Analysts predict tighter credit rules

By SALLY JACOBSEN
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — Despite fresh evidence the economy's growth is slowing, many analysts are predicting that fears of inflation may still tempt Federal Reserve policymakers to tighten credit just a bit at key meetings this week.

Such a move, these analysts say, would tend to keep interest rates high. In advance of secret discussions that begin Monday, the analysts contended that decisions on monetary policy would still be influenced by fears that the surprisingly strong economy would eventually kick up inflation rates.

"The Fed's main priority is to prevent the eventual reacceleration of inflation," said

Robert Gough, economist at the Lexington, Mass., consulting firm of Data Resources Inc. Because the nation has "paid a large price" over the past few years in bringing inflation under control "you can't be sure (Fed Chairman Paul) Volcker won't want to lose what gains have been made," he said.

But other analysts said that concerns about the effect of any further increase in interest rates, particularly on the debt-stricken Third World, might make the officials more hesitant about tighter credit restrictions.

Moreover, they said the favorable reports released Friday on wholesale inflation, industrial production and retail sales would prompt strong arguments against tighter credit restraints.

Allen Sinai, chief economist at Shearson Lehman-American Express Inc., said the reports suggested interest rates would be declining "since the Fed now is not likely to tighten." In a newsletter to clients last week, Sinai said that the weekly measure of the money supply was staying within the targets set by the Fed.

A tightening by the central bank in the growth in the money supply tends to produce higher interest rates, which in turn can help slow business expansion.

With additional credit restraints, analysts said, the prime lending rate of major U.S. banks would probably rise in coming months from the current 13 percent, which is the highest since October 1982.

Home mortgage rates and interest on auto and consumer loans would also bump up, said Bernard Markstein, financial economist at Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. The Fed officials met behind closed doors about eight times a year as members of the Federal Open Market Committee.

The talks on Monday and Tuesday are particularly important because the officials will not only review current monetary strategy but will also set their preliminary growth targets for the 1985 money supply.

Volcker will reveal those guidelines next week in his mid-year report to Congress. Minutes of the actual discussions won't be released for another six weeks, after the Open Market Committee's next meeting. The panel consists of five of the 12 regional Federal Reserve banks.

The Fed has been following a moderately tight credit policy in an effort to provide enough money to keep the economy growing but not too much to spark high inflation.

David Jones, economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a New York-based government securities dealer, predicted that proponents of tighter-credit would prevail with arguments that the economy is expanding too quickly for the second year of recovery and could lead to higher inflation next year.

The strong demand for credit by the federal government to finance the budget deficits and by private businesses and consumers will keep upward pressure on interest rates, he said.

On the other side, he said some Fed officials were sure to argue against any further tightening, pointing out that inflation rates have been unexpectedly low and noting signs

Daring escape leads nowhere for prisoners

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A daring Sunday afternoon escape from the Cassia County Jail ended in recapture for two maximum security prisoners.

For one of the pair, it was the second unsuccessful try for freedom in less than two weeks.

Undersheriff Billy Crystal identified the escapees as Allan Brant, 27, of Burley, and Donald Garibaldi, 29, a transient.

Brant was taken into custody by Burley city officers shortly after the escape while Garibaldi was found three hours later hiding in bushes a mere a block from the jail.

Garibaldi failed to make good an escape attempt in August of last year when he and another inmate jumped a fence in a walkway in the maximum security area of the jail.

Crystal said although Garibaldi and Brant were housed in separate cells in maximum security, they were able to communicate.

He said they pried heavy-gauge metal sheeting from the cell wall and were then able to cut through a wall and into a plumbing area of the building. From there they cut through the ceiling and broke a hole in the roof to escape, Crystal said the escape took place about 3:15 p.m.

The two inmates ran to the back of the law enforcement building where Brant knocked down a woman and fled in her pickup truck.

Brant was stopped by Burley city police after they fired at three rounds of ammunition into the car forcing the vehicle from the roadway. Brant then left the vehicle and fled on foot, running into a Smith's Food King store in the Overland Shopping Center, where he was apprehended.

Crystal said Brant was arrested in the store's pharmacy department as he allegedly attempted to remove pills from the shelves.

The undersheriff said roadblocks were set up immediately in and around Burley and on roads and highways throughout Magic Valley. When it appeared Garibaldi had not left the area, Crystal said, a systematic search of buildings, abandoned structures and yards began.

Burley police officer Dave Tracy was assisting in the search when he saw the orange jail coveralls through some bushes at the edge of a parking lot. The location was only about a block from the Law Enforcement Center.

Salvador rebels ambush train, enforce transportation ban

By ARTHUR ALLEN
The Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR — Leftist guerrillas dynamited an empty freight train passing through an isolated area north of San Salvador and then raked it with automatic rifle fire, killing 21 treasury policemen aboard, authorities said Sunday.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said guerrillas detonated powerful dynamite charges as the train passed Saturday through the hamlet of San Antonio Grande, 25 miles north of the capital.

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified for security reasons, said 21 of 25 treasury police guarding the train were killed, and the other four were wounded.

He said there were unconfirmed reports that four civilians were killed. Gabriel Martinez, a spokesman for the National Railroad Co., said six railroad employees were wounded, none seriously.

The attack came at the end of a week-long guerrilla ban on transportation through this country of 5 million. Rebels on Monday ordered all traffic — including highway vehicles and trains — to stop.

The blast derailed the train and caused a fire that destroyed the engine, said Martinez. The train's 10 freight cars also were heavily damaged, he said.

Rebels then sprayed the train with automatic rifle fire, he said.

Rebels have been staging frequent attacks in the past few months in northern San Salvador province near the Tempa River, where Saturday's ambush took place.

It was the second guerrilla attack on trains this week. On Wednesday, rebels derailed a freight train near Guazapa, 12 miles south of San Antonio Grande. No one was hurt in that attack.

The train derailed Saturday was traveling to Metapan, 69 miles northwest of San Salvador, to pick up a load of cement. The destroyed engine was one of only five left of the 20 owned by the national railroad in 1973, when the civil war began. Others have been destroyed in similar ways.

The boycott was largely successful in the four eastern provinces — Usulután, San Miguel, La Unión and Morazan — and in part of northern El Salvador.

Several serious attacks have occurred in the area this year.

The rebels' Radio Venceremos said Sunday that traffic was allowed to resume Saturday.

Santos Heriberto Jimenez, bus dispatcher in San Miguel, 85 miles east of San Salvador, said rebels removed their roadblocks from the Pan-American and coastal highways Saturday.

"The buses started rolling Saturday and traffic is back to normal today," Jimenez said.

However, the order apparently did not reach or was ignored by those who attacked the train.

The Popular Liberation Front, considered one of the toughest among the five guerrilla armies fighting the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government, has operated in the area and established base camps in the Limpia River valley and southern Chalatenango province near San Antonio Grande.

In March, guerrillas killed 18 troops and civilians aboard a passenger train, also at San Antonio Grande.

Price cuts benefits fuel users

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The national average price of gasoline has dropped for the ninth consecutive week, and the decreases were caused by increased oil production following attacks on oil tankers in the Persian Gulf, an industry analyst said Sunday.

From April through July 13, the average retail price of gasoline, including taxes, declined by 2 1/2 cents to just under $1.19 per gallon, said Dan Lundberg, publisher of the weekly Lundberg Letter. The wholesale price has dropped 4.3 cents, he added.

The shipping attacks, begun in April by Iran and Iraq as part of their border war, apparently have disrupted the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' agreement to limit production to 17.5 million barrels

Opposition makes Mondale flinch, reinstate party chief

By DAVID ESPRO
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Walter F. Mondale, flinching from a confrontation on the eve of the Democratic National Convention, reinstated party chairman Charles T. Manatt on Sunday — 24 hours after he fired him.

Mondale thus moved to quell a revolt among party leaders that threatened to sour the excitement greeting his selection of Rep. Geraldine Ferraro as vice presidential running mate.

"I think he's made a terrifically good choice," said Manatt, whose dismissal outraged party officials streaming into San Francisco for the Monday opening of the convention.

SEN. GARY HART

Considered platform attack

The startling turnabout came as campaign rivals Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson weighed a joint attack on the party platform at the convention's Tuesday night session. Hart said his main concern was to pass a plank ruling out military intervention in Central America.

Ms. Ferraro, with Mondale at a weekend retreat at South Lake Tahoe, said in an interview she expects the issues of war and peace to highlight the fall race with President Reagan. "If we don't start negotiating, it's all over," she said. "I'd hope we'd reach out to the Soviets."

The convention city lived up to its boisterous reputation as more than 50,000 gay men and women marched in bright sunshine to a parking lot rally across the street from the convention center.

The only trouble was some "pushing and shoving" between the homosexuals and a handful of fundamentalist hecklers along the parade route, but no one was injured or

Labor union, homosexuals hold separate demonstrations

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — About 150,000 labor union members and 50,000 homosexuals held festive, sign-waving marches through downtown San Francisco on Sunday, the eve of the Democratic National Convention.

The one-mile labor parade, billed as a non-political "unity" event, took a strongly partisan tone, with signs attacking President Reagan and boosting Walter Mondale. A few hours later, gay rights marchers began a two-mile trek carrying banners opposing discrimination and demanding federal funds to combat AIDS.

Police reported no serious trouble at either of the marches, held in bright sunshine a day before Monday's scheduled start of the four-day convention.

There was some "pushing and shoving" between the homosexuals and a handful of fundamentalist hecklers along the parade route, but no one was injured or arrested, said police spokesman Dan Lawson. At one point, a 15-year-old boy driver halted, "Jesus loves you" and drew cheers from the marchers.

The homosexuals' march ended in a rally at Moscone Center where the convention will be held. Speakers criticized the Moral Majority and called for gay rights.

In the first march, representatives of 50 labor councils, many dressed in distinctive uniforms, accompanied vintage fire trucks and cars and Chinese Market Street parade route lined with colored bunting.

"Labor is making a statement of solidarity," said one marcher, Otis Becker of Oakland, who wore a Rev. Jesse Jackson button.

Streets were crowded with buses, in addition to a dozen huge tractor-trailers brought by Teamsters to the parade.

Blowout party just one part of Democratic convention

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Willie Brown's party for the Democratic National Convention will fill a hall larger than the convention itself — two warehouses 40 yards wide and a quarter mile long on a pier in San Francisco Bay.

It's what you would expect from the flamboyant speaker of the California Assembly, the son of a Mineola, Texas, railroad porter and domestic worker who today is second only to the governor in political power in California.

As one of the nation's most powerful black politicians, the 50-year-old Brown is known for his quick mind, powerful oratory and a lifestyle of conspicuous consumption, financed by a lucrative law practice and epitomized by expensive suits and sports cars and lavish entertainment.

In past conventions, Brown showcased his political skills. This year, he is putting together what he promises will be the largest party in this party-loving city's history.

Brown chaired George McGovern's California delegation to the 1972 Democratic National Convention in Miami Beach, pleading dramatically to a national television audience to "give me back my delegation" in the crucial credentials fight that gave McGovern the nomination that year.

This year, Brown has played a less conspicuous political role. He was national co-chairman of U.S. Sen. Aaa Cranston's presidential campaign, and has remained neutral since his fellow Californian withdrew from the race in March.

But that won't keep the San Francisco legislator out of the spotlight.

He is hosting, with the San Francisco Convention Promotions Fund, the most elaborate of more than 200 parties planned in connection with the convention.

The guest list includes all 5,246 delegates and alternates and their spouses, 350 members of San Francisco's consular corps, about 2,000 other national and local VIPs and 1,200 journalists.

To serve and entertain the estimated 10,000 to 15,000 guests there will be 10 stages for entertainers, 11 dining areas featuring different ethnic menus and 20 bars with 110 bartenders.

The site of Brown's party is a pair of drab grey 58-year-old warehouses on Pier 45, which stretches 3,000 feet northwest from Fisherman's Wharf into the Golden Gate channel.

Ferraro focusing on issues of war and peace

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (AP) — Rep. Geraldine Ferraro said Sunday that issues of war and peace will be the most important in the upcoming campaign for the White House, and that she wants the American public to judge her "by the same standards as they judge the guys."

"I've put a lot of time and energy into my job," the New York congresswoman said in an interview with news service reporters. "I've worked on issues in the House, done some traveling. I think they'll have a tough time criticizing my experience."

Ms. Ferraro said she was not chosen to be Walter F. Mondale's running mate "just because I am a woman."

"There was more to it than that — my strength as a prosecutor, someone with the ability to take on issues," she said. "If I don't know what there is to know, I'll find it."

Ms. Ferraro was sitting on the deck of the rustic retreat in the High Sierras that she and her family rented for the pre-convention week. Her two daughters, Donna, 22, and Laura, 18, sat nearby listening to their mother's response to the questions.

90-percent attendance rule slowly gaining acceptance

By The Associated Press

POCATELLO — Reaction from Idaho school districts to the 90-percent attendance rule has tempered, and school administrators are hammering out their own rules for this fall.

The new rule provides that students missing more than nine days per semester shall lose credit for their classes.

"There were some districts very upset for adopting such a stringent rule," Superintendent of Schools Jerry Evans said. "But with very few exceptions they are attempting to implement the policy within its spirit and intent."

Under the new rule, students involved in any activity, school sanctioned or otherwise, will be unexcused. In the past, students involved in athletics, speech, drama, music, debate, other competitions or field trips were excused from attending all classes for those activities.

"What we're attempting to do is raise the target," Evans said. "We are going to expect more of students and schools to make certain our young people are leaving secondary schools well prepared."

A number of local administrators at first feared the new policy would emasculate extracurricular activities, but now say the ruling will be beneficial to the educational process. Jack Thompson, Pocatello School District assistant superintendent, said a new activities policy will be in place by this fall.

"It was true that attendance was reaching a point of relaxing more than it should have been," Thompson said. "We are interested in eliminating these unnecessary absences." Extracurricular activities on the state level have been curtailed and rescheduled to comply with the new ruling, said Dick Stickle, executive director of Idaho High School Activities Association.

This year's state high school cross country tournaments have been moved to Saturday afternoons, the volleyball tournaments will not start until Friday afternoons and most football contests have been moved to Saturdays.

Spring schedules also have been altered, with the state tennis tournament reduced in size and the state drama competition eliminated completely. Stickle said speech activities on the state level have been pared down, but debate competitors will remain the same.

Injuries claim 15-year-old

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — An 15-year-old Idaho Falls boy has died of head injuries received in an accident earlier this week.

State police said Barry Rex Bardsley died Friday in an Idaho Falls hospital of injuries received Tuesday.

Police said Bardsley was driving down an asphalt street in Idaho Falls when his right rear tire blew out. The tire rim sunk in asphalt that was soft from summer heat, forcing the car to turn sideways and flip over, police said.

Bardsley was thrown from the vehicle, police said.

Texans fight to adjust to drought, bad crops

DALLAS (AP) — Businesses along Texas' Guadalupe River are buying torrents of water to revive tourism. Streets in Corpus Christi are patrolled for water-thieves. One small town on the brink of losing its supply built a 7½-mile emergency water pipeline. And mandatory water rationing starts Monday in Austin, one of dozens of cities imposing conservation measures.

From the Red River along the Oklahoma state line to the Rio Grande along the Mexican border, the story is much the same: the midsection of Texas has gone bone-dry this summer. In what some say could prove to be the worst drought in 30 years.

"The last beneficial rain we had was in May of 1982," said Paul Werner, water superintendent in the coastal city of Corpus Christi. The city is patrolling mandatory rationing and patrol the streets with non-police officials hunting offenders.

"We now have some of the brownest lawns in the state," he said. "What we really need is a hurricane to fill the reservoirs."

Corpus Christi, which built a second reservoir too late to collect any water before the drought, is not alone.

"The drought, combined with rapid growth that has depleted water supplies, has forced 67 cities and towns into water conservation measures, according to the Texas Department of Water Resources.

Austin's city manager last week announced that a mandatory program would begin Monday. San Antonio, the nation's 10th-largest city, is on a voluntary plan. The town of Newcastle rushed a 7½-mile pipeline into service when one lake dried and the other dropped to 2 feet. Abilene saw cattle ranchers line up recently for a marathon sale of stock they could neither feed nor water.

"It all boils down to this: people all over this state are having problems right now. Just about everybody's hurting," said Bill Hoffman, chief of the Water Use Technology unit of the Water Resources Department.

For two years, Mother Nature has been cruel to Texas.

Choice of Ferraro appeals to tradition

That was a refreshingly dignified and straightforward appearance Walter Mondale and his proposed running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, made Thursday when Mr. Mondale announced his selection and Mrs. Ferraro announced her eagerness to run.

It occurred to us as we watched it that one wonderful, unanticipated benefit of Mr. Mondale's decision to name a woman was that, given the sensitivities concerning male and female roles and relationships these days, especially in professional and political life, the traditional Grovel Factor, usually so pronounced in these affairs, was wholly absent.

There was none of that "Oh, I was so surprised and thrilled that this great, great man should have chosen little, little me" sort of thing that male vice presidential candidates have so faithfully and repulsively repeated over the years. Hooray!

There is more to hooray about in the unadorned fact that another barrier has been broken. It is richly deserved to be. The idea that a woman, by virtue of her gender, is unsuited to hold the highest federal office is wrong. It always was wrong, but now it is also outmoded. You do not have to endorse a Mondale-Ferraro ticket or believe Rep. Ferraro to be a superbly qualified prospective vice president or president to accept this much. We think Mr. Mondale has done a very good thing.

What about her qualifications for office? In this space, several weeks ago, when the will-or-won't argument was raging, we observed that Rep. Ferraro, then being disparaged as one of the unqualified female contenders, was in fact better qualified than some of her-male-predecessors we could think of, including—notoriously—one who made it: Spiro T. Agnew.

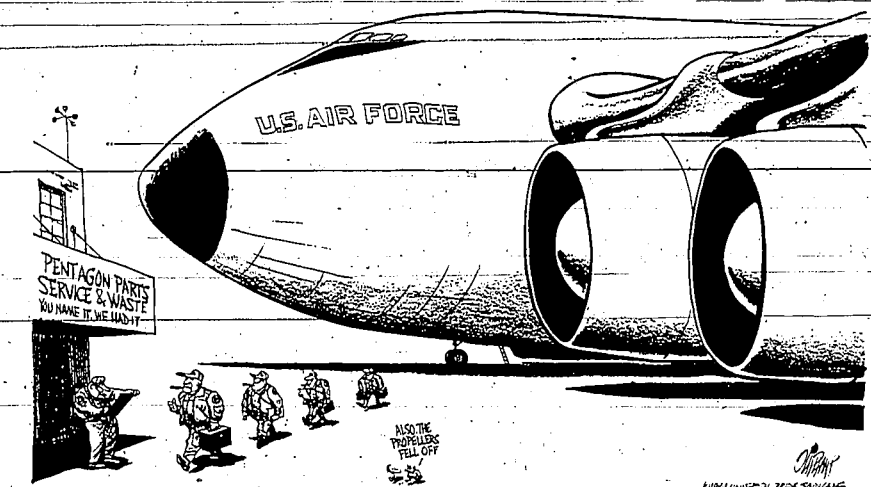

But to say that is only to begin to address the question, not to answer it. Rep. Ferraro will have to be judged on this score in the weeks ahead in a hardheaded, unsentimental way. And she will have to be judged on her background, training and capacity to do the job. That goes with the territory. It is a prospective president — i.e., vice president — we are voting for here, nothing else. The election should not be seen as a referendum on whether women as such are fit to hold high office. They are. The election will concern this woman.

Beyond that, the politics of it were fascinating. An ethnic (Italian) pitch, and an emphasis on Rep. Ferraro's indomitably working-class origins, instincts and values showed plenty about the nature of the campaign to come. Mr. Mondale has, in one sense, gambled.

In another, he has retrenched some; for Rep. Ferraro's undisputed appeal was to those more conservative and traditionalist Democrats who have been worried, if not driven out, by the more exotic, free-form elements of the party and its doctrines in recent years. We have a suspicion that when the novelty of having a female candidate has faded, this aspect of her candidacy will be seen as the salient one.

'SCRAP IT AND ORDER A NEW ONE - THE ASHTRAYS ARE FULL.'

Send illegal Salvadorans back home

WASHINGTON — According to current estimates, nearly 500,000 Salvadorans are living in the United States as illegal immigrants. As the conflict in El Salvador continues, there have been urgent calls for suspending the deportation of this entire group of people.

While these requests have been based on compassion and charity, they have also been founded on mistaken assumptions and undertaken without consideration for the full consequences. There are reasonable, humanitarian alternatives to sending Salvadorans back to contested areas in their homeland, but allowing all of them — refugees or economic migrants — to stay in the United States until the conflict subsides is not one of them.

El Salvador has traditionally generated the second largest flow of illegal aliens, exceeded only by Mexico.

These "pre-conflict" Salvadorans are estimated to constitute 350,000 of the approximately 500,000 undocumented Salvadorans here today.

Almost all Salvadorans come to the United States by land routes. In doing so, they must cross at least two countries to reach our border. All of them must pass through Mexico and Guatemala, and some also travel through Honduras. Both Mexico and Honduras have allowed "safe haven" for Salvadorans, and the U.N.'s High Commission for Refugees has established a presence in each country. In a legal sense, then, it is these nations — that is, the country of safe first asylum — not the United States.

While it may be true that many Salvadorans left their homeland because they perceived their lives to be in danger, they did not travel 2,000 miles through the friendly and accepting country of Mexico because of a continuing threat of personal violence.

Their reasons for traveling through Mexico are reasonable — to find better employment opportunities or to live with friends or family in the United States — but this is the motivation of most legal and illegal immigrants around the world, not of the true refugees.

The United States already has a mechanism for assisting those persons who would face persecution if they were returned to their homelands: political asylum. Based on the above definition, political asylum affords those present in the United States a specific administrative and judicial process by which to make their claim of persecution if they are deported.

Undeniably, political asylum is a difficult test to pass. The low approval rates for political asylum worldwide are caused not by "political prejudice," or "covering up our involvement in Central America," but by the exacting international standards on who may be considered to be a "refugee." Of the 500,000 or so Salvadorans in this nation today, only 20,000 to 30,000 have applied for political asylum.

The suspension of deportation of all Salvadorans illegally present in the United States would be a most curious policy. It would require simply that the United States NOT deport those people who clearly are not refugees, who clearly are economic migrants, and who could return home without any significant risk; it would also send a quite explicit message to the people of El Salvador: all you have to do is get here; once you do, we will allow you to stay regardless of your circumstances. Given the tattered disarray of current U.S. immigration laws, this would be an absurd precedent.

What should the United States do with deportable Salvadorans? First, we should return those who would choose to go voluntarily, who express no significant apprehension over returning.

Second, the United States should remove those Salvadorans who express significant fears of returning and place them in refugee camps in Honduras, or in secure displaced-person camps in El Salvador.

Finally, we should develop guidelines that would identify certain classes of people who might well be subject to particular risk if returned to El Salvador. There is evidence that this may be true of teachers and medical personnel.

We must not distort our laws concerning political asylum. Serious risks are taken by those who would grant "sanctuary" to those who are not refugees. Such an indiscriminate selection process would only further the "compassion fatigue," which will lessen our nation's willingness to respond to the millions of truly persecuted humans all over the planet.

Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., is co-author of the major immigration reform bill now before Congress.

Hellar starts quickly in race for Craig's seat

BOISE — All of a sudden, the Democrats' prospects for capturing Idaho's 1st District congressional seat appear to be brighter.

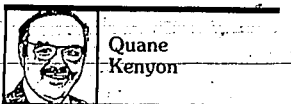

William "Bill" Hellar, a 40-year-old Coeur d'Alene businessman, has emerged as the party's replacement candidate in an effort to oust Republican Larry Craig.

Party leaders last weekend picked Hellar from a field of three candidates to replace Fred Cramer, the party's original candidate. Cramer died in a traffic accident last month.

Hellar may have put new life into a political race that most Democratic Party leaders earlier almost had conceded to Craig.

The revised 1st District contest will pit two candidates remarkably alike. Both are good public speakers. They're within a couple of years of the same age.

Both men have college degrees in political science. And both have done graduate work in economics, Craig in economics and politics of developing nations and Hellar in economic development.

Further, a look at the May 22 primary election results indicates economics may hold the key to the outcome.

Craig did badly in the northern Idaho areas hit hardest by the recession. In Shoshone County, where the mining industry has been dealt a series of setbacks in the last two years, Cramer — almost an unknown in politics — drew 2,467 votes while Craig got 456.

In Nez Perce County, where the timber industry is suffering, Craig got 747 votes in the primary and Cramer got 3,607. Craig piled up two-thirds of his primary election votes in two counties, and Hellar says that's where he will concentrate his efforts.

Craig got more than 12,000 votes in Ada County — about 8,500 more than Cramer — and piled up about the same plurality in Canyon County. Hellar is a self-made businessman, who started his Coeur d'Alene wholesale hardware company almost from scratch a few years ago.

He says he intends to dwell on that background, telling 1st District voters that Craig doesn't understand how badly the recession has hurt the district's main industries.

Hellar, a former Marine, is full of enthusiasm starting the campaign and won't talk about being the "underdog" or "sacrificial lamb" to the two-term Republican.

Quane Kenyon covers Idaho politics and state government for The Associated Press.

Letters/ Hansen record in Congress praised

Rep. Hansen is effective

One little article appeared in the Times-News on May 3 in regard to Democrat Richard Stallings being accused of finance reporting violations. The report shows Stallings had received more than the $5,000 legal limit from the National Education Association. The report, covering the first three months of this year, shows Stallings received $5,000 in cash and an "in-kind" contribution of $288.49 for polling information. Stallings merely dismissed the problem as a "clerk's error." He said the contribution should have been listed for the general election, not the primary. "A clerk checked the wrong box, that's all it is," he said. He has filed an amended report. Hum! This report was in March, well before the primary and even though he had no primary opposition, one wonders if he would have retorted if someone had made it public.

These self-righteous individuals and groups that watch Congressman George Hansen with a microscope would probably have overlooked it, too, just as they are now. Can you imagine what would have happened to Hansen if this had been his clerk's error? We all know the answer to that one.

House with 80 percent, Craig 77 percent and 18th in the House and McClure 57 percent in the Senate. The National Taxpayer's Union which has 130,000 members nationwide, cited Sen. Steve Symms and Rep. George Hansen and Rep. Larry Craig as "taxpayers' best friends" for their votes against increased spending and higher taxes during 1983. Their decision was on 202 votes in the House and 168 votes in the Senate—virtually every vote that affected the federal budget last year.

I think it's interesting that Congressman Hansen is being constantly harassed by the media and other left-leaning groups and individuals for not being effective. On the contrary, I believe that this is precisely the reason they harass him, because he is effective despite the great odds he faces in the Democrat-controlled House of Representatives.

Congressman Hansen's voting record and ratings is a superior 100 percent, with leading public interest groups including the American Security Council, National Security Index, Citizen's Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms, Chamber of Commerce of the United States; National Alliance of Senior Citizens; March for Life Anti-Abortion Index; National Federation of Independent Business; National Christian Action Coalition; Business Industry Political Action Committee; Associated Contractors; Liberty Lobby; Liberty Ledger; Independent Petroleum Association of America; Review of the News Conservative Index, Nuclear Energy Council of America, and National Associated Businessmen-Economy Voting Record. In addition, he checks up 96 percent with American Conservative Union, 93 percent with Committee for the Survival of a Free Congress Conservative Register, 97 percent with National Taxpayers' Union-Rating of Congress, 95 percent Americans for Constitutional Action, 94 percent with National Association of Manufacturers and an A+ with the National Rifle Association.

Add to all this his many successes for constituent problems he's helped solve, and House Ethics Committee member and Utah's Congressman Jim Hansen's (no relation) recent statement in praising his colleague as an "honorable man" and "George is the lightning rod of the House. When there is a big thunder storm on, George runs up on the ceiling and stands there with a lightning rod while the rest of us run down into the cellar." Idahoans are proud of George and Connie Hansen. That's why we keep sending him to represent us in Washington. When will the media and others get the message? SANDRA CAPPES Jerome

There are rules and regulations that have to be followed, but there are exceptions to the rule once in a while. I feel we all have an obligation to the youth and children, and when we see something that isn't right, we should reach out and do what we can to make it right. I feel this is being done and I want to thank those people responsible for calling me and trying to clear this up. I want to clear up one fact — I was not wanting the money back. My chief concern was for the safety and welfare of the children. Even though there were facilities where the children could wait, they were told to walk, and that's what they did.

Porn movies just 'filth' In my opinion, the main reason people write and make pornographic and violent movies is simply because they haven't got the imagination to make decent movies. Either that, or they have very perverted minds.

I believe that if some people would produce movies less violent and sexually explicit, the producers might make just as much money. I would not allow my children to see such movies. Certainly would not visualize such filth. RONYA CLARK Twin Falls

Budget reflects city's perseverance

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The preliminary 1985 budget for the city of Twin Falls, released by City Manager Tom Courtney last week, shows once again how the city has weathered recent tough economic times.

By means of cutbacks in service, the city responded to the voter-approved One Percent property tax initiative in 1978 that trimmed its major source of funding.

And through conservative budgeting, the city continues to live well within its means and maintain balances in most major funds, providing security against unforeseen circumstances.

But while these policies may be admirable, they generally do not appear to the public eye, and this is why it is important city residents may begin to see more tangible benefits in the year to come.

The 1985 budget proposes "drawing down" $875,000 in surplus reserves, generated by tight management. Together with a variety of other sources, including $300,000 in revenue-sharing money from the state, this will result in $2.4 million being available next year for a one-time effort to respond to some of the city's most serious capital needs.

Unfortunately, $2.4 million is not much to a city whose streets are cracking, sewer lines rotting and park facilities in disrepair.

The other side of the fiscal conservatism that has given the city an incredibly low debt service of only 2.2 percent of its budget is there are no quick fixes.

Although city finances remain well managed, residents should not expect rapid general improvements next year.

Similarly, the city's operational budget is not supposed to provide better service, only protect against losing services currently provided.

While the draft 1985 budget may seem to lackluster because it follows previously established spending policies, 1985 could still be a watershed year.

At a special election Aug. 14, voters uphold the Twin Falls City Council's March decision to consolidate police and fire services, 1985 will be the first complete year under a Public Safety Department.

Police and fire protection are two of the most expensive services the city provides, accounting for $2.7 million of the total $3.2 million in next year's proposed general fund. "I cannot underestimate the importance this first year represents to the ultimate success of the program," Courtney wrote concerning consolidation in his introduction to the budget.

The savings envisioned are long-term — responding to the increasing cost of police and fire protection in a growing city by trying to use manpower more efficiently. That is why there are few savings projected for next year, although the budget does propose trimming manpower among the two forces by two

Art of flintknapping recaptured

Students join archaeologists in expedition

By ROBERT DOYLE
Times-News correspondent

STANLEY — These weren't prehistoric men and women who sat around a campfire at the base of the Sawtooth Mountains last week, but the tediously crafted spearpoints, arrowheads, and hide scrapers they made, would have been prized by those Stone Age men who first perfected the art of chipping and shaping obsidian.

Five university students, accompanied by professional archaeologists, were learning flintknapping by doing. They were recreating the past by using materials and techniques similar to those used by ancient people to make the tools and hunting implements essential to survival.

Led by Dr. Jeff Flenniken, an archaeology professor from sponsoring Washington State University, the group has spent five weeks at their Iron Creek Campground site, four miles out of Stanley.

"We chose this site because it's so breathtakingly beautiful and the Forest Service is so unbelievably cooperative," said Flenniken. "Since we could go anywhere we wished, why not come here to do our flintknapping. The obsidian we use is from Oregon, so we just pack it in crates and bring it along with us."

The results of five weeks of chipping, pounding and flaking lie scattered about the researchers — mounds of obsidian flakes called "debitage," a french word meaning waste. It is this so-called waste which intrigues these flintknappers, though visitors to the camp would naturally be more attracted to the finished products that are displayed on a large camp table.

Says Dr. Flenniken, "what is chipped away and left on the ground tells us much about the technique being used, and that technique is a real cultural clue to prehistoric people."

In attempting to emulate those same techniques, hoping in the process to find a particular cultural group, "gimmick," Flenniken and his associates have probably done more actual flintknapping than the people they are attempting to copy. "Gene Titus, a Jerome flintknapper, may be the best pressure flaker that ever lived, and that includes the members of the cultures we're studying," says Flenniken.

To prove his point, Flenniken shared some of Titus's work. Then Flenniken and Titus sat down, and combined their efforts in making a large spearpoint, Flenniken shaping the rough outline, Titus using a bone implement to chip off flakes of obsidian — with sharp, precisely directed, blows.

As happens to all flintknappers, prehistoric or otherwise, one of Titus's blows split the spearpoint in half, and the process had to begin again. The same disappointment that crossed Titus's face, has undoubtedly passed across the countenance of other such craftsmen dating back thousands, even tens of thousands of years.

"There's a gimmick and we're constantly searching for the gimmick that each cultural group used to create the implement distinctive to those people," says Flenniken.

How long does it take to make a useable arrowhead — anywhere from five minutes to one hour, depending on the size and the pattern desired. On the display table there were knives and cutting implements as long as two feet, and arrowheads the size of the nail on your little finger. Many of the cutting tools were razor sharp, and exceedingly thin.

The late Don Crabtree of Kimberly, a renowned flintknapper and the 1968 founder of the flintknapping school, had obsidian blades that he and Gene Titus made used as surgical scalpels when Dr. Crabtree had heart surgery.

Such obsidian scalpels are now being used with greater frequency, particularly by eye surgeons, who appreciate the clean, almost imperceptible cut that is narrower and heals more rapidly than incisions made with steel scalpels — a contribution to the Modern Age by Stone Age people.

This year the group was joined by Kim Akerman of Western Australia,

Flint enthusiasts enjoy not only their search, but also the camaraderie of their fellows who lives in a country where Stone Age people still exist, allowing Akerman to squat down and observe flintknapping by aboriginals who still live in a world similar to North America's extinct prehistoric tribes.

Akerman's knowledge is invaluable for he is the only one of the flintknappers at Iron Creek who has had access to such a living laboratory.

Lunched over their work, stone and bone implements in hand, these modern flintknappers are only distinguished by their dress; their patio chairs and their coffee cups, for the sound of stone on stone has been the same for centuries.

Waitress desires to be heard

Publication will start circulating

RUPERT — Waitresses have been invisible long enough, says Vickie Harmon.

To remedy the situation, Harmon, who has been a waitress for the past four years at The Pancake House in Rupert, is beginning a grassroots publication this week, entitled "The Waitress Station."

The newsletter, which will be published twice a month, is Harmon's idea, but credit for the title goes to her husband, Bill, a sporting-goods manager.

"I had been thinking about writing a newspaper like this for a long time," she says. "A friend finally said, 'You have mentioned this idea twice already; now why don't you just do it!'"

"So I did," says Harmon. As far as she knows, Harmon says "there has never been a publication specifically geared to the needs and interests of waitresses. Restaurant owners and managers have their magazines, but there is nothing for us," she adds.

"Many times, waitresses are invisible people, which is unfortunate," says Harmon. "Customers have a tendency to ignore a waitress; she isn't a real person to them. 'I hope to show in my paper that we are real people. We have families, lifestyles and problems, just like anyone else,'" says Harmon.

She goes on to point out that waitressing is a refined skill, that the loudmouthed, gum-chewing hash-flinger sometimes depicted on television creates a false image for the public.

"Customers are people too. They can be difficult at times," she explains. "We have to use psychology to deal with them successfully." "At times, we have to baby them, to be sensitive to their moods as well as to our own. On a bad day, for instance, we have to be careful not to show that we feel bad."

The newsletter, designed to increase the visibility of waitresses, will do so by pointing out issues faced by these people in their day-to-day dealings with the public and with each other, says Harmon.

"We will feature items such as interesting experiences that happen to waitresses," she says. Harmon gives as an example the Russian family she served last week. They showed up at 7 a.m., requesting cheeseburgers, chicken nuggets and green salads with thousand island dressing.

"The father of the family didn't know what a salad was until he saw

TWIN FALLS — Today, she has a good job, a great marriage, two children and a life enviable for being at once peaceful and full.

But only a few years ago, she found herself in such a cycle of violence and abuse that she could not free herself. Her family couldn't help her. Counselors and police couldn't help her. And her boyfriend, the man she depended on — the one who was beating her — couldn't help her.

The violence didn't stop until she killed him.

It's difficult to remember, even now, she says, that a nice woman from a good middle class home could have gotten her life so tangled in a web of brutality that she could not work her way out. She is still angry — angry about the abuse she endured and afraid for the Magic Valley women who endure similar abuse today.

Her relationship with her boyfriend began with no glaring warnings; no indication it would be different from the dozens of courtships that begin each week in the Magic Valley.

She says she even knew him before she started dating him. They had mutual friends and she liked him.

"He was the perfect gentleman. He wined me and dined me and arranged for babysitters. That was what I wanted in my life then."

Her former husband had warned her that her new boyfriend was trouble.

"But who listens to ex-husbands?" she says now. And so she moved in with her new boyfriend.

But now she says he was right. Not too long after moving in, she and her boyfriend disagreed about disciplining her child. "It was a minor argument. Then, whap! He backhanded me and the next thing I remembered I was getting up from by the stove."

That was the end of the argument — she consented to discipline the child his way. But it was only the beginning of the violence.

"I got up the next day and thought, 'Whoa, what happened last night? Then it happened a second and a third and a fourth and a fifth time and I can't be exact about it anymore.'"

At first he never slugged her. But he slapped her hard enough to give her black eyes. Another time he kicked her foot, causing nerve damage that required a trip to the doctor.

"I told the people at work that we were just wrestling, and it happened. The black eyes were harder to explain."

She says she was scared; but that she also blamed herself.

"In my own mind I justified his hitting me, by my being too demanding."

On a deeper level, she says she considered the beatings to be her punishment for ending a first marriage, one that read like an advertisement in a bridal magazine compared to this relationship.

There were still good times. At least that's what she told friends and a sister who urged her to leave.

"If I could just control his drinking; you just don't know him, we're just having some bad times; I contribute to the arguments" were all excuses she gave for staying with him.

And although he would not admit that his beatings amounted to more than minor scuffles, she says he was always sweet and apologetic afterward. Over and over again he promised to never hit her again.

"I wanted to believe him. I wanted him to love me," she says, adding she told herself there were other reasons to stay with him.

"I couldn't see an end to it. I couldn't get out of it financially. I had a child to support."

But a snapping that left her face raw and bleeding finally convinced her to find low-income housing and move out with the support of a brother and friend. Her boyfriend laughed when she told him, she says. "But later he begged her to come back, agreeing to counseling. But the counselor she found warned that he probably would not show up, she says. The counselor was right. That could have been the turning point in her life, had she listened to him, she says. "If he doesn't come in for counseling, get away from him right now. Don't stick around," she quotes the counselor.

Her boyfriend never did meet with the counselor. Instead, one day he showed up with a new job that took him out of town during the week, he charmed his way into her apartment.

"It wasn't too hard," she says, noting she had little self-esteem left.

"Someone keeps telling you you're a gutter snipe, you believe it. I felt low, I deserved what I got. What the god, she says, were more severe beatings, most of which he could not remember in the morning, even though one left her with a broken leg.

"He'd roll in Friday at 5 or 6, drunk. There was nothing I could do right, nothing my daughter could do OK. I'd take that for so long. Then I'd get fed up and get beat up.

"We'd tell each other we were bad for each other. He was still telling me he had never hit another woman. He'd leave, stay away for a few days or a week and then he'd be back." She says if she didn't let him in, he would kick in the door.

There were people trying to help her. But "at that time it was hard to imagine getting back on my feet."

"My boss kept telling me, why don't you care enough about yourself to get out... I was really unhappy, so was my child," she says, adding that the child "would say things like you promised if he hit you again, you'd leave."

Part of the reason she could not leave was she had no support structure of family and friends left. He had done the best to drive them away, attempting to beat up her girlfriend and threatening a sister who reported him for mental abuse of the child, she says.

His family knew about the abuse, but did not intervene even when she showed up at holiday gatherings when we feel like crying.

"One of the biggest put-downs is to walk up to a table wearing the brightest smile you can muster and have a grouchy customer say 'What are you grinning about?'" she illustrates.

ings with a black eye or his brother walked in during a beating and she begged for help... In his family, no one argued with what the head of the household said or did, she says.

She did call the police for help, at least three or four times, she says. One time she remembers clearly was when he came home drunk and placed a cake on her daughters' head.

"I told the police I wanted him in jail. The police officer said, 'You're a fool to do it. We'll arrest him, his mother or father will get him out and he'll come back and get you.'"

So the police found a place for him to spend the night away from the apartment. But 30 minutes later, he came back and beat her.

She is a small woman and says she never tried to fight back. "This is how I fought," she says, cringing with her arms over her face.

The last time, she fought back. It was after two years of increasing violence by him against her, and increasing frustration she felt about what to do and how to get out of the nightmare.

She had had an argument about whether they would visit friends. He left, but came back drunk several hours later at night.

He crashed back into the apartment in the early hours of the morning, yanked her out of bed and hit her. She picked up a shotgun he used on a recent hunting trip, she says, closed her eyes and pulled the trigger.

Two years of violence ended. Charges against her were dropped after a short investigation.

"That was three years ago. Today," she says, she has learned to quit walking hunched over as if expecting a blow.

She's not quite living happily ever after. There's the guilt that she killed someone and the fear that she may be harassed still by people who remember the shooting, she says.

But her life is better, with a new husband and her job. She knows she can be happy.

That's why she agreed to talk about her experience. She says she wishes most that she had listened to the counselor who told her to never see him again. It was a moment at which her misery could have ended.

What she hopes, by telling her story, is that other victims will have the courage to seize that moment.

include advice to new waitresses and discussion of political issues such as the much contested 8-percent tips allocation imposed upon low-paid waitresses by the Internal Revenue Service, she says.

"I feel strongly enough about something, I will write about it," she says.

Famed general to visit Idaho

BOISE — Gen. William Westmoreland, former commander of American forces in Vietnam from 1964 to 1968, will speak in Boise Wednesday at a public forum to raise money for the Idaho Vietnam Veterans Leadership Program.

After joining the Army in 1956, Westmoreland climbed the military ranks in World War II and the Korean War and eventually attained the position of Army Chief of Staff, which he held from 1968 to 1972. In his long career, he earned a number of military awards from both the U.S. and foreign countries like China, Japan and South Korea.

The IVLVP, which was founded three years ago, helps Vietnam veterans readjust to American society by educating them about their veterans' benefits, helping them find employment and referring them to proper psychological, legal, business and employment counseling, says Max Brown, director of the program. The public forum will be held Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Capital High School Auditorium on Goddard Road in Boise. The cost is $7 general admission and $3 for veterans, senior citizens and students. For more information or to reserve tickets, write the IVLVP at 760 Warm Springs Avenue, Suite 7, Boise, 83712 or call 342-7876.

Information offered on child seats

TWIN FALLS — Presentation of public information about the hospital car seat rental program has been canceled, says Gregg Heller, coordinator.

Instead of a presentation several times a month, the emergency medical technicians now show a film at 8 p.m. daily in the maternal/child care unit.

Although many seats have been rented since the program began in January, there is still a good supply available, Heller said. They are suitable for babies up to 9 months old or 20 pounds. Rental fee is $10, $7 of which is refunded when the seat is returned in good condition.

For those wanting to purchase their own infant car seat, coupons worth a 25 percent discount are available through the cooperation of several local stores. For more information call 737-2000.

Budget

While the city has shown a consolidation can work "in theory," taxpayers await proof through application, Courtney wrote.

The city also plans a smaller consolidation in 1984.

To promote economic growth, the budget proposes a new planning department, combining zoning administration, code enforcement, administration of the city's Industrial Development Bond program and other community development activities.

The department would require a new community development director at $31,440 per year to complement the activities of a zoning supervisor, two building inspectors and a technician.

The other major issue facing the city in 1985, of course, will be construction of a new pool.

If a $2 million bond issue for the indoor facility at the Twin Falls High School receives the necessary two-thirds majority at the special election Aug. 14, the draft 1985 budget will have to be altered to include it.

But the budget does also propose spending $750,000 from the $2.4 million Improvements fund for a new pool, regardless of what happens to the bond, even though this amount on its own, probably is not enough to build a geothermally heated outdoor pool at Harman Park as envisioned last fall.

Otherwise, many of the capital projects recommended in the draft budget will not be as visible to city residents.

The draft proposes $390,000 for a new city shop building to replace the dilapidated park, water and street department buildings on Sixth Avenue West, and it proposes $150,000 to buy more efficient street lighting.

Several projects, such as a new golf course club house, new city park restrooms and buying out the remaining debt on the downtown parking lots to remove the parking meters there, would receive no funding.

Whether to go along with these choices, or assign priorities of its own, will be one of the major decisions facing the council when it begins deliberations on the budget in the next few weeks.

Busy signal makes dad want to reach out and scold son

DEAR ABBY: You be the judge. Junior, our married son, and his wife have a habit of taking their telephone off the hook whenever they feel like it. When the phone is off the hook, the caller gets a busy signal and has to call again.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Well, the other evening my husband had to phone our son, and he got a busy signal for two hours straight. He became furious, got into his car and drove to Junior's house (it's about three miles).

When he got there, he found Junior, his wife and their kids just sitting in the backyard, doing nothing. Junior had taken the phone off the hook because they didn't want to be disturbed during dinner, and nobody thought to put it back on!

My husband took our son apart for his "selfishness" and "lack of consideration" for us, his parents, saying we should be able to reach him by phone when we want to. Junior apologized, but didn't promise to discontinue the practice of taking the phone off the hook.

What do you think about this situation? Is Dad out of line to complain?

—MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: Yes. A person

installs a telephone for his own convenience — not for the convenience of others. If my memory serves me well, it was the late Supreme Court Justice Brandeis who said, "One of the most cherished of all rights is the right to be left alone."

Of course, if parents are elderly or in poor health, one would hope that their children would keep their telephone line "open" in case of an emergency.

DEAR ABBY: I just read "A Parent's Prayer" in your column and feel the need to comment.

What's with all this, "Dear God, make me ...," "Dear God, help me ...," "Dear God, guide me ...," and all such other weak-kneed whining?

How about, "Dear Mother, haul up your bootstraps, buckle on your armor and call on all the common sense, guts and love you were born with — and raise your children yourself?"

—MRS. J.G.L., MEDINA
DEAR MRS. L.: I think you missed the point. "A Parent's Prayer" was a mother's plea for the patience, strength and wisdom to raise a child. All mothers know that raising a child is a do-it-yourself project.

DEAR ABBY: Please contact your experts on the best way for women to remove body hair in order to wear those new swimsuits.

—SUSAN IN BROOKLYN
DEAR SUSAN: There is no "best" way for all women. Electrolysis for permanent hair removal is costly, and takes a long time because each hair is removed (by "needle") individually. (Some hairs grow back and must be removed again.)

Waxing is popular but not without pain. Depilatories are popular, but because they contain strong chemicals, they must be used with care in certain areas. Shaving is another option, but many complain that it encourages regrowth, and they get a 5 o'clock shadow before 6 p.m.

Then there's "Baby Touch," a simple, mitten-like buffer that's easy to use and has been a long-time favorite of women of all ages.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for a little more than a year to a man I love and respect. We have a terrific marriage except for one problem. My husband has a habit of shaking his leg very rapidly when he is seated. Needless to say, it doesn't bother me when I am not near him; the problem is his leg-shaking when I am sitting close to him — especially at the dinner table. The shaking vibrates the table and chairs and even the floor until I want to scream! I enjoy eating dinner with my husband, but I simply cannot tolerate his shaking.

I've asked him to please stop, but he says he is unable to. My only alternative is to eat dinner in the living room by myself, an alternative I dislike immensely.

I need some advice.
—EARTHQUAKE IN DELAWARE
DEAR EARTHQUAKE: Your husband's leg-shaking is probably just a nervous habit he could overcome if he tried. But on the chance that it is an involuntary shaking that he can't control, urge him to see his doctor.

What's what

Most genuses have been short. Very short.

Laboratory experiments prove you can keep your dentures clean by soaking them in bourbon. No, take them out.

Newborn infants can't swallow with their eyes open. This is also true of frogs. Don't believe Queen Victoria knew this when she said she didn't care much for babies until they outgrew that age when they look like frogs.

This'll give you some notion why towns nationwide have trouble keeping their ambulance services: In New York City, ambulance callers phoned 605,257 times in 1983. Of these, 204,226 cancelled on arrival; 58,078, no patients waiting; 18,188, patients died at the scene, and 4,312, unrelated to medical emergencies. Well over half the calls were dry runs.

OPIMUM DEATH

Q. You said President James Buchanan remained a lifelong bachelor after his betrothed died in 1819. She OD'd on heroin, right?

A. Almost right. The effect was the same. An overdose of opium-based elixir. It was. Patent medicines loaded with opium were common in those days.

Q. Does the Israeli army let its women fight on the front lines? If not, why not?

A. No, not anymore. Israeli women proved to be fierce when they went to the front. But they fought Arabs. And the Arab soldiers made it clear they'd rather fight to the death than surrender to women. One report held the Israeli women wouldn't take prisoners. Bunk. They couldn't take prisoners. The Arabs wouldn't surrender to them. Israel pulled its women off the front and the battle patterns changed.

WAGE

The word "wage" as in "to wage war" came from an Latin stem meaning "to challenge-in combat." The word "wedding" came from the same Latin stem, unsurprisingly.

Brazil establishes alcohol fuel program

By BRUCE HANDLER
The Associated Press

SAO CAETANO DO SUL, Brazil — In what is unquestionably the world's most ambitious fuel-substitution program, Brazil is now powering 1.5 million motor vehicles on pure alcohol made from its own abundant sugar cane.

This still-growing trend and the discovery of large offshore oil deposits have put the nation well on the way to an energy breakthrough that could free it forever from costly dependence on foreign oil, according to officials and experts interviewed by The Associated Press.

They also maintained that the breakthrough could be the key to Brazil's foreign debt problem and eventually thrust it into the category of an advanced, industrialized nation of the world.

Domestic oil production, for the first time in Brazilian history, has outstripped imports. The government is predicting petroleum and fuel self-sufficiency by 1993.

"The recent notable improvement in the energy picture is an important step toward Brazil's ultimate success as a country," said

Terry V. McInyre, the minerals and energy attache at the U.S. Consulate in Rio de Janeiro.

"Brazil, with a foreign debt of more than $100 billion, is under international pressure to improve its economic performance in order to qualify for billions of dollars in overseas emergency loans. Thanks to the energy turnaround, the nation has cut spending on imported oil from $10-billion in 1981 to $4.8 billion this year."

"Alcohol cars are Brazil's response to the challenge of the OPEC oil-price shocks of the 1970s," said Andre Beer, president of the National Vehicle Makers Association. "The program has been a total success. Almost 90 percent of the passenger cars and light vans sold in Brazil today run on 100 percent Brazilian alcohol."

Beer also is a Brazilian vice president of the General Motors factory in Sao Caetano do Sul, an industrial suburb of Sao Paulo, the nation's largest city.

Brazil announced its alcohol-conversion drive in 1975, planning to capitalize on the fact this country already was the world's largest sugar cane grower.

China drops U.S. pact, blasts Soviets

PEKING (AP) — China said Sunday it will never become a strategic ally of the United States, and called U.S. arms sales to Taiwan a "virus" endangering U.S.-China relations.

The Communist government also chastised the Soviets for canceling a high-level mission to China after President Reagan's visit to Peking, and warned that better Chinese-Soviet relations remain only "a fond hope" unless Moscow compromises.

The remarks appeared in the Monday issue of the official weekly magazine Outlook. Excerpts were released in advance by the official news agency Xinhua.

The article commended diplomatic advances achieved since the United States and China normalized relations in 1979, but criticized the U.S.-Taiwan Relations Act as interference in China's affairs.

Taiwan, the seat of the Chinese Nationalist government that fled the mainland after the 1949 Communist takeover. The U.S. government broke diplomatic ties with Taiwan when it recognized Peking, but passed the Taiwan Relations Act to permit military sales to the Nationalist government.

China considers Taiwan as an integral part of China.

"The Taiwan Relations Act is like some kind of virus," the article said. "Once the control of this virus is lost, the health of Sino-American relations will be in danger."

"Should the United States choose to position the 'two Chinas' or 'one China, one Taiwan' policy, there will be real trouble and setbacks for Sino-American relations," the article said.

"On the other hand," it said, "if the Soviet Union keeps turning away from having those obstacles which threaten China removed, normal Sino-Soviet relations would remain a fond hope."

China has said relations with the Soviets cannot basically improve until Moscow removes Soviet forces from China's borders, withdrawals from Afghanistan, and stops supporting Vietnam's intervention in Cambodia.

The article also criticized U.S. policymakers who, it claimed, now believe the Chinese-U.S. relationship is mature and that both sides can bypass their differences.

"This is not realistic," the article said. "China does not intend to be a 'card' in the hands of the Americans in dealing with their rival or adversary."

Israeli inflation hits 330 percent

JERUSALEM (AP) — In a blow to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's election chances, the government on Sunday announced a record 13.3 percent leap in the cost-of-living index for June — bringing inflation for the past year to 329.7 percent.

Israel approved four new Jewish settlements on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River. The settlements are another key campaign issue for the July 23 general elections.

David Neuman, spokesman for the Central Bureau of Statistics, said the June price increase was the highest for that month in Israel's 38-year history. The index rose by 3.5 percent in June 1983. Neuman said each of the first six months of 1984 had been a record month.

The June figure brought the cumulative price increase for the first six months of this year to 122.5 percent. Inflation was 14.3 percent in May.

Neuman predicted the inflation rate by the end of 1984 could reach between 360 and 400 percent. In 1983, it was 191 percent.

The Finance Ministry blamed the rising prices on the Histadrut Labor Federation, an umbrella organization for most of Israel's unions which is affiliated with the opposition Labor party.

Federal resettlement program is 50 years old

ARTHURDALE, W.Va. (AP) — Fifty years ago, Charles Hendershot's family moved out of the darkness of a squalid coal mining camp into the sunshine of President Franklin Roosevelt's first federal resettlement town here.

The move, which Hendershot said his family never regretted, was celebrated this week by members and descendants of the 162 families that migrated seeking a decent home, a little land and steady work.

"You're out in the sunshine here. Down there you were in the dark," Hendershot said, recalling the mining camps that lined nearby Scott's Run in the 1930s.

The New Deal housing experiment was inspired by first lady Eleanor Roosevelt who toured mining camps in 1933. She persuaded her husband to create the federal homestead program that gave birth to Arthurdale and Eleanor, both in West Virginia, and other communities like them throughout the country.

Among those attending Saturday's celebration were the Roosevelts' son, Elliott Roosevelt, and Wendell Lund, a key member of the New Deal administration.

"We got our experience at Arthurdale," said Lund. "It was a highly controversial project and the first lady was at the center of things."

Arthurdale was designed to replace tiny coal company fiefdoms with names such as Jere, Purslove, and Cassville, where workers lived in company houses, were paid in scrip, redeemable only at company stores, and were quickly replaced if they went on strike.

"Each coal mine had a little town of its own," said Hendershot. "Each company had a company store. You didn't have steady work."

Under the resettlement program, selected families were given several acres to homestead, were encouraged to farm their land, participated in cooperative projects, and were taught crafts.

"This extra touch of pioneering ventures, such as this, represents ... the inevitable cost of all progress," President Roosevelt told Arthurdale High School's 1938 graduating class. He said the venture would "save human lives and human happiness as well as dollars."

Hendershot's parents didn't hesitate to make the 12-mile trek from Purslove to Arthurdale, which was hewn from the land of farmer Richard Arthur.

"It just looked like it was going to be better," he said.

"When I started to work I was getting 45 cents an hour," said Hendershot, who learned to make furniture at Arthurdale. "It was better than the mining because you had an income."

Hospital strike grows ever larger

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of doctors, supervisors and volunteers filled in for more than 30,000 striking workers at 30 hospitals and nursing homes Sunday as union members prepared to walk off the job at 11 more nursing homes.

Non-union staffers struggled to maintain services at the 27 private, non-profit hospitals and three nursing homes struck at 4 p.m. Friday. Some hospitals began limiting admissions and canceling elective surgery to cope with the strike.

"We take it hour by hour and day by day. So I can't tell you how long we can hold out," said Martin Fretwirth, deputy director of the Kingsbrook Jewish Medical Center in Brooklyn.

"We hope to hear better news, and this comes to a conclusion very soon."

No talks were scheduled between negotiators for the health workers' union, District 1199, and the League of Voluntary Hospitals, representing the hospitals and nursing homes. League President William Abelow said the strike could be a long one.

District 1199 scheduled a walkout for 6 a.m. Monday at 11 nursing homes represented by the Association of Voluntary Nursing Homes of New York, which planned a last-ditch meeting with union negotiators at 7 p.m. Sunday.

Hospital League spokesman James

Viaso said the initial strike affected about 17,000 patients, and the nursing home association said an additional 5,000 patients would be affected by a walkout Monday.

Workers ranged from dishwashers and room cleaners to social workers and radiology technicians. Small crowds spent the weekend chanting and waving signs on picket lines, and union organizers said thousands more would join the lines as the strike began its first full weekday Monday. Police reported no violence.

The union said the strike force included 42,000 workers from the 27 league hospitals, three nursing homes and about 10 affiliated institutions.

Britain's thwarting of abduction turns big

LONDON (AP) — When officials at Stansted Airport near London tore the lid off a cargo crate on July 5 and found Nigeria's most-wanted fugitive inside, they uncovered a conspiracy of bizarre proportions.

On the surface, the botched attempt to kidnap former Nigerian Transport Minister Umaru Dikko and fly him out of Britain might be dismissed as a nasty little farce.

But apart from being one of the more curious cloak-and-dagger plots to unfold in Britain, it threatens the ties between Britain and one of its most important trading partners. It also calls into question the Third World's ability to conduct its affairs according to the rules of diplomacy laid down 70 years ago by the Western nations.

And because three Israelis were said to be involved in the kidnapping, Israel's interests in oil-producing, Moslem-dominated Nigeria are receiving a large dose of publicity.

According to accounts in Parliament, police reports and newspaper articles, this is how it happened:

On July 5, 47-year-old Dikko was walking near his home near Hyde Park.

Dikko knew he was a hunted man. The military government which had overthrown his government six months earlier was portraying him as the archenemy of the people, plunderer of Nigeria's oil wealth and plottor of the new regime's downfall.

Britain had refused Nigeria's requests to extradite him, fearing he would be tried by a secret military tribunal.

But still, he was on his guard.

Meyerhoeffer rallies, takes Canyon Springs

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Steve Meyerhoeffer, a member of the Boise State University golf team, posted his first amateur victory Sunday by downing Perry Hanchey and David Driscoll in the Canyon Springs Amateur final.

Meyerhoeffer, who competed in several national tournaments as a junior, carded a two-under par 70 to win by three strokes over Hanchey with Driscoll, the first-day leader, finishing four strokes off the pace at 150.

"Dave Rasmussen and I won a best ball one and I think I was low in an eight-and-under tournament at Muni when I was a kid," joked Meyerhoeffer about the win. "But, no, this is the first time I've won an amateur tournament."

Meyerhoeffer padded the margin with a birdie on the 18th while Hanchey slipped to par by hitting one out of bounds on the final.

"I had seven birdies and wound up two under," Meyerhoeffer said. "So you know there were a few bad holes in there."

Actually, there was a real roller-coaster as the top three battled for the championship.

Driscoll started with birdie, par, par, birdie and after four had a four-stroke lead on the entire field.

"But after that it was all downhill," he said.

The tournament started to tighten up on the fifth when Meyerhoeffer and Hanchey collected birdies while Driscoll had to settle for a bogey — a quick two-stroke swing.

Over the next several holes, a couple of those three would be tied with the other one-stroke back or one would surge into a one-stroke lead and then come back into a draw.

The last tie developed among the three — at 13. — The 14th extracted another bogey from Driscoll and he was behind the rest of the day.

Meanwhile, Meyerhoeffer stretched out to a lead and held it despite knocking his drive into the water on No. 16. Hanchey two-putted there to stay a stroke behind. Hanchey had another chance on the 17th, a par three, but couldn't improve his position and that set up the dramatics for the final hole.

"I knew I had to hit a drive that would give me a five or six iron or better into the final green and let me go for eagle," Hanchey said. "Instead, I hit it (the drive) off the world right."

That strayed shot cost him a par and Meyerhoeffer two-putted for a birdie to close out the victory.

Roger Schlech of Twin Falls collected the first-flight prize with a 160, two ahead of Ted Black of Eden. Bob Skredersu of Twin Falls was third at 164. In net, Denny Stimpson of Twin Falls, won at 137, two ahead of Chuck Potter of Kimberly.

Second flight winner was Walt Ross at 166 with Nick Burnikel at 178 and Ross Prather at 179. Mack Dodson, one off the gross pace, was net champion at 136 with Kevin Kleinkopf at 146 and Dean Dams at 148.

Ed McLinn of Twin Falls, swept out of second place to claim the third flight title at 176, posting an eight-shot win over first-day leader, Shane Milward. Brent Ward of Twin Falls had 187 and Charles Brumbach finished fourth at 189.

Mark Smith won net honors at 138, two ahead of Stan Barkley of Twin Falls. Dan Menouser of Twin Falls had a 143 and Ken Roy of Twin Falls, claimed fourth at 148.

Stars capture USFL crown

Philly pounds Arizona, 23-3

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Chuck Fusina, dancing and scrambling around Arizona's heralded pass rush, engineered touchdown drives on Philadelphia's first two possessions as the Stars won the second United States Football League championship by beating the Wranglers 23-3.

The Stars, clearly the dominant team of the USFL's first two seasons with 34 wins in 40 games, avenged a 24-22 loss to Michigan in last year's title game by clearly dominating George Allen's Wranglers. They did so despite a series of turnovers and blown chances that could have mortally wounded them.

What should have been an easy victory wasn't put away until the fourth quarter because of Philadelphia mistakes — a fumble by Kelvin Bryant on the goal line, a tipped pass by Fusina from the Wrangler 16 that became an interception by Arizona's Ed Smith, and a missed extra point by David Trout, who also missed a 27-yard field goal attempt.

In fact, so clear was Philadelphia's dominance that the Stars didn't punt until 1:20 into the fourth quarter. The Stars ran 59 plays on the ground, a USFL playoff record, with Bryant accounting for 115 in 23 carries.

The attendance at the game was 52,568, about 20,000 short of capacity at Tampa Stadium — the Super Bowl game here last January was a sellout. USFL officials had hoped for a crowd of 60,000 or more, but late afternoon and early evening rains may have kept some fans away.

Fusina completed 12 of 17 passes for 158 yards and was named the game's most valuable player.

Philadelphia totally controlled the first quarter, taking the opening kickoff and methodically moving 65 yards in 10 plays for a touchdown.

The score game on a 4-yard blast by Bryan Thomas, who spelled Bryant more than usual because of Bryant's bruised toe. But the drive might have ended before it got going had not Fusina eluded John Lee, the league's leading sacker, and scrambled for 10 yards on a third-and-4 play from his own 40.

After the Philadelphia defense held Arizona without a first down, the Stars came right back. This time the drive covered 54 yards in nine plays, with Fusina taking it in himself from the 1 after fumbling the snap, juggling it, and rolling to the left with 1:11 left in the quarter.

From then on, the Stars kept threatening but couldn't convert, even though Fusina completed his first 10 passes.

But Arizona couldn't go anywhere.

Caldwell corrals Cowboys in twinbill

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Temperatures and temps were both high Sunday afternoon as the Twin Falls Cowboys dropped a pair of non-conference American Legion games to the Caldwell Silver Streaks.

The Cowboys, who've lost six of their last eight contests, were edged in the opener 5-1 in a game that included a bench-clearing scuffle. The Silver Streaks made it a clean sweep in the nightcap bombing Twin Falls 12-2 in six innings.

Caldwell, now 3-4, went out in front 1-0 in the opening inning when Daug Oates walked, stole second and came home on Mike Lehman's double off the center field fence.

The Cowboys tied the game in the second inning when Shawn Humberger singled and stole second and third base. He scored on an error by the Caldwell shortstop on a grounder by Derrick Korsen.

Twin Falls took the lead in the fourth inning when Rob Ellis doubled and scored on another error by the Caldwell shortstop.

The Silver Streak took advantage of three Cowboy errors in the fifth inning taking a 3-2 lead.

The Cowboys fought back and tied the game with Altan Valdez scoring after the Cowboys capitalized including a two-run homer by Jim Frye.

The Cowboys managed to score a pair of runs in the fourth inning. Chris Pratt hit an opposite field single and advanced to second on an error. Gary Stringer was hit by a pitch and scored on a walk reached base on an error and Pratt scored on a walk to Korsen. Stringer later scrambled home on a wild pitch.

Caldwell notched four more runs in the last three innings as the Cowboys made four errors in those three innings.

"We're at that rebuilding stage again," said Cowboy Coach Mike Tremayne on the losses of key players in the program. "It's not the same club we've had. We've put some players in some new positions and it's hurt us."

The Cowboys, now 21-15, will take a break until Tuesday when they play a double-header in Rupert against the Mimco Sage.

Stacy surges in stretch to win Open

PEABODY, Mass. (AP) — Hollis Stacy felt it was "written in the stars" that she win the U.S. Women's Open golf championship for a third time.

However, she made sure Sunday night from five strokes off the pace for victory in a stretch duel with young Rosie Jones and Amy Alcott.

Stacy, helped by an eagle 3 on the 13th green, fired a three-under par 69 for a 72-hole score of 290, two over regulation, at steamy Salem Country Club.

That gave her the coveted championship by one stroke over Jones and two over Alcott, a triumph decided on the final hole.

Stacy noted that the late Babe Didrikson Zaharias won the U.S. Open the last time it was held here 30 years ago.

"Winning where Babe won is something special," Stacy said. "She was one of the greatest athletes in the world and won the year I was born (1954). I think that was a lucky charm."

To help the charm, though, Stacy took extra batting practice Friday evening with a close friend, Helen Sobin of nearby Belmont.

"I had been very tentative the first three days because my putting was not up to par," Stacy said. "My friend suggest I widen my stance and it cured everything. I felt much more comfortable, more relaxed, more confident."

"I gave it my best shot and it's over," Jones said. "I just didn't win."

"I felt like I would be the one to beat, but all it takes is one bad swing," said Alcott, who was betrayed by her driver on the 72nd tee.

The 1977 and '78 U.S. Open champlon, Stacy played the last 14 holes in five-under par. Then, tied for the lead, she watched from the 18th green.

First Jones, a 24-year-old former Ohio State star, bowed out with a bogey 5 on the final hole, chipping from the fringe and then missing a putt which would have forced an 18-hole playoff.

Then Alcott, the 1980 Open champion, teed up on the 18th. She blasted out of a bunker and sank a tough putt on the 71st hole, but her driver failed her with everything on the line.

Alcott drove into the light rough on the left side but was unable to take a full swing to get out because of trees. She pitched out to the fairway and wound up taking a double bogey 6.

Jones, the 1982 Spanish Open champion and runner-up for the British women's crown the same year, had a final round 72 for 291, while Alcott had a 74 for 292.

Lori Garbacz, who started the final round four strokes behind co-leaders Alcott and Donna H-White, finished with a 70 to tie Alcott for third at 292.

Stacy trailed by five strokes after taking a double bogey 6 on the 56th hole. Alcott and Betsy King shared the lead, with Jones one stroke back and others still in contention.

However, Stacy battled back. She birdied the 59th hole, then the 62nd. She played par until the 13th hole of the day when she blasted out of rough for an eagle 2. She added another birdie on the 70th hole, got down in par on the next two greens and sweated it out before claiming victory.

For her third U.S. Open championship, Stacy, a 30-year-old Georgian, earned $36,000, more than doubling her prize money when she checked in here.

Black's brilliant 63 results in triumph

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Ronnie Black came from seven shots off the pace with a brilliant, 8-under-par 63, overhauled rookie Willie Wood and scored a one-stroke victory Sunday in the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

Black's closing effort, which included two birdies from off the green, matched the record — for the third time in the week — on the 6,746-yard Kingsmill Golf Club course.

And his 267 total, 17-under par, was the low 72-hole score on the tour this season. The previous low was Tom Purtzer's 268 score at Phoenix.

The victory was worth $63,000 from the total purse of $350,000, pushed Black's earnings for the season to $142,238 and provided him with a spot in such prestigious events as the World Series of Golf and the Tournament of Champions.

Wood, the slightly built rookie who had led through the first three rounds of this event, could do no better than a round of par 71 in the hot, humid weather and was second at 288.

His 25-foot putt for a birdie on the final hole, which would have forced a playoff, came up six inches short.

Hesl, pro, Curtis Strangeo, who twice got to within a single shot of the lead, had a closing 67.

Gems subdue Sage 16-4, Valley downs Wood River twice

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — With a blistering eight-run seventh inning, the Boise Gems throttled the Minico Sage 16-4 in non-conference Legion action here Sunday.

After closing Boise's lead to four runs in the bottom of the sixth, three Sage pitchers collapsed beneath the overwhelming Gem hitting pressure in the seventh.

Boise's late game batting spree started when Sage hurler Gabe Fuentes hit Gem catcher Dave Ballance and then allowed Greg Morton to double drive Ballance home. After Fuentes tossed three balls to shortstop Tim Roper, Minico mentor Bill Malone sent in relief pitcher Tim Woods. Walking Roper with his first pitch Woods then struck out Randy Reid before walking center-fielder Leo Francis and giving up a Kirt Douglas single that drove Morton in from third. Faltering again, Woods walked Boise pitcher Brad Nishitani, allowing Roper to score, and advancing Francis and Douglas.

Pinch-hitter Keith Humphrey then stepped up and hit a sacrifice fly to left driving in Francis. Douglas stole third, and Tom Sipjan singled on a three basemen's error to bring in Douglas and a controversial Nishitani run (when Woods was caught off the mound after cutting off a throw to tag-Douglas, Nishitani sprinted home). Malone later brought Doug Meyers in for relief after Woods walked Douglas and watched Morton single. Meyers took the mound and topped off four straight balls to walk Roper and bring in Sipjan for another Gem run. After Reid singled to drive in the final Gem score, Meyers struggled back with the bases loaded by catching a Francis pop fly for the last Boise out.

Minico could not recover in the bottom of the seventh as Gems' reliever Keith Humphrey and the rest of the Boise nine allowed only one hit (a single from Meyers) and threw out three Sage batters at first to stop the slaughter.

The Gems came back in the sixth, however, scoring two runs off two Minico errors and the Sage could never come back after that attack. The loss dropped Minico's season record to 9-20.

Valley-7, Wood River-4
EDEEN — Mike Sorrells tossed a five-hitter and Ryan Johnson threw a two-hitter as Valley swept a twinnill from Wood River 7-4 and 7-0 in American Legion softball action Sunday.

Sorrells fanned nine in the opener for the winners. Valley held a 2-0 lead, but Wood River bounced back and scored four runs in the fifth inning.

Valley battered back and scored four runs in the bottom of the sixth to take the lead for good. Eric Buschman and Mike Gerdton hit RBI singles for Valley in the inning, while Shane Orr went 2-for-3.

THE NIGHTMARE, JOHNSON lifted with a no-hitter in the contest. Wood River broke it up, smacking two hits in the final inning.

Danny Douglas and Scott Sorenson provided most of the offense for Valley as they both hit three baggers in the second inning. Johnson struck out nine batters in the five innings he pitched.

Angels expand lead in West

By The Associated Press

Stranded off third base with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning of a tie game, California's Bob Boone did the only thing he could.

He stirred home and hoped for the best. And that's what Boone got, when his failing elbow knocked the ball out of Milwaukee catcher Bill Schroeder's glove and he was able to score the run that gave the Angels a 7-5 victory over the Brewers on Sunday in Anaheim, Calif.

The victory, combined with second-place Chicago's loss to Baltimore, gave California a 1/2-game lead in the American League West.

"I had no choice. The play was going to be there. My only chance was to hit him," said Boone, referring to the mix-up that ensued after Juan Beniquez pinch-hit single.

Boone, who had started the inning with a pinch-hit single off Bob McClure, 2-5, was on second and Pettis was on first when Beniquez singled off reliever Rick Walls.

Walls Boone stepped at third, Pettis continued around second.

"I had to go," said Boone. "If they get me, I'd just as soon (get in) as

These are locally owned fine automobiles, most are 1 owner. We are preparing for our new car close-out we need to clean-off our lot. Instead of taking these cars to auction we are offering to the people of Magic Valley a chance to save 20% to 50% on every used car in stock. All cars are priced at or below wholesale.
