said much of the 1.1 percent spending advance could be attributed to severe March weather and a late Easter that pushed sales activity into April.

Michael Evans, head of his own forecasting firm, said he believed consumer spending would rise only 2 percent to 3 percent in the April-June period compared with a 6 percent rise in the first quarter.

In March, personal consumption spending, which includes essentially everything except interest payments on debt, was up only 0.4 percent. In February, spending had dropped a sharp 1.1 percent.

The April rebound had been expected, given a report last week that retail sales surged by 2.9 percent last month, following a March decline.

Based on the new information on spending and other strong signs of April activity, many economists have raised their forecasts for economic growth in the second quarter. The consensus prediction is for growth around 5 percent, up from earlier estimates of 4.2 percent or lower.

Details of the income and spending report:

• Personal income rose $14.8 billion in April to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $2.96 trillion. Disposable or after-tax income rose a slightly lower 0.4 percent, following a 0.5 percent March increase.

• Personal consumption spending increased $2.8 billion to an annual rate of $2.31 trillion. The increase included a $4.2 billion hike in purchases of durable goods, such as autos and appliances, and a $1.8 billion increase in purchases of non-durable goods. This compared with declines of $2.7 billion for durables and $1.8 billion for non-durables the month before.

• Personal savings dropped slightly during the month to an annual rate of $146.9 billion, down from $163.1 billion the month before. That left the national savings rate — savings as a percentage of disposable income — at 5.8 percent, down from 6.5 percent in March.

But economists said this was still up sharply from the 4.9 percent average rate last year, the lowest savings level since 1949 despite various government tax incentives to boost savings.

• Farm income declined $15.6 billion in April, following a $3 billion dropoff in March. The declines in both months reflected a decrease in government subsidy payments. These payments were unusually high in January, February and March, because of the payment-in-kind program, and returned to a normal level in April.

• Income from government transfer payments increased $1.8 billion in April, compared with a jump of $1.9 billion in March.

All figures are adjusted to account for normal seasonal variations. April's income total translates to $10,720 a year for every man, woman and child in the United States.

Bank woes hasten Wall Street retreat

By SKIP WOLLENBERG
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The stock market retreated broadly and sharply on Thursday amid investor nervousness about the potential fallout from the financial problems facing a major bank in Chicago.

Technology, financial and airline issues led the losers, while a few oil stocks rose.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industries, which edged up 2.30 on Wednesday to break a string of three losing sessions, plunged 10.89 points to 1,142.27. It was the lowest close since April 11, when it hit 1,130.97.

Declining issues outpaced gains by more than 5 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index fell 0.85 to 90.07.

Big Board volume picked up to 90.31 million shares, compared with 89.21 million shares on Wednesday.

The market opened lower and fell steadily through late afternoon. The Dow Jones industrial average was down 14.13 points at 3 p.m. EDT before it reversed direction in the final hour of trading.

Stock prices have been under pressure recently because of rising interest rates that have pushed bond markets yields to two-year highs and have made returns on bonds more attractive than those on stocks.

But analysts said those concerns were replaced Thursday by worries about the financial problems facing Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co., the nation's seventh-largest bank.

The bank's parent company said it was canceling its quarterly dividend and was looking for a merger partner as federal officials and other banks arranged to increase standby credit available to the institution.

Bond prices, which had risen modestly for two days, fell on Thursday.

WE SALUTE AMERICA'S IMPORTANT TRUCKING INDUSTRY

National Transportation Week
 May 13-19

Almost everything you have arrived by truck.

Eighty years ago there were about 700 trucks in our entire nation. Today there are 1.2 million tractor and semi-trailer trucks. The trucking industry provides millions of jobs to employees in the trucking industry and, additionally to workers in support industries; equipment manufacturers, communications workers, maintenance services and others.

The trucking industry pays millions of dollars in taxes much of which goes to build and maintain the nation's highway system for all to use.

America's modern transportation system is the envy of the world. More freight is moved faster for less cost here than anywhere else on earth. Our trucking industry is the nation's biggest freight handler.

We're proud we've played an important role in Idaho's trucking community for 25 years with Kenworth trucks; in sales, leasing, rentals, rebuilt components, parts and efficient service from the finest facilities in southern Idaho.

When it comes to trucks . . . come to Exhibit offers interpretation of landscapes

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — "Interpretations of Idaho Landscape" is the theme of Herrett Museum's next exhibition slated for Tuesday through June 28.

Labeling it, "a real strong show," Mike Green, curator of art exhibits, says an opening reception for Idaho artists Arlo Coles and Howard Huff will be given Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the museum, located on the College of Southern Idaho campus.

Coles, a former teacher at Minico, is currently professor of art at Ricks College. He teaches painting. The artist attended Brigham Young University where he received his bachelor's and master's degrees in art. He will be exhibiting watercolor, acrylic and oil paintings interpreting the landscape of Idaho.

His most recent awards have come from an exhibit at BYU where he won a $500 purchase award and a $200 award for painting excellence. The university also bought a painting of his entitled "Terrestrial Symphony."

Noting that he'll have eight paintings on display, he says, "I try to interpret and capture the vitality of nature." He says that being a native Idahoan has influenced his style.

"You never shake off childhood things. Ever since I was little, I had the inclination for painting," he says, "and, no matter what else I did, I was never satisfied until I got into art." Coles says he was 25 before he entered the field on a full-time basis.

The artist acknowledges he has been most influenced by Alex Darais, who he describes as "a very strong design teacher," and Laconte Stuart who was chairman of the University of Utah's art department for approximately two decades.

Most recently, he has worked with Sergei Bongart, who he calls, "One of the foremost painters." "But," he cautions, "even though an artist works with other teachers, you have to break with them to express your own. Mine is a kind of mix — a personal interpretation."

Huff is currently professor of art at Boise State University where he directs the photography department. The Oregon native earned a bachelor of arts degree from the College of Idaho and a master of fine arts degree from the University of Idaho.

Huff, who will exhibit 11 duo-tone solarization photographs that are combined with collage and hand painting, says, "Though the techniques are known, as far as I know, the combination I use is unique."

He says the process of duo-tone solarization imparts color to black and white photographs. "It's different. I work with it in landscape because I'm basically a nature oriented person."

And though he appreciates conventional photography, he says he enjoys the ripping, tearing and rearranging of this collage technique.

"I don't use it as a philosophy," he says, "but an exploration. None of these works start with preconceived ideas of how they'll look." Humorously, he says, "Duo-tone solarization is virtually out-of-control. I don't know with certainty what colors will come up." He calls it an intuitive process that can be either fun or frustrating. "I know what negatives I'm going to use to form an image and I go with it until something feels like it clicks."

After the duo-tone solarization and the ripping, tearing and reassembling of his collage method, Huff then hand colors these artworks.

"I'm not concerned that the colors are exact — otherwise I might as well use a colorless palette. I'm more interested in playing with my own colors," he says.

The artist says he began this process two years ago and that he enjoys the experimenting and the not knowing what will come out of each project he begins.

"Only one out of the 29 that I've done has come out like I pictured it at the beginning."

Like Coles, Huff says, "I definitely think that living in Idaho shapes the way I see because the landscape is so varied and so beautiful. It's important to be influenced by those things that are around you and use them rather than want to be somewhere else and try to create that image."

Museum hours are from 9:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesdays; 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesdays through Friday; and from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Saturdays.

Scottish band should delight listeners

HAILEY — Even if you haven't a drop of Celtic blood, and have never heard of the clarsach, bodhran or uille, you'll still be delighted by the music of Scotland's traditional band, Ossian. As part of its current American tour, this group of five musicians will appear at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Liberty Theater in Hailey. Tickets are $5 and are available at the door.

In addition to vocals, Ossian's five members perform on at least 12 string instruments that range from guitars, fiddles and bagpipes to ancient harps and pipes like clarsachs and tiples. The group which takes its name from a legendary bard and poet in Celtic mythology, has performed together for the last eight years. They have played in clubs and major festivals in northern Europe and the British Isles, and have produced four LP recordings.

This is what a reviewer for the Edmonton Journal said of Ossian: "In every way, Glasgow-based Ossian earned the claim of being Scotland's best band, in a flawless performance that centered on pure musicality — not simply bombast."

"The quintet's beautifully-lyrical approach to Celtic music can only be compared to The Chieftains in terms of sheer, breathtaking purity and accuracy, but comparisons become odious when describing a group of this caliber."

This benefit concert for the Northern Rockies Folk Festival is the climax of the folk-film festival that has taken place each Wednesday in May. The festival is sponsored by the Institute of the American West, Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities.

Guitar-toting minister preaches in three-generations style

KEITH BRUDEVOLD
Minister with music

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Being the son of a minister as well as the grandson of a minister, it's easy to understand Keith John Brudevold also becoming one. But, there the likeness stops. Brudevold delivers his biblical messages, not with Bible in hand, but with an old guitar left to him by his grandfather.

Brudevold is a Christian songwriter. His most recently released song, "He Picked On Me," was awarded the first runner-up award in Nashville's Music City Song Festival Professional Gospel Songwriter's Competition in 1983.

"I was in a restaurant in Nashville with a friend when the idea for the song came to me," he says, relating that while talking about guitar picking, his friend suggested that people can pick on each other as well. Later, back at home, he imagined a friend that began picking on him and kept it up until he realized the friend was God.

"God can pick on a person until he puts you back in tune," the minister says. "He can bring you from discord to harmony." It took about a half hour for the song to jell and nearly the same amount of time for him to polish it.

Brudevold was raised in the Minneapolis, Minn., area where his father was minister of a Methodist Church. He, too, had a ministry there for four years before moving to Nashville where he became an associate pastor for another four years.

Now, though, the songwriter lives in Twin Falls with his wife, the former Charlene Lucht of Hansen. He says he loves the area and doesn't feel his music career will suffer because he no longer lives in Nashville.

"You don't get much of a private life there," he says.

Brudevold says he really has no musical background beyond playing trumpet in the high school band and singing in church choir. And he was 31 before taking up the guitar. He began writing songs to go along with the chords he was learning, and before long began singing the songs to children at his church in Minneapolis.

"I do a sermon where the sermons are not spoken but are a song story," he says. After a half dozen of these song sermons in the Methodist Church in Nashville, Brudevold says he went to a retreat where he met ministers from many other denominations. "From that point on, I started going to other churches and now, only about 25 percent of my sermons are to Methodist congregations," he says.

"I think the reason it fits in so well with so many denominations is because I put Bible stories into music. They have a universal appeal," he says, adding that he loves his work and enjoys telling Bible stories this way because he can put more emotions into a song and still have it acceptable.

"You can speak from your heart in a song."

"I'm very animated and can clown with the kids and keep their attention," he says, noting that he plays very simply and doesn't try to impress them with his guitar skills but, rather, just tries to deliver a message.

Movie addiction not dangerous, but does create strange behavior

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A movie addict can be spotted a mile away.

She's the one who cries, "Quick, the previews already have started!" and rushes in before her date has finished paying for their tickets.

He will be the one who sits through "Dr. Strangelove" for the umpteenth time or will stay up until 4:30 a.m. to watch "King Kong."

This is the person who can mouth Rick's farewell speech from "Casablanca" along with Humphrey Bogart and can tell you every film that Stephen Spielberg has directed.

They will be able to discourse on the intricacies of Alfred Hitchcock films and know the name of the motel in "Psycho."

A sure sign of habitual movie watching is the popcorn clutching formation their hands begin to take whenever they pass a theater.

Commentary

Unfortunately, movie addicts are not always polite where movies are concerned.

These are the characters who tell giggling teenagers sitting in front of them to "shut up" so they can hear the dialogue.

They are the strange breed who drag uninterested spouses and friends into Australian films such as "Breaker Morant" or other foreign offerings like "Jules and Jim." You see, they don't mind subtitles or strange accents.

Usually, dedicated filmgoers don't like to go to the movies alone because they have no one to discuss it with later. But they will go alone if they have to because they just don't want to miss what's playing.

Movie junkies are liberal to what they watch because they delight equally in Walt Disney, John Carpenter and Francois Truffaut.

Film fans, however, don't just crave entertainment. They also want to think. A true devotee of the celluloid will trudge through a cold night to see a serious piece about subjects the less-than-devoted would resist, such as "Sophie's Choice" or "Apocalypse Now."

Bizarre as the symptoms sound, this affliction of film enthusiasm is not dangerous, somewhat enjoyable and even mystical. After all, there's something unworldly in sitting in the dark and entering another world via a screen almost like Alice stepping through the looking glass.

One week you can be hauling treasure with Indiana Jones and another hunting spies with James Bond; one matinee dressing up with Tootsie and the next dressing down with Ratso Rizzo.

Lucas, Spielberg brave the concrete

By MICHAEL LONDON
Los Angeles Times

Movies

HOLLYWOOD — Blame it all on Walter Mondale. It was 10:30 a.m. Wednesday here, and more than 100 restless photographers and a handful of reporters were waiting for George Lucas and Steven Spielberg in front of Mann's Chinese Theatre.

The publicity-shy film makers were scheduled to make a rare appearance to place their hand- and footprints in the theater's cement court, promoting "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom." But as luck would have it, Walter Mondale also was in town, promoting his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.

A Paramount source lamented the fact that all available police escorts had been assigned to the Mondale entourage, leaving no one to speed Lucas and Spielberg from Burbank Airport, where their private jet landed from San Francisco.

"What we ought to do is get Mondale to come down and put his feet in," one observer said.

Meanwhile, the media waited, to the blaring strains of "Anything Goes" sung in Mandarin Chinese from the "Indiana Jones" soundtrack.

Every local television station was represented, and crews dispatching to Australia, Germany and France were in attendance.

When Lucas and Spielberg finally pulled up in a long maroon limousine at 11:10 a.m., many of the photographers and onlookers had been on hand for 90 minutes.

The block of wet cement had begun to harden. While a three-man work crew put down a fresh layer, Lucas and Spielberg were introduced to the crowd and answered a few questions.

The cement prepared, the two film makers crouched down and scrawled their names with ballpoint pens. Below their names went their handprints.

Then, to a roar of applause, Lucas and Spielberg stood up and gingerly placed their white and gray tennis shoes, respectively, into the cement.

"We want to be the first people to have tennis-shoe prints," Lucas joked.

KETCHUM — The Idaho Dance Ensemble, Ketchum's resident dance company, will present its spring "home season" at the Hemingway Gymnasium May 26 and 27 at 8 p.m. The concert will be the valley's only opportunity to see the touring company this year in Ketchum. Sponsored by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities. A second premiere piece will be a solo danced by Hilarie Neely to the music of pianist George Zamfir.

All choreography is by Carl Rowe, artistic director, and danced by Rowe and Hilarie Neely. Tickets are $5 for general admission, and $4 for Sun Valley Center members, students, and senior citizens. Tickets are available at Encore, Gemini Art-Hailey, and the Sun Valley Center Gallery.

Workshops planned to challenge photographers, designers

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — The Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities is offering workshops in both photography and graphics programs this summer.

Under the theme "Art and the Environment," four nationally-recognized artists and photo educators will bring a broad range of aesthetic and technical concerns to photographing the landscape.

All types of environments will be considered and the workshops will include field trips into the landscape environments of such places as Craters of the Moon National Monument and the Sawtooth Mountains.

Photographer Linda Conner will hold an individual workshop entitled "Reassessing the Landscape."

"The landscape is constantly reinterpreted through changing personal, social, historical and world views," Conner says. "I'd like this workshop to stretch our concept of landscape photography."

From the Victor School in Colorado, Kevin Fuller will be on hand for two workshops: "The Negative: Refining Technique" and "The Fine Print and the Zone System." His first technical workshop will develop an understanding of the zone system principles and their applications. His second concerns itself with achieving the maximum print quality from a given negative.

"The Arranged Environment" and "Type C Color Printing" are the concerns of Peter deJory, who received his master's of fine arts degree from the University of Colorado in 1974 and has since taught at many of the country's leading photographic facilities.

His first class will concern itself with the artist/photographer creating an environment to be photographed, either in the studio or outdoors. The next is an intensive three-day course dealing with making fine color prints from color negatives with Kodak's Type C process. He'll cover basic color theory, printing techniques and retouching.

An associate professor at the Rochester Institute of Technology since 1962, John Pfahl will hold the workshop, "Making a Scene" which will deal with the multiple possibilities for meaning in the landscape photograph. The range of workshop topics will include the tradition of formal and picturesque landscapes, political and social as well as altered landscapes, and landscape documentation.

The graphics programs will be divided into a monoprint workshop held by David Wharton, resident artist, and lithography workshops with visiting artists, Jack Lemon, Landfall Press founder, and Fred Wessel, who is currently professor of art and master printer for the printmaking program at the Hartford Art School.

Wharton's instruction will cover color ink preparation, wash, transfer and registration, as well as drawing and paper selection. Students will complete at least five monoprints during this two-week workshop.

Lemon will instruct in aluminum plate lithography, covering all necessary techniques and materials required for pulling editions of fine art prints, while Wessel's workshop will emphasize air brush technology and its relationship to lithography.

Further information can be gained by calling the center at 622-9771.

Guest artists will add highlights to area 'Dance Radiance' studies

KETCHUM — The annual "Dance Radiance" workshop will be held June 4-30 at the Ballet School Foundation Inc. in Ketchum.

Guest artists include: Joe Orlando, artistic director of Danstheater in Portland; Bonnie Merrill, professor of modern dance at Portland State University; and Steven and Elizabeth Wistrich, co-directors of the American Festival of Ballet in Boise.

Technique classes in beginning, intermediate and advanced levels of ballet, pointe, jazz, modern and repertory will be held Monday through Saturday. A beginning jazz/body alignment stretch class will be held from 8 to 9 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Students may perform at a program scheduled to be held at 8 p.m. June 30 at the Hemingway Gymnasium.

The workshop is open to ages 12 to adult. Registration must be made by June 1 and enrollment is limited.

The workshop is made possible in part by a grant from the Idaho Commission on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts under the Artist-In-Education program, and by private local donations.

A limited number of full and partial-scholarships is available to qualified students. Scholarships are awarded on the basis of ability and financial need.

For more information, write Hilarie Neeley, director, Dance Radiance, Ballet School Foundation, P.O. Box 274, Ketchum, 83340 or call 726-5003.

If any of the above symptoms do sound familiar, then you probably are in the throes of movie mania. It usually is incurable although film fans do have short shocks back to reality after witnessing such disasters as "Hot Dog" and "The Attack of the Killer Tomatoes."

The withdrawal period soon will pass, however, especially if the Academy Awards or Arden Wayne Film festival airs that week.

The only treatment for the movie condition is to remain calm, take aspirin and watch two movies in the morning.

Pat Marcantonio, an admitted movie addict, is also police and courts reporter for The Times-News.

Happy '30th!

What's what

In motels with telephones beside the beds, people tend to sleep on the bedsides closest to the phones. This puts uneven wear on the mattresses, requiring their replacement too frequently. So some smart chain operators design their fixtures so the phones are across the rooms from the beds.

"An actor is less than a man. An actress is more than a woman," Betty Davis quotes that. Say it's an old French line.

Freud's true first name was not "Sigmund" but "Sigismund."

TENNIS
Q. How did tennis come to be scored by 15, 30, 40, deuce, ad?

A. Early in France, the most common silver piece was worth 60 sous with each of its four parts worth 15 sous. Tennis was played for stakes. So points were worth 15, 30, 45 sous. Eventually, after the coin denominations no longer signified, the 45 was abbreviated to 40 merely because it was easier to say.

Q. In England, what's the difference between a "barrister" and a "solicitor"?

A. The barrister argues the case in court. The solicitor helps the barrister prepare the case.

ALCOHOLISM COUNCIL

Wisconsin's Blue Book of state agencies records the fact that members of the Citizens Advisory Council on Alcoholism there serve for three years and are appointed by the governor to staggered terms.

Author Louisa May Alcott was born on her father's 33rd birthday and died on the day of his funeral.

'Berlin Warning' offers rousing finish

By PHIL THOMAS
The Associated Press

Nicholas Gull's new thriller, "The Berlin Warning," (Putnam, 349 Pages, $16.95) is a bit wordy for this sort of novel, but it manages to build up enough momentum to carry the reader through to a rousing finish.

The time is late 1941. The United States still hasn't entered World War II, and the Nazis want things to stay just that way. So, Hitler sends President Roosevelt a note warning that the Japanese plan to attack Pearl Harbor.

If the Americans can stop the Japanese before they act, Hitler reasons, they will not enter the war on England's side. The British learn of the note and go all out to stop it. They want America in the war because they are not sure they can continue holding off Hitler by themselves.

Enter David Steadman, a wealthy American adventurer. Steadman has learned to be a soldier as well as an expert with a knife during battle in Spain when he fought against the Franco forces. The British hire Steadman to get Hitler's note and destroy it without reading it before it gets to Roosevelt.

Steadman does, but then finds himself in a bit of a bind. He has the note but is trapped in Nazi-dominated Europe. The Nazis are hunting him, as are the British now because they have found out he read the note.

'Ty Cobb' not just on sports

By SCOTT M. BUSHNELL
The Associated Press

In baseball's current age of skilled players and wealthy prima donnas, there are none who can compare with the immortal Ty Cobb — on either count.

A complex personality and a tremendous athlete, Cobb played 24 seasons in the American League — all but two for the Detroit Tigers. When he retired after the 1928 season, Cobb held 43 batting records.

Review

Seven years after he retired, Cobb was the top choice among the first five men elected to baseball's Hall of Fame.

He was fiercely competitive on and off the field, and resoundingly disliked. The Georgia outfielder — whose southern heritage played against him in an age when most of the major-league players were from the north — was determined to be the greatest player of his time and had no use for any player who wasn't similarly motivated.

He also became the first millionaire athlete in the United States through shrewd business deals. He invested in such new enterprises as General Motors and Coca Cola early in this century.

Charles Alexander, a professor at Ohio University, has deftly tackled this difficult character in a new biography, "Ty Cobb" (Oxford, 272 Pages, $16.95).

Alexander's training as a historian makes this more than a sports book. He weaves into the narrative of Cobb's life the backdrop of the times. Parallels and ironies are not lost on him, such as between the ballplayer and his city, Detroit:

"In his justice and drive, his ingenuity, his willingness to take chances, in his competitive ruthlessness as well, he often appeared to personify the city in its heroic age, a time when the automobile became central to American life and Cobb became central to American baseball," Alexander writes.

The only drawback to the book is the limitations of the language in supplying enough superlatives to cover Cobb's career. In tracing spectacular years after spectacular year, it is almost impossible not to be repetitive in describing Cobb's performance at bat and in the field. Alexander does his best to put an indescribable career and a contentious personality in perspective.

Teachers 'grade' lawmakers' voting

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho schools would be in big trouble if other Idaho legislators voted like the Magic Valley delegation, says Idaho Education Association regional director Terry Gilbert.

Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, received the only perfect score in an IEA look at education-related incumbent voting records for the last two years, while eight of 10 local representatives scored 50 percent or below.

At the bottom of the heap is Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls. She voted the IEA position on only 34 percent of education-related bills during both years, with a score of only 27 percent in her first year in office.

Rep. Scott was only one of 10 legislators statewide and the only area legislator who voted against House Bill 579, a bill to help school districts cope with declining market values, Gilbert says. She and Speaker of the House Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, also were the only Magic Valley legislators to vote against the last-minute 1984 "Christmas tree" appropriation to pay for textbooks.

Stivers won the dubious distinction of the Golden Taking-False-Credit Award for publicly taking credit for the Education Reform Act, Gilbert says. Stivers neither voted for the bill nor supported funding for the bill.

Scott and Rep. Ernest Hale, R-Burley, did support the education reform bill. But Gilbert chastises them for "politically hypocritical votes" not to pass out the $20.3 million needed to pay for teacher salary hikes called for in the bill.

Some of their Magic Valley colleagues in the House did support education consistently, however, Gilbert says. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, and Lawrence Knige, R-Filer, voted the IEA position on 75 and 72 percent of the education bills, respectively.

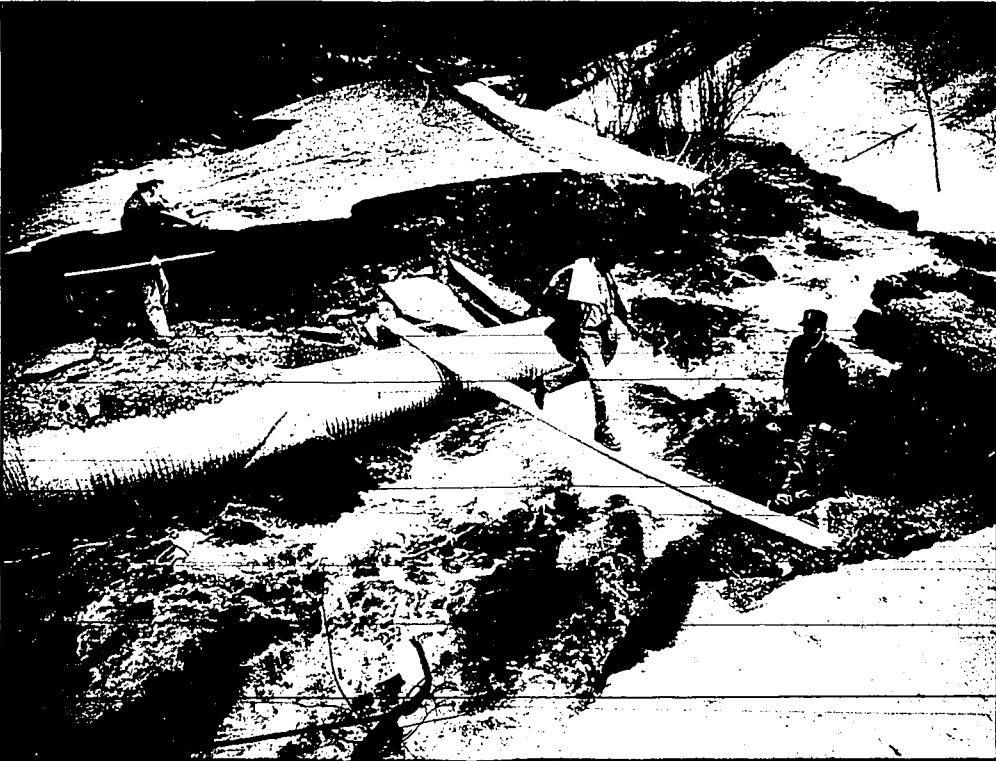

Both not only supported pumping an extra $20.3 million into teacher salaries, but played a crucial role at times in encouraging funding for schools, Gilbert says.

In the Senate, Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, and Wes Tronson, R-Wendell, did not vote quite as well as Peavey in the IEA's judgment, but still voted the IEA position on 77 percent of the bills. Gilbert praises Noh for "his generally consistent support of increased funding for school children."

Representatives who voted the IEA line on 50 percent or less of education-related bills include Scott, 34 percent; Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, 36 percent; Mack Melbaer, R-Paul, 40 percent; Stivers and Roy Brackett, R-Twin Falls, both 43 percent; Hale, 48 percent; and John Brock, R-Gooding, and Vard Chaburn, R-Elgin, both 50 percent.

Creek level falls; damaged road remains

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

HANSEN — Rock Creek continued to drop Thursday. But even without the warm weather expected to cause more flooding this weekend, road and campgrounds will remain off-limits through Memorial Day Weekend and later.

Forest service employees and highway crews both worked Thursday to repair as much damage as possible and prepare for the warmer temperatures forecast for this weekend.

A forest service crew drove up the damaged road as far as Third Fork. But shortly past that point, the stream cuts a jagged swath across the road where a culvert washed away.

The men hiked in and spent much of their day clearing rock and flood debris out of a clogged culvert above the broken road before flooding resumes. Still, about 10 percent of the water is resisting being channeled into the culvert, says range conservationist John Caywood.

He estimates that about two-thirds of the road in a three-mile stretch above Third Fork is impassible and one mile is "really trashed." The road leading up to Third Fork is also damaged, eaten away in places by the rising river.

The road damage will cost more than $100,000, he says. It could be several years before all the roads in the South Hills are restored, he says.

A Twin Falls County road crew began clearing a mud slide not far from Third Fork Thursday. And a backhoe operator worked on clearing out creek channels to cross water-eroded stream beds.

The Rock Creek Road south of Hansen remains closed at the forest boundary. Officials are warning sight-seers to stay away. Not only is there a danger of more flooding, but the creek has undercut portions of the road. "They might find themselves driving on a little ribbon of pavement with nothing underneath," District Ranger Jerry Davis says.

The water level in the creek has fallen, but there is still "a lot of water, and a lot of mud," according to Davis. "Big Bluff—Campground—water—flows through just below the top of the picnic tables. But at least lower water levels now mean a slower flow that causes only half as much damage as before, Davis says.

At the bottom of the water coursing over camp sites lies a pile of mud, rocks, logs and other debris that will require an expensive clean-up effort, forest officials believe. Big Bluff is one site Davis is particularly concerned about. If the creek continues to run through the camp instead of reverting to its former channel, the camp might not be reopened by this time next year.

Despite heavy melting, half of mountain area still in snow

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Tremendous as the melting of snow in the Jarbidge Range and South Hills has been, an estimated 50 percent of the acreage in those areas remains covered with deep snow, a special aerial survey by the U.S. Soil Conservation Service indicates.

"The snow level is still at mid-elevation, which causes some concern for future flooding," said Jerry Beard, Idaho snow survey supervisor for the SCS.

But recent cooler temperatures also are slowing down the rate of melting for the time being, helping reservoir managers keep water levels steady.

The SCS got new information Thursday when Twin Falls pilot Mary Taylor flew over the Jarbidge area and checked SCS measuring points.

"We find snow banks down to 5,500 feet. At 6,000 feet, we find the east and south slopes bare, and everything is covered with snow above 6,500 feet," said Rich Yankey, SCS conservationist at Twin Falls.

Gauges placed at elevations above 7,000 feet also show snowpacks containing water levels two to three times the norm for May 1, a half-month ago, said Yankey.

"At the 7,000-foot level and above, all the streams are still bridged over with snow, and apparently we have not had much meltdown at that elevation," he said. For instance,

Wilson Creek, which is set at 7,500 feet in the Jarbidge range, there still is 40 inches of snow, equal to about 17 inches of runoff water, he said.

Meanwhile, automatic gauges linked by radio to the SCS snow survey headquarters in Boise are confirming that melting has slowed considerably in the past two days. A meter at Magic Mountain Thursday recorded only 4 inches of melting during the past day.

"A good melt sequence sees 1.5 to 2 inches a day. It's a real moderate melt-rate at higher elevations occurring right now," said Jerry Beard, snow survey supervisor.

However, the situation probably will change this weekend, and it could change rapidly.

"If temperatures get up into 75 or 80 (degrees), we'll probably see peaks come up close to what we've already experienced," Beard predicted. If temperatures stay moderate — around 65 degrees — the flows in Rock Creek and Goose Creek will remain as subdued as in the past day or so.

"This cooler weather has helped us a great deal," said Jack Lewis, manager. See SNOW on Page C2

Legislative hopefuls wage war in water, education arenas

By RICK SHUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls legislative candidates sparred with opponents on the issues of water and education Wednesday evening at a League of Women Voters candidates forum.

There were often fewer distinctions among candidates than one would expect in a setting of five pairs of candidates discussing three emotional issues.

Speaker of the House Tom Stivers, Senate candidate Larry Anderson and House candidate Jerry Callen — all Republicans — each expressed concern that a water right should not be taken by the state using its police powers.

Some legislative solutions to the Swan Falls water rights controversy have proposed subordinating the Idaho Power Co. water right at a hydroelectric site on the Snake River, south of Boise.

Michael Dalmer, Anderson's opponent and John Roberts, Callen's opponent support subordination efforts, they told the audience of about two dozen people in the Twin Falls City Council chambers.

Dalmer said Idaho Power's position as a public utility and a protected monopoly means its claim to a water right may be different than the claim to a water right that an individual or company may have.

Roberts said he favors subordinating the right but also said there is a middle ground available and that the value of the Swan Falls right should be determined.

Stivers' opponent — Douglas Bashaw — said he objects to using the police power of the state, adding that the water belongs to the people.

Most candidates said they favor negotiations with Idaho Power to resolve the issue which has brought agricultural development in Idaho to a halt.

The two Democratic candidates for senator — R.L. "Mick" Nicholson and John Hurley — appeared to have similar positions on the issue.

"The farther I go, the more I lean toward subordination," Nicholson said. He said he recognized the needs of farmers, power producers and fish to use the waters of the Snake River.

Hurley said the issue tests the difference between rights to use and to consume water. He said individual rights should be identified and a bill to test their constitutionality should be passed.

Twin Falls attorney Paul Smith clearly outlined his position on the issue: Get as many water users out of litigation as possible without forfeiting any potential water rights for future appropriators. And, postpone major solutions to the problem until the water rights, and the needed solutions are more clearly defined.

Rep. Noy Brackett, R-Twin Falls, the incumbent Smith is seeking to unseat, said the water belongs to the people of Idaho. He said he favors building more dams upstream to store floodwater.

Brackett said the utility had a policy of not challenging water users and probably would. See CANDIDATES on Page C2

REP. ERNEST HALE
Seeking eighth term

Incumbent stresses pull on issues

By RICK SHUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Rep. Ernest Hale, R-Burley, a semi-retired stone quarry operator, says he is an influential legislator — one who votes in Cassia, Jerome and Minidoka counties should return for an eighth term in the Idaho House of Representatives.

Hale, 64, chairman of the House Printing and Legislative Expense Committee, says his experience in seven terms as a House member helps him to gain the support of other lawmakers on issues of major importance to Southern Idaho.

"When we need some extra votes,

I've got a lot of friends," he says. Hale adds that he was able to deliver the votes of those friends on the subordination bills approved by the House last session.

And Hale says, if re-elected, his influence will increase. He says he will likely assume a key committee chairmanship — that of the House Education Committee.

But to get that committee chair he must first survive a second primary challenge from Michael Jones, a Burley truck dealer. Jones says his reason for running is to remove Hale, whom he terms an ineffective legislator.

"Michael V. Jones got ambitious,"

Hale responds. "That's just his character. Someone who's never been in office and is ambitious says some things that are half truths or non-truths," he adds.

"I'm anti-legislation unless it's important," says Hale. He explains that in his opinion the Legislature passes too many laws.

His legislative accomplishments, he says, include his work on the ill-fated bill to repeal Idaho's weight-distance tax on large trucks and to replace it with a registration-fee system. He predicts, the weight-distance repeal measure will be considered by lawmakers again next year.

Hansen hires new chief

HANSEN — Former Burley officer Earl Knutsen, 38, is Hansen's new police chief. He was appointed by the Hansen City Council at its meeting earlier this week.

Knutsen, a 12-year law enforcement veteran, replaces retiring police chief Robert Perkins.

"On behalf of the city, I'd like to welcome you aboard," Mayor Thomas Butler told Knutsen and his wife, Ida. "We look forward to working with you."

Knutsen thanked the council, saying he was pleased to be back in the community, where he served as a policeman from May 1977 to May 1978 before joining the Burley Police Department.

Establishing a quick response unit in the community was one of the primary needs identified by Knutsen, who is also a certified emergency medical technician.

Another goal, he said, is to organize a "stepped-up juvenile program."

Seminar to probe court system

TWIN FALLS — An introduction to the court system and panel discussions on news coverage of the courts will highlight a free seminar scheduled Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon at the Twin Falls County Judicial Building.

The seminar is sponsored by the Sawtooth Press Club.

The first part of the program will be a presentation on the mechanics of the court. Fifth District Magistrate Judge Michael Redman and District Judge Daniel Hurbitt will discuss the responsibilities of the magistrate and district court divisions.

Court of Appeals Judge Don Burnett of Boise will discuss the functions of the Court of Appeals and the Idaho Supreme Court. Fifth District Judge Douglas Kramer of Blaine County and Cassia County Clerk Frank Kearns will present information on court records and access to them.

The second part of the program consists of two panel discussions moderated by State Sen. John Barker of Buhl.

Camera access to the courts and closed proceedings will be the topic discussed by panelists Kramer; Pamela Mathis, a reporter with KMYT-television in Twin Falls; Twin Falls attorney Greg Fuller; Blaine County Prosecutor Keith Roark; and Burnett.

The topic of the second discussion is pre-trial publicity and legal and journalistic ethics concerning the coverage of the courts. The panelists will be Roark, Fuller, Twin Falls County Public Defender Mike Powers, Hurbitt and Times-News Managing Editor Stephen Hartgen.

The public is invited to attend the event.

Remedial reading discarded from Kimberly junior high

By CHRISTOPHER WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — Junior high school students in Kimberly will no longer have a remedial reading program after this school year.

The decision was made by the Kimberly School Board Tuesday night to abolish the Chapter I reading program in the junior high and use all of the federal funds to subsidize the program in the elementary school.

Next year, and the school system hopes to pick up students with reading problems at the high-school level.

Another reason, he said, is that the high school is going to a seven-period day next year, and additional space is needed in the high school.

The district also has had to foot the bill for part of the program in past years because of decreased government money, Powell said. Two years ago, approximately $7,000 of district money was needed to keep the program afloat, Powell said.

"The government has been gradually reducing funding, and more and more of the cost of the program has been borne by the patrons of the school district," Powell said.

In the upcoming year, though, about $35,000 has been granted for the project, up from an estimated $27,000 last year, Powell said.

When asked to comment on the status of the teacher now instructing the Chapter I program in the junior high, Jensen said, "I really don't know what his status will be. I imagine that the staff member will go back to regular teaching in the school, but I can't speculate because that will be handled by the principal, the superintendent and the teachers involved, with concurrence by the board."

In other business conducted, the board officially accepted the resignation of Zone 3 member Steve Grube as of June 30. Grube will have served two years of his three year term on the board.

Grube cited a lack of time to dedicate to the job as the main reason for the resignation, and said someone with more time could do the position the justice it deserved.

Jensen commended Grube for his years of service on the board, and said he has been an outstanding trustee for the district.

The board expects to select someone to fill the position by August. Persons in the Zone 3 area who are interested in the job should contact the district office and make their intentions known, Jensen said.

"Under Idaho code, the board will select someone to finish the term," Jensen said. "Then the position will be filled in the normal election process."

State Police adds trooper to area

TWIN FALLS — A new trooper has been added to the District Four staff of the Idaho State Police.

He is 29-year-old Tony Gonzales, a former officer with the Los Gatos, Calif., police department. Gonzales was among eight cadets who graduated recently from the ISP's five-week training program. Part of his training included on-the-job work in the district, says Lt. Bob Wright of Twin Falls, the district commander.

Gonzales has filled a vacant slot in the district, bringing the number of troopers up to 18, Wright said. Despite the addition, however, the district staff still is four or five troopers down from its full force, he added.

Candidates

have followed that policy if it hadn't been forced to do so. He said if the company is awarded a water right in court, the state should condemn it to make water available.

The prospective legislators were generally in agreement that the Legislature is pursuing — with its education reform package — the major reforms needed in Idaho's public schools.

But he said one area of improvement in Idaho schools would be to pursue as a matter of policy smaller class sizes. "If you look at the statistics, Idaho can afford it," he said. "If you talk to the people, Idaho cannot," he added.

Brackett stressed the need for computer education.

Anderson and Callen both stressed the need for quality education and low taxes.

Dahmer said he supports concentrating on improvements in secondary schools. He said he would be a supporter of State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evars.

Roberts and Nicholson said Idaho needs to keep good educators in the state and support the legislative reform plan's efforts to do that.

"Anyone who thinks Idaho schools are adequately financed is looking through rose-colored glasses," Nicholson said.

Hurley said schools need to emphasize more "high-tech" courses. He added that he supports the career ladder proposal that is included in the two-year legislative reform package.

Snow

Reservoir west of Rogerson. "It froze up there (in the mountains) the night before last and House Creek stopped."

His compound, which serves the Roseworth area, has been spilling 150 cubic feet a second of water for more than a month in an effort to control the reservoir level. It is now a little more than two-thirds full.

Officials continue to release 1,800 cubic feet per second of water from the Salmon Falls Reservoir in a giant waterfall from an emergency spillway.

Draining that much water now appears to be holding the level of the reservoir almost even, said Don DeVely, spokesman for the Salmon River Canal Co. She reported only a small gain in the water level Thursday.

Salmon Falls, which holds a capacity of 182,650 acre feet, now is about 95.3 percent full.

The SCS now says it is very unlikely that Salmon Falls Creek will carry more water into the reservoir than officials can handle at the maximum spillage rate of 3,300 cubic feet a second.

"I don't see a danger of them really overtopping the structure at all," said Beard.

The maximum spill rate, however, would send almost double the amount of water now escaping down the Salmon Falls Creek bed. On Wednesday, the Balanced Rock Grade rampaging water and the Miracle Hot Springs resort downstream was swamped.

The heavy snowpacks remaining in the mountains were surprising to SCS officials. They had expected more water to tumble out of the high elevations, Beard said.

"The melt that has occurred apparently is being absorbed into the soil profiles and not going into the stream channel," he said.

"We feel the emphasis and need for the program is in the elementary school, and the board has decided to put the funds there," said Keith Jensen, the chairman of the board. "If there is a need in the junior high, I am sure there will be provisions made to meet that need."

Superintendent George Powell said 12 students are enrolled in the junior high Chapter I reading program; there are 46 children in the grade school program.

In addition to better using the money to help children at the elementary level, Powell said other reasons for dropping the program were that the state is requiring a reading program in the high schools.

Hale

Opponents of the repeal call the weight-distance (airest system of highway taxes and claim a registration fee will cause short-haul Idaho trucks to subsidize long-haul interstate trucks.

Proponents of the measure say too many trucks are cheating on the weight-distance taxes. They say cheating could be eliminated with the registration fee system.

Hale also prides himself on his opposition to changing the negotiations law that prohibits teachers from using professional negotiators in contract talks with local school boards. The law does not prohibit the school boards from using professional negotiators and has been criticized by teachers' unions as unfair.

Hale says allowing teachers professional representation in contract talks would be to allow collective bargaining for public employees, which he opposes. He says school boards need professional representation because their members generally serve part time and cannot sit through a week of contract talks. "It's as fair as it will ever get," Hale says of the law. "If a person doesn't like what they're getting, let them look for something else," he says of his philosophy of negotiating with teachers.

Hale did, however, support legislation intended to add $200 million to Idaho teacher salaries.

Jones declined to vote, because Hale criticized to vote for the sales tax increase that was needed to finance the pay raises. And Jones adds that the voting behavior is typical for Hale. He says Hale votes regularly to spend the money but never approves the tax increases that make the raises sustainable.

"I sure don't vote for anything that we don't have the money for," Hale says. He says he opposed the sales tax increase after approving the teacher raises because the increase was too great. He says the raises could have been financed with a smaller increase.

He also was a delegate to the University of Utah Junior Science and Humanities Symposium. He says he has not yet decided whether to attend Boise State University or the College of Idaho.

Stewart plans to attend the United States Naval Academy. During high school he served as president of Key Club and National Honor Society. His sports activities include keeping basketball statistics, playing intramural volleyball and church league softball and basketball.

He also participated in Young Republicans. He was named a winner at the Intermountain Junior Science and Humanities Symposium this year and was a delegate to the National Junior Science and Humanities Symposium. His parents are Dale and Patricia Stewart.

Welfare fraud settled

JEROME — Mary Callahan of Jerome was placed on three years probation Tuesday when she appeared in Fifth District Court for sentencing on charges of welfare fraud.

Callahan pleaded guilty to the charge last fall and was given a 120-day, retained-jurisdiction sentence at the North Idaho Correctional Institute at Cottonwood.

She appeared before Judge Phillip Becker Tuesday after having completed the 120 days. Becker ordered the three-year probation and told Callahan she will have to make restitution to the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare in the amount of $1,627.14, a sum she must repay before probation can be completed. The welfare agency charged Callahan with fraudulent procurement of public assistance between May 1 and Sept. 30, 1982. The complaint against Callahan accused her of obtaining aid to dependent children, food stamps and medical benefits. It also alleges she made false statements and submitted fraudulent rent receipts in order to obtain the assistance.

April Fool prank backfires

DEAR ABBY: "Chuck" and I have been going together for five months. We're both 26 and divorced. Chuck told me he'd been in the service for 12 years but was out now because he developed colitis. He said colitis could be controlled with medication now, and he hoped to get back in again.

About a month ago I called Chuck and said, "I just came from the doctor's, and I'm pregnant." He said, "Don't be silly. If you are pregnant, it's not mine," then he hung up before I could say, "April Fool!"

I called him back and said it was only an April Fool's joke. Then he got really mad, called me an idiot and hung up on me.

The next day I called to apologize, and he said, "You...me was a terrible shock to me. Now I'm bleeding real bad and don't want to talk to you." Then he hung up.

Two days later he called to tell me he had just taken his physical to get back in the service. He didn't pass, and it was all my fault! By this time I was feeling really rotten.

I called and tried to explain that I didn't mean to hurt him, but he said, "You really screwed things up for me!" good, and I never want to see you again." Then he hung up.

Abby, how can I make amends? I feel just terrible.

—NOT FUNNY

DEAR NOT FUNNY: Consider it a good learning experience and don't try to make amends. I think you were lucky to learn that Chuck had (a) no sense of humor, and (b) no sense of honor.

It's just as well that Chuck chucked you, because I'd have advised you to chuck Chuck.

DEAR ABBY: You be the judge. I have a sister-in-law who is the nicest person I've ever known. She's the kind who will pick up a person's personal letter and read it if she gets the chance. I caught her going through my checkbook once. Anyway, here's what happened, and I am fuming.

After being gone all afternoon, I came home and my phone was ringing. It was her. She told me she had been shopping and came across a good bargain on straw-berries, so she bought a box for me and put them in my fridge. I asked her how she got in and she said she took the screen off the back bedroom window and climbed in.

Abigail VapBuren
Dear-Abby

Abby, she broke into my house. The nerve of that woman! I'm sure while she was there she spoooped around because she wouldn't miss an opportunity like that.

Couldn't I have her arrested for breaking and entering? My husband tells me I am overreacting. (She's his sister.) But I need to know what I should do about this.

—STILL FUMING

DEAR FUMING: Simmer down. Don't have her arrested, but do ask her not to go through any more windows when you're not home.

DEAR ABBY: I've just finished the latest in—a never-ending string of arguments with my father about my choice of careers. He has always maintained that he didn't care what I did as long as it was good, honest work.

I'm 24, male, and I've been a paramedic for the last five years. I'm well-trained, love my work and, like a doctor or nurse, I'm proud to be in the lifesaving profession.

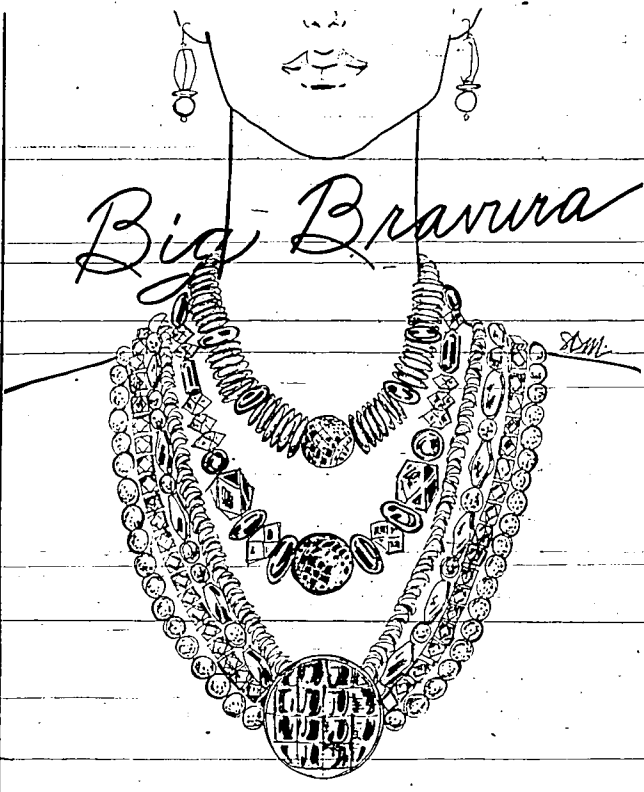

I wish third-rate TV shows would portray us as the caring professionals we are instead of lead-footed, careless-driving fools.

I wish I had a dime for every time I've been asked, "What's the grossest thing you've ever seen?" To that question, I simply reply, "I don't know. I've stopped remembering."

Is there a better answer? —A PROUD PARAMEDIC

DEAR PROUD: Yes. "That's the grossest question I've ever been asked."

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send your name and address clearly printed with check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 3922, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Keep pool safe place this year

CHICAGO (AP) — If you own one of the 4 million residential swimming pools in the United States, it's time for a refresher course on swimming pool safety, says Tod Turritt, manager of the public safety department of the National Safety Council.

"Each year between 600 and 700 people drown and another 65,000 are injured in all types of swimming pool accidents," he said. "About one-half of these accidents happen in residential swimming pools. Most could have been prevented with proper knowledge and training in swimming pool safety."

He has these safety tips:
• Pool security: swimming pools must be enclosed by a fence or wall at least 4 feet high to prevent small children or unwanted users from getting into the pool. The fence or wall should have a self-latching gate mechanism; latches should be high enough that small children can't reach them. Gates should be locked when the pool is not in use.

Ideally, the fence or barrier should completely surround the perimeter of the swimming pool. When the house is used as a part of the barrier, extra care must be taken to prevent access to the pool area through doors and windows by young children.

Although security latches are often used to prevent this type of unauthorized entry, remember that they may also prevent escape in the event of an emergency.

• Deck area and pool: K-ep a ring buoy with a line attached and a strong, lightweight pole 10 to 12 feet long in the pool area at all times.

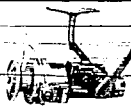

A telephone should be accessible and emergency phone numbers placed right next to it: police, fire, hospital, rescue squad, paramedics, doctor, etc. In case someone falls in or is injured you will be prepared to act fast.

Water depth should be clearly marked on the pool deck and, if possible, above the water line of the pool wall. Markings should be displayed in feet and inches and in a contrasting color to the deck and pool finish.

"Diving into shallow water can result in cervical spine injuries causing permanent paralysis," Turritt said. "Prohibit diving into above-ground pools. Strictly supervise the use of diving boards and water slides — and make sure this equipment is designed for use in your type of pool." Deep and shallow water areas of a pool should be separated by a semi-permanent float line, he said. This serves as a visual reference for non-swimmers and can be used to support a swimmer in an emergency.

Soto's fastball cools Chicago's hot streak with a 5-3 win

By The Associated Press

Mario Soto's blazing fastball cooled off the Chicago Cubs' hot bats Thursday.

The Cubs, batting a National League-leading .276 at game time, managed just three hits off the right-hander Thursday as the Cincinnati Reds recorded a 5-3 victory. Soto, 6-1, allowed just one hit over the first six innings on his way to his fifth straight win, ending Cincinnati's three-game losing streak.

"When I'm going good, I'm going real good," Soto said. "It's great to stop a three-game losing streak. And it's good for me to get that win, because it kept my winning streak alive."

The win moved the Reds to within one-half game of idle Los Angeles in the National League West.

The Cubs, who had pounded three homers and 23 hits to score 16 runs in the first two games of the series, had to settle for one big inning off Soto. They scored three times in the seventh on Ron Cey's RBI double and a two-run homer by Jody Davis, his fifth.

Their only bid to tie the game fell a few feet short in the ninth, after Gary Matthews had walked. Mel Hall sent right-fielder Dave Parker back to the wall to catch his fly ball, throwing a screw into Soto.

"I thought he hit that ball out," Soto said. "They've hit so many balls out that I thought, 'Here we go again. It's a tie game.'"

Atlanta 7, St. Louis 2

In St. Louis, Rafael Ramirez drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and two-run triple and Glenn Hubbard smacked a two-run homer, powering Pascual Perez and the Atlanta Braves to triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals. Perez celebrated his 27th birthday by throwing a seven-hitter to post his third win in three decisions since returning from the suspension imposed for his drug conviction in the Dominican Republic during the off-season. He struck out six and walked two.

Texas 4, Milwaukee 1

In Milwaukee, Bobby Jones stroked a run-scoring single to key a mistake-filled four-run seventh inning and Frank Tanana tossed a seven-hitter to lead the Texas Rangers to a victory over the Milwaukee Brewers. Marv Foley and Buddy Bell opened the Rangers' seventh with consecutive singles off Moose Haas. 2-3. Jones then lined a single to right to drive in Foley. The throw to the plate from right-fielder Charlie Moore went to the backstop, allowing Bell to score. After Pete O'Brien grounded to short, Ned Yost singled and Wayne Tolleson walked to load the bases and chase Haas. Bill Sample, pinch-hitting for Mickey Rivers, followed with a grounder to third off reliever Rick Waits that forced Jones at the plate. But catcher Jim Sundberg, attempting to double Sample at first, fired the ball over first baseman's Cecil Cooper's head, allowing Yost and Tolleson to race home.

San Diego 5, Montreal 4

In San Diego, the Padres' Alan Wiggins tied a modern National League record with five stolen bases and scored the winning run on Tony Gwynn's two-out eighth-inning single as the San Diego Padres snapped a seven-game losing streak by defeating the Montreal Expos. After getting the first two outs in the eighth, reliever Andy McGaffigan, 2-2, walked Gwynn, who stole second and continued to third on catcher Bobby Ramos' throwing error. With a count of two strikes on Gwynn, Gary Lucas replaced McGaffigan but Gwynn bounced an infield single to second as Wiggins scored.

Boston 11, Cleveland 10

In Cleveland, Jim Rice raced home with the tie-breaking run on Ernie Camacho's wild pitch in the top of the 10th inning to give the Boston Red Sox a wild victory over the Cleveland Indians. Rice led off the inning by reaching first on shortstop Julio Franco's fielding error. After Camacho, 0-3, struck out Tony Armas, Mike Easter blooped a single to center field to send Rice to third. With Rich Gedman at the plate, Camacho then uncorked his wild pitch which hit in the dirt in front of catcher Jerry Willard, bouncing 20 feet to his right. Rice streaked home, barely beating Willard's throw to Camacho to the plate.

Toronto 3, Chicago White Sox 2

In Toronto, Lloyd Moseby belted a solo home run and drilled a tie-breaking triple in the eighth inning to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a victory over the Chicago White Sox. Damasco Garcia led off the eighth against Chicago starter Lamarr Hoyt, 3-5, with a single and was sacrificed to second by Dave Coles. Moseby then smacked his game-winning triple down the right field line to make a winner of Jay Lee Jackson, 4-1.

Moscow's Hoberger stymies Burley in Class B baseball

By The Times-News

CALDWELL — Moscow's Kent Hoberger stymied Burley on four hits Thursday morning, committing the Bobcats to a 5-0 defeat and another date with the Madison Bobcats at the Idaho Class B Baseball Tournament.

Burley will take on Madison at 10 a.m. today at Caldwell's Siplint Stadium in a loser-out game. Coach Dean Satterfield is expected to see Madison's ace, left-hander Robert Jensen.

"They didn't throw Jensen today and Emmett beat them 7-0," said Satterfield, whose ballclub lost twice to Madison and Jensen in the District 4-5-6 tournament last week after beating Madison in three out of four games during the regular season.

"Why they didn't start with Jensen I don't know. I guess they figured if they could get past Emmett, they'd have him for the semifinals. But now I'm sure we'll see him tomorrow and I'm not particularly looking forward to it. He's a fine pitcher."

In other tournament action on Thursday, Rigby edged Middleton 3-2 in eight innings while Valliuve thumped St. Maries 7-2. Moscow and Emmett will square off in one semifinal game at 12:30 p.m., while Rigby and Valliuve will play at 5 p.m. The winners of those games will move into the state title game, scheduled for 3 p.m. Saturday.

In the other consolation-bracket game today, Middleton will face St. Maries at 3 p.m.

Pitching was the problem for Burley Thursday as Hoberger scattered the four hits and was never in any serious trouble.

"We didn't hit the ball well. We never picked him up," Satterfield said.

Moscow came up with nine hits, one by each player in the lineup — but only in the third could the Bears muster more than a run against Burley left-hander Aaron Taylor.

"I felt Aaron threw a good game," Satterfield said. "Three of those runs scored on passed balls so I feel actually the final score should have been 2-0. I realize that's still a loss but I don't think Aaron deserved losing 5-0."

Moscow Coach Gary Johnson said he'd never seen Hoberger, 6-1, pitch better.

"Today was by far the best outing he's had this season," Johnson said of his senior right-hander. "In fact, as a team I think we played our best game of the season today."

Hoberger struck out 13 batters and walked just one.

After Thursday's game, both teams are 15-11 for the season.

STATS — Moscow 000 000 0-0 4 2 Moscow 000 013 001 4 2 Taylor: Wood 1st; and Collins: Hoberger and Malava: Hoberger 1-1, Taylor 5-5.

Boxing champion may pull out of fight

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — World Boxing Association heavyweight champion Gerrie Coetzee reportedly has pulled out of his fight with Larry Holmes, but says he would reconsider if he were offered more money.

"If they come back and offer me a million more, I will reconsider," Coetzee said in a story Thursday in the Johannesburg Daily Citizen.

Coetzee was to have received $3.5 million for the June 8 fight.

In Las Vegas, Nev., Holmes, the International Boxing Federation champion, said that he was willing to take a pay cut to salvage the jeopardized fight. Holmes said he has already taken a $2 million pay cut and is willing to have his original $12.3 purse cut further.

Coetzee was quoted as saying that he has been "training half-heartedly over the past fortnight (two weeks) because of problems surrounding the fight. At this stage, the possibility that I will fight Holmes is very remote. I doubt if the fight will come off."

Coetzee made his remarks to the Daily Citizen from Los Angeles, where he is training.

But Mark Messier outpaced defenseman Denis Potvin down the left wing with the team's opening shot and put a wrist shot past Smith at 17:54.

Edmonton turned the game into a rout in the middle period, connecting three more times for a 6-1 advantage. Lindstrom converted from short range on a power play after Paul Coffey's pass was tipped by Messier at 5:21, breaking New York's streak of 20 consecutive penalties killed.

Only 37 seconds later Pat Conacher got his first goal of the playoffs on a short backhand after Pat Hughes bumped defenseman Dave Langewies off the puck and fed Conacher.

Coffey made it 6-1 when he pushed a wrist shot through a shaky Smith's pads at 10:52.

New York's Pat Flatley tipped in a Clark Gillies shot to close the gap to 6-2 with 16 seconds to go in the second.

Gretzky faked Smith to the ice and knocked in a backhand with 5:39 remaining for his second goal of the night.

The three defeats in this series are as many as the Islanders have suffered in their previous four years in the finals. They lost twice to Philadelphia in 1980, once to Minnesota in 1981 and swept Vancouver and Edmonton the last two years.

Olympic officials visit in vain; Poles join boycott brigade

By The Associated Press

Two top Olympic officials — Peter Ueberroth from the United States and Marat Gramov from the Soviet Union — met Thursday in Lausanne, Switzerland, but Ueberroth said no progress was made toward ending the Soviet bloc's boycott of the Los Angeles games.

Poland, meanwhile, became the 10th nation to join the Kremlin-led boycott.

The unscheduled, hour-long meeting between Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, and Gramov, president of the Soviet Olympic Committee, was the first between sports officials of the two countries since the Soviets announced May 8 they would not compete in Los Angeles.

It came on the eve of an emergency session called by the International Olympic Committee to discuss the boycott of the Los Angeles Games.

"There is obviously a great division in our thinking," Ueberroth said after the meeting. "It would be misleading to suggest we came even an inch closer to a solution."

Ueberroth, who said he has had a good working relationship with Gramov over six years, took the initiative for the meeting shortly after he reached Lausanne. He declined to give details of their discussion, which he described as a "scene-setter" for today's meeting.

"We tried to let them know our thoughts ahead of time," he said, referring to the Soviets. "We came prepared to answer whatever questions they might have on the Los Angeles Games, and to let them ask these questions in private, with no one else present."

The IOC executive board was due to meet jointly today with Soviet and U.S. officials. IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch scheduled the meeting as a last-ditch effort to persuade the Soviets to reverse their boycott decision. Gramov, however, has repeatedly declared that the decision was final.

The deadline for countries to register for the Los Angeles Games is June 2.

Poland joined the Soviet-led boycott but its National Olympic Committee acknowledged the decision might be unpopular.

"It is obvious that no one is satisfied with the decision," said Janusz Peciak, a member of both the Olympic team.

Simmons wins 10,000 meter run as CSI opens quest in national

SAN ANGELO, Texas — Freshman Merenette Simmons captured the 10,000-meter championship Thursday to head up a successful first day for College of Southern Idaho in the National Junior College Athletic Association Track and Field Championships.

Although "catching a cramp" in her side in the first mile of the event, Simmons won in a relatively slow time of 37 minutes, 27 seconds. That compares to her winning time of 35:07 in the Region 18 championships.

"After the pain hit her, she slowed considerably but she showed a lot of courage of running in front all the way," praised Coach Karl Kleinkopf. Since the 10,000 was the only final of the day, the women currently top the team standings.

CSI went through the first day's qualifying program without losing a person.

Maclie Miller and Mary Reed leaped 36 feet, 3 1/2 inches and 36.3, respectively, to qualify at sixth and seventh in the triple jump.

"I think if they have good days they could pull up to fourth or fifth but it is a quality field and you don't get to take your qualifying jumps into the finals with you," Kleinkopf said.

The 400-meter women's relay moved into the semifinals after several teams were scratched and the 1600-meter relay qualified with the fourth best time at 3:55.

"That will improve in the finals Saturday. We ran Maclie on one leg today because Merenette was running the 10,000," the coach said.

Because of scratches, Miller moved into the hurdle semifinals. Freshman Sally Butts wound up the first day of the heptathlon in third place, 46 points out of second and 200 out of first.

"I think Sally can come up with a second but first may be out of reach now," Kleinkopf said.

Butts, in her second heptathlon, picked up her performances in a couple of events and dropped two-tenths of a second in the hurdles. However, she is 126 points ahead of the pace she established after four events in the Bob Gibb Invitational in Boise last month.

She ran a 25.4 200 and improved to 31 feet in the shot put. She cleared 5-2 in the high jump, three-quarters inch off her best this year, and added the 16.4 in the hurdles.

"I think probably Sally's best three events will come 'up tomorrow," Kleinkopf. "She has improved her javelin and I think she has 18-foot potential in the long jump. I know she'll run the 800 a lot better than the 2:36 she had last time."

Both CSI men stayed alive. High jumper Ray Mitchell had his event moved to today because of rain and Doug Hopster had the second-best time in his heat at 1:52.32.

The only finals CSI will be involved in today will be the men's high jump. Butts in the heptathlon and Simmons' attempt for a double in the 5,000-meter run.

Basketball

Bird leads Celtics by Bucks

By DAVE O'HARA
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Larry Bird scored 32 points, Dennis Johnson 26 and Kevin McHale 24 as the Boston Celtics rolled another big early lead to a playoff victory Thursday night, routing the Milwaukee Bucks 125-110 for a 2-0 lead in a showdown for the National Basketball Association's Eastern Conference championship.

Seeking to avenge a four-game sweep by Milwaukee in last year's conference semifinals, the Celtics poured it on for their eighth consecutive home victory without a defeat in the playoffs this spring.

In winning their last five games at home, they have finished with margins of 18, 14, 22, 17, 23 and 15 points.

Milwaukee, trounced 119-96 in the series opener Tuesday night, never led as Boston opened a 6-0 lead and ended the first quarter in front 32-21.

The Celtics outscored Milwaukee 35-27 in the second period for a 67-48 halftime lead. Then they widened the margin to 24 points in the opening minutes of the third period, and the Bucks could get no closer than 12 points the rest of the way.

Bird, who also had 13 rebounds, and McHale did their usual things, but Johnson shocked the Bucks with his scoring touch. The veteran guard also chipped in with one steal, three rebounds and four assists.

As in their four home victories in a seven-game semifinal series with the New York Knicks, the Celtics jumped out quickly to a whopping lead.

Bruin aide Ferguson to Kavemen

TWIN FALLS — Jim Ferguson, assistant basketball coach at Twin Falls High School for the past nine years, will become the new head coach at Kuna High School next fall.

Ferguson, who has taught in Twin Falls for 11 years, has worked in the basketball, volleyball and track programs for the Bruins. He anticipates having an assistant's role in volleyball at his new school.

Kuna is a Class A-2 school that ranks third in enrollment at 526 in the Snake River Valley A Conference.

"The one thing I like about the Kuna job is that Bishop Kelly is 15 miles away, Valliuve 36... It means no more 170-mile bus trips from Idaho Falls after a game," Ferguson laughed.

"Kuna has done well in virtually all sports but basketball since growing into the A-2 class. My job will be to bring that program into line with the success of the other sports," he said.

Ferguson said "the decision to leave Twin Falls and all our friends and memories after so many years was very difficult. But I felt it had come to the time that if I wanted to become a head coach, it was now. It has been great working in the Twin Falls program and I'm certain my experiences here will help me in establishing my own at Kuna."

Qualle edges own teammate to garner Big Sky decathlon

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — The University of Nevada-Reno's Jeff Qualle edged teammate Tim O'Neill Thursday to win the decathlon at the Big Sky Track Championships in Bozeman.

O'Neill had led the competition after each of the first nine events, while Qualle was second in eight of those events.

In the final 1500-meter run, O'Neill developed cramps on the last lap and could not finish the race.

Qualle finished fourth in the 1500, giving him an overall winning point total of 7,195 or 284 points better than O'Neill at 6,911.

Third place went to Weber State's Parker Barney with 6,738 points.

In Thursday's five events, O'Neill won the 10-meter hurdles with a time of 22.32 seconds, while Barney took the discus with a toss of 133 feet, 9 inches.

Qualle pulled closer to the lead after easily winning the pole vault at 15-1 and the javelin throw at 206-11.

After nine events, Qualle had cut O'Neill's lead to 241 points. Barney moved into third place in the final standings after winning the 1500-meter run in which O'Neill could not finish. Barney's time was 14:24.5.

In the heptathlon of the Mountain West Athletic Conference meet, which is being held in conjunction with the Big Sky track championships, Idaho State's Lynne Wingle took first place in the long jump, with a leap of 18 feet and one-half inch Thursday, coming on top of earlier victories in the 100-meter hurdles and the 200-meter run, to win the event.

Wingle, who set a conference record for total heptathlon points, 5,133, narrowly beat second-place finisher Marlene Michalak of Montana State.

Michalak won first places Thursday in the javelin and the 800-meter run, adding to her victories Wednesday in the high jump and shot put. She ended with a total of 5,111 points.

Between them, Wingle and Michalak won all the first places in the seven-event competition.

To capture the title, Michalak would have had to beat Wingle by more than eight seconds in the final event, the 800-meter run. But Wingle's winning time of 2 minutes, 28 1/2 seconds was only seven seconds better than Michalak's time of 2:35 1/2.

Relaxed Jacobsen grabs Colonial fourney lead

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Peter Jacobsen, rested and refreshed after two weeks away from PGA Tour activity, parlayed a relaxed attitude and the absence of wind into a 6-under-par 61 and a two-stroke lead Thursday in the first round of the $500,000 Colonial National Invitation Tournament.

Relaxation

playing. I decided I had an attitude problem, and I worked on taking a more positive approach to the game.

"I worked on the imagery of the game, visualizing what I wanted to do the way I wanted to play the shots. And everything fell into place."

And, too, the relatively calm conditions helped produce some of the lowest overall scoring ever yielded by the 7,116-yard Colonial Country Club course.

"The golf course played easy," said Tom Watson, one of the group tied for second at 66.

"The golf course will yield some birdies when there's no wind. Add the fans, and the scores will go up."

Watson, the year's leading money-winner and on a roll that has produced finishes of second, first and third in his last three starts, was tied with Mike Reid, Scott Simpson, D.J. Weibring and Gil Morgan, who had a few nervous moments when he thought he'd signed an incorrect scorecard and was facing disqualification.

"I guess I've been lucky. I haven't been disqualified in 10 years or so, and it seems to happen to someone almost every week," Morgan said after it developed his card was without error.

Another shot back at 67-3 under par or the course that was dubbed Hogan's Alley after the legendary Ben Hogan won his little five times, were Danny Edwards, Scott Simpson, Curtis Strange and Joey Sills.

"It was one of those days that you just knew the putts would fall and the shots would come off," Jacobsen said. "With the time off, I had an opportunity to reflect on how I'd been
