Judge denies Hansen ap

By TOM SEPPY
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federal judge Friday denied Rep. George V. Hansen's request for a new trial in his four-count felony conviction.

The judge then set next Thursday for his sentencing.

Hansen, an Idaho Republican who won re-nomination May 22, faces up to 20 years in prison and $40,000 in fines from his April 2 conviction for failing to report $333,978 in loans and other transactions on government financial disclosure forms.

Attorneys for Hansen, who also sought an acquittal, appealed the jury's conviction because, they said, it "was contrary to the great weight of the evidence and should be set aside."

But in denying their motion, U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green said, "The jury's verdict was based upon persuasive and substantial evidence, throughout a 10-day trial. The jury had full opportunity to evaluate the credibility of witnesses, government and defense alike."

"It could accept or reject the testimony on the basis of its reasonableness or unreasonableness, probability or improbability, in determining whether the testimony had been contradicted or corroborated by other credible evidence," her written ruling continued.

"The government used legitimate means to bring about a just and effective conviction in this case. Defendant received a fair trial in all respects."

Hansen, 53, was convicted of violating the 1978 Ethics in Government Act by omitting mention of loans, profits from the sale of silver contracts and other transactions, some of which involved Texas billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt.

The transactions were: $135,000 in personal loans to Hansen in 1981 by three Virginia men; a $61,500 loan from Hunt to Hansen and his wife Coitline in her name in 1980; $97,475 in profits the Hansens made from the sale of silver contracts in 1979; and a $50,000 personal loan in 1978 to Connie Hansen that was guaranteed by Hunt.

One of Hansen's lawyers, Nathan Lewin, said an appeal would be filed with the U.S. Court of Appeals after the sentencing.

"That wasn't a setback," said Hansen, who predicted victory when the case is appealed to a higher court. "We didn't win anything but we didn't lose anymore than we'd already lost."

Hansen called the motions that were denied "just basically pro forma motions we can put out of the way so we can get to the appeal stage."

"The next step is the sentencing date," said

Hansen. "We'll go over there, go through that exercise, which is all part of the preliminaries so that you can go and get your case before another forum, where we feel we can win."

In her 30-page opinion, Mrs. Green addressed all of Hansen's arguments, including one that he should be acquitted because the defense had proven that he acted on the advice of lawyers when he omitted mention of the financial transactions on the disclosure statements required by the ethics act.

Because of "the exact in which defendant's request for advice arose and the implausibility of the advice which casts doubt on defendant's good faith in relying on it and on whether it was actually based upon a good faith review of the law, the jury could have readily and reasonably rejected the testimony of the defendant's attorneys and with it the advice of counsel defense," she wrote.

Lung disease ties woman to machine

Friends send Irene packing home

By JOE NEAVE
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — With a lot of help from her friends, Irene Denney, 68, is leaving the hospital. Only a few years ago Denney would have never been able to leave the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center at all. But a whole team of people intervened to help send her away.

A long-time resident of the Hansen-Murtaugh area, Denney is fighting a progressive lung ailment that has tied her permanently to a ventilator. She has been in and out of the hospital for four years getting treatments, and each stay becomes harder for her to bear.

But thanks to Rosemary Laufenberg, the hospital's social service director, Gary Thielten, president of Idaho Home Health, the hospital staff who cared for her, and her family, Denney has fled the confines of a hospital bed.

"For these kind of patients to go home is kind of an event," Laufenberg says. "The level of care they need is usually found only in an intensive care unit. The trend now is to get the patients out of the hospital and improve home health care."

Laufenberg says, "It looked like it was impossible at first" to send Denney home. "But I tried everything, called everywhere, talked to a lot of committees, and finally it worked out."

"Nursing homes won't take them, because the homes are not equipped with ventilators. Because of the help she needs she's a difficult patient to care for even in the hospital."

"But I found her an apartment in Valley Vista Village and her son will take care of her. The families learn to do things intensive care nurses sometimes do. The staff here has done a won-

Leaders reject use of force to end flaps

By JACK NELSON
The Los Angeles Times

LONDON — President Reagan and the leaders of the major industrialized nations declared Friday that they reject the use of force as a means of settling international disputes.

They also vowed to maintain "only the military strength necessary" for defense and to deter aggression.

"We believe that in today's world the independence of each of our countries is of concern to us all," they said in a seven-point Declaration on Democratic Values. "We are convinced that international problems and conflicts can and must be resolved through reasoned dialogue and negotiations, and we shall support all efforts to this end."

The declaration, which had been initiated by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, failed to endorse Reagan's approach to East-West relations — an endorsement the president had lobbied to have included.

But a senior Reagan administration official, briefing reporters after the document was released, said that he expects the leaders to issue a separate statement on relations with the Soviet bloc and perhaps a statement on terrorism at today's conclusion of the 10th annual, three-day summit.

Another senior administration official had told reporters Thursday night that the original statement proposed by Thatcher has been so innocuous that she might "face embarrassment if that is the only thing" that comes out of the summit, other than an economic statement to be issued today.

Reagan, the official said, was lobbying to have the summit toughen the statement by endorsing his views on Soviet relations and arms-control negotiations — two issues the president's political aides consider "important to his re-election campaign."

Throughout his European trip,

Reagan has branded the Soviet Union as a potent military threat while also emphasizing the importance of persuading the Soviets to resume nuclear arms control negotiations they suspended when the Atlantic Alliance began deploying medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe last year.

Even though the summit declaration failed to address the East-West issue, the official who briefed the press Friday on the condition he not be identified described the document as a "significant statement — positive, self-confident, optimistic and forward-looking."

The official said that the document's emphasis on the non-use of force, together with Reagan's speeches to the Irish Parliament and at ceremonies commemorating D-Day, sends "a signal to the Soviet Union concerning our desire to negotiate and to not seek superiority, but on the defense necessary to deter aggression."

Reagan, in his speech in Dublin Monday, offered to discuss Soviet proposals to sign a treaty on the renunciation of force if Moscow in turn agreed to negotiate "concrete" measures on arms control. At the D-Day ceremonies in Normandy, he denounced the Soviet control of Eastern Europe but said that he would welcome reconciliation with Moscow, a World War II ally.

The U.S. official, asserting "that there are no profound differences" at the summit over the president's stand on Soviet relations, said that Reagan still hopes the summit will endorse that position in its final session Saturday.

When asked to describe the president's views, he said, "That the Soviets are no profound differences" at the initiative, that we've been reasonable and, as the president said, the Soviets have been hibernating."

Thunderstorms spawn 49 twisters to rain death, damage on Plains

By The Associated Press

Waves of thunderstorms pummeled the Plains and upper Midwest with 49 tornadoes Friday.

The storms spawned tornadoes which virtually destroyed a small Wisconsin town early Friday and heavily damaged another in Iowa. At least 15 people were killed and hundreds injured.

The storm system, which earlier dumped up to a foot of snow in the Colorado Rockies, began spinning off tornadoes late Thursday and howled through the night from Kansas into Missouri, Iowa, North Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin. The storms also produced hail and heavy rain.

Tornadoes also were sighted over northwestern Oklahoma Thursday night, but none touched down, the National Weather Service said.

In Aspen, Colo., where the danger of rain-soaked landslides forced the evacuation of 300 people Thursday, officials said Friday they could return home. Authorities warned, however, that the danger remained, and said

Tornado flattens Wisconsin town — A4

Residents who returned did so at their own risk.

Aspen Mayor Bill Stirling said Friday that instruments showed the upper part of the mass of earth and rock on the side of Aspen Mountain moved an inch overnight, but he said a landslide was not thought to be imminent.

Iowa reported 26 tornadoes, a record for one storm in that state. Ellen Gordon of the Iowa Disaster Services offices said damage estimates reached $50 million by Friday afternoon.

"In my 25 years here, I don't remember a storm that has been so widespread," said meteorologist Wayne Ellington, at the National Weather Service office in Des Moines. "I don't think there was any part of the state that was spared."

One of the Iowa tornadoes "cut a mile-wide path of 30 miles or longer" before blasting the town of Delta, said state trooper Virgil Behrens. That tornado moved fast. Fast that police didn't have time to sound an alarm.

Worst hit was the town of Barneveld, Wis., where at least nine people were killed early Friday and estimates of the injured ran as high as 200. Nearly every building in the town of about 500 people was smashed or severely damaged.

Larry Sperting of the Wisconsin Division of Emergency Government said 86 homes and 18 public buildings were destroyed at Barneveld, while 24 homes had major damage and 27 minor damage.

The storms in Iowa left four people dead and injured at least 35 others, authorities said. Places that weren't hit by tornadoes had wind as high as 70 mph and up to 3 inches of rain. Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad signed proclamations Friday providing state assistance to Delta in the state's southeast corner and the town of Burlington in the north corner.

Iran threatens Arab states in move to halt Iraqi aid

By The Associated Press

Iran warned the Arab states of the Persian Gulf on Friday to stop helping Iraq, and threatened retaliation against the Saudis for shooting down an Iranian Phantom jet.

Iranian President Ali Khamenei told a congregation in Tehran that the Gulf powers were making a "big mistake" in supporting Iraq. The Gulf Arab states have remained officially neutral in the war but several are known to support Iraq, an Arab nation, against Iran.

Khamenei singled out Saudi Arabia for reprimand, saying "the Saudi attack that allowed an Iranian plane on Tuesday

"It was a big mistake, committed by neighboring Gulf countries," in attacking Iranian aircraft in Gulf waters," said Khamenei in the speech, a recording of which was broadcast by state-run Tehran radio. "We shall not leave any blow dealt us by our enemy unanswered."

Saudi Arabia on Tuesday shot the U.S.-built F-4 jet in waters supposed to be Iranian. The U.S. said the Iranian plane was shot down over Saudi territorial waters and that the oil-rich Arab kingdom will pursue a policy of self-defense while calling for peace in the Gulf region.

Oil ministers of the six member nations of the Gulf Cooperation Council — Oman, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Bahrain — met in Teif, summer capital of Saudi Arabia, to discuss the implications of the war on the future of their oil shipments. It's son for Princess Caroline
 MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Princess Caroline of Monaco gave birth to a 6 1/2-pound boy — her first child — in the Princess Grace Clinic of the principality Friday night, a spokesman for the Monaco Royal Palace announced.

The spokesman said Caroline and the baby "are well" and that the baby will be called Andrea Albert. The royal family's surname is Grimaldi.

The birth comes five months and two weeks after the death of the princess' wealthy Italian businessman Stefano Casiraghi, 73, in a quiet civil service Dec. 29 in Monte Carlo. The wedding, her second and his first, was announced only 10 days before the ceremony.

Snipers fire from Sikh temple
 NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Snipers fired on soldiers as they moved through Amritsar's Golden Temple complex Friday, recovering bodies of Sikh militants slain when troops assaulted the shrine to end a violent campaign for greater autonomy in Sikh-dominated Punjab.

Troop and extremists exchanged fire even as Indian President Zail Singh, a Sikh, launched the site of the military invasion that killed more than 250 Sikhs and 50 soldiers.

Wall Street executives guilty
 NEW YORK (AP) — Four Wall Street executives were found guilty Friday night of conspiring to defraud the Internal Revenue Service in a scheme involving an alleged $100 million in phony tax deductions.

Prosecutors called it the largest tax fraud case in U.S. history.

A U.S. District Court jury reached guilty verdicts on 15 counts but could not immediately reach verdicts on 49 additional counts, including all the charges against a fifth defendant.

Judge Richard Owen told the jurors to resume deliberations Monday.

Soviets disparage journalists
 MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet court said Friday that an Associated Press correspondent and a former AP correspondent played an "unsavory role" in the case of a Soviet man accused of planning to defect to the West.

The U.S. Embassy expressed concern that the Soviet statement "may be intended to intimidate Western correspondents in Moscow."

In Washington, State Department press officer Brian Carlson said the department "assumes the court statement closes the matter" but "we can't be sure of Soviet plans."

The official Moscow news agency Tass issued a report saying a Moscow city court sentenced the Soviet citizen and made a "separate ruling" on Marc Rosenwasser, who formerly worked for The Associated Press, and Allison Smale, now an AP correspondent in Moscow.

Detonated bomb discovered

CHICAGO (AP) — A detonated pipe bomb was found Friday in a railroad yard near a downtown train station and police say it is similar to four other explosive devices found in Chicago since May 31, police said.

Police on the scene said the latest device, which caused no reported injuries, appeared to be similar to the four homemade pipe bombs discovered in Chicago in the last eight days — three of them Monday.

There apparently was no note with the bomb, which police said was found about 1:30 p.m. MDT near railroad tracks several blocks from a train station serving the Chicago & North Western Transportation Co. rail line.

The device "had been detonated by the time we got there," said Gladys Lindsay, a police spokeswoman.

Foundation paid Haig's fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — A foundation that helped finance the Reagan administration's 1980 transition paid $86,000 in legal fees incurred by former Secretary of State Alexander Haig during his Senate confirmation, according to documents released Friday.

Financial statements released by the Presidential Transition Foundation Inc. indicated that $86,047.93 was paid to the Washington law firm of Califano, Ross and Helgeson, which represented Haig at his lengthy confirmation hearings. The foundation paid the bill after Haig refused to himself, a source said.

Woodward cites cocaine use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Post reporter Bob Woodward has said that he heard "probably 40 people" at his newspaper were regular users of cocaine.

The remark prompted Post executive editor Benjamin C. Bradlee to say that if he hears anyone at the paper is using cocaine, the person will be fired.

Woodward made the comments Thursday during an interview on "CBS Morning News" to promote his book "Wired: The Short Life & Fast Times of John Belushi," published this week.

Amtrak derailment injures 36

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Six cars of an Amtrak train bound from Boston to Washington, D.C., derailed in southwest Philadelphia Friday afternoon, causing three dozen minor injuries, authorities said.

The derailment occurred at 2:40 p.m. 10 minutes after the nine-car passenger train, No. 189, left 30th Street Station.

One woman suffered a broken leg and a man was trapped briefly inside a car, said Capt. Robert Drennen of the Fire Department.

Three cars turned onto their sides and three others derailed, with two remaining upright and the third slightly tilting.

Mondale arranges talks on unity but Hart, Jackson keep pressing

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Walter F. Mondale talked briefly with Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson by telephone Friday, setting up meetings next week with his opponents for the Democratic presidential nomination to "discuss achieving a party unity before the San Francisco convention."

Mondale, who now has the backing of a majority of the convention delegates, made the calls to Hart and Jackson from Southampton, N.Y., where he is vacationing, aides said.

"We had a courtesy conversation," Jackson said.

"It was brief and cordial," said Hart spokeswoman Deborah Graham. "The purpose of Mondale's call was to suggest a meeting."

"They agreed to meet sometime soon," said Mondale spokeswoman Ann Stock.

But Jackson told reporters Friday after the conversation that Mondale's call for unity cannot take precedence over Jackson's demand for changes in the party rules.

"He is pushing for unity," Jackson said. "We will not make a decision based on anti-Reagan mania or upon the Mondale stampede. I want party unity, but party justice must precede it."

While Hart and Mondale aides talked of a Hart-Mondale meeting and a Jackson-Mondale meeting next week, possibly in Washington, the Black civil rights leader said a three-way meeting is possible.

Hart's spokeswoman said the Colorado senator opened their conversation with a joke:

"How come you are up in Southampton and I'm here in Washington calling delegates?" Hart has said the race for the nomination is not over — and he is still trying to win delegates — but Mondale proclaimed Wednesday the fight is finished and he is the winner.

The Associated Press delegate count shows Mondale has 1,568.05 delegates, just over the 1,387 required for the nomination. Hart has 1,220.75 and Jackson has 363.2.

Robert Beckel, Mondale's campaign manager, said Friday that any attempt to raise his Democratic National Convention delegates would prove futile, and that Mondale is not asking Hart and Jackson to drop out of the race.

"That's a decision they'll have to make," Beckel told a United Steel Workers legislative and political action conference. "Mondale delegates are Mondale delegates, and they aren't going anywhere."

Hansen

"Accordingly, because there was substantial evidence from which a reasonable juror could find guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, (Hansen's) motion — which is precluded entirely on the advice of counsel — must be denied."

Mrs. Green also rejected the arguments of defense attorneys Lewin and Stephen L. Braga that Hansen was unable to get a fair trial because jurors were sequestered over their objections in the wake of publicity over a loan received by the wife of White House counselor Edwin Meese III.

As to the summation of prosecutor Weingarten, Mrs. Green said: "The highly effective closing arguments of both parties were each marked by rather strong language."

"While the government may have been somewhat 'vigilant' in its remarks, it did not 'strike any foul blows.' When viewed in the context of the atmosphere at trial, and in relation to all of the evidence in this case, the government's argument did not exceed the bounds of fairness."

"In summation, the government described credible evidence in this case which suggested that the defendant had a motive for not reporting certain transactions on his ... forms," the judge added.

"If the defendant had engaged in politically corrupt practices he would be reluctant to make them public information," Beckel said. "The government's comment about the 'stench of political corruption' had some support in the record, it was not improper for injecting an unrelated broader issue into the trial," she said.

"Because of the tube in her throat Denney is unable to speak, but Lautenberg is able to read her lips. Denney says she is glad to be leaving the hospital, even though the food was 'pretty good' and is looking forward to seeing her new apartment. Although the move is exciting for her, she said she is not planning any celebrations.

"She'll be tied to that machine for the rest of her life. She gets fussy sometimes because she's so bored. I hope some of the people at Valley Vista will come and visit with her."

"Once you get to know someone like Irene you want to help. She's not just a name on a piece of paper anymore. I have the nice job of giving her the good news, like 'we've got you an apartment.' I don't have to come at her with needles," Lautenberg says.

Even two years ago she would have had to stay in intensive care. A few years back the machine (the ventilator) would have been so complicated it couldn't have worked at home."

Lautenberg says this is the first successful move of a patient with Denney's condition in the year and a half that she has been working at the hospital. "A patient with a similar problem was preparing to have home care about four years ago, Lautenberg says, but died before the discharge date.

Besides her son, Earl, who will be caring for her, there will be a backup team of personnel, including nurses and respiratory therapists available 24 hours a day, Thietten says.

The visits of Lautenberg while she was in the hospital have been "very nice," Denney says, "but I'm glad to be leaving."

Two death-row escapees recaptured

WOODFORD, Vt. (AP) — Two of six convicted murderers who escaped from Virginia's death row were recaptured in Vermont Friday, police said.

One was arrested after a gift shop robbery and another turned himself in 180 miles away four hours later.

Len Tuggle was arrested at a police roadblock in Stamford after he robbed a gift shop in this tiny southwestern Vermont town shortly before 1 p.m., Vermont police said.

His first words to authorities were: "I'm Lem and I'm wanted in Virginia," said FBI agent Robert Pece in North Carolina.

A 5 p.m. Willie Leroy Jones called the state police from a house in Jay, about 50 miles north of the Canadian border, said Vermont state police Cpl. David Revard.

Earlier in the day, Jones placed a collect call to his mother in Richmond and she urged him to give himself up, said George Stoddard, press secretary to Virginia Gov. Charles Robb.

LEM TUGGLE
Robbed gift shop

Tuggle, 32, of Chithowle, Va., and Jones, 30, of Richmond, were two of the four fugitives remaining at large after the six death row inmates escaped from the Mecklenburg Correctional Center in Boydton, Va., on May 31. Two were recaptured in North Carolina on June 1.

State police said Tuggle, armed with a knife, robbed the Red Mills Gift Shop and then headed toward Massachusetts in a pickup truck that was stolen from Afton, N.C., a day after the six convicts escaped.

Gift shop owner Ursula Spika said Tuggle had been in the shop three days earlier asking for help with his pickup truck, which he said was stuck in the mud.

But when he came in Friday, Tuggle said, "Don't move and don't say anything." Ms. Spika said. He then took a small amount of cash and fled in the pickup, she said.

State police said Tuggle obtained a small amount of cash from the shop, and that store employees then gave police a description of him and the stolen pickup he was driving.

Tuggle was arrested a short time later in Stamford at a state police roadblock after being chased by a local constable who spotted him on Route 100. He was picked up about five miles north of the Vermont-Massachusetts border.

Still at large are Linwood Briley, 30, and his brother, James, 28, both of Richmond. All are convicted murderers.

Around Warrenton, N.C., troopers patrolled back roads and checked abandoned buildings Friday for the remaining escapees, but their second-in-command said he was becoming frustrated with the eight-day search.

Arms plan scrapped

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Friday scrapped the Pentagon's plans to build two multimillion storage facilities in Honduras, after the Reagan administration itself backed off the $4.4 million request.

The projects, a $2.9 million Army "pre-stock" point at San Lorenzo and a $1.5 million Air Force munitions site at Palmeria air field, had been challenged by Democrats in both the House and Senate as evidence the administration was preparing for combat in Central America.

The House Armed Services Committee already had voted to scrap the projects in a military construction bill now pending on the House floor. But the Senate Armed Services Committee retained them, when Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., failed on a 99-0 tie to delete the funds.

But committee Chairman John Tower, R-Texas, told the Senate on Friday that he had recently been asked by the administration to withdraw the projects so it could "reassess the need ... in the context of overall policy" in the region.

Immigration debate readied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The way was cleared Friday for House debate next week on one of the year's most politically sensitive issues — an immigration control bill that is backed by the White House and organized labor but fiercely opposed by most Hispanic leaders.

With both Republicans and Democrats courting Hispanic votes, the outlook for passage is uncertain. Two years ago, the Senate passed the bill but House opponents managed to strangle it with amendments.

The House Rules Committee approved ground rules for debate that block new amendments from being offered but provide for votes on 60 amendments that already have been drafted.

These include 20 sponsored by Rep. Edward Roybal, a Democrat of Hispanic heritage from Los Angeles and a leading opponent of the measure. Roybal's amendments would change the entire thrust of the legislation.

As drafted, the measure would allow millions of aliens now leading an illegal, underground existence in the United States to become legal residents.

Hispanics welcome that — but fear the consequences of another key provision, imposing fines on employers who knowingly hire such undocumented workers in the future.

The idea is to remove the inducement that every year brings millions of jobseekers across U.S. borders.

But Hispanic groups say the result instead would be job discrimination against anyone with a Latino name or appearance, even those who are legally in this country. Some civil libertarians also fear the measure would lead to establishment of a national identity card.

Roybal, a leader among the 11 Hispanics in Congress, will seek to delete the sanctions against employers hiring illegal aliens and substitute instead $30 million for beefed up enforcement of fair labor, minimum wage and child labor laws.

Rep. Gillis Long, D-La., chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, said he couldn't predict if the bill will pass. He noted that neither the Republican nor the Democratic leadership has taken a position on the measure.

The three Democrats seeking their party's presidential nomination — Walter Mondale, Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson — oppose the bill, but the AFL-CIO supports it.

Volcano erupts

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — Kilauea Volcano spouted fountains of fiery hot lava "visible" 12 miles away before ending a brief but vigorous nine-hour eruption Friday morning.

"We're standing by right now to see what it may do," said Dallas Jackson, a staff geophysicist at the U.S. Geological Survey's Hawaiian Volcano Observatory.

Tom Mauger, second from right, surveys the remains of his Barneveld, Wis., home

Twister wipes tiny Wisconsin town out of existence; kills nine people

BARNEVELD, Wis. (AP) — Tom and Kathy Mauger were asleep in their home about 1 a.m. Friday when the tornado struck.

"They found themselves and their bedroom flying through the air, waterbed and all. We were upstairs in the bedroom and we ended up under the roof, I guess," Mrs. Mauger, 26, said. "I don't know how far we went."

In those few moments, their community of 600 people in southwestern Wisconsin had become a heap of rubble. At least nine of their neighbors had been killed and as many as 150 had been injured, 57 of them badly enough to be kept in hospitals.

Mrs. Mauger, who is nine months pregnant, suffered no more than a sprained ankle, and her husband had only cuts and bruises.

Steve Johnson, 22, of nearby Ridgeway, escaped without a scratch from the second-floor downtown apartment where he was visiting friends. He described the twister's roar as "a sound you never want to hear—it was just five minutes of hell."

Hospital officials said some of the injuries were miraculously minor; others were the worst imaginable.

Disaster workers spent hours freeing some of the injured from the remains of their homes. In some cases, there was nothing at all left of some houses. All that remained of the town's modern Lutheran church was its steeple. The Roman Catholic church was gone, too.

The entire business district and nearly all the homes in Barneveld were destroyed.

Gov. Anthony Earl, who toured the storm-struck area by car and helicopter Friday morning, said he was humbled by the devastation.

"It makes us recognize how frail all things human are," Earl said.

Earl sought prompt federal disaster aid, saying, "There are many, many people who are going to need long-term help."

No damage estimate had been issued by Earl's office.

The storm, which took the roofs off barns for miles around and also struck the communities of Black Earth and Mazomanie, shattered hundreds of dreams in Barneveld. Some survivors stood dazed amidst the wreckage; others sobbed.

"They just don't know what they're doing right now," said Iowa County Sheriff Nicholas Basting, who knew most of the victims. "They're at a loss for words."

But many of the survivors also went to work clearing the debris, and some said they had many reasons to be thankful.

"We had just gotten our little girl out of her bedroom. We're lucky we did that," Mrs. Mauger said. "We're thankful we're alive."

One of those killed was 2-year-old Matthew Aschliman. His mother Susan, said he died when a door flew off its hinges and struck the two of them as they tried to get down to the basement of their home. Mrs. Aschliman was hospitalized in Madison.

As for the physical destruction, Dale Koltner, director of American Red Cross Disaster Services put it this way:

"Ninety homes destroyed, 30 damaged to a point to where they cannot live in them. There are 24 homes that are still livable, 30 businesses and-or public buildings which are destroyed. So for the most part, this little community is gone. Basically the only thing that is left standing is the water tower."

Shuttle launch delayed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The maiden space voyage of the nation's third shuttle, Discovery, will be delayed at least three days until June 25, as engineers can replace one of its main rocket engines.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration decided Friday to change the engine after technicians discovered a slight separation of a thin metal heat shield which protects a fuel pump from the heat of the rocket combustion chamber.

NASA said the replacement will delay the launch, which had been set for June 22, until at least June 25. Discovery and its crew are to be in space for seven days.

The engine will be removed Saturday morning and an engine borrowed from the shuttle Challenger will be installed in the afternoon, said NASA spokesman Rocky Raab. Challenger is in a hangar here being modified for its next flight in October.

Once the new engine is in place, it will take six days to make all fluid and electrical connections, test for leaks and check the pumps and other systems. Other launch preparation work will continue at the same time.

The heat shield defect was discovered Thursday while technicians were completing their inspection of Discovery's three main engines after they were test-fired for 19 seconds on the launch pad last Saturday. NASA said the adhesive which bonds the shield in place apparently loosened during the test.

Cross-state liability key to lawsuit

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The liability of bar owners in traffic accidents occurring across a state line was argued this week in a case that pitted the Mustie-Braun family against Cactus Pete's casino of Jackpot.

The case was an important one because of its potential effect on other bars in Idaho's neighboring states, such as Montana, Wyoming and Oregon, said the attorney representing the casino.

Oral arguments were presented Tuesday before the state Court of Appeals during its week-long session in Twin Falls. The judges took about an hour for their advice.

The children of Mustie and Becky Braun, well-known entertainers who worked at the casino, had filed a $1 million suit after their parents' death. The couple died as the result of injuries in a February 1961 accident on U.S. 83 near Jackpot.

Members of the Braun family — which includes Gary and Muzzie, also known as The Braun Brothers musical group — claimed the driver, Clovas Watson Rader of Wendell, was negligent and had caused the accident.

In an amended claim, the family also named Cactus Pete's as a co-defendant. The casino employees had served an already-intoxicated Rader alcoholic beverages, the Brauns alleged. As a result, the casino was liable.

"The conduct of defendant Cactus Pete's constituted an actionable breach of the general duty . . . to use reasonable care to avoid injury to others in a situation in which injury was foreseeable should defendant Cactus Pete fail to use such care," the claim read.

Fifth District Judge Theron Ward, however, ruled "the law of Nevada must be applied to the events that occurred in Nevada." It was this decision on appeal Tuesday.

The Braum family, asked the Court of Appeals to allow a jury to rule on the casino's liability.

The casino was bound by Idaho law, which makes it unlawful for a vendor of liquor to sell to an already intoxicated person, Taylor said. Nevada has no such law, which he saw as a result of the powerful interests of casino and bar owners in the "entertainment" state.

Cactus Pete's had a strong interest in Idaho because it received a great deal of business from the state, Taylor said. Economic responsibility should go along with the casino's economic benefit in the state, he said.

circumstances precisely like the ones now before the court."

Idaho law applied because precedent stated the place of injury shall determine the jurisdiction, Taylor said at the hearing.

Boise attorney Jeremiah Quane, who represented the casino, countered with the argument that the action of the alleged liability took place in Nevada.

"If the accident had happened on the Nevada side, there'd be no question of legal liability. It just was a 'fortuitous' event the driver headed to Idaho instead of Elko. 'Idaho's only connection was an accident.' Imposing Idaho law in this case would be highly improper and impractical, Quane said.

Elm disease takes its toll

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The cold hand of Dutch Elm Disease has tightened its grip in Twin Falls in recent years, spreading a deadly blight over some of the most scenic city streets and parks.

In the last year alone, several 75-year-old elm trees have been removed from City Park and Shoshone Street.

But after more than 20 years of experience with the disease in cities around the nation, there is no reason why the devastation of the American Elm should also occur here, says a Twin Falls tree expert.

Unfortunately, however, neither the city of Twin Falls nor the private tree care companies that perform most of the work in the area appear willing to spend the money or learn the proper techniques necessary to save elms, he says.

Much has been learned about Dutch Elm Disease since it first appeared in New England in the 1850s, according to Bill Selye, south central Idaho district manager for Wright Tree Service of Des Moines, Iowa. The company primarily contracts with the Idaho Power Co. here.

The disease is a fungus that travels on the feet of a certain species of insect — a type of bark beetle, which attacks only elms.

Selye says scientists believe elms emit a certain type of "pulsating aura" that attracts the beetles to them and no other tree.

If the beetle manages to bore into a tree, where it will breed, it will also infect the tree with the deadly fungus. And once the disease has been introduced it will spread rapidly through the sap-conducting outer wood of the tree.

It has been known for years that proper disposal of dead elm wood by immediate burying or burning helps control the spread of the disease.

The beetles can breed in such unlikely places as dead elm logs stacked for firewood on the back porch, he says.

Many people, however — particularly in Twin Falls — believe this is all that can be done to protect elms.

Selye says he and University of Idaho Extension Agent Dale Beck identified signs of the disease appearing in City Park five years ago.

Because nothing was done to protect those trees then during the height of city budget cutting, there is "not much chance" any of them will survive now, he says.

"But the trees in the immediate area of the park can be saved if measures are taken," he claims.

Selye says the elm beetle is not strong enough to bore into healthy elm wood. It requires a dead limb or an open wound to establish itself, he says.

The experience of his company has shown that if a tree is fed and pruned of dead and damaged limbs, it will remain remarkably immune to the disease.

The cost of treating one tree in this manner would be between $135 and $220, he estimates, but the treatment will not have to be repeated if the tree remains healthy.

While preventive care is the most important step in protecting a tree, there are chemical fungicides that also have proven effective, he says.

One group that offers such a chemical program is the Elm Research Institute of Harrisville, N.H.

"This organization is 20 years old and its main function is to save the American Elm," Selye says.

"They are recognized by arborists as the only leading organization" in the elm disease field, he says.

In "The Conscientious Injectors Handbook" and other printed materials, the organization tells how inoculation of trees against the disease with a fungicide developed by the

Inventor helping the blind

Wins contest prize

By DOUG WRIGHT
Times-News writer

JEROME — A battery-operated device that tells blind people when their glasses are full netted Bartley Mark Hirst fourth place in the Duracell $30,000 Scholarship Contest recently.

Hirst, a 1984 Jerome High School graduate, had already built the device when he heard about the Duracell competition. "I built the device to help my grandmother, who is blind because her diabetes caused hemorrhaging of the eyes," said Hirst.

Without Hirst's invention, blind people are forced to stick their fingers in the cup when pouring liquid to tell when the cup is full, said Hirst. This method often produced burned fingers, when these people tried to pour hot liquid like coffee.

Hirst's invention solves this problem by emitting a loud tone when the cup or glass is full.

When turned on, the waterproof device emits a faint tone to signal the person that the machine is on. The blind person then places the invention on the cup with the inch-long probes on the inside. When the poured liquid touches the probes, the tone increases in volume, thus signaling a full cup.

"When I found out about the Duracell contest, all I had to do was redesign it so that it used a Double-A battery instead of the smaller watch battery that I had powering it," said Hirst.

Building the device was easy for Hirst, an electronics whiz who has built everything from an AM radio to a light detection system, which sounds an alarm when a person or object breaks a beam of light. "I built that so that I'd know when my brother was coming into my room," said Hirst.

Hirst also has built a sound synthesizer, which can simulate such noises as the whir of a helicopter, the chirping of a bird, thunder and the noises of a train.

Hirst has been interested in electronics since about the fifth grade, when he used to go to his uncle's television repair shop and watch the technicians work on the broken televisions.

Oakley Reservoir no longer spilling into emergency canal

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — Cassia County authorities have stopped sending excess water down the 23-mile emergency spillway that has kept the towns of Oakley and Burley safe during the past three weeks.

The Oakley Canal Co. closed off the Goose Creek channel Friday morning with no plans for using it again, said watermaster Jay Gorrige.

At the same time, officials shut the Oakley Reservoir's other drainage ditches temporarily to repair the main flood gates, he said.

The spillway was scheduled to resume at a relatively low rate this morning, Gorrige said. The reservoir, which is filled close to capacity, still is receiving large amounts of water from Goose Creek and Trapper Creek.

Gorrige said he expects to gradually increase the release of water to about 500 cubic feet a second during the weekend to hold the reservoir level steady.

Part of the excess water will be sent into the company's irrigation network and the rest, about 300 cfs, will be diverted into a second emergency channel carrying water west to Murtaugh Lake, he said.

Cassia county officials had expected to be able to shut the Goose Creek diversion Friday. It was built in four days to save the towns of Oakley and Burley from flooding. It had carried about 700 cfs of the total 1,000 cfs being drained from the reservoir at the peak point of the spilling. Meanwhile, officials for the Salmon River Canal Co. increased Friday the amount of water being released from Salmon Falls Reservoir.

The flow had been cut to 100 cfs. But rains during the past week trimmed use of water for irrigation by farmers, said general manager Larry Ragain.

The company Friday increased the flow being spilled down the Salmon Falls Creek bed to 300 cfs, he said. Officials have been adjusting the flows to try to hold the level of the reservoir even and avoid any overflows.

Both Oakley and Salmon Falls reservoirs have been filled to the brim by unprecedented amounts of water from melting snow in area mountains. Before this year, the Oakley Reservoir only had filled to capacity once back in 1921. The Salmon Falls Reservoir had never filled in its 74-year history.

Railroad spends $8 million to revamp area train lines

GLENN'S FERRY — Union Pacific System will spend more than $8 million to lay new rail and ties on its main line in a 19-mile stretch northwest from Glenn's Ferry.

The project is part of $8 million worth of track renovation scheduled this summer and fall in southern Idaho, said Union Pacific spokesman John Bromley.

Railroad crews will lay 13 miles of new rail and nearly 7,000 ties on the westbound track of Union Pacific's main, double-track line from Glenn's Ferry to a point named Reverse, he said. They also will smooth the roadbed after the track is installed. Union Pacific is gradually replacing old, bolted-joint rails with the continuous, welded rails and is upgrading worn track throughout southern Idaho, Bromley said.

It also is working in neighboring states. The railroad is installing 25 miles of new, welded rail and 12,000 ties in its main line from Elko to Winnemucca through northern Nevada. It plans to put seven miles of new rail into its main line between Huntington and Cobb near the Idaho-Oregon border.

Union Pacific is renovating 22,000 miles of track in 21 states. Other southern Idaho areas will receive new ties as part of the program, the railroad announced.

Ties are being laid between Soda Springs and Blazer and between Arimo and McCammon in southeastern Idaho.

Reusable ties from the main line will replace worn ties on the Conda branch from Soda Springs to Conda and on the Aberdeen branch from Pingree to Aberdeen.

Trackage near Conda, Epco, Fort Hall and Aberdeen in Idaho as well as Ashton, Wyo., will be smoothed this summer.

Kiwanis donate money to Scouts

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Kiwanis Club presented a $1,600 donation to the Snake River Area Council Boy Scouts of America in a ceremony at the Lynwood Shopping Center Friday.

"The money, which will buy a new river raft for the Scouts, was raised in the Kiwanis newspaper recycling project," says Lance Clov, Twin Falls, Kiwanis Club president.

"We would like to express our appreciation to Magic Valley residents for aiding our efforts by recycling their newspapers in the Kiwanis paper bins," said Clov.

The Scouts need to replace two or three river rafts each year, and the contribution will pay for one of these, the years following the One Percent Initiative, the Parks and Recreation Department will return several thousand dollars to tree care next year, Parks and Recreation director Chad Browning has said.

But Seley says an effective program would combine such an effort with the passage of a general tree ordinance. Such an ordinance would address such things as proper pruning and control over the type and size of trees—that can be planted between curb and sidewalk.

Proper pruning is a subject that particularly rankles Seley. Many cities have adopted ordinances saying that pruning of trees along city streets must comply with standards set by the National Association of Arborists, he says.

In Twin Falls, however, many trees are still trimmed as if they were hedges, in hopes they will bush out—a practice that was generally discarded by experts 40 years ago, he says.

One problem with such pruning is that "suckers," which grow back in place of truncated limbs, are never as strong as the originals, he says.

On a tree to be pruned to make it less of an obstruction to the wind, entire branches should be selectively removed so the wind can pass through the tree, he adds.

Although Seley presented the idea of a city-wide tree ordinance at a recent City Council work session, there does not seem to be much favor for it on the council.

Seley recognizes there is in Twin Falls a general attitude against regulation, and he approves of it.

But he says in this case regulation would affect only a few businesses that do tree work in the city. And he says the ordinance would not cause them to lose business, simply educate them how to do it properly.

As with other cities, in the end, it may require a lawsuit as a result of bad tree work to force adoption of such an ordinance.

DuPont Corp. has proven more than 90 percent effective.

The inoculation must be performed once each year by injecting the chemical into the sap-carrying outer wood just above ground level. The tree then draws the chemical up into its "crown," where the disease is most likely to strike first.

When elm trees come in batches, such as in City Park, Seley says his company has been able to inoculate them for as little as $18 to $19 per tree, per acre.

"But this cautions against such quick fixes as inoculation. There is now evidence showing that holes drilled into a tree at its base weaken the tree in the long run, he says.

Eventually, he believes some way must be devised to inject the chemical into the soil so it will be picked up through the roots.

Nevertheless, he maintains that inoculation is effective and definitely has a place in the control of Dutch Elm Disease.

"There may yet be some hope for the remaining Twin Falls elms.

Now when an electronic device, such as a television or radio, breaks at home or at a neighbor's house, Hirst usually gets the call to repair it.

Lately, however, his electronics hobby has taken a secondary position to his love for computers. Having bought a new computer this year, Hirst has been spending most of his free time programming it.

"I spend most of my time either working at Jerome Wheat Company or programming my computer, which doesn't leave much time for electronics," says Hirst.

However, he has found the time to work on a small FM stereo, which he hopes to have completed by the end of the summer. The stereo, measuring two inches wide by two inches long and half-an-inch thick, is smaller than those that are sold in retail outlets, said Hirst.

Although Hirst has not received any offers from companies for his inventions so far, Duracell is now reviewing his full-cup invention to see if they want to market it, said Hirst.

The Duracell contest, which specified that all inventions must be powered by double- or triple-A batteries, picked the winning entries based on energy efficiency, creativity and practicality, says Sarah Mullen of Duracell.

One of 25 fourth-place winners nationwide, Hirst received $100 for his efforts. "Fourth place in the nation is pretty good, but more importantly, I just hope it helps someone," said Hirst.

Hirst will attend the University of Idaho this fall where he will major in electrical engineering.

WHAT GOOD DOES A FUNERAL DO?

Certainly it can do nothing for the person whose life has ended, other than providing the dignity of a proper burial.

What the funeral does help is the living accept the reality of death by taking people gently by the shoulder and turning them to face it.

The service also helps reaffirm the faith, creed, or philosophy by which one's life was guided.

It is truly a moment of sharing for the family... for the friends.

Pastor adds instructor's red belt

Karate teaches traits key to religious service

By APRIL BISHOP Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — Daniel Davis of Hagerman is a study in contrasts. The associate pastor of the Hagerman Christian Center, Davis also holds an instructor's red belt in karate.

Teaching the intricacies of cross-over thrust kicks and knuckle blows in the setting of a church may seem incongruous, but Davis doesn't feel at all awkward with the comparison.

He believes that being a man of God teaches discipline and self control. These qualities are also important for karate.

Davis teaches American self-defense, a mixture of different styles including kempo, chun-ni, aikido, and judo throws. He concentrates on teaching controlling techniques, not just kicks and punches.

He stresses hard work and discipline for his classes. "My students come to work and work hard," he says.

Davis has strict requirements for the students who participate in his classes. The student must maintain a C average, and he checks the report cards in class. The student must never use his skills for anything but self-defense. Davis will not continue to teach any student who uses his knowledge to injure someone purposely.

He says he has never used karate other than in competition. Davis, as a minister, opposes deliberately inflicting bodily harm to another person.

Davis first became interested in full contact karate after a sparring match with Dale "Apollo" Cook, the U.S. Weltgewicht Full Contact Karate Champion, who is rated No. 1 in the world.

He did so well in competition that he won the Central California Point Karate Heavyweight Champion title in 1982.

Davis was scheduled to compete for the California Light Heavyweight title when he became ill with hepatitis. Seven months later, he and his wife, Stephanie, came to Idaho.

Davis says he cannot return to competition because "karate is a very self-centered sport." He believes it is too easy to "take your eyes off of the Lord and put yourself first instead of Him."

Davis decided to teach self-defense at the Christian Center because he "really loves teaching karate." And sports are a good way to reach the young people attending church.

Davis is proud of his students' progress, both in self-confidence and scholastic achievements.

He would like to form a karate demonstration team consisting solely of Christians — that — represent Hagerman Christian Center.

Davis recently traveled to a karate tournament and gave a demonstration. "This title-winning form," the best part was when I gave my testimony and five people stepped forward to accept the Lord," he said.

Donald's day: a 'quacking' good time

Young friends help Donald Duck cut his birthday cake. AP/Lambphoto

NEW YORK (AP) — It was all it was quacked up to be: snappy ragtime bands, a sumptuous birthday feast and the induction into the Screen Actors Guild of the nation's best-known, bad-tempered mallard — Donald P. Duck.

Friday's party came a day before Donald's true 50th anniversary, but it was close enough for the hundreds of children, colleagues and duckophiles who pressed into Manhattan's Rockefeller Plaza to pay homage to the famous fowl.

"He's my favorite duck," said Tony D'Amore, 10, one of 450 youngsters who ducked out of school for the occasion. "He's funny when he talks."

"I like him," said Halima DeCosta, 6. "He's in movies."

The acting avian took the accolades swimmingly, rolling his eyes and snapping his bill on the knee of Clarence "Ducky" Nash, his chief voice-since-their-cartoon-debut-in "The Wise Little Hen" on June 9, 1934. "He says he's quite ageless," said Nash, doing well himself for a 73-year-old man in the midst of a four-day, 14-city whistlestop tour. "He doesn't feel a day older — that's what he told me this morning."

Back in 1918, young Nash, imitating a pet goat, created the voice that Walt Disney was to team years later with his newly designed duck. "Even at the age of 13," Nash recalled, "I had a feeling that voice would mean something to me."

His wife, Margie, felt otherwise. When Disney proposed the project, "I didn't think it would last at all," she said. "Heaven's sakes. Who'd think a talking duck would last for 50 years?"

But the cankerous quacker has lasted, delighting generations of cartoon watchers with his fiery rages, his inspired incompetence and his indefatigable spirit in the face of daunting odds. He has starred in 128 cartoons and appeared in more than 40 other shows.

"To me, the world is just a hat with a brick hidden underneath," Donald — whose middle name is Fauntleroy — said in his official birthday message. "I represent the little man with big ideas who can't quite put them across."

ISU president resigns for Carolina job

MYRON COULTER
College funding advocate

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho State University President Myron Coulter, who battled vigorously over issues of college funding, is resigning to become chancellor of Western Carolina University.

Coulter's resignation, effective July 31, was announced Friday by officials in both Idaho and North Carolina.

The 55-year-old Indiana native has been president of the Pocatello university for the last eight years.

He was one of two finalists considered for the chancellor's post from a field of over 100 applicants, and will succeed H.F. Robinson, who is retiring as chancellor of the school in Cullowhee, N.C.

Coulter was in the public eye earlier this year as he fought unsuccessfully against a state Board of Education funding formula he said was unfair to ISU.

University of North Carolina President William Friday said Coulter's experience "provides an unusually close and fortunate parallel to the development of Western Carolina University, with its emphasis on regional service, the programs it has developed in international education and service, and its broad array of programs in various fields of graduate work."

Clint Hoopes, president of the Idaho Board of Education, said he anticipates a year-long search for a replacement.

Hoopes said Coulter's "dedication to the university, its students, and southeastern Idaho have been exemplary, and President Coulter will be sorely missed."

The board has not decided who will carry out Coulter's responsibilities while a permanent replacement is sought, spokeswoman Kim Phillips said.

Hoopes said the board will promptly appoint a screening committee to begin accepting and reviewing applications as part of a nationwide search for a successor.

A plan for conducting the search will probably be presented to the board for its review when it meets in Rexburg June 21 and 22, Ms. Phillips said.

Coulter, born in Albany, Ind., is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Indiana State Teachers College and has masters and doctoral degrees from Indiana University.

He was one of 15 American university presidents who were delegates in 1981 to the People's Republic of China to negotiate science programs for Chinese graduate students in the United States universities. He has experience in regional university administration, international programs and public education.

Evans selects his first representative at-large

LEWISTON (AP) — A former state legislator has been selected as the first field representative for Gov. John Evans in northern Idaho, a senior assistant to Evans has said.

Patrick Costello said Steven Scanlin, a 1984 University of Idaho Law School graduate, has been selected for the new post.

Scanlin will assume the duties shortly after taking the bar exam in July, he said.

Evans' plans to open field offices at Pocatello and a northern Idaho city — Coeur d'Alene, Moscow or Lewiston — were made public last week.

Costello said Scanlin was chosen for the northern Idaho spot because of his law degree and his legislative experience.

Scanlin was elected to the Idaho

House in 1976 and served two terms before being defeated by Republican Mike Strasser of Nampa in 1980.

Scanlin, 38, said he expects his duties to include representing Evans at meetings, answering questions, trying to resolve problems and determining how residents feel about the issues.

Scanlin disagreed with House Speaker Tom W. Silvers' criticism of Evans' intention to open the field offices, saying, "There isn't the access to the governor's office that he thinks there is."

Silvers, R-Twin Falls, said the offices are unneeded and disputed the governor's contention that they will not cost any more money than having an equal number of aides based at Boise.

Review mixed on computer courses

BOISE (AP) — A study of the nation's public schools shows students in some Idaho school districts have above-average access to computers.

But the survey also revealed Idaho ranks slightly below the national average in the number of schools offering computer instruction.

The study, published last month by Market Data Retrieval, a research firm in Westport, Conn., was based on telephone contact with all 15,275 school districts in the United States.

The Idaho Department of Education disagrees with the Idaho findings.

According to the study, there are 83 students for every microcomputer in Idaho schools that use computers for instruction. Nationally, the ratio is 92 students per computer.

But only 56 percent of the 365 public schools in the state use computers for instruction, while the national average is 68 percent, the study said.

The study also showed that 1,741 microcomputers are in use in Idaho public schools.

Researchers found that in schools using microcomputers for instruction, there are 100 elementary students for every computer in Idaho, compared to 112 nationwide; 101 junior high students per computer in Idaho, compared to 92 nationwide; and 64 senior-high students per computer in Idaho, compared to 77 nationwide.

Other findings of the study:

- Compared to other states and the District of Columbia, Idaho ranks 39th in enrollment, but 41st in the number of microcomputers installed in schools.

- Idaho ranks 26th in the nation in the percentage of public schools using computers for instruction and 22nd in the ratio of students to computers.

- Apple is the most popular brand of instructional computer in the state, making up 32 percent of the total. Radio Shack accounts for 27 percent and Commodore 25 percent.

John W. Briggs, mathematics consultant for the Idaho Department of Education, said a survey conducted in September showed about 2,100 computers in use in 67 of the 115 districts responding to a questionnaire.

A similar survey conducted by the department in 1981 showed only 582 computers in use in the state's public schools, he said.

The Connecticut study comes just before Idaho is to get its first official to coordinate computer education throughout the state. The Department of Education is scheduled to hire a computer consultant in July, when the new fiscal year begins, Briggs said.

He said the department has lacked statewide guidelines for school districts to follow in buying and using computers and software.

"They're not totally without guidance," Briggs said. "There's quite a bit of sharing of information between districts — the ones that don't have any experience with computers often get advice from those that do."

Candidate quits

BOISE (AP) — Boise Democrat Mary Hinson has withdrawn her candidacy for the Idaho House, the secretary of state's office announced.

Hinson, who would have faced incumbent Republican Kathleen Gurnsey in the November race for the District 18 A-A seat, cited personal responsibilities.

She is the fourth legislative candidate to pull out of the November legislative race, the secretary of state's office said.

The Democratic party can appoint another candidate if it wishes.

Priest shows in court on sex charges

BOISE (AP) — A preliminary hearing has been set for July 10 for a Catholic priest and former hospital chaplain on three sex-related charges.

The Rev. Mel Baltazar, 49, who had failed to appear at two previous arraignments in the past two weeks, finally appeared voluntarily in 4th

District Magistrate Court Friday.

Bali was set at $1,500 for the former chaplain at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center on two charges of lewd and lascivious conduct with a teenage boy and a third count of engaging in an infamous crime against nature with a second teenager.

Boise men nabbed in key drug probe

BOISE (AP) — Two Boise men face a June 15 hearing in 4th District Magistrate Court after being charged with conspiracy to deliver cocaine.

Police arrested Benny Ray Hicks, 39, and Dexter Lee Bell, 29, after a three-week investigation by the Major Crimes Division.

Bali was set Friday at $5,000 for Hicks and $500 for Bell.

Authorities provided few details of the probe, saying only that during the investigation officers obtained a quantity of drugs from the two men.

At District 6 rodeo

Stutzman, Heil off to fast start

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE
Times-News writer

ROPERT — Favorites took the early lead Friday in District 6 high school rodeo action after the first go-round at the Malheur County Fairgrounds.

Competitions continue tonight with district championship riding beginning at 8 p.m. A new Sixth District rodeo queen will be announced tonight.

and there will also be a queen's schute breakfast at 9 a.m. at Burley's Price Cafe.

As expected, Twin Falls' Alan Stutzman tops the field headed into the final round in both bareback riding and calf roping. While the first section of bareback riders produced more scratches than completed rides, Stutzman's 62-point performance in the second section was more than good enough for first place. Chad Heeder of Minico and Jeff Stewart of Bull are providing the heat for Stutzman in a virtual tie for second place.

Later in the evening, Stutzman's 30.1-second time in calf roping made up for his missed shot at a steer in the second event of the night. Stutzman was almost three seconds quicker than second-place Jeremy Hutchison of Malta.

There were no surprises in breakaway roping either as Shelley Heil of Castleford turned in a blazing 3.7-second start to hold off Roper's Teena Simper. Simper racked up a 6.0 in her first-go performance.

Castleford's Sherri Gugley posted a 10.8-second mark in the girls' goat tying-to-better R'Nee Monroe, a Twin Falls cowgirl, is followed by a trio of girls who'd like a shot at at least third place. In all, four places are allowed for district competitors in order to advance to state.

The rodeo continued past The Times-News press time, partly due to the fact that the field in both goat tying and barrel racing included more than two dozen entries.

The state high school rodeo will be held later this month at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Piler.

Bareback — 1. Stutzman (Twin Falls) 62; 2. Heeder (Minico) 61; 3. Stewart (Bull) 58.
Calf Roping — 1. Stutzman (Twin Falls) 30.1; 2. Heeder (Minico) 31.7; 3. Stewart (Bull) 33.4.

Breakaway — 1. Shelley Heil (Castleford) 3.7; 2. Teena Simper (Minico) 4.9; 3. Kelly Parke (Bull River) 6.0.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Hundreds of college football players could be declared ineligible this fall because their schools failed to ensure they were enrolled in a specific degree program as required under a new NCAA rule, the Associated Press has learned.

"It's the topic we're most concerned with right now all over the country," Texas Coach Fred Akers said Friday. "Those that aren't concerned about it are not aware of it. Unless we get a new interpretation of the rule, it's unanimous among the coaches that it's going to be a problem."

An NCAA spokesman who asked not to be identified said football players made ineligible this year could number several hundred. However, the policy-making NCAA Council could issue a final interpretation of the legislation next Thursday that would delay implementation of the rule until next year. It now is set to take effect Aug. 1.

The "Satisfactory Progress Rule" specifies that an athlete must be admitted to a specific degree program at the beginning of his third academic year. Most universities require certain courses as prerequisites for admission to upper-division degree programs. Many schools were "apparently caught sleeping at the switch," said an NCAA spokesman, and did not take steps to see that all their players would be ready to meet the requirement.

"When this was passed at the January 1983 convention, it was sort of buried under all the talk and concern about Proposal No. 48, which was also adopted at the same time," recalled an NCAA staffer. He referred to the controversial academic requirements, including minimum scores on standardized tests, which are to become effective Aug. 1, 1986.

"It was done in the interest of academic accountability. It's aimed at those student-athletes who are 'slightly malingers,' who take ceramics and basket-weaving, who take a hodge-podge of courses without direction and without any serious intent of getting a degree."

Celtics' Danny Ainge, left, slaps Kevin McHale's hands as Boston downs Lakers 121-103

Celtics move within game of NBA title

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Larry Bird hit 34 points and 17 rebounds to lead the Boston Celtics to within one victory of their 15th National Basketball Association title with a 121-103 triumph Friday night over the Los Angeles Lakers.

Bird hit 15 of his 20 field-goal attempts in his best game of the best-of-seven series, which the Celtics now lead 3-2. The Lakers, who have lost all seven of their Championship Series appearances against Boston dating back to 1959, play host to the Celtics in Game 6 Sunday.

Playing before a sellout crowd of 14,890 in steamy Boston Garden, where it was 82 degrees on the floor, Bird scored 11 of his points in the pivotal third period. Boston broke away from a two-point halftime edge as Bird and Cedric Maxwell scored all of the Celtics' points during a 13-3 spurt that gave them a 68-56 lead. Bird swished his second three-point basket of the game to top the running which Maxwell had eight of his game total of 13 points.

Nine straight points by the Lakers trimmed Boston's advantage to 68-66 by 6:42 left in the third period. But the Celtics rebuilt the margin to 83-77 when Bird beat the period-ending buzzer with a corner jumper.

Two straight baskets by Bob McAdoo, who had 18 points for the Lakers, cut the deficit to 83-86 with 9:09 left in the game. But that was as close as Los Angeles got as Boston reeled off a 12-1 streak to pull away to an insurmountable 114-83 lead with four minutes left.

Dennis Johnson, added 22 points and Kevin McHale, who played all of the fourth quarter with five fouls, had 19 for the Celtics. James Worthy led Los Angeles with 22 points while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar finished with 19.

Reserve Celtics guard Scott Wedman, who suffered a hairline fracture of the left fibula in Game 4, was unable to play for the Celtics. Referee Hugh Evans was another casualty as he could not work the second half because of dehydration.

The Lakers got five points apiece from Worthy and Michael Cooper in the first 4:32 to open a 12-6 lead, and the margin narrowed between four and six points for the next three minutes.

Then Johnson and Bird, who had eight points apiece in the first quarter, sparked a Celtics rally that gave them their first lead of the game.

Bird, who also had nine rebounds in the quarter, made two straight offensive rebound baskets to cut Boston's deficit to 23-22, then Johnson, hitting only 36.1 percent of his shots in the series, made his fourth consecutive free throw to put the Celtics ahead 26-23.

McHale committed his third foul with one second left in the quarter, but McAdoo missed both free throws to leave the score 26-26 at the buzzer.

Despite the foul trouble, McHale scored eight points and passed to Quinn Buckner for another basket in the first 3:48 of the second period, giving Boston a 38-30 lead. Just 12 seconds later, however, McHale was charged with his fourth foul and sat on the bench for the rest of the half.

But Bird didn't let the momentum stop as he hit three straight baskets, including a three-pointer, then stole the ball and passed to Johnson for another hoop and a 51-43 margin.

The Lakers then scored 10 of the last 14 points of the period, five of them by Worthy, who led Los Angeles with 14 points at halftime. Abdul-Jabbar hit only 4 of 16 field-goal attempts in the half.

Dazzling run knocks three seconds off Koch's own record

By WILLIAM DROZDAK
The Washington Post

ERFURT, East Germany — The packed stadium, stragely listless during last week's national track and field championships, resounded with joy as Marita Koch snuffed the tape, clinching another dazzling performance by East Germany's 1,600-meter women's relay team that knocked more than three seconds off their own world record.

The crowd lapsed back into a sullen torpor and spilled into the neighboring streets, offering quiet testimony to the widespread disappointment here that such exploits will not be reproduced before a world audience at the Los Angeles Olympics.

For East Germany's athletes, the dismay over the boycott is poignant and personal.

Behind the thin facade of support for the government decision to follow Moscow lies a sense of futility about years of arduous training; voided dreams of beating top international rivals and silent finishes to some distinguished careers.

Udo Beyer, who holds the world record in the runner's shirt and was a solid bet to win the gold medal, grimaced when asked about the boycott: "I'm sure that when he heard the news, 'all I could do was to sit down and take a deep breath.'"

Marlies Goehr, the world champion sprinter who was expected to wage a fierce duel with Evelyn Ashford in the 100 meters, stoically doubted the official view that the U.S. organizers could not give adequate guarantees to protect the Eastern bloc athletes from harassment by extremists.

She seemed to feel more awkward in discussing her future. "I will probably stop running in 1986," said Goehr, a 26-year-old sprinter, "and that means I will not participate in another Olympics." She started to explain how she had surprised herself by coming within three hundredths of a second of a world record in the 200 meters on Sunday, as they turned and walked away.

The anger and bitterness toward the boycott decision, an inevitable one given this country's strict adherence to Soviet policy, also were reflected in reports that parents of the athletes walked out of a recent meeting in Leipzig intended to convince them of the dangers their children would have encountered in Los Angeles.

The parents were said to have complained that this year's boycott and the likely political troubles facing the 1988 Games in Seoul would leave their children bereft of motivation to endure the highly rigorous training scheme that has made East Germany a dominant force in swimming and track and field events.

The single-minded national zeal attached to East Germany's sports program is often described as the country's answer to America's quest in land, the first man on the moon.

Children as young as 2 are carefully screened and channeled into sporting events that may best suit their physique and aptitude.

Boarding schools take 6-year-olds and give them long-term training programs adapted to their particular specialty, with basic academic courses taught almost in extracurricular fashion.

An intensive grounding in doctrinaire socialist politics is included in the training regimen.

The 33rd national championships, which concluded Sunday, and were supposed to have served as the Olympic trials, unfolded in a highly charged atmosphere of anti-American vitriol and frequent explosions to justify the boycott.

East German sports representatives have gone to great lengths explaining to the athletes that they faced serious risks of physical harm from right-wing fanatics in Los Angeles. One athlete said he was told he would have to run through a gauntlet of extremists who would make it highly dangerous for him even to reach the arena to participate in his event.

Hockey entry draft beginning

MONTREAL (AP) — The Pittsburgh Penguins will make Mario Lemieux the first selection in the National Hockey League entry draft today. But contract negotiations between the team and Lemieux and his agent have broken down.

"We've been enough already," said Lemieux, who scored 133 goals and 282 assists in 70 games in leading Leval of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League to the Memorial Cup final four. He broke records set by Lafleur, Pierre Larocque and Mike Bossy. "They say it's a fair offer but I want more to secure my future last season, earned the right to begin the draft. The first two rounds of which will be televised in Canada and portions of the United States. They have offered Lemieux a four-year contract but it does not include an attendance clause. Badali, who also represents Wayne Gretzky, and Lemieux want a percentage of the receipts for any increase in attendance for the Penguins.

Coaches push sudden playoff

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Georgia Coach Vince Dooley said Friday that a vote of football coaches attending the NCAA summer meetings indicated a preference for a one-game national championship playoff.

"Since a number of our coaches voted in favor, I would say it's at least a step forward," Dooley said following the two-day meetings of coaches and administrators. "It's quite obvious that the public wants it. It's quite obvious that the news media wants it. And in my personal opinion, I really think it would be good for college football."

However, several others at the meetings said they believe the majority of coaches and policy-makers are opposed to a football playoff.

"The conference commissioners were unanimous in their opposition," said Wayne Duke, commissioner of the Big Ten. "Don't be misled into thinking that we're any closer to having a football playoff."

Temperatures 'cool' Sheehan

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — The 92-degree heat "cooled" off hot-shooting Patty Sheehan, but she still boosted her lead to three strokes Friday after two rounds of the $50,000 McDonald's Kids' Classic.

Sheehan, who carded a tournament record 7 under-par 65 in Thursday's opening round, shot even par 72 Friday for a 36-hole total of 137.

She was three strokes ahead of Sharon Barrett, who also scored a second-round par 72 for a 36-hole total of 140 over the 6,283-yard White Manor Country Club course in suburban Philadelphia.

Castro reaffirms boycott

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro, following a three-hour meeting with Olympic organizer Peter U. Ueberroth in Havana, reaffirmed his country's decision to boycott the Los Angeles Games, the official Cuban news agency reported.

Manuel Gonzalez Guerra, head of the Cuban Olympic Committee, also repeated the country's decision to keep its athletes out of the Games, according to a dispatch by Prensa Latina monitored here.

LARRY FARMER Ex-UCLA head coach STEVE HAYES Seattle reserve center

'Star' teachers named to basketball program

WENDELL — Former UCLA head basketball Coach Larry Farmer and Seattle SuperSonics reserve center Steve Hayes will be guest instructors at the Northwest Basketball Clinic here later this month.

Farmer, who resigned the UCLA job at the end of last season after three years in the post, and Hays, a former Idaho State University star, will be two of the four guest instructors at the week-long clinic.

The clinic is scheduled for June 25-29 in the Wendell High School gymnasium.

Farmer quit the UCLA job at the end of a 17-11 season after the Bruins failed to make the NCAA tournament for the first time in 15 years. Farmer's teams were 21-6 in 1981-82 and 23-6 in 1982-83.

Hays, a 7-foot native of Aberdeen, led ISU to an upset victory over UCLA in the NCAA Western Regional semifinals in 1977. He was drafted the following spring by the New York Knicks of the NBA. After being cut by the Knicks, Hays played for three years in Israel before returning to play brief stints with the Chicago Bulls, San Antonio Spurs, Detroit Pistons and the Cleveland Cavaliers.

He was signed by the Sonics after the 1982-83 season and last season backed up Sonics' center Jack Sikma.

Further information about the clinic can be obtained by phoning Wendell High basketball Coach Larry Gwarney at 336-6234 or Jack Lancaster at 336-6274. Clinic brochures are also available at The Filling Station drive-in in Wendell.

Pro-ladies golf tourney keys on family display

By LARRY HOVEY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The annual Twin Falls Municipal pro-ladies golf tournament turned into a family display Friday when Professional Mike Hamblin and amateur sister Julie topped their division and father Don Hamblin captained his team to victory.

With the course wracked by high winds, Mike Hamblin carded a one-under 67 to lead the pro sweeps, two ahead of Boise's Ron Ptacek and three-up on Bob Eames of Idaho Falls; Don Hunter to Pocatello, and Tracy Frank of Nampa.

Julie Hamblin carded a five-over 77 to win the 9-2 handicap division, topping "Virginia" Undermy of Twin Falls, by two strokes and Caria Schindl of Boise by three.

Don Hamblin's team of Cio Davis, America Brodeen, Yi Young and Julie Blandford won the best-ball division with a 24 under, 110. Kimberlin assistant Doug Mallean and Twin Falls amateurs Judy Tarter, Sandy Tarter, Jame Slickers and Judy Barkley were second at 115 while the Jerome crew of Pro John Peterson and amateurs Justice Messersmith, Grace Bennett, Julie Rediker and Shirley Blake had 115.

Messersmith won the 9-2 division net prize with a 68 while Kella Doyle had 69 and Anita Anacabe of Elko, Nev., and Pat Williams of Twin Falls, had 70s.

In the higher division, Grace Bennett shrugged off being struck in the leg by an errant golf ball to post the low gross score of 88. Anne Williamson and "Phyllis" Taylor of Twin Falls, shared second with 90s while Jane Slickers of Twin Falls was fourth at 92.

In net, Judy Barkley was the leader with a 62, one ahead of America Brodeen, Peggy Longhurst of Elko, Nev., was third at 64 while Shalwa Eames of Idaho Falls, had 66.

Snake River Football Camp begins new year at 2 sites

TWIN FALLS — The second annual Snake River Football Camp will get underway at two sites next week, reports Bill Jones, Twin Falls High School head coach and member of the camp staff.

The camp is designed to teach "the basic techniques and skills for all positions," Jones said.

Helping in that instruction will be four NCAA college players including Darel Tracy of Hebrum, a quarterback at University of Idaho; Carl Keever of Boise, a two-time all-Big Sky Conference linebacker at Boise State; Brent Koetter of Pocatello, a defensive back at Idaho State; and Mike Mann of Gooding, a quarterback and defensive back at Auburn.

The coaching staff will consist of Jones, Jon Jund of Jerome, Forrest Fomesbeck of Valley, Bill Ingram of Twin Falls and Bob Milligan of Gooding.

Jones said the camp is offering split sites and different session starting times for the convenience of area players; He noted the sessions will run from 9:30 a.m. to noon at Twin Falls; 1:30 to 4 p.m. in Jerome, and 6:15-9:15 p.m. in Twin Falls.

Jones said wherever possible the camp committee would prefer to have junior high campers (seventh through ninth grade) in the Twin Falls morning or Jerome afternoon sessions. The evening session will be reserved as much as possible for high school players.

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

"There are two times in a man's life when he should not speculate: when he can't afford it and when he can."

When declarer's trumps are strong but not long, he should not speculate on even breaks. Better to choose a safer road to make a game. West led his spade, king, and South ruffed impudently. Next, he tried to split the trumps 3-3, but there was no luck there. (West's pre-empt virtually guaranteed an uneven trump split.) Four minor suit winners were now available on the run, but when East ruffed South's fourth club, he then led a spade and West's long suit took the remaining tricks for down two.
