Food cost dip holds inflation flat

By SALLY JACOBSEN
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The sharpest decline in food costs in almost a year held the May increase in consumer prices to a slim 0.2 percent, the government said Friday.

The Labor Department's report was the second this week throwing cold water on fears that the economy's strong growth was reigniting the inflation fires of just a few years ago.

"There's been more hype about inflation than there has been inflation," said industrial economist Jerry Jasinoski.

At the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes asserted, "inflation remains under control at the shopping counter . . . We're on the right course of sustainable growth and low inflation."

So far this year, the Consumer Price Index has risen at an annual rate of 4.6 percent, a bit under most analysts' expectations of a 5 percent gain for all of the year.

Prices rose 3.5 percent last year, the smallest gain since the price-controlled years of 1971-72. At the start of this decade, they soared 12.4 percent.

In the May inflation report, the Labor Department said cheaper prices for beef, poultry, vegetables and eggs in May contributed to the 0.2 percent drop in food costs, matching the decline in June 1983. Food prices were steady in April and fell 0.1 percent in March.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department reported that orders to factories for machinery and other "big ticket" durable goods revived last month, soaring 3.3 percent after tumbling 6.5 percent in April.

Leading to May's increase was a sharp, 10.6 percent rise in the closely watched category of non-military capital goods, which includes the machinery and other products for companies to expand and modernize plants.

Edward Yardeni, chief economist for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York, said the twin reports add further to a "trend of continuing to confound the average forecast that the economy will slow and inflation will accelerate. I suspect this trend will continue for a while longer."

A 0.2 percent increase in gasoline prices also restrained consumer costs last month, the Labor Department report said. Normally gasoline prices climb at the start of the summer driving season, but ample supplies are easing price pressures this year, said Donald Rateczek, economic forecaster at Georgia State University.

Overall, May's increase in retail prices was less than half the seasonally adjusted 0.5 percent advance of April and matched the 0.2 percent gain of March.

For the past 12 months, those prices have climbed 4.2 percent.

In all, the Consumer-Price-Index stood at 309.7 in May, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $30.97 last month.

A companion index, the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers, rose 0.3 percent last month. That index is widely used in calculating cost-of-living increases in collective bargaining contracts and government benefit programs.

Meantime, the Labor Department said the weekly earnings of workers decreased 1.3 percent last month, after discounting for inflation.

That report said the net decline in inflation-adjusted, or "real," average weekly earnings resulted from a 0.4 percent decline in average hourly earnings and a 0.6 percent drop in the average number of hours worked.

When these declines were weighed against the 0.3 percent increase in the Consumer Price Index for workers, the "real average weekly earnings" fell 1.3 percent.

Prompting fresh worries about higher inflation was Wednesday's report that, according to preliminary Commerce Department

E. Idaho fighting flooding

MUD LAKE (AP) — High water continues to plague eastern Idaho, with the Lemhi River out of its banks between Salmon and Lendore and more breaks appearing in the Mud Lake dike.

Hundreds of volunteers, backed by crews from the National Guard and Corps of Engineers, poured more sand, dirt and gravel onto the weakening dike restraining Mud Lake Friday after scrambling to plug three breaches in the past two days.

Some 8,000 acres of farmland was already under water in Jefferson County, but all but one of 20 families living around the swollen lake remained in their homes. Gov. John Evans has already issued a disaster declaration for the area.

While workers took less than two hours to stop the three-foot wall of water that poured through the two most recent breaks Thursday night, a 30- to 40-foot gap was still being sandbagged 18 hours later in preparation for more permanent repairs later.

Although the lake, at a record level for weeks, has been falling slowly in the past few days, officials are doing everything they can to reinforce the 13-mile dike system that has become saturated and cracked with months of pressure from severe rains and heavy mountain snowmelt.

"It's got everybody pretty tense and pretty tired," Lois Poole of the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department said of the battle that has waged both day and night for the past week.

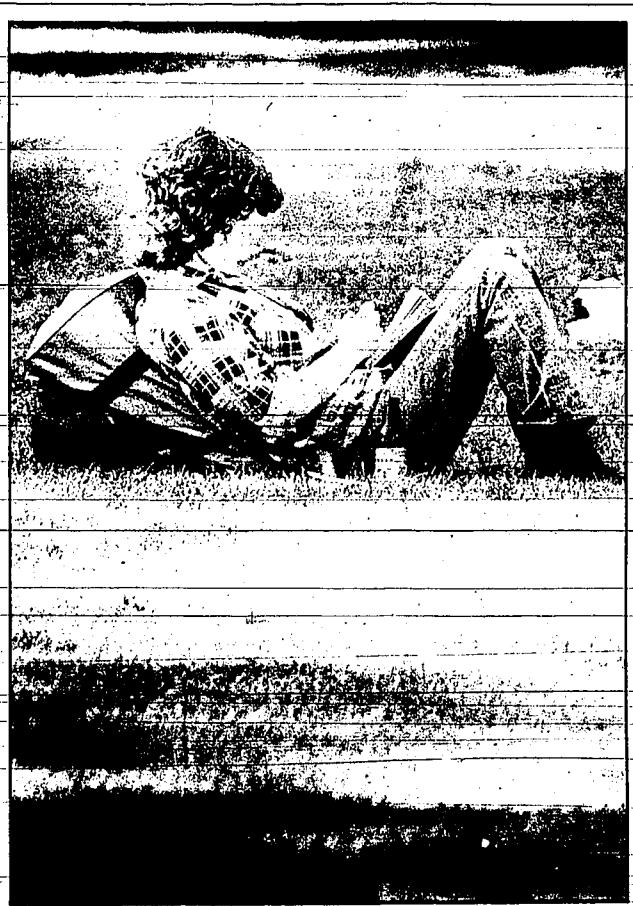

"We've got our fingers crossed," she said, but added, "We're sitting on a powder keg."

The recent breaks, occurring on opposite ends of the lake, have spilt the reinforcement effort, and guard and corps crews had to truck materials to both locations as volunteers aided by light military equipment shored up the levee system.

Absent another break in the dike, authorities said the guard planned to pull out of the region this weekend with the corps following at the beginning of the week, and indication that the situation may be stabilizing.

The Lemhi River, swollen by three weeks of rain, overflowed its banks in several places along the 50-mile sec-

Court upholds death penalty for Aragon

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court has upheld the death sentence of Mark Aragon, who was convicted of fatally beating an 8-month-old Ketchum baby.

In an opinion handed down Friday, the state's high court said that no reversible errors were found in district court procedure.

Aragon's attorneys alleged numerous errors were made in the lower court proceeding, including insufficient evidence to prove deliberation and premeditation.

The case before the Supreme Court was argued by Attorney General Jim Jones, marking the first time in years the state's chief lawyer personally presented a case before the high court.

But in the majority opinion written by Justice Robert E. Bakes, the court said Aragon's demeanor after the injuries were inflicted could be inferred that the defendant planned to harm Monique Nichol Longoria, thus establishing premeditation.

"He was calm, refused to aid the victim or seek help in any way, and instead began planning how he could cover up his involvement in the incident," the court said.

Justices Charles Donaldson and Allan Shepard concurred, while Justices Stephen Blalock and Robert Hunter said the death penalty was unconstitutional because the sentence was made by a judge rather than a jury.

The infant was killed in April 1982 in the small Ketchum apartment Aragon shared with the baby's mother, Teresa Watson.

Aragon was accused of picking the baby up by the heels and slamming the infant's head against a bathtub two or three times.

Testimony indicated the blows to the baby's head were of a force equal to dropping the infant off a three- or four-story building two or three times, the court said.

MARK EMILIO ARAGON Sentenced at Hatley

Aragon's attorneys had asked for a court instruction on the duty of Watson to protect her child. If that instruction had been handed down, court justices said, then Watson could have been named as an accomplice and her testimony would have required corroboration.

The defense attorneys argued that no one backed up Watson's story, that Aragon had abused the child before the killing, but court justices disagreed. A neighbor testified that Aragon had tried to throw the baby from a moving pickup truck prior to the infant's death.

District Judge Douglas Kramer who handed down the death sentence, said Aragon has a criminal history dating back to 1969, including charges of felony burglary, assault, and child molesting.

"Aragon becomes the thirteenth person on Idaho's death row. Eleven men and one woman are awaiting appeals or death, though no executions are currently scheduled.

Tax writers battle to cut into deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional tax writers struggled Friday to finish work on nearly $50 billion in tax changes affecting federal levies on things ranging from life insurance companies to a pack of cigarettes.

The activity was part of a rush in Congress to complete work by the end of next week on a broad compromise package of tax increases and spending reductions aimed at making a "down payment" on budget deficits, which are projected at about $600 billion over the next three years.

"This conference is going to continue this evening," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, declared as some conferees began bickering over tax provisions still in dispute between bills passed by the House and Senate.

Entering their 11th day of deliberation Friday, the negotiators had agreed on provisions that would raise more than $45 billion in taxes through 1987. The final goal is to add $50 billion. Issues still to be decided included taxation of cigarettes, liquor and interest from certain bonds that currently are tax exempt.

The full House and Senate their must vote on whether to accept the conferees' agreement.

Activity had been stalled until Thursday night, when the negotiators approved more than $11 billion in federal spending savings, including a hike in premiums paid by Medicare beneficiaries and a freeze of physicians' fees paid under Medicare.

The agreement is expected to raise premiums paid by Medicare beneficiaries for doctors' coverage to an estimated $13.10 a month in 1988, instead of $11.70 under current law.

The $11.70 package of savings included some $3 billion in savings in health and welfare programs and about $3 billion in measures designed to improve government efficiency.

Three more women are expected to testify before a panel on government cost cutting — the Grace Commission. The 15-month freeze of the fees Medicare will pay physicians would save an estimated $2.9 billion.

Italy honors Hemingway with park

By DENNIS REDMONT
The Associated Press

ROME — Cuba has a Hemingway museum, Spain regularly hosts literary conferences on the late American writer, and Parisian survivors of the "Lost Generation" commemorate "Ernie."

But Italy, where Ernest Hemingway first saw the ravages of war and started to write, somehow never pulled together its memories and mementos of the American novelist.

On Sunday, with the help of members of Hemingway's family, Italians plan to dedicate a small national park to the writer. And a month-long jazz, film, and classical music festival will be held in the area which Hemingway called "the Florida of Italy."

Hemingway's son Jack and two of the writer's granddaughters, Margaux and Joan, have flown over for the occasion along with Jerry Siefert, the mayor of Ketchum, Idaho, where the writer took his life in 1961.

Hemingway was not yet 20 when he drove an ambulance for the U.S. Red Cross in northern Italy along the Plave River, scene of one of the bloodiest battles of World War I. He was wounded in July 1918 near the town of Fossalta and 11 years later wrote the novel which brought him fame, "A Farewell to Arms," about an English nurse who falls in love with an American ambulance driver.

Later, he met one of the loves of his life, Adriana Ivancich, the model for Renata, one of the characters of "Across the River and into the Trees." She died two years ago, but her brother Gianfranco, a Hemingway companion from the Cuban days, has put together some memorabilia at his villa in San Michele on the Adriatic coast.

"Italy is the key to understanding Hemingway," says Ivancich. "You can hunt big game, hang out with the bulls, and write about the Spanish Civil War, but you can never forget the horrors of war when you see them at 19."

After World War I, Hemingway returned frequently to Italy, although his description of dictator Benito Mussolini as "the biggest bluff in Europe" kept him banned during the height of fascism.

In 1954, the year he won the Nobel Prize for Literature, Hemingway came to hunt wild ducks along the Tagliamento River and the lagoons between Venice and Trieste. One day, on a

Discovery ready for maiden voyage

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Six space travelers — including America's second spaceman — flew here Friday amid final preparations for the debut of America's newest shuttle, Discovery, slated to blast off Monday on a weeklong mission.

Launch director Robert Slesick and his team were ready to start the countdown at 1 a.m. MDT today, said Rocky Flaub, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The six arrived from their training base in Houston and mission commander Henry Hartsfield told reporters: "The bird's ready to go and the crew's ready to go."

Hartsfield, who flew as pilot on the fourth shuttle flight two years ago, is the only space veteran in the group. The other crew members are pilot Michael Coats; mission specialists Judy Resnik, Steve Hawley and Richard Mullane, and Charles Walker, an industry engineer who is not an astronaut.

Miss Resnik is the second U.S.

woman named to a space mission. Hawley is the husband of the first, Sally Ride.

During seven days in space the astronauts will release a communications satellite for the Navy and snap thousands of Earth pictures with a mapping camera. They also will erect a 10-story-tall solar panel in a test of a device that might one day convert the sun's rays to electricity that would power space stations.

Walker, an employee of McDonnell-Douglas Corp., is to operate a machine in which he'll separate biological materials in an electrical field to produce a drug that he said could benefit tens of millions of people.

The drug will be tested on animals and later this year on human volunteers. For proprietary reasons, McDonnell Douglas and its partner in the venture, Ortho Pharmaceutical Division of Johnson & Johnson, will not disclose what drug is being made.

The companies hope by 1987 to be producing large quantities of the drug in space for commercial marketing.

No war, Reagan assures

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, contradicting a senior Marine general, said Friday that war with the Soviet Union is not inevitable, and he complained that peace demonstrations are damaging efforts to curb U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals.

In addition, Reagan expressed optimism about chances for a summit meeting with Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko, despite signs to the contrary from Moscow.

The president spoke at a White House Rose Garden ceremony honoring young people involved in the United Nations-sponsored International Youth Year.

Asked by one participant how young people could help stop the arms race, Reagan replied: "Well, I have to tell you that — not through some of the demonstrations that are going on." The young people cheered and whistled at his response and at end of his appearance chanted, "Four more years."

A reporter asked the president whether he agreed with Lt. Gen. Bernard E. Trainor, the Marine Corps' deputy chief of staff for plans, policies and operations, who was quoted as saying a limited war with the Soviet Union in this generation is an "almost inevitable probability."

Noguchi can't get job

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thomas Noguchi, Los Angeles County's flamboyant former coroner, failed Friday in his latest bid to get his job back.

Superior Court Judge Norman Epstein said Noguchi "was not an appropriate manager and the county has proven that."

Two years ago, Noguchi was demoted by the county Board of Supervisors and Civil Service Commission, each determining he had mismanaged his office and misused the power of his position.

"I'm a bit disappointed," said Noguchi, 57, noting that he had been looking forward to returning to his former position.

Noguchi's attorney, Godfrey Isaac, said he would appeal Epstein's ruling to the state District Court of Appeals.

Epstein issued his ruling "with sadness." He called it a case "in which no one can take any pleasure."

Church raided in effort to uncover child abuse

ISLAND POND, Vt. (AP) — State troopers staged an early morning raid on members of a secretive fundamentalist Christian sect Friday, taking 112 youngsters away from their homes to learn whether they have been physically abused.

But a judge refused to detain the youths, despite state efforts to keep them in custody three days.

About 100 troopers, armed with search warrants and aided by state social workers and nurses, entered 20 homes of members of the Northeast Kingdom Community Church shortly after 6 a.m.

There was no resistance as the children were taken, placed in buses and driven to nearby Newport.

"The action was carried out after two years of effort by the state to get the parents to identify and report abuse and neglect," said David Dillon, spokesman for Gov. Richard Snelling. He said the raid had been in the planning stages for eight months.

The families were being taken individually into district court, where lawyers for the state asked to retain custody of the youths for three days so a physician could examine them for evidence of beatings.

However, Judge Frank Mahady refused to grant the detention, and seven families had been released by evening. The first family was processed and "drove away" with its children 11 hours after they were taken away, said Vermont Defender Andrew Crane.

No members of the press or public were allowed in court, so the reason for the judge's action was not known. Crane refused to elaborate.

The raid came four days after a judge briefly jailed seven church members for failing to answer questions concerning the treatment of the children. They were released after the judge decided he lacked the authority to hold them.

Church policy is set by a group of 12 elders, who mete out punishment to errant children. One of the church's leaders, Charles "Eddie" Wiseman, has been charged with simple assault for the alleged seven-hour beating last year of a 13-year-old girl who was left with 89 welts on her body, from her neck to her toes. The girl's parents said their daughter was beaten because she lied.

Dillon said no single incident triggered the raid.

"It's been a two-year constant flurry of reports of child abuse and neglect," he said. "Doctors and (social workers) will examine each child and if there is not problem they will be returned to their parents and the whole thing is laid to rest once and for all."

Two cases found of bubonic plague

By The Associated Press

A 12-year-old Lakewood, Calif., boy and a 43-year-old man from Santa Fe, N.M., both apparently bitten by infected fleas, are recovering from bubonic plague, health officials said Friday.

The boy, Los Angeles County's third plague victim this year, is in a Bellflower hospital, said Dr. Shirley Fannin, associate director of acute communicable disease control programs for the county's Department of Health Services.

The Santa Fe victim, New Mexico's fifth this year, was admitted to a hospital June 16 and released last weekend, said Ray Lopez, Health and Environment Department public information officer.

Plane makes forced landing

BOISE (AP) — A twin-engine Horizon Air passenger plane was forced to make an emergency landing at the Boise airport Friday after losing power in one of its engines, authorities said. The plane, carrying 14 passengers, took off from the airport about mid-afternoon destined for Portland, but was forced to return after losing power. Officials said no one was injured in the incident.

ISU names acting president

REXBURG (AP) — Clifford Trump, the vice president for administration at Idaho State University, has been named the school's acting president by the State Board of Education. Trump, 47, will take over at ISU Aug. 1 from Myron Coulter, who is resigning then to become chancellor at Western Carolina University in Cullowhee, N.C. A board spokesman said the board will set up a screening committee later this year to begin the task of finding a permanent replace for Coulter, who headed ISU for eight years.

Board sets financial plan

REXBURG (AP) — The State Board of Education, ignoring objections from the group seeking the fee authority, has approved a proposal that would allow the organization to obtain Boise State University student financial backing only if students took positive action to provide it. "We don't consider the issue closed," said Brad Martin of the Idaho Public Interest Research Group after the board voted 5-3 for the positive check-off plan on Friday. After rejecting on a tie vote vice president E.L. Miller's proposal that the board avoid such controversies and leave them to the individual university presidents, the board also rejected the PIRG plan that would have garnered it student financial support if students failed to check a box saying they declined to provide it.

Accreditation rules changed

REXBURG (AP) — The State Education Board has unanimously approved changing secondary school accreditation standards to require more instructional time in the classroom. The plan, approved Friday at the board's meeting in Rexburg, drew sharp criticism from the Idaho Education Association. The rule could "lead to a deterioration in the quality of Idaho's education," said Gail Moore, spokeswoman for the association. She said the change would leave less time for teachers to prepare for classes. The new rule will require 140 hours of instructional time for credit in all courses. Before, the state required 150 hours for credit in various laboratory sciences and other courses and 120 hours for credit in basic core curricula.

Possible Enviro-safe problem

BOISE (AP) — The Owyhee County prosecutor says a thunderstorm at Enviro-safe Services' Grand View site may have washed poisonous chemicals into nearby areas or groundwater. Clayton Anderson said Friday he is considering legal action against the firm, though he would not say what that action might be. The storm washed run-off water away from the site, Anderson said, and caused water to collect in a PCB pit. The cancer-causing chemical could seep into the groundwater, he said. In addition, water collected around a silo housing deadly wastes and apparently seeped into the ground, he said.

Probation in tax case

BOISE (AP) — A Soda Springs man has been sentenced to three years conditional probation for failing to file a valid tax return. Terms of the probation require that Reid Oelke, 35, file federal tax returns for previous years, and pay taxes that come due during the probation. He also was ordered to pay probation costs and provide 150 hours of community service. Oelke originally was accused of failing to file income tax returns for 1980 and 1981. Government attorneys said his income for those years was $22,960 and $27,905. Oelke also was accused of filing a false withholding exemption certificate with his employer on March 8, 1982. Under a bargaining agreement, Oelke pleaded guilty to failure to file his 1980 federal return. The remaining charges were dropped.

Hansen speaks against Democratic platform

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Congressman George Hansen has joined the debate over the state Democratic Party platform, claiming it drives a wedge between his Democratic opponent Richard Stallings and the people of Idaho. Hansen, in a statement from his Washington office on Friday, criticized the opposition for coming out in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment, refusing to endorse construction of the new Pressurized Water Reactor near Idaho Falls and backing a nuclear freeze. "The Democratic Party at its state convention thoroughly divorced itself and my opponent from the people of Idaho on the big issues of this election," Hansen charged. "Their stand for the ERA, against jobs for Idaho on the NPR and for a nuclear freeze might fly in George McGovern and Walter Mondale territory but not in Idaho," the seven-term incumbent said. Stallings, given a good chance of unseating Hansen in November in view of the congressman's felony conviction, denied that the party was waffling on the reactor issue for his benefit. He said only that he and other Democrats want more information on the proposed facility, including an environmental impact analysis.

The battle is joined: DeHaan vs. Hansen

Congressman, attorney spar verbally on radio talk show

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

REP. GEORGE HANSEN
Engages in heated exchange

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley airwaves became a battlefield Friday morning as adversarial Rep. George Hansen and Harry DeHaan verbally sparred on KLIX-radio's "Partyline" program.

DeHaan, who recently resigned as Twin Falls County prosecutor, is studying the seven-term Congressman's status as a candidate for re-election in light of Hansen's conviction and sentencing for four felony violations of the federal Ethics in Government Act. He was discussing Hansen's plight with L. James Koutnik, the show's host, when Hansen phoned the station.

A heated exchange between the two Republicans followed. Here are excerpts from that exchange:

DeHaan: "Doesn't the fact that judgment has been entered change your possible right to vote and bear arms, etc.?"

Hansen: "No it doesn't Harry, because as I understand it, the country still believes that you're innocent until you've had your full course in the courts. . . . All we had, we had a bump and a burp. . . . Now we're in appeals we think we're going to win, in fact, we're confident we're going to win. So why don't you give us a chance to get the thing finalized before you start jumping?"

DeHaan: "I would hate to see this district elect a candidate that then would not be seated in the House and effectively . . ."

Hansen: "Harry I think you're forgetting something don't you? What the fight's all about. We're talking about a paper trap . . . Anybody who files a federal form that's got that nice little thing on the bottom that says if you make a mistake you go to jail. They start letting blackmailers on the street. They let rip-off artists on the street. And they start giving you a hassle over whether you file a form right or not . . ."

DeHaan: "George, what we're really talking about is effective representation and if you can't fill out the forms in Washington and that will not allow you to vote you can't represent this district."

Hansen: "Aw come on Harry, we filled out the forms correctly and I have attorneys just like you helping me do it. So if you want to blame somebody, blame your own profession."

DeHaan: "Are those the same attorneys that tell you that you're going to win on appeal?"

Hansen: "No they're not the same attorneys, Harry. But let me tell you something. If you'd look at the records . . . my attorneys worked with the ethics committee attorneys and the ethics committee attorneys — and it's on the record — agreed that we were doing things right. And that went on for six years. They never threw up a red light. Now they're trying to say, 'We didn't give you permission.' Well they did give us permission and we're still going to prove it."

DeHaan: "George, isn't it a fact that the ethics committee wrote you a letter and told you in '81 that you had to disclose your wife's assets on those ethics forms?"

Hansen: "No they didn't Harry. And that's where you're missing the boat. They wrote up a draft letter that was never sent. And they talked to my attorneys they put the draft back in the file because they made a mistake in their understanding and they never sent the letter."

DeHaan: "The judge told you that that advice you reportedly relied on was 'so ludicrous that no reasonable man would have relied on that.'"

Hansen: "The judge didn't know what she was talking about; because the judge blocked access for herself to the files that would have shown she was wrong."

DeHaan: "It sort of reminds me of . . . the old story; about how, 'Look everybody marching in the parade is out of step but my Johnny.'"

Hansen: "Well, let's stop and think about it . . . You have a court which is oriented in the . . ."

DeHaan thinks Hansen may have lost right to seek office

By The Times-News
and The Associated Press

HARRY DeHAAN
Researching Hansen's eligibility

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Republican Harry DeHaan is actively researching — for the purpose of mounting a legal challenge — the status of Rep. George Hansen as a candidate for re-election in light of Hansen's conviction and sentencing on four felony counts.

"When you're convicted of a crime you lose some rights of citizenship," says the former Twin Falls County prosecutor. He adds that Hansen may have lost his right to seek public office when he was sentenced June 15 for violations of the federal Ethics in Government Act.

DeHaan says it's up to Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa to ensure that Hansen is qualified to run for the post. He is researching whether the Association of Concerned Voters, an organization headed by Twin Falls attorney Paul Smith, can file an action against Cenarrusa to prevent him from placing Hansen's name on the ballot.

DeHaan said the association may also ask the Republican Party to pass a resolution at its state convention next week saying it has no confidence in Hansen. He said the association also could support Hansen's Democratic opponent, Richard Stallings.

But the convicted congressman, penalized with a $40,000 fine and up to 15 months in prison, says the group is "flying up a blind alley."

Hansen said passing a resolution urging him to step down won't work, either. He said he will not let back-room politics or special-interest groups overturn the will of the people.

DeHaan, who is not a member of the association, said the Idaho Constitution says a person convicted of a felony cannot run for office unless his rights of citizenship have been restored.

Hansen was convicted in April of failure to report $333,978 in loans and other financial transactions in his annual financial disclosure forms. The disclosures are required of virtually all federal officials under the 1978

Ethics in Government Act.

In addition to the prison sentence and fine, Hansen received a House Ethics Committee recommendation that the House reprimand him.

DeHaan said his research won't be finished for another three or four days. He said he must still determine whether Hansen is convicted at the point he is sentenced, or when his appeals have run out.

It also must be determined if the Idaho Constitution applies to Hansen, who is a federal elected official, said DeHaan. He said he believes the state constitution is applicable, but Deputy Attorney General Ken McClure disagrees.

Smith said the association is made up of Republicans from several counties. He would not say how many people are in the group and refused to speculate on what it would do to stop Hansen's candidacy.

"I'm not going to disclose what we are going to do until we do it," said Smith, who ran unsuccessfully for the Legislature this year, against Rep. Noy Brackett, R-Twin Falls.

He said at this point the association is looking at its options.

State officials predict the group's efforts to remove Hansen's name from the ballot will fail.

The U.S. Supreme Court decided in the 1960s that state laws regarding qualifications for serving in Congress do not apply, McClure said. He said that decision came out of a case involving former Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D.N.Y., who was convicted of missing federal funds, but later was re-elected.

The Supreme Court determined the House makes the final determination of whether someone can serve, McClure said.

He said the group could bring a suit, but he predicted it would fail.

DeHaan, however, contends the question he raises is different from the one answered in the Powell decision. "The Supreme Court did not answer this question in Powell," DeHaan says. The Court, in that decision, . . .

Officers find pilfered cash

By JOENEAVE
Times-News correspondent

JACKPOT, Nev. — A car containing a weapon and most of the money that had been taken during Thursday's robbery of the Benjamin Franklin Federal Savings and Loan in Twin Falls was seized here by Elko County sheriffs and Twin Falls police about 4 a.m. Friday, Twin Falls police said.

The suspect in the holdup, who is described as a heavily built white male, about six feet tall and 45 years of age, remains at large.

But Tim Qualls of the Twin Falls Police Department says that he thinks police have put together enough information on the man for a warrant to be issued.

"At the time of the robbery a witness gave us a description of the car," Qualls said. "We were later notified that a car matching that description was in Jackpot. The witness identified the vehicle and a search warrant was obtained. We found a weapon, clothing and within a few dollars of the money that was stolen in the car."

Qualls added there "could have been a lot of reasons" why the money was left behind by the robber, among them that the man realized he was being chased and did not wish to tie himself to the money.

The captured getaway car, which has Washington state plates, is not registered to the prime suspect in the holdup, Qualls said. He declined to comment on the amount of money that was taken or had been recovered.

Qualls said the police department relied on help from bank tellers and citizens tracking down the vehicle.

"The tellers were very alert and gave us a good description," Qualls said.

Testimony given in trout farm hearing

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley's aquaculture industry turned out in force Thursday to testify at a final Environmental Protection Agency hearing on a new plan to curb trout farm pollution.

The new plan includes tougher limits on suspended solids released into public waters and provides stiff penalties for a number of illegal cleaning practices, such as the notorious "board pull" that flushes accumulated trout wastes directly into the river.

But it doesn't include any more money for enforcement efforts conducted by the state Department of Health and Welfare.

And enforcement will play a key role in determining whether the new regulations carry much clout, said Mike McMasters, a state trout farm inspector.

Most of the trout farmers who attended the afternoon hearing session appeared willing to work with EPA to move forward with a new permit system that incorporates the tougher regulations.

But there were several substantial modifications in the draft permits requested by industry members.

Farm pond operators asked that their operations not be confined to specific maximum suspended solids discharge levels, because no detailed studies have been done to substantiate those levels. Instead, they asked to be regulated by a required set of management practices during harvest and cleaning periods, when the ponds pose the greatest pollution threat.

"The . . . permits do not make allowances for the difference between ponds and raceway culture," said George Lemmon, manager of the Billad Canyon Aquaculture. "If the standards are strictly adhered to, they will put the pond culturist out of business."

State Sen. Leland Noh, R-Kimberly and Greg Nelson, a state Department of Agriculture official, backed the farm pond operators request to drop the specific discharge levels in favor of a best-management-practices approach.

"Consideration should be given to a general requirement that each farm-pond operator submit a plan for removing wastes and for harvesting, with strong sanctions for violation of the plan," Noh said.

Trout farmers were also concerned . . .

Juan Garatea came to Idaho from Spain 25 years ago to work with area Basques

Basque priest stays put

By ANNETTE CARY

TWIN FALLS — After his first day in Idaho, Juan Garatea never dreamed he would be celebrating his 25th anniversary as a priest, still working with minority groups here.

His first inclination was to jump on the next boat back to Spain where he had been born and raised in the Basque community.

It was the Basque shepherders he had come to help in the Magic Valley and eastern Idaho, thinking he would find life little different in a Basque community of Idaho than one in Spain.

"Oh, I was wrong," he says now. "In English that is still heavily accented. When I first came, it was truly different. The language, it was very hard; I couldn't understand my . . ."

Revenue sharing backed

By ROBERT DOYLE
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Gov. John Evans received applause Friday from those attending the annual conference of the Association of Idaho Cities (AIC) in Sun Valley when he said, "as long as John Evans is governor, there will be no . . . of asking of the revenue-sharing program."

The comment was in reference to the Idaho Legislature's recent approval of a revenue-sharing plan that provided additional state money for cities.

The governor's emphatic statement led Harold Sims, president of the AIC, to later remark that Evans "certainly sounded more like a city mayor than a state legislator."

The governor's presentation was entitled "Idaho's Economic Future" and he kept to the theme of revenue-sharing's advantages, while outlining the steps necessary to insure Idaho's continued economic growth.

He also encouraged those present to "support candidates responsive to the needs of cities."

Evans made particular mention of a report recently completed by the Idaho Economic Research Council, chaired by former Idaho Governor Cecil Andrus, which had come up with a list of recommendations "which indicate that the time has come to give cities authority to govern themselves."

Evans, referring to the council's report, said "property tax levies should be local, not a state decision."

"Cities should also have authority to impose taxes in addition to the property tax; special-purpose districts should be consolidated whenever possible; and an all-out effort made to examine funding mechanics utilizing user fees as a means of income rather than the property tax," Evans said.

The governor then lauded the AIC for making revenue-sharing the organization's No. 1 priority in the last legislative session.

"The regional budget hearings that I set up had more city representatives in attendance compared with any other group, and your active lobbying led to a well-deserved victory for cities."

The governor also recognized Jerry Decker as a state legislator from Eagle who recently lost his re-election bid in a hotly contested primary . . .

Calls for civil disobedience increase

By GARRY J. MOES
The Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Prompted by the arrests and jailings of Christian school advocates, new calls for civil disobedience and acts of "Christian resistance" are sweeping through American evangelism.

The defiant challenges are coming from leading conservative Christian legal scholars, theologians, economists and writers.

These intellectuals generally base their appeals on a perceived, imminent power struggle between the forces of "secular humanism" and the Kingdom of God.

"Christians must not sit idly by and watch the state attempt to rob our Lord of His power, its authority, his crown rights," said Gary North of Tyler, Texas, an author, investment counselor and head of the Institute of Christian Economics.

North's new multi-volume "Christian Resistance Package" contains warnings, scriptural analyses and practical tips by a variety of Christian writers, going as far back as the Protestant reformer John Calvin, on how Christians can buck government encroachment upon religious rights.

North cites as a recent example the jailing of the Rev. Everett Sileven, pastor of the Faith Baptist Church of Louisville, Neb.

'Clown' conveys messages to congregation

By JULIE A. AMPARANO
The Associated Press

PHOENIX, Ariz. — The Rev. William H. Pindar has spent 19 years of his life — in the Presbyterian ministry. For 13 of them, he's been clowning around.

While many religious men and women put on dark robes and solemn faces to meet their congregations, Pindar puts on the face of a clown.

At the altar of the Old Pine Street Church in Philadelphia, he often wears a frayed top hat sprouting an oversized flower and rainbow suspenders supporting baggy pants and covering an outrageously bright shirt.

Pindar will not speak a single word. Instead, he prances around the altar miming the dramas of the sermon.

"Clowns in religion can be very powerful. The power of humor is the ability to free up a person's latent creativity and to communicate love," Pindar said.

Pindar recalled how a church member had once told him the most powerful service he had attended was not one in which the sermon was eloquently spoken, but one in which Pindar, in mime costume, silently played the communion bread, broke it and offered it to the crowd.

Men has been jailed repeatedly in the past seven years for contempt of court in continuing to operate a church school without state licensing. He is currently free on bail.

Seven other men from the church whose children attend the school have been jailed for briefer periods for refusing to testify about school operations. The church doors have also been locked several times over the school fight.

"What's his crime?" North asked. "Refusing to submit the Christian school... to state licensure, refusing to grant sovereign jurisdiction over the church of Jesus Christ to the state, refusing to place the education of Christian school children into the hands of the humanistic state, refusing to bring his convictions regarding his faith, his family and his church into line with statist policy."

Herbert Titus, a former American Civil Liberties Union lawyer who is now vice president for academic affairs at CBN (Christian Broadcasting Network) University, in Virginia Beach, Va., uses similar jurisdictional arguments to justify defiance of government authority by Christians.

At a recent Conference on Christian Reconstruction in Seattle, Titus contended that the Bible called Christians to submission to civil authorities. But he said it also called them to be obedient to apostles who, when told to stop preaching the gospel, refused to comply and replied, "We must obey God rather than men."

At the Seattle conference, California theologian R.J. Rushdoony urged resistance to what he called attempts by the government to "silence the word of God."

"To silence the word of God is to silence the truth and finally freedom itself," said Rushdoony, president of Chalcedon Foundation, a conservative research organization based in Vallejo, Calif. He said Christian schools could serve as the training ground for war between "humanistic statism" and "the Christian order."

John Whitehead, law instructor at Oral Roberts University and president of The Rutherford Institute, a Christian counterpart to the ACLU, said conflict between Christianity and civil authority need not be inevitable.

"In fact, Jesus specifically commanded his disciples to obey the Caesar, the things that are Caesar's. Conflict becomes inevitable when the secular authority — Caesar — demands for himself honors that belong only to God," Whitehead said.

"In modern America, the state does not openly claim divine worship, but in effect it is seeking to make itself the center of all human loyalties, the goal of all human aspirations, the source of all human values and the final arbiter of all human destiny. In doing so, without using the language of revelation, it is claiming to be divine," he said.

For eight years, he has taught clowning. He said he hoped one day to complete a doctorate on clowning. And it all started on a busy Philadelphia street corner, he said.

After spending the day in a hospital delivery room with his wife and doctors, the joy he felt over his daughter's birth launched him onto the street. "At a busy intersection, Pindar found himself handing passing flowers while still dressed in the hospital's green scrub suit.

"My personality isn't the shy type, but I was on the corner of Philadelphia is really something," Pindar said.

In addition to street and church appearances, Pindar gives performances for prison inmates and patients in hospices and mental institutions.

Pindar has studied clowning and performed as a clown for 13 years.

Classes will be for pre-kindergarten students through junior-high students.

What's what

People cling to the little lies they learn early. If those lies serve some purpose. Take the old notion that ostriches hide their heads in the sand. It's not true; and nobody believes it anymore. But pit near everybody in the western world did believe it for 100 years. No African had ever seen such. Didn't matter. Conversationalists needed a simile for the person who refuses to face reality, and the small falsity served. Those who bought it were like ostriches with their heads in the sand.

Is your medicine cabinet in the worst place in the house for it? Possibly. Warm moist air in the typical bathroom changes the potency of most common drugs. Some medics recommend the medicine chest therefore be kept in some other sort of closet, not water.

PHENICIANS

If you know all about the Phoenicians, you know all about the origins of fishing, shipbuilding and navigation. First, they invented the fishing line. Then the net. Then the raft with bushes for sails. Then dugout canoes. Then real sails. Then bigger boats. The navigation came along when they followed the fish out to sea. Getting out there was no trick. It was getting back.

Probe continues in broadcaster's death

DENVER (AP) — Police investigating the murder of talk show host Alan Berg plan to interview two dozen people who had on-the-air arguments with him, the chief of detectives said Friday.

Berg, known for arguing, hanging up on callers and using his biting wit, made enemies of some listeners. No one has been arrested in the case, but police are seeking people known to have had run-ins with him, said Don Mulinx, chief of detectives.

Berg, 50, a well-known host for radio station KOA since 1981, was ambushed in the driveway of his condominium Monday night. He was shot several times with an automatic .45-caliber weapon, police said.

Mulinx said Friday the 46 officers working on the case have gathered all the basic information about the murder.

"We're very comfortable where we're at this point," he said. "We now are focusing on viable people who may have had problems with Mr. Berg."

"We are looking at paramilitary groups — the Klan, Nazis, any group of that type he's had problems with," said Mulinx.

Police spent much of Thursday checking out the claims of a man who said he witnessed the Berg slaying, said Mulinx. The man later admitted he had lied, but only after officers searched the home and car of another Denver man.

"It took 16 hours of the day (Thursday) to find the information was fictitious," Mulinx said.

He said the man, at his own request, was hospitalized for mental help. Police have obtained formal statements from 75 people after interviewing from 200 to 300 people.

Ringo Starr receives hospital treatment for eye injury

WINDSOR, England (AP) — Ringo Starr was treated at a hospital for an eye injury after the former Beatle reportedly tripped over one of his dogs, Press Association, the domestic news agency, said Friday.

The onetime Beatles drummer also was told to see a specialist at the eye clinic in King Edward VII Hospital in this small town west of London, the news agency said. It quoted an unidentified hospital spokesman as the source of its report. The 43-year-old entertainer was said to have been treated at the outpatients' eye clinic Thursday after the fall at his home in nearby Tittenhurst Park. Press Association said

It was believed he had tripped over a dog while walking on the grounds of his home.

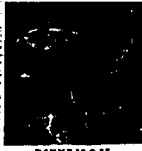

"I gather there was a bump and he had redness in the eye," the hospital spokesman was quoted as saying.

LONDON (AP) — American film director Joseph Losey, who was blacklisted in Hollywood in the 1950s and moved to Europe to make such movies as "The Go-Between," and "The Servant," died Friday at the age of 75.

Losey was involved in post-production work on his latest film, "Steaming," when he died at his home in London, said his publicity agent Thea Cowan. The film stars Vanessa Redgrave, Sarah Miles and the late Diana Dors.

No cause of death was immediately made known, but Cowan said Losey had been exhausted recently.

Blast hits Soviet arms base

WASHINGTON (AP) — A giant blast that demolished a munitions depot cost the Soviet Navy substantial missile supplies but in no way crippled the powerful Northern Fleet, U.S. intelligence sources said Friday.

These sources said the depot, which had adequate stocks of surface-to-air and anti-ship missiles that can be shifted from other fleet base areas as well as weapons already aboard the roughly 300 surface warships and submarines in the Northern Fleet.

The U.S. government apparently planned to avoid any public statements about the huge explosion which was reported to have taken a heavy toll in lives at Severomorsk on the far north Kola Peninsula last month.

Sources, who spoke only on condition they remain anonymous, indicated official U.S. silence would be maintained to prevent possible compromise of what were described as very sensitive intelligence assets.

The blast, so powerful it was thought at first to have been a nuclear explosion, was detected by U.S. reconnaissance satellites and other intelligence means. It is known that U.S. officials have obtained some detailed information through sources other than satellites.

The Kola Peninsula is the site of a complex of depots, shipyards and other base facilities supporting the Northern Fleet.

Also based on the Kola Peninsula are about 425 naval warplanes, as well as some elements of the Soviet equivalent of the U.S. Marine Corps.

The Soviets rarely, if ever, have acknowledged a number of disasters which have occurred over the years. U.S. military specialists have suggested that these disasters demonstrated Soviet inefficiencies and even carelessness.

Date set for swearing-in of Turner

OTTAWA (AP) — John Turner, elected Liberal Party leader last weekend to replace retiring Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, said Friday he would be sworn in June 30 as Canada's 17th government leader.

Turner told a news conference in the capital that his new Cabinet would be sworn in at the same time.

He sidestepped questions about whether his Cabinet will be smaller than the current 37 members and whether he will appoint non-parliamentarians to it.

Turner also declined comment on political talks between Jean Chretien, Trudeau's energy minister who was runner-up at the Liberal leadership convention last Saturday. Turner said only that discussions with Chretien, a longtime Trudeau ally, would continue discussions next week.

Turner was finance minister under Trudeau before resigning in 1975 for reasons he has never stated publicly. However, Trudeau and Turner were believed to have disagreed over economic policy. Turner has pledged to improve relations with the United States, which had been alienated by nationalist economics pursued by the Trudeau administration.

Charge against Sandinistas

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Roman Catholic archbishop of Managua said Friday he believed the Sandinista government "intends to eliminate the Catholic church to implant the so-called Popular church."

Archbishop Miguel Obando y Bravo also told The Associated Press that at a meeting Thursday, Interior Minister Tomas Borge asked him to have the Rev. Luis Amado Pena enter the safety of the Vatican ambassador's residence "because he could be assassinated by the counter-revolution."

On Wednesday, intelligence chief Lenin Cerna claimed the 54-year-old Pena was "an active collaborator" of the U.S.-backed rebels battling the left-wing Sandinistas.

Evidence in Pope shooting case

ROME (AP) — The prosecutor investigating the shooting of Pope John Paul II says there is evidence Bulgaria provided a truck intended for the escape of the pope's assailant, and that it left the Bulgarian Embassy 30 minutes after the attack, an Italian publication said Friday.

The weekly Il Sabato also said investigators have reason to believe that a Turkish accomplice of the man convicted of shooting the pope was taken out of the country in that truck, and that an alibi provided by a Bulgarian charged in the case is false.

The article gave further details on the so-called Bulgarian Connection as outlined in a 78-page report by state Prosecutor Antonio Albano. Portions of the report — considered secret under Italian law — have already appeared in the New York Times and the Italian magazine L'Espresso, and have been reported by the NBC television network.

In an interview with The Associated Press on Tuesday, Albano said Bulgaria, with possible Soviet support, had masterminded the plot to kill the pope in an apparent attempt to eliminate papal support for the Solidarity labor union in John Paul's native Poland.

Bulgaria, a close ally of the Soviet Union, has repeatedly denied accusations.

Il Sabato said the prosecutor has evidence strongly suggesting that Mehmet Ali Agca, now serving a life sentence for trying to kill the pope, had a Turkish accomplice in St. Peter's Square when he shot the pontiff May 13, 1981.

Debtors reach accord

CARTAGENA, Colombia (AP) — Eleven Latin American governments that owe more than $350 billion have agreed that the United States and other rich countries must share responsibility for dealing with those debts, officials said Friday.

Finance and foreign ministers at the debtors' conference have been discussing a draft on "co-responsibility" involving the creditors, and Fernando Alvaraz of Chile's Department of Economy said there was no disagreement on that point.

He spoke with The Associated Press after leaving one of the closed-door sessions.

The ministers were meeting for the second day as they prepared a final statement to international bankers.

Officials who spoke with reporters at the Cartagena Convention Center said they were having trouble agreeing on what kind of "continuing mechanism" should be organized to keep pressure on banks and governments in creditor countries to help the debtor nations meet their payments.

In another development, it was announced that Argentina, with $43.6 billion in debts, has been named chairman of the debtors' group.
