Idaho case puts teachers' rights in danger

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Supreme Court has been warned that all teachers' rights to continuing contracts could be wiped out if the court rules against 16 Emmett teachers trying to win their jobs back.

In what attorneys for both sides called a "landmark" Idaho case on teacher contract rights, the Supreme Court took the matter under advisement here Thursday and won't issue a decision until later.

The 16 Emmett school teachers were terminated 30 months ago when the district was hit by declining enrollment and tight schoolrevenue. Their attorney, Byron Johnson, contended Thursday their termination was improper because they had continuing contract rights.

That meant the teachers couldn't be terminated unless they first were placed on probation and given a chance to correct any shortcomings.

But the school district's attorney, Cumer Green, argued that Idaho school teachers' continuing contract rights are subject to state laws. And the Idaho Legislature at any time can change those laws, he said.

Johnson argued that the Legislature couldn't take away a contract right previously granted

The logical result, he said, "is that the next Legislature could take away all continuing contract rights, and the teachers would have to fold up their tents and go away, subject to the whims of the Legislature and the school boards."

Johnson also argued that the school board's decision to terminate the teachers was made in an illegal executive session and thus should be voided.

The Emmett School Board met in an executive session at 6 p.m. on March 21, 1983, and discussed the reduction program. At 7 p.m., Johnson said, the board came into open session, and within minutes, with no discussion, voted to adopt a reduction in force policy that ultimately cost the 16 teachers their jobs.

He said 3rd District Judge Jim Doolittle dismissed the case without a trial, but the teachers deserve a chance to prove their contention that the termination decision was made in a closed session, contrary to state law.

Under questioning by Justice Robert Huntley Jr. Green acknowledged that the school board did not notify patrons that the closed executive session would start at 6 p.m. But he said the board notified the public that it would come out of the closed session at 7 p.m.

He argued that the Open Meeting Law is designed to protect the public against a board meeting in secret, then holding an unannounced meeting to take formal action.

Complicating the case is the fact the Idaho Legislature in March of 1982 amended previous laws to allow school districts to terminate teachers in times of financial emergencies.

Johnson acknowledged that teachers hired after that amendment went into effect would be subject to it. But teachers with rights to automatic renewal of their contracts before that amendment was adopted have a continuing contract right that can't unilaterally be taken from them.

The board contended the teachers were

Storm drenches Carolina

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
The Associated Press

WILMINGTON, N.C. — Hurricane Diana howled into the Carolinas on Thursday, causing more than $25 million damage.

It ripped off roofs, toppled power lines and blocked roads before being downgraded to a tropical storm.

At least one flooding incident was reported, and many people who had left shelters were stranded.

No deaths or injuries were blamed directly on the storm, which had hovered off the coast most of Wednesday before turning inland just after midnight.

Diana rapidly lost strength and began breaking up after running ashore, and the National Weather Service downgraded it to a tropical storm late in the afternoon. All hurricane watches were discontinued at 6 p.m.

But by then it had done so much damage that the weather service called it "the worst hurricane since Hazel" in the Cape Fear area. Hazel struck Oct. 5-18, 1954, killing 95 people in the United States and causing $280 million worth of property damage.

Meanwhile, a strong tropical depression formed Thursday in the extreme southwest Gulf of Mexico, and forecasters said it stood a good chance of becoming the season's fifth tropical storm.

The depression, with highest winds of 35 mph was centered about 50 miles north of Veracruz, Mexico, at 6 p.m. and was moving northwest at about 5 mph, according to the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla. An Air Force reconnaissance plane was on route. If its winds reach 33 mph, the storm would be named Edouard.

Faculty reviews grading

CSI president stands by change

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A faculty committee is reviewing grade policies at the College of Southern Idaho after President Gerald Meyerhoefer instructed employees to change the grading system of former CSI coach Eddie Sutton's son from an F to an incomplete.

CSI President Gerald Meyerhoefer said at a press conference Thursday that he stood by his decision to change the grade, emphasizing that other faculty members and administrators had agreed with the decision.

In the future, however, students who want a grade changed will be required to ask that the change be granted by the procedure indicated in the college catalogue — through a grade appeals committee, composed of college employees appointed at the time a student requests a hearing.

When asked if it was fair for one student to have a grade changed by the president and for the others to have to go through a grade appeal process, Meyerhoefer replied, "I hope all things will be handled through appeals. Very frankly, I wish very much that this had been handled in the appeals process."

That should have been suggested to him in April or May, however, Meyerhoefer said. He said the appeals process was not suggested as the proper way to decide a grade dispute until August.

Meyerhoefer said he requested the grade change on the advice of the college's lawyer, because there had been inconsistencies in awarding incompletes and other grades that are not counted in students' grade-point average. The Suttons had threatened legal action if the grade was not changed, he said earlier.

The board has been informed of the grade change and all members believe that the correct action was taken, said Board Chairman LeRoy Craig from a prepared statement at the press conference.

"It has always been the policy of the college if there was doubt concerning fairness in dealing with a student to lean in favor of the student," Craig read.

The faculty discussed the grade change at a faculty senate meeting held just before fall classes began.

CSI Board Chairman LeRoy Craig listens to President Gerald Meyerhoefer's defense

Meyerhoefer said that the idea of organizing a faculty committee came out of a meeting that leaders of the faculty group attended.

The matter was brought up at the meeting by biology professor Donald Puder, who had not discussed the matter with Meyerhoefer, when the floor of the faculty senate meeting was opened for new business.

There was "a general degree of unrest and concern with rumors," Puder recalled Thursday.

"Everybody had been talking about it (the grade change) in the background, so why not talk about it to clear the air for the faculty and the administration?"

"There have been alleged rumors through the years," he said Thursday. "I wanted it dealt with and then to get to our major responsibility of teaching young people."

The majority of the faculty there approved a motion made by another faculty member to appoint a committee.

Mary Ann Fisher, a physics professor at the college since 1967; Robert Alfred, a history professor there since 1972; and Don Stephenson, a psychology professor there since 1970 were appointed to the committee.

"They will review the current policy and either make recommendations for change or stricter administration of the policy," Craig said Thursday.

Also at the press conference, Craig criticized coverage of the grade change by local reporters. He said it had been "excessive" and said that at a time the institution was working to get money from the state, that the reporters should "give the same attention to the good things as the non-grade."

Bob McElfresh, who taught the math class in which Steve Sutton was originally given a failing grade during the spring semester, did not attend the press conference.

Meyerhoefer said McElfresh had been placed in an "untenable" and "uncomfortable" position.

This summer Meyerhoefer had threatened to withhold McElfresh's and others' contracts until he found out who was talking about the grade change controversy.

Registrar John Sims resigned after Meyerhoefer announced his intention of having the grade changed. Such an action would be "unethical and illegal," Sims said.

Elders stage rallies

For Medicare

By MIKE FEINSLBERG
The Associated Press

Senior citizens — including the mother and mother-in-law of Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro — participated Thursday in dozens of "Save Medicare" rallies that took on a sharp anti-Reagan tone.

"We expect Dr. Reagan served his internship in a butcher shop," said Jessie Logan of the Massachusetts Senior Action Council at a Boston rally, where a bandaged dummy in blue hospital pajamas and symbolizing "the ailing health care system" was carried on a stretcher.

In Chicago, "Medicare" was in a coffin and the Illinois Public Action Council said President Reagan's policies were "killing" the program.

In Philadelphia, retired businessman Jack Zucker, 75, urged the retired to make sure their friends are registered to vote. "Health is a right, not a commodity that can be sold like a can of peas," he said.

In Washington, D.C., white-haired demonstrators crowded into the lobby of a building housing Reagan-Bush headquarters, but did not get inside the campaign offices.

Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale addressed the "Senior Health Action Day" meeting in Tupelo, in northeastern Miss. He said Reagan's first-term proposals to curtail Medicare's growth was "nothing short of official cruelty."

"If he is re-elected, he is going to savage Social Security," Mondale said of Reagan. "I won't cut Social Security and Medicare. He did and he will."

At a rally in lower Manhattan, Donna Zaccaro, 22-year-old daughter of the Democratic vice-presidential candidate, kissed her grandmothers and introduced them.

Rose Zaccaro and Antonetta Ferraro did not speak, but their granddaughter said: "I've been taught that we must not overlook those who have looked over us for so long. Unfortunately, it seems, the current administration does not share this value."

Speakers in Washington demanded that Reagan spell out how he would stave off a financial crisis facing the government's $98 billion a year health care program.

BPA will repay $7.9 million debt — some day

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Like a homeowner sitting contentedly on a 4 percent mortgage, Bonneville Power Administration says it will get around, someday, repaying the $7.9 billion it owes the federal government, but it doesn't want to be rushed.

Peter T. Johnson, chief of the federal power marketing agency in the Northwest, told a Senate committee Thursday the agency plans to send a check left this month for the $218 million in bank interest payments it has missed over the last few years.

And he said the agency hopes within another year to pay $220 million on the loan's principal, unless a major economic or natural catastrophe descends on us.

"Our commitment to fiscal integrity remains strong," Johnson said, but the Treasury Department and one of the Senate's most liberal Democrats expressed displeasure with BPA's slow payment record.

Bonneville's chief financial officer, Stephen A. Alshie, noted that the terms of the power agency's loans do not require any principal to be repaid until the final year of the debt, which falls sometime in the next century for most of the total.

"With respect to this specific schedule, BPA has always repaid the principal amounts within the required period," Alshie told the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

Assistant Treasury Secretary Thomas J. Healey said the government was "very concerned about the slow pace" that Bonneville is following. In the last four years, he said, the agency has paid only $2.7 million on the loan principal — less than one-half of 1 percent of the outstanding balance.

The problem for the rest of the country,

Healey said, is that taxpayers must pay current market interest rates on the Treasury borrowing necessary to make up the unpaid BPA debt.

"By delaying repayment on these projects to the last possible moment, the magnitude of the implicit Treasury subsidy is maximized," Healey said, while the cost of the subsidy to taxpayers would be reduced if Bonneville were ordered to pay off the debt more quickly.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, was more blunt.

"When you owe the federal government money, you ought to pay it off," he complained.

No one charged that BPA's actions were illegal. The agency received favorable terms for a series of loans — about half of them made within the past decade and the first dating from 1937 — to finance construction of a series of large hydroelectric dams and transmission facilities on the Columbia River system.

The agency is using those terms to its most favorable advantage, especially in delaying principal payments for up to 50 years. Of the total debt, Alshie said, BPA has repaid a "significant" sum of $638 million in principal since 1939.

"Technically, Bonneville has not violated the law, because no set schedule for repaying the debt is mandated," Metzenbaum said.

"Whenever it misses a payment, Bonneville simply rolls that amount over to the next year."

"But this system can obviously not go on forever," he added.

Metzenbaum said Northwestern power customers ultimately would face enormous balloon payments in the early years of the next century when the principal finally comes due.

"A system of regular annual payments would protect the ratepayers and, at the same time, ensure that the federal taxpayers receive full repayment on the debt they are owed," he said.

Moon group finances anti-communist lobbying campaign

By MICHAEL ISKOFF
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A political arm of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church has contributed $500,000 to finance a new anti-communist lobbying campaign headed by John "Terry" Dolan, chairman of the National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC).
CALL, a lobbying group founded by Dolan, is using the funds to pay for television commercials and mailings promoting legislation to cut off the importation of "slave labor" goods from communist countries, block high technology transfers to the Soviet Union, and support development of anti-satellite weapons.
The money to fund these efforts is coming from Causa International, a Unification Church organization whose chairman, Bo HJ Pak, is Moon's top deputy and the chairman of News World Communications, the parent company of The Washington Times.
The donation has caused a serious internal rift among conservative activists, many of whom recently backed out of CALL when they learned of the Unification Church financing.

"In politics, there is very little money given without something being asked in return," said Paul Weyrich, director of the Committee for the Survival of a Free Congress, who has refused to join CALL. "I believe this is going to be a serious problem. . . . Moon doesn't exactly have a great image in this country."
Moon, a 64-year-old South Korean evangelist, was convicted of income tax fraud in 1982 and is now serving an 18-month prison term at a federal prison in Danbury, Conn. His church claims more than 2 million members worldwide, including 30,000 to 40,000 in the United States — a figure former church members say is exaggerated. The recruiting and fund-raising methods of its young members, called "Moonies," have caused continuing controversy in this country.
Rhonda Stahlman, chairman of CALL, strongly defended the contribution, saying that Causa shares a common anti-communist philosophy with most conservatives. She also said that Causa was the largest single source of funds for the lobbying group and that "they'll probably give us more in the future."

"I'm not giving myself with the Unification Church," said Stahlman. "I'm a Baptist who graduated from Bob Jones University. . . . There are no strings on the money and there never will be any."
Dolan will not talk to any reporter of The Washington Post, according to a spokesman in an interview. He said he is a member of News, Dolan said. "We think that everybody has the right to spend money to get their point of view out. These people are concerned about the growth of communism. They want to stop it and we think that's an admirable goal."
NCPAC, Dolan's political action committee, spent several million dollars in 1980 and again in 1982 on negative television commercials aimed at defeating liberal members of the House and Senate. NCPAC is located in the same Alexandria office building as CALL, but Stahlman said the two organizations are separate.
The Causa donation is part of a growing involvement by Unification Church groups in the New Right. Funded by Moon in 1980, Causa and its domestic affiliate, Causa USA, have been conducting seminars and conferences throughout the United States and Latin American countries, promoting "Godism," which it describes as an alternative philosophy to communism. Causa International has opened up offices in nine Latin American countries, made contributions to a group of right-wing businessmen and military officers in Honduras, and financed trips by Latin American journalists and political leaders to seminars in Seoul, South Korea.

The group also recently spent several hundred thousand dollars holding similar conferences for Nicaraguan exiles and other "Hispanics" in Washington and Fort Lauderdale, Fla., according to Silvio Arguello, a Miami businessman who is attempting to set up an organization of Nicaraguan exiles backing the "Contra" effort to overthrow the Sandinista regime.
Arguello said Causa is planning additional conferences that he hopes to use to boost his anti-Sandinista effort.
Causa director Thomas Ward has refused to answer numerous phone calls from a reporter, but in a written response to questions from

The Post, Ward said Causa contributed the $500,000 to CALL because it considered the group to be "committed to awakening the American people to the imminent threat which Sovietism poses at this time."
Warren Richardson, Causa's former executive director who once served as general counsel to the Liberty Lobby, has served as a lobbyist for CALL and helped draft the package of bills known as the Human Rights and National Survival Program that the group is promoting. Stahlman said the bill to ban the importation of "slave labor" from communist countries will be introduced in the House by Rep. Daniel Crane, R-Ill., according to Stahlman.
The television commercials CALL is planning to run on behalf of these bills includes two 60-second spots, one of which features the widow of the late Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., reminding viewers of her husband's death in the downing of a South Korean airliner by the Soviets last year, Stahlman said.

Surgeons separate twin girls

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A team of University of Utah surgeons, spelling each other by turns, worked far into the night Thursday to separate Siamese twin girls joined at the tops of their heads.
Medical Center spokesman John Dwan said the twins, undergoing their sixth operation, had still not been separated after 13 hours in surgery.
Even after the separation, if it is accomplished, Dwan said plastic surgeons would need several hours to close the openings in the girls' heads, with previously prepared head coverings.

Powerful quake jolts Japan

TOKYO (AP) — A powerful earthquake Friday morning jolted a wide area of central Japan and rattled skyscrapers in Tokyo. Authorities said at least 11 people were reported missing in a landslide in a mountain village.
The Kyodo News Service said 15 villagers were missing.
The quake, which occurred at 8:48 a.m., registered a preliminary reading of 6.9 on the Richter scale, the Central Meteorological Agency said.
Tokyo Magano police official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said emergency teams were on their way to the town of Otaki but were being hampered by landslides along the road.

Drowning victim recovered

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Teton County authorities on Thursday recovered the body of a New York man who was washed down the Snake River when a tourist raft overturned.
Sheriff Roger Millward said the body of Donald Marquis, 80, of West Nyack, N.Y., was recovered about seven miles south of Jackson.

Auto negotiations continue

DETROIT (AP) — Negotiators for the United Auto Workers union and General Motors Corp. stayed at the negotiating table into the night Thursday, haggling over a new wage offer and "a whole range of issues."
"We will work as long as there is work to do," UAW spokesman David Mitchell said, adding there was "a lot of work left."
GM presented the new wage offer — the second in seven weeks of talks — earlier Thursday.

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:
Mostly fair and warmer today through Saturday. Isolated thundershowers in the morning, clearing by midday and again Saturday afternoon. Highs today low to mid-60s lower elevations with upper 60s in the higher valleys. Lows tonight upper 40s to lower 50s with 30s in the higher elevations. Highs Saturday low to mid 60s.
Northern Nevada and northern Utah:
Northern Utah forecast indicates partly cloudy through Saturday. Warmest days. Lows upper 40s to low 50s. Highs mostly in the 60s to low 70s.

Synopses:

At higher elevations and in the partly cloudy panhandle, cooler 60s prevailed. Fair was warmer at mid-afternoon with 77 degrees. Highest for the state for the day was 82 recorded at Hagerman, while Grangeville had the low of 28 degrees.
Although no rainfall fell at any reporting station, radar indicated some mountain showers in the panhandle at but Johnson argued that actually meant those terminated were deemed to be unsatisfactory.

Teachers with continuing contract rights must be placed on probation if they are not satisfactory, he said.
In what might point up arguments in future cases, Chief Justice Charles Donaldson noted that if Idaho adopts a merit pay plan, there could be little argument on which teachers should be terminated in time of financial emergency.
It would be obvious, Donaldson said, that teachers entitled to merit pay should be retained and those without merit pay could be cut.

Green said the Emmett board worked hard to meet all requirements of the Open Meeting Law, and contended the public was given sufficient notice of the executive session.
He said when a board is faced with limited resources, it has the right to "keep the best they have," and terminating teachers does not mean they have been found unsatisfactory.
"You cannot say that among the good, there cannot be the best. That argument would deny school districts the right to make reductions in force

Diana

Preliminary damage estimates from Diana reached $20 million in two small coastal communities alone, said state Highway Patrol Capt. Robert Barfoot. He listed them as Yaupon Beach and Long Beach, both on Oak Island, which he said was "devastated. It is very severe."
Sky Conklin, inspections director for New Hanover County, said damage in the county and Wilmington was estimated at $5.6 million.
The state suffered some very in great damage, with the worst in Brunswick and New Hanover counties, said Gov. Jim Hunt, adding that details were sketchy because of the difficulty in reaching affected areas.
Officials of the federal Emergency Management Agency began assessing the damage in Southport on Thursday night, and Brunswick County officials said their damage report should be completed this morning.
An estimated 80 percent or 45,000 of Carolina Power & Light Co.'s customers in and around Wilmington lost power, the utility said. Spokeswoman Kay Young said only 20,000 were still without service by midafternoon in Wilmington and nearby Brunswick County, but that it would be Saturday at the earliest before all power is restored. An additional 10,000 customers lost power in South Carolina, utility officials there said.

One man died of a heart attack while trying to secure his house and a state services worker died in a traffic accident on his way to work as the storm bulldozed its way ashore early Thursday.
Thousands of people spent the night in emergency shelters in southeastern North Carolina and northeastern South Carolina, but many people had left shelters to check on their homes Wednesday when the storm stalled off the coast. Some of those were able to dash back to high ground, but others were caught in inland and coastal communities and had to weather the storm in homes, a church and a hospital.
Diana's highest sustained winds began easing Thursday after it moved over land, dropping to an estimated 50 mph by 6 p.m., down from Monday's 130 mph, and the National Weather Service said hurricane warnings were discontinued at 6 p.m. It was moving west-northwest at 5 mph, spraying out heavy rain and gale-force winds over southeastern North Carolina and extreme northeastern South Carolina.

A flood warning was in effect Thursday night for coastal counties in North Carolina.
The weather service said that at 6 p.m. Thursday the center of the storm was poorly defined over Columbus County about 35 miles west of Wilmington. It warned that isolated tornadoes could form, and said that since Tuesday morning the Hanover County airport had recorded over 17 inches of rain, while up to 14 inches were reported around Wilmington.

Future of benefits produces hot debate

By CAROLE FELDMAN
The Associated Press

Walter F. Mondale predicted Thursday that President Reagan would "save Social Security" if given a chance, but the Republican incumbent declared that "we're not going to touch the benefits of the people on Social Security."

Reagan entered the Social Security fray even before Mondale spoke, and declared, in response to charges by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., "Social Security is secure as far as we can see into the next century."

But Mondale, campaigning in Tupelo, Miss., noted that the president has tried in the past to cut future benefits but was blocked by Congress. "We stopped them the first time," he said. "Let's make sure he doesn't have a second chance."

"They were too cruel, too uncaring, they hurt decent people," Mondale said. The cuts Reagan proposed in Social Security and Medicare, the government-sponsored health care program for the elderly.

He added, "If he is re-elected, he is going to savage Social Security. I won't cut Social Security and Medicare. He will."

Reagan sought to keep the emphasis on the tax increases that Mondale has proposed for reducing the record-high government budget deficit.

"We don't need more politicians insisting we have deficits because you're not taxed enough," he said in Nashville, Tenn. "Those deficits ballooned from an economy that didn't grow enough and from 50 years of government spending too much."

Nothing that the Democrats have controlled Congress for 42 of the past 50 years he added. "I would have to say they can't remove themselves from the blame."

While Reagan and Mondale were campaigning in the South, where Mondale admits that he's behind and Republican strategists believe the GOP base is secure, their running mates were at their home bases.

Vice-President George Bush spent the day in Washington, while Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro was in Queens, taping campaign commercials in her home and along one of her neighborhood's busy shopping streets. Ferraro was greeted by about 200 students and staff members outside the office of Adelphi University President Timothy Costello, a former deputy mayor of New York.

The abortion controversy that followed the two vice presidential opponents' during their campaign trips this week caught up with Mondale during a question-and-answer session at Tupelo, Miss.; High School.

"Our faith is between our conscience and our God," Mondale told a questioner who suggested that the Democratic platform is pro-homosexual, pro-abortion and anti-religion.

Questioned specifically about abortion, he said, "This is a very difficult decision for us all." But he said that does not justify allowing government intervention into the matter.

Reagan, speaking to a group of business people promoting high technology in Tennessee, contended that "some economists and politicians are afraid of growth, afraid it will reignite inflation. Well, I'm afraid they may suffer from time warp," he said.

"They seem to see our economy only as an old and outworn thing in the industrial age, rather than a stepping young adolescent beginning to flex its muscle in the technological age."

The dispute over Social Security began after Reagan said in a news conference Tuesday that the budget deficit would be $40 billion to $50 billion lower if Congress had gone along with all of his budget cuts.

Jury indicts Jackson aide

CLEVELAND (AP) — Arnold R. Pinkney, who served as a national campaign manager for the Rev. Jesse Jackson, was indicted Thursday by the Cuyahoga County grand jury on four counts of illegal interest in a public contract.

Pinkney, 53, a Cleveland businessman, assumed the top organizational post of the Jackson presidential campaign in November 1983 and still holds that position.

The grand jury's charges included two alleged felonies and two alleged misdemeanors.

The first felony indictment charges that Pinkney, on Aug. 16, 1982, as a public official, "did knowingly authorize or employ the authority of a public contract in which he, a member of his family or any of his business associates had an interest."

The second felony indictment reads the same way, but the date of the alleged offense is Sept. 15, 1983.

Don't force beliefs, Cuomo says

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Roman Catholic leaders who can't get their own flock to accept their teachings on abortion and other issues shouldn't be seeking laws to impose those beliefs on others, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo said Thursday.

"Are we asking government to be sinful because we ourselves can't stop committing the sin?" the Roman Catholic governor asked in a speech prepared for delivery at the University of Notre Dame.

"I think our moral and social mission as Catholics must begin with the wisdom contained in the words: physician, treat thyself," he said. "Unless we Catholics set an example that is clear and compelling, then we will never convince this society to change the civil laws to protect what we preach is precious human life."

"Despite all the effort at defining our opposition to the sin of abortion, collectively we Catholics apparently believe — and perhaps act — little differently from those who don't share our commitment," he said.

The relationship between religion and politics has become one of the dominant issues in the presidential campaign. President Reagan has courted support from Catholics and Protestant fundamentalists alike, with his backing for tax credits for private school tuition and firm opposition to abortion. Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale, in turn, has accused Reagan, and his allies of a policy of "moral McCarthyism" which rejects opposing views as unchristian.

However, the Democratic governor avoided any specific attack on Reagan's alliance with evangelicals such as the Rev. Jerry Falwell — something Cuomo has done in the past.

"The questions are all around us and answers are coming from every quarter," said Cuomo. "Some of them have been simplistic, most of them fragmentary, and a few, spoken with purely political intent, demagogic."

Cuomo added: "most of us are offended when we see religion being trivialized by its appearance in political throw-away pamphlets."

Overseas accounts overlook principles

An example of cynicism, the Treasury Department's campaign to sell bonds in Europe deserves at least your passing notice. The Treasury has been dissuaded by an indignant Congress from its original proposal to issue bearer bonds to anonymous buyers. That was a blatant appeal to the European style of tax evasion. The Treasury has now retreated to a marginally less blatant appeal.

It has decided to issue its bonds to banks abroad with the understanding that, unlike banks in this country, they will not be required to disclose the names of the customers for whom they are buying.

The Treasury has put out a brief handbook to guide the buyer who may be unfamiliar with American ways. It begins with a statement by the secretary, Donald T. Regan, piously assuring readers that he is "very mindful of the need and desirability of maintaining necessary safeguards against tax evasion." Then, getting down to business, the booklet describes the many attractions of these securities. They have been endowed "with features more familiar to foreign investors" — such as invisibility to the tax collector. "These features are intended to help overcome possible investor hesitancy about a new investment opportunity..." — particularly those investors apprehensive about having their names known to any government anywhere.

The Treasury says that the foreign banks must assure it that they are not buying these securities on behalf of any American customers. Beyond that, the Treasury doesn't care who's buying them or why, as long as they keep buying.

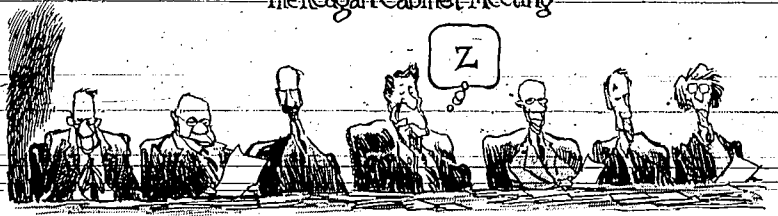

As money becomes more mobile, no government can run a light enforcement program without the active cooperation of the others. In undercutting tax collection in Europe, the Treasury is also ultimately undercutting tax collection here.

This whole episode can be accurately taken as an indication of the rising anxiety in the Treasury over the financing of President Reagan's continuing budget deficits. It is searching, increasingly urgently, for new ways to tap new sources of funds — never mind where, and never mind what principles might get trampled in the process.

The Mondale Cabinet Meeting

'... We got to learn to love them all'

The monster of racial bigotry has raised its ugly head in the Magic Valley.

Last January on the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday, a cross was burned in Jerome County. The leaders from the Aryan Nations explained that the Rev. King was their "enemy."

In the spring of this same year, the synagogue in Boise was bombed. Certainly that is a vivid reminder of the kind of religious intolerance that has plagued our Jewish neighbors for generations. Then, just recently, a black family in Poacetto was victimized when someone painted racial slurs on their home and the family car.

Even more recently, a family living in Italy who have two adopted, black, teenage, children also had their new car similarly damaged and spray-painted with racial slurs.

I was willing to let the first incident pass with little notice. It was obviously the work of a small hate group. We did not have to pay too much attention to the bombing of the synagogue; after all, it was not in our town. Yet the so-called incidents have continued and have finally come to our own quiet valley: We cannot remain silent!

It was in Montgomery, Ala., in the spring of 1965 that I stood up for the first time against the monster of racial bigotry in America. Dr. King was leading the now famous march from Selma to Montgomery. I went as a volunteer to work with the black Christian leaders of Montgomery to prepare for the over 25,000 people expected to arrive in that line of march. For the few hours I had in which to sleep, I was assigned to stay in an old, rundown shack with an old black man named "Mr. Thomas."

I will never forget that night as we sat up and talked. I asked that old man what he thought about all these people who were coming to be part of that historic civil rights demonstration. He said to me,

Guest opinion Rev. Tom Tucker

"You know, they made promises to us a long time ago and it looks like some of them might come true." Later that night, I remember him sharing this word of wisdom. "You know, the way I see it, there's good people and bad people in every race. But we got to learn to love them all."

This white boy with some original family roots in the South had traveled all the way from Portland, Ore., to learn that old, black man tell me that "we got to learn to love them all."

In one of his sermons, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. had this to say about the importance of love in combating racial bigotry. "To our most bitter opponents we say: 'We shall match your capacity to inflict suffering by our capacity to endure suffering. We shall meet your physical force with soul force. Do to us what you will, and we shall continue to love you. We cannot in all good conscience obey your unjust laws, because noncooperation with evil is as much a moral obligation as is cooperation with good. Throw us in jail, and we shall still love you. Bomb our homes and threaten our children, and we shall still love you. Send your hooded perpetrators of violence into our community at the midnight hour and beat us and leave us half-dead, and we shall still love you. But be assured that we will wear you down by our capacity to suffer. One day we shall win freedom, but not only for ourselves. We shall so appeal to your heart and conscience that we shall win you in the process, and our victory will be a double victory.'"

Yes! We even have to love the "enemy." Love is the most durable power in the world. And we have an enduring dream for a world free of all prejudice and bigotry. Dr. King spoke on another historic occasion and cried out to the entire nation that had had a dream — that someday this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all people are created equal." I have a dream that my children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character!

My challenge to you today is to look into your own heart and see if there be any prejudice, any hatred or bigotry towards anyone because of their color, sex, national or ethnic origin. If you find any, get rid of it! You are called to see all people as the children of God; they are our brothers and sisters, neighbors and friends. God gave us a wonderful gift by creating a colorful world! How dull it would be if we were all the same!

And, finally, my friends, I promised myself a long time ago that I would never serve a church, or a denomination, that closed its doors to anyone! I refuse to close the door of my own heart. We have friends in many lands and cultures and our lives have been deeply enriched by the love we share for each other. As we are told in scripture, "Anyone who says, 'I love God,' but hates his brother or sister is a liar!" We have this commandment from God, that whoever loves God should love his brother, sister or neighbor also.

The above remarks are excerpts from a sermon delivered by The Rev. Tom Tucker, pastor of the First United Methodist Church, Twin Falls, at the congregation on Sept. 9. He is currently chairperson of the Commission on Church and Society for the Oregon-Idaho Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Letters/ Movie 'Red Dawn' contains warning about communism to the U.S.

Know them by their deeds

Larry Anderson Jr. states in his letter Sept. 11, that everyone has a right to speak for God. Perhaps he's part right. For Jesus said God is a spirit and the only way a spirit can speak is through the people. The scribes and pharisees were also speaking, but they did not speak for the God that Jesus worshipped.

People like the Rabbi Kahn who say they are from Abraham's seed and are the chosen people, speak for a false, unjust and most deceitful God.

Jesus told these kind, "Ye are of your father the Devil, who was a liar and murderer from the beginning."

One that speaks for God, can usually be recognized by their deeds and the love and compassion they have for their fellow man.

Heroism failed in Hungary

Recently I saw the movie "Red Dawn" where children were fighting against the tanks and weapons of many communists. As a person living in Europe in the 1950s, this reminded me of the 1956 Hungarian revolution when men, women, and children fought tanks, machine guns, etc., with Molotov cocktails and even their bare hands.

What patriotism and heroism they displayed. The revolution in Hungary was lost despite such heroism but in Red Dawn they win the fight against communism. If communism takes power in Mexico, the USA will be next.

Let's not forget the courage and sacrifice of all those thousands of Hungarian children. Let's pray "Red Dawn" does not become a reality in the USA.

If you were a hero of the Hungarian revolution, you would respect the warning given in "Red Dawn" about the very real danger of communism to the USA. The dead children of the Hungarian revolution certainly would not want the USA to become another Hungary.

A cheap shot at Reagan

What an incredibly cheap shot! Mr. R. Sarto of Jerome as good as accused President Reagan of not only being in league with the devil, but he accused Ronald Reagan of being Satan himself!

Mr. Sarto, there are several very obvious holes in your logic, which I am sure even the most dim-witted among us would be able to see right through.

Several men throughout history, even leaders of nations have had no more in common with that scripture reference than that they had 18 characters in three names. This is a ridiculous assertion, and I am very frankly surprised that a 20th century man could feel no shame in offering it.

If you are not able to find the obvious fallacies in your logic, let me start you on a path.

Those whose names are not written in the Book of Life will be worshipping the Anti-Christ. These people, simply because their names are not written in the Book of Life are not Christians. Now, if the Rev. Falwell and his group are not Christians, then why in Heaven's name are they pushing day and night for such Godly things as prayer in schools? And if the Anti-Christ himself is pushing for the right of prayer in the classroom, then the Bible would speak to him, also, Jesus said, "...and a kingdom divided against itself cannot stand."

I am simply delighted when people who think they've figured it all out stand up to tell us about it. Mr. Sarto, you and others like you show just how ignorant you actually are every time you speak.

Please keep an open mind, and please don't believe everything you hear. Especially when its very thesis is as weak as your own understanding. If people look seriously the statements of Mr. Sarto and others like him, we would be in the midst of a witch-burning. Where would it stop?

The Anti-Christ will reveal himself without any room for ambiguity, as will the ignorant reveal themselves.

To accuse someone of being the very devil himself is to compromise one's own integrity. And that, Mr. Sarto, is just what you have done.

All of the above refers to whomever wrote the headline for his letter as follows.

Time for stand overdue

As a graduate and longtime supporter of the College of Southern Idaho, there is no doubt that the school has always strived to provide quality education. However, the time for someone to take a stand against many of the college's grading ethics has been long overdue.

When you have administrators and department heads creating loopholes behind closed doors or putting forth unwritten grading policies and saying "we've always done it this way," a good long look should be taken at the individuals in these positions.

I have found through my own experience the college to have honest, hard working, skilled faculty and administrators. Those individuals who have placed a shadow over the grading policies should step aside so that the College of Southern Idaho can be free to continue quality education to the community.

I feel that Jack Sims should be commended for his actions concerning the Sutton Incident and the college grading ethics involved.

Civil Rights Act would protect chance to reach the top

WASHINGTON — Until this week, I never thought of the Olympics as a teaching event. The closest they got to a civics lesson out in Los Angeles was the opening-night extravaganza when the dance troupe performed a historical pageant. After forming a human map of the United States, the "planners" from central casting pushed their covered wagons from west to east.

But on Sept. 11, the Olympic came eastward again with a slightly more educational purpose. A group of Olympians, including runner Mary Decker, volleyball's Flo Hyman and basketball's Cheryl Miller, starred at a Capitol Hill breakfast sponsored by Sens. Edward Kennedy and Robert Packwood. These senators are trying to press forward the Civil Rights Act of 1984 that would restore a broad interpretation of civil-rights legislation. (Do I hear a chant of "C.R.A. 1984.")

Title 9 was the legislation passed in 1972 to ban sex discrimination at educational institutions that received federal funding. Any school that discriminated against women anywhere — in employment or admissions, in the science lab or on the playing field — would lose all of its federal money.

The greatest measurable change under Title 9 has been in girls' and women's sports. It's because of Title 9 that college athletic budgets for women have grown from one percent to 16 percent of the total sports budget. It's because of Title 9 that the number of women in intercollegiate athletic programs jumped from 16,000 in 1972 to 150,000 today. It's because of Title 9 that there were female champions at this breakfast.

Last February, however, in the Grove City College case, the Supreme Court re-read the mind of Congress. The justices ruled that Title 9 was written to be applied to a particular program. If a college was getting money only for business administration, it could legally discriminate in engineering. In short, if a school is kicking around some of its students, the government won't buy the school more shoes, but it will go on buying gloves or a hat.

In the wake of this decision, the Reagan Justice Department; never what you would call ardent in pursuit of discrimination cases, closed 23 civil-rights investigations. It also served notice that 29 years' worth of civil-rights legislation that protected women minorities, the handicapped, or the aged could be subject to the same narrow interpretation.

The House responded by rewriting the laws so that its intent to ban discrimination was absolutely clear, even to a myopic court. The representatives cheered the bill on last June by a vote of 375 to 32. Now a similar bill with 63 co-sponsors is stalled in the Senate, where it is opposed by Reagan stalwart Orrin Hatch and is up against a relentless stopwatch. The Congress is scheduled to adjourn Oct. 5. The Reagan administration has yet to take a stand on this bill.

But back to our breakfast of champions. It was remarkable to hear Fly Hoan offering up thanks, not just to mom, dad and coach, but to civil-rights legislation without which "At a critical time in my life," she said, Title 9 "enabled me to receive a scholarship." Cheryl Miller later said the same thing: "There is no doubt that I would not be attending USC without a scholarship. I took Title 9 for granted."

Of the 200 women Olympians in the 1984 games, more than 170 received their training in a university or college athletic program that probably hadn't existed prior to 1972. This was something we didn't hear in the "Up Close and Personal" TV features.

Another medalist, Randy Snow of Houston, also spoke at the breakfast. Snow, who won a silver medal in the 1500-meter men's wheelchair race, said that he won for two reasons: "I trained my butt off for six months and the Olympic committee recognized me as an athlete."

This is the crux of the matter. Gold medals are not the most important results of Title 9 or any other civil-rights legislation. But they are peculiarly symbolic. Getting to the top, number one, the championship, is always an individual achievement, but you can't make it unless you're given a fair chance.

That's what civil-rights legislation is about, and that's what the Civil Rights Act of 1984 would protect: the chance.

Nude photos excite interest in Miss America Pageant

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Interest in the Miss America pageant is growing, with Saturday's finals sold out.

Pageant officials concede it is due to the furor over nude photos of Vanessa Williams.

"Advertisers are predicting a boom in television ratings thanks to that rekindled attention, but pageant officials aren't about to thank Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione of publishing the nude photograph of last year's winner.

Miss Williams relinquished her crown after Penthouse published photos of her that were taken before she became Miss America.

"Pageant officials have been on all three networks, both morning and evening news. Lord knows how many individual television stations and radio stations and in print," said Albert A. Marks Jr., executive director of the annual contest.

Guccione fanned the flames further when he announced this week that he has 350 color slides of one of this year's contestants, but said he would make her name public only if she becomes Miss America.

Marks, in his routine daily news

ALBERT MARKS
"Calling Guccione's bluff"

conference Thursday, said he was "calling his bluff" and challenged Guccione to identify the woman.

In a statement, Guccione said he would not reveal her name.

"Despite anything Mr. Marks may dream to the contrary, I was not born yesterday and I have no intention of revealing the name of the girl in the photographs. I do not want her to be thrown out of the contest as I am very interested in seeing her win. It's in my best interest," Guccione said.

The continued furor "in a perverse way" has brought a new national focus on the pageant and television ratings, which have dropped in the last decade, are expected to rise this week, said Marks.

In 1974, about 30.3 percent of the nation's television sets were tuned to the pageant, according to A.C. Nielsen Co. Last year, that dropped to 20.5 percent.

Marks said advertising agencies in New York believe the ratings could increase 35 percent over last year, although pageant officials are more conservative, estimating a 10 percent to 15 percent increase in viewers.

About a dozen television crews attended Marks' news conference, which normally draws just a few local stations and newspaper reporters in the days before the finals, which this year are being broadcast on NBC.

Helms confers on treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aides to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., conferred with State Department officials Thursday on ways to break an impasse holding up Senate committee action on a long-stalled genocide treaty.

A vote on the treaty by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was promised for next Wednesday at the latest, regardless of any compromise the negotiations might produce.

"I think we are making good progress," said Jim Luetter, legislative director for Helms.

Luetter said the talks might result in a modification of two riders that Helms wants to attach to the treaty to ensure that it could not override the Constitution and to limit the authority of an international court.

The State Department contends that the first rider is unnecessary and the second contradicts the intent of the treaty, which is to make genocide an international crime.

Luetter refused to say what modifications were being discussed.

White House to delay report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has decided to delay a report to Congress and to the public in which the Soviet Union is accused of flouting nearly a quarter-century of arms control agreements, a knowledgeable congressional source said Thursday.

According to the source, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, a decision had been taken to release the findings next Wednesday but that at the behest of the State Department there will be a postponement.

Immigration bill discussions open

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate conferees, opening discussions on legislation designed to keep foreigners from crossing the borders in search of jobs, agreed Thursday to make it a crime for anyone to knowingly hire an illegal alien.

warnings to fines and possible imprisonment.

The Senate language would include criminal penalties, up to a maximum $1,000 fine and six-month imprisonment for "a pattern or practice" of violations.

story that was as divisive as much of the argument that accompanied the debate in May, when the House passed its version 216-211. The Senate passed its version, strongly backed by the administration, more than a year ago.

The conferees, attempting to resolve differences over versions of a controversial immigration control bill passed by both chambers, agreed to adopt stronger Senate language and make all employers subject to the sanctions, which range from initial

The House version had exempted from the sanctions people who hired three or fewer employees. That chamber had also done away with the criminal designation, leaving only a civil penalty structure of fines.

The conference opened amid ora-

Overuse of pacemakers concerns doctors

CHICAGO (AP) — Implanting permanent cardiac pacemakers is justified only when heart-rhythm problems can't be corrected any other way, say doctors who have developed new guidelines to help prevent overuse of the devices.

Pacemaker implantation "has been overused and abused, and there hasn't been enough recognition that this is a very major intervention that changes the patient's whole life," says one of the doctors, Brendan Phibbs of the University of Arizona in Tucson.

There are many heart-rhythm irregularities that should be handled in less extreme and expensive ways, he said.

Prescription drugs, temporary heart conditions and otherwise treatable medical problems can cause such irregularities, he and his colleagues wrote in their guidelines, published in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

But the guidelines may be too rigid, says an accompanying editorial that argues the indications for pacemaker implantation are sometimes unclear.

Balanced budget bill headed for delay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite Senate Judiciary Committee approval Thursday, there appeared to be little chance this year for congressional action on a proposed constitutional amendment to require a balanced federal budget.

The measure has become a part of the election-year debate with President Reagan pressing for action on the amendment saying it would put an end to the free-spending ways of Congress.

Democrats have replied that Reagan is using the legislation as a smokescreen to divert attention from the mammoth budget deficits run up during his administration.

Meanwhile, the principal sponsors of proposed constitutional amendments requiring a balanced federal budget said that Reagan is considering a post-election session of Congress to establish a commission to draft a blueprint for reducing the federal deficit.

The Senate Judiciary Committee voted 11-4 Thursday to approve the amendment and supporters said they hope it will be considered

Search on for escaped drug dealer

JAMES QUINTANA
Escapes with outside help

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — City detectives and federal officers searched Thursday for a convicted drug dealer who escaped as he was being driven back to prison.

Officers were dispatched to the spot where four men, armed with shotguns, forced Denver County Deputy Sheriff Sam Lucero, 35, off a road near Kansas City International Airport Wednesday morning, said Kansas City Police Detective Steve Grosko.

James Orlando Quintana, 41, escaped and Lucero, who found in the trunk of the car the gunmen had used, Grosko said.

Quintana's attorney, Norman Pacheco, said his client had been kidnapped.

After a flight from Denver, Lucero was driving Quintana back to the U.S. Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., where he was serving concurrent 15-year sentences imposed in 1980 for conspiracy to distribute a controlled substance and five years for bribery.

Quintana, described by David Thomas of the U.S. attorney's office in Denver as "the largest heroin dealer in Colorado and probably the western United States," had been taken to Colorado Sept. 1 in connection with a civil lawsuit against his former attorney.

Pacheco said from Denver Thursday that the suit had been settled Sept. 5. He said the suit alleged that Denver attorney Joseph Veltri accepted a $10,000 fee but failed to file an appeal of Quintana's conviction for heroin trafficking.

Pacheco said that in the settlement, Veltri agreed to pay $5,000 to the charity of Quintana's choice and to pay his transportation back to Leavenworth.

Thomas had questioned whether more than one deputy should have helped transport Quintana, but Denver Corrections Director Moss Trujillo defended the procedure, saying Quintana was "dangerous to society and now probably more dangerous, but not vicious."

Lucero, who remained in Kansas City Thursday after being treated at a hospital for bruised ribs and an arm injury, managed to kick his way out of the car trunk through the back seat. Trujillo said Lucero told him that the gunmen talked of killing him before they fled, but that Quintana persuaded them not to do so. He said they told Lucero that Quintana mentioned being treated well by the deputy.

The gunmen and Quintana then fled in the car Lucero had rented, and it was later found abandoned in a motel parking lot.

Florida citrus shipments stopped

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — The federal government on Thursday halted all shipment of citrus from Florida, and experts considered burning thousands of trees in more than 40 nurseries to stop the spread of destructive citrus canker.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's charge of citrus fruit and plants came as workers continued burning about 1 million citrus trees at the large nursery where the latest outbreak of the canker appeared.

The recommendation now goes to Florida Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner, who created an 11-member council Wednesday to coordinate an eradication program. Conner abruptly canceled a trip to Portland, Ore., Thursday and was briefed by senior advisers, said Merthe Rhodes in Tallahassee.

"We've got harvesting going on of limes, lemons and grapefruits with orange harvesting to start soon, so we're just a very critical stage to have this happen," Rhodes said.

The ban will remain in effect until further notice as Florida prepares for its billion-dollar fall harvest with grapefruit and some orange varieties expected to be ready to pick in a few weeks, said Linda Perry, of the state Department of Agriculture's Division of Plant Industry.

The task force of citrus industry experts recommended that more than 40 nurseries be forced to destroy all citrus stock bought this year from Ward's Nursery in Avon Park.

Searchers recover bodies of four miners

SHIELDS, Ky. (AP) — Recovery teams on Thursday found the last of four bodies of miners killed when a huge slab of rock fell on them in a coal mine.

Those workers were forced to run for safety when loose rock began falling around them, an official said. All rescuers scamped safely to the mine entrance when a second big chunk of the shaft fell inside. Don Trucking Co.'s Burger No. 2 mine began crumbling, said David Jones, administrator of the state medical examiner program.

"Now they're sending a crew in — I think three are going in — to evaluate the situation," said Jones, who had been outside the mine in eastern Kentucky all day.

Four men who worked at the mine were crushed, 1,600 feet inside the mine Wednesday, state Mines and Minerals Commissioner Willard Stanley said. Two bodies were out by 7:30 a.m. Thursday, 22 hours after the accident.

Banks surrenders

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — American Indian Movement leader Dennis Banks ended his nine-year flight from South Dakota authorities Thursday and surrendered for sentencing on 1976 riot and assault convictions.

"Time has taken its toll," Banks said when he turned himself in at the Rapid City airport.

Circuit Judge Marshall Young denied Banks' request for bail and ordered the 47-year-old Indian activist held in jail until an Oct. 2 sentencing hearing.

McClore joins outrage over debate schedule

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's senior senator has added his voice to the criticism over arrangements for political debates in October and November.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said Thursday that he was surprised to find himself scheduled for a Nov. 1 debate with Democratic challenger Pete Busch.

McClore said in a news release that he didn't make a commitment to appear at that time, although he can rearrange his schedule to accommodate the scheduled appearance.

McClore's complaint came on the heels of criticism by U.S. Reps. Larry Craig and George Hansen.

The two Republicans also are dissatisfied with arrangements made by the League of the Women Voters and the Idaho Press Club, sponsors of the debates that are to be televised statewide.

"I find it very interesting that they keep issuing press releases instead of calling me," Sally Gibson, the league's Idaho president, said Thursday from her home in Pocatello.

She said McClure's staff agreed to the Nov. 1 date. Mrs. Gibson also said the debate organizers have acknowledged that candidates seeking reelection may have unexpected business that prevents them from appearing.

Hansen has said that contrary to the league's claims, he didn't agree to a scheduled Oct. 18 debate with Democrat Richard Stallings. Hansen said other commitments could prevent him from appearing, and his participation remains only "a possibility."

Craig said he is unhappy with the last element in his scheduled Oct. 25 debate with Democratic opponent Bill Heller.

Craig's campaign manager, Karmen Larsen, said he is concerned the "final 20 minutes" of the debate could turn into a free-for-all between the candidates.

Stream flow grant ruling appealed

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A 7th District Court decision upholding a minimum stream flow grant to protect a 24-mile stretch of the Henry's Fork has been appealed to the Idaho Supreme Court.

The area involved includes the scenic Upper and Lower Mesa Falls.

Montana Power Co. is challenging Idaho's Minimum Stream Flow Act and asserts there isn't enough evidence to support the grant for the Henry's Fork, says Kent Foster, an Idaho Falls attorney representing the utility.

Montana Power owns land surrounding Upper Mesa Falls.

District Judge Grant Young ruled against Montana Power in July. Young affirmed the act's constitutionality and stated there was ample evidence to support a minimum flow grant ordered by the Idaho Department of Water Resources.

Ship to be 'Arco'

BOISE (AP) — Another U.S. Naval service ship will be named after the Butte County town of Arco.

The governor's office said Thursday it has notified that a medium auxiliary repair dry dock, now under construction in Seattle, will be named Arco. It is scheduled to be launched in December, and turned over to the Navy and placed into service early in 1986.

The first Arco, also a service craft, was decommissioned in 1971.

I pray to win, says Miss Idaho

Hoag lives Miss America role in mind

By KATHLEEN BIRD
The Associated Press

PATTY HOAG
Says Heaven is top priority

"Heaven's my highest goal. Seek first the kingdom of God and all things shall be added unto you," she said. "That's my first priority."

To prepare for the national competition, which ends Saturday night, she said she has been doing "a lot of mind work and positive thinking."

"I want the chance to represent America. It will also open many doors for me, not only singing-wise but I'll get a lot of personal growth from it," she said.

She has also been dieting, which Idaho's representative to the pageant says is difficult when it comes to foods she loves — like potatoes from her home state, blackberry ice cream and milkshakes laced with crushed Oreos cookies.

"It takes discipline," said Miss Hoag, who is 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighs 112 pounds.

Miss Hoag said she also has been skimming and reading books, newspapers and weekly news magazines, including Sports Illustrated.

She also said she likes playing tennis, skiing, sewing, swimming and being with her friends.

Miss Hoag, who has sung in church and school choirs for eight years and has had four years of dance and one year of voice training, said she enjoys the production numbers of the pageant at Convention Hall.

"I love to dance," she said. "I love to shine and really play on the stage."

Miss Hoag competed in the swimsuit competition Wednesday night. She was scheduled to appear in the evening gown competition Thursday night and sing "You Are the Wind Beneath My Wings" in the talent portion Friday night.

"Every girl dreams of it," she said of being Miss America.

She also said that fulfilling the dream takes a lot of work and preparation, and that she believes God will determine her destiny.

"I want him to put me where he can use me," she said.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Miss Idaho, Patty Hoag, says she is relying on years of preparation, the power of positive thinking and prayer to help her in her quest to be crowned Miss America 1985.

Miss Hoag, 19, of Burley, a gospel singer who says she loves going to church, said Thursday she has been spending her spare time at the national pageant here thinking, praying and "living the role in my mind."

"I pray to win and also pray that if there's someone better to do the job, they will win," said Miss Hoag, a blonde, blue-eyed sophomore nursing student at Boise State University.

She describes herself as a Christian and attends a Pentecost church. The Miss America crown, and the scholarship money, travel, public appearances and fame that comes with the title, come second to her faith.

Prisoner isolated after guard injured

BOISE (AP) — A penitentiary inmate accused of injuring a guard during a hearing.

Thomas Phippen is accused of using his fists to strike guard Bill Merrill on Wednesday. Merrill was treated for cuts and released from a Boise hospital.

A confrontation occurred after Merrill tried to remove Phippen from a cell where he didn't belong, Deputy Warden Ralph Pierce said.

Pierce said Phippen had been drinking home brew with other inmates.

Lewiston air remains poor

LEWISTON (AP) — Although air monitoring has shown a drop in the amount of dust in the air, some people have contended the change does not mean air quality in the Lewiston-Clarkston Valley is good.

"I don't want to see any of these restrictions taken off and you let it go wild, because in the last year it has gotten worse," John M. Mock said at a public hearing Wednesday night. Mock lives north of the Potlatch Corp.

The hearing was held on a proposal by the states of Idaho and Washington to change the valley's designation as a non-attainment area for federal air standards.

"I would agree that redesignation of the Lewiston-Clarkston area does not mean that the air is perfectly clean," Idaho Air Quality Bureau chief Kenneth Brooks said.

But he disagreed with Mock and others who said it was not healthy to breathe the air.

Air monitors at several spots in the valley have shown that total suspended particulates in the air have not exceeded the national primary standards for the annual and 24-hour measure since 1982.

Evans pushes Hispanics to use ballot

GARDEN CITY (AP) — Gov. John Evans urged Hispanics to elect candidates at the local, state and national level to adequately represent their culture in our society.

"Speaking to the Hispanic conference in Garden City Thursday, Evans said until more Hispanics enter the political arena, "Your voice will not be heard as strongly as it should."

Meanwhile, keynote speaker Dr. Sabine Ulbarri, professor of Spanish at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, said Americans are losing insight into other cultures by refusing to learn other languages.

Image is a national organization representing Hispanics — in government and private industry, said group spokesman Rudy Pena.

The proportion of Hispanics in government is not nearly proportional to the general Hispanic population, Evans said. In addition to urging Hispanic candidates to seek office, Evans said he has helped alleviate the situation by appointing minorities to

Governor answers wilderness critics

GARDEN CITY (AP) — Gov. John Evans said Idaho's congressional delegation should have "applauded" his trip to Washington to discuss wilderness issues rather than being critical.

Evans trip to Washington earlier this week to discuss Idaho wilderness with congressmen who are working out a wilderness bill brought criticism from Sen. James McClure and Reps. Larry Craig and Steve Symms.

Symms said Evans trip "was puzzling" and said the governor could do more to produce an Idaho wilderness bill by endorsing the GOP-sponsored measure calling for 526,000 acres.

"This is Idaho's wilderness and I'm the governor," said Evans, speaking to reporters in Garden City. "I'm going to stay involved."

Evans said.

While Evans called for improving career opportunities for Hispanics, Ulbarri urged all Americans to improve their understanding of other cultures by learning a second language.

"If you can focus on reality from different angles, you get a better idea of what reality is all about," Ulbarri said. "Each language has its own unique way of focusing on reality."

"A wedge is being driven between the Hispanic and his language," he said. "The Hispanic soul is suffering from malnutrition as his language dies before his eyes."

Ulbarri said Americans suffer on an international level because they are unable to communicate in other languages.

"A tri-lingual is a person who speaks three languages. A bi-lingual is a person who speaks two languages. And a mono-lingual is a gringo," Ulbarri quipped.

government positions.

"Evans said he will also try to implement recommendations of a task force he appointed last October to study affirmative action in Idaho.

Quoting a Ford Foundation study, Evans said that 1982 some 32 percent of American Hispanics lived in poverty — a rate 2 1/2 times greater than Anglos. In 1981, the median income of Hispanics was $10,000 a year — compared to a $23,000 median income listed for Anglos, the study said.

The governor also called creating a state agency to provide guidance and counsel to other state agencies, especially personnel. That would create greater accessibility to Hispanics in filling state positions.

PUC wants to get out of rail-rate regulation

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission, faced with federal demands for expansion of a handbook, wants to rescind its involvement in regulation of rail-shipping rates within the state.

The PUC said its participation in the rate-regulating process has been meaningless, because the real power rests with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The PUC's authority largely has involved a right to protest rail rates when shippers in Idaho complain about them, commission spokeswoman Dana Howard said. But the PUC hasn't received complaints from shippers, she said.

Ms. Howard said the fact the PUC officially is a participant in the rate-regulating process has left the Idaho agency vulnerable to ICC demands.

Those include the ICC's request that Idaho enlarge its two-page handbook on rail rates. In a document seeking to drop PUC involvement, commissioners said the ICC wants "to consign to the scrap heap a simple, two-page set of rules that work."

The enlargement proposed by the ICC would amount to a "scheme that would serve no purpose but to provide Idaho with an administrative rule for every conceivable rail shipment that could arise anywhere in the nation," the PUC wrote.

The PUC also charged the ICC is involved in an endless cycle of rulemaking that is "a make-work relief project for the ICC's bureaucracy."

Public comment on the PUC's proposal to withdraw its participation will be accepted through Oct. 5, Ms. Howard said.

Economic crisis strikes Argentina

By KEVIN NOBLET
The Associated Press
MAR DEL PLATA, Argentina — President Raúl Alfonsín appealed Thursday for "regional solidarity" in tackling the economic crisis of 11 Latin American countries with a combined foreign debt of more than $330 billion.

The Argentine leader's call came at the opening of a two-day meeting of the 11-nation "Cartagena Group." Ministers met behind closed doors to discuss proposals to the international lending community for new debt relief.

Alfonsín said he recognized some countries "fear that our gestures and actions of regional solidarity might affect negotiations" the countries are holding individually with creditor banks, but he called for unity.

"Unity is not confrontation," he said. "Our unity, so far as is possible, means the materialization today of that which until now is only a potential for negotiation. We must gain negotiating room."

debts has been ruled out by delegates. However, Colombian President Belisario Betancur has said the 11 countries should jointly seek relief from the International Monetary Fund. In the event of new interest rate increases.

Interest rate hikes have added billions of dollars to the staggering debt of the 11 countries — Argentina, Mexico, Brazil, Venezuela, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, Bolivia, Colombia, Uruguay and the Dominican Republic. The Cartagena Group was named after the Colombian city where the nations first met in June.

Most of the countries were represented here by their foreign and economy ministers. A few countries substituted Cabinet-level presidential advisers.

Proposals approved at the meeting will be presented to the annual meeting of the IMF and the World Bank beginning Sept. 20 in the United States.

Several delegates have appealed for a forum in which indebted countries could negotiate directly with wealthy nations and international banks. However, they made no specific proposal on where and how the so-called "North-South dialogue" might be held.

In his speech, Alfonsín said Latin American countries had been hobbled by dwindling productivity and by the growing proportions of their export earnings dedicated to servicing foreign debts.

OSTEND, Belgium (AP) — Salvage crews on Thursday retrieved the first of 30 containers of radioactive material from the torn hull of a French freighter that sank 19 days ago in the North Sea, officials said.

The officials also said they were quite certain the 29 other containers carrying uranium hexafluoride were still inside the hull of the 4,210-ton Mont Louis, which broke open during a fierce storm last Monday.

"We found a lot of them bunched together in the forward part of the ship," said Paul Goris of the Antwerp salvaging firm of Union de Renouveau et de Sauvetage. He said this led him to believe all of the full containers were still inside the hull.

Divers also picked up one more of the 22 empty containers aboard, the 14th to be retrieved to date, said Hans Waterkamp of the Dutch salvaging firm of Smit Tak International.

Pope seeks end to 'race' for profits

MONCTON, New Brunswick (AP) — Pope John Paul II, in an appeal for economic justice, called on the faithful Thursday to abandon the "race for profit" and learn to share their wealth.

Facing 100,000 worshippers gathered in a muddy field for Mass, the pope quoted St. Paul on human communities:

"There must be no competition among you... so that nobody thinks of his own interests first, but everybody thinks of other people's interests instead."

His homily in this eastern Canadian city was the second time in two days that the pontiff hit hard on economic issues.

He is expected to touch on the same themes again in the remaining seven days of his Canadian tour, but they are particularly relevant in Canada's Atlantic provinces — the country's poorest region.

In blustery weather, facing the tens of thousands of worshippers — three times as many had been expected — the pontiff told them he knew that "an economic crisis affects the local communities."

Blackout halts strike in Ireland

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — A strike by electric workers that brought rolling blackouts affecting virtually all Irish homes and industries was called off Thursday when both sides agreed to new talks at a government mediation center.

Two thousand pickets, striking because of an overtime pay dispute, had shut down nine large generating plants that produce more than half of the country's electricity.

Beginning Thursday morning, families in Ireland's one-million homes lost lights, television and cooking facilities for several hours at a time. The blackouts caused a run on gas stoves and lamps in shops.

But late Thursday, after an appeal by Irish Premier Garret FitzGerald, the unions representing the strikers called a halt to the dispute and ordered the pickets withdrawn.

Soviet observers scorn maneuvers

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The Soviet Union will not send observers to NATO's fall maneuvers for the first time since 1981 in the latest sign of a deepening East-West chill, the West German government said Thursday.

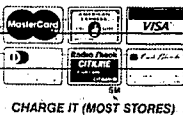

Defense Ministry spokesman Ruediger Drews told The Associated Press by telephone that the Soviets gave no reason for the boycott.

"Their rejection of our invitation to send observers came as no surprise," Drews said, adding it apparently "has something to do with the general cooling" of contacts with the West.

North Atlantic Treaty Organization officials were drawing the same conclusion.

Blaine County makes magazine's top 100

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

CHICAGO — Blaine County is one of the best 100 counties in the United States, according to a list compiled by Outside magazine.

"Where the desert meets the mountains — with Sun Valley in the foothills" is the short description the magazine gives Blaine County in the October issue of the Chicago-based magazine. Blaine was one of three Idaho counties on the list.

"The counties were judged on the traits the magazine's outdoor-oriented readers want most in a place to live," says one of its editors, Outside's research staff and writer Andrea Hell looked for counties that were "wild, yet livable" and picked what they considered the best from the nation's 3,092 counties, says Senior Editor Marilyn Johnson.

Rugged terrain, heavily low population densities and a variety of nearby recreation opportunities are the traits the magazine looked for in rating the counties, Johnson says.

Counties with lakes, wilderness or other reserved lands, canyons and wild rivers where people can hike, camp, run rapids and enjoy backcountry-treks received the magazine's attention, Johnson says.

Other Idaho counties listed by the magazine were Idaho and Teton.

Idaho County's vast public lands, including the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness Area, and wild rivers, including the Main Fork of the Salmon River, pleased the magazine.

Idaho County also made the magazine's special-14-county list of "prettiest counties." The "high mountain valleys" and Teton peaks qualified Teton County as one of the best.

The magazine also named Bonner County to its list of "backcountry counties," calling it "an escape way up near the Canadian border." Eight other counties made this list. Other lists included "best weather" and "sportiest" counties, but no other Idaho counties qualified.

However, the article did mention the city of Boise.

Discussing the diversity of the nation and some odd facts researchers uncovered preparing for the article, writer Helli says Boise is "as sunny as Miami and San Diego, and even sunnier than Dallas and Tampa."

Johnson says for the magazine's research, Helli and the research staff relied on the expertise of guides, outfitters and park rangers.

They also pored through materials published by chambers of commerce and real estate dealers and read wilderness guide books to isolate the likeliest candidates.

Although there are many more than 100 counties worthy of making the list, Johnson says she believes the magazine has a fair representation of the nation's best in the colorful issue.

Each state had at least one county on the best list.

Four states, Alaska, California, Utah and Wyoming, topped the list with four counties each.

Idaho, along with its neighbors Oregon, Washington and Montana, joined five other states with three counties on the list.

The magazine's favorite? The island county of San Juan, north of Washington state's Puget Sound.

The list was heavily tilted to the West, Johnson says, where lower population densities help preserve more of the wild lands the magazine's readers enjoy. She says it was difficult to find unpopulated Eastern counties, but they are there and many were listed.

Youngster gives a big 'thank you'

Willie Harbison buys friends at hospital an oven as a gift

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Ten-year-old Willie Harbison spends a lot of time in hospitals, so you would think he would be a bit sick of the place. And you wouldn't expect him to buy the hospital a gift, but he did.

The frail victim of cystic fibrosis, a progressive illness that gradually deteriorates the victim's breathing, Willie is in and out of hospitals constantly for special medication and treatment necessary to keep him breathing.

When not in the hospital, he is getting treatment and medication at home. He has been treated in several California hospitals, but he says Magic Valley Regional Medical Center at Twin Falls is his favorite.

"It's the staff," that makes it special, he says. He knows all of the nurses in pediatrics department by their first names and is fond of each one with a favorite on each shift.

"In view of his preference, it isn't surprising that Willie decided to give his friends a gift. About two days ago the gift arrived, purchased from Willie's own small savings account, and delivered to the fourth floor nurses' station.

"It's a carousel microwave oven, and is now being enjoyed by nurses and other patients on the pediatrics floor.

"Now they (nurses) don't have to go down to the basement to warm up my dinner," he said.

His mother, Terri Harbison, says it seems that whenever it's meal time for Willie someone comes in with a treatment or a test and dinner gets cold. This was how Willie found out the nurses wanted a microwave oven on their own floor.

It isn't just for Willie. It is helpful for warming infants bottles and baby food, and even an occasional lunch or snack for a nurse, says Connie Salontia, one of Willie's "best friends." Tuesday night there was popcorn for everyone in the department, the aftermath of nurses trying out their new gift.

When Willie was first diagnosed as having cystic fibrosis at the age of 3 months, friends took up a collection for a savings account to help with medical costs. The account started at $170, and with a few additional deposits by his father, Tom, and some interest payments, it grew to a point that would cover the $200 gift, with some left over.

Willie isn't sure what to do with the remaining part of the bank account. But he admits a keen interest in video games, something that helps him pass the long hours in the hospital. Even a small computer might be nice, he concludes. Of course, it would be available to all of the youngsters in the fourth floor pediatrics ward.

The gift was a thank-you for the special care and treatment he gets at the hospital.

"I got to wear regular clothes and I get to run around the hospital and I can go outside," Willie explains.

He and Connie play volleyball in the hospital hallway and for exercise he walks to therapy treatments in other areas of the building.

A straight "A" student, although he was only in school about half of the time last year, Willie spends some of his hospital time studying. When he is released and health permits, he returns to class in Hagerman.

This year he hasn't yet been able to go to school but his math, science, reading and other school books go to the hospital with him.

"If it weren't for his very caring parents," says Connie, "Willie wouldn't have half of the chance he has for an extended life. They have done everything possible for him and right now he's doing pretty well."

Buhl fire chief wants to broaden enforcement capabilities

By HAL BERNTON
and KAREN MAIN
Times-News writers

BUHL — Buhl Fire Chief Mark Grimes will meet with city attorney Brent Martens to develop upgraded city fire codes and enforcement procedures.

The meeting, scheduled to take place within the next week, was arranged at a Monday Buhl City Council session in which Grimes proposed to update city fire codes and broaden his enforcement authorities.

Following the Aug. 22 fire at the Sports Shop cafe building, Grimes said he lacked sufficient authority to issue citations for fire and building code violations.

But after further research, Grimes said he does have a limited citation authority under the 1976 Uniform Fire Code adopted as an ordinance by the city council.

But Grimes said it is "very difficult" to issue citations under the fire code.

At the Monday night meeting, Grimes proposed to expand his enforcement authorities to include the Uniform Building Code, the Life Safety Code, and the Abatement of Dangerous Building Code.

Now, these three codes are enforced only by the city building inspector, according to Martens.

Grimes said the building inspector only looks at new buildings, and that many of the code problems are in older buildings.

"It's been kind of mixed up, but all of those codes should be used by both the fire chief and the building inspector," Grimes told the council.

Grimes said some property owners are trying to bring their structures up to code, but that others "need a little prodding."

Martens said the proposed ordinance amendment will grant "more enforcement powers" to the fire chief. He said the action had the support of the city council.

The proposed amendment would also update the city fire code from a 1976 to a 1982 version of the Uniform Fire Code.

In years past, Grimes has twice tried unsuccessfully to gain more enforcement powers. He attributes his past failures to the wrong approach.

"People got the impression that I was trying to clean up Dodge City in 30 days or less, but I'm not," he said. I want to work with business people and work with property people."

Grimes said that citations for fire or building code violations are only a "very last step" in a long process.

In an August interview, Grimes said the Sports Shop building did not meet the 1976 Uniform Fire Code, but was being gradually upgraded.

The fire killed the building's lone tenant, who resided in a second-story apartment, also caused about $30,000 in damages, according to an unofficial estimate developed by Grimes.

City shoots down beer in parks

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — A proposed ordinance to legalize beer and wine drinking at Buhl's city parks and baseball fields went down the drain Monday night.

Faced with more than 20 residents filling City Hall and petitions signed by hundreds of people opposed to the ordinance, the Buhl City Council voted the proposal down.

Only Councilman Jack Fields, who suggested the ordinance last month, abstained from voting on the law that would have allowed beer and wine in all city parks and baseball fields except the North Park ballfield. The ordinance also prohibited glass containers.

Although the council had heard testimony from religious leaders and others opposed to the issue at last month's meeting, some people wanted to make sure the council understood their position.

"I think the council doesn't really have to hear a rebash," Mayor Jim Barker told the crowd, but several people spoke out against the ordinance again anyway.

The mayor said he understood that some people were against drinking liquor in the parks because it is not conducive to family activities, can become excessive and cause rowdiness or drunken driving, and the current law against liquor in the parks is sufficient for the community.

And Audrey von Lindem, who owns the Rusty Nail Pizza Parlor in Buhl, brought forth a petition in which her personal reason for keeping liquor out of the parks and baseball fields.

Appeals court sets cases

BOISE — A dozen appeals to court decisions in the Fifth Judicial District in Magic Valley will be argued next week before the Idaho Court of Appeals convened in the Supreme Court Building in Boise.

One of the cases involves a verdict that an insurance policy did not cover the death of a young girl killed in Twin Falls County in a shooting accident.

The daughter of Wildliffe Newell and Lillian Eddy died when a gun discharged in a motorhome owned by Tom and Mike Smith. The motorhome was parked at Rogerson while the adults were in a store and their children remained in the vehicle. The parties were on a hunting trip at the time.

Newell and Eddy filed claim with the Smiths' auto insurance carrier, but the claim was denied. The court later held the policy did not provide coverage for the accident and Newell and Eddy appealed. The case will be argued Monday.

Jerome school board OKs field trips

By LOY BELL
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome County School Board approved field trips for students Monday, noting most of them were to be taken during out-of-class time.

"Whenever possible, field trips are being incorporated into a weekend," said High School Principal Jerry Diehl.

He said, however, the trips, considered an award, are important to the students. Superintendent Stephenson Youngerman said "I cannot believe a student can learn as much in a classroom in Jerome as he or she could by attending the Legislature while it's in session in Boise."

After studying the requests, trustee Ken Baumgartner said he was getting a little tired of people stopping me on the street and saying, 'Look at the field trip agenda, athletics are taking no school time.'

The board, following discussion on the subject, gave blanket approval of the field trips.

In other business: Following recommendations made at a recent wellness conference, co-sponsored by the State Department of Education and Idaho State University, a plan was presented to the board to use whole wheat bread instead of white bread, cut salt use in half, and eliminate sugar from the school hot lunch program.

• The board agreed to continue the district's in-service program and scheduled three days, one of which requires no school release time and two half-days on Oct. 17 and Feb. 15.

Teachers will earn one credit, for a total of 15 hours of participation in the in-service program. Among the subjects to be covered will be the science of teaching and lesson plans.

It will be mandatory for teachers to attend. Architectural plans have been drawn up for a 16-classroom school to be built or, alternatively, a 10-classroom addition to Jefferson School and a six-classroom addition to the Junior High. "It boils down to this," Youngerman said, "Jerome is either going to have to choose a new school or add additions to take care of the students."

agenda involves a court decision to award damages to Miller Construction Co. of Twin Falls, after a subcontracting firm, Stresstek, failed to carry out subcontract work on an 180 construction project. Stresstek appealed the court decision.

An appeal from a Cassia County case to be heard Monday involves the injury of Halley South, 14-month old daughter of George and Marcey South, who fell from a stairway in the Jack Holland home.

Other cases include:

- Standlee vs. St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co., Twin Falls County case involving a malpractice action against doctor in which the district court held the matter did not fall within the malpractice insurance coverage.
- Straub vs. Reilly vs. Milhouse, in Jerome county involving suit over property—filed in Gooding County—Strout sued for a real estate commission after William and Dorothy Milhouse sold the property and the court ruled against Milhouse, awarding the commission. Strout cross-appealed saying the court erred in limiting the recovery to the sale commission.
- An appeal by Daniel Weis results from a truck accident in Mindoka County, in which he was injured while employed by Arnold Transfer of New Mexico. Weis filed for damages in both Idaho and New Mexico. The court ruled his only source of coverage was under Workman's Compensation in New Mexico since he was employed by Arnold Transfer at the time of the accident.
- Full Circle Inc. vs. Shelling, an appeal from Jerome County. The case involves a disagreement between the plaintiff and defendant over the amount owed by Shelling for delivery of fuel to his farm.
- Maxson vs. Farmers Insurance Co., an appeal from Twin Falls County. The appeal by Maxson is for insurance coverage by the policy of the father of Rocky Slinger, with Farmer's Insurance for coverage of injuries suffered by Maxson when he was allegedly struck by Slinger and suffered a fractured jaw.
- Burgess vs. New Hampshire Insurance Co. Burgess Farms of Cassia County appealed a district court denial of coverage of damages from vandalism that resulted in flooding of a potato cellar.

Courthouse to get new siren
 RUPERT — Fire Marshal Thayne Taylor received the approval of the Mindoka County Board of Commissioners Monday to set a new electronic siren near the courthouse building.

The new siren will have a larger range and will be tied in with the sheriff office's auxiliary generator, Taylor said.

"In the event of a major disaster or power outage, we will still have a siren because of the generator," he added.

Taylor said because the new siren will have several different tones, the people will need to be educated on how to interpret them.

There will be a high and low fire alarm, an attack alarm, a general alert and a voice system all of which the present sirens located on the water tower and on K Street do not have.

The new siren will cost from $95,000 to $97,000, but Taylor says there will be no charge to the county or commissioners.

Taylor says he is working with the disaster service officers and civil defense director George Falkner in an effort to split the cost between the city of Rupert and the Civil Defense Department.

Beer

"Purely selfish, I think you should leave the beer drinkers in the bars where they belong," she said.

On the other hand, the mayor said some residents were in favor of legalizing beer and wine drinking, especially at ball parks which hold adult activities. He said also the existing law has not been enforced anyway and there have been a few problems.

But although approximately 150 residents had signed a petition favoring the ordinance and the mayor and council members said many residents had called them in support of the proposal, only one man at the meeting questioned whether keeping the ban on liquor in the parks was enforceable or a conflict of church and state.

"I guess those who drink beer don't want to come before the public and speak out," Fields said.

Huizinga owns 1-stroke Cactus Pete's edge

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

JACKPOT. Nev. — Burley's Ken Huizinga took a one-stroke lead as the Cactus-Pete's $20,000 Amateur Golf Tournament neared into its final day.

Thursday marked the debut of the championship, first and second flights as the other three flights completed their 36-hole competition on Wednesday.

Huizinga fired a one-under par 71 to take a one-stroke lead over Joe and Jim Malay of Weiser and Doyle Dugger, Twin Falls. Dr. Chic Cutler, Twin Falls, was alone at 74 while Al Peace of Sun Valley and Jim Packard, Twin Falls, had 75s.

Those seven plus the remainder of the championship flight played under nearly ideal conditions — especially after things warmed up on the early-morning shot start.

But as the afternoon squad teed off on its assigned holes, the wind suddenly sprang into 25-mile-per-hour life and that crippled the chances of defending champion Perry Hanchey, Twin Falls, and Burley's duo of Glenn Blakely and Terry Spackman.

Hanchey, who cut a day's vacation in Barbours to defend his title, arrived at Jackpot by private plane from Salt Lake City about five minutes before his tee time. He had a rocky start, going two over on the first two holes, but stayed there through the nine. He was pointed toward a 77 on No. 1 the second time around when he had to virtually embrace a tree, putting his hands around the trunk and then swinging at the ball on the other side.

"I yanked," he said, "and yanked, wound up with a double bogey."

"Tomorrow will be our day to make a move," said Blakely, "if the weather goes like it has the last two (still in the morning and windy in the afternoon). I don't think the other part of the flight can post those kind of numbers in the kind of wind we played in this afternoon."

Blakely ended the day with a 78 while Spackman shot an 80 and "I had to play hard over the last nine to hold that."

In the first flight, Bob Saxvik, Burley, and Kay Riley enjoyed the morning weather to the tune of two-over par 74s. Dave Williams of Salt Lake City rolled in a 20-footer on the 18th to stay within a stroke at 75 while Bob Miller of Oregon, taking his first look at the course, had a 76 that included five three-puts.

Chris Israel, Twin Falls, and Cliff Masingill, Weiser, shared 77 while George Benders, Mountain Home, and Bob Clark, had 78s. Nick Hansen, Twin Falls, posted a 79.

An oddity developed among the Ketchum contingent. Lee Bernard arose early to have a hearty breakfast before his 8 a.m. tee time. He left his clubs outside Cactus Pete's and went into the cafe. While he was eating, the wives of the players boarded a bus for the trip to Canyon Springs in Twin Falls and the women's auxiliary scramble tournament. The unsuspecting bus driver simply threw Bernard off on the bus.

"So when Bernard Tee off it was with a set borrowed from Ketchumite Andy DIFani. The change was too much. Bernard shooting a 90 to end his hopes for victory."

But DIFani exaggerated the clubs in the afternoon round when he carried a 78 to lead the second flight by two strokes. Cecil Mellinger was second at 80 with Norm Adams, Tony McLaughlin and Harold Ufferman tied at 81, Ken Fierro at 82 and Francis Kalsler, Bruce Meacham, Bryan James, Dee Pruitt and Jerry Wright all jammed in at 83.

Tourney leader a longshot

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Longshot Woody Blackburn, who last season lost his playing rights because his dismal play, fired a career-best 69 under-par 69 and established the first round lead Thursday in the $300,000 Greater Milwaukee Open.

Blackburn, 33, who struggled throughout a seven-year PGA Tour career, does not now have an Approved Player card and got into this tournament only of the last qualifying category, past champions.

He teamed with Bill Kratzert to win the 1976 National Team Play Championship.

Blackburn, who has never finished higher than 84th on the money-winning list, has never covered his Tour expenses and last year missed the cut in 21 of the last 22 tournaments he entered.

But he took advantage of what he called "a perfect afternoon to play golf," to reel off a string of four consecutive birdies on the front side, which he played in 31, then spiced his round with a 60-foot putt for an eagle-3 on the 16th hole.

"I'm not thinking about winning at this stage," he said. "It's just nice to play a good round. For a long time last year, a good round was 74."

He held a one-shot lead over Dan Pohl, who said he was "probably the most surprised person here," after a solid 65.

"I came here with the attitude: Well, what's gonna happen?" Pohl said.

"I took three weeks off and didn't touch a club. My wife had a baby boy, our first child, last Saturday. I didn't get here until Wednesday. And I kind of figured on just hanging in there," Pohl said.

Gary Hallberg was next with a 66, 6 under par on the 7,000-yard Tuckaway Country Club course.

The group of 67 included veteran George Archer, a winner last week in Sutton, Mass., 48-year-old Dale Douglass, Mark O'Meara, Donnie Hammond, Mike Nicolette, rookie Corey Pavin and Bill Kratzert.

Tom Watson, making his first start in this event, rolled for a 51 on his last nine holes and got in with a 69. He birdied his last two holes.

"I'm trying to protect the money-winning lead and hold off Tom Kite — he's only a couple of points back — on the Player of the Year standings," Watson said.

Kite, winner of two titles and holding a slim lead in the race for the Vardon Trophy, which goes to the man with the lowest scoring average on the Tour, had a disappointing 73 in threatening weather. Calvin Peete, who trails Kite by 61 of a point in scoring average, also had a 73.

Defending champion Morris Hatafsky shot a 69.

Blackburn, who used only 11 putts on the first nine holes, scored from 15 feet on the first hole, missed a short birdie putt on the second, then ran off a string of four birdies in a row.

Gooding tops Kimberly

Lisa Graves taps one over for Gooding in volleyball action against Kimberly Thursday night. After losing the first game, the Senators came back to win 5-15, 15-3, 15-4. For a complete volleyball wrap-up, see Page D2.

Baseball fighting — a trend or the norm?

By BRUCE LOWITT
The Associated Press

An outbreak of beanball wars and brawls has baseball officials concerned but stumped about how to prevent them.

"Obviously, there is concern about baseball getting a good example. But then, baseball is a very intense game and such incidents will occur from time to time. They are, however, not commonplace," Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said in a statement issued through his New York office.

Chuck Adams, a spokesman for Kuhn, said the responsibility for policing brawls rests more with the league presidents. He also said he expected proposals to deal with fighting would be made and some action taken at the major leagues' annual meetings at Houston in December, but he declined to be specific.

"The numbers say that while there seems to be a plethora of hit batters and brawls recently, it is more likely a simple case of baseball catching up with the law of averages."

— In the National League, through 187 games this year, there have been 230 hit batters, a percentage of 360 hit batters per game. In last year's 1974 games, there were 292 hit batters, a 299 average.

— In the American League, through 1,069 games this year, there have been 373 hit batters, a 369 percentage. In last year's 1,135 games, there were 425 hit batters, a 374 percentage.

One reason for the discrepancy in the percentages of hit batters: American League pitchers don't bat, so there's no chance for retaliation. The two leagues have different methods of keeping records on "incidents." The NL lists fights and warnings together and says there were 19 each in the previous two years and 26 this season. The AL list only counts fights and says there were 13 in 1982, 12 last year and 12 this season. Umpires' warnings are not included in the AL list.

Blake Cullen, the NL's supervisor of umpires, said there have been informal discussions about increasing the severity of punishment of players involved in fights, but nothing definite has been proposed.

He said NL President Chub Feeney "has sent out bulletins reminding the clubs that the name of the game is baseball and that's what we're in business for, that we're not in the fight business."

Bob Fishel, the assistant to AL President Bobby Brown, said his research shows "there have been fewer cases of fighting this year than other years. Bobby's gotten about as tough as he can get. He could continue to get even tougher, but there's only so far he can go.

"After a while," Fishel said, "the players' association gets involved. It wants to minimize the fines and suspensions — which, of course, it has the right to do. So when we (the league) get tough, you have appeals and hearings you have to go through."

Brown said he is "hoping for the answers to stop future incidents," but neither he nor Feeney has come up with anything.

John McNamara, manager of the California Angels, who were involved in a Sept. 2 brawl with the New York Yankees, said he thinks Brown "is very adamant about curtailing this kind of activity. There shouldn't be a place for it, but there is because of the human element. You're not going to stop it altogether, but he's going to do his best to try."

In 1971, the National Hockey League, receiving negative publicity over the increase in brawls, instituted a "third-man-in" rule under which the first player to involve himself in a fight between two others was subject to automatic ejection.

Cullen said the "problem is, the hockey system may be self-defeating in baseball. Usually, if there's a fight about to start between a batter and a pitcher—the catcher will try to get in front of the hitter running to the mound. He's wearing the equipment. He's usually willing to take the shots."

Bradshaw: Steelers erred with Franco

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Terry Bradshaw, returning for the first time since retirement to the city where he rolled for four Super Bowls, said Thursday he "feels sick" about the way the Pittsburgh Steelers treated former teammate Franco Harris.

"Chuck's cleaning house and only time will tell whether he will be successful," Bradshaw said of Steelers Coach Chuck Noll. "But yes, honestly, I think the Steelers made a mistake with Franco. I detested the whole thing. It made me sick."

Harris was released by the Steelers last month — just 363 yards shy of breaking the National Football League's career rushing record — following a month-long holdout over contract problems. Harris signed last week with the Seattle Seahawks.

"I hate to see him have to break the record in a blue and silver uniform," Bradshaw said. "I feel sorry for the guys who blocked for Franco so long — guys like Mike Webster and Larry Brown."

Bradshaw, appearing at a news conference to say he will do weekly Steelers' commentary for Pittsburgh TV station KDKA, said he doesn't miss football as much as he anticipated and is keeping busy with television work and business meetings. Bradshaw works as an analyst for CBS Sports.

Twins face easy teams down stretch

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — How bout those Twins? With 17 games left in the season, the Minnesota Twins have a good chance at winning their first American League West Division title since 1970. Since then, they have not finished higher than third.

"Our offense is starting to come around and our pitching's been good," Manager Billy Gardner said Thursday. "If we can combine those things down the stretch, maybe something can happen."

The Twins had their final day off of the regular season Thursday before closing out the season with three games at Texas, beginning today, and seven each against non-contending Cleveland and Chicago.

The Kansas City Royals, 3-2 winners over Minnesota Wednesday night and also idle Thursday, and the Twins have identical 74-71 records and are tied for the AL West lead.

The Royals have eight games remaining against the third-place California Angels, who were two games out going into Thursday night's game against Cleveland, and six games against Oakland and three against Seattle.

But Gardner doesn't think the Twins' schedule is an advantage. "It's much rather play the contenders, because if you fall out of first, then you don't need someone else to do your work," Gardner said.

It appeared that the relatively young Twins, most of whom never have been involved in a pennant race, recently were going to slide out of contention. They lost 11 of 14 games at the end of August and early this month, blowing a five-game lead and allowing the race to tighten.

But with the help of consistent pitching from starters Frank Viola (10-12), Mike Smithson (14-12) and John Butcher (12-8), the Twins won

2-of-3 from Texas and Kansas City in their last two series to snap out of the doldrums — the 3-11 skid — the team batting average was below .200 and the Twins suffered through a nine-game home-run drought.

But outfielder Tom Brunansky homered in each of the last two games, giving him 31 for the season. That's the most for a Twins' player since Hal of Famer Harmon Killebrew hit 41 in 1970.

And first baseman Kent Hrbek, a strong candidate for the AL's Most Valuable Player Award, hit his 25th homer Wednesday night — an inside-the-park shot. Hrbek is hitting .318 with 25 homers and 96 runs batted

Gooding surges past Kimberly; Twin Falls tips Blackfoot

By The Times-News

It took the Gooding Senators an entire game to warm up, but once they did, they didn't cool down until they had gained a 5-15, 15-14 triumph Thursday night over the visiting Kimberly Bulldogs.

"We didn't get on the floor long enough to be warmed up, and I thought that hurt us in the first game," Gooding Coach Joleen Toone said. "Plus, Kimberly got its offense set up easily." Teresa Wright's spiking and Lori-Bessie's serving sustained the Bulldogs in their first contest.

Bruins pound Blackfoot

BLACKFOOT — The Twin Falls Bruins remained undefeated, but needed three games to gain their latest triumph.

The Blackfoot Broncos tipped the Bruins in the first game 15-10, but Twin Falls came storming back and took the next two games 15-3, 15-8.

"We didn't play well in the first game and they took advantage of it," said Bruins Coach Kathy Anderson.

The Bruins' victories weren't easy.

"The second and third games were closer than the score indicated," said Anderson.

Idaho Falls in three games 16-14, 5-15, 15-5

Skyline and Idaho Falls will play their match at a later date.

Tina O'Donnell led the Spartans with one of her better performances and juniors Stacy Kreigh and Shelly Duncan also chipped in good performances in the game against Skyline. At one point in the match, Kreigh served in eight straight points for the Spartans.

Duncan did well setting, as did Debbie Ott. The Spartan junior vastly remained undefeated, beating Idaho Falls 15-9, 15-7 and nipping Skyline 15-8, 15-9.

Filer as the Wildcats nipped the Glens Ferry Pilots 15-11, 11-15, 15-11.

"We just didn't keep the ball in play in the final game," Glens Ferry Coach Debbie Shrunk lamented. With the Pilots leading the pivotal match 11-10, Filer served for five straight points to wrap up matters.

Glens Ferry's junior varsity took two of three games from Filer.

MURTAUGH — Raft River swept a triangular meet against Castleford and the host Red Devils.

The Trojans beat Murtaugh 15-9, 5-15, 18-16 and topped Castleford 15-9, 8-15, 15-12. In the final match Murtaugh downed the Wolves 15-12, 8-15, 15-12.

Bliss — Camas County came out of a Northside Conference triangular with victories over Richfield and Bliss.

Bliss opened the night by downing Richfield 15-2, 15-5. Richfield then forced Camas County into three games before bowing 16-13, 11-15, 16-14. Camas County wound up the night by beating Bliss 15-10, 15-12.

In junior varsity play, Richfield beat Bliss 15-2, 15-13.

Glens Ferry's junior varsity took two of three games from Filer.

Phils' Samuel destroys Cardinals

By The Associated Press

Juan Samuel was sent sprawling by pitcher Joaquin Andujar's high fastball in the first inning, but he got his 12th home run of the year as the host Philadelphia Phillies trounced the St. Louis Cardinals 10-2.

"I was really shaken," Samuel said, recalling the pitch from Andujar in the first. "But I try to forget about it. He got paid back with the home run. That made me feel good."

Samuel added a single and four RBI, while Mike Schmidt added a home run, two singles and three RBI for the Phillies.

Umpire Ed Montague warned Andujar and both benches. The Cardinals' Tommy Herr had been hit by Phillie Phanatic pitcher John Denny in the first inning and Montague wanted to add a beanball war.

Samuel said it was the third or fourth time this season that Andujar had brushed him back, and said he "didn't understand it because they were friends, from the same town in the Dominican Republic."

"We see each other. The town (San Pedro de Macoris) is not too big," Samuel said.

The incident apparently shook Andujar, who was trying to become the first major league pitcher to win 20 games this season.

"It was the warning," said the Cardinals pitcher.

Andujar said he didn't want to hit Samuel.

"You think I want to hit Samuel? Well, see each other. The town (San Pedro de Macoris) is not too big," Samuel said.

The Twins' best clutch hitter has been Mickey Hatcher. In the last 13 times Hatcher has hit in the seventh, eighth or ninth inning with runners in scoring position, he's 9-for-9 in the four walks.

"The ball just seems big up there," Hatcher said. "Billy having moved me up to third in the lineup has been the key. With Herbeck and Brunansky coming up behind me, pitchers know they have to throw the ball over the plate and I'm just trying to make contact."

But Gardner insists the starting pitching is the Twins' strongest suit.

Pot of gold vanishes for pro gridgers

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

The St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League finally have signed Clyde Duncan, their first-round draft choice, which probably isn't very big news outside of the St. Louis area.

Analysis

It should be. It demonstrates that with the United States Football League in a state of flux and money running low, the pot of gold at the end of the NFL rainbow isn't there for the Clyde Duncans of the football world. It's not even there for most of the established NFL players who recently have been walking in and out of team camps.

That doesn't mean there won't be continuing contract hassles. But it probably means there will be less public bartering of players than last year, when agents and USFL owners went on network television weekly in football's own version of "Let's Make a Deal."

"There's certainly a slowdown in top quality players being signed by the USFL," said Leigh Steinberg, who negotiated quarterback Steve Young's $10 million contract with the Los Angeles Express.

"To use the USFL as an alternative, a player has to be very unique. He has to have the kind of marquee value that can sell tickets. Your average lineman or defensive back just isn't going to get the big USFL offer unless he's a very recognizable name who's able to put people into the stadium."

Duncan, a promising but raw wide receiver from the University of Tennessee, isn't in that category. But he tried. He had to have marquee value in Tennessee to take his act to the USFL's Memphis Showboats, who last season spent about $1 million for his Volunteer teammate, Reggie White.

Sorry, no sale. Then there's linebacker Ricky Hunley, the Cincinnati Bengals' top pick, who said he would sit

STEVE YOUNG
Perhaps among the last to get big bucks out this season and go back into the NFL draft next year. Hunley's agent, Howard Slusher, said it was unlikely Hunley would go to the USFL without saying the obvious — the USFL can't afford him. Where did all those big bucks go? Basically, the USFL played Russian roulette with its spending policies and lost when the public treated the problem with indifference and worse.

By some reports, the USFL collectively lost between $60 million and $80 million last season and most of the league's owners now talk about salary caps rather than huge contracts.

The biggest problem is the Express, who spent the most money for the most good, young players, drew very small crowds to the Los Angeles Coliseum, and now is up for sale. To keep good young Express players like Young, Mark Adlekes and Gary Zimmerman, the USFL has to dip into its $27 million contingency fund to keep its contracts up to date.

Where does that leave NFL players after two years' salaries increased by 50 percent as agents played the USFL option?

The stars are in fine shape. Most NFL teams have short-circuited the USFL raids by rewarding players like Lawrence Taylor, George Rogers, Mark Gastineau, Randy White, Walter Payton and Ronnie Lott with new contracts that leave them set for life.

But good players without the star quality desirable to the USFL don't have as much leverage. Ernest Gray, Mark Haynes, Leonard Thompson, even Todd Christensen and Howie Long — all either holdouts or walkouts during training camp — probably will have to settle for a decent increase short of the seven-figure deals they desire.

Not only that, but the NFL has a relatively new weapon — the one it used against San Diego tight end Kellen Winslow, a player with true value to the USFL, after Winslow was signed by the Express in an effort to hasten the renegotiation of his contract.

It's one of the myriad lists for inactive NFL players called "reserve, left camp," an outgrowth of an arbitrator's ruling in a case involving John Wiggins after the veteran fullback left the Washington Redskins in 1980.

Schell has ways to express his interests

Frank Schell's interest in western history and art is reflected in his artwork like this cowboy figure created with welding

Welding art, writing books among area man's pastimes

By MEBS BRUMBACH
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Frank Schell is a man with many interests, ranging from blowpipe welding and Idaho tokens to the history of the Sioux nation.

The Twin Falls man is currently working on a book of semi-historical fiction centered around Fort Fetterman.

"Lieutenant Fetterman," he explains, "was the guy who thought he could defeat the whole Sioux nation — the same kind of a guy as Custer. The Indians were never really beaten," he asserts, "except with whiskey, disease and the shooting of the buffalo."

Schell says he has always been a history buff, and having been raised in an area where "Indians were still traveling back and forth," his publications and art emphasize the early west.

Born in Nebraska, Schell spent his childhood in South Dakota and Wyoming. He attended welding school in Greeley, Colo., and worked as a welder for Glen L. Martin Aircraft in Omaha in the '40s. He continued with the welding vocation for 25 years before moving to Twin Falls in 1961.

It is an elephant leaning for support against a palm tree.

The animal's list was unintentional, "so I just added the tree," explains Schell. "It was a kid, just learning," he says, adding that he isn't sure if elephants live in date-palm country, but adds with a grin, "this one does."

Schell's progress in iron sculpture is evidenced in numerous pieces throughout the home — from the circular open-work monogram on the outside wall to the ornamental iron divider separating areas of the residence and from the figure depicting the weary Indian at "The End of the Trail" to the "Victorian family atop the organ."

Although it's difficult to get small details with an acetylene flame, one can see the flowers and minute ribbons on the Victorian lady's wide-brimmed hat.

Each examination of what the artist refers to as "just a stage coach hold-up" is full of discoveries.

"That one took a lot of time," he admits of the nine horses, coach and five figures — "probably 125 hours."

In a small room where Schell paints are two life-sized busts. His hands are strong and sure, but tender, as he lifts the one of American Horse, a Sioux chief, with hair and feathers fashioned with mechanical's wife, "hundreds and hundreds of pieces," he notes.

'Murder, She Wrote' gives life to Marple-like character

By HARRIET VAN HORNE
Newsday

The opening scene of "Murder, She Wrote" is what the trade calls a grabber. It is calculated to send an icy shiver up your spine — and it does.

On the screen is a terrified young woman in a flowing white negligee. She is alone in a country house during a windstorm that seems strangely at odds with the bright moonlight outside the French doors. In her trembling hand is a flickering candle. (Electric power must malfunction at such moments.)

Byes wide with fear, voice atremble, the young woman senses that she is not alone. "Roger, is that you?" she keeps asking. Not a peep out of Roger. Then comes the scream we've been expecting. "Roger! (If this is some kind of a sick joke...")

How sick the joke is suddenly becomes apparent as we see the most terrible of weapons — a Viking battle axe — begin its slow descent.

Then a male voice shouts "CUT!" and we are in a small theater, and this is the final dress rehearsal.

It is also the high moment of the premiere of "Murder, She Wrote." The new CBS series begins, as do all new series nowadays, with a two-hour special — this one on Sunday, Sept. 30.

All subsequent shows will run one hour, which may be overlong considering the "gray power" of the initial run. (That opening scene lingers in the mind as the very best in the show, for which credit a lively actress, Cathy Payne).

ANGELA LANSBURY
Not an eccentric figure

The nervous young man directing this play-within-a-play spots three middle-aged women in the back of his small theater. His manner is not cordial. "Who invited you?" he demands.

"You did," comes the sweet reply. They are, it seems, the cookie committee from the PTA. One identifies herself as "Brownies," the other coos, "Macaroons." The third member dispenses with the cookie talk and gives the astonished director her opinion of the mystery play's denouement.

"On the basis of one act, she has fingered the killer, and she explains why. This is no ordinary PTA lady. This is Jessica Fletcher, jogging spinster and busybody, who brightens the long nights in Cabot Cove, Me., by writing murder mysteries.

She is also a Yankee ripoff of Agatha Christie's wonderful Miss Marple. The producers seem not at all embarrassed by this borrowing from a dead author. Indeed, their clumsy title is designed to alert us: assuming we remember a suspense story by Dame Agatha called "Murder, She Said," that Jane Marple lives!

The fact that Jessica, although handsomely portrayed by Angela Lansbury, never strikes us as a real person may be taken as proof that ripoffs from over the water don't travel well.

The business about the cookie committee makes one thing clear. We're in for some careless, inaccurate writing. Ladies in their 60s do not, as a rule, take active parts in the PTA. And cookie committees have long since been supplanted by committees to investigate vandalism.

SCOTT COSSU

GEORGE RUSSELL

Russell, Cossu to appear

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Keeping with their wide range of entertainment, the Renaissance Academy of the Arts has scheduled humorist-yodeler George Russell for a Sept. 16 performance and jazz pianist Scott Cossu for a Sept. 19 concert.

A talented instrumentalist, Russell has received acclaim throughout North America for his versatile musicianship, originality as a songwriter and, most of all, for the depth and lyricism of his voice.

Russell's style is rumping, stomping, and swinging western, country blues, spirited yodels, generic humor and satirical ditties.

Known for always giving a lively show, Russell's lyrics provide witty, perceptive entertainment.

• For those seeking more contemplative, meditative music, Cossu's performance may be more in order. A pianist, flutist, composer and arranger, Cossu received his formal musical training at the University of Ohio and the University of Washington.

He also studied with several musicians from India, Romania and Southeast Asia. In 1977 Cossu took an extensive trip to South America to study and record Indian music in the Andes.

Cossu notes that this experience resulted in an influx of Indian and Latin rhythms and themes in his compositions.

He strives with his original music to reveal a seamless blend of jazz with classical and ethnic influences.

Tickets for both performances are $5 adults, and $3 senior citizens and students. Reservations are advised and may be made by calling 734-9719 or stopping by the academy at 505 2 Ave. E.

Dilettantes' production

'Show Boat' set to sail in March

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Dilettantes have selected the long-time favorite, "Show Boat," as its March 1985 musical show.

Dilettante president Lee Howell of Buhl says the show is adapted from Edna Ferber's novel of the same name. Lyrics were written by Oscar Hammerstein with music by Jerome Kern.

The local theatre group is now seeking a director for next spring's production. After a director is chosen, the schedule of auditions will be announced.

A workshop to precede the auditions is being planned, Howell said.

Anyone interested in applying for the position of director is asked to phone Vicki Brunyer, 734-4718, or Howell, 328-4852, evenings. A resume should be mailed to the Dilettante Group, Box 787, Twin Falls.

Last year's show, "Annie," drew capacity crowds and the Dilettantes were able to make several substantial donations to local cultural activities from the proceeds.

Mackay Free Barbecue plans crowd

MACKAY — The aroma of sumptuous, steaming beef will fill the air around Mackay Tourist Park this Saturday along with toe-stomping tunes provided by the Idaho Oldtime Fiddlers and Muzzie Braun. A demolition derby is to follow at the fairgrounds later in the day.

The occasion is the 54th annual Mackay Free Barbecue.

The slogan, "Tons of Meat — It's Mackay's Treat," which has been used since 1923, seems appropriate considering that some $2,200 worth of hindquarters have been purchased for this year's event.

Barbecue Chairman Bowsel Ellis says it takes nearly two days to prepare the feast, beginning with the firing of a huge oven midday Thursday. "We keep it burning until Friday at 6 p.m., then quit adding wood," Ellis says.

The meat is "unwrapped" from its foil and cheese cloth covering, sliced and served to visitors free of charge at noon on Saturday. Expenses are covered by donations from individuals and businesses in Last River Valley.

Ellis says the event is held by the town of Mackay to "show our appreciation for the business brought in from the country people."

However, the origins for the barbecue stem from a totally different reason — controversies over the Mackay Dam.

The Utah Construction Company had acquired the project and rebuilt the dam to its first unit, a capacity of 40,000 acre feet of water. They then finished the earthen and brought about a settlement on the project.

But, when the distribution of the water had been finished, the company was met by suits from water users. Some 900 suits were issued against the company. After 10 years they were finally settled out of court.

The first Mackay barbecue was given that year, 1923, to soothe feelings after the Big Lost River water suit.

In his address to the crowd, the president of the Utah Construction Company, W. H. Watts, expressed a desire to build toward the future together. Then, tongue firmly in cheek, noted, "In my past it has been the custom, whenever I went to the circus, to observe that the performance came first and the animals were fed afterwards."

"I think this change is an improvement. Of course, you will remember the old saying, 'To make an animal good natured, just feed the brute.'"

No lynching followed, and the event has been an annual affair ever since with the exception of the Depression years and World War II.

Filled with food and music, guests are invited to the fairgrounds at 5 p.m. where the Mackay Chamber of Commerce and the Mackay Lions Club are sponsoring a demolition derby.

Tickets for the derby will be presold until noon Saturday. Presold tickets are $2.50 adults; for youths under 12, or a family rate of $10. Prices at the gate are adults, $3; children, $1.50, and family, $12.

For more information, call 588-2247 after 7 p.m.

Richard Yates' work gaining in reputation

By LESLIE HANSCOM
Newspaper

BOSTON — In this town, which once was the literary capital of the U.S.A., there are few reminders left of that illustrious past, or of any other past.

The architectural cityscape of Boston now has a forbiddingly big look that contradicts the history books' contention that people have lived here for 300 years.

One lingering intimation, however, that Boston has a tradition as a sympathetic setting for artists of the work is that Richard Yates lives and works here.

There is a faction of opinion that holds that Yates is one of the best fiction writers this country has. His following isn't big enough to have made him rich or widely lionized, but it is vocal and tenacious.

In the 22 years since he published his first novel, "Revolutionary Road" — a scalding depiction of a marriage coming apart amid the discontents of suburban living — there has been a persistent murmur that the book ought to be recognized as a classic.

When it was republished not long ago, the second-look reviews appeared to vindicate that judgment.

In the years since that smashing debut, Yates has gone on putting out long and short fiction of a quality to sustain his admirers in the belief that any publishing season which brings forth a new book of his authorship can't be totally without interest.

For the season now at hand, we are promised the first novel by Yates in half a dozen years. Scheduled for "Crying."

From the title, it can be guessed that the author hasn't abandoned his preoccupation with pain and life's tendency to trudge it out but his publisher is dropping hints that this is a Yates work with a difference.

For once, it is intimated, Yates has oriented in the severity of his view what the human being is up against and given his novel an optimistic ending. For this reason, so goes the pitch, this is his "breakthrough book," the one that may give him the popular audience he has never had.

That is the way the salesmen prefer to look at it, but the author, when asked about his new conversion to positive thinking, answers with a sardonic smile.

"Do you," he says, returning a question for a question, "think that the book ends optimistically?" And indeed that is what the text of the book asks the reader. The reader can believe that the ending is optimistic — but only if the reader is an optimist.

Murder

cheating on exams and the drug traffic in the boys' wash-room. The cookie chatter ended, we now get acquainted with Jessica. We see her jogging, painting her house, riding her bicycle. Then we hear her talking to her nephew, Grady, who has come from New York to say that the murder mystery Aunt Jess wrote just for fun has been accepted by a famous New York publisher.

Jessica tells her nephew, "I am not pleased... Just because somebody wants to publish my book doesn't mean that anybody will bother to read it."

"Ah, but millions read it and Jessica becomes, we are supposed to believe, a household word. Her photograph is on billboards, autograph seekers, wait outside her door, a young mugger on a bus recognizes her. Instantly, TV hosts fight for the honor of interviewing her. Just like P.D. James, Evelyn Anthony and Iris Murdoch.

Nephew Grady (Michael Horton) turns Jessica over to her publisher's publicist, a lovely ingenue with the mandatory turned-up nose and puppy-dog eagerness.

The publisher, Preston Giles, looks exactly as a publisher should — tall, gray, a figure of stately elegance who may, we imagine, have a limp leather volume of Marcus Aurelius in his tweed jacket.

A man of affairs, he keeps Jessica waiting for hours, then greets her with: "We must get acquainted. I'm sure you're as delightful as your book." Arthur Hill gives more to this role than it deserves.

Jessica is not impressed. She is, moreover, exhausted from all those TV interviews and autograph parties. Curiously, the interview scenes are among the best in the film. They satirize without descending to the comedy-sketch level of so many other scenes.

My favorite is Jessica's tete-a-tete with a radio disc jockey who hasn't read her book, asks dumb questions and interrupts her responses to shout, "It's 22 after the hour, and we'll be right back after this word from Harry's Fur Storage..."

As she is boarding the train for Cabot's Cove, a painting Preston arrives to implore her to stay over. He's having a little house party at his mansion out side Manhattan and Jessica must come.

Of course, she agrees, making this the first of several scenes in which she is aboard a train bound for home when some urge impels her to get off at once.

Arriving at Grady's rustic retreat (actually a posh residence in Bel Air, Calif.) Jessica meets a rough, nasty character called Capt. Caleb (Brian Keith). He owns some fishing boats and has given the world a processed seafood Jessica finds abominable.

The weekend house party features a masquerade with guests coming as their favorite characters in literature. Caleb comes as Sherlock Holmes. Next morning a chap in deerstalker and Mcintosh is found floating in the swimming pool.

No, it isn't Caleb. It's a private investigator with the unlikely name of Baxter Bakendale. Somebody shot him, then went to the incredible trouble of dressing him in the Sherlock Holmes suit Caleb had left in a half-closet.

Before our story ends, there's a second murder, and it taxes Jessica's ingenuity to solve them. Of course, she risks her life several times while gum-sneezing down the most preposterous clues.

We never understand why she goes — late at night — to Caleb's offices in a Madison Avenue skyscraper.

Indeed, we are not told how a simple chap with a few fishing boats happens to occupy corporate premises worthy of a global conglomerate.

As "Murder, She Wrote" progresses, the anachronisms pile up, reminding us that this is Production 83512 from Universal Studios, where TV dramas fall off the assembly line like sausages. When Jessica boards a New York City bus to ride a few blocks, it's a long-hauler with reclining leather seats, the kind of bus you might take to California, but not across town.

Then, the last time Jessica leaps off the train to Maine, she does so because a clue has turned up in The New York Times — in a bylined column that carries a photo of the writer. Never, Jessica, in the good gray Times.

The solution to the murders, as Jessica finally unravels the threads, is beyond belief. "Was this killer the inspiration of your last rewrite... or was he there from the beginning?" we asked the series' writer-producer, Peter Fischer.

"From the beginning," he said firmly. I wished it had been otherwise, for nothing in this denouement makes sense.

She wore satin turbans, floating chiffon and roughly 10 pounds of pearls and rhinestones. Now, a novelist-sleuth from Maine wouldn't go about in such tacky finery but plumpish, very proper Jessica doesn't look right in that classic French coat, either. This is a character who needs work — and better scripts.

Since "Murder, She Wrote" is going to be with us for a long season (at least 12 more episodes), a viewer has a right to expect that things will improve.

At least one author is tired of abundance of literary sex

By JONATHAN YARDLEY
The Washington Post

Olive Ann Burns is the author of a novel now, to be published late in October, called "Cold Sassy Tree." It remains to be seen whether the book has any merits, but there can be no doubt that its author does. Asked by her publisher to supply the standard biographical information expected of authors, Burns fired back with nearly 10 single-spaced pages in which she said, in part:

"I don't know if it will help sales to say 'Cold Sassy Tree' isn't a dirty book, but I don't think I'm the only person who is tired of sordid stories about unsavory people. I'm tired of books and movies full of paper-doll characters you don't care about, who have no self-respect and no respect for anybody or any institution.

"I hope this book is compelling and realistically sensual. I have great respect for human sexuality. But I'm tired of authors so lacking in sensitivity that they wallow in vulgarity and prostitute sex-making exhibitionists of the characters and peeping Toms of the readers.

"And I don't want to sound preachy or Victorian, but I'm tired of amorality in fiction and real life. Amorality is a fascinating human dilemma that creates suspense for the readers and tension for the characters, but where is the tension in an amoral situation? When people have no personal code, nothing is threatening and nothing is meaningful."

To put it mildly, in those three paragraphs Burns challenges a healthy load of the assumptions upon which contemporary American fiction, both "serious" and "popular," has rested since the Second World War. Whether written by John Updike or Harold Robbins, Erica Jong or Judith Krantz, Norman Mailer or Jacqueline Susann, a vast amount of postwar American fiction has been about essentially valueless people who engage in explicitly described sexual activity and whose lives are largely lacking in meaning or consequence. This is not the result of any conspiracy on the part of the Authors Guild but of literary fashion and, one must suppose, popular taste; whatever the explanation for it, this odd blend of nihilism and erotica has enjoyed a vogue for several decades.

Indeed, the vogue still seems to flourish, and as a consequence Burns' words doubtless will be ridiculed in literary circles as old-fashioned and stuffy; her novel may well be dismissed in those same circles, long before anyone has actually read it, as "corny" and "inspirational." Yet the tone of Burns' biographical questionnaire suggests otherwise. Burns is an Atlantian, but there's none of the priggishness or sentimentality in her words that are often associated with southern ladies who write potted novels. She doesn't say that sex is bad for one's moral health or that fiction should be all uplift and good cheer; she merely says that, as a reader, she is tired of being forced to wallow around in other people's body parts and to empathize with characters who have little or no connection with actual human existence.

On both counts she is right, but it is on the first that her words carry particular force. There's simply no getting around it: in literature as in life, the "sexual revolution" has gotten out of hand. What began as a valiant and liberating reaction against the moral constraints of post-Victorian America has turned into an orgy of sexual excess that exists for no purpose except to display itself; in fiction — as in movies and advertising and television — we have passed within a couple of generations from a morality that regarded public sexuality as shameful to one that regards it as obligatory.

The "vulgarity" to which Burns refers is not the mere mention of sex or even the parts of the body most necessary to it; surely she would agree that a deeply sensual short story such as Ernest Hemingway's "Up in Michigan" violates no boundaries of good taste and arouses the reader's erotic as well as literary interests without describing more than is necessary to the task. Rather, she presumably refers to the description of sexual activities as can be found in such "literary" novels as Updike's "Rabbit Is Rich," Jong's "How to Save Your Own Life" and Mailer's "Tough Guys Don't Dance." In these books, each of them a work of consummate vulgarity, sexual activity of one sort or another occurs with breathtaking frequency, is joyless and mechanical and is depicted with as minute detail as will be found in the instructions for assembling a mail-order tricycle.

What we have in these novels, what Burns objects to so strenuously and correctly, is not a pleasurable activity engaged in by humans that occasionally results in the reproduction of the species, but a smutty exhibition of an author's freedom to write whatever he jolly well pleases. These endless passages of rubbing and moaning serve no real literary purpose, and to all readers, save those still in the hot flush of adolescence, they surely by now have precious little entertainment value. They're just there, getting in the way of things, dirtying up the bookshelves.

To say this is not to say that sex should not be written about or that we should return to the strictures of the Victorian era. Quite to the contrary. Sex is right up there with death and taxes among the inescapable realities of life, and we should be able to discuss it openly, without embarrassment, but it is unnecessary and gratuitous to describe the act in lavish detail every time it occurs; to do so is comparable to describing the methods of boiling water, scrambling eggs and toasting bread each time the protagonist sits down to breakfast. Enough is enough, already.

Not merely is all this excess vulgar but, as is implicit in Burns' words, it has the effect of trivializing and cheapening the very subject it purports to celebrate. Rubbing and moaning is all well and good, but when you encounter it on every other page it eventually becomes boring and even offensive, in the process robbing sex of its magic and mystery. Writers of real stature have always known this, in the age of "liberation" as well as that of repression, a case in point being another southern lady, Eudora Welty, who wrote this paragraph in "The Robber Brigade":

"Then the red horse stood stock-still, and Jamie Lockhart lifted Rosamond down. The wild plum trees were like rolling smoke between him and the river, but he broke the branches and the plums rained down as he carried her under. He stopped and laid her on the ground, where, straight below, the river flowed as slow as sand, and robbed her of that which he had left her the day before."

That, dear reader, is sexy.

Schell

Reminiscing, Schell relates the time "good friend" Holly Houtburg took me to his to pull up display at Club 33. The one of American Horse was stolen twice in two weeks' time, he says.

Once "the pit boss saw a guy walking out the door with it under his arm. He vaulted over the gaming table and caught him" at the door. The second theft was recovered within a short time in a motel room, says Schell.

Welding art "is difficult," Schell says, "but not so difficult if you've done it for years."

"Not so difficult if you've some artistic ability." His wife interjects quickly, noting her husband comes from an artistic family — his father sang with the Metropolitan Opera in New York City."

As the conversation continues, Schell's many interests continue revealing themselves. On an inconspicuous wall are bronze plaques commemorating his years as a Scoutmaster and a sergeant of the 1st is an "Admiral in the state of Nebraska."

That's dry country, Schell acknowledges. "They're not given to everyone. It's an honor."

On one wall there is what, at first glance, appears to be framed scientific painting. Schell, however, explains that it is where he does his painting and that one time he splattered some blue paint on the wall.

"So I just covered it up, and now we have a mural." His wife says she was "pretty upset" at the time.

"Oh, I always liked to draw — did it just for fun," all his life, says Schell, whose scenic paintings grace numerous walls of the home.

He says his varied art works are "spontaneous." He speaks of his paintings on velvet: "I don't know, I have any left — just wanted to see it. The kids (referring to his grown son and daughters) houses are full of this kind of junk."

He rummages through a closet to find one of Red Cloud, the "principal war chief of the Sioux." Pointing to another, he says: "that one's Curley, the only survivor of the Custer massacre."

History shows that Curley was a Crow scout for General Custer, he relates. At the Battle of the Little Bighorn, after losing his horse, Curley leaped on a Sioux mount and rode through the center of the melee to safety, saving the Sioux war cry. He was a genuine member of the tribe, says a native American.

Schell is modest about all his "hobbies." "The organ? Oh, I play that," he says. "I've been interested in music ever since I was a kid — played piano first. He also played the saxophone and the electric guitar." "I sang with it, like kids in school do."

Collecting coins, too, began in his youth — "have done that for 40 years." This started his writing a question and answer column on coins for The Money Box, which he continued for "seven or eight" years in The Times-News.

Schell's interest in coins also led him to Idaho tokens.

"They were called 'good fors,'" he recalls, and were given for change sold by merchants all over the state — "everybody had them." One side showed the worth, and the other, the name of the store and the merchant.

Schell wrote two books on this subject in the early '70s, "out of print now," he says. He also wrote a book on Idaho Post Offices.

"Frank Church helped with that," Schell's wife says. Schell adds he wrote to Sen. Church, after first trying to obtain background information from the Post Office Department in Washington, D.C.

"I didn't know the senator, but got a quick answer," he says, adding that he opened the door and allowed him to proceed with the book.

One thing leads to another with Schell, who has written seven textbooks on math and welding.

Schell says he was in what was then called the vocational-technical department of College of Southern Idaho from the time the doors of the college opened until six years ago — for three years in the welding department and then in curriculum development.

"I was state teacher trainer for all vocational trade, and the first director of curriculum," in that department. He developed work books for use in the classroom and edited all texts.

Schell taught courses in welding, too, at CSI.

"They haven't had those for three or four years now," he says.

"Almost as an afterthought," he muses, "You know that eagle over at the college?" He is speaking of the familiar iron sculpture atop its pedestal on the promenade to the bell tower. "Well, I did that."

He also created the graceful tree outside the vocational center, which, says his wife, "has been formerly written about as if it were a real tree." Schell laughs. "Yes, the caption (below a picture) said the leaves had all fallen off."

The mural on the entrance wall of the viced cafeteria was painted by Schell and the welded-art piece as one enters the gourmet-cooking area and...

Spare time? "We do a lot of trout fishing," Schell says. "No special place — just wherever there's a fish."

What's what

The Wright brothers were only two of the numerous brother pairs to figure prominently in transportation. Consider Gaston and Louis Chevrolet, Horace and John Dodge, August and Frederick Duesenberg. Any others?

Ask the family movie expert how many roads were traveled on film by Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour. Seven is right. To Singapore, Zanzibar, Morocco, Utopia, Rio, Bali and Hong Kong.

A. In none. Not in any of Arthur Conan Doyle's 56 short stories nor in any of his four novels featuring the Holmes character did that line appear. Like "Elementary, my dear Watson," it was never said by the original Holmes.

Q. All right, can you name a 2-year-old who made more than $1 Million in two minutes?

A. Ah! You mean "Nihilator." The colt that won the Woodrow Wilson Pace for pacers and promptly picked up $1,080,500. How much is that per second?

Q. Minnesota Fats, the pool player, used to be called New York Fats, right?

A. That he was. Rudolph Walter Wanderone, Jr., billed himself as New York Fats until the Jackie Gleason role of Minnesota Fats in "The Hustler" made that name famous. So he decided to like that name for the sake of the publicity.

UNDERSTANDING

It takes an eighth of a second to comprehend a single-syllable word. Or so say the speed-reading experts. All right, time yourself. How long do you need to understand this little clause? "If it is to be, it is up to me."

In Ireland's Limerick County are more than 400 medieval castles. Nowhere else has that many, sure.

A 400-year-old mushroom may be a rarity, but you can't say nosuch exists.

HOLMES MISQUOTE:

Q. In what story did Sherlock Holmes say "Quick, Watson, the needle!"

Thompson Twins use appearance, music to draw crowds

By MARY CAMPBELL
The Associated Press

The Thompson Twins aren't sure whether their music or their distinctive appearance sells their records and concert appearances. So they're concentrating on both.

In the first place, the Thompson Twins is three British people, not related: Annah Currie, her head shaved on the sides, emphasizing a curly Mohawk; Tom Bailey, hair red with one-long-lock-down-his-back, accentuating his suit with a double strand of pearls, and Joe Leeway, hair in Rastafarian dreadlocks.

In the second place, the Thompson Twins is one of the hottest bands of 1984. Hit LPs on Arista Records are "Side Kicks" and "Into the Gap" and single hits are "In the Name of Love," "Lies," "Love on Your Side" and "Hold Me Now." "You Take Me Up" was No. 54 and climbing on its second week on the best-selling single chart.

Bailey was in the first version of the Thompson Twins in 1977. Sometimes it was seven people. Two records were made, for Ariola. In 1982, when Bailey, Miss Currie and Leeway, both members by then, became a trio, they intended to name themselves the Bermuda Triangle. Arista preferred the Thompson Twins. "It isn't important what the name is," Miss Currie says.

Fame has come since 1982, starting with "In the Name of Love." Leeway recalls the first American tour, October and November 1982. "It was cold."

Bailey says, "We did small clubs. If it was Friday or Saturday night, the place would be full. If it was Tuesday, we might play to 150 people. It was sort of sobering. Now we've reached the stage of doing big concerts."

Music

Asked when they realized they had crossed the threshold of fame, Miss Currie says, "When we got bank accounts. It was great. We never had any money or bank accounts before. We were strictly poor."

Bailey says, "It hits me when we go to a place we've never been before and fame precedes us. You arrive in Normal, Ill., and there's a crowd of fans waiting at the airport and the backstage door."

"These days they know us from MTV. That's why they knew what we looked like in Normal before we went there."

Bailey adds, "It is fun to be a star. When that fantasy becomes reality, there are exciting parts about it. It is not all as amazing as most people would think. In some ways it's more amazing.

"Any young band survives on 'it only.' We did. When it actually happens, you're faced with possibilities of what to do next, are you going to make a new record, what songs, what instrumentation, what sort of video will you make, where will you go."

The Thompson Twins' American tour ends in San Diego; the last show will be filmed.

"Then we're into finishing writing and recording the next album, which will take us through the winter, apart from a few Christmas shows in England," Bailey says.

"They'll record in Paris." That is very good for us," Miss Currie says. "One of our main aims is to transcend the whole rubbish of separate categories of people, black and white, male and female. By the time we're 80, we'll speak several languages and be human. That's why we like travel."

"We see the planet and cease to be so nationalistic. It's a good thing, I think, for the '80s."

"All those things are in my lyrics. Into the Gap is precisely about that."

Bailey says, "It is not just ideology. It is fun. Form a pop group and see the world."

"Travel, as the Victorians said, broadens the mind."

"The three, all of whom live out of suitcases and call no house home, say they like to talk to people on their travels."

"You can become isolated," Bailey says. "We spend a lot of time in hotel rooms waiting for the phone call that says it's okay to come to the hotel lobby because the limo has arrived. Sometimes we just go on down to the lobby and talk to whoever is there. Otherwise you can end up like Howard Hughes."

Leeway checks to see if his fingernails are growing extremely long.

They create the songs together. Miss Currie says, "We very much like a balance between old acoustic sounds and very high-tech synth drum sounds."

"I think that is part of a movement, of certain modern pop groups placing the emphasis on songwriters and producers of records," Bailey says.

"You write a song and make it happen in the studio. Either that or you get a producer who dominates what you do, which we couldn't handle. We're too precious about our song books to let them out to anyone else."

soundings. We're satisfying people's expectations—and subverting their expectations. Once you're famous—and people pay attention to what you do next, you can use that to attract them and to take them into experiences they never expected to go into.

"I guess some groups reach a certain success and say, 'We've found our groove, let's stick to it. We've got three or four years before people get tired of it.' To us, this is not a satisfying thing to do."

For stage shows they add two keyboard players, a bassist and drummer. Bailey says that's so they can "jump up and down," enjoy themselves and communicate and not be bent over drums and synthesizers. "We select crucial bits that we play on stage and leave the rest out or have the other people play them."

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for attendance of children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children."

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

- G: General Audiences; all ages admitted.
- PG: Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.
- PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.
- R: Restricted; under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
- X: No one under 17 admitted.

All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

Paid hotel bill creates hurt

DEAR ABBY: I found a paid hotel bill in my husband's possession. A room had been rented in a lady's name at a very expensive local hotel. It showed that a party of two had spent the night there and had room service. I was out of town at the time.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

I also found a cancelled check indicating that my husband had given this same lady a nice sum of money. (We have separate checking accounts.)

When I confronted my husband with the hotel bill and canceled check, he said he "found" the hotel bill at his place of business. The canceled check, he said, was a loan he had made to a young woman he hardly knew.

Abby, I know he's lying. I did some checking around and learned that the lady is 26 years old and married. (My husband is 58.)

When I told my husband I was going to mail the hotel bill and canceled check to the lady's husband, he begged me not to, but contends that he is innocent of any wrongdoing.

My husband has been impatient for the last eight years due to medication he's been taking for high blood pressure. (I've been told that a young woman can arouse an older man when a woman his own age cannot.)

Should I mail the check and hotel bill to her husband? I think he should know, since I do. I understand he is a very nice man.

I will make a decision until I hear from you.

— WAITING IN GEORGIA
DEAR WAITING: Please don't mail the hotel bill to the lady's husband. I realize that you are hurting. But would you hurt less if you caused her husband to suffer too?

Try to resolve this problem rationally without bitterness or ill will by discussing it with a counselor. Your husband needs counseling, too. He's obviously a very troubled man who needs your understanding, and the non-judgmental guidance that a counselor can provide.

DEAR ABBY: A 54-year-old, financially independent professional woman wrote to say that she had many suitors who enjoyed her company, but after she told them she was celibate, they disappeared. She wondered why they didn't continue seeing her and get their sex elsewhere.

Abby, celibacy has nothing to do with sex. In my Webster's Dictionary, a "celibate" is defined as "unmarried." The woman should have used the word "chaste," which means "innocent—of—unlawful—sexual—intercourse."

Furthermore, there would be no need for an unmarried woman to announce that she is celibate since a celibate is, by definition, an unmarried person.

Why didn't you straighten her out?

— CELIBATE IN N.J.
DEAR CELIBATE: I realize that you straightened her out because until you straightened her out, I also thought celibate and chaste were synonymous.

But celibacy, according to my Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, is also defined as "abstention from sexual intercourse."

DEAR ABBY: Although I can't top "Pennsylvania Dutchman's" cousin, I think I can match him. From the Markwell family Bible: Lewis Markwell Sr. died in November 1879, shortly before his 80th birthday. However, my records show a cousin whose father was 90 when she was born!

My great-great-great-great-grandmother Armstrong, born in 1739, bore five children after she was 41 years old. The youngest was born when she was 49. I realize this is no record, as there have been children born to women in their 50s. But five children after 40 is not every woman's fondest hope!

— JAMES L. PYLES, MAYSVILLE, KY.

CONFIDENTIAL IN LOVE WITH A PARAPLEGIC MAN: The many intelligent questions you asked me deserve to be answered, but unless you include your name, address and a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I am unable to reply.

DEAR ABBY: I believe that one can tell a great deal about a person by what he values in literature. Will you please share with your readers something you consider a literary or philosophical treasure? Thank you.

— ROSSELLA CASAPANTA
DEAR ROSSELLA: With pleasure. It is from a slim little volume titled "The Prophet" by Kahlil Gibran:

ON CHILDREN:
"Your children are not your children. They are the sons and daughters of life's longing for itself. They come through you but not from you, and though they are with you, yet they belong not to you. You may give them your love, but not your thoughts. For they have their own thoughts. You may house their bodies but not their souls, for their souls dwell in the house of tomorrow, which you cannot visit, not even in your dreams. You may strive to be like them, but seek not to make them like you. For life goes not backward nor tarries with yesterday. You are the bows from which your children as living arrows are sent forth. The archer sees the mark, upon the path of the infinite and he bends you to his might that his arrows may go swift and far. Let your bending in the archer's hand be for gladness; for even as he loves the arrow that flies, so he loves also the bow that is stable."

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)
