President Reagan shows Britain's Prime Minister Thatcher a model of planned space station

By MAUREEN SANTINI AP White House correspondent

LONDON — President Reagan and his six colleagues at the economic summit urged speedy renewal of nuclear arms control talks Saturday, telling the Soviet Union that the United States is ready to bargain "anywhere, at any time, without preconditions."

While thousands of anti-nuclear demonstrators massed in the streets of London in an effort to disrupt the summit finale, the leaders of the seven major industrial democracies also joined in a denunciation of international terrorism and called for an end to attacks on oil tankers in the Persian Gulf.

Soviet reaction to the arms talks appeal was swift and negative. The Kremlin's official Tass news agency said it showed only that the Western leaders "intend to continue the position-of-strength policy."

In a separate economic communique, the chiefs of state of the United States, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Canada and Japan also expressed concern about the impact of high interest rates on the world economic recovery — and especially the debt-burdened Third World. The final communique, read by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, the summit host, in London's 15th century Guildhall, was short of draft language praising Reagan's efforts to curb U.S. budget deficits, a mild rebuke that betrayed backstage "disension" over his economic policies.

The leaders, partly in deference to Reagan's re-election campaign, delicately avoided blaming the United

Summit at a glance

LONDON (AP) — Here is a summary of some of the documents and statements issued Saturday at the close of the London Economic Summit:

FINAL COMMUNIQUE: The 12-page document expresses concern that high interest rates threaten economic recovery. It does not propose any change of general economic policy but urges that debtor countries be rewarded with longer-term loans if they are reforming their economies. The leaders emphasize the need to keep the economic recovery on track without igniting inflation.

DECLARATION OF DEMOCRATIC VALUES: The statement is the first of kind to reach economic summits. In it, the governments affirm their belief in the rule of law, with respect for individual rights and liberties, free elections, and the importance of negotiations to resolve international conflicts.

DECLARATION ON EAST-WEST RELATIONS AND ARMS CONTROL: The statement emphasizes the need for solidarity among the democracies and says they are determined to seek dialogue with the Soviet Union, especially through arms control negotiations.

STATEMENT ON THE IRAN-IRAQ CONFLICT: The summit leaders urge a negotiated solution to the long war and express "deep concern at the mounting toll in human suffering." After considering the conflict's implications for world oil supplies, the leaders say they've determined the existing system "has both the will and the capacity to cope with any foreseeable problems."

States for high interest rates, but there was no mistaking their deep concern over the threat to the world economy if those rates are not reduced.

"You understand it was difficult for us to publish a text which could have embodied government which is present here and is in the middle of a pre-election campaign," French Finance Minister Jacques Delors told reporters.

Nevertheless, De'ors said, U.S. interest rates were the "most difficult" issue of the three-day conference. The prime lending rate of major U.S. banks now hovers at 12.5 percent.

As the summit leaders ended their final session at Lancaster Park, near the city of London, thousands of banner-waving demonstrators marched the two miles from nearby Hyde Park to Trafalgar Square in London.

School stuck between funding woes, raises

By ANNETTE CARY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — So why is the Twin Falls School District crying for money?

Already this year: • The Legislature earmarked money for raises for teachers.

• Lawmakers allocated more money for school operations.

• Twin Falls voters agreed to raise their property taxes by $634,550 to pay for textbooks and repairs.

So why is the district planning to siphon off the state money targeted for raises so it can instead hire more teachers, pay for more substitutes and hire a high-level administrator to replace a low-level one?

THIS IS the question teachers raise in response to the district's offer of an average 6-percent wage hike from the specially appropriated money. The teachers had expected at least twice that figure.

The answer is that the district's budget is still plagued by financial woes of past years. School administrators say the budget simply will not stretch farther. Part of the problem is that the $275,000 increase the district should receive from the state according to admittedly modest estimates — is the only increase in two years. That's about a 2-percent hike per year — no match for the rising cost of keeping classrooms warm and textbooks current.

But last year, and the two years before, the district did not trim its level of spending to match appropriations that failed to keep pace with inflation. To the dismay of auditors, the district dipped into money the school had invested after the sale of the original O'Leary Junior High School and the Washington Elementary School property.

During the fiscal year that ends this summer, the district spent $300,000 of that money to pay for items Superintendent James Sawin had underbudgeted, including six teaching positions. This expense exceeds the general increase the district is expecting to get from the state in the coming year.

And the district won't be able to lean on the state fund as much, because it's almost gone. The fund that totalled more than $1 million at the start of the '80s has been gouged to $150,000, according to Superintendent Gary Piller.

At the same time, the district has more expenses. It will hire one part-time and two full-time kindergarten teachers to ease overcrowding in elementary schools.

It also will hire three teachers to meet stiffer high school graduation requirements and an additional counselor to beef-up career information services and fulfill state recommendations. And it will have the cost on paper of the six teachers left off the last budget.

Those moves will cost $183,000 — a good bit of the revenue increase that the school can use as it chooses. It's not difficult to see why the administrators feel trapped and therefore want to tap a substantial chunk of the teacher-salary appropriation to pay for additional staff.

It also is not difficult to see why the teachers feel cheated by the administration's proposals. They feel if they do not receive substantial raises this year, they probably never will.

Aides: Bloodbath looms in gulf area

By R. GREGORY NOKES AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Iran faces probable defeat in a horrible bloodbath if it mounts a human-wave offensive against vastly superior firepower in southern Iraq, a prospect that may be giving pause to Iran's religious leaders, U.S. analysts say.

Iran already has delayed its anticipated assault for more than two months, even though it has deployed up to 500,000 troops along its border with Iraq, most of them in the south where an attack long has been regarded as imminent.

But Iranian President Ali Khamenei signaled a possible end to the stand-off, saying Friday that all of the nation's trained soldiers must be prepared for mobilization. Tehran radio added Saturday that "Iran's brave youth are continuing to leave for the battlefield" in large numbers.

State Department and Pentagon officials, who insisted on anonymity, said it appears an intense debate over strategy is under way in Iran among religious and military leaders, with the military arguing that sending ill-prepared troops into a new human-wave attack would invite disaster and bring no gain.

"If they live up to past history, the Iraqis would spread them all over the ground," said a State Department specialist on the Middle East. "I've stopped predicting when it will happen, or even if it will."

But, the officials said, even if there is a shift in tactics to more conventional warfare, the 3½-year-old war is sure to continue. And they did not rule out a mass assault at any time.

Iraq set to assault economic sites — A9

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said in London on Friday. "All I know is that the Iranians keep talking as though they're about to launch one, but they haven't done so as yet."

Analysts have not detected any of the large-scale logistical movements recently that would signal such an attack, even though the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini warned that the "epic day" is at hand.

Another indication that Iran may be re-evaluating its prospects, the officials said, is the "surprisingly muted" response by Iran to the downing of an Iranian jet by Saudi Arabian aircraft over the Persian Gulf on Tuesday. They said both Iran and the Saudis seem to be playing down the incident.

In addition, Iran has succeeded in restoring its oil exports from the Kharg Island terminal to normal levels despite Iraqi attacks on its shipping, a State Department official said. He speculated this might induce Iran to cease its retaliatory strikes against Saudi and other nations' tankers in the gulf. "The official expelled the Iranian strategy of offering its oil at discounts of up to $3 a barrel for making it worthwhile for ship owners to risk Iraqi attack."

Rains cause floods, force people from homes Thunderstorms trail twisters in Plains

By ROGER PETERSON The Associated Press

A new onslaught of rain-laden thunderstorms caused flooding Saturday in the Midwest, forcing people from their homes, stranding two people on a street sign for hours and floating away cars in the wake of killer tornadoes that devastated two small towns.

On one side of the thunderstorms, a mass of hot air broiled the Northeast with record temperatures near 100, while to the west, the waterlogged Colorado Rockies shivered with more June snow and Winter Park, Colo., greeted the ninth day of June with a low of 23 degrees.

During the night thunderstorms dumped heavy rain from Kansas to Illinois with many places getting more than 3 inches, and hailstones the size of golf balls fell across parts of Kansas. Olathe, Kan., got an even 8 inches of rain in 24 hours. Soldier, Kan., got an unofficial 5 inches during the night, for a four-day total of 13.5 inches.

"We expect this system to be hanging over the Midwest for a day or two more. There is the potential for more severe weather before this thing moves east," Hugh Crowther, a meteorologist with the National Storm Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said early Saturday.

The storm system had spawned more than 50 tornadoes since Thursday from Oklahoma to Wisconsin, and 16 people were killed.

Up to 200 people were forced from their homes in Overland Park, Kan., by flooding, estimated Police Lt. Phil Barbour.

Indian Creek spilled from its banks from Overland Park south to Olathe, sweeping cars as much as two blocks and flooding numerous homes, said police Capt. John Roun.

Two teen-age girls caught by racing water climbed a street sign along a flooded Overland Park street for seven hours before being pulled to safety about 7 a.m.

Police tried to use scuba gear to rescue the girls, and finally had to use the Lenexa Police Department's 20-ton, tracked armored personnel carrier to bull through the 5-foot-deep current.

"They were pretty glad to see us," said Lenexa police Maj. George Barton. "They looked extremely frightened and fatigued when we got to them ... but they were OK."

Keyna Baalman, a dispatcher in Colby, Kan., said 55-mph wind and hail caused extensive damage to school barns and farmhouses outside the city Saturday, and wind knocked down numerous trees and power lines.

Jackson Lake Dam report out
 BOISE (AP) — The Interior Department has released a draft environmental impact statement on proposed improvements to the safety of Jackson Lake Dam.
 The dam on the Snake River in Grand Teton National Park was built in 1916 as part of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation system for irrigation of southeastern Idaho.
 Federal officials have said failure of the dam during an earthquake could cause catastrophic flooding.
 Safety projects described in the impact statement include rebuilding the existing dam, and studying alternative calls for lowering the reservoir capacity and compensating holders of rights to water no longer stored.

Man guilty of moving aliens
 PRESTON (AP) — Franklin resident Alan Thompson has pleaded no contest to a grand jury indictment charging him with three counts of transporting illegal aliens into the United States.
 Franklin County Sheriff Dean Gunnell said the plea was made Friday before U.S. District Judge Martin Callahan in Pocatello. Sentencing has been scheduled for June 18.
 Thompson and three illegal aliens were arrested in April by Deputy Sheriff Don Beckstead at the Preston Airport shortly after Thompson landed his airplane.
 "Deputy Beckstead was notified early by Cache County (Utah) authorities that an anonymous caller had reported a plane load of illegal aliens was being flown into the area," Gunnell said.

Farmer pulls man from flames
 KUNA (AP) — A Kuna dairy farmer was eating a mid-morning snack here when he says he heard a crash.
 He ran outside Friday and saw a burning truck. He pulled the driver, Lawrence Stanley Thompson, 19, Boise, to safety, although Thompson suffered third-degree burns over 35 percent of his body.
 "Everything happened so quick I really didn't notice how much fire there was," said Raymond Perez, 48. "The only thing on my mind was helping that guy."
 Thompson was transferred late Friday night to the Intermountain Burn Center, Salt Lake City.

Ada County Deputy Sheriff Jim Ferrite said Thompson's pickup struck a wooden bridge railing. The pickup rolled onto its left side, slid 200 feet and burst into flames.
 Perez, a father of six, was not hurt, but his wife said he also "kind of went into shock" about an hour after the accident.

Letter arrives nine years late
 REXBURG (AP) — Duane Wilding says he could have walked from Rexburg to Pocatello in less time than it took a letter to go from one city to the other.
 Two weeks ago, the Rexburg gun shop operator received a letter mailed in April 1965. It had been opened and stapled shut.
 "I don't know where the hell it's been or what's happened," Wilding said.
 The letter was mailed when postage cost a nickel; Lynn Johnson was the nation's president; Willie Maya hit 52 home runs; and Medicare began covering the bills of sick Americans.

Girl blinded by sun's eclipse
 RACINE, Wis. (AP) — A 15-year-old girl who stared at the sun during the entire May 30 eclipse said Saturday she was waiting to see whether some of her damaged vision will return.
 Kristen Rowlands spent about 1 1/2 hours watching the shadow cross the sun without anything protecting her eyes. She said her eyes gave her no sign of damage immediately after the partial eclipse.
 "It was really cool... I didn't realize anything was wrong with my eyes until the next day," she said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "I couldn't read and the centers of people (she looked at) were all blurred out."

Gas prices reported as stable
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline storage tank operators are "working the bottoms of their tanks," indicating they believe supplies will remain stable despite the Persian Gulf war between Iran and Iraq, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg said Saturday.
 "Any time Persian Gulf developments signal the likelihood of a serious shortage, the holders of storage will start stocking up," Lundberg said in an interview. "As long as it does not seem too hazardous, the holders of storage will be destocking."
 Gas prices in Lundberg's most recent survey of 15,000 service stations across the country, dropped 16 cents in the last two weeks at the retail level and 46 cents at the wholesale level.

Lucky winner signs bad checks
 PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A man who won a $4.4 million state lottery jackpot in September now faces charges of writing bad checks, police said Saturday.
 Raymond Lenox, 40, of Philadelphia, was arraigned on fraud charges Wednesday and allowed to sign his own bond on $100,000 bail.
 "I figured he was good for the money," Municipal Judge Alan Silberstein said.

Burley native is Miss Idaho

BOISE (AP) — A nursing student from Burley who has girlhood memories of getting John Wayne's autograph in the San Juan Islands was the 1984 Miss Idaho crown at the annual pageant here.
 Blond, blue-eyed Miss Mini-Casala Patty Hoag was the talent portion of the contest Saturday at the Capital High School auditorium. The Boise State University student appeared before judges in a hula hula evening gown and a turquoise swimsuit.

The new Miss Idaho and her runner-up will share some $4,000 in college scholarships. Miss Hoag will be an entrant in the Miss America pageant and will serve as Idaho's unpaid, official hostess for one year. Her prizes include a mink jacket and the loan of a car.
 She succeeds Elaine Pack of Rexburg, who plans to study at Brigham Young University.
 The first runner-up in the 1984 contest is Miss Eastern Idaho Beverly Beus, 20, a Rexburg resident studying interior design at Richs College.

 She was followed by Miss Idaho National Guard Leslie Ann Mauldin, 21, Jerome, a vocal performance student at BYU; Miss Idaho Falls LuAnn Reed, 19, a BYU linguistics student; and Miss Washington County Cyndi Grate, 19, Weiser, a University of Colorado student studying international finance.

Speaker: Libertarians key to taxes

BOISE (AP) — Libertarians can hasten the demise of taxes in America, but the job won't be accomplished instantly, said a speaker at the Libertarian Party's state convention here.
 Libertarian vice-presidential candidate Jim Lewis told the 25 convention participants they can educate their children privately, refuse to pay taxes and begin to turn public services over to private industry.

 Lewis was one of three speakers on a taxation panel at the Saturday convention.

The Hartford, Conn., man said citizens' unpopularity with the tax system has been evident during his campaign throughout the United States.
 "This tax rebellion is full-blown, going full blast around the country," Lewis said.

 Britain's Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament claimed that 100,000 people participated. Police said there were 50,000 marchers.
 A separate group of anti-nuclear demonstrators lay down in The Mall, the broad thoroughfare in front of Lancaster House, in an attempt to besiege the summiters. Police dragged 80 of them off to arrest and kept the road clear.

Other arrests were made at a sit-down protest outside the U.S. Embassy on Grosvenor Square a mile away from Lancaster House. An estimated 3,000 demonstrators virtually blockaded the embassy at one point, lying in the street before police dispersed them.

The protest centered on the NATO decision to deploy 572 American-built Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe beginning last December. The deployment, which is to be carried out over the next five years, prompted the Soviet Union to abandon the Geneva nuclear arms reduction talks with the United States.
 "The summit declaration on East-West relations said in part: 'The United States has offered to re-start nuclear arms control talks anywhere, at any time, without preconditions.'" raising each teacher's pay by an average of $2,000. While teachers were busy spending $2,000 in their minds, the district proposed average raises of far less.

 Although the Legislature intended the money to bring teachers' salaries closer to the national average, the administrators plan to use part of the special appropriation to cover the standard raise every teacher across the nation receives for another year of experience.
 The total administration package is 74 percent of the allotted money targeted by the Legislature for teachers' raises.

legislative bill clearly states the money is to be used "specifically for increasing salaries of certificated personnel."

Not only are board members worrying about how to meet the money crunch in the coming year, they are looking forward to the year after. By then the new elementary school built to ease overcrowding should be completed. The district will have to come up with around $400,000 to pay more teachers if the taxpayers are to get the full benefit of their investment.

Consequently, the district's plan raises some sticky legal questions. There has been much talk among the teachers about suing the district if they do not get the full appropriation to wage increases. After all, the

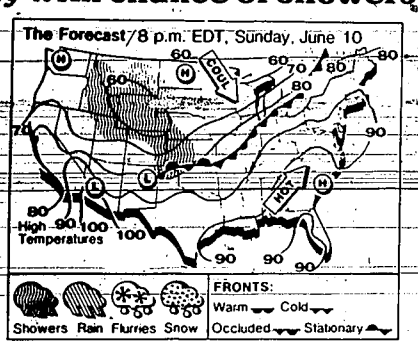

But Sen. John Barker of Buhl, a key supporter of the teacher-raise bill, says the key to Idaho's educational system is local control. It is up to each local school board, not the Legislature, to decide how much money to pay teachers, he says.

That problem worries administrators, and offers one more reason for a tough stance in negotiations this year.
 Although negotiations are stalled now, the teachers will have an opportunity to talk to the school board about their raises and district finances Tuesday. The district has scheduled a budget hearing, which Twin Falls Education officials are urging teachers to attend in the district administration building at 8 p.m. The public also may attend.

String of bombs leads to blast, arrest

By JEFF BAENEN
The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — A 24-year-old man injured in an explosion in his car at an Iowa shopping center was charged Saturday with possession of bomb parts after officials arrested him in connection with the discovery of more than 20 bombs in three states, a federal prosecutor said.

Earl Steven Karr was charged with illegal possession of an unregistered firearm in connection with the discovery of pipe bomb parts in his Minneapolis rooming house room, said U.S. Attorney James M. Rosenbaum.

In a news conference, Rosenbaum said Karr may face further charges in Wisconsin and Illinois, the other states where bombs were found. Five people were hurt in the blasts which occurred since early May.

"We have no evidence to indicate that he had an accomplice or was working with part of any organized group," Rosenbaum told reporters, adding that there was no immediate indication of a motive.

The prosecutor said Karr had been living at the rooming house a short time but declined to say whether the man had an address elsewhere.

"He was quiet person who kept to himself," said a spokeswoman for the Paige Hall boarding house. She declined to be identified or comment further.

"The final break in the case came yesterday, when there was an explosion in a parking lot near a restaurant in Mason City, Iowa," Rosenbaum had said earlier in a prepared statement.

Rosenbaum said items seized in the man's car appear to match items used to make bombs which were placed in cities in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Illinois since May 25.

Rosenbaum said search warrants were obtained to seize other devices or parts that could be used in bomb manufacturing from the suspect's Minneapolis home, and in addition "there were materials suitable for personal disguise."

The man injured in the Mason City blast was transferred Friday to the burn center at St. Paul-Ramsey Medical Center in St. Paul, Minn., where he was listed in serious condition Saturday with first and second degree burns on his arms and face.

"His face and arms were like raw hamburger. There was lots of blood and his hair was completely singed," said Daniel Oelke, manager of the Mason City restaurant outside of which the blast occurred. The young man got out of the car but "didn't say a word," Oelke said.

Oelke said he was about five feet from the car when he noticed at his feet a piece of pipe six or eight inches long, wrapped with masking tape with a copper wire protruding at one end and a battery attached. Police quickly cordoned off the area, he said.

"We are optimistic that the apprehension will terminate this series of senseless bombings," Rosenbaum said. "We have no indications of any organized groups being responsible."

Author levels charge: John Paul I slain

LONDON (AP) — Pope John Paul I, who reigned for 33 days in 1978, was murdered because he intended to crack down on corruption in the Vatican, according to a Sunday newspaper report here.

The weekly Observer said that British author David Yallop makes the allegation in a book to be published Thursday and he believes that the pontiff was poisoned.

Yallop writes that members of the secret Italian Masonic lodge P2, which purportedly had links with the Vatican bank and also the Banco Ambrosiano, were involved in the pope's death. Banco Ambrosiano, Italy's largest private bank, was liquidated by the government in August 1982 following a financial scandal that touched on investments by the Vatican bank.

Yallop's book, "In God's Name," is being issued by Jonathan Cape, a long-established publishing house. Neither the author nor the publishers could be reached for comment early Sunday.

"The Vatican report on the death of John Paul I on Sept. 29, 1978, said he was found dead in his bed by his private secretary at 5:30 a.m. and had suffered a heart attack around 11 p.m. the previous evening."

Hart ideas lost amid questions of experience

By MIKE SHANAHAN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Somewhere between the pristine mountains of New Hampshire and the shimmering beaches of California, Gary Hart's message of "truth, new ideas and common sense" leadership gave way to concern about his experience, beliefs, voice and character.

Many of his military intrigues and exploits in the field, which he described through the long, grueling primary process that Mondale was not the most electrifying candidate, he was — after all — the safer choice.

Hart had an aura of a man officially to drop out of the race for the presidential nomination before the Democratic National Convention, open July 16.

He argued that he was primaried in every region of the country and trailed Mondale only narrowly in the popular vote nationwide.

But allies concede privately that only a miracle could put the Colorado senator back into serious contention.

"What went wrong? How did a presidential candidate who seemed so unbeatable after a burst of early, upset victories in New England and Florida slip of track?

"Mondale did a lot of things right," said one senior Hart campaign official who requested anonymity.

"The thing that people liked about Gary Hart was that he was new and young," said the official.

"Mondale did to the flip side of that, which is if you are young, you may be inexperienced, and you may be unsteady."

"In the short run," said the official, "He (Hart) just makes people a little nervous."

Rocket, satellite out of control; NASA baffled

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A new "stretched" model of the Atlas-Centaur rocket, lifted on schedule at 4:33 p.m. EDT and everything went well for 23 minutes when suddenly the Centaur upper stage went out of control. The launch control center reported the Centaur and the attached satellite were tumbling.

A new "stretched" model of the Atlas-Centaur rocket, lifted on schedule at 4:33 p.m. EDT and everything went well for 23 minutes when suddenly the Centaur upper stage went out of control. The launch control center reported the Centaur and the attached satellite were tumbling.

John Gibbs, Atlas-Centaur project manager, told a news conference an hour after the failure that officials don't know what went wrong.

"If we have this wrapped up in six weeks to two months we'll be doing well," Gibbs said, adding that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration would have to analyze data relayed from the rocket.

The two attached vehicles were in an orbit ranging from 83 miles to 759 miles above the Earth, NASA officials reported. The intent was to place the satellite in a stationary orbit 22,300 miles high.

Officials said eventually the rocket and satellite would burn up from friction because of the low orbit, but NASA could not estimate when.

The failure occurred when the rocket was in contact with a tracking station on Ascension Island in the South Atlantic. It would take several days to fly the data tapes back from the island; NASA said a review board has been set up to study the failure.

Thousands of Israelis decry war in Lebanon, extremism

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Tens of thousands of Israelis gathered in downtown Tel Aviv Saturday night to protest Israel's two-year-old war in Lebanon and Jewish extremism in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Demonstrators with banners and placards marched to the Kings of Israel Square for a two-hour rally organized by the anti-war group Peace Now.

Peace Now spokesman Tsall Reshet estimated the crowd at 50,000. The assistant police commissioner, David Kraus, declined to give a figure in line with his department's policy to avoid political involvement.

The demonstration ended peacefully.

"It's on the second anniversary of the war in Lebanon" I marched June 8, 1982, said Reshet, "and it's in protest of the whole adventure in Lebanon."

One sign read "583," the number of Israeli soldiers killed in Lebanon since the invasion.

Many of the protest signs denounced the activities of ultra-nationalist Jewish settlers in the West Bank. Twenty-seven Israelis, most of them settlers, were recently arrested in connection with an underground terror organization that carried out attacks against Palestinians.

It was the largest anti-war rally since February, when 30,000 to 50,000 demonstrators gathered in Jerusalem.

In another development, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said in an interview on Israel Radio that he may propose an expanded role for U.N. peacekeepers in Lebanon when he meets U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar this week.

Time to get tougher on drunken driving

A bit at a time, government groups, and presumably the American people they represent, are coming to terms with the seriousness of the drunken driver problem.

But all the state legislation in the world isn't going to have as much effect as a proposed federal law that would withhold federal highway funds from states which don't raise their drinking age to 21.

Nationally, there are 22 states which require people to be 21 to buy alcohol.

The rest, including Idaho which sets the age at 19, have lower ages.

The result is a patchwork pattern in which young people cross state borders to buy liquor, and the consequences of that is a national slaughter of young people on the roads. An estimated 5,000 teenagers a year are killed in drunken driving accidents annually and thousands of others are injured.

Until quite recently, most states set the legal alcohol buying age at 21. But a wave of "if he's old enough to fight and vote, he's old enough to drink" thinking in the 1960s and 1970s led many states to lower their law. But many observers have reluctantly concluded that this experiment in responsibility for young people has not worked and needs to be revised.

Ideally, each of the states would come to the conclusion to set a standard age for alcohol purchasing in America. Absent that, however, we think it is thoroughly appropriate for Congress to take the lead in this area and try to "encourage" the states to act, as the House did this week by approving the funds proposal.

Some will say that state's rights ought to govern here, that Congress has no business in telling a state how it should set behavior. Similar battles over the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit, similar some protests, and even some resentful state legislation, in a few Western states.

But these kinds of restrictions, and the resulting loss of "freedom" need to be measured against the potential public good of the proposed laws. To our way of thinking, standardization of state alcohol-purchase laws would go a long way to reduce the highway slaughter of drunken young drivers.

The voluntary approach has not worked. Maybe it's time to get tougher.

Navy is limited in Persian Gulf area

Norman Polmar

The largest symbol of U.S. political-military power in the Persian Gulf region may not be able to play a direct role in the current crisis. The 81,000-ton aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk is operating south of the gulf, the core of a battle group including cruisers, destroyers and frigates. On its decks are about 85 of the most advanced combat aircraft in the world, and in its magazines are many tons of bombs, rockets, guided missiles and nuclear weapons.

The Kitty Hawk — one of the Navy's 14 large carriers — is part of a blue-water fleet intended to clear the seas of hostile naval forces and carry out strikes against enemy shore targets. Our carrier battle groups are highly flexible, able to fight effectively at various levels of conflict, but major difficulties exist in U.S. naval forces protecting tankers and the coast of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates.

Carriers need sea areas of several thousand square miles to maneuver for launching and recovering aircraft, and for effective use of their defensive sensors and weapons. Further, land-based patrol and reconnaissance aircraft are invaluable in supporting a battle group. In the gulf, however, a carrier would encounter severe maneuvering difficulties. In this environment the protection of merchant tankers by U.S. naval forces will be difficult, probably impossible.

Nevertheless, our naval forces in the region do serve as a statement of U.S. political support for the more stable nations (especially Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates). And they have the capability of carrying out potential intensive air strikes against Iranian targets, either for deterrence or for reprisal.

The Kitty Hawk carries almost 90 tactical aircraft: 24 F-14A supersonic fighters, 24 A-7E light attack aircraft, 10 A-1J all-weather attack aircraft, 10 S-3 anti-submarine aircraft and 6 SH-3 anti-submarine helicopters, plus four each of several types of special mission aircraft: KA-6D tankers, EA-6B electronic jamming aircraft and E-2C radar warning aircraft.

This is a potent, multipurpose air wing. However, as long as the Kitty Hawk remains outside the gulf, distances from the area where it is able to operate to the gulf oil ports and tanker holding areas are too great for a single carrier to be able to sustain the air patrols necessary to protect the tankers. Given those limitations, the primary military responsibility for protecting tankers in the gulf, as well as the Saudi and Kuwaiti coastlines, will fall to land-based fighter and reconnaissance aircraft, supported by radar aircraft such as the E-3 AWACS and by flying tankers that can extend the endurance of fighters.

The best defense against mines is helicopters and minesweeping craft. The U.S. Navy has no minesweeping craft in the area, but Navy RH-53D minesweeping helicopters could be flown out to the area based ashore.

The carriers themselves are virtually immune to damage from Iraqi or Iranian forces if the U.S. naval force is astutely handled. The distances are too great for Iraq to threaten the carriers with air strikes. And the carrier's aircraft, missiles of escorting ships and close-in weapons on the carrier form a defensive "bubble." Thus protected, the U.S. naval force should be able to detect the relatively small-scale missile or bombing attacks that could be launched against the fleet by Iran. None of the gulf nations have submarines.

The two other types of U.S. naval forces in the Indian Ocean also suffer from severe operational limitations. There is an amphibious task force of several ships carrying a reinforced battalion of about 1,800 Marines that can be landed by amphibious tractors, landing craft and helicopters. This Marine unit is limited in its capabilities by its small size, its small number of tanks and heavy guns and its restricted mobility once ashore. But, like the carrier force, the Marine landing force can land quickly and provide a visible demonstration of U.S. intentions. Another available force is the Rapid Deployment Joint Task Force — a dozen merchant-type ships located at Diego Garcia (2,000 miles from the Persian Gulf) carrying vehicles, weapons, munitions and supplies for two brigades of Marines (about 25,000 men). The troops would be flown from the United States to a Persian Gulf country, 8,000 miles by air, and be "married" to the equipment in the ships.

Clearly, U.S. naval forces off the Persian Gulf have limited capabilities for protecting the chain of oil tankers on which Western Europe and Japan are heavily dependent. Their real function is more of a political statement. Since 1946, when the battleship Missouri entered the Dardanelles to deter Soviet attempts to subjugate Greece and Turkey, the Navy has been the primary force by which we project political as well as military power overseas.

Due to all the limitations that U.S. forces would encounter in the area, the Persian Gulf may represent one of the few international crises outside Central Europe in which naval forces will not play a primary role. Nevertheless, the presence of U.S. naval forces outside the gulf demonstrates the importance of the region to the United States and our allies.

Hart's challenge is less ideological, more threatening

William Schneider

The process of selecting the 1984 Democratic presidential nominee has gone backwards. It began in consensus and ended in confusion.

Back on Feb. 20, voters in the Iowa precinct caucuses supported Walter Mondale 3-to-1 over his nearest rival and eliminated John Glenn, the candidate considered most likely to give the former vice president trouble.

Mondale appeared to have the nomination sewn up.

From then on, everything unraveled. Last Tuesday, the campaign's biggest single day of voting, produced the greatest range of results. Mondale blitzed Gary Hart in New Jersey, where the Colorado senator did not win a single delegate. Hart countered with a convincing victory in California, winning 10 delegates. On the last day of the campaign, Hart won three states and 240 delegates; Mondale won two states and 209 delegates. Jesse Jackson came in third in all five states, and managed to pick up 37 delegates.

These results encouraged Jackson and Hart in their belief that the momentum of the campaign is against rather than with Mondale. They think that his delegate strength has peaked at a bare majority and can now be pushed down. They intend to argue that he is weak and unelectable and that he has acquired his delegates unfairly through tainted campaign funds and rules that modify strict proportionality in delegate allocation). Their persistence in this belief can explain, at least in part, by adding up all 17.5 million Democratic presidential primary votes cast this year. Here's what you get: Mondale 39 percent, Hart 36 percent, and Jackson 10 percent. Far from tying things together, what the nominating process did was create a lot of loose ends.

What are the prospects for tying them up in San Francisco next month? The answer is, they are considerably better in the case of Mondale and Jackson than in the case of Mondale and Hart. Consider the nature of the division between the three candidates' voters. At the end of the primary campaign last week, Mondale's weakes were exactly the same as they were at the beginning: Black voters were going strongly for Jackson, while young, upscale, and independent voters consistently supported Hart (that was true even in New Jersey, where otherwise went strongly for Mondale). In other words, Mondale was having trouble with the strongest Democratic partisans (blacks) and the weakest Democratic partisans (young, upscale, and independent voters).

The issue between them is, essentially, the lesson of 1980, when Jimmy Carter, the Democratic incumbent, went down to disastrous defeat at the hands of Ronald Reagan. Did that election demonstrate the failure of the Democratic Party's "old ideas"? To many, including Mondale, the answer is obviously no. They believe that nothing has happened to discredit the Democrats' traditional commitment to using the power of government to protect the poor and the disadvantaged against economic adversity. Carter failed, in this view, because he was not a "real Democrat." He did not live up to this commitment.

Jackson also believes that the Democratic Party failed because it never really tried to live up to that commitment. He sees Mondale as another Carter, ready to compromise the party's principles by governing from the center. Jackson doesn't want to change the party's faith. Like a good Baptist minister, he wants to purify it. Hart's view, by contrast, is dramatically revisionist. He and many other Democrats believe that Reagan has transformed the agenda of American politics. The Democrats cannot go on defending "big government" as if 1980 never happened.

Basically, Hart's notion is that his party must retain its ideals (fairness, social justice) but change its methods (commitment to government power and accommodating special interests within its coalition).

In fact, it is Reagan more than anyone else who created the Democrats' divisions. Blacks feel deeply threatened by his anti-government conservatism, and their response to his election, and particularly to the 1982 recession, has been to mobilize against him. Blacks have a strong faith in the federal government, which has protected them and advanced their interests. Ever since Reagan's election, black voter registration and turnout have been going up all over the country. The parade was already marching down the street when Jackson stepped in front to lead it. The aim of the black movement is, very simply, to root out Reaganism.

Young, affluent, and independent voters do not feel nearly so threatened by Reagan, and they do not share traditional Democrats' faith in government power. In fact, the economic recovery played no small role in Hart's success this year. Polls of Democratic primary voters showed that Mondale and Jackson did best among voters who felt there was no recovery at all, while confidence in the economy was consistently associated with support for Hart.

The Democratic Party can probably accommodate Jackson by accepting his demands for procedural reform, that is, by agreeing to reconsider the party's presidential selection rules and by taking a stand against runoff primaries. Jackson can then claim that he has won a moral victory and can support the party in good conscience. He is motivated to accept such a reconciliation by the deep-seated partisanship of his supporters; most black voters would be strongly put off by any move on Jackson's part to tolerate the Democrats' ticket.

It is harder to imagine what kind of concession Hart might demand as the price of his support. Is he really going to ask Mondale to reject his commitment to organized labor? Must Mondale delegates admit they accepted illegal campaign funds and exclude themselves from the convention?

Mondale might ponder over such differences by offering Hart the second position on the Democratic ticket. But could Mondale do that after all the harsh things Hart has said about him? And could Hart campaign in good conscience for a candidate whose basic approach to politics he rejects? Opposition to Mondale has been the entire premise of the Hart campaign, and it would be difficult for Hart to compromise that sentiment without appearing shrewd and opportunistic.

The people who backed Jackson's challenge this year belong to groups with strong partisan loyalties. They fought to keep their party pure and honest. Hart's support comes from weak and wavering Democrats who distrust party orthodoxy. That is why his challenge is different, and much more threatening.

For many, parenting is still a science of single instances WASHINGTON — Damn. The rotten news for parents was put succinctly in a New York Times headline: "Einstein Revealed as Brilliant in Youth." That may not strike you as any sort of news, but it is, and it blasts a hope that has sustained some of us.

It has long been said that Einstein was a slow starter. The legend, to which many parents have clung for comfort, was that Einstein was dim in his primary and secondary school and even failed his college-entrance examinations. He did fail those examinations, but primarily because he had trouble learning French, which troubled I consider a sign of superior spirit.

The rest of the legend turns out to derive from a misreading of the grading system at his Swiss school. It now has been learned, as a result of the preparation of his papers for publication, that the kid was something of a prodigy. He excelled at college physics before he was 11, was gifted at Latin and Greek, and was a "brilliant" violinist. The science (or so we are invited to regard it) of "parenting" incites the hope that we can learn practical lessons from conspicuous successes. So I have been looking into the rearing of little Al Einstein. My findings are entirely encouraging.

At age five he was tutored at home, and briefly — until he had a tantrum and threw a chair at the unfortunate woman doing the tutoring. So far, so good: The Will children certainly have had that Einsteinian phase. Now for the bad news.

It is said that when at age four or five he received a compass from his father, he trembled and became cold from the thrill of thinking: Because the needle always points in the same direction, something unseen in space must be compelling it; therefore space is not empty.

He was stirred to the depths of his soul (it had more depth than I usually see in children's souls) by a book of euclidean geometry which, he thought, gave him a relative of perfection.

Now, admit it: If you gave your child a book of geometry, he or she would not take his or her nose out of the Mitchell Jackson biography he or she is reading. If you give him or her a compass at 9 a.m., and it has not been lost by 10 a.m., by 11 a.m. it will have been traded for a Moosehead beer can.

Little Einstein was perhaps slow to speak but once he got the hang of it he said attention-getting things. As the Will children fill the dinner hour with ad hominem remarks about one another, spiced with digressions concerning the enveloping subject of Mitchell Jackson, my mind turns to this fact: Young Einstein was given to wondering aloud, "What would the world look like if I were riding on a beam of light?"

(Don't say, "Blurry." Einstein was being serious, and the correct answer is: "Frozen." Jacob Bronowski explains it: Suppose you are riding away from a clock tower on the beam of light with which you were seeing that the clock was ticking. You would travel 186,000 miles away from the clock in a second. But the clock, as you see it, is over your shoulder, will not change at all, not even a second. Why not? By keeping up with the beam of light, you have escaped from the passage of time.)

When asked on his 74th birthday whether the compass and the geometry book really influenced his growth, Einstein said he thought so: "But a man has little insight into what goes on within him. When a young puppy sees a compass for the first time, it may have no similar influence, nor on many a child. I wonder: What about the puppy and children. And I wonder: What about the second time the puppy sees the compass?"

You can, Einstein said, postulate theories, but you will never find the answer to the riddle of what determines the reactions of individuals to particular influences. So, parents, the science of parenting is, it seems, severely circumscribed.

Thank God, however intolerable would be the burden of responsibility, and how sad would be the death of mystery, were we able to control the maturation of creatures we let loose on the world.

So it is cheerfully that, with a flourish that puts me on a par with Einstein at, oh, age four, offer this gem to you: Parenting is a science of single instances.

Hansen can run, but may not vote

BOISE — Thanks to a U.S. Supreme Court decision in the case of a Harlem congressman, there are no Idaho laws barring Rep. George Hansen from appearing on the state ballot in November.

But there's a definite possibility he won't be able to vote for himself unless the courts overturn or reverse his federal felony conviction.

Hansen still faces sentencing in his April 2 conviction on four counts of violating the Ethics in Government Act. A jury found the seven-term Republican guilty of failing to report some $334,000 in loans and securities profits.

Some contend that should disqualify Hansen from the ballot, citing Idaho's Constitution that bars anyone from holding office if they've been convicted of a felony.

But Deputy Attorney General Ken McClure's been quietly looking into the matter, and he's convinced state laws have been pre-empted. There's no legal reason why Hansen can't appear on the ballot.

The House Ethics Committee still hasn't acted on the Hansen case. That panel could vote to censure Hansen, discipline him — or expel him. Some political leaders in the state expect no worse than a vote to discipline Hansen.

As for a constitutional bar against Hansen continuing in office, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, the Harlem Democrat, faced a similar situation after his conviction on federal charges. But the Supreme Court eventually ruled that did not automatically disqualify him from the ballot. In a ruling that McClure says controls the Hansen case, the Supreme Court held that the House was the sole judge of the qualifications of its members.

That means state laws have no bearing on whether he can serve. But they could apply to Hansen's right to vote for himself.

McClure won't commit himself, but he has been looking into whether Idaho law will keep Hansen from voting. The congressman and his wife Connie both voted in the May 22 primary election, but sentence hadn't been pronounced then, and still hasn't.

Idaho's Constitution says a convicted felon loses his right to vote. McClure said there's some question whether that provision takes effect as soon as a judge passes sentence, or whether the restriction applies only after a defendant has exhausted all appeals.

U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green is expected to rule soon on Hansen's request for a new trial or reversal of his conviction. No sentencing date has been set.

Since the jury convicted Hansen, however, he hasn't voted in Congress. His primary election opponent, Dan Adamson, didn't stress that fact much. But Hansen's general election opponent, Richard Stallings, has been pointing out recently that Idaho has effectively lost one-fourth of its vote in Congress because of Hansen's troubles.

In the last 120 years, the House has voted to expel only one member, Rep. Michael Myers, D-Pa., who was convicted of taking a $50,000 bribe in one of the "Abscam" cases.

Other congressmen have been censured or disciplined after being convicted of felonies ranging from accepting kickbacks to having sexual relations with congressional pages.

When it seemed possible Hansen might be kicked out, the discussion in Idaho political circles centered on what would happen next.

When a Senate seat becomes vacant, the governor appoints a replacement. But in the House, the seat remains vacant until a special election can be held.

The interesting speculation going around high Republican circles was that Lt. Gov. David Leroy would be the prime candidate for Hansen's position.

But Leroy, who's eyeing the governor's race in two years, says he wants none of it — and nobody's asked him to run.

"From what I can see of it, a congressman's job means spending 42 weekends a year in some airport. I'm not interested in that," he says.

Quane Kenyon covers Idaho politics and state government for The Associated Press.

Kansas questions on Hansen

I would like to share with you an editorial I received from my family in Kansas, published by the Hutchinson News.

Americans are still fascinated by crooks. Out west the other day, Idaho Republicans gleefully re-nominated for Congress their state's most prominent felon, U.S. Rep. George Hansen.

How was re-nominated despite the ambiguity of his residence during the prospective term. He hasn't been sentenced yet, but faces up to a 10 year prison sentence for his convictions for falsifying financial disclosure forms. His residence, however, should be of little more than passing interest to the rest of the country, since the country has certainly survived worse crooks in high places.

However, what can the rest of the country think about Idaho's Republicans?

Can it be that a convicted felon is really the best Republican available in Idaho?

Or can it be that Idaho Republicans fall to see any significance in being represented by a felon who will help write national laws for the United States?

Rep. Hansen is not the problem.

Idaho Republicans are the problem. If the entire state votes the same way this November, should we not suspect their potatoes are rotten, too?

—The Hutchinson (Kan.) News

How do I, as a proud Idahoan and faithful Republican, answer these statements being made by my family and old friends from the State of Kansas?

Baldy price jump too much

In response to the article in The Times-News on the 6th of June informing the public of yet another raise in lift prices at Sun Valley to $26 a day, I submit the following.

For 15 years I have skied Baldy Mountain at Sun Valley. I used to be proud to live close to it and take out-of-state friends there to ski. Since the lift tickets have become the highest in the West — I, and a lot of other people, have been priced out.

Whereas, I used to ski Baldy 13 to 20 days a season, now I might ski 2 to 4 days a season. It's pretty steep when say a father and three children go skiing and it will cost $104 a day just for lift tickets.

I guess it has come to only the very rich will ski at Sun Valley now!

I find Mr. Wally Huffman's reasons for raising the lift prices ridiculous. Multi-day tickets do not benefit me as I drive up one day at a time and if I buy an Idaho Pass, I still have to congest the ticket line.

Raising prices helps inflation? I think not. As to drop in ski business. If they would drop the prices the company could generate more money as more skiers on the mountain would compensate. For example say 3,000 skiers at $26 equals $78,000 versus 5,000 skiers at $22 equals $110,000. The last two years on the days I skied Baldy, there were not as many skiers on the mountain. I predict our daily skier count will drop again next season. It is sad as I love to ski Baldy, but think I will go where there are more competitive prices.

Both parties claim O'Neill can contribute to campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the copy-ferry world of election-year politics, Democrats and Republicans alike are saying they can use Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., and the way he runs the House of Representatives, to their benefit in the fall congressional campaigns.

Republicans point to the 71-year-old Massachusetts Democrat as a symbol of the abuse of power in the House, which the Democrats have controlled for 29 years. It's a "fairness issue," they say.

Democrats point to the white-haired, rotund O'Neill as the only force stopping President Reagan and his GOP allies from turning the United States into a society of only rich and poor. It's a "fairness issue," they say.

Both sides are hoping the arguments will help them pick up House seats this year. Republicans want to trim the 102-seat majority the Democrats hold, while the Democrats want to make sure they lose none of their troops, and add to their strength in fact.

"We believe that we, as Republicans, have had our rights as a minority trampled upon and therefore the rights of the people have been trampled upon," said Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, which aids GOP House candidates.

Vander Jagt's group is test-marketing two television commercials that say O'Neill, who has been speaker since 1977, has been running the House in an arbitrary, dictatorial fashion that would prompt the founding fathers to shed a tear. "Bring back the pride," say the GOP television commercials. "Vote Republican."

Search goes on for fugitives

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Authorities were at a "standstill" Saturday in the search for a deadly pair of brothers — the last of six death row prisoners still at large after a May 31 breakout.

"We have no information whatsoever" on brothers James and Linwood Briley, said Capt. R.A. Clark, a troop commander of the North Carolina Highway Patrol. "We don't know where they are. We're at a standstill."

Clark was among the dozens of local police, Virginia and North Carolina troopers, FBI agents and Virginia corrections officers who have been combing the area around Warrenton, N.C., since the escape at the Mecklenburg Correctional Center just across the Virginia line.

Two were recaptured the day after the escape in a coin laundry two blocks from the Warrenton police station. On Friday, Lem Tuggle Jr., 32, was recaptured in the southwest corner of Vermont after an armed robbery, and Willie Leroy Jones, 25, gave himself up on the opposite side of Vermont.

Maj. James Ryan, director of the Vermont State Police, said he did not believe the Briley brothers had accompanied Tuggle or Jones to Vermont. "When again, we didn't expect the others to be up here either," he added.

Heat wave assaults Northeast

By The Associated Press

The calendar says summer is almost two weeks away, but it got about as hot as it ever does across the muggy Northeast again Saturday and the lingering heat wave kept ambulances and emergency crews on the run.

The Emergency Medical Service in New York reported its busiest day in years as many areas from the Virginias to Maine reported record or near-record temperatures and a cloak of stagnant and polluted air stifled the region.

Railroad and subway tracks buckled in a few spots, and officials said that may have caused Friday's derailment of an Amtrak passenger train near Philadelphia.

It was so hot in New York that the carriage horses popular with tourists were taken off the streets for the horses' safety.

Beaches all along the Eastern Seaboard were packed with "wall-to-wall" people.

"It's unbelievable," said Police Officer Michael Murphy, reporting on the crowd at Revere Beach north of Boston, where the mercury had reached a record for the date of 96 by 2 p.m., and kept climbing. "There must be 50,000 people out there."

It had never been so hot so early in the season at Portland, Maine, where the temperature reached 93 at 1 p.m., eclipsing a record for the date of 92 set 34 years ago.

Other cities that either broke or tied a record for June 9 at 96 degrees included Atlantic City, N.J.; Hartford, Conn.; New York City (Kennedy Airport); and Wilmington, Del. Providence, R.I., had a record at 95.

Airlines' summer fare war spreads to Kennedy Airport

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A fare war on coast-to-coast flights touched off by People Express is spreading, with two other airlines saying they will match the $119 one-way fare on some flights to a second airport in the New York City area.

Trans World Airlines and World Airways said they would offer the low fare to Kennedy International Airport.

Traditionally prescribed in combination with other drugs for certain types of cancer, Methotrexate was developed by Lederle Laboratories in the 1940s, Ward said. It is now used in treating cancers of the breast, lungs, head and neck, he said.

Until recently, non-union workers had little recourse to contest firings because of the legal doctrine known as "employment-at-will," which considered employees to be working with the consent of the employer. But recent court rulings have chipped away at that idea, and the number of lawsuits has mushroomed.

Drug effective in treating arthritis

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — An anti-cancer drug has proven "very effective" in treating rheumatoid arthritis, according to a study presented Saturday at the American Rheumatism Association's annual meeting.

Controversy burgeons over dismissal law

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Spreading court fights over the "employment at will" doctrine has brought legislation in California and five other states that would restrict the power of employers to fire workers.

Not surprisingly, employers are not happy with the proposals, but neither are leaders of organized labor or the lawyers who specialize in taking

Bear ousted from tree

GROVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — The 150-pound California black bear was minding his own business, leaning 50 feet up in a cypress tree. But the townsfolk weren't pleased and they called in officials.

"We want him tranquilized and safely out-of-the-tree," police Sgt. Oscar Campbell said during the night of babysitting that began Thursday evening and didn't end until 5:30 a.m. Friday. "We don't want to hurt him."

Apparently they didn't. The vigil outside D.W. Grover's restaurant and bar was resolved when a state biologist trucked the anesthetized bear to Los Padres National Forest.

Long after D-Day, U.S. still entices Europeans

EDITOR'S NOTE — How do Europeans perceive Americans today, 40 years after the D-day landings entrenched the United States in European minds as a symbol of liberation and freedom? From Yugoslavia to Ireland, it is clear the mark left by the Yanks of 1944 still holds. Europeans spellbound in one form or another.

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — On almost any evening of the week, somewhere between the Berlin Wall and the western shores of Ireland, living rooms are taken over by J.R. Ewing, showing off a world of money and raw power that, to the average European mind, is the essence of America.

Television shows like "Dallas" were once damned by Jack Lang, the French Culture Minister, as "American cultural imperialism," but no European nation has tried very hard to resist it.

One only has to watch lines at McDonald's on the Champs Elysees, breakdancing at the Covent Garden plaza or exercising in front of Jane Fonda videotapes to know that 40 years after its GIs helped rescued Europe from Hitler, America in all its splendor, color, madness and brilliance still holds Europe spellbound.

Even Yugoslavia, after more than 30 years of communism, remains more receptive to American than Eastern ideas, says an American living in Belgrade. "Of course we are not culturally 'invaded,'" said an 18-year-old Yugoslav woman just back from a year of study in the United States. She happened to be wearing jeans, sneakers and a T-shirt and sipping a Coke.

The American impact is immediately felt in the way some Europeans speak. A Dutchman speaking English will often use an American rather than a British accent. Swedish and French are infested with American idioms which purists decry as "Swenglish" or "Franglais."

Even American football is catching on: About 4 million Britons watched the Super Bowl last January on satellite television. About 30,000 turned out at London's Wembley Stadium last year to see the Minnesota Vikings play the St. Louis Cardinals in an National Football League exhibition game.

A curious mixture of contempt and admiration still underlies the European vision of America.

Soviets welcome Christians

MOSCOW (AP) — A record number of U.S. Christian representatives began a two-week working tour across the Soviet Union on Saturday, precipitating some extraordinary cooperation between the Communist government and churches.

In order to accommodate the 265 church people on their wide-ranging journeys, guides of the government Intourist service were given special training in theology and church history.

"It's a new day," said the Rev. Bruce Rigdon of Chicago's McCormick Theological Seminary, who is leading the members of Protestant, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox churches.

It is the largest single religious group to visit the Soviet Union, and the government agreed to have its guides briefed on Soviet religious life and teachings by Soviet church leaders, Rigdon said.

"It's the first time in history for Intourist and the churches to work together," Rigdon said. Intourist previously has given its guides special training for other groups such as businessmen, he said.

The visitors were given a two-hour tour of the Kremlin on Saturday. They met with the U.S. ambassador in the afternoon and visited churches in the evening.

"The more our two peoples are able to see one another, the better the chance for growth of good will," said Adelaide M. Sabatelli of Chicago, a Roman Catholic. "Americans generally have little or no adequate, correct understanding of religious life in the Soviet Union," she said.

Pope starts Swiss trip

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Tuesday begins a six-day visit to Switzerland, which broke normal diplomatic ties with the Holy See in the 19th century.

Many Swiss Protestants have criticized the upcoming visit or specific parts of it, such as the planned meeting between the pontiff and the Federal Council, the executive branch of government.

Some Roman Catholics are also skeptical, saying John Paul's stay will not be long enough for him to examine church problems thoroughly.

"Historically and structurally Switzerland is suspicious of every type of imposed authority and superiority. That is a fundamental Swiss feeling that the pope will have to face," said one Vatican source, asking not to be identified by name.

"Switzerland is so fundamentally democratic that everything centralized is suspect," the source added.

Switzerland has no archbishop, so local bishops communicate directly with the Vatican.

Battle continues; U.N. leader visits

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian and Moslem militiamen traded artillery fire in Beirut on Saturday shortly after U.N. Secretary-General Javier Pérez de Cuellar wound up talks with Lebanese government leaders.

Police said one woman was killed and at least 30 other people, most of them civilians, were wounded in residential neighborhoods on both sides of the frontier between Christian east and Moslem west Beirut. Pérez de Cuellar had crossed the demarcation line from west Beirut into the Christian sector when the bombardment broke out shortly before sundown, shattering a 16-hour lull.

He was back in his hotel at the mountain resort town of Belt Meri, 10 miles east of Beirut as warring Lebanese militiamen exchanged artillery, rocket and machine-gun fire in the capital and its suburbs, his aides said.

The secretary-general held conferences with Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, his prime minister, Rashid Karami, and the state minister for southern Lebanon, Nabih Berri.

Karami told reporters later that Lebanon was ready to negotiate security arrangements for Israel through a third party to help bring about an Israeli withdrawal from southern Lebanon.

Communist leader in coma

PADUA, Italy (AP) — The condition of Communist Party leader Enrico Berlinguer grew worse Saturday and doctors gave him no chance of recovery. They said he was in an irreversible coma.

The 62-year-old politician was stricken by a massive cerebral hemorrhage during a campaign appearance here Thursday night. "He is in a condition that is not going to improve," said Dr. Giampiero Giron, one of the four doctors treating Berlinguer at Padua Hospital.

A late medical bulletin said "the state of grave cerebral compression" continued, meaning internal bleeding persists which has further damaged his brain.

Dr. Flavio Ruzza, chief medical officer of the hospital, told reporters Berlinguer had "much less than a 10 percent chance" to survive.

Iraq threatens attacks 'without mercy'

By ALY MAHMOUD
The Associated Press

Iraq threatened Saturday to attack Iranian economic installations, including its Kharg Island oil terminal, "without mercy," until there is no oil for Iran to export.

"We now possess all the means enabling us to deal the final blow" to the Iranian economy, Iraqi state radio said. "Logic dictates that Iraq deal its blow without mercy."

Iranian jets and artillery attacked across the southern part of the border Saturday, according to war communiques from Iran and Iraq.

A statement issued in Baghdad said eight Iraqi civilians were killed and 23 others were hurt by Iranian artillery fire that hit the provincial capital of Basra and six other border cities.

Iraq's official Islamic Republic News Agency said Iranian planes successfully attacked Iraqi military installations and "sensitive points" at All Al-Gharbi. Quoting a communique issued in Tehran, the agency said four Iranian jets also struck Iraqi forces near the town of All Al-Sharqi.

Both cities are directly across the border from Dezful, which Iran said was struck by an Iraqi missile early Saturday. Iranian officials said 12 people were killed in that attack.

Iraq confirmed the air attack, but said Iranian jets were intercepted by anti-aircraft fire, and were forced to drop their bombs outside of All Al-Gharbi. Four persons were wounded, it added.

Arab diplomatic sources said oil ministers of the six-member Gulf Cooperation Council are increasingly worried about an escalation of the Iran-Iraq war, and that they are to discuss joint action to protect gulf shipping at an emergency conference Sunday in Taif, Saudi Arabia.

In a meeting several days earlier, Mana Saeed Oteiba, oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, flew to Taif for talks with Saudi Defense Minister Prince Sultan.

Results of the discussion were not disclosed, but informed sources said the two men discussed joint air cover, naval escorts and other ways to protect gulf shipping from further raids by Iran.

Mutinuous Sikhs protest assault on temple

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — About 100 Sikh soldiers mutinied and deserted their base to protest the army's assault on the Golden Temple in the Sikhs' holy city of Amritsar, reliable sources said Saturday.

Iranian jets and artillery attacked across the southern part of the border Saturday, according to war communiques from Iran and Iraq.

A statement issued in Baghdad said eight Iraqi civilians were killed and 23 others were hurt by

They said the Sikhs mutilated at their camp in the Ganga Nagar area of Rajasthan state and crossed into Punjab's Bhatinda district.

The sources, who are Indians close to the military, spoke on condition they not be identified any further. The Associated Press made several attempts to verify their information, but was not able to reach government spokesmen.

Government officials earlier said Sikh extremists shot two soldiers to death in Amritsar and killed seven other people in three separate attacks in Punjab on Saturday.

Curfews were extended until Monday in most Punjab cities as troops expanded their search for Sikh extremists and arms caches following a two-day battle at the Golden Temple, the Sikhs' holiest shrine.

Monaco's Princess Caroline, newborn son in good health

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Princess Caroline of Monaco and her newborn son Andrea Albert were reported doing fine Saturday at the princely Princess Grace Clinic a day after the birth of her first child.

A spokesman for the royal palace said Prince Rainier and his family were delighted with the new addition to the family. The boy is Prince Rainier's first grandchild. His other two children, Stephanie and Albert, are unmarried.

PRINCESS CAROLINE Husband helped with birth

Caroline's husband, Italian businessman Stefano Casiraghi, assisted in the birth with Dr. Emile Herve.

Caroline, 27, and Casiraghi were married in a civil service here Dec. 29. It was her second marriage and his first.

She is still seeking an annulment of her marriage to Frenchman Philippe Junot, whom she divorced in 1980 after two years. The Grimaldi family is Roman Catholic and the second marriage is not recognized by the church.

Caroline is the eldest child of Rainier and Princess Grace, the former movie star Grace Kelly who died — after a September 1982 automobile accident.

Princess Caroline and her husband Stefano Casiraghi were reported doing fine Saturday at the princely Princess Grace Clinic a day after the birth of her first child.

Busy signal for sex calls

DEWITT, Mich. (AP) — Britons who tied-up DeWitt Police Department telephones for three months thinking they would hear simulated sex acts now get only a busy signal, a phone company spokesman said Saturday.

The police department's number apparently was mistakenly listed in a sex publication circulated in the United Kingdom, prompting dozens of calls from throughout that nation, said Mark Trierweiler, spokesman for American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s Michigan operations.

Gown for president's daughter DALLAS (AP) — Chicago designer Mariana Zaharoff says she has been hired to create Patti Davis' wedding gown, and says the gown will make President Reagan's daughter look like "an unspoiled princess."

Miss Davis' long, white dress is made of silk tulle and silk chambray, Ms. Zaharoff said in an interview with The Dallas Morning News for a copy-right story Saturday.

Miss Davis, 31, is marrying Beverly Hills yoga instructor Paul Grilley, 25, this summer.

Ms. Zaharoff says the gown is "very dramatic, very modern and very romantic. She is going to be an absolutely beautiful bride."

Ms. Zaharoff, in Dallas for a fashion show, had avoided questions about her role in the wedding for weeks before acknowledging in the interview with The News that she was designing the gown.

School begins at age 32 for top college grad

HUMBOLDT, Tenn. (AP) — Robert Allen was 32 years old when he first walked through a schoolhouse door, but three years later he's graduating at the top of his college class and wants to become a professor.

Allen grew up an only child reared by elderly relatives who refused to send him to school. He decided to "give college a whirl" when he was laid off from his job as a janitor.

"I have never encountered a student with such a general knowledge," said Dr. William Odom, president of Bethel College, a small Cumberland Presbyterian Church-supported school in nearby Kenzie. "He got it from reading every book he could get his hands on."

Allen came to Bethel in September 1981 when federal subsidies cut him his minimum-wage job financed through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act. He graduates from Bethel on Sunday with a grade average of 3.8 on a scale of 4.0.

In August, Allen will enroll at Vanderbilt University in Nashville with a fellowship to work for a doctorate in English. He plans to become a college professor.

Allen lives with his 77-year-old great-aunt, Bevie Jones, in the same ramshackle house they've rented for more than 20 years.

Rebelling for $20 a month, the house lacks indoor plumbing and is surrounded by a tangle of trees and bushes that protect it from a nearby highway.

Allen said he likes the solitude, and when not reading, he writes poetry or entertains himself with an ancient, peddle-powered organ and an old banjo that once belonged to his grandfather.

Allen's parents were divorced soon after his birth, and he was brought up by a grandfather, a great-uncle and three great-aunts.

"I don't know what became of my dad, and my mother disappeared when I was not quite 6 years old," he said.

He said his family refused to send him to school for fear his father would try to take him away, even though the father never had contact with him.

"Most of them had never gone to school, so they didn't think it was terribly important," he said.

Children rally to help ailing Statue of Liberty

NEW YORK (AP) — From Anchorage, Alaska, to Agua, Turkey, children are peddling pennies, helping popcorn and selling T-shirts to raise money to help restore the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor.

"Dear Miss Liberty, We are sorry that you are falling apart," wrote Shelby Sheridan, a fourth-grader from Parma, Mich. "Our school has collected $119.11 so you could be fixed."

The letter is typical of thousands received by The Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Centennial Commission describing efforts to aid the celebrated copper lady.

Millions of children, who attend the likes of one-room schoolhouses in Montana or private schools in Manhattan, are holding fundraisers and walkathons and donating their allowances.

To date, children have raised more than $800,000 of the $78 million collected to repair the statue on Liberty Island in time for its July 1986 centennial and to restore neighboring Ellis Island, said commission spokeswoman Penny Becker.

A total of $230 million is needed to complete the joint project.

Most of the children have never seen the 125-ton, 30-story statue, built as a gift from the people of France to the people of the United States.

But like their 19th century counterparts who sent in pennies, nickels and dimes to help build the pedestal for the national landmark, children everywhere are contributing to Lady Liberty.

The amount of the contribution doesn't really matter. Whether it's a nickel sent by an Illinois boy or the record $11,700 raised by a group of Florida elementary school students, the message behind each gift is the same.

"I am sending my contribution to you because I care what happens to Miss Liberty," wrote Chris Gates of North Aurora, Ill., who sent five cents in an envelope bearing a 2-cent "love" stamp.

"I am worried about the Statue of Liberty!" Erik Paul Ressel, from Anchorage, Alaska, wrote Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca, who heads the fundraising drive. The third-grader enclosed a check for $118.20.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Continuing his war of words with environmentalists, Idaho Congressman Larry Craig is challenging backers of major additions in Idaho wilderness to prove that the people of the state are on their side.

Claiming that several public opinion polls in recent years show that Idahoans oppose any major wilderness additions, Craig said in his weekly newsletter, "The preservationists have attempted to portray more wilderness as an issue of the people."

"Yet, they have not produced any information which disputes my findings," the two-term Republican said.

Earlier this month, Craig sent a letter to all his House colleagues urging them to ignore claims by the National Wildlife Federation and support the Idaho wilderness bill he and the other three members of the state congressional delegation have proposed.

In its own letter to members of Congress, the federation had argued that the additional 526,000 acres designated for wilderness preservation in the delegation bill is insufficient.

"Craig called the letter misleading, but those supporting a substantially larger addition to the 3.8 million acres of wilderness already preserved in Idaho contend public hearings last year on the issue prove that the people of Idaho want more than the limited wilderness addition backed by the Republican delegation."

The transcripts of those hearings, conducted by Sen. James McClure, show a nearly two-to-one majority against the delegation bill, they claim.

In his newsletter, however, Craig complained that based on the public opinion polls he has access to "any additional wilderness at all is itself a compromise between the vocal minority and the wishes of a substantial majority."

Although a number of conservation and environmental groups have been the loudest critics of the delegation bill within the state, those opposing it also include Gov. John Evans, who wants at least twice as much additional wilderness acreage, and the state Fish and Game Commission, which is backing triple the acreage.

Both claim the delegation proposal leaves unprotected a number of pristine and unique areas of the state.

Teachers bemoan lack of funds for 'creativity'

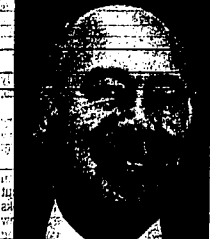

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The Coeur d'Alene School District can't afford to buy a history book written by two local teachers, who in turn say the lack of financial support for the district is discouraging creativity in other teachers.

The book, "Beyond the Rockies" is used in other state school districts, as well as schools in Washington and Oregon.

Only fund-raising effort by students and authors Ron Fisher and Charles Whitlock, both fourth-grade teachers, have brought the textbook to Sorensen Elementary School. Students and fourth-grade teachers at Hayden Lake Elementary School also held a fundraiser so the book could be purchased.

"It's a real shame," Fisher said. "Our book has been a success but our own district isn't reaping the benefits."

Andrus wants female vice-presidential choice

CECIL ANDRUS
'Now is the time'

BOISE (AP) — Former Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, state co-chairman of Walter Mondale's presidential campaign, says a woman should be named to the No. 2 spot on the Democratic ticket this year.

"Now is the time," said Andrus, who served as interior secretary while Mondale was vice president. "It's going to happen. Why not in 1984?"

With Mondale the likely presidential nominee, he called the selection of a woman as the vice-presidential pick a way to boost party fortunes in November.

"It's not going to be an easy battle this year," Andrus said of the campaign to unseat President Reagan. He has already written off Idaho for the Democratic nominee — barring any major political mistake by the Republicans.

Andrus, who has been discussed as a possible candidate for governor again in 1986, said he planned to talk with either Mondale or one of his top aides in the next several days to urge them to select a woman as a running mate.

"Among Andrus' choices are congresswomen Pat Schroeder of Colorado and Geraldine Ferraro of New York and San Francisco Mayor Diane Feinstein, but "I'm not limiting it to those three."

NLRB revokes ruling

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The National Labor Relations Board has revoked a ruling concerning an unfair labor practice charge filed against the Louisiana-Pacific Corp., a NLRB spokesman says.

The revocation came Friday, just one day after the ruling favoring the firm was handed down.

The complaint by the Lumber, Production and Industrial Workers Union, filed after contract talks broke down last October, had contended that the company was negotiating in bad faith. The union had appealed a ruling in favor of the company, but the NLRB on Thursday upheld the decision.

However, NLRB Deputy General Counsel John Higgins said Friday that the Thursday ruling was mistakenly issued too soon.

"The union was to have been given a chance to make a presentation," he said.

He said union lawyers are to present oral arguments to NLRB officials in Washington, D.C., on Monday.

Louisiana-Pacific officials said Friday they were optimistic that the labor board will rule in the company's favor.

But Michael Draper of the union's Western Council noted, "We're back to square one."

The union has been on strike at 17 Louisiana-Pacific plants in six western states since last June. Fifteen of the plants are being operated by non-union employees and union members who have crossed picket lines.

Workers at 11 of the plants have petitioned the NLRB to decertify the union — but elections were postponed until the union's complaint against the company is settled.

Man seeking reprieve speaks to townspeople

SPOKANE (AP) — Kevin Coe, whose four rape convictions were overturned by the state Supreme Court, spoke directly to the people of his hometown in a hour-long radio talk show appearance from the state penitentiary in Walla Walla.

Coe, 37, who has always maintained his innocence, was convicted in 1981 of four rapes attributed to the "South Hill Rapist," who terrorized a quiet residential Spokane community.

He said Friday he hopes the people of Spokane "would be open-minded enough to listen to our side of the case," and added he had no intention of coming back to Spokane if he is freed pending a new trial.

His appearance on Radio KXLY was made possible by a telephone link with the penitentiary.

Twenty-one listeners called Coe, some of them complimenting his intelligence, but several saying they didn't believe he was innocent.

One woman likened him to convicted murderer Ted Bundy and said Coe "should be glad it's not one of the jurors who is going to try his case."

His convictions were overturned because the state high court said the judge and prosecutor in his case made numerous errors.

An informal tally showed four callers were solidly in Coe's corner, while nine appeared hostile and the comments of eight others were neutral.

"Kevin, I went through a situation like this 40 years ago and it was all phony baloney," said a man, the first caller to get through.

A woman listener said she was once on a jury and added "they tell you exactly what they want you to hear. I believe in your innocence."

But another male caller said he had spent years working with sociopaths and Coe fit the profile.

"You have a pat answer for everything," the caller said.

Coe said the reason he answered questions about the case so easily is because he has been asked them so often.

One woman asked whether Coe, if he had committed any crimes such as rapes, would admit to them.

"That's a hypothetical question," he replied. "... If I had committed any illegal acts, they would have evidence of it."

Coe was asked at a Thursday news conference about a Spokane psychiatrist's testimony at the time of his sentencing. The doctor, Robert Wetzel, said Coe had admitted to one of the four rapes.

Parents remember ordeal

EDMONDS, Wash. (AP) — "A hell and a horror" would be an understatement, said Gordon H. Coe. "A living death," added his wife Ruth.

That's how the former Spokane Chronicle managing editor and former fashion model describe the nearly four-year ordeal between the rape conviction of their son and a Washington state Supreme Court ruling that ordered a new trial.

The Coes discussed their feelings in an interview published Saturday by the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Sitting amid the oriental wall hangings and Louis XV French Court furniture of their home in this suburb between Seattle and Everett, both said they expected a Supreme Court victory and predicted that their son would be vindicated altogether.

"I was in shock for such a long time," said Mrs. Coe, 63. "On the day after the D-Day celebration, it kept coming to me: 'Dear God, this is our victory, too!'"

"This reaffirms my faith in the judicial system."

She later served less than a year in jail after being convicted of trying to hire a police undercover agent to kill the judge and prosecutor.

"The (rape) trial we had in Spokane was a farce, a picnic," she said. "The only thing missing from the circus atmosphere was the sellers of popcorn," she added. "It was not true law practice. It was insidious."

Expert: Computer ed needs tuning

By PAT MARCANONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When using a computer in the classroom, teach students something they can use — not just how a computer works, advised Don Esheby with the State Department of Vocational Education.

Esheby, who is the director of program services, addressed the summer conference of the Computer Educators of Idaho organization Saturday at the College of Southern Idaho.

Teaching basic computer programming is an "extension of a teacher's ego," Esheby said. Students often take these courses because they want something different from the ordinary school curriculum and not to learn. As a result, teachers become entertainers instead of educators, he said.

Only a few students eventually will be needed to write the programs for computers, he said. The majority, however, will be computer users and "they don't have to know how a computer works."

"The key is to teach what the students need to know, not what teachers want to teach."

In addition, students should be able to ask questions of the machine instead of just responding to a series of answers, he said.

In a history class studying General George Custer's Battle of the Little Big Horn, for example, the students should be able to ask, "what if?"

"What if Custer had taken a different path?"

Conceptualization is lost, however, if students are just asked to select answers A, B or C.

"The software has to be user controlled."

He also suggested school districts purchase several computers and "network" them to expand their capacity.

Esheby added that his responsibility with the state agency was planning, evaluating and curriculum development of teacher education. Although somewhat removed from the classroom, he recognizes the opportunities of the computer in education.

"To me, the computer is just a tool. Not an end."

Prior to Esheby's speech, CSI Vocational Dean Orval Bradley said it was the school's goal that every vocational student — from those in auto mechanics to agriculture — have some contact with computers during their learning experiences.

The two-day conference included a panel discussion, sessions on the use

Teachers become pupils on computers

TWIN FALLS — Teachers became the students Saturday as they learned new uses for computers in the classroom.

The learning took place at the College of Southern Idaho during the summer conference of the Computer Educators of Idaho.

Approximately 50 teachers from around the state were hands-on experience with the "hottest in computer technology" during the several workshops at the conference.

During one session, CSI instructor Dee Hartman said word processing — which basically is the use of a computer to perform secretarial tasks — can easily be incorporated into classroom use.

Word processing can be utilized in the development of teacher plans, student handouts, newsletters and more.

The purpose of the Computer Educators group, which is composed of teachers, is to share resources in the handbooks, said CSI instructor Lynn Ganje. Teachers also can store a "bank" of 200 test questions and select 50 for a test as that each will be different.

Using a word processor to write school materials has its advantages over the typewriter, she added. For example, it's easier to make changes to the material on a terminal screen than erasing or retyping a page on a typewriter.

In another session, conference participants "looked" and "heard" over computer programs capable of ranking and alphabetizing student grades on the screen of a small and sleek machine.

Computer vendors also were on hand with their shiny wares. A colorful graphic filled the screen.

And on another device, a sample math program would challenge youngsters to add simple figures. If the user did well, the screen flashed, "Great, let's keep it up."

State about computer education, said its outgoing president Dennis Dempsey of Hailey.

Trivia buffs compete during benefit

By DOUG WRIGHT

TWIN FALLS — What country offered Albert Einstein his presidency in 1952? Who is known as the father of country music? What national capital rises where the Blue Nile meets the White Nile?

About 40 trivia buffs, who gathered Friday night at the Turf Club for the first "Trivial Pursuits" tournament, attempted to answer questions like these for a grand prize of $200.

Based on the popular game of the same name, the competition raised a total of $375 to help send six Twin Falls High School students overseas in the American Field Service Exchange Program, said Judi Baxter who organized the tournament.

The 18 two-player teams paid $25 each for the opportunity to play in three 45-minute preliminary rounds, after which the top four teams battled it out in the championship final round for the grand prize.

In a close contest, Trivia whizzes Rod Danielson and Kim McDonald of Twin Falls nipped the other three finalist teams at the buzzer, answering the tie-breaking question with less than a minute left in the round, said Baxter.

In the preliminary rounds, the contestants pondered over questions on geography, entertainment, history, art and literature, science and nature, and sports and leisure. The final round featured questions on issues from the 1950s, 1960s and 1970s and was much tougher, said Baxter.

"The questions from the original game are tough, but the questions from the 'Baby Boomer' edition used in the final round were almost impossible," said Baxter. "The number of correct answers really went down from the number in the preliminary rounds."

But, although many of the questions left the contestants pulling their hair in frustration, everybody had a good time and most of the teams stayed around to watch the final round, said Baxter.

"We were really happy with the way the tournament turned out. Everybody had fun, and how else can you raise $375 for three hours of work," added Baxter.

The money raised will help pay for the cost of sending six students to countries like Brazil, Switzerland and Indonesia for either the summer or the year, said Baxter.

Council hires officer; force called healthy

FILER — A former California police officer was hired by the Filer City Council this week to round out the city's four-man force.

John Nunez, who worked for almost four years in the Dos Palos Police Department in central California, will fill the vacancy left by Patrolman Steve Hopkins.

In the small town in the San Joaquin Valley, Nunez told the council he handled everything from homicides and armed robberies to barking dogs.

Since the area is a drop off point for drug trafficking between San Francisco and Los Angeles, Nunez said he also did extensive undercover work in narcotics.

Filer Police Chief Donald Barkley said the 25-year-old Nunez came highly recommended by his previous employer.

He said the California police chief told him that Nunez had saved his life once during a shootout.

"He stated 'If it hadn't been for John, he'd be dead today,'" Barkley said.

Although Nunez is a graduate of a California police academy, Barkley said the patrolman will have to also take the Idaho test.

Nunez will be sworn in next week after leaving the job he currently holds in Twin Falls.

In the meantime, Nunez said he is looking for a home to rent in Filer for his wife and 3-year-old daughter.

In another police department hiring, Cliff Johnson was appointed as the fourth Filer reserve officer.

Last month, Danny Beaulieu, Bob Trippl and Melvin Byrnes became new reserve officers and Bonnie Roll, whose husband is on the force, and Edie Barkley, the wife of the police chief, were appointed as matrons to the reserve force.

The council established the new reserve force in April at the recommendation of the police chief to assist the city's full-time police officers.

Barkley said the new reserves will be sworn in next week and then begin their studies in law enforcement.

By September, they should be ready to receive certification from the Peace Officers Standards and Training academy so they will be able to help out during the annual Twin Falls County Fair held in Filer, he said.

Acute-care mental hospital shapes up

TWIN FALLS — Heritage Health Care Corp. is proceeding with plans for an acute-care mental hospital in Twin Falls.

The 30-bed facility for patients with temporary mental disorders is planned for 3.5 acres of vacant land formerly owned by the Immanuel Lutheran Church at the corner of Shown Avenue West and Ostrander Street.

Heritage, a Bellevue, Wash., based company, received a special-use permit for the hospital May 7 from the Twin Falls City Council, after a public hearing at which nearby residents complained bitterly about the proposed facility.

So far, however, the residents have launched no challenge to the council's decision.

Dave Harrod, the company's vice president for development, says it may be nine months to a year before the hospital admits its first patient.

He expects the architectural drawings to be approved by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare in a month.

After that, a local general contractor will have to be picked, he says. He predicts construction will begin by the end of the summer.

Before the hospital can open, general staff members will have to be hired and trained, and administrators will have to be selected, he says.

Vasquez leading citizens opposing city's consolidation

TWIN FALLS — A citizens committee is being formed to promote Twin Falls firefighters' opposition to the consolidation of the city Police and Fire Departments, and it will be chaired by former Twin Falls City Council candidate Ernie Vasquez.

Vasquez, Chairman of the Board of the South Central Community Action Agency, was appointed by the executive committee of the Twin Falls firefighters union, said Ron Clark, union president.

He said the firefighters were impressed with Vasquez's understanding of the issue and his willingness to get involved.

Vasquez said Friday it is important to form the committee now that it appears the firefighters are close to collecting the required number of signatures to force a special election on consolidation later this summer.

With little money to spend, he says, the committee will concentrate on speaking engagements and "using the public media to bring the message to the public."

Consolidation here is really a statewide issue, because other Idaho cities are looking at Twin Falls as a "test model," he says.

But even with an issue of such importance, most people don't understand what consolidation is all about, he says. One reason for that is that the firefighters were denied a public hearing last winter, he says.

"The City Council, when they have their pet projects, they have these big extravaganzas," Vasquez says.

Morningside teacher soon to lead IEA

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Connie Hutchison will step from a Morningside Elementary fifth-grade classroom in Twin Falls to the head of Idaho's strongest teachers' union this fall.

Working to get candidates supporting education elected will be her main goal, she says. After that she will begin lobbying for the second part of this year's teacher pay raise appropriation, a job she seems ready to start in a spirit of cooperation.

She plans to work closely with those legislators who have supported education strongly in the past and take their advice on how to best win the raises to bring Idaho teacher pay up to the national average.

This year the Legislature appropriated $20.3 million for the first 60 percent of the raises but gave only a moderate increase to cover other school expenses. It was a move that was criticized by many IEA officials, but not Hutchison.

"The Legislature this year started looking in the right direction as far as education," she says. "They are mostly pretty good people, trying hard. Teachers could always have done better, but it was a start in the right direction."

She does plan to watch closely to make sure the schools put the money appropriated for teacher raises into teacher raises. She also plans to keep an eye on the career ladder proposals schools are developing to qualify for extra state money.

"I want to make sure any career ladder put into effect benefits the district and teachers, not works against them because of inequities or human judgments that get in the way of effectiveness," she says.

Besides her work with Legislative issues, she seems bent on changing the public's perception of the IEA and teachers. It's a project she has worked on for the Twin Falls organization in past years.

"A lot of times when the association does something, the public sees only the work in the Legislature and campaigns," she says. "They forget that the major objective of the teachers and association is the best education possible for the kids in the state."

The Twin Falls teachers are locked in a wage dispute now that threatens to become bitter, but Hutchison wants to emphasize the IEA's demands for high education standards and annual evaluations.

"If the association were specifically out to get more money for teachers we would be counseling them how to get better paying jobs elsewhere," she says.

Actually, most people think well of teachers, she says.

"Teachers have a good image individually, when people think about the teachers they know or the schools they know," Hutchison says. "But people forget when teachers work together for the good of the students collectively they can help education."

The public relations campaign will also be aimed at the teachers, she says. She wants to emphasize the work the IEA does to make them better teachers, from offering information on tutoring abused children to offering education classes through the universities, she says.

She plans to spend much of her time traveling to districts throughout the state to explain what IEA officials are doing and help the teachers get the most benefit possible from the IEA.

Man seeking reprieve speaks to townspeople

SPOKANE (AP) — Kevin Coe, whose four-rape convictions were overturned by the state Supreme Court, spoke directly to the people of this old hometown in an hour-long radio talk show appearance from the state penitentiary in Walla Walla.

Coe, 37, who has always maintained his innocence, was convicted in 1981 of four rapes attributed to the "South Hill Rapist," who terrorized a quiet, residential Spokane community.

He has been serving a 7½-year term at the penitentiary.

He said Friday he hopes the people of Spokane "would be open-minded enough to listen to the other side of the case," and added he had no intention of coming back to Spokane if he is freed pending a new trial.

His appearance on Radio KXLY was made possible by a telephone link with the penitentiary.

Twenty-one listeners called Coe, some of them complimenting his intelligence, but several saying they didn't believe he was innocent.

One woman likened him to convicted murderer Ted Bundy and said Coe "should be glad I'm not one of the jurors who is going to try his case."

His convictions were overturned because the state high court said the judge and prosecutor in his case made numerous errors.

An informal tally showed four callers were solidly in Coe's corner, while nine appeared hostile and the comments of eight others were neutral.

"Kevin, I went through a situation like this 40 years ago and it was all phony baloney," said a man, the first caller to get through.

A woman listener said she was once on a jury and added "they tell you exactly what they want you to hear. I believe in your innocence."

But another male caller said he had spent years working with sociopaths and Coe fit the profile.

"You have a pat answer for everything," the caller said.

Coe said the reason he answered questions about the case so easily is because he has been asked them so often.

One woman asked whether Coe, if he had committed any crimes such as rapes, would admit to them.

"That's a hypothetical question," he replied. "If I had committed any illegal acts, they would have evidence of it."

Coe was asked at a Thursday news conference about a Spokane psychiatrist's testimony at the time of his sentencing. The doctor, Robert Wetzler, said Coe had admitted to one of the four rapes.

Parents remember ordeal

EDMONDS, Wash. (AP) — "A hell and a horror... would be an understatement," said Gordon H. Coe, "A living death," added his wife Ruth.

That's how the former Spokane Chronicle managing editor and former fashion model describe the nearly four-years-between-the-rape conviction of their son and a Washington state Supreme Court ruling that ordered a new trial.

The Coes discussed their feelings in an interview published Saturday by the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Sitting amid the oriental wall hangings and Louis XV French Court furniture in a home in this suburb between Seattle and Everett, both said they expected a Supreme Court victory and predicted that their son would be vindicated altogether.

"I was in shock for such a long time," said Mrs. Coe, 63. "On the day after the D-Day celebration, it kept coming to me: 'Dear God, this is our victory, too!'"

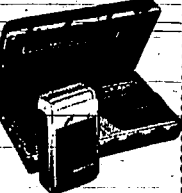

"This reaffirms my faith in the judicial system."

She later served less than a year in jail after being convicted of trying to hire a police undercover agent to kill the judge and prosecutor.

"The rape trial we had in Spokane was a farce, a picnic," she said.

"The only thing missing from the circus atmosphere was the sellers of popcorn," she added. "It was not true law practice. It was insidious."

About 40 trivia buffs, who gathered Friday night at the Turf Club for the first "Trivial Pursuits" tournament, attempted to answer questions like these for a grand prize of $200.

Based on the popular game of the same name, the competition raised a total of $375 to help send six Twin Falls High School students overseas in the American Field Service Exchange Program, said Judi Baxter who organized the tournament.

Recreation district proposed for Glens Ferry, King Hill

—GLENS FERRY—There's a lot of people in the Glens Ferry area who would like to see a recreation district established.

That's what Bob Janousek, Glens Ferry Chamber of Commerce president, told the chamber at its recent meeting.

Janousek said a recent town meeting held to air area residents' views on a recreation district showed there was support.

"We had people there from Hammett and King Hill and after we took a vote, it was unanimous that everyone wanted to see a district formed," Janousek said.

School Superintendent Jim Reed suggested to the chamber that a committee be formed to look at recreation districts throughout the state and see which ones succeeded and why they succeeded and which ones failed and why they failed.

Reed also told the chamber that a needs assessment should be done in the community to see what kind of recreation the people want and if there is really widespread support for the idea.

"This project is going to take two or three years," said Reed, "and if people are wanting something done recreationally in the community right now, it just isn't going to happen that fast."

He said he thinks there is enthusiasm in the community for the idea of a district and it would benefit Glens Ferry. He added that when a recreation district proposal failed in the Glens Ferry area 10 years ago, people who supported the idea then should not have given up, but kept working with the community on the district proposal.

Reed told the chamber that he agreed with County Commissioner John Shrum that those interested in forming a recreation district should make sure the community understands that the proposal is for a recreation district and not a swimming pool drive. Reed said because of the current interest in building a city pool the issue might be confused.

In a separate interview with the Times-News, Shrum said he would not speculate on the chances of a district passing this time, but that it definitely would not pass if the people just wanted a swimming pool. Shrum said a recreation district should begin with smaller goals.

"People don't understand what a recreation district can do," said Shrum. "All the recreational activities in Mountain Home and Glens Ferry are financed by the cities and their budgets are stretched to the limit."

"The county has contributed some revenue sharing funding to both cities to help with their recreational costs. It would just be more feasible and more beneficial for the Glens Ferry area to form a district."

Shrum said the steps to follow to form a district would be to petition the county and conduct an election. Then if the election passes by a simple majority, said Shrum, the people can recommend who they want on the district board and the board is then appointed by the governor.

Shrum said a public hearing is held to form a budget and the board administers the budget and the tax levies.

Draft Cassia resources guide clears environmental hurdles

BURLEY—The final Environmental Impact Statement on the proposed Cassia Resource Management Plan has been filed with the Environmental Protection Agency, said John Davis, Burley district manager for the Bureau of Land Management.

The statement analyzed each of five options of the Resource Management Plan for effects on soil, water, recreation opportunities, wildlife, wilderness values, cultural resources, minerals values, forestry values, economic and social conditions, said Davis.

The five options of the Resource Management Plan, which covers 476,273 acres of public land in the Snake River Resource Area, are:

• Option A, which allows for the management of lands to remain at present levels as directed by the existing 1974 land use plan.

• Option B, which would allow the production and use of marketable resource commodities at maximum levels.

• Option C, the proposed plan, which provides for a variety of land and resource use within the multiple use concept and sustained yield capabilities of the public lands.

• Option D, directed toward the protection and enhancement of wildlife habitat, scenic values, watershed values and cultural resources in the Cassia area.

• The no-grazing sub-option D, which provides a baseline from which to evaluate the consequences of various levels of livestock use.

The final Environmental Impact Statement on the proposed plan reflects public comments that were received in response to the Draft EIS, said Davis.

The filing of the EIS with the EPA initiates a 90-day protest period in which any group or individual who participated in the planning process or commented on the Draft EIS of the proposed Resource Management Plan may protest approval of the plan, Davis said.

Protests, which must be filed in accordance with Bureau planning regulations, must be filed with the Director of the Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C., by July 15, added Davis.

Copies of the EIS and the proposed Resource Management Plan are available at the Burley District BLM office or the Idaho State BLM office in Boise.

The final decision on the Resource Plan is expected to be made in September, said Davis.

Truck knocks car into house

TWIN FALLS — A parked car rear-ended by a truck struck a house at 1444 Spruce Ave. in Twin Falls on Saturday afternoon.

The accident occurred at 2:18 p.m. According to a police spokesman, William Thomas McClain, 17, of 1732 Highland Ave. E. in Twin Falls was driving east on the 1400 block of Spruce Avenue at about 25 miles per hour. He was looking over his shoulder at an acquaintance chasing his vehicle on foot down the street when he struck a parked car.

The parked car traveled about 74 feet and struck the house owned by Ann Shurra. The car came to rest near the back door, pushing an awning support beam and hit the house siding, pulling it down.

There were no injuries to residents in the house or to McClain and his passengers, 18-year-old John Deremiah of Twin Falls. McClain was cited for inattentive driving.

There was $2,500 damage to the house and $1,000 damage to McClain's truck. The parked car, owned by Spencer Bowman of Jerome, sustained $4,000 damage.

Council seeks more clean up

CASTLEFORD — Castleford City Council members decided at a regular meeting this week that a second notice will be mailed to townpeople who have not complied with the city's clean-up ordinance.

The ordinance requires that city lots be cleaned of weeds, grass and rubbish no later than June 1 of each year.

A copy of the ordinance was mailed to all city residents last April, asking for compliance.

According to the ordinance the city can clean up the lots of those few who do not meet the June 1 deadline and the cost of the clean up will then be assessed on the owner's property taxes.

Controversial 'Birds of Prey' film shown

TWIN FALLS — "Through the Eyes of Eagles," a controversial film on the Birds of Prey National Area south of Boise will be shown in its last Idaho screening at 6:15 p.m. Tuesday at the Twin Cinema on Kimberly Road.

The film, produced during the Carter administration by the Department of the Interior under Cecil Andrus, was withheld from distribution by James Watt, Andrus' successor.

It was released for a one-month period following a request filed under the federal Freedom of Information Act. It was shown in public screenings once in Boise, twice in Halley and will be seen for the final time Tuesday in Twin Falls before it is returned to the Department of Interior.

The film is 11 minutes in length and contains a strong pro-conservation message. Interior contends the film is outdated because of changes made in the status of lands near the natural area on the Snake River.

There is no charge for admission.

Thomas' loss reflects more than discontent

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

GOODING—It's not uncommon for incumbent elected officials to be ousted from office by voters backing their opponents. But routings such as the one suffered by Will Thomas, chairman of the Gooding County Board of Commissioners, suggest something more is afoot than just a mild dissatisfaction with an elected official.

Thomas, a six-year veteran of the board, is a colorful figure known for his battles with other county officials, particularly the sheriff's and prosecuting attorney's offices. He was defeated by Gooding lumber dealer Rod Hohnhorst in the May 22 Republican primary election by the lopsided margin of 1,705 to 564.

"I knew that was coming," says Thomas. "I knew what I took to stay a commissioner for 100 years and I knew what it'd take to get beat."

The lesson of two evils in Thomas' estimation, was confrontation with those practices in county government that he considers wrong. And foremost among the battles that ensued as a result of his philosophy were ones with the sheriff's office over personnel and expenses, he says. He adds that it was those skirmishes that led to his defeat.

"The sheriff's office just felt I was a stone in their way and had to get rid of me," Thomas says, adding that sheriff's deputies united behind Hohnhorst, campaigning for the challenger in an effort to oust Thomas.

Both Sheriff Robert Aja and Chief Deputy Bill Boyer declined to comment on whether their deputies campaigned in the race. Hohnhorst says if he had support from the sheriff's deputies he was not aware of it. But Hohnhorst's victory should not necessarily be regarded solely as the result of anti-Thomas sentiment. Some observers of Gooding County politics say Hohnhorst's strong personal popularity weighed heavily in the polling. That popularity and the unhealed sores of past battles involving Thomas may have combined to serve the incumbent with the drubbing he received.

Among those battles likely to have alienated support from Thomas were ones with the sheriff's office over the hiring of a full-time jailer and over reimbursement for expenses incurred by deputies.

Also, the administrative and financial problems of the county hospital, the resignation of former assessor Brent Glesler, the alleged agreement with the commissioners to keep the circumstances of Glesler's resignation quiet and the selection of Glesler's replacement may have been factors in Thomas' loss.

Thomas says he opposed expanding the sheriff's office staff through the addition of a full-time jailer because it would have added unnecessarily to the burden of county government that taxpayers are required to shoulder.

He says it is good business to get receipts for expenses that are to be submitted for reimbursement. He says he believes the sheriff's office failed to adequately document the expenses they were incurring.

Thomas, like Hohnhorst, is a supporter of the county hospital. He says its problems will be overcome and says a residents' committee

Property evaluations anger citizens

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

GOODING—Some Gooding County residents who are upset with what they see as inequities in property evaluations plan to air their complaints when the Gooding County Board of Commissioners meets Monday.

Many of the complaints come from the Hagerman area where evaluations have increased by as much as 300 percent in some cases, mostly residential lots.

Assessor Doyle Pugmire defends his actions in raising evaluations to comply with state law and to correct inequities that have existed for many years.

Don Muth, who lives in the Hagerman Valley, says property values on his home, one-half acre lot and a four-acre pasture have tripled from the 1983 assessment.

Although he isn't happy with that, he says his complaint is that similar nearby properties were given lower evaluations or placed in different categories with lower tax rates.

Although he says he is not accusing Pugmire of deliberately making the evaluations unequal, Muth says mistakes have been made and must be corrected.

Muth says he has called many people in the county, asking them to check their appraisals and encouraging them to attend the 10 a.m. Monday meeting in the courthouse when the commissioners sit as the county's Board of Equalization.

Besides Muth, other county residents are upset with the sharp increases.

Dick Strickland of Gooding says the sharp increase in many properties is unjustified, even though Pugmire says he is complying with state law.

"I'm tired of the state law," says Strickland, a real estate agent in Gooding.

Idaho's assessors were mandated by the state Legislature to bring assessed evaluations of all properties in their counties up to market value as part of the 1 Percent Initiative legislation passed in 1978.

Many counties dragged their heels in doing that and the state Tax Commission had to order some counties, including Gooding, to get their tax rolls in line.

Pugmire says the greatest discrepancies in evaluations has been in the Hagerman Valley and in other rural areas of the county.

At the same time, properties in the cities of Gooding and Wendell were evaluated too high, he says, and taxpayers there have been subsidizing those in the Hagerman area and elsewhere.

"I brought them up to market value in accordance with the state law," says Pugmire.

Increase sought for fairground use

By DIANA HOOLEY
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY—Plans are under way for the Elmore County Fairgrounds in Glenns Ferry to become a multi-purpose, year-round facility.

Andy Lillybridge, Elmore County Extension and fair secretary, says the interests of the city of Glenns Ferry and the interests of the fair board are not that far apart.

"We want to see the fairgrounds used all year. If we can get people, particularly from Mountain Home, to get used to the drive to Glenns Ferry for other activities, maybe we can get more participation at fair time," said Lillybridge, following a meeting of the fair board.

She said the county has budgeted money for recreational use within the county and the fair board is seeking to utilize some of this funding to build four horse shoe pits and an ice skating rink at the fairgrounds.

Lillybridge said the fair board would also be willing to work with Glenns Ferry Mayor Diane Messery and the Glenns Ferry Lions Club on the installation of two softball diamonds at the fairgrounds.

She noted there are some people in Mountain Home who would like to see the fair moved to Mountain Home where the county seat is and acknowledged there was a problem getting Mountain Home merchants to participate in the fair in Glenns Ferry.

"The issue about where the fairgrounds should be was voted on a ballot several years ago and Glenns Ferry came out in force to say the town would be glad to host the fair," said Lillybridge.

"Besides, I think Glenns Ferry needs the fair and I think we should support it where it is. We drive 40 miles to go shopping in Boise from Mountain Home. Why can't they drive the 28 miles to go to their county fair and a full day of fun?"

Lillybridge said the fair board also discussed the high cost of the free yearly barbecue. The meat costs between $400 and $450, said Lillybridge.

She said the board voted to turn part of the fair activities over to the Glenns Ferry Chamber of Commerce, which can either continue the barbecue or do something else. Lillybridge did say, however, that the fairboard would contribute the barbecue beef for the '84 fair before it is discontinued.

Breathtaking sights in Camas Prairie

FAIRFIELD—As one heads north from Gooding on Idaho 46, the landscape quickly changes, becoming one of rolling, rugged hills and yellow lichen-covered rock cliffs. Sagebrush and ground squirrels dot the landscape — the squirrels too often playing their own version of the Russian roulette by darting across the road in front of my car.

Suddenly a hawk in pursuit of some small bird takes a flight path directly in front of my car. I stop and watch a minute as the pair disappears behind a hill, leaving the outcome of the airborne chase unknown.

Slowly edging upward onto what is known as Johnson Hill, one suddenly is able to look down upon the Camas Valley, or Camas Prairie as it is more commonly known.

The sight, which is spectacular enough to have an official scenic overlook area, is just a bit breathtaking, especially to its nature enthusiasts. Right now the valley is bright green with the snow-streaked Sawtooths providing an awesome backdrop.

Pat Bean Out and about

"As one drives downward, a mass of yellow and purplish-blue flowers can be seen waving in fields alongside the road. The blue flowers are the Camas Lily, which people drive from miles away to see. The root of the plant was eaten by the Banock Indians; I am told by several area residents as I visit with them while they set up booths for the Camas Prairie Days, which continues today at the city park.

"They also tell me there are still a few old-timers who remember when the Indians passed through the valley each year.

"But they're getting fewer. We lost a couple this past winter," says a native of the area.

Almost everyone you talk to has his or her own story of the view from the top of Johnson Hill. "That hill gets you a bit, doesn't it," says Carol Boyd, a newcomer to the valley, who names the sight as a strong reason she's now living in Fairfield.

"That view is probably one of the reasons people move here — or at least try to move here," says Greg Wokersien a bit later.

Wokersien is the president of the newly organized Camas County Civic Organization that was formed a few months ago to try to generate interest in this predominantly farming and cattle community.

The group is the catalyst behind this Prairie Days event, and Wokersien, who says he was railroaded into being president, has been working a bit feverishly this morning to get things organized — a fact not too appreciated by one resident who passes by and mutters "How come the railroad's sitting down?"

"First time all morning," Wokersien good-naturedly responds.

Property owners must pay up for sidewalks

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE—North Rail Street property owners will have one month to pay for their sidewalks.

Shoshone City Council agreed Tuesday by unanimous vote to notify the property owners they must pay their portion of last summer's sidewalk construction within 30 days or the assessment will be certified for collection on the county tax rolls.

The city installed new curbs and gutters along North Rail Street last summer. By majority consent of the landowners, the city also installed sidewalks which the landowners are required by city ordinance to pay for.

City clerk Ron Botan told the council Tuesday only one business had paid the assessment while two others have paid a small portion.

The delinquent payments could be subject to interest payments and late penalties the same as all late taxes if they are placed on the tax rolls, officials explained.

In related business, the council agreed to wait on a proposed curb, gutter and sidewalk improvement project on South Rail Street east of Idaho 53 until a signed agreement can be reached with landowners for installation of the sidewalks.

The council also defined other areas needing gutter and sidewalk work including the block around the Courthouse and along West A Street.

In other business, the council delayed construction of the Date Street extension.

City overseer Clayton Clifford reported he has been unable to get a contractor to do the rock blasting and dozing work required to start the project.

Clifford also reported it will require $12,000 for seal-coat material plus another $3,200 for the oil mixture to repair city streets.

He added, he needs 1,000 tons of crushed gravel at a cost of $1,000 plus hauling fee if the Date Street project is to begin.

The street maintenance and construction funds in the city budget have approximately $20,000 remaining for the fiscal year — the council agreed there is not enough money to complete all the projects.

Clifford was told to go ahead with the seal-coating project and to continue looking for someone to do the blasting on Date Street but actual construction will be deferred for the present.

The council also agreed to:

- Hire Ken Vaught as a part-time summer employee for $3.35 per hour. Vaught will assist with extra summer work and will fill in while regular employees are on summer vacation.

- Authorized purchase of a $300 paint-stripping gun for the street department. Clifford explained the 37-year-old equipment they have been using is "worn out."

Controversy continues in Hagerman over trash burning

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN—Controversy over trash burning in Hagerman continues.

At the City Council meeting Tuesday, Mayor Marie Owsley called for public input to help the council decide if trash burning should be allowed to continue.

"I'd like to stop it period," city resident Charles Carter said.

"Rules to control burning," he said, "would probably never be enforced. If you stop burning altogether, you won't have any problems."

North Side

smoke from burning garbage. And they said burning fish bones and hair was a health nuisance. They said the burn barrels smoke because there are no air holes near the bottom.

"Many residents," they said, "try to burn green grass and other material that only smolders."

Penfold and Nora Clifford spoke in favor of burning.

"You can stir up a hornets nest just by somebody wanting to burn a few papers," Rowe said. "I can empty my garbage about every three months. I burn my papers. It takes about 20 minutes for them to burn. Anybody knows I'm not going to burn any garbage."

City building inspector Howard Wingard said many elderly residents in the city cannot afford garbage collection service and are unable to go to the dump regularly.

"These people," he said, "need to burn their trash."

proposed ordinance requiring that only proper burning containers with proper screen covers be used for burning and no garbage may be burned.

"And garbage is classified as anything that does not burn," she explained.

"Also," Hoffman continued, "Lead pile burning will only be done during specified periods in the spring and in the fall."

Owsley said this ordinance will be passed if it is agreeable to the city residents. Also, he added there will probably be no burning of any kind after 5 p.m. due to atmosphere conditions.

Councilman Jim Maxwell suggested everyone put a screen over their burn barrels so the paper, when burning, wouldn't fly out and onto neighbors' property.

"The business district," he said, "is a particularly hazardous burning area because of the many old buildings. Merchants, he said, should not let cardboard box piles accumulate before they are burned."

In related business, Ralph Taylor complained about uncovered dumpsters at apartments west of his residence on East Salmon St.

"Trash," he said, "is blown profusely from the dumpsters onto his property and surrounding area."

Owsley said he would take action on this problem.

UPS won't operate Burley facility

BURLEY — A package facility planned for Burley will not be operated by United Parcel Services, according to Dan Davidson of the UPS office in Pocatello.

The facility, to be known as the Package House, will be a private business owned by Duane and Barbara Damon of Rupert, and will be a package drop-off service for a number of parcel carriers, including UPS.

A story in The Times-News last Thursday inferred that the business would be a UPS-operated facility. The story concerned the Burley City Council and the Damons' attempt to secure parking access to their business property.

In addition to the package drop-off service, the Damons will offer an answering service and private-mail boxes. The new business will be located at the intersection of Overland Avenue and Railroad Street in Burley.

Fairfield

The idea for the prairie days, Wokosien says, was sparked by musicians Steve Strunk and Rick Strickland, whose recently released album, "Across the Prairie," includes a couple of songs about Fairfield.

Strunk told me the album needed to be kicked off here, Wokosien says, adding that a couple of other bands, Shoes and Pickens and Summerline, will be on hand with Strunk and Strickland Sunday (today) to provide entertainment for the celebration.

"We couldn't pay them. We just promised to feed them and give them a couple of beers for showing up," he says.

Also performing will be the local dance group, The Dance Factory, which won a recent Gong-Show contest in Twin Falls.

Wokosien says more people would move to the area if there were some way to make a living.

The city limit sign as one enters Fairfield notes that the city has a population of 409. Wokosien says that was probably the 1974 census figure and that today the city has a population of 407.

"We get the skiers in the winter and the fishermen and recreationists in the summer. Right now, the biggest employer is the Soldier Mountain ski lift in the winter. We just lost a railroad and a sawmill. We need a business to provide jobs," says Wokosien, who is an insurance agent working in his father's abstract and title business.

Newcomer Boyd and her husband Bob found their own way of moving to the area they fell in love with a few years ago. They have a small acreage they are homesteading.

A member of the Camas County Writers Workshop who writes a column for the Bellevue Country Times called "Notes from Foggy Bottom," Boyd says the valley is the "most spiritual place I've ever seen. It has a rural tranquility that can seldom be found."

She goes on to tell about watching her conservationist son check out the numerous sage grouse in the area.

"It was fascinating to watch the grouse go into their mating rite. They blow up their chests, then let out the air causing what must be their mating call," explains Boyd.

As much as she raved about the beauty of the area when she moved here last September, she says real-estate kept telling her "Wait-until you see the winters."

But Boyd says she survived — even the 19 hours when the area was without power.

As we talk, another member of the writers' group that holds its meetings in the local bar and publishes its own book yearly — this year's book is "Redneck Review of Literature II" — stops to chat.

She is Nan Reedy, who introduces her young daughter, Camas.

"And she wasn't named after the county," Reedy quickly notes. She was named after a favorite horse.

"And the horse's name," pushes Boyd. "Camas County," Reedy smiles. So does Camas, the daughter.

Taxes

Pugnire says, "There is no reason why the Gooding or Wendell area should subsidize that (the Hagerman) area."

He also says he has received only a few complaints from people in the Hagerman area and says if he was wrong in his appraisals he would have heard more.

"I think the people down there are agreeing with the values I put on," he says.

Pugnire lives near Hagerman and says he has had a personal conflict with Muth for some time. He says he has talked with Muth about the appraisals in the area and has made changes since.

Pugnire was appointed assessor in September of last year and says he has spent much of that time trying to equalize property assessments and placing property in the proper categories.

He says his office cannot look at every piece of property every year by law they must look at 20 percent of the properties in each category each year — and that he is being blamed for some of the errors of his predecessors.

Pugnire is backed in what he says is trying to do by some private appraisals in the Magic Valley familiar with the county. However, not all agree with how he is going about it.

Bod Lawrason an appraiser with Lawrason Realty in Hagerman says property evaluations in Hagerman have been low for a number of years. He says Pugnire is right to bring them up to market value.

"It's something that is necessary, but in one jump," he says.

Lawrason says Pugnire should have raised the assessments over a period of years to cushion the shock to taxpayers and to give them time to adjust to higher taxes.

He also says new construction, which has been appraised near market value in the last few years, was unfairly given the same increase as old construction, which was assessed too low. As a result, some new homes are appraised well above market value, he says.

However, Gooding Realtor Bob Muffley agrees wholeheartedly with Pugnire.

"I can tell you right now he's absolutely right," says Muffley, who also is an appraiser.

Bill Kersey, former Jerome County assessor who is now a realtor and appraiser also agrees with Pugnire.

"The thing is, Doyle is just trying to do the job mandated by the Legislature," says Kersey, who has worked in Gooding County but is not familiar with the most recent reassessments.

"Their values down there are probably right on the button," he says.

"Do Glesler's resignation, Thomas says "It was not an agreement between Glesler and the board of county commissioners, it was an agreement Will Thomas made. The other commissioners never agreed. A vote was never taken."

Glesler resigned his position as county assessor when it was discovered he had allegedly used county funds to finance a personal trip. The alleged agreement was to accept his resignation and to not publicize the reason.

Thomas says his run-ins with the sheriff and with prosecuting attorney John Arkoosh caused Arkoosh to threaten criminal prosecution of Thomas for nepotism.

In an August 1983 letter, Arkoosh stated he would begin criminal proceedings against Thomas if his son didn't resign his position as caretaker of the Gooding County Fairgrounds within 10 days.

"Arkoosh was instituted and the younger Thomas still holds the job, Thomas says.

Thomas, while disappointed by his defeat, expresses confidence in Hohnhorst and says that if he was voted out of office by people searching for a "yes man" on the board, they voted — for the wrong man — in Hohnhorst. His successor will be equally diligent in his efforts to administer county government, Thomas predicts.

But Thomas also indicates he will not become a weak lame-duck commissioner. He says he doesn't want people to perceive him as "getting even" but says "there's some problems that I feel existed for a long time and before I leave they're going to be taken care of — one way or another."

His term expires January 1.

Man claims he didn't disable jail toilet

TWIN FALLS—Donald Lawrence, 38, of Twin Falls pleaded innocent this week to a charge that he backed up a toilet at the Twin Falls County Jail on April 15.

Lawrence was being held in the jail on another charge when he allegedly flushed, stuffing from his mattress down the toilet.

At a Monday hearing, Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl ordered a trial scheduled on the felony charge of injuring jail property. Lawrence was returned to the jail until further proceedings.

In other cases heard this week in district court:

- John C. Baker, 35, of Murtaugh was placed on a two-year probation after serving four months at the North Idaho Correctional Institution in Coltonwood. Baker was convicted of a felony charge of drunken driving.

- As part of the probation, Baker was ordered to refrain from alcohol and enroll in a counseling program, if ordered by the probation department.
- Terry Kent Peters, 36, of Twin Falls pleaded guilty to a grand theft charge. Peters was accused of renting a chain saw from Taylor Rental, at 287 Washington St. N. in Twin Falls, on Jan. 18 and then pawning it.

A pre-sentence report was ordered and Peters was released.

- Ronald Eugene Laib, 46, of 231 Caswell Ave. in Twin Falls entered a guilty plea to a charge of attempting to bribe an officer on Feb. 28.

While being arrested for drunken driving, Laib had asked a city police officer several times to "forget" the charge, according to a complaint.

Meehl accepted the admission and ordered a pre-sentence investigation. Laib was released until his next court appearance.

- Jay Dee Glendon, 33, of 340 Ostrander St. N. in Twin Falls received a three-year prison sentence for writing a bad check. Glendon wrote a $100 check to Smith's Food King in Twin Falls on Oct. 29 without having sufficient funds in his bank account, according to a complaint filed with the court.

The judge retained jurisdiction in the case for four months. At the end of that time, Glendon will be returned to court to determine if his behavior warrants a probation or full service of his sentence.

- John Dale Kleir, 21, of Twin Falls pleaded guilty Friday morning to burglarizing the Adam's Petroleum business, at 204 Railroad Ave. in Twin Falls, on May 18.

French win gives Martina Grand Slam

She drubs Evert Lloyd 6-3, 6-1

PARIS (AP) — Martina Navratilova became only the fifth player in history to capture the elusive Grand Slam of tennis Saturday when she crushed defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd 6-3, 6-1 to win the women's singles title at the French Open championships.

With last year's Wimbledon, U.S. and Australian Open crowns already under her belt, the 27-year-old Czechoslovakian-born naturalized American joined an elite band of players to win the world's four most prestigious tournaments consecutively.

Only two other women, America's Maureen Connolly in 1953 and Australia's Margaret Court Smith in 1970, have accomplished the feat. Among the men, Don Budge won it in 1938 and Australia's Rod Laver did it twice, in 1962 and 1969.

If she wins the women's doubles final with Pam Shriver on Sunday, Navratilova will become only the second person to win the slam in both singles and doubles. She teamed with fellow Australian Ken Fletcher to win all four mixed doubles titles in 1983.

Today, John McEnroe will attempt to become the first American to win the French Open men's singles crown since 1955, when Tony Trabert won his second straight here on the slow red clay courts of Roland-Garros Stadium. The top-seeded McEnroe will play Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, who is seeking his first Grand Slam title in his fifth trip to a Grand Slam tournament final.

Two other championships were decided on Saturday. Yannick Noah and Henri Leconte became the first French pair since 1946 to win the men's doubles, defeating Czechoslovakia's Tomas Smid and Pavel Slzda 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-2, and American's Dick Stockton and Jim Smith captured the mixed doubles, downing Australia's Anne Minter and Laurie Warder 6-2, 6-4.

Navratilova's crushing 63-minute victory over Lloyd was her second French open title — she also won here in 1982 — and her ninth Grand Slam tournament crown. She has won Wimbledon four times, the U.S. Open once and the Australian Open twice.

"I feel very proud to be among a very select group of tennis players," a jubilant Navratilova told the sun-drenched 17,000 capacity crowd after her victory on the Center Court at Roland Garros.

In addition to her winner's prize of $36,000, she collected a special $1 million bonus put up by the International Tennis Federation two years ago to the next Grand Slam winner.

Budge was present when IITF president Philippe Chatrier presented Navratilova with the check at a special award ceremony shortly after the match.

When the new French champion turned up 45 minutes late — apparently held up by traffic after leaving the stadium — Budge said: "In my day, I would have been on time for a thousand bucks. Boy, things sure have changed, but I think it's great."

Navratilova went into the final with an awesome record. She had lost only two matches in two years and had dropped only one set — to Hana Mandlikova in the semifinals — on the way to the final here.

Lloyd, her great rival, has not beaten her since the Australian Open in 1982 and had taken only three sets off her in 10 meetings since.

The defending champion, herself trying for a place in the record books — a sixth women's singles title at the French — played well in the early stages and had three break points in the third game for a 2-1 lead. But instead, she quickly found herself 1-3 down and soon only three more games in the match.

In the second set, Navratilova played some of the best tennis of her career. Serving powerfully and volleying cleanly, she wore down Lloyd with a stream of delicate drop shots that had her opponent scurrying in the heat towards the net.

Lloyd did not win a single point on her service and only seven in the entire set, five of them in the sixth game when she saved two match points and broke Navratilova's serve.

Serving to save her title, she fell behind 0-40 for the fourth time in the set and Navratilova put away her third match point with a volley into the open court.

"I said I didn't think I would be as nervous in the final and I wasn't," Navratilova said. "Once you get there, it's a little easier."

"I've still got the doubles to play and we're going for the slam in that as well, so I can't do too much celebrating tonight."

Lloyd's challenge faded in the heat, the only real fight of the day came, literally, in the stands.

In the middle of the opening set, play was halted for over one minute when two men stood up and began exchanging blows before being restrained by other spectators.

Reach for it

Brett Barton of Twin Falls gets to a maximum-reaching position but can't quite get hold of his prey during the steer wrestling competition in the Sixth District High School Rodeo Saturday night. Competitors in the two-night event was scheduled to end Saturday but due to a late start and some pre-competition ceremonies, results were not available at press time.

Breland boxes, bombards into Olympic finals

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Mark Breland showed he can box as well as bomb as he led five American world champions into the finals of the Olympic Boxing Trials Saturday.

The 6-2 1/2 Breland, the world 17-pound class champion from Brooklyn, N.Y., won his 102nd fight against a single loss, with a 5-0 decision over Louis Howard, the Pan American Games champion from St. Louis.

Three other world champions won semifinals at the afternoon session. They were Tyrrell Biggs of Philadelphia, super heavyweight; Ricky Womack of Detroit, 178, and Frank Tate, 156.

Fernell Whitaker of Norfolk, Va., the 130-pound world champion, advanced to his class final Saturday night, with a 5-0 decision over Anthony Haskins of the U.S. Army.

Haskins had scored a decision over Whitaker in 1982 and was the last man to beat him.

Whitaker knocked down Haskins with a left in the first round and dominated the bout with his power and quickness.

In the final, Whitaker will meet Joe Belinc of Marysville, Wash., who scored a 5-0 decision over Joe Gamache of Lewiston, Maine in a mauling match.

Breland exhibited a "good left jab and good foot movement in beating Howard, who tried to get inside and did score when he could get there."

Breland landed his vaunted right hand several times, but Howard never looked in danger of going down.

"He took a lot of good shots," said Breland. "He kept his hands so I knew I could beat him boxing, by staying outside."

Breland will fight in Sunday's final against David Gutierrez of San Diego, who scored a 3-2 decision over Tim Christensen.

Biggs' big weapon in his 5-0 decision over Michael Williams of Broussard, La., was his punishing left jab.

Biggs knocked Williams down with a jab in the first round and was effective with it throughout the fight.

Sunday, Biggs will fight Craig Payne of Livonia, Mich., who scored a 5-0 decision over Nathaniel Fitch of the U.S. Army in a bout fought at close quarters. In four previous meetings with Biggs, Payne lost three decisions and on a medical disqualification.

Womack used his aggressiveness to edge Evander Holyfield of Atlanta 3-2. Holyfield had outpointed Womack in the Pan American Games Trials and Box-off.

Womack's final opponent will be Bennie Head of Augusta, Ga., who stopped Clarence Dewberry of the U.S. Army in the second round.

Frank Tate used a hard, accurate left jab to gain a 5-0 decision over Darin Allen of Columbus, Ohio.

Tate, of Detroit, who also displayed a crisp right hand in the third round, will fight Ron Essett of Indianapolis in the final.

Essett, who punches very well moving backwards, scored a 4-1 decision over Kevin Bryant of the U.S. Army.

Michael Tyson, 17-year-old National Golden Gloves champion from Caldwell, N.Y., pounded his way into the 201-pound final by stopping Henry Milligan of Hockessin, Del., at 2:19 of the second round.

A hard right forec Milligan, a Princeton graduate — and — civil engineer, to take a standing eight count in the second. Then after a right/left/right, Milligan was given another standing eight. Tyson then fired five-blow salvo to the head, and as Milligan went down, the referee stopped the fight.

Andrew Minsker of Milwaukee, Wis., and Bernard Gray of Boynton Beach, Fla., advanced to the 125-pound final.

Minsker outjabbed Derrick Robinson, a high school senior from St. Louis, for a 4-1 decision.

Kentucky Derby winner Swale adds victory in Belmont

NEW YORK (AP) — This time there were no excuses for Swale, the Kentucky Derby winner who finished seventh in the Preakness. The track was soft, his workouts were relaxed and he was rested.

On Saturday, Swale won the $316,700 Belmont Stakes by four lengths, giving trainer Woody Stephens and jockey Laffit Pincay Jr. their third straight victory in the final leg of the Triple Crown.

Stephens and Pincay, who became the first trainer or jockey to win three consecutive Belmonts this century, combined to win with Caveat in 1983 and Conquistador Cleo in 1982.

"The more you get, the sweeter it gets," said Stephens, the 70-year-old Hall of Famer who had his troubles this spring. Not only did he lose Devil's Bag, the winner, back for the Kentucky Derby with a pre-derby injury, but he battled pneumonia which sidelined him for most of Derby week.

"He was going nice all the way, the pace was easy and I just didn't know how far he would go," said Stephens.

"He had excuses every time he lost," said

Stephens. "Time between races always helps him." (The Preakness was three weeks ago.) He worked faster than we liked him to in the Preakness. At Keeneland (for the Lexington Stakes) the track was too sloppy, I feel we would be all right for the Belmont.

"This is great medicine. I feel real good," he said. "It was nice to be the trainer of three."

Despite the sweltering 90-degree weather in this longest of the Triple Crown races, Swale equaled the fourth fastest Belmont in history with a time of 2:27 1/5 for the 1 1/2 miles. Swale equaled the 1968 time of Stage Door Johnny. Secretariat set the Belmont record of 2:24 in 1973.

Swale took the lead shortly after the start and led the field of 10 other 3-year-olds the rest of the way in the richest $1 million event.

"On the backside, he was very strong," said Pincay. "We weren't going to let anybody go. I think he's the best 3-year-old in the country ... at the Preakness (where Swale finished seventh), that was hard, and he didn't handle it. That's why we got beat."

"At the Preakness, he warmed up good, and today he warmed up good. In the stretch, I knew he had it. I knew I had a lot of horse. It was one of the easiest today. He was on the lead, and there was a slow pace. Everybody likes to have a horse like that," Pincay said.

Pine Circle, 25-1 shot, came between horses with a quarter of a mile to go and rallied to finish second, three lengths in front of Morning Bob, who was a head in front of Play On, the second choice.

Gate Dancer, the Preakness winner running without the drug Lasix, which he used in Kentucky and Maryland, finished out of the money. Lasix, a diuretic, is banned in New York.

The first quarter was run in 24 1/4, the half mile in 49 2/5, three quarters in 1:13 3/5 and the mile in 1:37 3/5.

Swale, who now has nine victories in 14 career starts, also turned in a second-place effort in the Lexington Stakes after winning the Florida Derby. Before that, he finished third in the Fountain of Youth after winning the Hutcheson Stakes.

The son of 1977 Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew, Swale was sent off at odds of 3-2 by the crowd of 47,369 and became the 10th horse to win the Kentucky Derby-Belmont double and the first since Bold Forbes in 1976.

Swale also became the 19th New York-based horse to win the Belmont in the past 23 years.

Play On, the Preakness runner-up sent off as the second choice, was first out of the gate, but Pincay put the dark bay colt in front after that.

"This horse can really run," said Pincay. "He's just not consistent. He doesn't like hard tracks and that's really why he ran the way he did (in the Preakness). I knew at the quarter pole we'd win."

"He broke super. It was a very slow pace. At the five-eighths pole somebody came close and I let him go again. Woody Stephens deserves a lot of credit for this," Pincay said.

Swale paid $5, $4.40 and $3.60. Pine Circle, ridden by Patrick Day, paid $15 and $7. Morning Bob, a supplemental entry at a cost of $32,500 since he was not nominated for the Belmont, paid $14.40.

Morning Bob, a 6-1 shot ridden by Jorge Velasquez, finished a head in front of Play On. Completing the order of finish were Coax Me Chad, Gate Dancer, Silent King, Exaltic, Romantic Tradition, Back Bay Barrister and Minstral Star.

The winner's purse from the record gross purse also was a record — $358,500. It boosted Swale's career earnings to $1,790,341.

Play On, ridden by Jean-Luc Samyn, trailed Swale by 1 1/2 lengths after a mile and by the same margin at the top of the stretch, with Gate Dancer running third. But Swale was in command and, by midstretch, built a three-length lead with Morning Bob second and Play On backing up to third.

Boboli-Stables Pine Circle, who had finished sixth in the Derby and fifth in the Preakness, earned $113,674 for finishing second. Morning Bob, the Pennsylvania Derby winner owned by Michael Spielman and Richard Bonze, collected $22,004. Play On and Welcome Farm got $31,002.

Celtics can win championship today

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Boston Celtics, who only a week ago played like a bunch of sissies, moved within one game of an unprecedented 15th National Basketball Association title which they can wrap up today.

Game 6 of the best-of-seven Championship Series against the Los Angeles Lakers will be televised nationally from the Forum starting at 1:30 p.m. MDT (CBS-TV, Channel 2).

The Celtics, led by Larry Bird, took a 3-2 lead Friday night after beating the Lakers 121-103 at Boston Garden for their second straight series victory over Los Angeles.

A Lakers triumph today would force a seventh and deciding game, to be played at Boston Tuesday night.

"I'm confident we'll bring it back to Boston for the seventh game," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley. "The team with the strongest heart can and will win."

"We have to take control of Sunday's game early," said Los Angeles forward Kurt Rambis. "The Celtics have the upper hand in the series."

Boston's M.L. Carr said the Celtics "cannot get complacent at this point. We have to go out now and play our hearts out."

Bird said the Celtics played like "sissies" following a 137-104 triumph by the Lakers at the Forum in Game 3. It was a contest in which Los Angeles outrebounced Boston 63-64.

The Celtics bounced back with a 125-125 overtime overtime Wednesday night, and on Friday were led by Bird's 34-point, 17-rebound performance.

In both Games 4 and 5, the Celtics outrebounced the Lakers and had better success defending a Los Angeles fast break that devastated them in Game 3.

If the Celtics win today they will become the 10th NBA team in the last 12 years to win the championship on their opponent's home court.

Much of the talk after Friday night's game involved Bird's magnificent performance and the 92-degree temperature on the Boston Garden floor.

Bird, who had hit on only 41.8 percent of his field goal attempts in the first four games of the series, went 15-for-20 Friday night.

"Larry is a gold mine," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones. "When he didn't get the outside shot at the beginning, he just went to the offensive boards and put the ball in the hoop."

Bird scored 11 of his points in the third quarter as the Celtics extended a precarious 33-33 halftime lead to a healthy 88-77 advantage entering the final 12 minutes. The Lakers weren't closer than seven points in the fourth period.

"Bird was awesome," Riley said. "It looked like he was 15 years old out there. Every movement he made was designed to conserve his energy."

Riley said the heat helped slow down his team's running game.

"It was extremely hot, oppressively hot," he said. "It seems they handled it better than us, but everyone was affected by it."

The Lakers received sub-par performances from their top superstars. Center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar made only seven of his 25 field goal attempts in scoring 19 points, while Earvin "Magic" Johnson was 3-of-9 in fielding 10 points. Johnson scored only two points in the second half.

"I'm disappointed," but there is Sunday," Johnson said. "We have to shoot better. We'll be back (in Boston) Tuesday."

Holmes claims King withheld bout profits

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — Heavyweight boxer Larry Holmes, already battling one promoter, court over a disputed contract, has accused another promoter, Don

Boxing

King, of withholding profits from the 1982 title defense against Gerry Cooney.

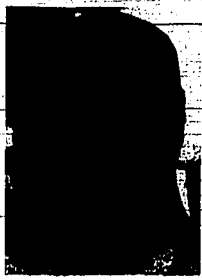

Attorney Gus Millides filed a lawsuit Friday on Holmes' behalf, contending King has engaged in a "flagrant and fraudulent attempt" to avoid paying Holmes a large sum of money. The exact amount was not specified.

The suit represents the second major fight Holmes has undertaken against King, who has promoted the heavyweight many times. Holmes relinquished his World Boxing Council title Dec. 11, 1983, rather than fight Greg Page under contract with King.

The suit, filed Friday, asks Northampton County Court to require King to produce unaltered account books from the fight within 20 days and to appoint an auditor to determine how much money is owed.

Judge Robert A. Freedberg ordered King to show cause why he should not be made to account for revenue from the fight and why an injunction should not be issued to obtain pertinent records.

A hearing has been set for July 5 at the Northampton County Court.

LARRY HOLMES — Fighting promoters house in Easton, where the undefeated boxer lives.

A woman at King's New York City office said no one was available to comment on the legal action.

In "the other suit," now in U.S. District Court in Philadelphia, Holmes claims promoter-attorney Richard Hirschfeld, of Virginia Beach, Va., tricked him into signing a contract last October for promotion of the upcoming fight against Gerrie Coetzee.

Hirschfeld's attorney in the case said Friday the litigation probably would prevent Holmes from defending his International Boxing Federation title against Coetzee before next January.

Golf

Beck holds one-shot Westchester edge

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Chip Beck, a frequent challenger, but not yet a winner, in the PGA Tour, takes a one-shot lead and some high hopes into today's final round of the $500,000 Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Classic.

"I've spent a lifetime trying to get 'in this situation,'" said the 27-year-old Beck, who led through three rounds as recently as two weeks ago. "You can't think about winning a golf tournament." Beck said after his hard-won round of 70, 1-under par, in Saturday's third round. "All you can do is to think about playing good golf. That's what I'm going to try to do tomorrow — just play good golf."

"I hope I can handle it."

Beck, the leader all the way in this event in the suburbs of New York, completed three trips over the hills, a 6,887-yard Westchester Country Club course in 202, 11 shots under par.

Jay Haas moved into second place with a 69 in the continuing muggy, hazy heat. Five other players before him, the temperatures reached into the mid-90s. Haas, in a slump most of the season, will take a 203 total, 10 under par, into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $90,000 first prize.

"After the way I've played this year, it's a real pleasure to be in this position," Haas said. "Although Beck has not won, 'he's been in the hunt before — he's just a rookie,'" said Haas.

"He led through three rounds at Muirfield (two weeks ago). He's been there. And he's playing good. We'll have to catch him," Haas said.

Tom Kite, who has finished in the top 10 in five of his last six starts, and Scott Simpson were another stroke back at 204. Kite had a no-bogey round of 68 and Simpson had a 70.

They appeared to be the only others in title contention. It was another two strokes back to Jim

The group — at 207 — included Mark Lye, Gary McCord, Mark O'Meara and Loren Roberts. Lye had 66, McCord a 67, O'Meara and Roberts 70s.

South African veteran Gary Player, once within two strokes of the lead, backed off with a 38 over the last nine holes and finished with a 73. At 206, he was a distant six strokes back.

Beck, who started the day with a two-stroke lead, maintained that margin over the front nine, but saw it begin to slip. On two occasions, Haas advanced to a share of the lead.

But Beck ran in a 35-foot birdie putt on the 14th. Haas got back in a share of the top spot with a 10-foot birdie on the 15th, then fell one behind with a bogey from a bunker on the 18th.

"A mediocre round of golf," said Beck. "I'm just fortunate nobody made a run at me."

'Lean, mean' Alcott surges in LPGA tourney

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Amy Alcott says you have to be "lean and mean" to play golf in stifling 95-degree heat. And she showed her stamina Saturday, overcoming a four-stroke deficit to take a one-stroke lead after three rounds in the $300,000 LPGA "Mother's Day Kite" Classic.

"You gotta be tough," said Alcott, who shot a 3-under-par 69 to overtake Patty Sheehan, the leader after 36 holes.

Sheehan fell into second place, one stroke ahead of Connie Challenor and Donna White, with a 2-over-par 74 over the 6, 283-yard White Manor Country Club course in suburban Philadelphia.

Alcott carded a 54-hole record of 210, and Sheehan 211. Challenor and White followed at 212.

"You have to be in shape," said Alcott, her face flushed from her trek around the sun-drenched court in high humidity. "The heat takes so much energy out of you. You just move from shot to shot to shot and do your best."

She said she had a lot of momentum and played a "very solid, consistent round of golf."

"From tee to green I played exceptional golf, but I can do better. My concentration was there, and in the heat it's tough to maintain your momentum and concentration."

She hit a sand wedge to within two feet of the pin for her first birdie at the second hole, and holed a 20-footer at three.

On the sixth, when she led Sheehan, Alcott hit an 8-iron six feet from the pin and made the putt. She took the lead with a sand wedge to within 12 feet of the hole and made it.

Sheehan is striving not only for the $32,500 first prize in this tournament, but also the $500,000 bonus to the golfer who wins two of the "last three tournaments." She won the LPGA Championship last week.

Challenor, who missed the cut in eight of 14 tournaments this year, tied Alcott for the lead with at six under with a birdie on the 15th hole, but fell back again with bogeys at 16 and 18.

Juli Inkster had 213. Kathy Baker's 71 left her at two under 214, four strokes off the pace.

Sheehan, who last week won the LPGA Championship by a record 10 bogeys, didn't make a birdie Saturday. She had one bogey on each nine.

After her four birdies on the front nine, Alcott played steady on the back side, carding one bogey and no birds.

JoAnne Carner, who won two weeks ago at Corning and has a shot at the $500,000 bonus, appeared out of the running with a 2-over-par 218. She shot a 73 Saturday and had three rounds of 70-75-73.

Betsy Solntom, Jane Crawford, Sue Fogelman, Vicki Ferguson and Sharon Barrett tied at even par 218. Barrett, who was three shots out of the lead after 36 holes, fired a front nine 40 Saturday and wound up with a four over 76.

Talmantez signs with Orioles

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Greg Talmantez, an 18-year-old pitcher who struck out 23 batters in a seven-inning game last week, has signed with the Baltimore Orioles for a reported $45,000 bonus.

The Orioles made Talmantez, a recent graduate of Idaho Falls High School, their third-round draft selection.

The 6-3, 215-pound right-hander won eight straight games, struck out 128 batters and had an earned run average of 0.39 his senior year in high school.

Talmantez will report to Miami, Fla., for the Orioles training camp and then will be assigned to either Bluefield, W. Va., with the Appalachian Rookie League or Newark, N.Y., of the Class A New York-Pennsylvania League.

Local pros play 54 for charity

TWIN FALLS — Three Magic Valley professionals will mark June 22 as National Golf Day by playing 54 holes of golf in three Twin Falls area courses.

Professionals John Peterson, Jerome Country Club; Mike Costello, Canyon Springs; and Mike Hamblin, Twin Falls Municipal hospital, will compete in the daylong event.

The trio will play 18 holes at each of those three courses with members invited to pledge funds, based on scoring, with proceeds earmarked for the junior scholarship fund, "veteran" golf rehabilitation, National Golf Foundation, National Amputee Association and the USGA.

Peterson said club members will be asked to pledge five cents for a birdie, 10 cents for a par, 25 cents for a bogey and 50 cents for each eagle that his or her pro make during the tour of the three courses.

"For example, if their pro were to make 54 pars, the sponsor would owe $5.40 in pledges," Peterson said. "If a player were lucky enough to make a hole-in-one, it would cost the sponsor a $10 bill."

Dubbing the trio "The Iron Man of Golf," Peterson said "it should prove to be a fun day with spectators invited to watch while the players are at their course."

ISU gets new assistant coach

FOCATTELLO — Idaho State University's football team has a new defensive coordinator.

He's Mike Daly, who has spent the last five years as the defensive coordinator at North Dakota State. North Dakota State is the defending NCAA-Division II national champ.

Daly replaces Denny Moller, who resigned in April to go into business here.

"We're very pleased to get a guy with his background — his success and experience — into our program," said ISU head coach Jim Koetter.

Koetter said that in North Dakota State's last 37 games, the Bison have given up an average of just 11.6 points.

Whitewater fest in Stanley

STANLEY — The Stanley-Whitewater Rodeo, an annual event for whitewater enthusiasts, has been scheduled for June 16-17.

Events will include a slalom, a downriver race and a freestyle contest. Registration will begin Saturday at 10 a.m. at Rough Creek Bridge, 10 miles east of Stanley on State Highway 77.

The events are open to the public and boaters of all abilities are invited to participate.

Open horse show Saturday

JEROME — An open horse show will be held Saturday at the Jerome County Fairgrounds.

The show is sponsored by the Idaho State Horse Show Association of the Magic Valley and will count toward year-end points for members of the association. This is the second association show, with two more still to be held — in Burley on July 14 and in Gooding on Aug. 18.

The judge will be Anne Phillips Galley of Eagle. Awards will be given to first-place winners in each class, with ribbons for second through sixth places. High-point awards will be presented in nine different categories.

Entry fee for youth classes is $2.50 each, and adult and open classes are $3.50 for each class.

Further information can be obtained by phoning 543-6083.

Signups for bicycling trek

BOISE — Applications are being accepted for Lung Distance Bike and Backpacking Treks, sponsored by the Idaho Lung Association.

The next bike trek, a 200-mile tour through the Hagerman Valley and adjacent areas, is scheduled for July 6-8.

The first backpacking trip is a combination three- or six-day hike through the northern Sawtooth Mountains along the Alpine-Way Trail, beginning July 14. The three-day hike will end at Stanley Lake and the six-day hike will conclude at Grand Jean. The trek leader will be Luther Linkhart, an author, photographer, outdoorsman and authority on the Sawtooths.

Further information about both activities can be obtained by phoning Myrna Marker at 344-6567.

Horsemanship clinic in Bliss

BLISS — Ray Hunt will hold a clinic on horse breaking and horsemanship at the Bliss Rodeo Grounds June 18-22. Hunt has given clinics on horsemanship through the United States, Canada, Mexico, Europe and Australia.

The fee for the colt-breaking clinic is $250, while the horsemanship clinic fee is $200. Spectators will be charged $10 per day, although individuals taking part in the clinics and their immediate families will be admitted free.

Further information can be obtained by phoning Morris Nielson at 534-5239.

TWIN FALLS — Entries are now open for The Times-News Twin Falls Open Tennis Tournament.

The tournament will be played June 22-24 at the Frontier Field courts.

There will be 11 different singles and 13 different doubles events.

Registration fee is $10 for singles; $12 for doubles, and the deadline is 5 p.m. on June 18.

Further information can be obtained by phoning Pink Robbins at 733-8891.

Olympic archery trials end

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — Competition for places on the U.S. Olympic archery team ended Saturday with selection of a six-member squad led in tryouts by Darrell Pace of Hamilton, Ohio.

Pace and Rick McKinney, Glendale, Ariz., led throughout the competition on Miami University's Oxford campus.

Also named to the team were Glenn Meyers, Fremont, Mich.; Ruth Rowe, Metczen, Va.; Benita Edds, Terra Haute, Ind.; and Trena King, Kentwood, Mich.

Pace finished the four-day, 288-arrow double FITA international round with 2,567 out of a possible perfect score of 2,880. McKinney had 2,546 and Meyers took third with 2,485.

In the women's division, Rowe shot a 2,456, followed by Edds with 2,426 and King with 2,421.

The U.S. team will compete in the Olympics August 7-10 in Los Angeles.

Arkansas cagers top Chinese

TOKYO (AP) — Olympic candidate Alvin Robertson scored 19 points to lead the University of Arkansas to a 84-66 victory over the Chinese National team in the four-nation Kirin World Basketball Tournament Saturday.

Center Joe Klebe, another Olympic candidate for the U.S. Olympic team to the Los Angeles Games, and forward Leavay Sutton also contributed to the American university's victory with 18 points each.

The American collegians will meet the Japanese National team in the second game today.

Tracksters under more scrutiny

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The University of Texas at El Paso's track program, already under investigation by the NCAA, now will be looked at by the El Paso County district attorney's office for possible criminal violations, District Attorney Steve Simmons says.

Simmons said Friday that a report from three attorneys investigating the track program showed enough evidence to merit a probe by his office.

He declined to specify which areas of Texas law may have been violated, but said investigators from the El Paso Police Department would help in the probe.

Possible irregularities in UTEP's track program first surfaced in early April when head coach Larry Heldebrecht abruptly resigned amid allegations that he may have kept some reimbursement money from track meet sponsors that was intended for the school.

Decathlon record established

MANNHEIM, West Germany (AP) — Juergen Hingens of West Germany collected 8,798 points to set a world record in the decathlon Saturday during national Olympic trials.

Hingens, 26, shattered the old mark of 8,779 points which he set last June 5 in Bernhausen, West Germany.

Progressive lodge for the disabled thriving

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Cosmopolitan Lodge, which opened two months ago in Twin Falls, is the successful application of an idea whose time has come.

The main thing about the lodge, which provides semi-independent living facilities for seven area residents, is that it is working successfully, says Armond Di Meo, board chairman of the non-profit, private corporation, known as CORE (Community Organization for Rehabilitation Efforts) that operates the facility.

Di Meo, who works with Legal Aid Services in Twin Falls, says the lodge is less structured than a shelter home and offers an alternative to institutionalization.

Some of the residents have lived in this area for years — in most cases in less than adequate facilities — while others have previously been in institutions. Described in professional jargon as psychologically disabled, the residents all can function on their own, but benefit from group living.

The lodge provides both a home-like environment where people care about each other and an opportunity for the residents to learn basic social living skills.

Another major purpose, Di Meo said, is to develop vocational training of residents, all of whom are clients in the Mental Health Services day treatment program.

Residents, who are screened and approved for lodge living by mental health professionals, received orientation on the "nuts and bolts" of cooperative living prior to the opening of the facility April 1. The lodge serves only mental health clients, not retarded residents.

Not surprising, the budget is tight. Last month's heat bill, for instance, was $232, says Sharon Boone, psychiatric nurse and therapist at Mental Health Services who serves as coordinator. She and Joe Ellen Burklin, who was involved in the early planning, as well as all the Region V Mental Health staff have helped the CORE board get the facility operating. The lodge opening represents about a year and a half of concentrated work, Boone said. Finding the right facility was the major hurdle, and although the house is rented by CORE, preliminary money was needed to pay for insurance, maintenance and safety equipment to satisfy legal requirements.

The often-baffling complexity of opening such a facility was aided immensely, she said, by having board members who represent many resource facets in the community. Lee Barnes is vice president and Kim Kvale, secretary-treasurer. Other agencies represented are Office on Aging, Community Action, Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services, a dietitian and social worker as well as a businessman.

Board members held innumerable fund raisers to get the seed money and the Mental Health Association donated proceeds of a variety show last January, Di Meo said. The concept of lodge living, although an old idea, has gained popularity in recent years, says Phil Grover, regional mental health center director. The idea developed partially in response to the widespread policy of releasing many patients from mental institutions back in the 1960s.

It was soon found that many former patients, although not needing custodial care, were without any family or support system. Left to cope with living on their own, many ended up back in institutions. This situation pointed to the need for shelter homes and halfway, or intermediate facilities.

There is now a lodge program functioning in each of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare's seven geographical regions, Boone said, with Twin Falls the last area in the state to get its facility operating.

The roomy two-story structure housing the Cosmopolitan Lodge last was occupied by the Magic Valley Alcoholic Recovery Center, now Port of Hope. It has nine bedrooms, giving each resident a separate bedroom, which is a real asset, the coordinator said.

The structure, owned by Alma Bengoechea of Twin Falls, originally was a rooming house for Basque sheepherders and room numbers still are visible on the upstairs bedroom doors. Bengoechea, who raised her family there and lived in the house for 24 years, said it was built in 1932.

The lodge residents make their own menus, take tuna grocery shopping and sharing in all household chores. Like any group of individuals, some are better than others at cooking, so they sometimes trade jobs.

Boone, who visits the facility weekly, but is in daily contact with residents who attend sessions at the Mental Health Center, said the residents monitor their own behavior and make their own rules.

"They sign in and out and must be in by 11 p.m. weekdays and 1 a.m. on weekends," she said.

LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Emma Monroe had traveled a long way from her childhood home in the isolated farm country of southern Illinois.

From the backwaters — of the Mississippi River — she came as a child, she has circled the world in tramp steamers and been to faraway Timbuktu, the location of which she easily points out on a guide map of western Africa.

In earlier days, she and her husband, with their house trailer, traveled to fishing and hunting spots throughout the West from their home in Independence, Calif.

But when she was widowed in 1952, Monroe began traveling in earnest.

Spurring "passenger ship" amenities, Monroe first traveled by cargo liners throughout the world. Called "tramp steamers," these commercial freighters provide excellent food and staterooms for about 12 passengers, she explained.

But unlike luxury liners built solely to accommodate travelers, the cargo liners offer no entertainment and passengers are on their own.

But whenever the ship was in port, the captain would let us have to see and help us make arrangements," she said, adding that with so few passengers, the shipmates soon became "like one big family."

Monroe, who moved to Twin Falls two years ago to be near her only son, Aubrey Monroe of Buhl, now lives in Heritage Manor Retirement Center at 80, she says she no longer up to making long tours.

But she and her four sisters, all but one of whom is in their 70s, what kept in close contact over the years and for the past three years have all got together for a week-long visit. This year, the sisters who live in Mississippi, Arizona and California, came to Twin Falls where Monroe, the eldest, had made arrangements for their housing at the retirement center.

"They all said the week went too fast," she laughed.

The roots of their strong family feeling grew in a rural home near Beachville, Ill., where there was much love and laughter, although little money, says Monroe.

As a child, Monroe recalls watching the paddle wheelers ply their loads on the Mississippi River.

"Father-of-Waters" served as recreation, while ice skating was a favorite pastime on the river in the winter, she recalls.

"It was a treat to go and watch the cargo being loaded onto the steamboats," she said, in an area without railroads, the river boats were the primary source of transportation.

She remembers once taking a day's outing via paddle wheeler to Hannibal, Mo., but says the Mark Twain connection didn't make any impression on her as a child. In later years, she visited the author's home and saw the whitewashed fence of "Tom Sawyer" fame.

A second summer, the Lewis and Clark monument centered around the church and school, with pic and box socials, ice cream socials and taffy pulls popular events. The taffy pulls meant scrubbing taffy from every piece of furniture the next morning," she says.

Emma Monroe, 80, moved to Twin Falls to be near her son

Monroe also recalls apple peeling parties in the fall when every neighbor for miles around would be telephoned to "bring a paring knife and come." By midnight there would be tubs of peeled and cored apples. The prepared fruit was cooked in a copper kettle on an open fire outside and after 12 hours became thick, delicious apple butter, she says.

In lieu of the expensive, sophisticated bed furniture children would be tubs of peeled and cored apples. The prepared fruit was cooked in a copper kettle on an open fire outside and after 12 hours became thick, delicious apple butter, she says.

A graduate of Boise State University, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Harmon of Twin Falls. He has been a teaching assistant; moot court board member and chairman of the Labor Law Society at Willamette.

Three Magic Valley boys are elected to state office during Boys' State this past week in Boise. Matt Hansel, Burley, was chosen state treasurer and two Twin Falls youths, Stan Luis and Jayce Sutwastka, were named supreme court justices.

Student body leaders and cheerleaders for the 1984-85 school year have been named for both Robert Stuart and Vera G. O'Leary junior high schools in Twin Falls.

Matt Allen is Stuart president, with Doug Stanley, vice president. Faith Arp, treasurer, and Jeanette Pollard, secretary.

Seven Magic Valley students were graduated from Ricks College, Rexburg, at ceremonies May 25.

They include Nancy Hurst, Declo; Lance D. Brackenhury and Veronica M. Williams, Fairfield; Fanny Owens, Elsie, and Mary Kay, Jerome; Vicki Strauss, Oakley; and Linda Thompson, Twin Falls.

Both recipients will be juniors majoring in education. Wiseman will be a member of the Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society.

Good pacing keeps 'Oliver' moving along quite enjoyably

By PAT BEAN
Times-News writer

Review

JEROME — With a bright red floppy-like dress setting off her dark hair and bright eyes, Catherine Flores dominated the house every time she was on stage in Friday night's opening performance of "Oliver."

The thoroughly enjoyable Northside production — despite a couple of minor production problems — was presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the newly high school auditorium, which was filled with an audience of about 100.

Those who were in the audience could have seen the production's quality during the first performance, which was a

NANCY who is in love with the delectable Bill Sikes — played villainously well by Matt Frantz — is superb. She has a delightful stage presence and a strong voice, which she makes full use of in the number "It's a Fine Life."

Her second number, "As Long as He's Young," is also sung well, but the fit to the music is not quite believable, possibly because Frantz plays the role of Nancy as such a strong actress she is, particularly to those who saw her as Dorothy in last year's production of "The Wizard of Oz." With appropriate padding, Stauffer gives a laugh-lacking portrayal of a bawdy, matronly widow. Her number, "I Shall Scream," may have been the single most enjoyable scene of the night.

The choice role of Fagin is not wasted by Winterholler, who squeezes every bit of audience charm he can manage into the part. And if one hadn't noticed the amount of needle and thread work that went into the costuming of the large cast before Fagin's appearance in the last scene of the first act, it could help but be brought to one's attention as Winterholler's outrageous outfit assailed the eye.

If you plan to attend one of the upcoming performances, be sure and note the silk-appearing gauzy vest and the striped stockings. And don't forget the outlandish turned-up-toes shoes that are worn by the likable pickpocket. A golden thimble award should be presented to costume mistress Shawna Fuller and all her helpers. One also can catch Fuller as an extra on stage during a couple of scenes.

While we're on the subject of backstage credit, Winterholler deserves kudos for his creative set design that admirably catches the spirit of "Oliver."

Another tremendous boost for the production is the outstanding choreography by Jenny Frantz, especially visible in the musical number she did with the young boys.

The dances give the musical the necessary movement to keep an audience's interest.

Creditable performances are given by all the young performers, especially those of Jason Houser as the Artful Dodger (a nice voice) and Andy Durham as Oliver, whose performance shows many hours of hard work. However, the makeup attempts to make Durham come across as a wall flower something in the translation.

Although this space is too limited to give credit to the many who were responsible for an enjoyable evening, one final bow might be given to Karen Abbott as Mrs. Sowerberry, whose legs it was a treat to watch as they were frankly from a coffin. Also to John Mauldin, who plays Noah Claypole and can also be seen as an extra in several other scenes.

And finally to choreographer Venessa Kyall, who had to cast members to time up, and to the orchestra, directed by Bruce Whitehead, which does a nice job of keeping the mood of the production — fun but, however, there was not an orchestra pit.

Ignored mothers hurt, upset by their forgetful offspring

DEAR ABBY: It's Mother's Day as I write this. My children are now 23 and 24 and still living at home. They have just explained why they don't buy me a gift again. Each year is a new reason, but it always boils down to the fact that they are short of money. I notice they always have money to buy whatever they want for themselves.

Abby, every year (also on my birthday and Christmas) I say, "What I really want wouldn't cost you a cent. Just make me a card, promising that for just one day you will gladly do any favors that I choose without arguing and complaining."

Would you believe they refused? The closest I've ever come to it was once when my son wrote out a list of his wishes, which were not agree-

We with me. I ran into the same problem with my husband. I told him that for my birthday all I wanted was for him to do some handyman chores. No luck there either.

Was my suggestion out of line? I would think that most people would jump at the chance to do chores instead of spending money.

Don't print my name. Sign this. — WHOSE DAY IS IT, ANYHOW?

DEAR WHOSE: To demand services in lieu of a purchased gift is no gift — it's blackmail.

The concept of services offered as a gift is lovely, but only when volunteered by the giver — not demanded by the recipient.

DEAR ABBY: I have mothered five children and here I sit, the morning after Mother's Day, wondering

Abigail Van Buren
Dear Abby

whether some children are just insensitive to their parents' feelings, or if I'm overreacting to my hurt.

All our kids are grown — some married, all have good jobs and are financially responsible. We raised them that way, and feel we did a good job. We don't live close to our children, but we keep in touch and are a close family.

I worked away from home only after our children were grown — not before — because I felt that raising them properly was my first priority. My husband is still employed full-time. Every Christmas, birthday, anniversary, etc., I have sent all the children and their spouses a gift. (And made sure they arrived on time. When a birthday or Christmas gift arrives two weeks late, it loses some of its excitement.)

Today, I feel a little hurt because I received nothing for Mother's Day. I rationalized it, saying, "They're too busy — I really shouldn't feel this way."

I was a good mother. I gave my children lots of love, and let them go when it was time to leave the nest. I do not interfere in their lives.

I never forget my own mother on Mother's Day, and find it hard to understand how any child could. So please, Abby, print this for children of all ages to read. Perhaps they aren't aware of how much it hurts to be forgotten.

— FORGOTTEN IN PHOENIX
DEAR ABBY: I am one of the mothers who was forgotten on Mother's Day. I'm telling my adult children that from now on I want them to please forget all holidays and special days.

That way, when they forget, it will be at my request.

— FORGOTTEN MOTHER
DEAR ABBY: A neighbor of ours drops over nearly every night to visit. It doesn't matter if we have company.

Last Saturday evening we had a few guests for dinner, so this neighbor rang our bell. When I opened the door, she said, "Oh, I see you have company." She then walked right in, plunked herself down and stayed the whole evening! She is very insensitive — quite argumentative and monopolizes the conversation.

My husband and I would like a little privacy, but this nifty neighbor doesn't seem to care. We have been very patient with her, but we have had our fill of her. Must we entertain her even when we have company? — US

DEAR US: Yes, you must entertain this woman when you have company, and also when you don't, if she invites herself over and is made to feel welcome. Your alternative is to ask her to please call first and ask if she should come over. But then, if you had the courage to do that, you probably wouldn't have written to me.

There are no easy ways to protect oneself against unwanted and unwelcome drop-ins. If you can't tell 'em, you'll have to put up with 'em.

now expect, Monroe says she and her friends had cardboard doll houses furnished with tiny dressers, tables and chairs they made from cardboard.

Her father, who as well as being a farmer, was a veterinarian, suctioneer and part-time Methodist preacher, died when Monroe was 18, leaving her mother with nine children, six of them still at home too young to work.

She says the land was poor and her mother waged a valiant struggle to raise her remaining children without ever having to accept welfare.

Monroe quit school after eighth grade and went to work at 15. She first did housework for $4.50 a week, plus board and room. She then went to Colorado, where an older sister lived and found work as a waitress. From there she went to Los Angeles and applied for a waitress job.

"I bluffed my way through," the diminutive Monroe laughed, "when they asked if I had a uniform, I said I'd get one."

One of her first customers was William Monroe. Six months later, March 5, 1923, they were married. He was a fireman for the city of Los Angeles, where they lived for 28 years. After he took early retirement because of health reasons, they moved to Independence, Calif., which she described as "a sportsman's paradise" between two mountain ranges.

Although she says she enjoyed the cargo liner travel in which she went to Alaska, South America and then around the world in 1963, Monroe eventually was drawn into traveling with commercial tours where all arrangements are handled by tour directors.

Her 1974 tour to Africa, which she had always wanted to see, was the highlight of her travels. Since then she also has taken a Central American tour.

Currently Boone serves as the coordinator, but it is hoped that a staff coordinator can be hired by mid-summer. However, the person would not live there, Dill says.

The lodge residents, some of whom are employed and have different schedules, all share their evening meal where they "rehash their day," Boone said. She handles the finances and pays the bills, but otherwise they are on their own.

Residents have modeled themselves after the TV "Mash" program, giving themselves appropriate names from the characters on the show, she said.

The advantages of the lodge already are apparent, say therapists at the Mental Health Center.

"We all can see an increase in self-esteem among the clients who live there," Boone said. Emphasis is on helping residents to become "functioning, productive people, and forget the idea of being a burden."

"The marvelous thing is that we've put the responsibility back on them and it's working," she said. "They can solve conflicts better than staff."

The coordinator said already there have been requests to start a second lodge, indicating a widespread need for such intermediate living facilities.

Tips make your next move easier

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — With new home construction and home resales on the rise, millions of Americans are preparing to pick up everything they own and move.

Linda Vannoy moved 687 employee families of R.J. Reynolds Industries in 1983. She says that, if properly managed, family moves can be survived and even enjoyed.

Her tips for movers:

- Get valuable belongings appraised and photographed.
- Collect all medical, dental and eye glass records and prescriptions before leaving town.
- Pack your old-telephone-book — you may need it to clear up details after you move.

Jobs not easy

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Summer time and the living's not easy for college students without summer jobs.

Denise D. Gingrich, director of the Career Development Center at Bucknell University here, recommends building a network of contacts within and outside the college.

Some colleges, such as Bucknell, are formalizing these tips and providing the students with a list of alumni and parents in the students' intended field.

Pet rabbit caused world concern

I will probably never get a chance to meet Julia Miles and that's too bad. I think we could be good friends. But she's the wife of the British ambassador to Libya and I sort socks for a living.

Erma Bombeck At wit's end

Julia endeared herself to me when I read that when she and her family were forced to leave Tripoli in such a hurry because of the political climate, she left behind a pet rabbit in the embassy garden called Honeybun. Well, you can imagine the public outcry once this little-known fact was run through all the wire services around the world. Civilized nations just don't go around abandoning their rabbits.

Julia was quoted in the London Daily Express as saying, "There has been so much fuss over the BLANK thing, I wish I had eaten it before we left."

There were questions to be raised. Did the rabbit have diplomatic immunity? Could they extend his visa? Could he travel alone? Could he be used as a hostage?

What mother has not toyed with the idea of making an orphan out of a pet that she didn't want in the first place? Be honest now. No one is taking names. Surely, it has crossed your mind no more than a few occasions.

I had kids who were glibly by throwing a ping-pong ball in a glass of water. The fish came with a two-hour guarantee. Ours lived to develop bowel problems. I thought he'd never go.

Our hamsters never fell prey to diseases like all the other hamsters owned by my friends. Ours just multiplied and ran around a lousy exercise wheel all night long. One day, someone just left the cage open.

For more years than I like to think about, we had a chameleon in a cage on the back of the commode. He was carried up from Florida in a Velveta cheese box. He had only one trick. Every time someone flushed, his entire body bounced off the top of the cage, hit all four sides and when he came down he was swimming in mid-air for dear life. Had I not been afraid to touch him, I would have sent him to that big septic tank in the sky.

Julia knows... as we all do... that pets should be protected from children in the first place. If we're not going to make a lifetime commitment to them, we should never assume responsibility for them. But we're all basically weak.

In Honeybun, all in Libya? Get serious. A newspaper spent $3,315 to fly the animal to the Miles home in London so they could all be together again.

I know exactly what Julia is thinking. Drink up.

Selecting and Arranging Furnishings

By Jo Ann Rose

Modular furniture started out as a practical idea for the young or young at heart, for the June newlyweds and their contemporaries who want a casual and adaptable style of furnishings which can change in a jiffy.

The idea was simply so good that furniture in the modular manner, especially upholstered pieces that can be arranged in a variety of ways, has rapidly become a popular style for homeowners in every age group.

Modular groupings are often fairly large, but the ability to arrange the pieces in any shape you want, whether L-shaped, U-shaped or in conventional sofa and chair groupings, make them adaptable even to smaller rooms.

Since these groups often involve multiple pieces and a large "mass," muted colors such as the off-whites and naturals, or simple patterns are a good choice, unless your room is vast enough (and the background unobtrusive) to accept a large expanse of strong color or pattern.

Whether you're looking for your first "starter group" or an elegant piece to complement your present furnishings, you'll find the right selection in our furniture showrooms, where you can also get expert decorating counsel.

Immigration bill hints changes for farmers

By JIM DRINKARD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. farmers, particularly producers of vegetables, fruit and nuts, could face a radically changed labor market if a sweeping immigration reform bill now before Congress becomes law.

The bill would for the first time make employers, including farm operators, subject to penalties if they hired undocumented, illegal aliens. It also would offer amnesty for workers already in the United States for several years.

After months of delays, the measure is due to be taken up this week by the House—amid signs that support for it may be slipping. Democrats, who control the House, are split on the politically charged issue.

While reliable statistics are unavailable because of the underground nature of the alien labor market, agriculture is generally believed to be among the greatest users of illegal foreign labor.

Because of its arduous, often backbreaking nature and the low pay, U.S. citizens for the most part shun farm harvest work. But to Third World workers, U.S. wages often give them a chance to earn four or five times what they could make at home.

More than half of all spending for hired farm labor occurs in 10 states with heavy concentrations of vegetable, fruit and other labor-intensive farms. California is by far the largest user of such temporary help, followed by Florida, Washington, Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan, Texas, Oregon, Arizona and Ohio.

It is those areas that would be hit hardest by the ban on undocumented labor, according to a study by Robert Cortright, an economist for the Department of Agriculture. But the bill also would affect the Midwest, the mid-Atlantic states and New England, where illegal immigration is reportedly on the upswing and such labor is used to help harvest tobacco, sugar crops and other commodities.

"Agricultural employers are facing a serious situation here, whichever way it goes," Coltrane said in an interview. If the legislation becomes law, producers will have to adjust to an entirely new set of labor regulations. If it does not, they remain subject to spot raids by agents of the Immigration and Naturalization Service that can wipe out their labor force in mid-harvest.

"Many would rather live with the uncertainty of the INS raids than with the legislation," he said.

The proposal is highly controversial for several reasons. While addressing fears that illegal aliens are taking away jobs from U.S. workers and posing a burden to domestic social services, the bill has angered Hispanic groups who say it would heighten discrimination against Hispanics who are U.S. citizens. It is particularly controversial in areas where Hispanics are an important voting force, particularly the Southwest.

Exotic mushrooms thrive via complex aid

Opening way to marketing

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

FILER — European diners favor breaded mushroom cutlet Viennese, a plate-sized mushroom steak with oyster-like flavor. The gourmet dish doesn't appear on many American menus because its centerpiece — the Himalayan oyster mushroom — is rarely cultivated and has to be imported at high price from abroad.

But it's been too long overlooked both by farmers and by diners, two Magic Valley crop scientists say. After two years of research, Bob Faust of Filer and Steve Farrar of Hagerman are preparing to put the mushroom into large-scale production.

The mushroom market has been expanding for the past decade on the taste of the relatively bland button mushroom, the type most often found in grocery stores.

"Once you eat these, you don't want the button mushroom any more," says Faust, who heads Faust Bio-Agricultural Service Inc., a specialty crop and consulting service.

The Himalayan type is popular in the Orient, as well as among European gourmets. And it is shipped from Italy to New York, where it brings $18 a pound.

The two men already have sold oyster crops to area supermarkets and restaurants. They also have been dealing with national chains about large-scale deliveries, Faust says.

Their Geo-Therm Enterprises Inc. also is nearing financing for an oyster mushroom factory in the west end of the Magic Valley. As the corporation's name suggests, the $2 million-plus plant would rely on geothermal energy.

But farming mushrooms bears little resemblance to the row crop agriculture.

It will employ high tech innovations such as tissue culturing. Done on a large scale, it will involve specially designed mechanical equipment. And agronomists familiar with botany and microbiology will have to direct it, says Faust, a 38-year-old agronomist. One tiny dose of the wrong fungus can wipe out a crop.

"I don't think for most farmers it's worth it," he says. "It's too complex."

Not in the Magic Valley's dry climate — particularly suited to growing the mushroom. It thrives on 90 percent humidity and without the moist surroundings. "They just shrivel up like leather," he says.

Yet the area also has plentiful supplies of the woody type of bed

Steve Farrar starts mushrooms via cloning tissue cultures that nourishes the mushroom best. Faust and Farrar have been developing techniques for growing the Himalayan oyster mushroom using wheat straw, Jerusalem artichoke tops and other types of media.

Now, they are growing the mushroom tissue — tiny strands of the Pleurotus sajor-caju fungus — inside plastic bags using a mixture of artichoke tops and straw.

The straw and artichoke tops first must be pasteurized to kill any competing organisms. Then, Farrar or Faust take tissue cultures from an existing mushroom under close to sterile conditions again to avoid any contamination. The culture, which may be only a few cells, is sprayed on several nutrients until it is added to the straw-artichoke medium.

The mushroom multiplies inside the bags, feeding in the dark by breaking down the moist medium, Faust says. It is exposed to the light and starts to flower. The flower, which disseminates the mushroom's spores, actually is what humans eat for both the Himalayan oyster and button types of mushrooms. All oyster mushrooms (there are between 15 and 20 varieties) are edible.

The growth of the flower can be controlled to salad size. Or, says Farrar, "They'll get plate-sized, some of them."

Mushrooms, which have been grown for generations in Pennsylvania and California, can be a prolific crop.

"On a commercial basis, it's something that will give you high yields," says Faust. Once started, the Himalayan oyster mushroom matures in 30-40 days, giving about eight crops a year.

But growing the crop on a large scale will draw lots of water and heat energy, says Farrar, a 32-year-old horticulturist who left the University of Idaho's Cooperative Extension Service to develop the mushrooming idea. He now runs Faust Bio-Agricultural Service's organic farm for specialty crops near Hagerman on a consultant basis.

The hot springs in Idaho and other states such as Utah and California can deliver the energy, he says. In fact, mushroom cropping has potential as a no-waste industry when developed that way.

The federal Energy Research Development Administration designed a Total Energy Recovery System for Agribusiness as a prototype in one of its reports.

Although "brainstormed" independently, the system now being devised by Farrar and Faust has many of the same features, they say.

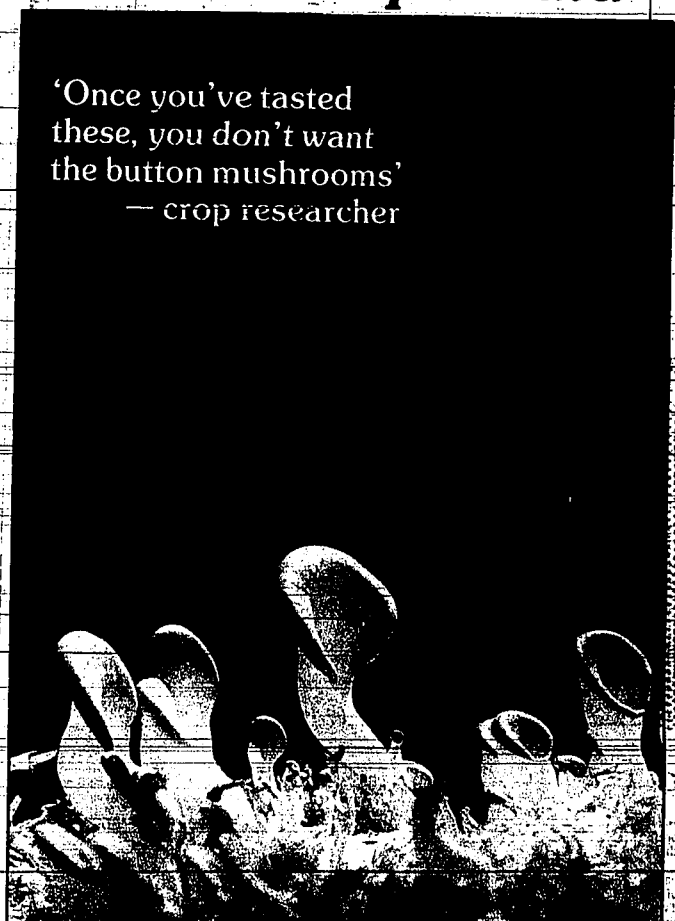

"The waste for one enterprise is the raw food for the rest," Faust says.

Jerusalem artichokes and wheat are grown in surrounding fields. When these crops are harvested, the artichoke tops and wheat straw, which normally are waste, provide the woody medium on which the mushrooms grow.

The mushroom operation produces carbon dioxide, which is valuable for growing plants in greenhouses heated by the hot springs.

The springs also provide high-temperature water for pasteurizing the artichokes and straw. They also heat the main plant buildings and, after much of the heat is drawn off, provide "lower temperature" water (perhaps only 90 degrees) for cultivating tropical fish.

When mushrooms are harvested, the artichokes, straw and mushroom tissue then are fed to cattle, Faust says. Fish also like some of the material used to cultivate the mushrooms, he says.

Finally, the cattle wastes and byproducts from aquaculture also can be used to fertilize field crops, Farrar says.

"It's a fairly simple technique, all of this," he says. "It's just the integration of it hasn't been done before."

They are planning to put the theory into practice at the proposed mushroom plant in the Magic Valley or, perhaps, elsewhere.

"It appears we're within a month of having the full amount of funds needed to go into full-scale, industrial production," Farrar says.

Several investors from Twin Falls and other parts of the Magic Valley are interested in backing the project, but were not willing to talk about the prospects to the Times-News.

Bankruptcy: accepted last-ditch cure

Bankruptcy has been the hottest news in the headlines during many weeks in the past few months. Underdeveloped and underdeveloped countries openly threaten bankruptcy if the repayment schedules on their massive debts aren't made more permissive or "flexible" by us, their developed creditor nations and banks.

Corporations declare bankruptcy to avoid liability and nuisance actions while maintaining assets.

Close to 300,000 personal bankruptcy petitions were filed in 1983 alone, a towering total that, while modestly below 1982's figure, testifies to the widespread acceptance of bankruptcy as a last-ditch remedy for crushing debt.

Filing for bankruptcy does offer individuals a fresh start — but even in today's comparatively tolerant atmosphere, it is the alternative of last resort. While you cannot be fired from your job, for instance, bankruptcy continues to carry a stigma and it sticks on your credit record for 10 years. During this span, you will find it extremely difficult indeed to get any new loans, credit cards, mortgages, the like.

bankruptcy might seem a logical choice, but on closer analysis, this is not so — especially at times of radical changes in your personal circumstances.

"I believe there is a time when people should file for bankruptcy," says Luther Galling, president of Budget and Credit Counseling Services, a non-profit corporation licensed by the New York State Banking Department. "Many people are so ill-informed that they think bankruptcy is a panacea, but that is not true for most of the population."

About 10 percent of the clients his agency sees eventually file for bankruptcy. That's a fraction of those planning to file when they go to the service and a percentage he has with reports from other credit counseling agencies, Galling reveals.

"The key is not to panic," Galling emphasizes. "Don't run out and file for bankruptcy if your bills get too high. If you have too many creditors, a credit counselor can consolidate your debts and arrange for you to make one repayment a month instead of a dozen."

At the above situation, Galling explains, a credit counselor contacts all your creditors, collection agencies and any lawyers, and works out an arrangement whereby you, the debtor, know every month exactly how much you will repay by writing just one check. You give up juggling bills, you consolidate and consolidate them; then you pay.

"Our philosophy is that if you can't repay your debts in three years, that's when to consider bankruptcy," Galling observes.

That three years is not an arbitrary length of time. This is the span (three years) that debtors who file Chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Act have to repay their debts. In fact, Chapter 13 provides a "rehabilitation" alternative to filing for bankruptcy (Chapter 7), although it still goes through Bankruptcy Court. Under Chapter 13, a person with a steady income presents a payment plan to his/her creditors. When the court approves the plan, it appoints a trustee to collect your monthly payment. Debtors are allowed three — and sometimes five — years to repay, and often the total is less than what you owe.

Also under Chapter 13, debtors can keep assets — an important consideration — and it can be used every six years.

But Chapter 13 is not a cure-all and it stays on your credit record for seven years.

If you find yourself deeply in debt, take every effort to avoid bankruptcy. The instant you notice trouble, seek help. Don't ignore a growing stack of bills and hope the bills will go away.

You'll get assistance from credit counseling services; your state or local consumer protection agency; the local Better Business Bureau; your individual creditors themselves. Look up "Consumer Credit Counseling" in your local Yellow Pages, and go for a consultation. Or send $1 for "Your Guide to Consumer Credit and Bankruptcy," prepared by the American Bar Association, ABA, Order Fulfillment Dept., 750 N. Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Agricultural industry representatives, farmers and other interested people are invited to attend. The biweekly luncheon is sponsored by the extension offices in Twin Falls and Jerome counties.

MCO says earnings higher

LOS ANGELES — MCO Holdings Inc. is reporting net income of $2.5 million on revenues of $46.6 million for the first quarter of fiscal 1984. The earnings, which amount to 33 cents per share of common stock, were a 7.7 percent increase over the same quarter of fiscal 1983.

MCO Holdings has been developing the Spring Creek area 10 miles southeast of Elko, Nev., since 1977.

Dairy market service starts

TIGARD, Ore. — Farmers and other people in the dairy industry can obtain up-to-date market information for a number of dairy commodities from a new, automated service provided by the federal Agricultural Marketing Service.

Information about milk, cheese, butter, whey, lactose and other markets, as well as about inventories held by the Commodity Credit Corp., is available by calling 503-639-5145, the agency has announced. The messages range from one to three minutes and follow a weekly schedule. The call is a toll call.

THREE CREEK — The 71 Livestock Association has scheduled its summer meeting for 3 p.m. Wednesday at Three Creek School, secretary-treasurer Mike Gentry says. The meeting will be followed by a potluck dinner.

Leighton retires from SBA

BOISE — Verne A. Leighton, director of the Boise District Office of the U.S. Small Business Administration, retired June 1 after 23 years with the agency.

He had headed operations in Idaho since 1979 and, prior to that, had held other assignments such as heading the SBA's disaster assistance office in Idaho Falls after the collapse of the Teton Dam. Before joining SBA, Leighton spent 18 years in the banking industry.

Joseph G. Kaeppler, assistant district director for finance and investment, was appointed acting district director until Leighton's successor is named.

Chain sends takeover warning

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — American Stores Co., calling its offer to acquire control of Jewel Co. "more than fair," warned the Chicago-based corporation on Friday not to undertake "defensive acquisitions" in an attempt to block the takeover.

American Stores spokesman Michael Miller said Friday Jewel stockholders have responded favorably to the Utah holding company's $721 million tender offer of last week.

In a letter to Jewel Chairman W.R. Christopherson, American Chairman I.S. Skaggs said his company had heard reports that Jewel was considering acquisitions that "purportedly would be designed to block the American Stores offer."

A spokeswoman for Jewel in Chicago, who asked not to be identified, refused comment on the letter.

American Stores is offering $70 each for common shares and $49.91 each for Series A convertible preferred shares. The offer is contingent upon at least 51 percent of the outstanding shares being tendered by June 22.

Savings bonds down in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of U.S. Savings Bonds declined to $357 million in May, a decrease of $11 million from April, according to Treasury Department figures released Friday.

However, redemptions of old bonds dropped even faster, declining $51 million to $288 million, allowing the total value of bonds held by savers to rise to $72.7 billion, the highest level since September 1980, the Treasury report said.

The value of bonds outstanding has risen about 5 percent in the past year, it said.

So far this year, it said, the government has sold $1.6 billion in new bonds. Redemptions have totaled $2.7 billion.

New Series EE Bonds and most other Series EE and E Bonds and Savings Notes earn interest rates linked to five-year Treasury securities.

IBM cuts computer prices

NEW YORK (AP) — International Business Machines Corp. cut prices of its personal computers, home computers and related equipment by up to 23 percent.

IBM's actions fulfilled the predictions of some Wall Street analysts, who earlier this week said price cuts were imminent because demand was beginning to lag for IBM's personal-computer line.

Careful decisions precede donations

Q: I responded to a survey on the American Institute for Cancer Research's Cancer on Parade Campaign some months ago. Now I have a letter from them asking for donations. They did include an analysis of the survey but it's not very meaningful; some questions weren't even answered. I was going to donate but now I'm not so sure. Can you give some light on what this organization really does?

ground, or is it just another come-on?

A: The American Institute for Cancer Research was incorporated in September 1981 in Washington, D.C. Its purpose is to "fund cancer research projects and to sponsor educational programs in the area of cancer prevention."

AICR raises funds through direct mail appeals. Current appeals include a survey on dietary habits and breast cancer, which will be used "to help... develop a statistical profile of the eating habits of American women."

The American Institute for Cancer Research does not meet the standard for Charitable Solicitations calling for soliciting organizations to spend a reasonable percentage of public contributions on the programs and activities. The organization will be hiring a "planned giving director" whose "initial focus will be to help lower the fund raising costs."

Donors must decide for themselves the importance of any offering from the BBB Standards Taking into account the relative importance of the practice in question in the context of the organization's total performance. Q: I have received notification that a family heritage book has been recorded. I can receive one copy for just $30. This is the only printing that will be made so I must reply within two weeks. The firm is called Halbert, Inc. Does this firm produce a legitimate book on my family's back-

A: Well, it's just another come-on, I'm afraid. According to the information in our file, the firm produces a heritage book, but you have to put in all-of-the-family-information. This firm does not meet the standards of business practice due to their misleading advertising.

You may want to contact your local library for further genealogical information.

Q: My daughter has received a $200 check from a company called S and H Marketing. This check is to be used in the form of a rebate toward the purchase of either a sewing machine or a set of luggage. We do have to pay $114 toward the sewing machine but it is supposed to be valued at $214 with the rebate check. My husband is skeptical about this so I'd thought I'd check with you before sending any money. What can you tell us about this firm?

A: The information we have shows that this firm does not meet the BBB standards of business practice due to their misleading advertising. The $200 rebate is worth nothing more than the purchase of either a sewing machine or a set of luggage. The merchandise is worth less than what you have to pay, not the combination of the two. Plus you end up paying for postage, handling, insurance and C.O.D. fees when it arrives.

Co-op expands plant

CALDWELL — Dairyman's Creamery Association Inc. is building a $250,000 addition to its cheddar cheese plant at Caldwell, officials have announced.

The expansion will allow the association to cut the 640-pound blocks of cheese it currently produces into more marketable 40-pound blocks, said Frank Krone, DCA general manager.

When placed in operation in July, the addition will produce blocks that can be handled easily by small retail stores, creating additional sales outlets. "Actually, you could cut a 40-pound block down in your kitchen," said plant engineer Dick Cooper.

The cheese plant turned out 22.5 million pounds of cheese during 1983 and is projecting an increase this year, Krone said. The majority of that production is going to Kraft Foods packaging plant in Pocatello, the company said.

DCA opened the automated cheddar cheese plant in 1975 to produce Kraft's Cracker Barrel brand. However, the Caldwell plant first went into production in 1930 and has gone through a number of expansions, Cooper said.

The most recent was a $3.6 million installation of a skim milk dryer in 1982, he said. Last month, the DCA also made a minor addition by installing a new cheese table, said cheese plant manager Steve Head.

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls partnership has opened a blueprint exchange for Magic Valley contractors.

Southern Idaho Regional Plan Exchange at 250 2nd Ave. S. collects construction plans from area architects, developers, general contractors and other sources and offers a previewing service for its subscribers.

The business, which has been successful in large cities such as Boise and Salt Lake City, is designed to give contractors and subcontractors a centralized source for leads on potential jobs. They subscribe or pay a one-time fee to use the exchange's plan room.

Southern Idaho Regional Plan Exchange was started by Becker, Jones and George, a partnership of Dr. Marty Becker, an area veterinarian; Dave Jones and Chuck Cattelino, owners of Idaho Tile & Marble Co. in Twin Falls; and real estate agent Jane George.

Keat Kirk, executive director of the Twin Falls County office of the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service during the past 17 years, has been promoted to program specialist at the agency's Idaho office at Boise. Kirk is responsible for agricultural conservation and for crop compliance programs.

Jim McLaughlin, formerly executive director for the ASCS office in Bonner County, has been named to succeed Kirk at Twin Falls County executive director. He is due to assume the post on June 25.

Guardian Asset Management Inc. of Twin Falls has formed an investment board to select investments for the company's clients, President Edward G. Smith announced last week.

Members are: Thomas G. Walker Jr., principal of Guardian Asset Management and a Twin Falls attorney; Matthew L. Devine of Twin Falls, retired chairman of the board and former president of Bunker Kamo Inc.; Myron Dickey, Debra Jo Carnahan, originally from Glenn Ferry, recently has become a partner in the Boise law firm of Matthews & Wilson Chartered. The firm, now known as Matthews, Wilson & Carnahan, practices general law, with most of its work in criminal, divorce and child custody cases.

Bonanza Motors Inc. of Burley is donating use of a specially built Bulk Century Olympia to the new Miss Idaho, who was crowned Saturday in Boise. The auto is a special edition to commemorate the 1984 Summer Olympics.

Bill

The bill's documentation requirements also have aroused the ire of those who believe it could lead to some form of national identification card and a deprivation of civil liberties.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., who took substantial political heat for delaying action on the measure earlier this year, now has promised the House will take it up this week. The Senate passed its own version, with the support of the Reagan administration, last year.

Some farm workers enter the United States legally under a Department of Labor temporary employment arrangement known as the H-2 program. Over the past five years, 15,000 to 18,000 such jobs have been certified annually. Most are for crops like sugarcane in Florida, tobacco in Virginia and apples in Eastern states — all commodities for which harvest is relatively easily planned in advance.

But that program accounts for less than 1 percent of all hired farm workers, according to the USDA analysis. Illegal labor is far more widespread. INS records show that about 100,000 illegal aliens working in agriculture are arrested every year, a number larger than the apprehension rates for any other industry. Coltrane said estimates of the total illegal farm labor force run as high as 500,000. "Some people who watch the scene carefully — and even some growers — will tell you that 80 percent of their harvest force is illegal labor," he said.

Federal tax laws often at odds with nation's farm policy

By JIM DRINKARD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — While farm policy-makers most often focus their attention on price support programs, a handful of experts and farm-state congressmen are trying to spotlight the role of income tax laws in determining the fate of farmers.

In recent years, the two areas often have been at odds: crop programs have been designed to hold down production and surpluses, while tax policy has encouraged production and the entry of non-farming investors into agriculture.

"There is a growing impression among professionals interested in agricultural finance that income tax provisions are becoming as important to the survival and growth of many farm firms as are agricultural commodity programs," said Hoy F. Carman, a farm economist from the University of California at Davis.

Carman and other experts told the congressional Joint Economic Committee recently that despite efforts to tighten loopholes that have encouraged "farming the tax code" by investors looking for lucrative writeoffs, many of those incentives remain.

One of the most attractive is the provision in President Reagan's 1981 tax law that allows farmers to depreciate farm improvements ranging from dairy barns to grapevines over five years instead of the previous 20- to 30-year schedule. That, together with investment tax credits, has attracted "pin-stripe" farmers and encouraged overproduction of certain commodities, yielding instability in prices.

The same law that provided those tax writeoffs also cost the government huge amounts of tax revenue in hopes of stimulating new investment. That added to the nation's budget deficit and has been a major factor in pushing up interest rates, which some witnesses said was the most damaging result of the tax farmers.

"The Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981... was the most irresponsible congressional act in the history of the republic," fumed Neil E. Hart, an economist from Iowa State University.

Other tax laws offer writeoffs for clearing new farmland at the same time that commodity programs strain to curb planted acreage. And others offer lower-rate capital-gains treatment for some farm income and the use of cash accounting.

According to Reagan's 1984 Economic Report to Congress, tax laws have encouraged substitution of capital for labor; offered proportionately greater benefits to large farms than to small ones; and created incentives for higher-income people to invest in farming because of the greater benefits available to those in high tax brackets.

"It is difficult to arrive at any conclusion but that tax policies are having an effect on agriculture other than those anticipated," noted James C. Miller of the National Grange at a hearing last month before a Senate Finance subcommittee.

"No federal policy on agriculture would advocate high land prices, reliance on sophisticated financial and tax advice, separation of land ownership from producers, or one that would reserve farming for high-income taxpayers."

Suggested changes have included limiting of depreciation schedules for special-purpose farm buildings like hog production sheds and dairy barns; curbing the use of accounting methods that allow deduction of production costs before the income from that production is received; and capping the amount of farm losses that can be used to shelter off-farm income.

Researchers say U.S. funding needed for genetic advancement

By JIM DRINKARD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government must continue to be the chief financial supporter of research into agricultural genetic engineering if the United States is to maintain its world lead in that area, a panel of researchers contends.

The relatively new scientific frontier of altering the genetic makeup of plants and animals to produce disease resistance or plants that can thrive in hostile environments holds great promise for American farming, the scientists agreed.

But while the United States has taken the lead, it could fall behind if federal budget cuts and retrenchment by state universities erode support for continued research, the group told a House Agriculture research subcommittee in testimony prepared for a hearing this past week.

"The late 1960s and the 1970s that make up the 'new biotechnology' were possible because the United States in the 1950s and 1960s chose to build world leadership for itself in the life sciences," Dr. Robert Rabin of the National Science Foundation said in a statement.

But federal research funds shrank between 1983 and 1982, he noted. In its proposed 1985 budget, the Agriculture Department has made biotechnology its top research priority and proposed to spend $28.5 million on research grants. That figure has been trimmed to $10 million by the House Appropriations Committee.

"Modern biology can no longer be viewed as a cottage industry," Rabin said. "It is unreasonable to think that U.S. leadership can be maintained without increasing substantially our investment."

While industry stands to benefit greatly from the basic research going on in U.S. universities, private companies now provide just $20 million, or 10 percent of total, plant research money, according to a survey by the American Council on Education.

"Industry, at least presently, clearly expects the federal government to be the chief patron of research and training," said Rabin.

Land holdings report due with agency soon

BOISE — Many Magic Valley farmers who irrigate their land soon must report their land holdings to the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, the federal agency announced.

Farmers who own and lease more than 40 acres of land irrigated by water from federal reclamation projects must report their holdings to local irrigation districts by July 30.

The requirement applies to any landholders who have not yet agreed to follow discretionary provisions of the Reclamation Reform Act of 1982, said Sam Wade, agency spokesman. A number of entire irrigation districts, such as the Minidoka Irrigation District and Salmon River Canal Co.

have agreed on behalf of their members.

However, others, including the Twin Falls Canal Co., Norwatic Canal Co. and Oakley Canal Co., have not. Their members will have to report their holdings unless they have individually accepted the act's provisions, Wade said. Reporting forms are available through irrigation district offices, he said.

Wade said the reports are necessary for administering irrigation water provided by reclamation projects. Failure to report could bar the farmer from receiving irrigation water, the agency said.

Less sugar use anticipated

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. sugar use is expected to continue its decline this year despite rising demand for sweetened foods and beverages, the Agriculture Department says.

The decline reflects the increasing use of substitutes, including corn syrup, as a sweetener in beverages, the department said in a situation report.

Deliveries of sugar for beverage use fell 23 percent during the first quarter of this year, and domestic consumption of sugar for the year is expected to be down 3.4 percent to 8.7 million tons.

The department noted that on May 15 the Coca Cola Co. began allowing as much as 100 percent corn sweetener in its fountain syrup, up from a previous limit of 75 percent. That step alone could mean a drop of nearly 100,000 tons a year in sugar consumption.

U.S., China set up stock exports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and China have reached an agreement that will permit the export of breeding cattle, swine and poultry to China, according to the Agriculture Department.

The agreement arises under a more general trade agreement that ran into what the department called "problems."

For example, China held off admitting breeder imports of cattle because of concern over bluetongue disease. Now, cattle from 18 north central and northeastern states, where evidence of bluetongue is rarely found, may be shipped.

No agreement was reached on export of cattle semen and embryos, and no agreement was reached on import of swine and swine semen to the United States.

John Ford, deputy assistant secretary for marketing and inspection services, said talks were continuing.

"Idaho Power favors subordination?"

To existing water users, yes!

Lost among all the debate and argument about Swan Falls and water rights and subordination is a very important point.

Namely, that Idaho Power has maintained - ever since the subordination issue came up back in 1982 - that in return for protection from possible ratepayer legal action, it would subordinate its water rights on the Snake River to those of existing irrigators.

We have worked to do this in each of the last two legislatures. And we have signed a contract to this effect which even now sits in Governor Evans' office waiting for his signature.

The one thing we will never do is voluntarily forfeit the remaining water rights to future land developers without due compensation for our ratepayers. This would place a tremendous and unfair financial burden upon our customers, especially existing irrigators. A burden the Idaho Public Utilities Commission estimates at an additional $54 million per year above normal rate increases.

Of course, subordinating our water rights to those of existing water users is only the first step in solving the complex questions concerning Idaho's water. But it will free thousands of existing irrigators from costly litigation.

And as a first step, it's long overdue.

Despite stormy spell, drought continues grip in western Texas

By JULIA MARTINEZ
The Associated Press

DALLAS — This past week's rash of heavy thunderstorms will do little to break the drought plaguing western and southern Texas, weather experts said.

"We're talking about a drought that has been going on for six months and it takes more than a couple of rainfalls of two inches to cure that," National Weather Service meteorologist Skip Ely said in Fort Worth. "Some areas out there need a good 10 inches."

"To break the drought we need rains over several days amounting to five to eight inches. And we've hardly begun to get that much," said George Bomar, a meteorologist with the Texas Department of Water Resources in Austin.

"I'm afraid we're going to run out of time because the rainy spell is ebbing. It probably won't last more than another day or two," he said.

Rain began in western Texas last weekend, shifted to the Rio Grande Valley, then to north central and central Texas on Tuesday. Ely said the drought in western Texas probably will not be arrested before the normally dry months of August and September.

As of June 1, Corpus Christi, Alice and Grayford were under mandatory water rationing because of the drought, said Tom Milligan of the Texas Department of Water Resources. Ten other cities had instituted voluntary rationing programs, he said.

About two-thirds of the state — 166 counties — has been declared eligible for federal disaster assistance because of the drought.

Bill Braden, communications specialist with the Texas A&M University Agriculture Extension Service, said rain in western Texas enabled farmers to plant cotton, but that doesn't guarantee a successful harvest.

"The rain got our crop started but we won't be able to make predictions until mid-July because of a possible drought and hail storms that are common in this area," said Randy Upshaw, Lubbock County extension agent.

"The rain brought moisture to some parts of the county but there are still some spots that are completely dry. Some portions of the county who received rain last week are already dry," he said.

"The land ranges in (southern Texas) area are completely dry so there hasn't been any grass for cattle to graze," said Medina County agent Dennis Haley. "It'll be about six weeks before the ranges re-grow."

"Our livestock producers are selling out the bare bone, they're trying to hang on," said Darrell Smith, Uvalde County extension agent.

The precipitation did little to ease parched conditions in the Big Bend and extreme southern Texas from Corpus Christi to Laredo, areas which have been dry for more than a year.

"Two inches of rain fell on Midland earlier this week and brought that city up to its normal rainfall amount for the year, but showers didn't amount to as much in other areas of western Texas such as the Davis Mountains, the Pecos River and the Edwards Plateau."

"Normal amounts of one-half to one inch were much more common in those areas," Bomar said.

House passes farm package containing 1% cut in funds

By JIM DRINKARD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House has endorsed and sent to the Senate a bill providing $34.2 billion in 1985 for farm and related programs, after accepting a 1 percent across-the-board cut in the measure as a "small step toward fiscal responsibility."

Approval came Wednesday on a voice vote after the body accepted the cut offered by Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., on a vote of 232 to 194.

Walker and other House Republicans had argued that the farm program could alleviate the depressed condition of U.S. agriculture as well as cuts in the budget deficit, which has been blamed for high interest rates.

"Many farmers in my area would like to see the government get off their backs," Walker said during debate on the measure. "We add to agriculture's problems every time we pile onto the deficit," he said, calling his amendment "one small step toward fiscal responsibility."

The measure now goes to the Senate.

The House turned back other attempts to cut farm funds, including a move to save $24 million by implementing recommendations of President Reagan's cost-cutting commission. It also defeated a try to increase money for research in genetic engineering.

The measure includes about $10.9 billion for agriculture programs, including price supports, research, extension services, crop insurance and food inspection. It provides another $4.9 billion for rural development programs such as housing loans, lending for rural water and sewer projects, and money for soil conservation and assistance to rural electric cooperatives.

Domestic food programs administered by the Agriculture Department are tabbed at $17 billion, including $10.7 billion for food stamps. The bill also includes $1.3 billion for international food assistance such as the Food for Peace program, and $27 million to fund the Food and Drug Administration and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

The House exceeded administration requests on items like rural housing and development projects and soil conservation, but made it up by cutting from the budget of the Commodity Credit Corporation — which handles price supports — and other areas.

The Reagan administration said the measure was "consistent with the president's objectives," although it was much like the current year's package, which Budget Director David Stockman had fought, saying it was full of deceptive gimmicks to make it appear less expensive than it really was.

The bill's backers, led by House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., argued that the measure actually came in with a price tag $4 million below the amount requested by the White House. The amount is an increase of $490 million over current spending levels.

But Walker called that contention "a sham" and noted that the bill actually could cost several billion dollars more than Reagan's request because it funds food stamps and nutrition programs for less than a full year.

BPA Issue Alert

Starting Ahead for Plants 1 & 3

In 1984, we will have to re-evaluate the future of Washington Nuclear Plants 1 at Hanford, Wash., and 3 at Satsop, Wash. We invite you to help.

Bonneville Power Administration budgets and rates are based partly on these plants, now on delayed construction schedules.

We have assumed that full construction will resume July 1, 1985, on Plant 3 and a year later on Plant 1 with conventional bond financing.

We must review these assumptions. We want you involved. Here's how: Call BPA for our Issue Alert on this important subject. Come to public meetings on the review process in late June. (Please call for dates and locations.) Comment on the completed analysis this fall.
