Soviets reject offer of nuclear talks

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union on Sunday rejected as "totally unsatisfactory" a U.S. agreement to talk about a space weapons ban this year if nuclear arms also could be discussed. It charged that the White House was trying to thwart the talks by raising the nuclear issue.

The Soviets accused the Reagan administration of seeking to turn space into "a springboard for aggression" by avoiding talks, making it clear they have not softened their refusal to resume negotiations on ground-based nuclear missiles so long as new NATO rockets remained in Western Europe.

"The Soviet Union resolutely rejects the attempt to advance pre-conditions for talks on (a) problem of vital importance for all countries and peoples, and thus to block its solution," the government said in a statement published by the official news agency Tass.

On Friday, the Soviets had invited the United States to begin talks in Vienna, Austria, this September on a ban on testing, developing and deploying anti-satellite weapons and other space armaments. But the chilly statement issued Sunday did not seem surprising given the Soviet Union's steadfast refusal to talk about nuclear missiles unless NATO cancels its planned deployment of 572 new rockets in Western Europe and removes those already in place.

"The U.S. administration has demonstrated more than once that it is not interested in ending the arms race, in holding businesslike, constructive talks to settle this problem," the Soviet government statement said.

In Washington, the Reagan administration said it was disappointed by the Kremlin's initial refusal to link negotiations on nuclear and anti-satellite weapons, but it held out the hope Soviet leaders would change their minds.

"We remain ready to sit down with the Soviets," the State Department said in a statement read by spokesman Joseph Rosp.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Peter H. Rousell, also said the administration was seeking further word from the Soviets. "We hope to have a more serious and considered response," he said.

Meanwhile, a White House official said President Reagan was prepared to bring up the issue informally with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin at a White House barbecue for the diplomatic corps Sunday night.

"I believe the president will be saying to Dobrynin, 'What's wrong? You wanted to talk. Why can't we talk?'" said the official, who spoke on the condition that he remain anonymous.

As dean of the diplomatic corps, Dobrynin sat at the president's table in the East Room. The barbecue was originally scheduled for the South Lawn, where picnic tables were set up. But the threat of rain forced the event indoors. "This is an opportunity for the president to say to the Soviet ambassador privately and in a social setting... that we are ready to deal with them," said the official.

Clayton mine still showing quake's effect

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
The Associated Press

CLAYTON — A costly new pumping system works 24 hours a day at the Clayton Silver Mine to rid it of water that has flooded an 1,100-foot shaft since Idaho's deadly earthquake.

Operations at the Custer County mine, a mile off Idaho 75, ceased for nearly four months after the Oct. 29 earthquake measuring 7.3 on the Richter scale jolted central Idaho, doubling the 950 gallons per minute that had long flowed into the shaft.

Now, an elaborate pumping system forces 2.25 million gallons daily out of the mine and into a nearby stream.

"When water's up around your ears, there's only one thing you can do, and that's pump," said mine foreman Jim Sanborn.

"The volume of water surging into the mine has subsided, but still is about two-thirds greater than flow before the earthquake, Sanborn said. A week after the quake, water in the shaft had risen 100 feet and was gaining three inches an hour.

Scientists monitoring stream-flow records predict the volume will continue to subside gradually, but they say it's hard to tell when or if the flow into the mine will return to the pre-earthquake level.

Changes in water flows are related to the earth's shift that can open new crack lines and close off old ones in zones where water travels beneath the earth's surface, said Dale Ralston, a professor at the University of Idaho mining school.

Clayton Mines Vice President Wallace McGregor estimates the water problem cost the company $800,000 in new pumping equipment and down time.

"I would think the flooding was the most serious physical problem in the mine's 50-year history," he said.

Prior to the earthquake, the Clayton operation had a small pumping system to dispose of water.

With two systems, the mine now has a backup capability that should reduce the type of costly shutdowns that occurred previously during mechanical failures, McGregor said. The new system includes seven 1,100-kilowatt transformers.

Sanborn said the water surge was the only visible evidence the earthquake had affected the mine.

"There wasn't a timber or a rock out of place," he said.

Ralston said the Clayton mine has been a steady producer of silver for years even though it is a relatively small operation when compared to those in the Coeur d'Alene mining district of northern Idaho.

GOP chairman calls flock back into unity behind Hansen

By QUANE KENYON
AP Capital Writer

SUN VALLEY — Idaho Republicans could have found themselves badly divided at the state convention here. But when it was all over, State Chairman Dennis Olson engineered a unity drive that put the party squarely behind beleaguered Congressman George Hansen.

Hansen, convicted of federal crimes and facing a prison term, got a warm welcome at a banquet Friday night and there was no sign that anyone wanted to dump him in this fall's election.

In a fiery speech to the delegates, Hansen used familiar themes: He attacked federal agencies, such as the Internal Revenue Service, and tried to downplay the fact he's been convicted by a jury of four felony violations.

And Hansen blamed the news media for much of his problems. He said "four major dailies in southern Idaho" have been unfair to him, without naming them. "They don't lie, but they don't always tell the truth," he said.

There were no overt demonstrations against Hansen, but not all the delegates were happy. Chuck Lempeis, Kootenai County Republican chairman and a delegate, sat on his hands when Hansen got a standing ovation at the end of the speech.

"This is one of the most offensive speeches I've ever heard," said Lempeis, a lawyer. "He never talks about that he was tried by a jury of his peers."

"Assuming that he's right, and that he is innocent, why does he go out and blaspheme the government of the United States? To me, that's despicable."

It's two years until the 1986 campaigns will get into full swing, but two state offices appear to be gearing up for it already.

Lt. Gov. David Leroy spent much of his time doing the groundwork for a bid for governor in 1986. While he isn't formally committed himself to the race, Leroy admits he's lining up support now.

"We're taking names and numbers up here and getting about it," he said.

Attorney General Jim Jones might be eyeing another bid for the 2nd District congressional seat now held by Hansen. Jones lost to Hansen in GOP primary in 1978 and 1980. But if Hansen is beaten by Democrat Richard Stallings this year, that will leave the GOP nomination wide open next time.

And Jones figures he has a good issue — Snake River water rights. He's working hard on that tangled problem — and it should be a strong angle point in the next congressional race if the can point to some solid accomplishments.

Republicans always seems to have their conventions better organized than Democrats in Idaho. That covers everything from press facilities to getting the platform and resolutions adopted with minimum fuss.

Reagan seeks blue-collar vote; Mondale, Jackson face off

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Even before his re-election campaign formally gets under way, President Reagan sets out this week to renew his appeal to the traditionally Democratic blue-collar voters who helped him to an electoral landslide four years ago.

Reagan's tour will take him from a stock car race in Florida to a Fourth of July festival in Alabama to an auto plant in Michigan. The trip, with the exception of a fund-raiser in Decatur, Ala., is being billed as official and is being funded mostly by the taxpayers and not Reagan's re-election campaign.

When combined with what now are only preparations for a later journey to a convention of campers and recreational vehicle owners in Kentucky, the presidential itinerary cuts a wide swath through Middle America, where the president's political strategists expect the 1984 campaign to be won or lost.

"The key audience in 1980 and again this year is the blue-collar worker who can be a union member, but

RONALD REAGAN
Seeks to renew support doesn't have to be, who can be Catholic but doesn't have to be, and may be an ethnic but doesn't have to be," said one White House strategist, speaking on condition he not be further identified.

"Our view in 1980 and our view now is that there's a real congruence between the policies of rank-and-file union members and blue-collar workers generally and the policies of this administration, whether you're looking at foreign affairs — basically a hard-line attitude toward the Soviet Union — or selected social issues, anything from prayer in schools to tuition tax credits — which are very popular among Catholic voters, to general economic issues — lower marginal tax rates, obvious benefits of lower inflation and so on," the official said.

Roger Stone, who is directing the Reagan-Bush campaign in the key battleground states north of Delaware and from Ohio east, said: "I don't think there's any special gimmickry involved or any special TV commercial you run. I just think it's Reagan on the traditional themes that Reagan has candidly been campaigning on since 1960."

Stone argues that those issues are what enabled Reagan to split the traditionally Democratic blue-collar coalition four years ago. He compares Reagan's position now to that of Jimmy Carter in 1976, and finds them in sharp contrast.

NORTH OAKS, Minn. — Walter F. Mondale faces two delicate issues this week as he seeks party unity in his bid for the White House — the possible choice of a woman for vice president and the campaign of the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

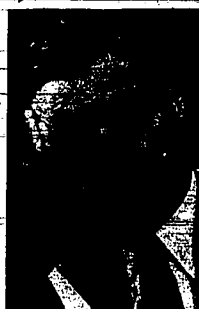

Two weeks to the day before the Democratic National Convention opens, Mondale plans to meet Monday with Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, the New York Democrat at the top of many feminists' lists for the No. 2 spot on the ticket.

Then Tuesday, Mondale files to Kansas City, where he will meet with rival Jackson for the first time since the end of the primary season.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros will be the first Hispanic to be interviewed by Mondale for the vice presidency when they meet here Wednesday.

And on Friday, Mondale will interview Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins, the third woman to make the announced list of contenders for the vice presidential slot.

Mrs. Collins, chairman of the Democratic National Convention, makes her second trip to the Mondale home here. She came to Minnesota in June to talk with Mondale about the convention preparations.

WALTER MONDALE
To meet with Jackson

Meanwhile in Tijuana, Mexico and leading chants of "give peace a chance," the Rev. Jesse Jackson led more than 2,000 Hispanic, black and white supporters Sunday on a march across the U.S. border into Mexico for a "hands across the border" rally for peace.

Jackson described the march as part of a "moral offensive" against war and injustice, which he said will continue beyond his Democratic presidential campaign until the threat of war in the hemisphere is over.

Several hundred Mexican supporters of Jackson's "international rainbow coalition for peace" marched a mile from downtown Tijuana to the border while Jackson led more than 2,000 U.S. citizens from the California border city of San Ysidro.

Speaking from the back of a truck in a border town about 150 yards south of the international border, Jackson led a rally that was part prayer meeting, part campaign speech and part civil rights and anti-war demonstration, as speakers identified as spokesmen of peace groups in Mexico, Nicaragua, Honduras and other Central American countries joined the black candidate for the U.S. presidency.

"Peace is possible. We will not kill each other. We must heal each other."

Utah families flee train wreck
LUCIN, Utah (AP) — At least 19 cars of a Southern Pacific Railroad train derailed Sunday — including one loaded with sheep — near this remote community by straddling the Utah-Nevada border, injuring three people and prompting a brief evacuation of five families.
 Box Elder County sheriff's deputies evacuated the five families for about two hours after the derailment, occurred on the railroad's main line at 3:30 p.m., said dispatcher Pearl Turman.
 Three crew members were injured. One sustained minor injuries, but two others were airlifted by helicopter to McKay, Dee and St. Benedict's hospitals in Ogden — over 100 miles away — for treatment of injuries, said Jim Loveland, a spokesman for the railroad in San Francisco.

Nation to allow women to vote
VADUZ, Liechtenstein (AP) — Male voters in the tiny constitutional monarchy of Liechtenstein narrowly approved Sunday a measure granting women the right to vote in national elections.
 The national referendum outcome made Liechtenstein, which is the size of Washington, D.C., the last European country to grant its women the right to vote on national issues.
 But voters in the villages of Triesen, Triesenberg, Balzers and Mauren balked at granting women the right to vote on local issues, limiting women suffrage to federal issues.

Film directors ready to strike
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The national board of the Directors Guild of America voted 25-0 Sunday to reject a three-year contract with producers and television networks, recommending a strike July 5.
 However, negotiations continued after the vote Sunday, and "we'll stay there as long as is necessary, through tonight and tomorrow," said DGA President Gilbert Cates. The meeting between the 25 national board executives and the negotiating team lasted 2½ hours, following the latter group's recommendation for a strike.
 "We're going to try in whatever time is left to bridge the gulf between us," said Cates, director of such films as "My Father and My Mother" and "Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams."
 The 7,300 members were to vote Monday in Los Angeles and Tuesday in New York.

Moderate quakes strike Italy
POZZUOLI, Italy (AP) — Two moderate earthquakes shook this Naples suburb Sunday evening, sending thousands of people fleeing into the streets. Two apartment buildings collapsed, but authorities said no one was killed or injured.
 Rescue workers evacuated five families from one three-story building minutes before it fell. Civil defense teams said the other building that collapsed, also a three-story structure, was not occupied. Scores of other buildings were damaged.

BURLEY — A Heyburn man died Sunday night when the van he was driving collided with another vehicle that officers said apparently failed to stop at a stop sign southeast of Burley.
 Cassia County Under Sheriff Billy Crystal said identity of the victim was being withheld pending notification of his family.
 He said the man was dead at the scene and was partially thrown from his van as it rolled over. The accident was reported at 8:55 p.m. at 200 South and 350 East.
 Five persons in the second vehicle were hospitalized at Cassia Memorial Hospital.
 They included the driver, Paul David Gurule, 22, and passengers Debbie Ramos, 21; Georgie Ramos, 18; Stefanie Gurule, 3, and Paul Gurule, six months, all of Burley. Georgie Ramos who suffered burns when the car nosed into a canal and began burning — was most seriously injured. Crystal said charges are pending.

Ex-governor ready for prison
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former Gov. Blanton and his ex-campaign manager were awaiting a federal appeals court ruling to keep them out of jail, but both planned to report to prison as scheduled, according to a lawyer.

Blanton and James Allen, manager of Blanton's 1974 campaign, were to turn themselves in Monday to begin serving prison terms for their 1981 convictions of mail fraud and conspiracy.
 "He's keenly aware that he has to report — more keenly than you or I," said John McLellan of Kingsport, Blanton's attorney. "But we still haven't had a ruling on the merits of our appeal. We're hopeful that the appellate court will rule Monday."
 "I'll be there Monday. I'm going up on my own," Allen said. "This isn't easy, you know. They're sending the wrong man to jail. I'm innocent."
 Blanton, Allen and former Blanton aide Clyde Edd Hood Jr. were accused of arranging state Alcoholic Beverage Commission liquor licenses for Blanton's supporters in 1976 in return for a share of store profits.
 Blanton, who left office in 1979, also was convicted of extortion. He was sentenced to three years in prison and fined $11,000.

Cause of shipwreck unknown
CAMPBELL RIVER, British Columbia (AP) — A 20- to 30-foot hole was torn in the M.V. Sundancer's hull when a Canadian pilot ran it into a submerged rock off Vancouver Island, the cruise ship's owners said Sunday.
 Capt. (Christler) Berquist sent salvage divers down yesterday to assess the damage and they returned with some damage reports, but he was not confident that it was complete so he had additional salvage divers down today. Wayne McCaulley, senior director of sales and marketing for Sundance Cruises of Seattle, said Sunday.
 The 502-foot ship with 799 passengers and crewmembers aboard, ran aground late Friday. It flipped several miles into Duncan River, demolished 165 feet of a pier, then settled to the bottom in shallow water. There were no serious injuries.

Mid-Atlantic states flooding

By The Associated Press
 Already sodden mid-Atlantic states were drenched for a second day Sunday, causing rain-swollen rivers and streams to wash out roads and bridges, and forcing the evacuation of at least 15 people.
 Meanwhile, more than 14,000 people were without power in Las Vegas, Nev., after storms and winds gusting to 70 mph knocked down utility lines.
 Fifteen people were evacuated from their homes in Street, in northeastern Maryland, after the waters of Broad Creek reached their front porches. Officials said. There were no injuries.

 "There was about three feet of water on the road," said Jeff Petty of the Delta (Pa.)-Carroll (Md.) Fire Department. "It was running like rapids over everything."
 About 10 miles away, in Darlington — near where Broad Creek empties into the Susquehanna River — two "real nice summer homes" were washed away, said Fire Chief James Pettit. "They're gone. There's just nothing there."
 Other homes along the creek and its tributaries also were damaged and, at least three cars were swept away, Terrell said. A youth was rescued by boat after the pier on which the boat was washed away by the current.
 At least four bridges near the Maryland-Pennsylvania line were heavily damaged or washed out, said John Williams, president of the Delta-Carroll volunteers.
 Storms showered Las Vegas on Friday with 0.2-inch of rain.

GOP

 But not everything went smoothly for Rex Morehouse of Spirit Lake.
 His supporters worked to get Morehouse elected as state vice chairman, succeeding Lee Shellman of Coeur d'Alene. They printed up a sheet listing Morehouse's qualifications as a city councilman and president of The Kootenai County Property Owners' Association.

 But it all fell apart at the last minute. His supporters spread his literature across tables and chairs — but in the wrong room. They put his material in a room to be used for the Friday luncheon, not the room where the Friday convention session was held.
 Delegates didn't get the Morehouse literature until 45 minutes after the election.
 And when it came time to nominate Morehouse, there was last-minute confusion among his backers. They couldn't decide who was supposed to stand up and nominate him — and nobody did. Shellman was elected to a new term without opposition.
 "I guess we were outfoxed," said Morehouse.

 Peace will prevail," Jackson said, alternating between a prepared text and chanting slogans of the march.
 "All the signs say war is on the horizon," Jackson said. "We must end a war economy in Central America." The money that's used to mine the harbors of Nicaragua and bomb El Salvador must be used to feed and educate and build."
 In addition to the anti-war theme,

Jackson also stressed opposition to the immigration legislation pending before Congress and the international debt crisis.
 Only two minor incidents marred Jackson's "hands-across-the-border" march. A group of about 50 hecklers, whom he ignored, chanted "nitor" as he spoke at the start of the march in California. In Tijuana, an effigy of Uncle Sam with a flag was burned on a stake as Mexican speakers preceded

Riot police brace for strike violence

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
The Associated Press

CLIFTON, Ariz. — State police in riot gear posted sharpshooters on hills and lined the main highway of this strike-torn copper town Sunday as they cleared away smoldering barricades after a night of violence.

Many troopers withdrew after the road was cleared, leaving three groups of 15 officers each at strategic points along the road.

About 50 demonstrators, watched by 25 police officers, protested during Sunday's afternoon shift change, but there was no violence.

"We would view the shift change as encouraging," said Sgt. Allan Schmidt, chief spokesman for the Arizona Department of Public Safety. He called the protest "very orderly."

During the violence the night before, six officers were injured and 20 demonstrators were arrested.

Another two men were arrested later after guns, cash and electronics equipment were taken from a Western Auto store, authorities said.

Four high-powered rifles, 10 shotguns and two .22-caliber rifles were taken during an early-morning break-in, said store manager Tom Green.

Some equipment was recovered from the men's pickup truck, but the guns were not found immediately, said Clifton police Chief Ed Kramer.

The suspects' names and the charges were not immediately known. Calls to the city police station were unanswered.

Those arrested earlier were lodged at the DPS base in Morenci overnight and brought to the Greeley County Jail in Clifton on Sunday for arraignment, Schmidt said, adding he had no details of the charges.

The melee broke out after a rally marking the first anniversary of a strike against the Phelps Dodge Corp.'s main mine and smelter in neighboring Morenci.

Despite the bitter strike that began July 1, 1983, the nation's second-largest copper producer has continued to operate the mine.

A police helicopter circled overhead at dawn Sunday as 80 to 100 troopers escorted a highway crew clearing U.S. 666 of smoldering barricades of tires and railroad ties and re-opened the road from the mine.

A few gum demonstrators offered no resistance, and about half the troopers returned to their base by 6:30 a.m.

Iraq jets destroy gulf ships

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes and navy units destroyed five "naval targets" in a convoy in Iran's Khor Moussa Canal Sunday and that two other vessels were damaged by floating mines.

An Iraqi military spokesman said in Baghdad that Iranian jet fighters tried to protect the ships, but Iraqi planes challenged them and shot down one of them, a U.S.-made F-14.

Iraq did not specify the types of ships it said were destroyed. "Naval targets" is an official Iraqi military term that often denotes oil tankers, but shipping sources in Bahrain said the Khor Moussa Canal is too shallow for large or medium-size tankers to sail through.

Marine salvage sources in Bahrain said no mayday signals had been received from any vessel in the canal, while a U.S. Navy spokesman said Bandar Khomeini in the northeastern sector of the gulf.

Iraq had no immediate response to the reported ship attack.

Iraq did announce Sunday that at least 51 Iraqi soldiers were killed in fighting over the previous 24 hours.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, leader of Iran's revolutionary Islamic regime, warned that if Persian Gulf Arab states did not stop providing aid to Iraq in the 3 1/2-year-old war, they might "precipitate their own destruction."

Swim ended by jellyfish

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Hundreds of stinging Portuguese man-of-war jellyfish floated ashore on popular beaches over the weekend, and swimmers were warned to avoid the water.

A spokeswoman for the Atlantic Beach Police Department said about 1,000 men-of-war were cleaned up in three hours Sunday morning, and lifeguards and beach patrol personnel spent the day burying them.

"And they're still rising in," said dispatcher Margie Young, "as soon as they get them cleaned up, they're coming right back in."

By afternoon, a wind shift eased the threat but swimmers were still advised to avoid the ocean.

The wave of stinging sea creatures on the beaches of Bogue Banks, a barrier island that includes Atlantic Beach, started Saturday.

Accommodation the goal

Two developments make this Ronald Reagan's most interesting moment in Central America. The Senate, following the House, has just halted support for the Nicaraguan contras. And American and Nicaraguan diplomats have just conducted two long days of talks at a Mexican retreat. Meanwhile there is Jesse Jackson, not to speak of Roberto D'Aubuisson. The administration's "secret" war against the Sandinistas is wrong, unfocused and counterproductive, and has been from the start.

Congress, having approved of it when it was small and quiet, seems intent on dropping it now that it has become hot and public. Something is owed, however, to Nicaraguans who took up arms expecting American support. If they are not to be sustained further in battle, they must be sustained in retreat and in readjusting their lives.

The contra operation was variously conceived, explained and received as an effort to 1) overthrow the Sandinistas, 2) push the insurgents into a share of power in Managua and 3) negotiate an end to Nicaragua's support for insurgents in El Salvador.

The last two purposes still enjoy broad legitimacy. Here is where those talks in Mexico come in. Washington still has available considerable political and economic resources, plus the potential weight of the Contadora mediators, especially Mexico.

The deal that begs to be made is for the United States to assure the Sandinistas a reasonable place in the region, and for the Sandinistas to assure the contras a reasonable place in Nicaragua. The phasing out of the contras will prevent the Sandinistas from using them further as an alibi for cracking down at home or for pushing a "revolution without borders."

Fidel Castro promised Jesse Jackson, an enemy of drugs, some 20 American drug offenders. And Castro also appears to have promised Jackson the release of 26 political prisoners. Those who had anticipated either mischief or a breakthrough should note that Jackson's interlocutors appeared quite aware of the limitations of presidential candidates' moonlighting as free-lance diplomats.

The far right in Washington, meanwhile, is hosting Roberto D'Aubuisson, the defeated Salvadoran presidential candidate whom the administration recently linked to a plot to assassinate the American ambassador; he says he blocked such a plot.

That he came to Washington, however, matters less than that the United States is insisting to the Salvadoran right that it must play by the rules. There lies the best hope of advancing President Jose Napoleon Duarte's strategy of first eliminating the violence (official and unofficial) on the right, and then trying to draw the left into a political process. In El Salvador, as in Nicaragua, accommodation must be the goal.

Another Blackbird testing his wings

BOISE — Jerry Blackbird, who seemed destined for big things in Idaho politics, died in a helicopter crash five years ago at the age of 34. But there's another Blackbird coming up in northern Idaho politics — although Mike Blackbird, 42, says he isn't yet ready to make a bid for public office. Jerry Blackbird came onto the Idaho political scene like a breath of fresh air in the middle-1970s, a much-decorated Vietnam veteran. Blackbird flew 1,400 sorties as a helicopter pilot, winning the Distinguished Flying Cross and other medals. He won a seat on the Kellogg School Board and took out nominating petitions to run against Republican Sen. James McClure in the 1978 election. Eventually he gave up that idea, but was elected to the Idaho Senate in 1978 from District 4, which then covered Shoshone County and part of Kootenai. Blackbird served just one session. In the 1979 Legislature, he quickly gained a reputation as a hard-working, sincere, concerned lawmaker. He received credit for working out a compromise that allowed a long-standing deadlock between loggers and timber companies.

Quane Kenyon

Reporters covering that session voted him the most promising newcomer. Blackbird, who had an engineering degree from the University of Idaho, was a hardrock miner. But he was happy in the spring of 1979 to land a job as a full-time pilot for a logging firm. On May 22, Blackbird and three other men were on a helicopter tour, checking snow depth in logging areas. The helicopter crashed in the St. Joe National Forest. Blackbird and two other men were found dead. Mike Blackbird was living in California when that happened. He soon moved back to Idaho, mainly to be with his father. "He took Jerry's death very hard. It was a full year before he shook out of it," Mike Blackbird said of his father. Since then, Mike Blackbird has been growing more active in northern Idaho politics. It wasn't a "follow-in-the-footsteps" sort of thing. The elder Blackbird graduated from college with a degree in political science and has been interested in politics since then. Two years ago, he was elected to the Idaho Democratic Party's Executive Committee. Earlier this month at Boise, he was an easy winner to another term on the board that sets policy for the state party. He was campaign manager for Marti Callabretta, a Democratic Senate candidate in Shoshone County. She won the primary and has no opposition in the general election, so Blackbird switched his attentions to Sen. Vern Lammie, D-Pocatello, who's running for a Senate seat in a new "floating" district. Lammie also faces no opposition in Shoshone, but Blackbird says he's working hard to get out the Democratic vote, figuring that will offset expected Republican strength in Kootenai County. Will there be another Blackbird on the campaign list in the future? His reply: "That's not beyond the realm of possibility." Quane Kenyon is the Associated Press political reporter for Idaho.

Down computer depresses passengers

The most frightening words in the English language are, "Our computer is down." You hear it more and more as you go about trying to conduct your business. The other day I was at the airport attempting to buy a ticket to Washington and the attendant said, "I'm sorry, I can't sell you a ticket. Our computer is down." "What do you mean your computer is down? Is it depressed?" "No it can't be depressed. That's why it's down." "So if your computer is down just write me out a ticket." "I can't write you out a ticket. The computer is the only one allowed to issue tickets on the plane." I looked down the counter and every passenger agent was just standing there drinking coffee and staring into a blank screen. "What do all you people do?" "We give the computer the information about your trip, and then it tells us whether you can fly with us or not." "So when it goes down, you go down with it." "That's very good, sir. I haven't heard it put that way before." "How long will the computer be down?" I wanted to know. "I have no idea. Sometimes it's down for 10 minutes, sometimes for two hours. There is no way we can find out without asking the computer, and since it's down it won't answer us." "Don't you have a backup computer, when the main computer goes down?" "I doubt it. Do you know what one of these things costs?" "Let's forget the computer. What about your planes? They're still flying, aren't they?" "I couldn't tell without asking the computer, and as I told you, I know, it's down. Maybe I could just go to the gate and ask the pilot if he's flying to Washington," I suggested. "I wouldn't know what gate to send you to." "I'll try them all," I said. "Even if the pilot was going to Washington, he couldn't take you if you didn't have a ticket." "Why don't I give you the money and you could give me a receipt and I could show that to the pilot as proof that I paid?"

"We wouldn't know what to charge you. The computer is the only one who keeps track of air fares because they change every hour." "How about my credit card?" "That's even worse. When our computer is down it can't notify the credit card computer to charge the fare to your account." "Is there any other airline flying to Washington within the next few hours?" "I wouldn't know," he said, pointing at the dark screen. "Only IT knows." "At that moment 'IT' don't know nothing." "IT knows it," he said defensively. "IT just can't tell me." "By this time there were quite a few people standing in lines. The word soon spread to other travelers that "the computer was down." Nobody knew exactly what this meant, but some people went white, some people started to cry, and still others kicked their luggage. A man in a red blazer came out. "Please don't get excited. Wichita has been notified." "What's Wichita got to do with it?" I asked. "That's where our main computer went down. But as soon as it gets over its glitch, it's going to buy everyone who missed his plane a free drink." Art Buchwald writes for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Democrats' nominating process fails to gain its objective

If the campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination has proved anything, it was that the Democrats don't know how to pick a presidential candidate. They appear to have forgotten the fundamental purpose of political parties — to pick candidates who can win elections. The recent campaign has been so divisive and uninspiring that it is difficult to see how any Democrat can beat President Reagan unless the administration is hit by a major catastrophe. The problem with the current selection process is that it is too democratic and not political enough. There is no inherent or constitutional reason why the candidate must be selected in a democratic process. The people can cast their votes in November, but to demand their attention for a 12-month (or longer) campaign is unrealistic and unnecessary. Certainly a college of political cardinals could have done a better job of picking a candidate than has been done this year. It certainly would not have done worse. In the quest for perfect democracy, the Democrats have gone overboard with quotas for various demographic groups. The logic and justice of granting special quotas to women, blacks and young people was never clear. Why not give proportional representation to people lacking college educations, or to construction workers, farmers, non-smokers, the elderly, to Baptists or people with blue eyes? Women, students and blacks got quotas because they were the squeaky wheels.

Rev. Thomas Reese
At the same time the Democrats imposed quotas on themselves, they also went overboard with primaries and participatory caucuses. The Democrats took the nomination process away from party professionals and allowed anyone to participate who called himself a Democrat. Since the better educated and higher-income citizens participate at a higher rate under such procedures, the process fails to reach the democratic goal its supporters extol. In addition, the very politically sophisticated switch parties, depending on which has the more interesting primary. Finally, the "quota" delegates selected by these primaries and caucuses were divided among the candidates roughly in proportion to their percentage of the vote. Such proportional representation following an election is un-American. It is a European device that should be rejected by the American body politic. Our tradition has always been in favor of winner-take-all elections, which force groups to compromise and form coalitions before an election rather than after it. The results of proportional representation can be seen in the parliamentary houses that frequently hit countries such as Italy. The Democrats need to clean up their act by getting rid of quotas; reducing the role of primaries and participatory caucuses; and by having primaries governed (either on a state or congressional district level) by the winner-take-all principle. The ideal Democratic convention in my mind would be composed of two equal parts: half the delegates would be elected by party officials and half would be selected by primaries and caucuses. In such a convention all U.S. senators and representatives, governors, big city mayors, state legislative leaders and party chairmen would have the right to attend if they were Democrats (and only those would be able to vote on the party platform). The other half of the delegates would be divided among the states on the basis of population, with added weight given to states that have voted for the Democratic nominee in recent elections. States that vote for the Democratic nominee deserve special consideration. It is absolutely ridiculous that Iowa and New Hampshire play such an important role in the selection process. Except for 1964, Iowa has not voted Democratic since Truman. New Hampshire has not voted Democratic since Franklin D. Roosevelt. It is interesting to note that more than half the states that went for Gary Hart have not voted for the Democratic presidential candidate in any election since Truman, except for 1964. If these states cannot deliver their electoral votes, why should they have such a big say in the nomination? Iowa and New Hampshire should be told to postpone their caucuses and primary until after some truly Democratic states have voted. If they refuse, they should be barred from the convention — who needs them anyway? Would such a convention have selected another candidate? Probably not. Walter Mondale was the favorite of the party regulars, and he ran better in Democratic states. But he would have won the nomination without the bloody, divisive and scandalous battle that we have seen this year. He still would have had a very difficult time against Reagan, but not half as bad as he faces now. The Rev. Thomas Reese is associate editor of America, a weekly journal of opinion published by Jesuits of the United States.

Wanted man arrested near scene of slaying

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A 36-year-old woman was shot and killed shortly before noon Sunday at her home northeast of Jerome.

A suspect, identified as her former husband, was in custody, charged with first degree murder.

Jerome County Sheriff Eliza Hall identified the victim as Marilyn Arbaugh, 36. He said the shooting occurred in a barn on the ranch where Arbaugh and her two teenage daughters were renting a house.

Charboneau, 24, of Jerome was held without bond, pending arraignment on the murder charge sometime today.

Hall acknowledged that warrants had been issued from both Jerome and Gooding counties for Charboneau's arrest over a week ago in an apparently related incident.

At that time, Charboneau was alleged to have forced Arbaugh into her vehicle late June 21 as she left work at the Butte Cafe near Jerome. She reportedly escaped from the vehicle in Gooding County and her car was found several days later in a remote area of Owyhee County where it had been burned.

He said his department sought additional assistance from other law enforcement agencies when it was learned a suspect had left the scene on foot. But before additional help could arrive, county and city officers already at the scene, and aiding in the search, arrested Charboneau without resistance.

Hall was called at 11:47 a.m. after one of the woman's daughters called the sheriff's office indicating there was an argument between the woman and suspect and that the caller feared for her mother's life.

But by the time officers could reach the ranch, Arbaugh was in the barn and had already died of multiple gunshot wounds.

Hall said the department sought additional assistance from other law enforcement agencies when it was learned a suspect had left the scene on foot. But before additional help could arrive, county and city officers already at the scene, and aiding in the search, arrested Charboneau without resistance.

Hall declined to say how many times the woman had been shot, but said several bullets had been fired into her body and one ankle.

Jerome County Coroner Gerald Ostler called for an autopsy and said Arbaugh died of bullet wounds in the chest area.

He added it appeared the woman died almost instantly, since she was dead when he and other officers arrived at the scene.

Hall said bond was set at $50,000 on a Jerome county kidnaping charge and the same amount on a rape charge out of Gooding County.

Hall said the victim divorced the suspect recently and had resumed use of her former name.

Students in Art Rathburn's geomorphology class learn what created the Snake River Canyon near the Hansen Bridge.

Pupils wonder at geological miracle

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When about a dozen local students tour the valley in the future, they will know more than just where the most scenic spots are.

After finishing an Idaho State University class being taught in Twin Falls this summer, they will have a good idea of how the area landscape took its present shape and perhaps how it may look in the future.

The students in the first Geology of Southern Idaho class are learning about the geomorphology — land forms — of the Magic Valley with a combination of classroom work and field trips under the direction of Twin Falls resource geographer Art Rathburn.

Wind, soil erosion, volcanoes, floods and glaciers have all played a part in the local geomorphology, Rathburn says. But on a Friday evening field trip along the Snake River Canyon, he was mostly concerned with the landscape features that resulted from long ago volcanic action and a flood of the Bonneville Lake 30,000 years ago.

At least that is probably when the most recent of the floods that emptied the lake covering large parts of Utah occurred, he says. Evidently a huge natural dam at Portnout Gap crumpled, sending tons of water cascading down the Snake River Canyon and spilling out over the land around the canyon.

The round basalt boulders near the Murtaugh Bridge are one evidence of the flood, he says. Basalt normally forms in an angular shape, he told the students, pointing to the blocks of rock lining the upper walls of the canyon.

It would have taken a massive amount of water to tumble the basalt blocks — some 12 feet in diameter — down the canyon and to round away these hard edges, he says.

Some of the flood water channeled to the north of the canyon, cutting a swath near Pilot Butte and another low area on the North side of Hazelton, Rathburn says. Lower in the canyon near Devil's Corral and again by the Perrine Bridge, the water poured back into the canyon in wide sheets, cutting away parts of the wall.

The shape of the canyon is continually changing, he says. Gradually it is growing wider as tension cracks form near the canyon wall and rocks eventually fall away. "Twenty, thirty, forty years ago, this crack wasn't here," Rathburn tells the class, pointing to a 20-foot-wide crack near Murtaugh.

In the last few years, geologists have also posed the theory that the land in a half-mile wide band on the canyon sides is gradually slumping downward, pushing rock out into the canyon that breaks off.

That's not the only theory of the areas geomorphology to change, Rathburn says. Some old textbooks discuss large sheets of lava that flowed across the valley. But Hansen wells 50 feet apart show different layers of rock, he says.

It is more likely that many flows of lava criss-crossed and pancaked together, he says. Much of the lava came from small shield volcanoes, or volcanoes about the shape of hubeeps, such as the Hansen Buttes. The buttes still have indentations on top, Rathburn says.

The lava also came from fissure volcanoes, such as the remains of one that extends for miles through Jerome County north of Hazelton. The rock there forms two parallel walls jutting away from each other. Most likely they are the remains of sprays of lava sent up from either side of the fingers of old volcanoes, he says.

While the canyon is still changing, the period of heavy volcanic action in the Magic Valley is part of the past. The movement of the earth's plates probably caused the volcanic action, but it has gradually shifted to the Yellowstone Park area, Rathburn speculates.

Adoption

Brother, sister anticipate reunion after 10-year split

By ANNA WAGNER
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — When Laura Coon and her younger brother Bradley get together later this month, it will be a very special family reunion. The two have not seen one another in nearly 10 years.

Their meeting will mark the end of a year-long search by Laura and her husband, Mike, to locate her brother who, as a youngster, was adopted by another family.

The Coons learned a good deal during their search, and they have a message to share with others in the same situation.

Biological relatives wanting to contact an adopted person should write a letter to the adoption file in care of the Bureau of Vital Statistics in the state where the adoption took place, says Laura. Meanwhile, adoptees wanting to locate birth relatives should begin their search by looking in the adoption file for such a letter.

Laura last saw her brother when he was about 9 years old and living in this area with her father and stepmother. He was adopted by another family in 1975, but Laura lost track of his whereabouts, because she was not living in Idaho at the time.

She began her search a year ago in March. As Laura explains, "Bradley was 18, then, and I figured once he reached legal age the decision to meet would be his and not his adopted family's. I also knew he would soon be graduating from high school, and I wanted to see him before he finished school and left the area."

A social worker with the local Department of Health and Welfare — the agency which arranged the adoption — referred Laura to Shirley Wheatley, State Adoption Coordinator for IDHW in Boise.

Wheatley told Laura the date of the adoption, but was unable to disclose any identifying information about the case since the record was sealed and could only be opened by a court order, secured through the judge who presided over the case.

Wheatley's only suggestion was that Laura write a letter to her brother and send it to the Bureau of Vital Statistics for placement in his adoption file.

"Basically, the letter gave Bradley a reference point for locating us if he ever decided to search for his first family," says Mike. "Since we didn't know how long we'd be staying in the area, we also included names, addresses and phone numbers of several close friends who would always know where we were in case years passed before he tried to find us."

In the meantime, the couple concentrated their search here in the Magic Valley thinking Bradley might

More open procedures eyed for Idaho adoptions

By ANNA WAGNER
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Although the adoption law is pretty firm in Idaho, a growing movement toward more open adoptive procedures is changing the standard, say state adoption officials.

According to Idaho law, once an adoption is processed the records are sealed. To reopen the file, adoptees or petitioners must have a court order obtained — from the judge who supervised the case.

Department of Health and Welfare State Adoption Coordinator Shirley Wheatley says the criteria for securing a court order to open the records is pretty well set in the law.

Each case must be screened on an individual basis to assure that one party does not intend to do the other harm, she says. If a judge thinks it is good reason behind the request, the records can often be opened. However, if the case history contains something detrimental, there may be "qualms" about releasing the information, she adds.

DIW social worker Nancy White, Twin Falls, believes adoptees generally have better luck getting clearance to the file since it is their record being considered.

Wheatley considers Idaho's adoption law fairly liberal in comparison to other states.

In certain states it is virtually impossible to get adoption records open, she says. "However, many state laws are changing given an would give us a little change, but others would say 'come on in and I'll buy you a hamburger instead.' Stoller says he and his friend reluctantly ate one hamburger after the other, adding that to this day he has a hard time consuming hamburgers.

"We rode the rails as far as Acquia where we were discovered and kicked off the train."

He says they heard there was a town by the name of Rupert, so they followed the tracks south and walked several miles into town.

"I checked on a job at the Bureau of Reclamation and I was hired the same day," Stoller recalls, noting he was in the Rupert area until he was drafted into the service during World War I.

Mrs. Stoller, sitting comfortably in a rocking chair, says, "I had never seen the Rockies before so I wanted to come."

"She adds that they didn't ride the rails the way her husband first came to town."

"No sir! I made him buy tickets!" she says.

After arriving in Paul and settling up housekeeping as a young married couple, the new bride cooked for ranch hands, shepherds and camp tenders at the MacRae Sheep Company while her husband worked as a ranch hand for the same company.

Stoller recalls that there were no paved roads. Paul at that time had one restaurant with the appetizing name of "The Dirty Spoon," one grocery store, a blacksmith shop and a theatre, all in what is now the old section of town, he says, noting that many of these old buildings still stand as silent reminders of days gone by.

"There were a few cars, but mostly there were horse and buggy. Many people just got around on foot, like me, with no transportation."

"Occasionally a buddy and I would ride borrowed horses to Twin Falls. It took several hours to get there, and if we were good and didn't get into any trouble, we could be back in time to go to work Monday morning," Stoller recalls.

TUESDAY THRU SATURDAY

TWIN FALLS — TRANS-IV, the Magic Valley's private, non-profit bus company, will begin summer shuttle bus service to Dierkes Lake Tuesday.

The once-daily afternoon round trip will follow the route shown on the accompanying map and the schedule displayed in the accompanying chart.

The service is sponsored by TRANS-IV and the city of Twin Falls. This will hold the cost of a single trip to 50 cents and a round trip to $1, says bus company manager Charlie Chambers.

"The city council agreed to underwrite half the cost of the service on a trial basis as one more way of accommodating residents for the lack of a city swimming pool."

Both Chambers and city officials think the service will appeal to children who might not be able to get to the lake, or who might attempt to get their own there by bicycle or hitch-hiking.

Chambers says he plans to operate the bus through Sept. 3, when he would like to begin a shuttle bus to the Twin Falls County Fair.

He says fishing poles will be allowed on the bus only if they have been broken down into short lengths.

Kissing male dancers may be hazardous to your health

DEAR ABBY: I live around Dallas, and there's a club where male dancers "dance" with nothing on but booty-bitty G-strings. They're all very sexy-looking, well-built guys. This club is so popular with women (no men are allowed). If you don't get there an hour before the doors are opened, you can't get in.

Abigail Van Buren
Dear Abby

I was there with a bunch of girls from the office and I'm no goody-two-shoes, but I was shocked. The men do a lot of very suggestive dancing and then they go out in the audience. If a woman tips them, she gets a big French kiss! I saw this with my own eyes.

Can a girl catch a disease from one of these male dancers if she kisses him? They must kiss a hundred girls in one evening.

Is there a weekly health inspection on these male dancers to ensure someone who is only out with the girls to have a good time that she won't catch something and take it home to her husband?

— SCARED TO PLAY.

AFRAID TO PAY
DEAR SCARED: I can't answer the question about a "weekly health inspection," but if the men kiss "about a hundred" women a night, they would need a daily health inspection to be positively certain THEY were healthy. Both the kisser and the kissees are at risk. Foolish, all.

DEAR ABBY: Here's the situation in a nutshell: Last evening I had dinner (alone) at a first-class restaurant. The food was fine, but the service was terrible. Instead of tipping the waiter the usual 15 percent, I tipped him only 10 percent. He handed it back to me, saying, "Here, you need this more than I do."

What should I have said?

— J.D. IN BUFFALO
DEAR J.D.: The waiter you should have said, "Thank you," and to the manager, you should have said, "The service was poor and my waiter was insolent."

DEAR ABBY: I might sound like a 16-year-old girl, but I'm a 64-year-old widow. I lost my husband of 40 years two years ago. He had been in a wheelchair for years. I had to feed and change him like you would a baby, but I didn't mind. He was a good man and I loved him.

Last year I met "Henry," who is also in a wheelchair. His wife had been dead for six years, and Henry had been in a wheelchair for nearly 30 years. He can't move anything but his hands and arms, but he does more work than a man who hasn't got anything wrong with him: Henry repairs electrical appliances, does gardening, housework, etc. He's kind and sweet and we fell in love.

Henry has four children. The three oldest are married; the youngest, "Billy," is not. Billy is as sorry a boy as they come. When he works, all his money goes for beer and dope. When nobody's around, he bullies his daddy and curses him like he was a dog. Henry gives Billy money when he demands it because he's afraid of him.

Henry wants to marry me, but I just can't, feeling like I do about that boy of his. His other kids are nice as they can be, and they love me like I was their mother.

What should I do?
— MISERABLE
DEAR MISERABLE: You don't say whether Billy lives at home, but if he does, he should be put out and warned not to come around. Henry's older children should help enforce this. If they can't handle it, don't hesitate to call the law.

Armed meditation

Armed security guards with weapons at ready stand by to protect the Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh at a morning meditation session in the Central Oregon city of Rajneeshpuram. An estimated 15,000 of his followers from around the world gathered to meditate with the Indian guru for their third annual World Celebration. Meditation sessions will continue daily through the week, most taking place inside the city's 2.2-acre temple. The Rajneesh gained notoriety when his followers took over the political leadership of this once-conservative ranching town.

Tentative end in nurse strike

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Negotiators for 8,000 nurses and 15 hospitals on Sunday reached a tentative contract agreement that could end the largest strike by registered nurses in the nation's history.

The proposed settlement "offers some protection for senior nurses against layoffs and shortened workweeks," said Vicki Besemer, a spokeswoman for the Minnesota Nurses Association. Job security had been the main issue in the strike, which began June 1.

"We made progress on the main issue in the strike, which was the layoff clause, and it took us five days to do that. Then the rest of the agreement fell together fairly quickly," said Alice Pepin, a spokeswoman for Health Employers inc., which represents the 15 hospitals.

The strike affected about half of the hospitals in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area. Hospitals unaffected by the walkout have added staff and expanded services, while struck hospitals have used supervisors, postponed elective surgery and curtailed services.

Details of the pact, which was reached at 3 a.m. after a 17-hour bargaining session, "will not be released until nurses vote on it, representatives of both sides said.

The nurses had demanded that when a hospital consolidates or closes a special unit or department, the specialized nurses are retrained on the basis of seniority so they can work in other areas of the hospital.

Negotiators planned to meet Monday to work out a back-to-work agreement, then nurses will vote on the entire package, Ms. Besemer said. The vote could come as early as Tuesday, she said.

"At this point, the negotiating team is recommending the tentative agreement for ratification," Ms. Besemer said.

Nurses who struck June 4 at a 16th hospital, Mercy Medical Center in Coon Rapids, were negotiating separately with Health Employers. Those talks resumed Sunday with federal mediator Ed Larson.

Both nurses and hospital officials said they were pleased it appeared the strike would soon end, and expressed optimism that nurses would return to the job.

Typical U.S. divorce comes after 7 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — There really may be a "seven-year itch" among married Americans.

The typical marriage that ended in divorce in the United States lasted seven years between the wedding and the final divorce decree, government statistics show.

But divorce figures collected from 31 states in 1981 — the most recent detailed statistics available — disclosed it took up to 80 percent longer for couples to part in some states than others. Thus, the folk-belief that marriages are most likely to hit the rocks after seven years is not applicable everywhere.

Divorces generally came sooner in the West and later in the East, a pattern that sociologists have long noted but cannot easily explain.

In seven Eastern states sampled in the study, divorces came after an average of 8.3 years of marriage. The average duration of marriage before divorce was 6.8 years in the nine Southern states checked, 6.5 in eight North Central states and 5.5 years in seven Western states.

The national seven-year median was a slight increase from 1980, when divorces were occurring after 6.8 years. The median had been 6.7 years a decade earlier. Median means that half of all marriages ending in divorce had lasted longer than that period and half less.

The figures compiled by the National Center for Health Statistics, an arm of the Department of Health and Human Services, found that residents of Massachusetts spent the most time together before parting. The median duration of marriages ending in that state was 9.2 years.

Pot growers move indoors

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. marijuana growers are switching to indoor farming to produce an increasingly larger supply of pot and thwart efforts by police to spot their illegal crops from the air, congressional investigators say.

They also say domestic marijuana cultivation has become so profitable that the industry — though still dominated by ordinary citizens with a backyard patch or a secret plot on public parkland — is attracting organized crime, which has the money to keep the plantings hidden.

The recently released report by the General Accounting Office was based on information provided by state police agencies, but it included figures from the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, (NORML) which wants to legalize marijuana.

Six years ago, domestic producers accounted for about 7 percent of the U.S. market, estimated at up to 14,000 tons a year, the survey said. The latest figures show Americans supplied 15 percent of the market, according to GAO findings. NORML said Americans provide up to 50 percent.

Tavern owners fight liability

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Wisconsin tavern owners are responding angrily to a state Supreme Court ruling that they are liable for damage done by minors who drink in their bars.

Some said the decision, in combination with the state's new higher-drinking age, could put them out of business. On July 1, the drinking age in Wisconsin went up from 18 to 19.

"Most bar owners were not yet over the shock of the 21-year-old (proposed federal) drinking age," said John Sidoff, who owns two bars on Milwaukee's East Side. "This ruling really compounds the problem."

Thursday's decision overruled the dismissal of complaints brought in Racine County against Robert Tonar, operator of Franksville Bank of Liquors Ltd. His firm had sold liquor to a 17-year-old who became intoxicated, ran a stop sign and struck a car, killing both its passengers.

JOHN TURNER
Canada's new prime minister

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
The Associated Press

OTTAWA — Canada celebrated its 117th birthday Sunday with fireworks in the sky, music on Parliament Hill and a closer look at brand-new Prime Minister John Turner, who is making caution the byword of the post-Trudeau era.

Pierre Elliott Trudeau came to power in 1968, saying it was time for "young guys with new ideas" to build "The Just Society." He stayed around for 15 Canada Day celebrations, missing out only in 1979 during a brief Progressive Conservative government.

Turner and his wife, Gellis, shook hands and waved to a crowd gathered on the Parliament grounds for the national holiday celebrations Sunday, his first full day as prime minister.

In a brief speech, Turner said Canada Day — marking July 1, 1867, when Canada became independent of Britain — "is a moment for us to remember that in spite of all our difficulties and problems, our country remains one of the happiest on this earth."

Turner, 55, pledged after he was sworn in on Saturday to run "a government that is streamlined, business-like, accountable and responsible."

He described his Cabinet as offering a "massive and fundamental new look," even though all but five of the 28 ministers he appointed were also in Trudeau's last government.

That mandate would have to come in national elections pitting Turner's Liberals against the Progressive Conservatives under Brian Mulroney. It's up to Turner to choose an election date, any time before March 1985. Again the new prime minister is being careful, weighing the latest opinion poll results and observations from advisers who apparently prefer an early election, perhaps as soon as Aug. 27.

Canadian commentators often point out the similarities between Turner and Mulroney, both well-to-do bilingual attorneys with handsome faces and even more handsome families. Both men hug the political center, with the possibility sometimes suggested that Turner, the Liberal, may be more conservative than Mulroney, the Conservative.

Fierce fighting erupts throughout Beirut region

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Fierce fighting broke out Sunday night in and around Beirut with shells crashing into residential districts as the army began preparing a plan to enforce security in the capital.

Leaders of the warring Moslem and Christian militias have indicated they would support the government's plan to have the army begin deploying troops along the Green Line Wednesday as a first step to halt the fighting. The Green Line runs between Moslem west Beirut and Christian east Beirut.

Police said at least 11 civilians were killed and 34 were wounded in the attacks on both the Christian and Moslem sectors of the capital as rival militias battled with tank fire, heavy artillery and rockets along the Green Line and in Beirut's southern suburbs.

Radio stations urged residents to remain indoors as the basis of crashing shells and rockets echoed across the city. Several buildings and cars were set ablaze during the barrages that began in the early evening and continued late into the night.

The renewed fighting followed scattered clashes early Sunday in the hills east of Beirut between Lebanese army troops and Druse militias.

West-Beirut has been controlled by Berri's "Amal" militias and Druse fighters since the army was driven out in February.

Guatemalans vote for people's assembly

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Guatemalans voted Sunday for the first time in two years to elect a National Assembly to write the nation's eighth constitution. The constitution will replace one suspended in 1982, after the first of two military coups in as many years.

Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores, Guatemala's chief of state, has said general elections for a president and congress will be scheduled after the assembly writes the constitution.

Seventeen political parties, nine of them recently formed, ran 1,179 candidates for the assembly's 88 seats.

First results were not expected until late Sunday.

About a dozen people were injured at a polling place in the capital when thousands waiting to vote rushed into the Tezuitlan school as the doors opened at 7 a.m., said W.C. Moreira, head of a volunteer firefighters crew.

About 40,000 people had been assigned to vote at the school's 60 polling tables.

Artemio Maldonado, in charge of the communications section of the General Hospital of the Guatemalan Social Security Institute, said seven people were treated for injuries following similar incidents at two other polling places in the city.

Despite a lackluster campaign, Guatemala City's streets were crowded with people out to vote.

About 2.5 million of the nation's 7.5 million people are registered to vote and a 50 percent turnout was expected.

Caribbean nations to meet

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Leaders of the English-speaking Caribbean nations will meet here on July 4 in their first summit talks since the traumatic Grenada invasion.

The 13-member Caribbean Community and Common Market, or Caricom, has rarely lived up to its basic goals of regional economic cooperation, and it seemed virtually doomed to disunity in the aftermath of the Grenada crisis.

But a recent wave of conciliatory feeling has carried the leaders of the former British to a round of talks on this archipelago off Florida.

"We won't know until we get together. But I think time is certainly disappearing a lot of that disension," Jamaica's Prime Minister Edward Seaga said.

"We all want Caricom to last. I only hope that the West-Indian capacity for snatching disunity from the jaws of goodwill will not reassert itself and damage us again," Tom Adams, prime minister of Barbados, said.

After Grenada Prime Minister Maurice Bishop died in a rash of killings last Oct. 19, followed by an army takeover, the other Caricom leaders met in emergency session on Trinidad.

Four members — Trinidad and Tobago, Guyana, the Bahamas, and Belize — opposed military intervention.

But seven Caricom members "invited" the U.S. invasion on Oct. 25, two days after the Trinidad meeting.

What's what

What's what

Q. What ailment is it that makes people involuntarily pinch and bite everything in reach?
A. Lesh-Nyhan syndrome. It's genetic. Blamed on a missing enzyme. Those who suffer some sometimes bite off their own lips and fingers.

Q. Is it true some potatoes have fur?
A. In a manner of speaking. Cornell researchers are growing potatoes with a sort of hair on them. Hope the hairy skin will trap underground bugs.

ESTRANGED

The husband and wife got into such a fierce argument they swore they'd never even be buried in the same town. The wife died in 1971; the husband 17 years later. In Vermont, this was. Today, their graves are side by side, but the city limit line dividing Marlboro and Newfane runs precisely between the two headstones.

Soviet law is curious, too. So much did the authorities want to promote a love-thy-neighbor attitude they made it mandatory for citizens there to help others in distress. The intent was kindly. But the law wasn't. Those who fail to help people in distress can be sent to jail.

Laws may aid disabled girl

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Things are looking up for Esmeralda Hernandez, 9, a disabled illegal alien who has been threatened with deportation.

One of two legislative actions may allow her to stay and receive the medical treatment her family says won't be available in Mexico, said Frances Landeros, director of Ayudas, an Idaho Falls minority service organization.

"I have a really good feeling that they'll be able to stay," she said.

One bill is the Simpson-Mazoli legislation recently passed by both the House and the Senate. If a joint committee can iron out differences between the two versions and the bill becomes law, aliens who arrived before 1982 will be granted amnesty.

Esmeralda's mother, Eva, brought her to the United States five years ago.

Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, also has submitted a bill requesting Esmeralda and her family be given permanent resident status. The legislation is pending.

Esmeralda suffers from spinal diseases. When she arrived in the United States, she couldn't walk or talk and was severely malnourished.

She's still only 2½ feet tall and wears a spinal brace, but she walks, talks, and is able to go to school.

Doctors say her treatment must continue, or her spine might break and cut her spinal cord.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service let her stay to receive treatment after her deportation hearing in April 1981. But it stopped granting extensions and said she had to leave after the Mexican government reported similar treatment was available there.

Retailers complaining about adjustment cost

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Tax Commission has received complaints from several retailers about high charges for cash-register adjustments for the new 4-cent sales tax.

Commissioner Darwin Young said four or five retailers complained that the charges from business-machine firms were increased because the new sales-tax law allowed the retailers to be compensated for up to $100 per register for adjustments by the firms.

The retailers were upset because the taxpayers pick up the tab for the higher-than-usual bills, Young said.

"I don't know how widespread it is," he said.

Young had detailed information only about the case of a Lewiston restaurant. A restaurant official said he was charged only $10 last year by a Spokane company for instructions by phone on how to adjust the register for a 1983 tax change, Young said. There was no state compensation last year for adjustments.

"This year, they insisted they would come over to change it. They said the cost would be $100," Young said.

He said he could not release the names of the restaurant or register company because of confidentiality requirements.

Tim Brennan of the Idaho Retailers Association said he knew there was a potential for abuse when the tax law was enacted by the 1984 Legislature. He said there probably will be some isolated cases of abuse.

Rob Jacobsen, a field services manager with NCR Corp. in Boise, said it has been burdensome to alter the machines for sales-tax changes.

NCR electronic registers at many Albertson's supermarkets, for example, are reprogrammed with cassette tapes sent to each store. Other NCR registers also are adjusted by retailers who follow written instructions sent by letter.

Hart ticket deemed tougher

BOISE (AP) — The Democratic presidential ticket will be 10-12 percentage points tougher to beat in some Western states if Sen. Gary Hart is on the ticket, a Reagan-Bush campaign worker says.

"That's especially true in Colorado," said Mike Masson, regional coordinator for the Republican presidential ticket.

Masson spoke to a meeting at the Idaho GOP state convention here Saturday.

Republican leaders think the chances are growing stronger that Walter Mondale will pick Hart as his running mate, Masson said. "That will impact the campaign in the West."

He said Reagan appeared a shoo-in in many Western states, before Hart became a vice-presidential possibility. "Now we have our work cut out for us," he said.

BLM warns of holiday fires

BOISE (AP) — Bureau of Land Management officials in southern Idaho are asking people planning outdoor excursions over the July Fourth holiday to be extremely careful using fireworks near public vegetation. That vegetation is now beginning to dry out, and the fire potential may soon become critical, Zimmer said.

Particular caution should be used with campfires and fireworks in range areas, he said. It is a violation of state law to throw any lighted material or fireworks on any forest or rangeland in Idaho.

Highway death toll lower this year

BOISE (AP) — Fatalities on Idaho highways this year are running about 18 percent behind the rate of a year ago as another holiday driving period nears.

According to State Police figures, 30 lives were claimed on state roads through June 27 this year compared to 111 a year ago.

"Certainly the work of our officers plays a part, but tougher laws and increased enforcement cannot prevent all accidents," said Col. Calvin Bernard. "We can attribute a large share of the decrease to safer driving habits by the public."

Bill Bernard said alcohol, speeding and inattention remain the leading causes of highway deaths, and it will be on those areas that the patrol will concentrate during saturation patrols over the July 4 holiday period.

Amy Alcott urges a victory-cinching putt into the 18th hole.

Norman edges Nicklaus at Canadian

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Greg Norman had to stare down suddenly-struggling Jack Nicklaus over the last few holes Sunday to score a two-shot victory in the Canadian Open and keep a promise to his wife.

"My wife called me this morning to remind me it's our wedding anniversary," said Norman, "and I came from four shots off the pace, then bested the legendary Nicklaus in a head-to-head confrontation for the Canadian national championship."

"I asked her what she wanted for an anniversary present," said Norman, an Australian who now lives in Orlando, Fla.

"She said the trophy would be just fine."

"So I told her I'd get it for her."

Norman, 29, who has come to be known as the "Great White Shark," produced a 5-under-par 67 in the duel with Nicklaus, the man he has called "my idol," and won this one with a 278 total, 10 shots under par on the Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

Nicklaus, who lost three shots to Norman on the 14th and 15th holes, summed it up quickly.

"Greg played better over the back nine. He played better where he needed to play well. And that's the difference. It's that simple," Nicklaus said.

Norman, who acquired 31 worldwide titles before joining the PGA Tour, now has won twice in five weeks. His first North American triumph came in the Kemper Open early in June and he then took Fuzzy Zoeller to an 18-hole playoff before losing the U.S. Open.

The victory was worth $72,000 in American funds from the total purse of $400,000, lifted his earnings for the year to $243,524.

Nicklaus, the 44-year-old Golden Bear who designed this course as a permanent site for this national championship, was seeking his first Canadian Open title but had to settle for his sixth runner-up finish instead. It marked the 36th time in his career he'd finished second.

Nick Price, the 27-year-old South African who led through the first three rounds and held a four-shot advantage starting the final 18 holes, had a struggling, disappointing 76 and finished in the tie for third with Mark Pfeil at 283.

going into the final round, took a double-bogey 7 on the second hole and finished at 73.

Joining Jones in a four-way tie at 210 were two-time defending champion Jan Stephenson, Jo Ann Washam and Donna H. White.

Leading money-winner Patty Sheehan and Debbie Hall finished at 211.

Alcott captures Lady Keystone with record 65

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Amy Alcott fired a tournament record seven-under par 65 Sunday to win the $200,000 LPGA Lady Keystone Open with a 54-hole total of 208.

Alcott, who started the round six strokes off the pace, had eight birdies and just one bogey in her record round on the 3,389-yard West Course of the Hershey Country Club. Five players had shared the previous 18-hole record of 66.

Martha Nause and rookie Juli Inkster tied for second place one shot behind Alcott. Nause came to the 18th tee tied for the lead, but she hit her tee shot into the trees and it took her three shots to reach the par-4 18th green.

She then felt a three-foot putt on the high side of the cup for a bogey 5 that gave her a 69 for the day and a 54-hole total of 209.

Inkster, who came to the 18th-one shot behind Alcott, missed a great chance to tie. She reached the green of the 405-yard hole in 2, but missed a 12-foot downhill birdie putt. Inkster finished the round with a 2-under 70.

"Istis Jones, who led by two shots touchdown drive.

Landry completed passes of 22 yards to Demisson and 13 yards to Lenny Willis and then came back to Demisson for the final touchdown. Frank Corral then added the game-winning extra point.

Quarterback Jim Kelly and the high scoring Houston offense were again the main show for the Gamblers but the defense sacked Landry four times and throttled the Wranglers offense.

Landry rallies Wranglers past Houston, 17-16

HOUSTON (AP) — Arizona quarterback Greg Landry, held in check most of the game, completed an 11-yard touchdown pass to Doug Denison with 1:49 left in the game to rally the Wranglers to a 17-16 first-round United States Football League playoff victory over the Houston Gamblers Sunday.

The Wranglers, held to minus yardage as late as the second quarter and trailing 16-3 with 13:37 to play, came back to earn the right to host Saturday's Western Conference championship game against the Los Angeles Express.

A 15-yard punt by Houston's Dale Walters started Arizona's comeback. Landry threw a 28-yard pass to Paul Ricker before a 20-yard touchdown run by Tim Spencer pulled the Wranglers to within six points with 6:11 remaining.

Moments later, Walters again squibbed a 13-yard punt and the Wranglers took off on the winning right end.

After Birmingham moved 64 yards to score on its first possession, Zenon Andrusyshyn booted a 50-yard field goal for the Bandits.

Birmingham's Lonnie Johnson knocked the ball loose from Kevin Bailey on a punt return. Buddy Aydelette recovered at the 80, and Sloud scored his second touchdown five plays later.

Tampa Bay's John Reeves threw scoring passes of seven yards to Willie Gillespie and 20 yards to Willford Morgan. Reeves completed 15 of 34 passes for 213 yards but suffered three interceptions.

Birmingham bombs Tampa Bay

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Joe Cribbs, the United States Football League's leading rusher, ran for 112 yards and Birmingham's defense set up two touchdowns as the Stallions defeated Tampa Bay 38-17 Sunday to advance to the Eastern Conference finals against Philadelphia.

The game in Philadelphia next Sunday will determine the conference's representative in the league championship game at Tampa Bay on July 15.

Cribbs, who picked up 1,467 yards during the Stallions' 14-4 season, got three of his yards Sunday on a scoring run that gave Birmingham a 27-11 lead. He also picked up 55 yards on three catches.

Birmingham quarterback Cliff Sloud scored two touchdowns on runs of 1 and 2 yards, and connected on 13 passes for 147 yards. Danny Miller kicked five field goals for the Stallions — 42, 49, 35, 42 and 32 yards, respectively.

Chuck Clanton of Birmingham had two interceptions and one of his thefts, returned 12 yards to the Bandit 27, led to a Cribbs touchdown plunge.

Leen Perry got 24 of the yards on two runs before Cribbs raced around run that gave Birmingham a 27-11 lead. He also picked up 55 yards on three catches.

Birmingham's Lonnie Johnson knocked the ball loose from Kevin Bailey on a punt return. Buddy Aydelette recovered at the 80, and Sloud scored his second touchdown five plays later.

Tampa Bay's John Reeves threw scoring passes of seven yards to Willie Gillespie and 20 yards to Willford Morgan. Reeves completed 15 of 34 passes for 213 yards but suffered three interceptions.

Olympians squeak past NBA stars

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The U.S. Olympic basketball team, tuning up for the Summer Games less than a month away, squeaked past a star-studded batch of professional players 94-90 Sunday.

The Olympians, paced by 16 points from North Carolina's Sam Perkins and 12 points from Georgetown's Patrick Ewing, have now won the first three of nine games against National Basketball Association all-star teams.

But it wasn't easy. Detroit's Dan Roundfield put the pros ahead 90-89 with a minute to go, but Ewing hit some key free throws in the final seconds as the Olympians escaped with a victory.

A crowd of 19,038 watched the first-ever basketball game at the 2½-year-old Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome.

Perkins scored 10 points in the first 10 minutes, putting the Olympians ahead 22-14.

But it's pretty three-man weave engineered by Los Angeles' Magic Johnson, Dallas' Mark Aguirre and Detroit's Isiah Thomas, followed by a Thomas steal and basket, brought the pros within a basket, 22-20.

Coach Bobby Knight's Olympians then took control, opening up a 52-40 margin at half time.

Utah man wins NY race

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Cummings of Orem, Utah, who has qualified for the 10,000-meter run in the Los Angeles Olympics, was a two-year winner over Mark Curp Sunday in the Diet Pepsi National 10,000-meter Championship.

A field of more than 3,000 competed in the race that started on the New Jersey side of the George Washington Bridge. Light rain and, later, a deluge fell during the race.

The 30-year-old Cummings pulled away from defending champion Rod Dixon of New Zealand in the final mile and Dixon faltered to third place behind Curp in the stretch.

Cummings covered the 6.2-mile event in 28 minutes, 30 seconds, two seconds faster than Curp, of Kansas City, Mo. The 33-year-old Dixon, who will run the marathon for New Zealand in Los Angeles, was timed in 28:50.

Anne Ordain of New Zealand, who will compete in the Olympic marathon, successfully defended the women's title in 32:12. Carol Urlich-McLachle of Houston followed in 32:48, while Kellie Cathy of Fort Collins, Colo., was third in 33:07.

Muldowney listed as stable

MONTRÉAL (AP) — Shirley Muldowney, a three-time National Hot Rod Association world champion, remained in stable condition Sunday following surgery for leg wounds sustained in a weekend crash.

Muldowney, 44, suffered three fractures of the right leg, a broken left leg, torn knee cartilage and damaged ribs when her top-fuel dragster veered off the track Friday at the Sanair International Drag Strip in nearby St. Pie.

She underwent the one-hour operation at Montreal General Hospital so doctors could clean the leg wounds.

"We are confident about infection in her legs," said Dr. Larry Choehle, an orthopedic surgeon attending Muldowney. "Our concern has been a wound on her left ankle. We will not open the wound again until she undergoes skin grafts, which will probably begin at the end of this week."

Expos, Cards swap infielders

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Montreal Expos on Sunday acquired the contract of utility infielder Mike Ramsey from the St. Louis Cardinals in exchange for the contract of veteran Expos infielder, Chris Speier.

Ramsey, 30, playing in his fifth major league season, was batting .067 in 21 games for St. Louis, with one hit in 15 at-bats.

Speier, 34, joined Montreal from San Francisco on April 26, 1977, and re-signed with the Expos as a free agent on Jan. 12, 1982. Speier had played more games at shortstop than any player in Expos history, 854, and was the fourth senior player on the club in years of continuous service behind Steve Rogers, Gary Carter and Andre Dawson.

Rangers get Noles from Cubs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Chicago Cubs traded right-handed pitcher Dickie Noles to the Texas Rangers for a player to be named later, the National League club announced Sunday.

Noles, 28, was in his third season with the Cubs. He had appeared in 21 games for Chicago this season. He was 2-2 with a 5.1 earned run average. In 1982, his first with the Cubs, he was 10-13 and last year he was 5-10.

The inter-league trade was made possible when Noles cleared waivers through the National League.

Andretti wins easily at Meadowlands

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Mario Andretti charged to his second runaway victory of the season, leading all the way Sunday under overcast skies in the inaugural U.S. Grand Prix at the Meadowlands.

The 44-year-old Andretti, driving a Cosworth-powered Lola, sponsored by Budweiser and co-owned by actor Paul Newman and Chicago businessman Carl Haas, was not even challenged after the early laps on the 1.68-mile, 11-turn temporary circuit through the parking lots of the New Jersey sports complex.

A rain-dampened crowd of 34,388 — there were 3,812 no-shows — watched Andretti beat the second-place Lola of Danny Sullivan across the finish line on the 100th lap of the $600,000 race by a whopping 51.6 seconds. He averaged an unofficial 80.742 mph.

Australian Geoff Brabham was third, followed by Al Unser Jr., both a lap behind in Marches and Al Holbert, two laps behind in another March.

It was the 13th Indy-car road racing victory of Andretti's career. He won the season opener through the streets of Long Beach, Calif., and has started each of the three road races this year from the pole.

Rain soaked the narrow course set up between Giants Stadium, Byrne Arena and the Meadowlands race track, throughout the morning and into early afternoon. The wet weather provided the 28 starters with the choice of beginning the race on a damp-but-drying track on treaded rain tires or on the slick tires used on dry tracks.

Unser, who started on rain tires, fell off the pace when he had to pit for a tire change on lap nine. Rahal, starting on the dry-weather tires, moved right up behind Andretti for a while, but was more than six seconds behind on lap 40 when he spun, tapped one of the concrete barriers and stalled his engine.

Lady scribes ink Murphy

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves center fielder Dale Murphy said he doesn't like women reporters in the locker room, no matter what the commissioner's office says.

"I was hoping that women forcing their way in was just a passing fad," Murphy said after Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office ruled that the Braves must open their clubhouse to female reporters, even on the road.

"As far as I am concerned, it's a bad indication of where we are in the decision-making process. We have rights, too, don't we? I still see it as a moral question. It's wrong."

Since Joe Torre became manager in 1982, the Braves have quietly retreated to a previous policy that bars women from the clubhouse. Friday, Helene Elliott, who covers the New York Mets for Newsday, pressed the matter and won access in New York, where the Braves were playing a weekend series.

Murphy told The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution that the decision may limit access to him for all sports writers.
