Principals differ on House action

By RICK SHAGHNESSY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the wake of a House committee's recommendation that Rep. George Hansen be reprimanded, the principal participants from that proceeding disagree on what the committee's decision actually means.

Hansen says the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct Wednesday reversed a previous decision that found the seven-term Congressman had violated three different clauses of a House rule in addition to filing false financial disclosure forms required under the federal Ethics in Government Act.

"The ... committee ... reversed its decision of last Thursday by rejecting four recommended charges of its own special counsel, thereby clearing me of any taint of wrongdoing relating to my ethics report filings," Hansen said in a statement released Wednesday evening.

"It is very satisfying to have the committee find that I am innocent of any personal wrongdoing," Hansen stated.

However, Stanley Brand, the special counsel mentioned by Hansen, disagrees with that assessment. Brand says the committee voted 10-0 on June 14 to accept the findings contained in his report.

Those findings alleged that Hansen violated House rules governing solicitation of funds, acceptance of gifts and conflicts of interest. Brand says, and resolution calling for reprimand, passed by the ethics committee on Wednesday. Does not repeat these charges but does not refute them either.

'Caution light' - A2

say he was absolved of them) Brand responded to Hansen's statement. He said the committee specifically declined Hansen's request to invoke a House rule that would have labeled the offenses as "technical violations."

The ethics committee recommended Wednesday that Hansen be reprimanded for failing to disclose $33,978 in loans and outside income. Hansen was convicted in April of felony counts for failing to disclose those same transactions. The committee rejected Brand's recommendation that Hansen be fined $100,000 in addition to being reprimanded.

The violations of the three clauses to House rule 13 and a resolution, according to Brand's report include: Solicitation campaign. Hansen had been advised by the committee that he could not conduct a fund-raising campaign to pay off his personal debts, the report states. He and his wife, Connie, then enacted an agreement to separate their finances so that Connie could raise money to dispose of her portion of the debt, it continues.

The report states that the comingling of the couple's money caused Hansen to violate that agreement and consequently the House rule.

"Having asked for advice and having devised a procedure to allow the solicitation plan," Hansen went under a special duty to implement the plan, carefully. The evidence clearly shows this was not done and the resulting practice, in special counsel's view, violated ... House Rule 43" the report states.

Clause 7 of the rule states that a member of Congress "shall treat as campaign contributions all proceeds from testimonial dinners or other fund-raising events."

A footnote adds: "In addition the critical property settlement agreement may have become invalid under Idaho law itself. Where spouses with separate assets co-mingle that property and blur the distinction, it reverts to the status of 'communally property' ... If the Hansen's bookkeeping and finances had this result, the settlement agreement would have no effect—whatever on the bar on solicitation and on the disclosure regulations."

Accepting gifts. Clause 4 of the rule precludes a member of Congress from receiving gifts of more than $100 per year from someone with a direct interest in legislation before Congress. A person with a direct interest is one "who is a lobbyist, employs a lobbyist, who maintains a political action committee or anyone who has an interest in legislation distinct from the general public interest," the report states.

Brand classified loans and silver profits, obtained with the help of Texas oil magnate Nelson Bunker Hunt, as gifts.

"Under these circumstances, acceptance of the loan pay-off and the silver profit from Nelson Bunker Hunt, whose interest in matters pending before the Congress was open and notorious, evidences a direct violation of rule 13, clause 4," the report states.

Appearance of conflict of interest. A House concurrent resolution passed in 1959 states that a person in

Judge rules for government in Birds of Prey area case

BOISE (AP) — A federal judge has granted a partial judgment on behalf of the government in the disputed expansion of the Snake River Birds of Prey Natural Area.

U.S. District Judge Fred Taylor granted the government a partial summary judgment and said proper notification procedures were used in proposing a half-million-acre expansion of the preserve.

The dispute over adequacy of the government's analysis of the expansion has not been fully resolved.

Defendants in the case filed by Sagebrush Rebellion Inc. and others included former Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, interior secretary at the time of the expansion proposal. Congress withdrew the land from development for 20 years, pending permanent action on the enlargement.

Clair Whitlock, Bureau of Land Management director for Idaho, said he does not expect a major change because of Taylor's decision handed down Wednesday.

"From our point of view, things are just status quo," Whitlock said. "The appeals process could draw the case out for a much longer period, he said."

The case went to the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals on the issue of whether the Audubon Society and a number of other environmental groups could intervene. The appeals court reversed a decision that excluded those groups and sent the case back to U.S. District Court last year.

Taylor heard arguments in the case two weeks ago.

Mexicans see emigration as entrenched situation

By CAM ROSSIE The Associated Press

TIJUANA, Mexico — Many Mexicans see emigration to the United States as an entrenched economic phenomenon that benefits both countries. The immigration control bill that passed the U.S. House this week therefore is considered at best unrealistic and at worst a slap in the face to Mexican laborers who helped develop the American Southwest.

After three years of often-heated debate, the House on Wednesday passed the so-called Simpson-Mazzoli Bill that is intended to "regain control" of U.S. borders. The U.S. Senate previously approved similar legislation and the two versions must be ironed out in a House-Senate conference committee.

The plan, which calls for fining employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens and granting amnesty to more than a million who have lived illegally in the country, was passed without any official communication from Mexico.

Officially, Mexico says the Simpson-Mazzoli Bill is a U.S. domestic policy that merits no comment from here.

"There's been little official lobbying because of Mexico's position of not intervening in the internal affairs of other countries," said Gustavo del Castillo of the Tijuana-based Border Studies Center of Northern Mexico.

He said the Mexican government for years has seen Mexican employment in the United States as an escape valve for high unemployment at home.

"The last thing it wants to talk about is illegal immigration because it reflects on the internal economic problems. So it keeps quiet and the flow continues."

But other Mexicans familiar with the issue say their government does see the phenomenon as a bilateral issue — with costs and benefits to both countries — and would have intervened had Simpson-Mazzoli been viewed as a threat.

Analysis

They say that once the hoopla dies down over the measure, the border will return to normal and migration to the United States will be determined as it has for more than a century, by the force of supply and demand.

"The demand for low-skilled entry-level labor is so great that there must be Mexican workers. There's no way the United States can fill those jobs with native workers," said del Castillo.

Simpson-Mazzoli will in no way change the developing situation of the international labor market. You would have to build a 90-foot wall," he said. "American workers who need Mexican workers will resort to 'clandestine' hirings; then pay the $2,000 fine called for in the legislation if they get caught, del Castillo predicted.

"Mexicans have been responsible for the economic development of the southwestern United States," said Romeo Flores, secretary of education in northeastern Nuevo Leon state.

"Historically, Mexicans have moved freely back and forth across the border," he said. "They only have back in the U.S. economy is in trouble."

Leo Chavez, a research associate at the Border Studies Center, called the measure "anti-Mexican." Estimates are that about half of the 6 million or more illegal aliens in the United States come from Mexico. One of the greatest apparent fears in Mexico is that the measure will be used as a tool to freely discriminate against Mexicans and as an excuse for continuing to pay low wages.

"The only thing left out in the law is an order requiring signs on buses saying Mexicans can ride but only in the rear," the Monterrey daily newspaper El Norte said in a recent editorial.

Money for technical studies breaks stalemate over NPR

By HAL BERTON Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — A 10-month stalemate in the congressional debate over the New Production Reactor ended this week with the House Armed Services Committee approving $12.5 million to pay for more technical studies.

The Idaho National Engineering Laboratory near Arco is the "preferred site" for the $4.6-billion NPR, which Energy Department officials say is necessary to produce plutonium and tritium for the nation's nuclear arsenal.

Rep. Melvin Price, an Illinois Democrat who chairs the House Armed Services Committee, wants the new studies to result in a final determination whether to place the NPR in Idaho, said INEL spokesman Pete Mygatt. Two other sites — Hanford, Wash., and Savannah River, S.C. are also under consideration.

In an October 1983 letter to Hodel, Price said the final site decision should be "heavily weighted by economic, not environmental considerations."

Once a final site determination is made, Price probably will approve funds for a formal environmental impact statement, according to Sy Shwiler, a former House Armed Services Committee staffer.

Mygatt said it is still unclear whether Price's recommendations. Hodel may still try to push ahead, with a three-pronged environmental study looking at all three possible NPR sites, a move favored by Sen. James McClure.

Mary Cooke, a Snake River Alliance spokeswoman, said the latest twist in the NPR saga makes her uneasy because it continues to postpone public involvement.

Public participation was originally scheduled to begin last September, but will probably now be postponed at least until mid-1985, when the new round of studies are expected to be complete.

"They're taking extra time to do the studies but we are sure that they'll take extra time for participation," Cooke said. "We're really anxious to hear what Secretary Hodel has to say about his time schedule."

Mygatt said the Energy Department is required by law to have a 90-day period for the public to comment on the environmental study and that "there is no way in the world that you can compress that." Mygatt said the Energy Department also still plans to hold public "scoping hearings" when the environmental study finally gets underway. The technical studies will include examinations of earthquake hazards, flood dangers, reactor design and costs at the three sites. McClure aide Bill Livingston said much of the information developed in the technical studies will eventually be incorporated into the environmental study. A draft document of the environmental study will be opened for public review.

Briefly

Inmate sues over attacks

BOISE (AP) — A penitentiary inmate who describes himself as a "young, frail and handsome boy" has filed a $375,000 lawsuit because he was confined with inmates he says attacked him.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court, Jerry Lynn Baker alleges he was locked in close custody with older, more violent inmates who attacked him repeatedly for eight months.

Named as defendants are former Warden Darrol Gardner, Warden Arvon Arave, Deputy Security Warden Larry Wright and Corrections Department Director Al Murphy.

Baker, who said he was a teenager when sent to prison, claims prison officials show no regard for age or physical characteristics when placing inmates together. The suit does not state Baker's present age or when he was admitted to prison.

Blast rips USSR naval depot

WASHINGTON (AP) — A huge explosion apparently ripped through a major navy ammunition storage depot in the Soviet Union last month and many people are believed to have died in the blast, U.S. intelligence sources said Thursday.

The explosion, reportedly detected on the Kola Peninsula by U.S. reconnaissance satellites and other intelligence means, was said to have been so great that U.S. authorities believed for awhile that it had been a nuclear blast.

However, intelligence analysts are convinced that the mid-May explosion at Severomorsk involved conventional ammunition. The ammunition depot is near the northern port city of Murmansk, site of a major Soviet naval base.

Compromise measure pushed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of a national 21-year-old drinking age joined forces Thursday with proponents of automatic license revocations for drunken drivers, and agreed to bring a compromise bill with both concepts to the Senate floor next week.

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., in announcing the agreement, said the double-barreled approach would be more comprehensive than a House-passed bill that only addressed raising the minimum drinking age. The Senate bill could be on the floor Tuesday.

"If you want to send a political message, go ahead and pass the House bill as is," Weicker said. "If you want to send a message to the drunk driver, then let's get on with it and make the bill more comprehensive."

Hollings said Mondale's pick

NEW YORK (AP) — Newsman Dan Rather reported on CBS Radio Thursday that an unnamed "political pro of long experience and exceptionally good sources" told him that Walter Mondale has already chosen Sen. Ernest Hollings as his vice presidential running mate. However, aides for Mondale and Hollings denied the report.

Because the source would not allow her name to be used and because an unnamed source is not enough, the "television news anchor" said he was not reporting it "as a news story, not as a fact."

Today's weather

Looks like a fine weekend coming up

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:

Partly cloudy today with a mountain shower or low Sun on Saturday. Low tonight mostly in the 40s. Highs today upper 60s to upper 70s and Saturday 70s to the low 80s.

Northern Nevada and northern Utah:

Fair signs and mostly sunny days through Saturday in both northern Utah and northern Nevada. A little warmer Saturday.

Canyon Prairie and the lower Wood River Valley:

Partly cloudy with a lingering shower over the highest peaks today. Highs 63 to 66. Lows 38 to 44. Mostly sunny Saturday. Highs 65 to 73.

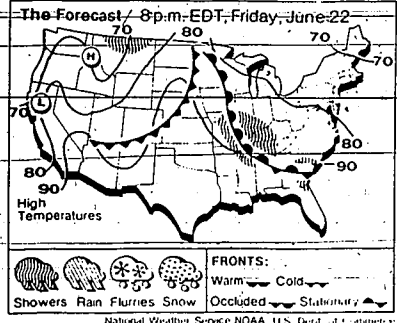

Synops:

The National Weather Service predicts drier conditions and warmer temperatures for the weekend.

The weather is expected because an upper-level low pressure system along the border of eastern Oregon and Washington is moving slowly eastward. It is expected to allow high pressure to build from the north, causing Thursday's clouds and showers over Idaho to decrease.

Showers and a few thunderstorms were scattered across much of the state Thursday, especially in the north. Most skies were cloudy or partly cloudy.

Temperatures were unseasonably cool, ranging from the low 40s in some mountain valleys to the mid 60s in the southern valleys. The early part of the day saw gusty winds blowing through the Snake River Valley. Winds diminished in the afternoon.

The pollen count in Twin Falls on Thursday was 60 particles per cubic meter of air.

The highest temperature in the state Thursday was 77 at Malia while Stanley recorded the low of 37 degrees.

The extended outlook for southern Idaho calls for dry Sunday through Tuesday. Highs in the 80s. Lows in the upper 40s to mid 50s.

Judge upholds coverage ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department was within its rights in prohibiting news coverage of the initial stages of the U.S. military intervention in Grenada last October, a federal judge ruled Thursday.

U.S. District Judge Walter Girsch also released a request by the Pentagon's attorney, Richard L. Flynn, that he bar the Pentagon from preventing reporters from accompanying initial invasion forces in the future.

Cable cars return to street

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Thousands of people swarmed into the streets Thursday, reveling in a burst of balloons, brass bands and civic pride as the city's faltering cable car system returned to full service after a 20-month, $60 million overhaul.

Celebrities joined the city's movers and shakers on lavishly decorated cars parading up and down San Francisco's steep hills under a brilliant blue sky.

Mayor Diane Feinstein, who promised Democrats that the 111-year-old system would be back in time for the Democratic convention next month, saluted a three-foot-wide, red-and-blue ribbon that Union Square to launch the cars.

Tony Bennett led the crowd in singing his famous ballad "I Left My Heart in San Francisco" as he joined the mayor at the head of the parade, along with San Francisco 49ers quarterback Joe Montana and Joe Spano of television's "Hill Street Blues."

Big debts threat to peace

CARTAGENA, Colombia (AP) — President Belisario Betancur, host for a conference of 11 Latin American countries that owe nearly $350 billion to foreign lenders, said Thursday that peace and democracy will be threatened unless the flow of finance and foreign affairs on the opening day of the conference, Betancur also accused unnamed international banks of "aggression" against Colombia. He said they had threatened to penalize his country for hosting the meeting.

"It is no exaggeration to say that the solution to Latin America's debt crisis is an essential ingredient for world peace," Betancur said.

No summit, Soviets declare

MOSCOW (AP) — The chief Kremlin spokesman said Thursday there is no chance for a U.S.-Soviet summit unless the United States alters its policies.

He also reiterated Soviet insistence that the European arms reduction talks in Geneva, Switzerland, cannot be resumed while NATO continues to deploy its new medium-range nuclear missiles.

Leonid Zamyatin, at a news conference to brief reporters on the Soviet view of the visit by President Francois Mitterrand of France, was asked about President Reagan's recent remarks on the possibility of a U.S.-Soviet summit.

"We are serious about summits and we consider these kind of meetings as very important," Zamyatin said, citing the meeting between Mitterrand and Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko as an example.

In Washington, Reagan was asked whether he considered the Kremlin response a complete rejection, and replied: "I do not think so, no."

Idahoan cites 'caution light' on separate financial affairs

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rep. George Hansen says he was given a "caution light" by the House ethics committee when he and his wife, Corrie, first decided in 1972 to separate their financial affairs for fund-raising purposes.

But the committee's counsel does not agree with that assessment.

Hansen — who was convicted last spring of four felony counts of filing false financial disclosure reports, three in connection with that agreement — says after the committee agreed with his position on the separation agreement, its members and staff never questioned his disclosure reports.

"He had never put up a red light to stop the flow of traffic. They put up a caution light," Hansen says.

Hansen says the committee and its staff accepted Boise attorney John Ruffin's position that the separation agreement was enforceable and consistent with House rules. And the seven-term Congressman adds that a page-one story in the Washington Post in December of 1977 confirms this contention. That story quoted unnamed sources within the committee who "acquiesced" to Hansen's position that the separation agreement was not in violation of House rules, Hansen says.

In Hansen's "George the Dragon Slayer" campaign comic book, artist Dick Hafer portrays the committee's acquiescence through a weak-willed committee member saying: "Yes! Yes! Whatever you say!" to a strong willed Corrie Hansen who says she is going to institute the financial split "with her husband."

But in his felony trial and in a proceeding completed by the ethics committee this week, that agreement was disputed.

The committee's special counsel, Stanley Brand, produced a draft opinion on the separation agreement from the committee to Hansen. The draft had been prepared in 1978 and concluded that Hansen would still be required to disclose any loans for which he was still liable, even if they had been assigned to Mrs. Hansen.

"We have no indication that the affected creditors released you from your personal liability to them at the time of the transfer. Accordingly, it is probable that you remain in some way ultimately responsible for the debts originally incurred by you."

"Under the circumstances, our decision would appear simple and clearcut. You should disclose those liabilities exceeding $2,500 as of the close of the calendar year 1977, which were originally incurred by you," the draft says.

Attorneys for both sides dispute why the draft opinion was never formalized. Hansen's side contends it was because Ruffin convinced the committee Hansen's opinion of the separation agreement was correct. Brand says a final draft may not have been sent for any of several reasons.

Hansen

government service should never accept favors or benefits that could be construed as influencing the performance of his governmental duties, the report states. The resolution has been deemed to carry the weight of law, the report adds.

Brand says the transactions and loans involving Hunt and the loans received from three Virginia businessmen, who Hansen aided in a lobbying effort, are in violation of the code of conduct established by the resolution.

"The acceptance of constantly extended loans and ready-made commodity profits from Hunt and of loans and interest payments from the three Virginia men — including the deposit of the first $25,000 on the same day as Messrs. McAfee and Rodgers came to Washington to attend a meeting with the army arranged and attended by Congressman Hansen — certainly calls into question whether reasonable persons might construe acceptance of such largesse as influencing the performance of his governmental duties," the report states.

"Such a direct and substantial financial involvement with persons for whom the member seeks to expedite or advance government decision-making constitutes an appearance of conflict of interest in violation of an ethical standard previously applied to members," it adds.

Hansen labels Brand's allegations, "poppycock."

"He's just trying to trash you up an appointment with John March himself," he says. Hansen adds that the Justice Department investigated his relationship with Hunt and decided there was no way the Congressman could have assisted the Texan. "They came in and said, 'We found the gold. We don't find the gold,'" Hansen says.

Hansen also criticizes the fact Brand has worked for the Democratic Party and says he has reliable information that Brand may be linked to his Democratic challenger, Richard Stallings.

Hansen also continues to predict that he will be vindicated. He adds that it will occur within a matter of weeks. "There are things happening that will cause this thing to be totally overthrown," he says.

Conference sessions start on $291 billion defense bill

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A $291 billion defense spending package — 6.9 percent higher after inflation than the Pentagon's current budget — cleared the Senate before dawn Thursday, headed toward a conference committee for reconciliation with House-passed legislation.

The Senate approved the bill, 82-6, at 1:57 a.m. MDT after voting to urge European allies to increase defense spending, but refusing to threaten a withdrawal of U.S. troops from the continent if they fail to do so.

The Senate also approved a resolution urging the Reagan administration to submit for approval two nuclear test ban treaties with the Soviet Union that have never been ratified. But White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Thursday that the president does not intend to do so "at this time."

The House passed its $284 billion version of the defense authorization bill three weeks ago. House and Senate conferees were scheduled to begin closed-door negotiations today on resolving differences between the two measures. The meetings are expected to last through the middle or end of next week.

The Senate bill gives the Pentagon almost all the weapons President Reagan wanted, although it followed the House's lead in deleting funds for chemical weapons and approved only 21 of the 40 MX intercontinental missiles Reagan had sought for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The MX was likely to be one of the thorniest issues to confront the conferees — as they sought — to resolve hundreds of differences between the two measures.

The House earmarked money for 15 of the 10-warhead missiles, but it banned use of the funds until next April. Even then, the money would be available only if Congress decided that the Soviet Union had failed to bargain in good faith over arms limitations.

The MX was saved in the Senate only by the tie-breaking vote of Vice President George Bush, and the House approved its restrictive language by only a single vote.

In a key vote shortly before passage, the Senate voted, 55-41, against a move to pull out 30,000 American troops from Europe by the end of the decade if the 15 other members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization do not increase their contributions to the alliance's non-nuclear military force.

Senators then voted, 94-3, to limit U.S. troop strength in Europe at the current 226,414, blocking planned Pentagon increases. It also calls for more NATO spending.

The Senate's refusal to approve the troop withdrawals came after two days of heavy lobbying by Reagan, other top U.S. officials and European leaders. They all argued that it was the wrong way to get NATO to spend more money.

In debate, senators unanimously expressed frustration with NATO's refusal to meet its pledges to increase spending. Of the 15 NATO nations, only the United States and tiny Luxembourg have met a 6-year-old goal calling for each nation to increase annual defense spending by at least 3 percent.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chief advocate of the withdrawal, argued that it was intended to improve the ability of the alliance to fight. NATO's poor conventional defenses leave U.S. commanders with little option than to resort to tactical nuclear weapons to repel any large-scale attack, he said.

But opponents said threats were not the way to win hikes. "NATO nations 'are getting the message that a lot of us are fed up,'" said Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine.

Summer brings no respite from floods across Midwest

By CYNTHIA GREEN
The Associated Press

Rain drenched the water-weary Midwest for a ninth straight day Thursday, adding as much as 4 more inches to floodwaters that have claimed lives.

Officials said losses from millions of acres of drowned crops may reach $1 billion.

As summer officially began after what forecasters said may be the wettest spring on record, President Reagan declared Missouri a federal disaster area, and Iowa officials said nearly all of the corn and as much as 50 percent of the soybean crop may be lost in flood-stricken parts of the state.

Thursday's downpour was not only heavy but swift, prompting flash flood watches in southeast South Dakota and eastern Kansas. Streets were underwater in Topeka, Kan., where 3.7 inches of rain fell in 4½ hours, the National Weather Service said. Every, Iowa, reported an inch of rain in 25 minutes.

High water closed more than a dozen highways in South Dakota. Up to 3.7 inches of rain overnight in the towns of Yankton, Trent and Flandreau forced the evacuation of more than 100 families, who joined the ranks of 1,000 others still homeless in Kansas and Missouri.

Millions of acres of farmland remained underwater in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota, and officials have only begun to assess the cost of destroyed crops.

Reagan's declaration allows Missouri residents to qualify for federal flooding aid. State officials have said more than $80 million worth of crops have been lost to raging rivers.

The swollen Missouri River was expected to crest at 28.3 feet at Omaha, Neb., on Friday, the highest level since major flooding in 1952, and weather service hydrologist Roy Osugi said, "It could be pretty hairy in the Omaha area." A flash flood watch was posted for much of Nebraska.

In Iowa, where officials have asked the federal government to declare 31 counties disaster areas, Grayson Anderson, head of the U.S. Agriculture Stabilization Service, estimated that farmers will probably lose $500 million in crops in that state alone. And Diane Skow of the U.S. Statistical Reporting Service said the resulting cost to merchants could push that figure past $1 billion.

With flood warnings posted for the Big Sioux, Vermillion and James rivers and their tributaries, South Dakota opened a 24-hour flood control post and prepared to bring prisoners from the state penitentiary to fill and stack sandbags. Some 30,000 sandbags were being flown in from Minnesota as well.

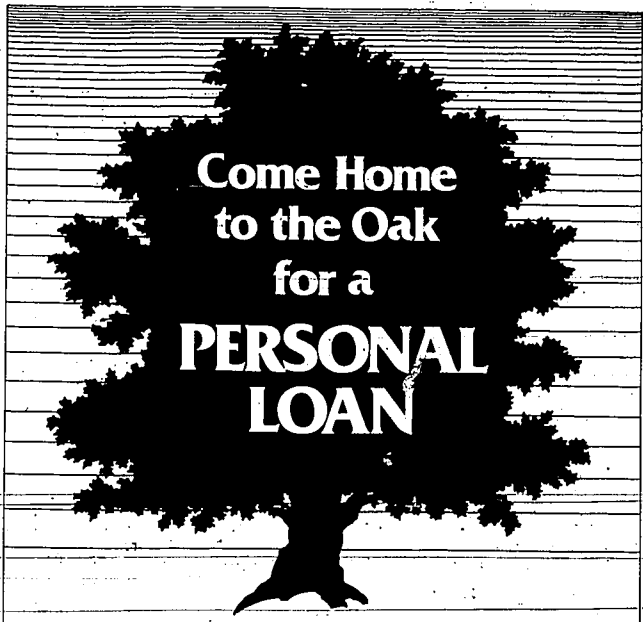

About 165 Boy Scouts remained isolated Thursday at a summer camp in the Davis Mountains of Texas after heavy rains downed phone lines and washed out a winding, two-lane ranch road.

But the campers, who ranged in age from 11 to 14, were in no danger, said Steve Odom, and executive of the Buffalo Trail Boy Scout Council in Midland, Texas. Banders was probably their biggest problem, after being stranded at the 6,000-acre ranch since Tuesday, he said.

"If the road is repaired (by Saturday) we'll bring them out the normal way," Odom said. "If not, we'll go to Plan B. At this moment, Plan B is to ask them to stay there until the road is fixed."

A 73-year-old Missouri man died Wednesday when his car was swept off a highway and into a creek just south of Kansas City, police said. Also on Wednesday, a 24-year-old Missouri man drowned when he was trapped by the current while swimming in a flooded field, authorities said.

A tragic comment on world of prison

There is no way we can know exactly what went through the mind of convicted rapist Richard Ray Bradley following his conviction Tuesday for rape. Perhaps he agonized over going back to prison, he had prior convictions for rape in Arizona and Boise.

Or perhaps he was troubled by the outcome of his recent trial or the publicity around it. The jury deliberated three hours before finding him guilty of raping a Twin Falls woman last November.

Whatever the reasons, Bradley was clearly overcome with enormous despair; Wednesday morning, less than 24 hours after his conviction, he was found dead in his cell, hanging by a towel from a mesh-covered window.

The most cynical and hard-hearted might secretly simply shrug. Too bad. Another criminal gone. One less person to overload our crowded prison system.

But there is meaning in every life and lessons in every death, although sometimes not the ones we want to learn.

We make no apologies for Bradley's crimes, nor for the verdict which, from what we can tell, was the right one. We find no fault with the jury, nor with the victim of his crime, who has suffered enough in the assault and resulting pain and indignity.

But there are at least two aspects of Bradley's death which bear further attention, both in the short- and the long-term.

The first involves the so-far unanswered questions about the death itself. Why, for example, was Bradley put alone in a cell when the normal practice apparently calls for two inmates per unit? Why was he not checked more frequently during the regular evening and night checks? Were all jail procedures followed in this case? For these questions, and perhaps others, Sheriff Jim Munn should provide the answers as rapidly as an investigation is complete.

We in Idaho don't have to think back very far to remember the 1982 death in the Ada County jail of Christopher Peterman, a young man beaten to death by several cellmates over a long and under-staffed holiday weekend.

Although there is no evidence of any such incident in the Bradley case, we think a thorough investigation, and a public report, is a minimum requirement.

The second aspect of his death is the renewed emphasis it places on the county developing a modern, up-to-date jail facility that meets professional standards.

Twin Falls County has been studying the need for a new jail for some time. A case like this puts additional pressure on that task by pointing again to the archaic present facility in which a young man apparently can hang himself unnoticed. A prisoner like Bradley, presumably with a high risk of self-inflicted injury, may need special watching. That just isn't possible the way the present jail is designed.

Regardless of his crimes, the loss of Bradley's life is a tragic comment on world of crime and prison. We should all be concerned about how such incidents can be prevented. That is the humane role of the criminal justice system, for both the victim and the defendant.

Hansen true to form in ruling's wake

It was predictable that Rep. George Hansen would declare victory after his ignominious defeat at the hands of the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct Wednesday.

Hansen has often claimed victory and predicted success during his two-year ordeal with a federal grand jury, the U.S. Department of Justice and the ethics committee over his financial affairs and their disclosure.

The Federal Ethics in Government Act, which Hansen violated, was passed in the wake of Watergate and requires all members of Congress to disclose their assets, liabilities and income.

The claims and predictions have been particularly noticeable since April, 1983. Upon being indicted by a federal grand jury on four counts of filing false financial disclosure documents — one that didn't list $22,970 in loans and outside income — Hansen said "I am confident. I am innocent of any wrongdoing and that I will be vindicated."

In June, 1983, Federal District Judge Joyce Hens Green denied Hansen's motion for dismissal of the charges and delayed the seven-term Congressman's trial to allow Hansen to appeal her ruling.

Calling that ruling and delay "a victory," Hansen said, "I have filed my reports properly and in full compliance with the requirements of the law. If this case ever gets to trial I am confident that a jury will agree."

But the jury didn't see it that way. On April 3 of this year, it delivered a guilty verdict for each of the four felony charges. Hansen then impugned the integrity of the jurors calling their verdicts "a gross miscarriage of justice." He labeled Hens Green's courtroom a "kangaroo court" and said no conservative Republican could receive a fair trial in Democratic and liberal-minded Washington, D.C.

Since the conviction, he has repeatedly predicted victory upon appeal of the case to a higher court. And he claimed victory in the Ethics Committee's recommendation Wednesday that Hansen be reprimanded by the full House for his false disclosures.

That was the least-harsh of the possible sanctions that the committee could recommend, except for dismissing the case against Hansen outright, a ruling Hansen vigorously sought.

But the proposed penalty wasn't the reason for Hansen's victory claim. Hansen said the committee "reversed its decision of last Thursday by rejecting four recommended changes of the ethics committee, thereby clearing me of any taint of wrongdoing relating to my ethics report filings. It is very satisfying to have the committee find that I am innocent of any personal wrongdoing."

Again, Hansen put the best spin on the ball. In fact, the four recommended charges, which Hansen claims the committee rejected, accused him of violating House Rules governing the solicitation of funds, acceptance of gifts and conflicts of interest.

Those charges suggest there is more amlas with Hansen's financial problems than just improperly filing a form.

For instance, the charges say it was a conflict of interest and not a coincidence that Hansen received a $25,000 loan on the same day that he accompanied the lender to a meeting with Army officials. Hansen had arranged the meeting to discuss plans for a hydrogen-powered car developed by the lender and his associates.

The ethics committee's final recommendation does not mention the conflict of interest allegation, but neither does it exonerate Hansen of the charge. House rules require the ethics committee to investigate any member found guilty of a crime with a penalty of greater than one-year imprisonment.

The committee recommended action against Hansen for only those offenses that fit that description.

Hansen, true to form, calls the committee's decision a victory and maintains his innocence. He says his proposed reprimand was over a technicality, one he will continue to fight.

For 1988 campaign, just use studios

BOSTON — Have you noticed anything different about Walter Mondale in the past week or so?

The black circles under the eyes have faded to gray. The tense vocal chords that only emitted the reediest of sounds have opened. The thought passages which could only handle items from the memory bank — Here comes Answer 24B — are actually formulating ideas and completing paragraphs.

This is not merely a relaxation response to winning the nomination. What has happened is that Mondale's winged victory has allowed the man to land on his feet. And I mean that literally.

It wasn't the emotional ups and downs of the primary season that wore and tore the men who would be President. It was, I am absolutely convinced, the grueling takeoffs and landings of air travel.

For about four months, Jackson, Hart and Mondale pursued a flight pattern that might have been painted by Jackson Pollack. They did not run for the presidency. They flew for it. The frequent-flyer campaign of 1984 was conducted at 30,000 feet. If the men appeared to have their heads in the air half the time, it was merely because their heads were attached to their bodies.

Ornately out of the worst of the lot, the Hart campaign left Texas in the morning, touched down in five states, logged six hours and 15 minutes of air time, spent three hours and 45 minutes on buses — all to attend four campaign events that totaled 60 minutes — and then returned to Texas. In the bi-coastal week of primaries in California and New Jersey, the cardinal campaign courier broke the union rules for flight attendants.

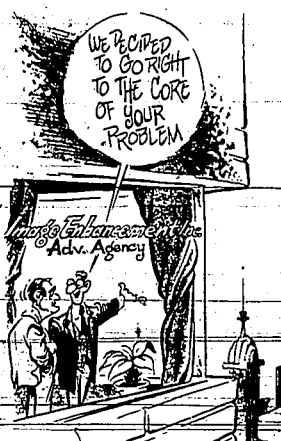

The press people accompanying these men — paying 100 percent of first-class fare for the privilege — could barely formulate a question at the end of their airplane-seat confinement. The men running for President of the United States certainly couldn't formulate policy. The worst gaffes of the campaign came in the twilight zones of time zones.

The insanity of this body-wrenching fly-by-night-and-day operation was that the candidates were not actually trying to meet the people. Surrounded by cameras and Secret Service security, they pressed less flesh than a candidate for state representative. They were flying to media markets, TV cameras.

In lieu of all this, I have a plan for the 1988 campaign — a campaign which will begin Wednesday, Nov. 7, 1984. I propose that any candidate who announces a wish to be President be immediately grounded.

Instead of bringing the candidates to the cameras, in the public interest we would bring the cameras to the candidates. The campaign of 1988 would be conducted exclusively from a studio.

This would create a few problems. I grant you, but nothing insurmountable. The candidate could be seen against a studio backdrop of Fort Wayne, Ind., and before you could say, "fasten your seatbelts," change clothes and scenery and be filmed in Tallahassee. Few viewer-voters would know the difference.

Ellen Goodman

Some props would be needed. A Mondale campaign would need a generic factory gate. A Jackson campaign would have to commandeer a single church pulpit. A Hart campaign would be a challenge what with the river-raiding, horse-riding and all-Animals-are-dissater in the studio; but they are doing wonderful things with mirrors and water tanks these days.

They would, of course, need at least a few voters for handshaking and local color. But for the same cost as a plane charter — roughly $30,000 a day — they can buy a lot of AFTRA types. Actors have to vote too, you know.

The priestess of television reporters might protest this new proof of their power, but they would be quieted by the possibility of "visuals." Any print reporters who got feisty could fly from one city to another to watch the candidate on local stations.

The beauty of this idea is that it preserves the product. Under the current procedure, a multi-million-dollar business resting on the energy of a single candidate is allowed to dissipate into the jet stream. His body is airlifted from stop to stop as if it were his arm waves, not his brainwaves, that made the difference. Inevitably, he starts to circle issues like landing fields, his vision gets obscured by fog, and finally one wing or another explodes.

The studio campaign sounds like a lofty ideal, I know, but it is the only way to keep the future Presidents doing what they should do. They should move less and think more. So, if you want a slogan for the 1988 campaign, here it is: Bring the Presidency Down to Earth.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Letters/ Involvement is among the responsibilities of a good citizen

Efforts of pair appreciated

There are people who sit idly by and let nothing at all bother them and then there are people who know one of the responsibilities of being a good citizen is to get involved and try to get things changed that are not just and right. Two persons in the latter category I am very proud to bring to your attention.

Two ladies, two Ednas, Edna Lee and Edna Raines, two neighbors, who give of themselves to their community.

They are volunteers with the Idaho Neighbors Network. I'm sure maybe you are vaguely familiar with their ongoing troubles with the pesticide controversy on Buena Vista Street here in Twin Falls.

I say vaguely familiar because you probably don't care if some people are having troubles in that area, as long as it doesn't touch you! Well, pesticide poisoning is the "SILENT KILLER" and like it or not it DOES involve everybody.

It is everywhere, in the food we eat, the air we breathe, everywhere. We must try to minimize the threat when it becomes evident it is a real threat. Anyway, I have met these two fine ladies and they are both articulate, clear-thinking people, not neurotics as I was led to suppose by reading in our local paper about their pesticide problems with warehouses situated next door to their houses.

Evidently I'm not the only one who thinks the way I do about them. You would never have known it by absence of press coverage on their achievement lately in Boise. Both received the Governor's award plaque for outstanding service to their community, at the Governor's Award Luncheon for their region.

Ladies, as long as I am personally concerned thanks for letting me know that pesticides are being warehoused in quantity at a WAREHOUSE ONE MILE FROM OUR TWIN FALLS CITY HALL! I was not aware of it. And right next to a residential neighborhood, too. Mental hospitals and pesticide warehouses belong somewhere else beside a residential neighborhood where there are small children. Don't you think so too? Why don't you call these two ladies know YOU appreciate what they are doing too. Give them a call. You'll feel good about it. Thanks! ERNEST VASQUEZ, Twin Falls

Getting facts advisable

President Reagan is to be commended for his desire to have the U.S. strong and vigilant. I have had cause in the past to doubt the competency of leaders. I came near to being in the Battle of the Bulge in World War II, the only real appraisal of the factors influencing that event is that the leadership was caught flat-footed. It was a near disaster that shouldn't have been.

I would hate for that kind of leadership to be responsible for our national security today. It is unreasonable to expect us to trust the USSR any more than the Nazis. It is doubtful if there would be much advocacy for dialogue or negotiating if Adolf Hitler were in the Kremlin's seat at any price. The stand against any price lobby in Washington D.C. is one of the strongest there is. But they soft-pedal alarming facts, such as: the USSR has a four-to-one advantage over us in ballistic missile throw weight, and they are spending 85 percent more on defense than we are right now.

There is such a thing as mental astuteness; it is first manifested in not taking on faith the opinions of other, but in attempting to get at the facts.

RAY A. YOUNG Hazelton

Writer proposes a solution

Here it is time again for my annual letter to the editor to air my gripes and complaints like all Americans should (instead of beating up on wives and little kids).

The government and the EPA have done it up to us again in the form of the "Rock Creek Clean Water Project." We now have enough "sediment retention" (mosquito nests and ponds) that in about two years we should have a major epidemic of malaria, but through my vast knowledge and experience of the problem I have come up with several solutions and benefits that will help pay for the serum to fight this epidemic.

If the government will help subsidize this project (approximately $200,000) we can locate a large pond next to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center (for all those bleeding hearts) a good food supply for the mosquitoes; I am sure we can raise some large mosquitoes and supply them our own (government subsidized) commuter airline. We already have the (government subsidized) airport to land them on.

When these omnivore aircraft (large mosquitoes) are old and worn out or die of natural deaths, we can sell or give them (through subsidies) to the Idaho Power for their new mosquito-tired electrical plant.

Well, so much for my annual letter. Watch next year for my subsidized "comic" book and my announcement of running for Congress or some other "big" government job!

Sorry to make this so short but I do have to gather up my welfare checks and road stamps so I can purchase some beer and ice cream and make a "Bud" float. Also need to get the letters in the mail to Dear Abby and Santa Claus so the post office gets them delivered before Christmas.

Some hope these government checks get here for the ground I'm not farming and the cows I'm not milking.

Time to get back to basics

When our founding fathers had enough of British oppression, they broke away with the marvelous Declaration of Independence. In it, they spelled out a clear statement of the foundation of our nation. That core can be found in the passage "...men are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights..." What it says is that God exists and that rights come from Him, not from government. Thus, the Declaration tells us that government has no other valid purpose than to protect the God-given rights of the people who formed government in the first place.

After the Independence victory, they wrote a Constitution whose entire purpose was to limit the people; it limits the government. Because our people have been free, they have produced, invented, built and dreamed. We have enjoyed the blessings of liberty in America because of wise leaders who created Americanism. Americanism includes a belief in God from whom all rights proceed. It affirms the dignity of every individual by strict limitation on the power of government over our lives.

But, today, we should be concerned since a few understand our marvelous heritage. Because Americanism is so little appreciated, we have invited an expanding federal government to build itself into another master more oppressive than the years ago, which we separated two hundred years ago. Our courts, through and prayer and anti-God decisions, have even barred from the classrooms any positive statement of the truths in the Declaration of Independence, the very birth certificate of our nation.

Americans enjoy the blessings of freedom far beyond any other inhabitants of the earth. However, unless we get back to the truths of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, we are destined to lose our liberty. Let us study our glorious heritage and take the responsibility to pass it along to future generations of Americans. Every God-loving citizen must get involved to protect our freedom. Mondale, Bradley confer; Demo platform about ready

By The Associated Press

Walter F. Mondale interviewed his first candidate for the vice presidential nomination Thursday while party leaders worked in Washington to end feuding and approve a platform.

After a 3½-hour meeting with Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, Mondale said he didn't believe that having a black on the Democratic ticket would be a political disadvantage.

And Bradley, the first black to be elected mayor of Los Angeles, asserted, "I have no doubt about my qualifications to serve."

The meeting in Mondale's North Oaks, Minn., home was the first in a series he plans before settling on a running mate. Sen. Lloyd Benison of Texas and Mayor Dianne Feinstein of San Francisco are traveling to Minnesota on Saturday for similar sessions.

Mondale, with a cushion of more than 80 delegates beyond the 1,967 needed, has claimed the Democratic presidential nomination although the party's national convention is still three weeks away.

His main rival, Gary Hart, was in Washington on Thursday with no public events scheduled.

Hart's chief ally on the Democratic platform-drafting committee, Rep. Timothy Wirth of Colorado, said Thursday that Hart will continue to press his candidacy even though he and Mondale have reached major accord on platform language.

"We're going into San Francisco. That's where the ultimate decision is going to be made and we will have hundreds and hundreds of delegates there," Wirth said at a news conference.

The draft was being presented Thursday to the full 184-member Platform Committee and ultimately will go to the convention floor for final approval.

Supporters of the Rev. Jesse Jackson said they probably could support about 60 percent of the platform language.

Jackson, who is calling for a "summit" among the three rivals to discuss the platform, flew to Chicago on Thursday to prepare for his upcoming trip to Central America.

Udall said the committee decided against Jackson's demand for more delegates. "That is something the convention is going to have to deal with if it comes up," he said.

THEODORE BUNDY
Facing execution

Justices say 'no' to Bundy

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Supreme Court on Thursday rejected Theodore Bundy's claim that his murder trial was unfair and upheld his conviction and death sentence for the bludgeoning slayings of two sorority sisters.

In a 7-3 ruling, the high court said it found no reason to overturn the outcome of Bundy's trial for the Jan. 15, 1978, murders of Margaret Bowman, 21, and Jalsa Levy, 20.

The women were killed as they slept in the Chi Omega sorority house at Florida State University in Tallahassee. Bundy, who became one of the nation's best-known criminals when the FBI accused him of 36 sex-related murders nationwide, also was convicted of three counts of attempted first-degree murder in attacks on three other women at the university.

Defense attorneys challenged controversial bits of evidence introduced at the trial and the state's use of hypnosis to refresh a witness's memory. The justices, in their 34-page opinion, dismissed the challenges.

"I feel reassured now that they've upheld the verdict," said Edward Cowart, a former Dade County circuit judge who presided over Bundy's trial. Cowart now is a special prosecutor.

Bundy's murder trial was moved from Tallahassee to Miami because of intense news media interest. Bundy was convicted July 24, 1979, and sentenced a week later.

In a separate case, Bundy also was sentenced to the electric chair for murdering a 12-year-old Lake City schoolgirl in 1978. Florida justices still have that case under review.

EPA orders auto recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency on Thursday ordered General Motors Corp. to recall about 550,000 1980-model cars whose emissions exceed federal standards on nitrogen oxides.

EPA said its investigation revealed that the cars exceed the government's 1980 standards because their exhaust gas recirculation systems are defective.

Valves which control the recycling of exhaust gas to reduce nitrogen oxides emissions were blocked with a carbon-like substance, EPA said. Vehicles on which the valves were blocked had average nitrogen oxides of .54 grams per mile, while the government standard for the cars is 2 grams per mile.

Models affected by the recall are the 1980 six-cylinder Buick Regal, Century, Century Wagon, LeSabre and Skyhawk; Pontiac LeMans, LeMans Safari Wagon, Grand Prix, Catalina, Bonneville, Firebird and Sunbird; Chevrolet Monza; and Oldsmobile Cutlass, Cutlass Supreme, Cutlass Wagon, Delta 88 and Starfire equipped with 301-cubic-inch displacement (3.8 liter) engines.

Study spotlights sodium level role

WASHINGTON (AP) — People who get high blood pressure tend to consume lower than recommended amounts of calcium and other nutrients found in dairy products, says a study that also raises questions about the role that sodium plays in the disease.

Researchers from Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland say a study of officials gathered by federal health officials several years ago indicates that "calcium was the nutrient for which reduced intake was most consistent in hypertensive individuals."

In a report to be published today in the Journal Science, the researchers say that high blood pressure, or hypertension, is more closely associated with deficiencies in certain nutrients than with excesses of others, including sodium.

The study's most controversial finding was one indicating an inverse relationship between salt or sodium intake and blood pressure. The data suggests that high sodium intake results in lower blood pressure, which is the opposite of what most other human and animal studies have found.

Dr. David A. McCarron and his colleagues at Portland said the findings "raise the important question of whether sodium restriction is routinely advisable in many hypertensives."

McCarron said in a telephone interview that new evidence indicates calcium may mediate the role of sodium in hypertension. He called for hypertension experts to re-examine the relationship between sodium and the disease. Salt is a principal source of sodium.

"I don't want people to go out and eat a lot of salt now," he said, "but if they eat a balanced diet with the right amounts of dairy products, fruits, vegetables and fresh meats, there is a possibility that the sodium will have no effect (on blood pressure)."

However, other blood pressure experts divided interpreting the Portland results with great caution.

$136 million to dairies

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than $136 million was paid to dairy farmers for cutting back on milk production in the first three months of 1984 as part of a program to reduce surpluses, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

The payments went to farmers who signed contracts to reduce milk production 5 percent to 30 percent during a 18-month period that began Jan. 1. The estimated total cost of the program is $940 million.

Officials said the payments, tabulated as of mid-June, covered the January-March quarter and represent about 75 percent of the total payments the department expects to make for cutbacks in the first three months of the program.

The largest payments, $16.9 million, went to farmers in Wisconsin, the biggest dairy state. Minnesota and California each received more than $11 million.

In all, 37,888 dairy farms were enrolled in the program out of 303,580 that were eligible — 12.5 percent of all dairy farms in the United States. The department classifies a dairy farm as any unit with one or more cows.

The enrollees included about 20 percent of all commercial dairy farmers, department officials said.

S&L hit by robber

Still at large

By JOE NEAVE
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — A lone gunman robbed the Benjamin Franklin Federal-Savings and Loan office at 1040 Shoshone St. E. Thursday morning. The suspect was still at large Thursday evening.

Twin Falls police said the robbery occurred at 11:45 a.m. when a heavily-built, white, male, about six feet tall and 45 years of age, entered through the business back door of the savings and loan, carrying a bank bag.

The man displayed a weapon, described as a blue revolver, and said he wanted the money and not to trip any alarms.

"Then they gave him the money and he walked out," said Tim Qualls of the Twin Falls Police Department.

Ron Schanaker, director of corporate security for Benjamin Franklin, said, "It was one of those things where he produced a weapon and the tellers pretty well knew what he wanted. Some things don't have to be said."

The gunman was not wearing a mask, Schanaker said, and added that security cameras probably had taken a photograph of the robber.

Bank officials would not disclose the amount of money taken.

Pete Youngberg, savings and loan manager for the Twin Falls office, said, because of company policy, neither he nor the tellers could make any comment on the holdup.

The suspect was the target of an intensive search throughout Southern Idaho and in Jackson, Nev., throughout Thursday. Police checked 63 many tips concerning his whereabouts, but had not located him until 1 p.m. Thursday.

Prospective 4-H campers attended an orientation meeting in Rock Creek Park and played games

4-H'ers pool efforts, help youngsters

TWIN FALLS — For kids who might otherwise miss out on singing around the campfire and hiking through the woods, the Twin Falls County 4-H Builders Club will provide those memories.

Starting today, 25 teenagers from the 4-H group will be counselors to more than 75 underprivileged youngsters at the Central Idaho 4-H Camp 18 miles north of Sun Valley in the Sawtooth Mountains.

Last week the 4-H group received the President's Volunteer and Action Award called "People Helping People" for sponsoring the no-cost camp for the 9- to 11 year olds from throughout Twin Falls County.

Wilma Southwick, the 4-H program coordinator, said the three-day camp brings about "positive development" for both the young counselors and the "little campers."

"It's just a real special time," Southwick said.

In the 13 years the 4-H group has sponsored the camp, more than 600 children and 150 counselors have had the chance to get to know each other, she said.

Since the parents of the children going to camp must meet low income requirements, Southwick said many times she is saddened to see "the hurt in their eyes," although they want their children to enjoy a privilege they cannot provide. In past years the cost of the camp was raised by the teenage counselors, but this year the $2,500 will come from the Florence Gardner Trust Fund administered by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Parker of Twin Falls, she said.

Milzi Harkins, 16, who was a counselor for three years and will now be the organizer of camp games, said camping is a new experience for many of the children.

And the youngsters often become so attached to their counselors, "some of the kids call later," she said. "I think the best part is seeing the smiles on their faces."

State program to spruce up highway rest areas

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — The Idaho Department of Transportation will open a sweeping remodeling program for its highway rest areas this summer and fall, starting with nine stations in the Magic Valley and two near Boise.

The state agency also will develop a complete rest area at the Colter Port of Entry east of Burley on Interstate 84 during the next year. Now travelers have to use restrooms at the port's small scale building.

Bob Humphrey, transportation planner in the Boise district, said Thursday the state's highway division will spend about $700,000 this year and another $2.2 million through 1986 to refurbish most of its rest stops.

At the same time, the state also is planning to build information islands at the renovated rest areas to help travelers figure out where they are and how to find various attractions, he said. The islands may include pop or candy vending machines run by the Idaho Commission for the Blind.

Stations along Interstate 84 in the Magic Valley will get the first spruce-up. Humphrey said, "We've got so many rest stops in the district and they're nearing their age limit," he said. "We're looking at some that have been here 20 years with minimal maintenance."

Roof repairs and landscaping are scheduled this summer, but work on the restroom buildings will wait until after Sept. 1, when fewer travelers are on the road.

"We want to avoid any major disruption to the public as much as possible during the summer season," Humphrey said.

The upgrading will improve heating systems, rattle restrooms if necessary, replace broken or old fixtures, paint buildings and make other repairs.

The grounds also will get new shrubbery, native wildflowers, irrigation systems, sidewalks and some additional parking. "We're trying in any instance we can to use native materials and to try and eliminate as much maintenance as possible," Humphrey said.

The traveler information-refreshment islands will have large display boards for routes and tourist-oriented attractions as well as the vending machines under a small, roofed pavilion, he indicated.

Howard Johnson, Shoshone district engineer, said the transportation department also is considering placing resident custodians at heavily used areas. The current effort is the beginning of a long-range maintenance program.

"We think we have to go around every five years and completely redo rest areas and if it's old, worn out or inadequate, replace it with a new rest area," he said.

Eight stations scheduled for refurbishing this year lie along Interstate 84. They are: Juniper four miles north of the Utah border, Jerome-Twin Falls, Bliss and Black's Creek immediately east of Boise.

The Raft River stations are along Interstate 86 four miles east of the Interstate 84 junction. The Timmerman rest area at Idaho 75 and U.S. 20 also will be restored. The rest stop at Hagerman along U.S. 30 is not planned for renovation, because the state agency is considering phasing it out.

Laws choke cities

Speaker says

By ROBERT DOYLE
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — In the keynote address at the opening of the 37th Conference of the Association of Idaho Cities, Thursday, Ford Harrison said cities should be treated like the goose that laid the golden egg.

"Unfortunately, however, the goose is getting choked instead," said Harrison, the mayor of Scotland Neck, N.C. (population 2,534) and past president of National Association of Cities. After pointing out that cities were the "first government entities whose existence was by choice of the people," Harrison directed his remarks at pending congressional legislation that would put a "volume cap on industrial development bonds and urban development action grants — money which is crucial to the revitalization of many cities.

"We (the cities) felt the recent cuts in entitlement money and funding for urban programs was our contribution toward a balanced federal budget," Harrison said.

"Cities are the laboratories of social and economic experimentation where most of the jobs are located, where most of the people reside and where most of the wealth is generated.

"But we must have help. Cities should be treated like the goose that laid the golden egg."

Harrison then attacked the "rising federal deficit, which he said 'has led to the recent hike in interest rates and the declining Dow Jones' average on the New York Stock Exchange.

"This deficit has been a major concern of the NLC whose membership has offered Washington a budget-balancing program every year for the past seven years," said Harrison.

"For example," he said, "the cost of living wage increase to an index other than the one presently being used — one arrived at more realistically — limit yearly military expenditures to no more than five percent above the previous year's spending after accounting for inflation — and increase revenues by a temporary surcharge, perhaps on energy and power. Those are three of our recommendations," Harrison said.

He then encouraged the representatives of Idaho's cities to join the NLC, mentioning that the organization had been successful in its lobbying effort to push through Congress federal revenue-sharing legislation that brought federal money to the cities.

Harrison was preceded at the podium by Sun Valley Mayor Ruth Lister, who reminded those present of the

Rapist dead hours

When found

By DOUG WRIGHT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Convicted rapist Richard Ray Bradley had been dead from hanging for one to seven hours before being discovered Wednesday by jailers, says a preliminary report on the autopsy filed with Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter.

However, the night jailer insisted that he checked Bradley's cell every 45 minutes in adherence with normal procedures and "didn't notice anything out of the ordinary," said Baxter, as the investigation into the Wednesday hanging continued.

Baxter said, however, that a review of jail procedures concerning surveillance of cells has not yet been discussed, although she did not rule out the possibility that a review and some changes would be made in the future.

One day before his death, the 35-year-old Bradley had been convicted by a jury of raping a Twin Falls woman last fall. Having been previously convicted of similar charges in Boise and Arizona, he was serving a six-year sentence in the Idaho State Prison at the time of the Twin Falls trial.

The autopsy, performed by pathologist John Gray also seemed to rule out the possibility of foul play, because it showed that the victim was killed by asphyxiation due to hanging and that the victim's body was not damaged except for the neck, said Baxter. Bradley apparently had stepped off the cell toilet and hanged himself with a towel issued by the jail, Baxter said.

Public defender Mike Powers, who had defended Bradley in his Twin Falls trial, said that he was "disappointed and shocked," and that although Bradley was despondent with the verdict, he had shown no previous indications of suicidal tendencies.

"I've gone over it at least a hundred times and I can't come up with anything that might've indicated suicidal tendencies," said Powers.

However, Powers noted that Bradley did have emotional problems. "Both he and I realized he had a lot of problems, which I think stem from his involvement in the Vietnam War. While I was out drinking in high school, at 17 he was dodging bullets in the war," said Powers.

Wet June weather swells Snake River

By HAL BERNYON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A series of June rainstorms has helped raise Snake River flows to near-record levels.

The rains have both increased the rate of mountain runoff into the river and reduced irrigation diversions that normally lower the river level. This has forced Bureau of Reclamation officials to use emergency storage space in the American Falls reservoir to avoid serious downstream flooding.

"When irrigation demand in the Upper Snake dropped down last week we had to put water into the emergency space," said Leo Bush, a Bureau of Reclamation official.

"If it weren't for the dams, the Snake River flows this spring would have been greater than the Teton flood flows (triggered by a 1976 dam collapse)," Bush said.

The dam collapse unleashed a wall of water that sent flows of up to 80,000 cubic feet per second through the SNAKE RIVER near Idaho Falls. The same area would have had peak flows of up to 60,000 cfs this spring if Bureau dams had not been around to store the runoff, Bush said.

Even with the reservoir storage, Bush said that the Snake River has caused some minor flooding of a marina and parklands near Burley. But the flooding would have been much worse — threatening several homes near Burley — if the emergency storage space at American Falls had not been put into use.

During the first three weeks of June, total rainfall has already greatly exceeded the monthly average.

The Twin Falls area has received 1.66 inches of rain compared to a monthly average of .96, reports Bill Galkin, a National Weather Service forecaster stationed in Kimberly.

With nine days left in the month, the 1984 June rainfall ranks fourth on the all-time record list. The record June rainfall, totalling 2.82 inches, was set back in 1963, Galkin said.

Galkin said the wet weather has been caused by "a low (pressure system) sitting over the Gulf of Alaska. There is a big ridge of high pressure over the Midwest, which has sent record high temperatures to the East Coast and we're getting the cooler weather."

Senate approves project study funds

By HAL BERNYON
Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate approved funds Thursday for a $100,000 Bureau of Reclamation study of the Salmon Falls Irrigation project.

The study will determine the economics of expanding and enlarging the Twin Falls Canal system to service 60,000 acres in the Salmon Falls tract.

The unusual five-year funding for the study was heavily lobbied for by Sen. James McClure, who chairs the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

But the Twin Falls Canal Co. has pushed for the Bureau to take an alternative approach that would piggyback the Salmon Falls tract expansion with a new effort to rehabilitate its own aging canal network.

John Rosholt, an attorney for the Twin Falls Canal Co., says that by patching up all the seepage leaks in the company's canal system, enough water could be saved to assure an adequate irrigation supply for both Twin Falls and Salmon Falls tract farmers.

Rosholt, who also leads up the McClure for U.S. Senate Committee, said Wednesday that the Senate action "is significant in that it allows us to circumvent a lot of red-tape to get the study funded."

McClure said that a "cooperative effort between the Twin Falls Canal Co. and the Bureau of Reclamation holds the promise of a cost-effective supply of irrigation water for the Salmon Falls project.

The new project could eliminate the need for an expensive new canal and "virtually eliminate" the need for supplemental groundwater pumping in the Salmon Falls tract, McClure said.

If the Bureau of Reclamation decides to back the canal extension program, the Twin Falls Canal Co. could end up getting a lot of government aid to rebuild their canal system, according to Rosholt. Bureau officials might lobby Congress for money to finance up to half of the more than $61 million cost of rehabilitating the Twin Falls Canal system, he said.

Jerome schools go for levy

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Residents of the Jerome School District will be asked to vote Aug. 7 for a supplemental tax levy to purchase text books and other instructional material for the district's schools.

In a special Tuesday night school board meeting, trustees voted unanimously to call the election, but reduced the original $200,000 request from school principals to $150,000.

Superintendent Stephenson Youngerman said he met earlier Tuesday with the county tax assessors and determined the cost of such a levy would be about 30 cents per $1,000 of assessed property values if the $200,000 were raised.

"I would guess that a $150,000 figure would require only about 35 cents," he said. "Like other taxpayers, I am concerned about increasing tax assessments and I believe my own taxes will raise about $30 for the year."

Trustee Ben Neff, who made the motion calling for the election and the resolution in the meeting, said that most of the cuts not be made at the elementary school levels.

"These requests (for grades one through eight) are largely for text books and we know they are badly needed. If the economy were better I would like to see all of the requests filled, but times are not good and I think we should see if we can make some cuts in areas other than the books," Neff said.

Joe Skaug, who completed a three-year term on the board with the Tuesday meeting, said he might be speaking more freely than other board members.

"Some classes have no books. Some classes have outdated books. The needs are great and I suggest it is wrong for the board to decide where the cuts are to be made. The teachers should make the recommendations," he said.

Skaug said he will support the $150,000 levy because it may be easier to pass a cut-back proposal, but he would rather see the $200,000 as requested.

Youngerman said he believes principals can get together and make some cuts. He said although they are on vacation he will call them in for a revised list of needs in each school.

Youngerman also said he would have to take exception to comments by board member Alvin Chojnacki who said the proposed levy should bring the needs up to date and the district can then keep up on a yearly basis.

"I was stunned by the comments of the House Speaker (T. W. Silvers of Twin Falls) that now is not the time to ask for assistance and educators should make their needs known during legislative sessions," Youngerman said.

"I don't know what happened to my messages (during the legislative session) or those from the many other superintendents, but I can't believe the legislators did not know of our needs."

Radio buffs to stage emergency

TWIN FALLS — What could, under some circumstances, be life-saving emergency messages will be transmitted from Nat-Soo-Pah over amateur radio equipment this weekend.

The event is a field-day test of amateur radio equipment and operator skills that would be called on to provide a vital link with the outside, should a disaster wipe out the regular communication systems of Magic Valley.

Keith Johns of Twin Falls said the Magic Valley Chapter of the Idaho Society of Radio Amateurs will gather at Nat-Soo-Pah for participation in the nationwide field day, which is held each year on the last full weekend of June.

Operators will disconnect their equipment from commercial power sources and abandon their normal high-efficiency antennas, pack up the radio units and head for the south end of the county where they can simulate disaster conditions. They will have no commercial power, no telephones and will fashion make-shift antennas.

Radio "hams" will be operating their equipment over a 24-hour period along with others across the nation. It is all part of the annual "field day."

Since there is only a simulated disaster involved, ham radio families will also use the test as a social event with picnics at the Nat-Soo-Pah picnic area.

People don't wash hands often enough

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Please Wash in Winona" was right on! I, too, have noticed that people don't wash their hands nearly enough. As the people at the Mayo Clinic so wisely pointed out, the 10 most common spreaders of infection are one's own fingers.

Abby, you touched upon it, but you should have emphasized strongly that another notorious germ carrier is money! Especially paper bills. Each time paper money passes from one pair of hands to another, it becomes filthy.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Today there are many establishments, large and small, that sell food to eat on the premises or carry out. This includes hot dogs, hamburgers, pizza, ice-cream cones, etc. Notice how many employees prepare the food; serve it, then take the customers' money and give them the change. In a few minutes they are back to handling food again without having washed their hands.

I personally will not eat where the same employee who handles the food handles the money.

— A FRIEND IN MILLBURY
DEAR FRIEND: Thanks. That's food for thought, but not for eating.

DEAR ABBY: I am interested in learning your opinion of the increasingly prevalent practice of brushing one's teeth in public restrooms, particularly in the office buildings such as the one I work in.

Although brushing after every meal is no doubt laudable, I find it exceedingly objectionable to be made an unwilling party to the personal hygiene of a total stranger, with the attendant spitting, etc.

Not only do I think it is plain bad manners, I find it downright disgusting. What do you think?
— GROSSED OUT IN GEORGIA
DEAR GROSSED OUT: True, witnessing a public teeth cleaning can be somewhat unpleasant, but hear this: The sooner one brushes and flosses after eating, the healthier his teeth will be. Of course, it is absolutely imperative that the bowl be left sparkling clean.

I fully expect that this advice will be met with groans from squeamish readers who would like to flog me with a rope of dental floss, but I'll take my lumps. A clean and healthy mouth is essential to general good health.

Volunteers back on Mud Lake dikes

MUD LAKE (AP) — State and federal crews returned dike reinforcement work to volunteers Thursday as the flooding situation around Mud Lake in eastern Idaho stabilized.

"It looks okay except that throughout the dike there are some cracks," said Lois Poole of the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department. "But it's holding."

After more than 120 volunteers rushed to the site late Wednesday to plug a gaping hole in the dike at the Camas Creek Canal, the National Guard and the Army Corps of Engineers moved in men and equipment to bolster the emergency patch that was fashioned by workers in armpit-deep water within a matter of hours.

By midday Thursday, both the guard and corps had sealed back their operations and were simply stockpiling sand, dirt and gravel for use by volunteers in strengthening weak spots in the dike that has been holding back water from tens of thousands of acres for several weeks.

"The levee is in basically bad condition," admitted Idaho Disaster Services Director Paul Masile. "It is still heavily saturated, ... and the creeks are still running very, very high."

"It's a delicate question of whether the dike will hold," he said.

Gov. John Evans has already declared a state of emergency because of the flood threat, and crews from the corps and the guard have been working in the area for days to dredge a stream channel so more water can be drained from the reservoir.

Across the state in Owyhee County, Evans issued another disaster declaration for that area because of the persistent flooding along the Bruneau River.

"The damage to bridges and roads is beyond the control of the services, personnel, equipment and finances of local governments," the governor said.

Although the river is now expected to fall below flood stage this week, it has been at or near the nine-foot flood level for the past six weeks or more.

The disaster declaration clears the way for use of state resources to cope with flood problems.

Because of the quick response by volunteers Wednesday night, summoned by a special community alert system, damage from the breach in the Mud Lake dike was kept to a minimum. Although a two-foot wall of water poured through the 30-foot break, less than a quarter-section of land was flooded.

No families were evacuated after the break, although one of the 20 homes in the path of the flood waters had been abandoned earlier. Water was flowing into the basement of a second, but the family was still occupying the house and sandbagging was under way to block the water.

Farmers in the area have been battling the rising water for the past two months as persistent rain storms interspersed with heavy mountain snow melt pushed the reservoir to over 10 feet, sending water lapping at the top of the 13-mile dike system.

"The dikes are soft and muddy, and if the wind blows, they will wash out," said Richard Smith.

Unemployment benefits end

WASHINGTON (AP) — Extended unemployment insurance benefits have been discontinued in Idaho, officials said.

The suspension affects 2,300 jobless Idahoans who were receiving 14 weeks of extended benefits under the Federal Supplemental Benefits Program, said Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan.

The extended benefits were discontinued because Idaho's insured unemployment rate dropped below a 5 percent average for a 13-week period that ended in May, officials said. That is the cutoff point for determining whether residents in a particular state receive the extension.

But organizations operating in Idaho will receive $1.5 million in federal dollars to provide 289 jobs to low-income, elderly state residents.

Teacher files damage claim

BOISE (AP) — A Boise junior high school teacher claims a local television station showed his picture and identified it as an Idaho State Prison inmate.

Richard Kauffman filed a claim Tuesday with Ada County, asking $100,000 damages. Kauffman said in the claim an unidentified Boise City or Ada County employee at the joint city-county records office provided KTVI television station with a photograph identified as "Richard Kauffman" on April 20.

A prison inmate's name is Richard Allen Coffman.

Coffman was being examined at the office of a local doctor when he attempted to escape. Coffman held a woman at knife point, but was subdued by two prison guards who accompanied him, the prison officials said.

Sandpoint may double size

SANDPOINT (AP) — Sandpoint could nearly double in size under an annexation plan now being drawn up.

City Planner Sam Wentz said the proposal to extend city boundaries to the west and north should satisfy the residential growth demand through the year 2005.

The town's population of 4,450 would increase to just under 5,000 if the plan is approved, he said, but added that the new boundaries should hold a population of up to 12,000.

The main reason for the city would be adding fire and police protection to the area, he said.

Rigby toughens leash law

RIGBY (AP) — Pet owners who consistently allow their dogs to roam Rigby neighborhoods could end up in jail.

City officials have implemented a tough leash law that includes increases in pick-up fees and room and board in the city dog pound.

The city will now charge pet owners $15 for taking a dog to the pound, and $15 a day for housing an animal, city officials said. In addition, there will be a $20 licensing fee for female dogs and $15 for males.

Officials will consider violations occurring in the last three years when they determine punishment.

Teachers oppose instruction time cut

REXBURG (AP) — The Idaho Education Association Thursday questioned the validity of changes in the state accreditation standards governing the amount of instructional time required for class credit.

The proposed revision could quite possibly result in a deterioration of the quality of Idaho's education," warned Gail Moore, an spokeswoman for the teachers' organization during a hearing before the state Board of Education in Rexburg.

After some board members expressed the need for more time to study the proposal, the board postponed action on the changes until its session today.

On another matter, the board agreed to hold a public hearing on a proposal to significantly increase the minimum insurance coverage required on school buses.

Guy John Evans, in a letter to the board, called the current insurance minimum of only $500,000 per accident totally inadequate in view of the awards being ordered by courts today in accident cases.

He recommended the minimum coverage be boosted to as much as $5 million per accident, a proposal that the Public Utilities Commission, which regulates public carriers, is reviewing.

But the board voted to propose for public comment a minimum insurance plan of $3 million per accident with a cap of $500,000 for any individual involved in a mishap.

On accreditation standards, the state now requires 150 hours of instructional time for credit in various laboratory sciences and other courses and 120 hours for credit in basic core curricula, the proposed changes would mandate 140 hours minimum for all courses.

"At first glance, it may appear that this revision is a decrease in time required to achieve a unit of credit," the board said in explaining the proposition. "This is not really true since most schools are giving credit based on the 120-hour minimum for non-laboratory credits."

But while most school superintendents have backed the proposal, contending the current rule with disparate instructional requirements is unworkable, Ms. Moore indicated that the proposal would effectively increase the amount of time teachers must spend in the classroom.

Major stars to play fair

BOISE (AP) — Mickey Gilley, Charlie Daniels and this year's top female country-music vocalist Janie Fricke are scheduled to perform at the Western Idaho Fair in August.

Fair manager Maxine Kilian said other grandstand entertainers booked for the fair include Andy Gibb, the Osmond Brothers and Roger Miller.

Grandstand seats will be free for most of the shows with the price of regular fair admission.

But all seats are reserved for the Andy Gibb and Mickey Gilley performances, she said.

The tractor pull contest scheduled for Aug. 1 also is reserved seating, she said.

Dean has 'wellness' plan set

LEWISTON (AP) — The new dean of students at Lewis-Clark State College is bringing with him a plan to encourage students to improve their physical and mental health and well as their intellect.

Larry Baker, taking over the post that has been held by College President Lee Wickens for the past year, said he believes the concept of "high level wellness" can prevent illness and depression, both while in school and after graduation.

He wants to expand students' options for growth, and Baker said he'll do that whether it means offering a variety of physical activities or encouraging people to combine physical exercise with intellectual development.

The former director of student development at Illinois Benedictine College near Chicago said he believes vocational and academic students can learn to improve the quality of life by applying the kind of concepts he is proposing.

Baker said he also wants to increase emphasis at the college on career planning and placement.

"We can do a much better job of preparing students to compete for whatever jobs or positions are out there," he said.

Girls State leader raps 90% policy

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's new Girls State Governor Kristin Steckler says the state's new 90 percent attendance rule should be amended to allow more flexibility for students with high grades.

Steckler, a Boise high school senior, is scheduled to be installed Thursday.

The state's public attendance rule should be modified with establishment of a grade point standard, Ms. Kristin said. Students who meet a GPA of at least 3.2 to 3.5 could miss more classes than the 90 percent attendance rule allows, she said.

Nancy Finlayson will be installed as lieutenant governor.

Karey Worton, Idaho Falls, and Kelly Childress, Post Falls, were named senators and Angella Martin, Boise, and Nanelle Cresio, Mountain Home, representatives.

Other state officers are Cathryn Hendricks, Rexburg, secretary of state; Natalie Krutson, Mountain Home, state auditor; Lynette Dledrich, Meridian, state treasurer; Denise Mechem, Emmett, attorney general; and Linda Clark, Buhl, superintendent of public instruction.

Sentencing date delayed

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — The sentencing date for two Texas squatters convicted of first-degree murder has been delayed.

Mark and Bryan Lankford were scheduled to be sentenced June 28, but documents filed in district court say the hearing has been postponed because results of psychiatric evaluations have not been completed.

No new date has been set.

Bryan Lankford was originally scheduled to be sentenced Thursday.

The Lankfords were convicted in separate trials this spring of the beating deaths of U.S. Marine Capt. Robert Bravence and his wife, Cheryl.

The Bravences, originally from Scottsdale, Ariz., were stationed in Texas at the time of the murders. They had been on a camping vacation in Idaho and were last seen east of Grangeville on June 21, 1983.

Their bodies were found last September.

Sans Stingers, Kuwait looks for arms

By The Associated Press

Kuwait said Thursday that U.S. rejection of its request for Stinger missiles is regrettable, but that it can buy weapons elsewhere to protect itself against expansion of the Iran-Iraq war.

The arms market is open, said government minister Abdul Aziz Hussain, apparently alluding to the Soviet Union, whose foreign minister has been invited to visit Kuwait.

Iraq, meanwhile, claimed Iran had amassed troops in residential areas along the border between the two warring nations in preparation for an "expected offensive" against Iraq.

As U.N. observers in Baghdad began preparations to monitor a nine-day-old moratorium on the firing of civilian rockets, Iraq accused Iran of a third violation of the cease-fire. An Iraqi military spokesman said the Iranians shelled a residential suburb of the southern city of Basra for 20 minutes Thursday, injuring a woman and a child.

Hussain, Kuwait minister of state for Cabinet affairs, said Thursday that the U.S. refusal to provide Kuwait with the shoulder-fired anti-aircraft Stinger missiles was "regrettable."

However, Kuwait can purchase arms elsewhere, Hussain said, adding that the Stingers "are needed strictly for defense purposes."

Saudi Arabia has acquired 40 Stinger missiles from the United States, prompting Kuwait to seek a similar deal. A U.S. State Department spokesman said in Washington Tuesday that no Stingers would be provided to Kuwait at this time.

Congress opposed U.S. sale of Stingers to Kuwait, fearing the weapon might fall into Palestinian hands. Kuwait is the strongest Arab supporter of the Palestinian Liberation Organization. Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah Al-Ahmed has invited Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to visit Kuwait. It would be the first visit by a Soviet foreign minister to a member of the Gulf Cooperation Council.

Kuwait is the only one of the six council nations with diplomatic ties with the Soviet Union. Other council members — Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman — have refused to exchange diplomatic relations with Moscow and other Eastern bloc countries.

Kuwaiti diplomats have said their government prefers to have U.S. weaponry so it can be integrated into a gulf-wide defense system under Saudi Arabia's U.S.-supplied AWACS — Airborne Warning and Control System radar planes.

Missile dangers spreading

MOSCOW (AP) — President Francois Mitterrand of France told a Kremlin banquet Thursday night that he sees equal danger from both sides of the current missile deployment in Europe, and "the security of my country is the only point that is negotiable."

He told an audience of Soviet dignitaries, headed by President Konstantin U. Chernenko, that France has to be prepared for all risks posed by the accumulation of arms in Europe, including Soviet SS-20 missiles.

Mitterrand said that the Soviet intermediate-range weapons represented just as much a danger to the continent as the Pershing 2 and cruise missiles that NATO is deploying despite Soviet protests.

His remark about France's security came during a toast at the banquet after the opening round of talks with Chernenko — the first between a Western head of state and the 72-year-old Soviet leader, who took over four months ago. Mitterrand is on a three-day visit to Moscow aimed at increasing trade and improving East-West relations.

In a tape recording of Mitterrand's banquet speech played for reporters by French officials, the president also said it was useful to "speak frankly around the table as we did today and will do tomorrow so that peace wins out over war."

He also referred to a proposal France has introduced at the Geneva talks, calling for negotiations to limit the development of anti-ballistic missiles in space.

Earlier, French spokesman Michel Vauzelle and Soviet spokesman Leonid Zamyatin said the issue of space weapons was one area in which agreement seemed to emerge in the two-day summit.

On human rights, Mitterrand mentioned Soviet dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov by name in remarks at the dinner. It was believed to be the first time the issue was so directly put before a Kremlin audience by a Western leader.

Mitterrand said Sakharov, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, had become an issue because his case represented a threat to liberties guaranteed in the Helsinki accords of 1975, which France still considers binding.

Taiwan mine collapses; 7 known dead

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Rescue workers recovered five burned bodies from a coal mine Thursday, raising to seven the confirmed death toll in a mine disaster that officials say could become Taiwan's worst.

Sixty-four other miners remained trapped inside the Hsiatsin mine in Tucheng, 12 miles outside Taipei. Police said the chance of finding any survivors was slim.

Part of the mine collapsed during a fiery explosion Wednesday after a coal trolley struck a cable, causing a spark that ignited gas in a tunnel.

Hundreds of friends and relatives of the miners have been keeping a vigil near the entrance to the tunnel. Many burst into tears as they tried to identify the bodies brought out today at a funeral home.

Police said rescue operations were going slowly because the cramped space inside the tunnel restricted the number of people who could work at one time.

There were 120 miners working when the explosion occurred and many managed to scramble to safety. Eleven of the injured remained hospitalized Thursday, including two in critical condition.

Police said an early report that three miners were killed and 70 others were trapped was erroneous, resulting from conflicting information in the confusion that followed the explosion.

In Taiwan's worst previous mine disaster, 42 miners died in a 1971 gas explosion in a coal mine in Keelung, 24 miles north of Taipei.

ANDREI SAKHAROV
Soviet dissident

HBO presents 2-hour Sakharov film

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — While the headlines are tracing the whereabouts of Dr. Andrei Sakharov, Home Box Office is presenting a two-hour feature film about the Soviet dissident.

As the film tells the story, Sakharov was an honored member of the Soviet establishment. He was a decorated, respected scientist who helped create the hydrogen bomb for his country.

After years of implied seclusion behind his work, Sakharov finds a new voice to protest the troubles of the society, which attempts to squash individualism and human rights. In doing so, the scientist begins a dangerous journey.

His travels, as the news tells us, eventually led him to exile in the city of Gorky and a hunger-strike protest of the Soviet government's refusal to allow his wife to seek medical attention outside Russia.

The HBO film that is being shown this month takes up as Sakharov, played by Jason Robards, is beginning to break from the establishment. He signs petitions for the release of political prisoners. He shows up at protests.

His actions jeopardize his job, but he still wields power enough to achieve some success in his new role as activist. Little by little, he gives himself over to the cause he had adopted. During one meeting with fellow protesters, Sakharov meets Dr. Elena Bonner, played by Glenda Jackson. The two fall in love and discover a common love, the pursuit of human rights.

In a particularly moving sequence, Sakharov and Elena discuss their future together while KGB men dressed in black leather methodically search their friend's house for contraband. The scene relays the familiarity of such government intrusions as the people attempt to hold onto their emotions and humanity.

The Sakharovs' non-conformity results in the KGB punishing them and their family. Their daughter is kicked out of school on trumped-up charges. They are harassed and constantly watched. The final outrage is the attempted poisoning of their grandson.

"Sakharov" successfully achieves a mood of paranoia and frustration. It provides an eerie glimpse into life where those who think for themselves are threatened by Siberian exile or mind-bending drugs.

The screenplay does avoid the melodrama trap in which it easily could have fallen victim. Yet "Sakharov's" failures are devastating. There is no burning spirit to the film or the man. Robards, though an excellent actor, gives almost a deadpan performance throughout. Sakharov, who won the Nobel peace prize, is a hero around the world for his bravery. But none of his essence is transmitted through Robard's characterization.

Although the screenplay was based upon research and recollections of the Sakharov children, no hint is given of why Sakharov decided to abandon his comfortable life for a hazardous one.

Jackson, on the other hand, does demonstrate the drive of a person willing to sacrifice everything. She makes Elena real. Lacking an overall passion, "Sakharov" becomes merely a well-done travesty of Soviet life with more excitement to be found in the news stories.

June rains bring splotches of color to valleys, mountains

Camas lilies now in full bloom

By ROBERT DOYLE
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — The recent June rains that plunged south central Idaho have had their positive aspect, as demonstrated by the color that blankets the hillsides and tributary valleys of the Wood River and in Camas County, where the camas lilies are in full bloom.

Lupine can be identified by their characteristic star-shaped leaves, with the flowers clustered around the stalk. In the Sierra Nevada, members of the penstemon family are called mountain pride, their blossoms shaped like antique telephone receivers.

In damper spots and low-lying areas, waterleaf, often called cat's breeches, a much more imaginative name, hide their white to blue, ball-like flowers under a canopy of bright green leaves.

"Big flowers appear to be growing out of the base of the plant, perhaps explaining the origin of the name, "breeches." Bend down and push aside the thick grasses and you might find the delicate, open faces of wood violets, whose blossoms are about the size of a nail on your little finger. They'll soon be joined by yellow-monkey flowers that give the appearance of small faces sticking out their tongues.

Right now the open meadows seem to have a monopoly on the color yellow, for though the dandelion is an enemy when found on your lawn, in a green meadow the prolific dandelion makes an eye-catching contrast of color. Then, on close inspection, you'll find the yellow blanket is not a dandelion exclusive, for groundsel and buttercups are also contributors. This monopoly will end in the next two weeks, for purple larkspur and the multi-colored shooting star also like open meadows.

On the south-facing hillsides, balsam root and wyethia, also called mule ears, give the slopes an early summer touch of gold, their sunflower-like faces usually facing the sun.

If you're a connoisseur of food, walk along the river bottoms where the cottonwoods are thickest and there's an abundance of dead and decaying vegetation. You may find the morel mushroom, a delicacy that has so far rejected man's attempts to grow it commercially. It looks like a miniature baseball bat pushing out of the ground, the head appearing porous, much like a sponge.

Molds also grow along drainage ditches in the Magic Valley, but anytime you go mushrooming, take along an expert for positive identification as many mushrooms are quite poisonous.

Morels seem to proliferate when sunshine follows several days of rain, so the coming week should provide good hunting. The cottonwood groves west of Bellevue along Broadford Road might be a good place to look.

As the summer progresses, the wildflower cycle repeats itself every 1,000 vertical feet, and you can find first bloomings in August at the treeline level in the upper reaches of the Sawtooths, White Clouds and Boulder Mountains.

Bring a wildflower book and credit your excursion a success if you can identify more than 15 species. To flowers already mentioned, add scarlet gilia, fireweed and gentian.

And if your flower hunting takes you to Camas County, you'll get a colorful view of the camas lily almost anywhere you look. But perhaps the best-looking spot is about 16 miles west of Fairfield on Highway 20.

Whittler creates miniature scenes

By KATE LOPEZ
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Nile Gorrige whittles his days away.

The Burley resident, whose craft was on display during the recent Burley craft days, says it takes him about two days to whittle a miniature. But to watch his adept hands, one would think it takes just a few minutes.

Gorrige says he started whittling in the 1950s, but "the figures were pretty crude. In 1961 I took a two week course in whittling at BYU. The class went from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. every day, and the instructor showed me how to whittle clothes onto a figure and the different paints to use.

"Now I use oil paint, thinned with Danish oil, to almost a wash for the scenes, and as you can see, I use mostly earth colors."

The Burley resident says a profile or side view of his cartoon scenes are first drawn on a piece of paper, then cut into crude shapes with a hand saw.

"Then he whittles the figure until he gets the shapes and expressions that he wants.

"This wood is called jelutong."

Waldo's captures an age when Bob Dylan's hair lacked any gray

By JOE NEAVE
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Entering Waldo's is like flashing back to the '60s — if only for a moment.

The basement setting, the small tables, the musician flailing away on an acoustic guitar, all bring to mind a time when Bob Dylan had no gray hairs and the Nixon era had barely begun.

Located under City-Drug at 117 Shoshone Street North in Twin Falls, the pay/coffeehouse has a small stage where on Tuesday nights patrons are invited to "do whatever they want," says Curtis Johnson, Waldo's owner.

"We've mainly had singers," Johnson says, "but we've also had some comedians and a magician. I'd really like to encourage people to come down and play."

A recent reader's theater production was put on at Waldo's, with Joan Vaux directing and members of the Underground Theater troupe reading. Johnson also has invited different painters in the area to hang their work in Waldo's, with the artwork changing every month.

Besides the entertainment provided on Tuesday's "open-mike night," Waldo's has regular musicians from the area performing Wednesday through Sunday: Mark Eckelkamp, Tony Mennen and Rick Kuhn are singers and guitar players, and Paul Wallace plays the dulcimer and pennywhistle.

"They're our regulars, but we're always looking for new players," says Johnson.

With all the activities going on, Waldo's seems as intent on providing a showcase for local musicians and artists as it is on selling beverages.

Johnson bought the business in March of this year and says he enjoys running it.

"It's a lot more fun than I thought it would be. All my friends come in, and it's kind of like having a party at your house every night. Back when it was the British Pub I was a regular customer, and when they decided to close it I was able to get it pretty easily."

Along with draft and imported beer, Waldo's serves eight espresso drinks and 14 varieties of coffee ranging from German Chocolate Mint to Ethiopian Mocha Harren. There are 10 different blends of tea available: (Rose Hip, Darjeeling, etc.), and appetizers to curb patrons' hunger pangs.

Johnson says, "My favorite is Mexican Pluma. A lot of people really enjoy the coffees and have tried them all. Some like them because when they come here they don't have to drink alcohol to get the entertainment. Of course we enjoy the people who drink too."

Besides Waldo's, Johnson says he knows of only two similar coffee houses in the area.

Hagerman Summerfest upcoming

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — Artists who want to participate in the Hagerman Summerfest, June 30 and July 1, should register right away.

Fred Pothier, president of the Hagerman Valley Area Historical Society, which sponsors the event, says she hopes a good variety of artists attend this eighth annual arts and crafts fair to help make it the biggest ever.

A registration fee for the two-day fair is $10 and should be sent to the society at Box 86, Hagerman, Idaho 83422. Artists and their families will be allowed to stay overnight in the park free of charge.

"We're urging artists to register in," Pothier says. "We'd like to have some more participation. We also want strolling minstrels," she adds.

On Saturday, June 30, booths or tables will be set up in the Hagerman City Park to display the artwork and crafts. Businesses and clubs also are welcome to participate, says Pothier.

"It's a fun day for Hagerman."

At dusk, the Camas-Cumby will strike up some dance music, followed later in the evening by captive folk singing.

On Sunday, July 1, breakfast will be served at the American Legion Hall, next to the park, from 6 to 9 a.m.

The fair will continue at the park all day with various live entertainment.

In conjunction with Summerfest, the HVHS will open its new museum to display paintings by the late Arnold Tealer of Hagerman.

"We have not finished (the museum) yet," explains Pothier, "but they can have a peek. We'll have our grand opening later."

Pothier also reports that an Olympic torchbearer will pass through Hagerman during the weekend of the festival.

Summer solstice heralds art season

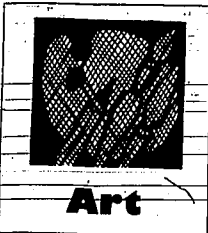

By ROBERT DOYLE
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — As in previous years, the summer solstice heralds the opening of Sun Valley area's summer art season — and this year's shows offer variety in abundance.

There are presently four shows in progress, representing as many different media.

In-progress at the Images Gallery, 4th and Leadville, Ketchum, is the showing of the works of ceramist Chip McKinney. His specialty is terra cotta platters which, says the artist, "are designed to be viewed and hung on the wall; the pattern and color of each platter speaks for itself."

McKinney, a former Princeton resident, was once a student at the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities. He returned to the area, after "a gas kiln I was using in San Jose, Calif., destroyed over 20 of my pieces. That isn't the case with the kiln here at Sun Valley, as my work at Images Gallery demonstrates," he adds.

Art

McKinney is now a permanent resident of the Wood River Valley, though his work can be found in galleries in Washington, D.C., New York and San Francisco, as well as Ketchum. The show will run through July 1. The gallery is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Kneeland Gallery and the Sun Valley Center Gallery share the same room at 4th and Leadville, Ketchum, and their summer shows have similar themes — the work of women artists. Kneeland Gallery, Director, Katherine Griffith, has entitled her show, "A Women's West." "There will be six women painters representing a wide range of styles with varying degrees of literal accuracy," says Griffith. "These artists are not widely-known, several are or were local students, have worked in Idaho at some time in their career, and a good number of the images deal with Idaho subjects."

Two artists are local, Kim Howard and Lynn McGeevor; Kathy Wren is from Boise; Amy Sidrane, California; Joella Mahoney, Arizona; and Merleé Keys, Seattle. The Kneeland Gallery is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and the show will run through July 8.

The Sun Valley Center Show is called, "Interiors: A Northwest Women's Invitational" and it can be viewed until July 16. The general theme is, "women have traditionally been responsible for interior spaces and internal feelings," says spokesperson Kristin Poole. The work of two Boise painters, Cheryl Shurtlett and Judith Lombardi, will be joined by the hand-colored photographs of Susan Makov, Ogden, Utah; Kathy Critchfield, Seattle; and Maureen O'Hara Ure, Salt Lake City. There also will be a display of Native American made baskets. The baskets will be provided by private dealer Richard Lamper of Santa Fe, N.M. Sun Valley Gallery is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Saturday.

Steve Snyder, a photographer who specializes in black and white prints, has relocated his studio to Ketchum's "art corner," 4th and Leadville, and will unveil a "whole new portfolio." Snyder's photographs have brought him nationwide attention and there are few Wood River Valley commercial establishments that do not own one of his photographs. His studio is open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday. His work changes in direct proportion to the amount of time he spends in his studio, in comparison to the amount of time he is out and about with his camera.

Willie started career as a scared 5-year-old

By DOLORES BARLLEY
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Little Willie Nelson cut an odd figure before members of the country music elite. He spangled in his Sunday best — a white sailor's suit with short white pants — and his finger was firmly stuck in his nose.

He was a scared 5-year-old performing in public. It was the first time the legendary singer, musician and actor ever entertained. Everyone brought a covered dish to the all-day picnic on the grounds of the tabernacle in Abbott, Texas. Some folks sang songs. Willie Nelson recited a poem. "I got so nervous about waiting to do it... My nose started bleeding and I put my finger up my nose and held it there," he recalled in a recent interview.

He laughed as he remembered the name of the poem: "What Are You Looking at Me For? I Ain't Got Nothing to Say."
"Maybe he didn't but during the 45 years since, Nelson has sold plenty in the colorful and often poignant music he's produced as one of country and western's most original gifts. Whether it's the upbeat twang of cowboy and country songs — or the lyrical smoothness of such standards as "Stardust," Nelson sings from his innards, and makes everything feel just OK.

"I always wanted to play music," he said softly. "I didn't really envision anything else but to make a living at it and just playing it."
A dozen gold and six platinum LPs have allowed Nelson and his family to live comfortably at homes in Evergreen, Colo., and Austin, Texas. He also has property in Utah and Hawaii.

His single with Julio Iglesias, "To All the Girls I've Loved Before," rose to No. 1 on the charts. "I was in London on vacation with my wife and I heard Julio on the radio. He was singing and I thought it was a great voice. I thought we had discovered him," Nelson laughed.

Circus coming to town Tuesday

By JULIE UNDERWOOD
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The circus is coming to town Tuesday — but not in its customary fashion. For the past 40 years the Big John Strong Circus has been making appearances throughout the country, but in this year's performance there is no ringmaster, sawdust or big top.

The traditional elements have been replaced by captivating magicians and magicians which, along with the usual clowns, aerial acrobats and balancing acts make up what is now billed as the Big John Strong Circus Variety Show. This year's presentation is billed as "Out of this World," and includes Magic Spaceman David King.

Also in the "ring" will be aerialist Sugar and Spice and puppeteer Rick Santoro and his puppets from movies and television roles.

The Holo Deros from Belgium will demonstrate a display of balance — and B.J. the Clown will demonstrate his juggling skills as he attempts to bring laughter to the audience.

The new variety show is also coming at the invitation of a new

This year the production will be sponsored by the newly formed Special Education Parent's Group. This group supports programs for the development of the handicapped such as the special education

The variety show will be appearing twice in Twin Falls Tuesday, at 6 p.m. and 8 p.m.

The production will be held in the Vera C. O'Leary Junior High Gymnasium with a portion of the proceeds going to the Special Education Parent's Group.

"I've always wanted to have my own place, and I decided to keep the name from the other owner's because people liked it," he says.

Actress dies of blood loss

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Sunny Johnson, best known as the figure-skating best friend of Jennifer Beals in "Flashdance," has died at 30 after a blood vessel burst in her brain.

Miss Johnson was found unconscious Monday night by her boyfriend, who rushed her to UCLA Medical Center where she was put on life support systems, agent Steve Donatville said.

On Wednesday, her family ordered the life support systems withdrawn after doctors determined her to be clinically dead, and she died at 12:15 p.m. that day.

In "Flashdance," she played the role of Jeanie, a Pittsburgh nightclub waitress who tries unsuccessfully to land a role in an "Ice Capades"-like production.

Violinist to give Twin Falls show

TWIN FALLS — Ann Bertus, former Wendell resident and now violinist with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, will present a violin concert at 8 p.m. June 28 at the Renaissance Academy of Arts in Twin Falls.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G.J. Bertus, Wendell, the violinist will be accompanied by David Bulmer, of Victoria, British Columbia, Canada. Bertus studied violin with Jean Phipps in Twin Falls; Edna Richey at North Carolina School of the Arts; Eva Szeckly, University of Missouri, and Stephen-Folks, University of Idaho.

She played with the Magic Valley Chamber Orchestra and the Magic Valley Symphony Orchestra for six years before graduating from Jerome High School. She was a soloist with the symphony in a youth concert in 1976, the youngest of four artists.

In Sun Valley, her performance of the Brahms "Sonata No. 1, Opus 77" in his master class drew favorable comment from Bugliero Ricci, internationally known violinist, and special consideration from the Esterhazy String Quartet so that she received a scholarship to study at the University of Missouri, Columbia.

before graduating from the University of Idaho.

She attended Shawnigan School of the Arts, studying violin with Jean Jacques Kantorow, French violinist.

Actress puzzled

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kate Capshaw admits she was puzzled when director Steven Spielberg called to her in "movie language" during the making of "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom."

"My problem is that I'm not a movie buff," she said, "so I had trouble understanding Steven. He talks in movie language, you see. He'd say, 'Remember that scene in 'It Happened One Night' — the one where Claudette Colbert did such-and-such? That's what I want here.'"

"And I'd say, 'Steven, I never saw that movie.' And he'd groan and reply, 'Kate, how can I possibly communicate with you?'"

Michener launches publicity on 'Space' series

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — James Michener was here to launch publicly the filming of a CBS miniseries based on his novel "Space," but says he keeps a respectful distance from film adaptations of his books.

One reason is simply professional courtesy. But Michener, 77, the author of numerous best-selling books, many of which have been made into movies, admits he has little talent for screenwriting.

"I'm not good at dialogue," he says. "I don't have that skill. But I do love movies and I take them seriously. I think if I were younger I would work in television."

He adds: "The decisions about 'Space' are made within the framework of the industry. I think the producers would be appalled if I tried to impose myself. I don't think the layman understands this. They think the writer is in there breathing down their necks."

Although nine movies and five television projects have been made from his books, he says he has never seen a script.

Michener's massive novel on the history of the American space program was adapted as a 13-hour miniseries by Oscar-winning screenwriter Stirling Silliphant ("In the Heat of the Night") and producer Dick Berg. It stars James Garner, Beau Bridges, Bruce Dern, Michael York, Susan Anspach, Blair Brown, Melinda Dillon, Harry Hamlin, and Barbara Sukowa.

"Space" covers a much wider area than Tom Wolfe's "The Right Stuff." It goes extensively into the lives of the central characters, who cover a much broader range than just the test pilots and astronauts, and it delves into the events of World War II that shaped Garner's character and brought the German rocket scientists here. The politics of space is given more prominence.

His book "Centennial" was made into a 24-hour miniseries in 1978, and such books as "Soyuzara," "The Bridges at Toko-Ri," and "Caravans" have been made into movies, as well as "Hawaii," which was the basis for two films. Michener also created the TV series "Adventures in Paradise," which ran on ABC from 1959-62.

By far his most famous output was his first book, "Tales of the South Pacific," which won the Pulitzer Prize and became the long-running Broadway musical (and movie)

"South Pacific."
"I was brought out to Hollywood once to see if I had the talent," Michener says. "I worked with a Hungarian writer of the old school and out of it came 'His Majesty O'Keefe,' which starred Burt Lancaster. We did 18-20 versions of the script and finally at the end we agreed my contribution was so minimal we wouldn't even mention it."

Michener, a former college professor, currently lives in Austin, Texas, where he is completing work on "Texas," a new book taking the state from the time of the landing of the Spaniards to the present. ABC has taken an option on it for a miniseries.

Film industry may change rating code

By LYNN ELBEK
Associated Press writer

WOOD — The movie industry is on the verge of approving a new rating code aimed at barring youngsters under age 13 from some PG-rated films, and director Steven Spielberg said Wednesday, "It's about bloody time."

"I'm very happy that everybody at the MPA (Motion Picture Association of America) and motion picture studio heads have come to their senses and established that much needed step between PG, and R," Spielberg said.

The new PG-13 rating would keep children under 13 from certain movies unless accompanied by an adult.

Formal approval must come from the MPA, a group of nine large movie companies, as well as the National Association of Theater Owners.

It would be the first major change in the 18-year-old code.

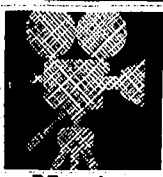

A. Alan Frieberg, a past president of the association, said the group's board of directors last fall authorized its president to negotiate for several changes, among them the proposed new rating.

Frank Yablans, vice chairman of MGM-United Artists, said the studio is "leaning heavily" toward approval. He said polling of the major studios has been going on for two weeks and he expects the new code to be in place by July.

"It's a proper and a long overdue response to the needs of the public," Yablans said.

Spielberg has pushed for approval of the new PG-13 rating, noting that his recently released "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Lost Doom" and "Gremlins," both PG-rated, were blasted by some critics as overly violent for children.

"I lobbied among studio heads... they're my friends and I made a lot of money for them," said Spielberg. He and George Lucas, producer of the "Star Wars" trilogy, have created the six highest grossing films ever. "Fear of losing profit" was the stumbling block in gaining approval of the new restrictive code, Spielberg said. But, he said, "the responsibility to the children of this country is worth any loss at the box office."

Movies

"I am absolutely delighted with these suggestions for change," said Richard Heffner, chairman of the Classification and Rating Administration ratings board, in a telephone interview from New York.

The ratings board is run by the MPA, and also is sponsored by the National Association of Theater Owners and the International Film Importers and Distributors of America.

"Parents generally don't treat preteens as they do their older brothers and sisters... and the ratings system shouldn't either," he said.

But Heffner noted that in his 10 years as chairman he had seen similar moves for changes to the code rejected. "I'm not going to drink a toast until the marriage takes place or the baby is born..." he said.

Several studio executives considering the rating change said they plan to explore it.

"We favor the rating which would police the attendance of children under 13 years of age," said Richard Gallop, chairman of Columbia Pictures Industries.

"We are in favor of a ratings change as long as long as it has teeth to it," said Alan Hirschfeld, chairman of the board of 20th Century Fox. "The new rating must be regulatory and enforceable rather than just precautionary."

Ronald Miller, president of Walt Disney Productions, also said he supports the new code designation. He said recent reaction to Spielberg's films may encourage approval, but that the code change has been under consideration for some time.

The president of Orion Pictures, Eric Pleskov, said he also will "probably go in favor of it," but said he had an aversion to "restrictions on people."

The movie industry started the ratings system in 1968 in an effort to block outside censorship.

Natural restoration is anadromous fish goal

TWIN FALLS — "The right size smolt from the right genetic stock, in good health and released at the right time," is what the Idaho Department of Fish and Game envisions in its 1985-90 anadromous fish management plan.

Herb Pollard, Boise, whose major responsibility in the department is the management and planning for restoring Idaho's spawning runs to pre-dam levels.

Pollard, who has spread this message across the state in a series of information meetings, brought the plan to Twin Falls Thursday night. A remarkably small group of interested individuals showed up for perhaps the major enunciation in the state's salmon and steelhead recent history.

Pollard noted that the steelhead program, which rebounded to nearly 30,000 returning spawners this year, is well ahead of the salmon restoration. But he noted each year biologists and technicians learn more things about salmon and, coupled with a projected doubling and tripling of smolt releases in the next six years, chinook are expected to equal that success.

The five-year plan attacks not only the problem of up and down river migration, but also tries to assess the impact on increased angling pressure and presence on central Idaho's fragile higher country and streams.

Key to the plan is giving priority in all instances to wild spawners — or those returning adults who were produced in Idaho and returned to the ocean without a stopover in man-made rearing ponds.

Pollard noted this emphasis was important for at least two reasons: (1) the genetic pool would be purer and (2) due to the remoteness of some of the 5,000 miles of Idaho's productive streams, only wild fish would be able to "fill the habitat" and keep it producing at maximum levels.

To accomplish that, wherever possible, angling and harvest pressure would be directed on hatchery-produced fish. The hatchery releases would be near major population centers or easily accessible areas where fishing harvest could be maintained at a high level without threat to the wild fish or remote runs. Additionally, the more pristine streams like Salmon River's Middle Fork would be managed strictly for wild fish and no hatchery plantings will be made.

Attaining the goals of the plan will be difficult because the Idaho-produced fish range through two other states, come into contact with Canadian and Alaskan fishing interests and prey to high seas commercial fishing, Pollard noted. He said this amounts to the fish traveling through 20 different jurisdictions and finding a balance of production and spawning return will require considerable co-ordination among myriad state, national and international agencies.

He said the Idaho spring chinook salmon was among the most desirable of the commercial because at the start of its upstream migration of up to 550 miles, it is the brightest, healthiest and largest of the fish. He noted a "tule" chinook (a coastal waters-spawner) last year brought 61-cents a pound on the commercial market while an Idaho spring chinook yielded $2.60 per pound.

Pollard said the plight of coastal water spawners, perhaps largely caused by El Niño, had given Oregon and Washington first-hand knowledge of the problem Idaho has faced for several years. He noted those state now hear Idaho's suggestions concerning producer preservation in a more sympathetic light.

Ending on a happy note, Pollard said the return of jack salmon (early-maturing males) in this years run more-than doubled last year's count over Ice Harbor dam. He said the 2,100 jacks would indicate a good increase in next year's spawning run from the all-time low of 7,900 this year.

Billings sweeps pair from Cowboys

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It was lucky these two games were non-conference contests.

The Twin Falls Cowboys committed five errors in the first game and eight errors in the nightcap. In dropping a twinbill to Billings Monday, Thursday night at Frontier.

The Scarletlets used their ace pitcher, Rod Michotte, in the first game as Billings breezed to a 10-2 victory. In the nightcap, Billings scored seven runs in the sixth inning aided by five errors by the Cowboys as the Montana squad won 9-4.

Montana scored in the first inning of the opener capitalizing on a pair of errors by the Cowboys. Second baseman Doug Sexton walked and stole second and later scored on a throwing error.

Billings boosted its lead to 2-0 in the second when Sexton smacked a single, scoring Michotte who walked off losing pitcher Dave Metzger.

Twin Falls cut the deficit in half in the bottom of the frame when Alan Valdez hit his first homer of the season.

Billings broke the game open in the third pushing across seven runs and sending 11 men to the plate. Shortstop Grant Grayson was hit by a pitch and the next two batters walked. Mark Barcel hit a single, scoring Grayson, and Dirk Cooper delivered a bases-clearing double. Cooper later scored on a single by Sexton and Warren Schaler smacked a two-run single to score Sexton and Rick Brown, who walked.

Billings added another run in the fifth inning when Brown singled and scored on a base hit by Brown.

The Cowboys scored in the final inning. Kirk Slater walked and reached second on a sacrifice. Slater scored on a single by Rob Ellis.

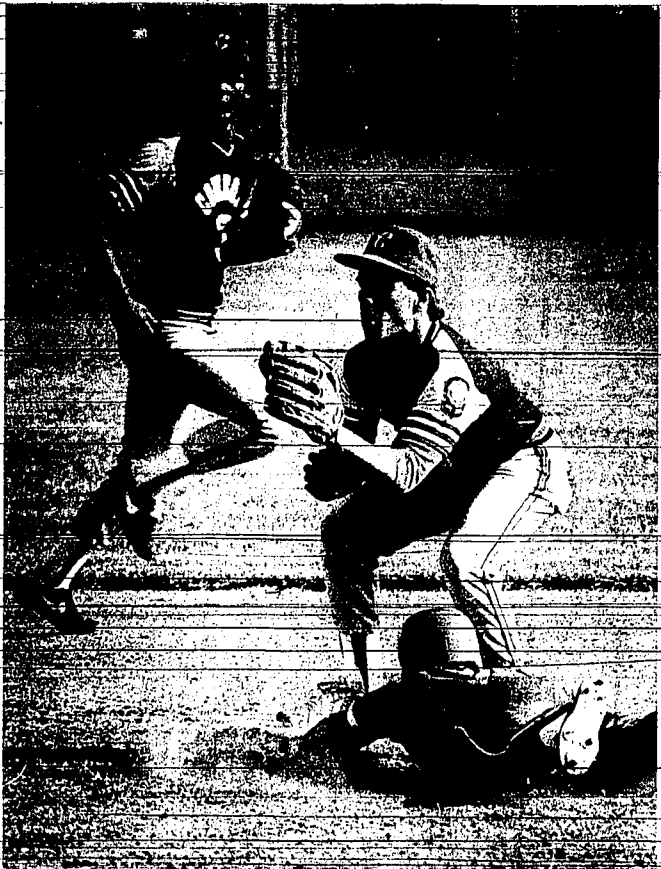

Twin Falls ended the game, stranding 11 men on base.

In the nightcap, it looked like the Cowboys would split as they led 4-0 after three innings.

Slater walked in the first inning and scored on Dave Slotten's triple. As the throw came in, the Billings shortstop overthrew third base and Slotten scored. Shawn Humberger reached first base on an error and scored on a single by Scott Matlock.

The Cowboys scored again in the third inning when Slater tripled and scored on a single by Slotten. After Slotten's hit, the Cowboys would be hitless in the next three innings.

The Scarletlets managed to score a pair of runs in the fourth inning;

Billings' Doug Sexton slides into second base safely as Dave Slotten awaits a tardy throw using one hit and a pair of Cowboy errors to pull within two runs of the lead.

Disaster struck for the Cowboys in the sixth as the first two batters were safe on errors. Coach Mike Tremayne went to ace right-hander Scott Matlock and the first three batters he faced reached base on Cowboy errors. Randy Restron and Todd Wilson rapped singles sending in four runs and Wilson later scored on an error as Billings went out in front 9-4.

Billings brought in Travis Tegarden to finish off the Cowboys, striking out two Twin Falls batters in the final inning to end the game.

Billings, now 18-3, will face Minico today at 5 p.m. while Twin Falls travels to Blackfoot for a doubleheader.

Moist sparkles in two events in high school rodeo

By ANNA WAGNER
Times-News writer

FILER — Ropers, riders and racers took advantage of near-perfect weather Thursday night to display the style that wins gold buckles during State High School Rodeo competition at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds.

In the break-away roping, Niki Moist of Star took the lead in the second go with a 1:58 run, trailed by Carey cowgirl Dodi Youren who clocked 4.61. Moist's average time of 8.51 moved her ahead of Pocatello's Holly Hallinan, whose 9.63 total led the event going into the performance.

Moist also moved to the top of the average in the goat tying, after posting an 11:53 run behind Billy Davis Ankrum. Pocatello, who made the fastest run of the rodeo by clocking a 10.983. Moist's average time of 20.165 was enough to bump former leader Jody Archibald of St. Anthony to second slot with 23.395.

District 3 all-around champ Kelsey Felton, Lewiston, cowpoyed up in the steer wrestling for 1:16, fastest run of the rodeo, but the time was one-tenth second short of edging Gooding hand Jeff Faulkner out of top slot in the average. Faulkner maintains the lead with 29.587 on two head. Ben Yore posted the next top time of the night with 11.51.

Kunn-caller Mike Berheim piloted his loop and gathered a call in 13:36 to lead the second round of roping, followed by Darve Talbot Preston, who tied his vealer in 23.54. No threats were made to average leader Felton, whose combined time of 27.458 is eight seconds ahead of Berheim, the next man in line.

Competition intensified in the barrel racing with less than five-tenths seconds separating the top four racers. Rupert cowgirl Bonnie Simper used tight turns to shave precious time from her pattern and clocked 17.86, followed closely by Stacey Hill of Castleford who sprinted the cans in 17.9. Simper's 36.63 average, however, was just shy of shading event leader Moist who posted 36.60 two.

Thursday's performance saw the completion of the first go and the start of the second round in the rough stock events. Twin Falls all-around cowboy Alan Stutzman went the distance with Windwalker for 66 points in the bareback riding to finish second in the initial go-round behind Greg Locke of Hagerman who won the round with a 67, scored Wednesday. In the second round, Mike Johnson, Richfield, marked 66 points on Bronco Bill to take the lead in the round, followed by Bruce Pape, Boise, who earned 61 points. Darrick Cope of Caldwell currently leads the average with 117 points.

Pocatello cowboy Tracy Millward rode to the buzzer and scored 64 to the top slot in the first round with Oakley hand Steve Manning who rode Wednesday. In second round action, Ed Morgan, also of Pocatello, marked 62 points on his bronc to take the lead in the go. The average is led by Dubois cowboy Jerry Stewart with a 106 total.

Three events were still underway at press time, however the results from Wednesday's performance were available.

Cindy Douglas of Arco breezed through the poles in 21.17 for fastest run in the second round, with Jerôme's Lori Aslett right on her heels with a 21.51. Douglas holds the lead in the average with a 45.03 combined time.

Twin Falls cowboy Gomer Beglan wowed the crowd with a 74-point ride on the Stephens Brothers Bull Stock in the opening performance by the next highest score posted by Johnson who rode his bronc for 57 points. Beglan and Johnson were the only riders out of 26 contestants to cover their bulls.

In the team roping Hagerman cowboy Matt Jones partnered with Sean-Black-of-Hammert for 7:13.96 run to lead the second round, followed by the team of Paul Lanier, Darlington, and Karl Smith, Mackay, who clocked a 37.144. Jones and Black were the only team to make two qualified runs, giving them the lead in the average with 28.97.

Approximately 200 athletes are gathered in Filer for the state rodeo finals, sponsored annually by the Snake River Lions of Twin Falls. Contestants are vying for trophy saddles, buckles and scholarships, as well as the right to represent Idaho at the national finals next month in Rapid City, S.D.

Both go-rounds of cow cutting are scheduled today, beginning at 8 a.m. in the arena. Rodeo action will resume at 8 p.m. with the completion of the second go. The top ten contestants in each event following today's performance will advance to the final round on Saturday.

Danny White exonerated

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White, who admitted slapping 17-year-old high school football player but said it was in self-defense, was acquitted Thursday night on a misdemeanor assault charge.

A jury of four men and two women deliberated about an hour before returning the not guilty verdict in a trial, a four-day celebrity-studded trial.

Hobart's stock with the Gold went up late last month when the National Football League held its special supplemental draft of players who had signed with the USFL and the Canadian Football League. Hobart was the No. 1 pick of the New York Jets.

"I fell good about it not because I think I'm playing for the Jets anytime soon but because it's nice to be wanted," he says. "Maybe sometime in the future I can talk to the Jets, but I'm committed for four years in this league. This is where I have to prove myself."

The Gold's offensive structure is simpler than Jacksonville's, Hobart says. The Bulls' offense derives from the theories of San Francisco 49ers' Coach Bill Walsh, while Morton's approach, naturally enough, comes straight out of the Dallas Cowboys' playbook and is more tailback-oriented. But Hobart admits that his adjustment at Denver (where he's completed 25 of 37 passes for 404 yards, three interceptions and a touchdown) was made easier by his DENVER — Ken Hobart's playing quarterback again, which makes him happy. And he's playing quarterback regularly, which makes him even happier.

"It's been a learning experience. I tell you that," says the rookie signal-caller with the Denver Gold of the United States Football League. "But here I'm getting the opportunity to play. Hopefully, I've got a future with this team."

The Gold obtained Hobart from the Jacksonville Bulls on May 3 after its first-string quarterback, Craig Penrose, sustained his second knee injury of the season. Hobart impressed Denver Coach Craig Morton enough in practice to earn a start in his third week with the team, and his reputation was secured with the Gold mentor after Hobart's June 8 performance in a 14-19 loss to the Philadelphia Stars. In that game, Hobart ran and passed Denver to a 19-18 lead with just 1 minute, 57 seconds remaining, scrambling 8 yards on a fourth-and-five play to keep the touchdown drive alive.

"Ken Hobart was our only bright spot," winner MVP thereafter. "He's a winner."

Hobart was less impressive last week in a 27-2 loss to the New Jersey Generals, completing 8 of 18 passes for 103 yards and one interception, but he still has Morton's confidence.

"I had a screen pass intercepted in that game, and I was really down about it," Hobart says. "I'd never had a screen pass intercepted before, even in college. I told Coach Morton about it and he said, 'forget it. It happens. It happened to me.'"

Hobart and the Gold will host the Oakland Invaders Friday night in their last game of the regular season. If they win and the Los Angeles Express defeats the Arizona Wranglers on Saturday, Denver will be in the USFL playoffs. If not, Hobart will fly back to Jacksonville, empty his new condominium into a U-Haul truck and leave behind his first USFL season.

"Considering the fact that I got to training camp two weeks late, stood around for another two weeks and got traded, which is something I didn't expect to happen, it turned out all right. At least I'm closer to home, and next year a lot of my friends will be down to watch me play. That means a lot to me."

Hobart, the second-round draft choice of the expansion Bulls last January, came to Jacksonville with a six-figure, four-year contract and high expectations. But when the season began, he was a third-stringer behind former NFL quarterback Malt Robinson and rookie Robbie Mahouf. He had a couple of encouraging performances in mop-up roles — including a 7-15-1 performance for 84 yards in a spot start against the Los Angeles Express on March 26. Then when Robinson and Mahouf were both injured, Hobart became a regular until an April 20 game against the Memphis Showboats.

It was a disaster for the University of Idaho alum. He completed just 2 passes in 10 tries for 26 yards and was intercepted three times. He never played again for Jacksonville. Ten days later, the Bulls signed the first-round draft choice, Duke quarterback Ben Bennett, and four days after that Hobart was gone.

"The coaches wanted to convert me to a defensive back or a wide receiver and they gave me a week to think about it," Hobart says. "I was just about ready to tell them that I'd take my chances with a quarterback when they told me I had been traded."

The transition to the Gold was easy, Hobart says, primarily because he always knows where he stands with Morton.

"There was a real communication problem at Jacksonville," he says. "The coaches never told you what was going on. In fact I had just closed a condominium the day before they told me I'd been traded."

By contrast, says Hobart, Morton — who serves as his own quarterback coach — is always offering free advice, ranging from technical pointers to critical appraisal.

"It was a 20-minute talk with him yesterday," Hobart says. "I know that the (quarterback) position is mine right now, but that I'm going to have to prove I can keep it."

Hobart's stock with the Gold went up late last month when the National Football League held its special supplemental draft of players who had signed with the USFL and the Canadian Football League. Hobart was the No. 1 pick of the New York Jets.

"I fell good about it not because I think I'm playing for the Jets anytime soon but because it's nice to be wanted," he says. "Maybe sometime in the future I can talk to the Jets, but I'm committed for four years in this league. This is where I have to prove myself."

The Gold's offensive structure is simpler than Jacksonville's, Hobart says. The Bulls' offense derives from the theories of San Francisco 49ers' Coach Bill Walsh, while Morton's approach, naturally enough, comes straight out of the Dallas Cowboys' playbook and is more tailback-oriented. But Hobart admits that his adjustment at Denver (where he's completed 25 of 37 passes for 404 yards, three interceptions and a touchdown) was made easier by his

Lewis qualifies in 4 Olympic events; Tully sets vault mark

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carl Lewis, the gifted sprinter-jumper, achieved his goal of making the U.S. Olympic team in four events Thursday night and veteran Mike Tully smashed the American record in the pole vault during the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials.

While Lewis was capping a magnificent five-day performance by powering his way to victory in the 400-meter dash, Tully soared over the pole vault at 15 feet and three-quarters of an inch.

by Sergey Bubka of the Soviet Union. In a clean chop, he twice attempted, hitting the bar on the way down on his first try and brushing it again on his third vault.

Meanwhile, Judi Brown shattered her American record in the women's 400-meter intermediate hurdles, with a clocking of 54.93 and Antonio McKay won the men's 400-meter dash in 44.71, the fastest time in the world this year.

McKay forged in front with about 10 meters remaining in the 400, pushing Alonzo Babers and won comfortably. Babers grabbed second place in 44.88, and Sumner Nix, the bronze medalist in the 1983 World Championships behind Jamaica's Bert Cameron and American Michael Franks, was third in 45.15.

Cameron has said he will win the gold medal again in the Olympics, but McKay disputed it. "Cameron made a quote that the gold is his... and had his name on it," McKay said. "It don't have his name on it. It don't have my name on it. But I'm going to make sure it don't have his name on it."

Valerie Brisco-Pedro, winner of her second-round heat in a Coliseum record 22.47, led the advance into Friday's semifinals. The other second-round heat winners were Randy Givens (22.67) and American 400-meter record holder Chandra Cheeseborough (22.94).

In the first round of the men's 5,000, Don Clary posted the fastest time of the three heats, 13:37.02. One of the big stories of the 5,000 could be the performance of Craig Virgin.

Mets edge Phils, grab lead

Pinch-hitter Rusty Staub's breaking single highlighted a three-run seventh inning that propelled the New York Mets to a 10-7 victory Thursday over Philadelphia and into first place in the National League East, one-half game ahead of the pitchers, the Mets amassed their season high in both runs and hits. "I went up to the plate with a fresh attitude and knew he (Campbell) was trying to keep me on the ground," Staub said. "I wasn't up there for a walk, so I swung at the first pitch, got the fat part of the bat on the ball, it found a hole and we won."

In other National League action, Marvell Wynne's two-run double in the sixth inning snapped a 4-1 tie and carried the Pittsburgh Pirates to an 8-6 victory over the slumping Chicago Cubs.

Bob Brenly's RBI double capped a four-run fifth inning as the San Francisco Giants defeated the Atlanta Braves 5-3.

Steve Yeager's pinch-hit grand slam home run in the seventh inning powered Los Angeles to a 9-7 come-from-behind victory over the Cincinnati Reds and ended the Dodgers' losing streak at seven games.

Denny Walling's pinch-hit triple triggered a six-run Houston rally in the fifth inning that carried the Astros to an 11-5 victory over the San Diego Padres.

In the American League, Neal Heaton of the Cleveland Indians pitched a three-hitter and rode home runs by Brett Butler, Jerry Willard and Andre Thornton to a 7-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Don Sutton held Detroit to one hit over the first six innings as the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Tigers 4-3.

Don Mattingly ignited New York's three-run first inning with a two-out single and doubled home the lead run in the fourth as the Yankees defeated the Baltimore Orioles 5-3.

Willie Upshaw drove in two runs, including the tie-breaker in the ninth inning, and the Toronto Blue Jays defeated Boston 5-2, extending the Red Sox' longest losing streak since 1977 to eight games.

Burley duo shares golf lead

TWIN FALLS — Former champion Serge Sorenson and Doris Ellingham put a distinct Burley hue to the Times-News Magic Valley Women's Golf Tournament's opening round Thursday.

They both toured the Blue Lakes Country Club course in six-over par 32 to hold at least a four-stroke lead over the rest of the field.

The tournament will conclude with a final 18 holes today — the field beginning from a 9 a.m. shotgun start. An awards luncheon will follow competition.

"It could really have been great except for a double-par on No. 14," said Sorenson. "For a while I was really upset because before they changed the course around I was under the impression that it was a three-par. But it's a four-par so the double-par doesn't sound as bad as an eight on a three-par," she added with a laugh.

Except for that one hole, Sorenson said she was pretty pleased with her game. "I got the eight by hitting one into the rocks, but what the heck, you have to hit at least one into the rocks down here every time you play," she continued.

On a more serious note, Sorenson said "I felt hit my long irons well, better than I have in a while. And the other thing is the greens down here. You can throw the ball into them and they'll bite."

Ellingham said her 82 was a pleasant surprise. "We've just moved," she said "and while it's just been across town, it's taken a lot of my time and cut into my golf. I've only played one 18 at Burley and, what, three interludes and three other nine-holes. So I wasn't expecting anything like this."

"I pulled very well and saved myself a lot of strokes that way. And when I got in trouble I was able to keep it to no more than a double (bogey). I did make some long putts to hold those doubles, though," she smiled.

Oletha Roberts and Jackie Gaiser, Twin Falls, kept themselves in contention by posting 86 while Delta Wilson of Burley had an 88. Another Burleyite, Terri Simpson, carried an 89 for sixth.

Other flight leaders include:

Baseball owners, players agree on new drug program

Baseball

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Major League baseball owners backed away from random, mandatory tests of all players but agreed Thursday to a drug abuse program which Commissioner Bowie Kuhn hailed as a "dramatic breakthrough in labor relations and sports."

The Players Association already has given near-unanimous approval to the plan, which is not without teeth. It calls for substantial financial penalties for missing more than 30 days because of drug-related problems. And players who refuse testing after treatment for drug abuse will be subject to suspension or other discipline at the discretion of the commissioner.

"As part of the implementation of what happened here today, I will be issuing a new and strengthened set of disciplinary rules with regard to players who fall in any way outside of the program," said Kuhn, who is to be replaced as commissioner on Oct. 1 by Peter Ueberroth, head of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee. "I really think that... given the history of often-times little cooperation between the Players Association and the Major League Clubs, this is a dramatic breakthrough in labor relations and sports."

Marijuana, amphetamines and alcohol are not included in the "salary abatement" part of the program, but abuses of those drugs will also be subject to action at the discretion of the commissioner, said Lee MacPhail, president of the Player Relations Committee.

An owner who asked not to be identified told The Associated Press the agreement was a defeat for those who had insisted on random and mandatory testing, which was vehemently opposed by the union.

Essentially, the agreement calls for a "salary abatement" procedure as a way of penalizing players who continue to abuse drugs — not including marijuana, alcohol and amphetamines. A player who steps forward and asks for help with a drug problem will receive full pay the first 90 days of treatment and half pay the next 30 days.

"Beyond 60 days, if the club keeps the player on the major league roster, he will get minimum salary," said MacPhail.

A club which suspects a player of drug involvement can ask him to undergo examination. If he refuses, the evidence will be presented to a three-member Joint Review Council, which is to be picked by a committee of owners and players. If the committee recommends that the player undergo testing or treatment and the player refuses, he will be subject to disciplinary action by the commissioner. A player will also be subject to penalty if he refuses to be tested after undergoing treatment.

"We feel our program is a combination of deterrence and discipline," said MacPhail. "The players will know that they will fall outside the program if they are convicted or plead guilty to any drug charge; if in any way they distribute drugs; if they use drugs on the field or within the confines of the stadium; or if they fail to cooperate with this program and haven't lived up to the recommendations of the Joint Review Council, or if after 60 days of rehabilitation they are not over their problem. If you fall outside of the program, you will come under the discipline of the commissioner."

MacPhail said several owners disagreed with the decision not to include marijuana, alcohol and amphetamines in the "salary abatement" phase of the program.

"At the present time, politically, we were not able to cover all things. We're trying to take this one step at a time. We know this is an area we might want to expand at a later date. However, the abuse of alcohol and marijuana will still be subject to disciplinary action at the discretion of the commissioner," MacPhail said.

Players who are disciplined by the commissioner after running afoul of the Joint Review Council can still file a grievance through the union.

"But you have to think this kind of grievance is not going to be very successful from the player's point-of-view because he has rejected the recommendation of the Joint Review Council, which is appointed by both the owners and the players," said Kuhn.

Kuhn also mentioned the possibility of establishing an executive committee of the Player Relations Committee.

Judges deny Olympic suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A divided federal appeals court refused on Thursday to require races for women at 5,000 and 10,000 meters in this summer's Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

The judge, majority on the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals said women who sued to include the events, which have been held for men since 1912, have not proved that Olympic rules discriminate against them. Even if there were discrimination, the judges added, the law does not require "separate but equal" treatment of women.

Dissenting Judge Harry Pregerson of Los Angeles said the International Olympic Committee had violated California civil rights laws and that as a result, "the Olympic flame ... will burn less brightly."

The decision could cost the United States two potential gold medals. Mary Decker of Eugene, Ore., holds the 5,000-meter world record and has the third-fastest time in the world behind two Soviet runners in the 10,000 meters.

The ruling upheld an earlier decision by U.S. District Judge David Kenyon in Los Angeles, rejecting the suit by two runners' organizations and 82 female distance runners from 27 countries.

The women attacked the IOC's enforcement of rules governing admission of new events to the Olympics.

One rule requires an event to be included in international competition for four years before it can be in the Olympics. The International Amateur Athletic Federation, which recommends new events to the IOC, recognized world records for women in the two events in 1980 but did not include them in world championship competition; the IOC then rejected them as Olympic events.

The majority opinion by Judge J. Clifford Wallace of San Diego rejected the women's constitutional claim, based on equal protection of the laws; for failure to prove deliberate discrimination against women.

Wallace said the Olympic rule in question was neutral on its face, since it applies equally to events for men and women. He noted that since the rule was first adopted in 1949, the Olympics have added 43 events for men and 48 for women. In this year's Games, the 3,000 meters and marathon will be run for women for the first time.

The judge said the women had not offered enough proof to demonstrate, without a trial, that the rule had been passed for a discriminatory purpose.

He also rejected their claim under the California Civil Rights Act, which bans arbitrary discrimination by businesses.

Wallace said the law would apply to the Olympics, though he added that court "should be wary of applying a state statute to alter the content of the Olympic Games."

But he said any discrimination involved was not "arbitrary," since it applied to all proposed new events. And even if there was discrimination, Wallace said, the law does not "compel the creation of separate but equal events for women."

A more logical approach under the state law, he said, would be to seek inclusion of women in the 5,000- and 10,000-meter races for men. He did not say whether such a suit would succeed, however.

In a concurring opinion, Judge Arthur Alarcon of Los Angeles said that use of the California civil rights law to require a separate event for women would be an "apartheid" interpretation.

Fox Trot set Saturday

TWIN FALLS — There aren't any trophies awarded the winners, but they will be running in tribute to the courage shown by a young Twin Falls police officer who died of cancer in 1981.

The third annual Fox Trot will be run Saturday morning from the College of Southern Idaho and is open to all interested runners.

T-shirts bearing the event's title and an imprinted city police badge with the 9-12 number that was assigned to Howard Fox and retired following his death July 27, 1981, Fox had served on the police department staff about two years.

Each runner entering the event receives a t-shirt for the $7 entry fee, and others will be on sale at the starting line, said officer Kent McDowell. Proceeds from the run will be placed in the Twin Falls Police Officers benefit fund to help officers and their families in the event of other illness, injury or death.

McDowell, one of the members of the department who volunteer each year to stage the run, said anyone interested in entering is welcome.

Runners may choose between a 2.5 mile or a 5 mile course. The shorter race begins at 9 a.m. and the longer run at 9:15 a.m. from the flag poles at the main entrance of the college. The routes for the run will be in the immediate college area and will be marked Saturday.

McDowell said entry blanks may be picked up at the starting point, just prior to the events or are available at Donnelly Sports on Main Avenue.

McDowell said the law would apply to the Olympics, though he added that court "should be wary of applying a state statute to alter the content of the Olympic Games."

But he said any discrimination involved was not "arbitrary," since it applied to all proposed new events. And even if there was discrimination, Wallace said, the law does not "compel the creation of separate but

Interest rates brake big rally

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK—Stock prices churned through a mixed session Thursday in the heaviest trading in more than four months as the market's recent rally ran into resistance.

Volume was swollen by the biggest block-trade in New York—Stock Exchange history, a 10 million-share transaction.

The S&P 500 average of 90 industrials, more than 44 points from Monday through Wednesday, dropped back 4.42 to 1,127.21.

Turnover on the Big Board reached 123.38 million shares, up from 99.09 million Wednesday, and the largest total since 128.19 million changed hands on Feb. 9.

An upsurge in stock prices late Wednesday was attributed partly to rumors that International Business Machines might be preparing to make an offer to buy back a chunk of its stock. No such announcement was forthcoming, however.

IBM shares, up 5% Wednesday, fell 2 1/4 to 105 1/4 Thursday's activity.

Nevertheless, analysts said many traders were impressed by the strong showing of the market so far this week. In the three previous sessions, the Dow Jones industrial average recouped all of a large loss posted last week.

High interest rates remained as an apparently formidable obstacle for stocks. Rates climbed Thursday in the bond and short-term money markets.

"The interest rate trend remains upward," economist Albert Wajolower at First Boston Corp. said in a commentary issued late in the day.

Record-high interest rates may not immediately ahead, Wajolower said.

but "the deregulated financial markets contain the seeds of enormous rate increases."

Superior Oil "when distributed" led the active list, closing at 42 1/4 after a 10 million-share block crossed the ticker tape at 42 1/4. In both dollar value and number of shares, it was the largest transaction on record at the NYSE.

Mobil Corp., which recently made a bid for some of Superior's stock, plans to return to investors early next month the excess shares tendered under the offer. In the meantime, trading in the shares is taking place on a "when distributed" basis.

Petroleum jumped 5 1/8 to 18 1/4 as the day's biggest percentage gain, and Texas Eastern headed the list of percentage losers with a 3% drop to 28 1/4. Texas Eastern said it reached an agreement to acquire Petrolina for $20 a share.

Halliburton dropped 14 to 34 1/4. The company said parties that are suing it in connection with a nuclear power project have calculated damage claims at more than $3.5 billion.

Gainers slightly outnumbered losers in the daily tally on the Big Board, but the exchange's composite index lost 10.0789 net.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 145.37 million shares.

Standard & Poor's Index of 400 industrials fell .35 to 175.82, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down .33 at 154.51.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 1.40 to 239.75. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 201.56, up .76.

Bethlehem Steel, union want import limits

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bethlehem Steel Corp. and the United Steel Workers union asked the federal government Thursday to recommend a temporary limit on most steel imports to give domestic steelmakers time to regroup.

The company and the union, testifying before the U.S. International Trade Commission, requested quotas that would limit imports to an average 14.3 percent of American consumption over a five-year period.

"We in the union are realists. We recognize that employment levels in 1984 will never return to those of 1954. But we want a chance to compete again. Quotas will give us that chance," union President Lynn Williams told the panel.

The commission earlier this month determined that 70 percent of last year's steel imports caused serious injury to the domestic industry. It will recommend protective measures next month to President Reagan, who must accept, reject or modify the proposal by Sept. 24.

Felix Rohatyn, an investment banker and chairman of New York's

Municipal Assistance Corp., said he opposes protectionism but believes domestic steel producers deserve some respite from imports.

But he stressed that such relief should be temporary and conditioned on investment commitments, labor concessions and productivity improvements.

"If our steel industry cannot reform itself within the proposed five-year period, we probably should give it up," Rohatyn said.

Williams, Bethlehem Chairman Donald Trautlein and others argued that quotas, not tariffs, are the best way to combat steel imports that are government subsidized or illegally, discounted.

Rexburg lumber mill going

REXBURG (AP)—The Louisiana-Pacific Lumber Mill here has resumed operation with 49 workers, company officials said.

The mill went back on line this week after shutting down last October, said James Baldwin, industrial relations director of the company's Tacoma, Wash., office.

Resuming operation was due to commitments on log purchases rather than an upswing in the market.

"We don't attribute the start up to the market conditions. At this time, they are extremely poor. In fact, we are extremely poor," he said.

Baldwin said 42 of 55 workers laid last year were rehired, along with seven new employees. The company is operating in two shifts, he said.
