Growth of incidents in state alarms many

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
The Associated Press

BOISE — A string of incidents against religious and racial groups in Idaho isn't mere mischief, but the mark of a dangerous infection that is striking all corners of the state, social observers say.

The attacks include cross burnings by the white-supremacist Aryan Nations group based in northern Idaho, bombing of Jewish and Mormon buildings and the circulation of anti-Catholic posters.

In back-to-back cases, a black athlete in Pocatello found "KKK" painted on his car, and the adoptive mother of two black children in Halley reported her vehicle smashed and spray-painted with a racial slur.

"There is considerable evidence these types of things have been on the increase the last several years," said John Purce, Idaho president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"The emergence of the racial right has had an effect," Purce said.

Others say influences in the out-breaks may include a sense of failure on the part of perpetrators, envy fostered by economic hardship and a rising influx of people who move to bucolic places like Idaho because they resent the racial and religious mix in urban areas.

"We have tended to think that as Idahoans, we don't have racial biases or prejudices, simply because there are so few minority people here," said Marilyn Shuler, director of the Idaho Human Rights Commission. "But there is concern about a growing intolerance."

In 1983, the concern grew strong enough to spur passage of a state law making malicious harassment punishable as a felony.

Law enforcement officials say it is difficult to measure the effectiveness of the law, but there is talk of toughening it.

Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones wants to examine opening the way for civil action enabling victims of harassment to sue offenders.

"If some of these scoundrels were hit in the pocketbook, it might make a difference," Jones said.

Purce said even one conviction under the existing harassment law would deter potential offenders.

Meanwhile, the NAACP continues encouraging victims of harassment to report offenses, said Purce, a longtime Pocatello resident.

Publicly surrounding the cases spotlights them and arouses public concern, he said.

"There have been incidents before, and a lot of times, the victims have tried to forget about these things as quickly as possible," Purce said.

"Earlier this year, a southeastern Idaho resident found racial slurs on his property and a dead rodent in his mailbox, he said.

"In some cases, people have gone to the police, and in others, they haven't," he said.

Police were alerted a month ago

Cross burnings in Idaho are becoming a focus of concern when Idaho State University football player, Gerald Richardson, found his car damaged, but investigators have made no arrests.

Soon after the incident, Richardson moved out of Pocatello.

On Sept. 1, the adoptive mother of two black children in Halley reported a similar incident. But Evelyn McCracken said she would not leave town. Rather, she said, her message for townspeople is that Halley is not "insulated" against hatred.

Messengers of hatred probably are people who see themselves as failures and want others to fail with them, said Boise psychologist Fred Hurst.

"It is not just based on differences in ideals," Hurst said. "A disturbed person wants others to be disturbed."

Studies show prejudice can begin early in childhood, said Marvin Stern, a Seattle representative for the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Reagan shift in diplomacy shrugs past

Reagan tops in 41 states

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan leads Walter F. Mondale in at least 41 states, according to an Associated Press survey which indicates that seven weeks before Election Day the Democratic challenger can count only on the District of Columbia.

Polls gave Reagan comfortable margins in both Texas and California, two of the biggest states.

After the first two weeks of the general election campaign, Reagan holds an edge in 41 states with 420 electoral votes, far more than the 270 needed for election on Nov. 6, according to the survey. Mondale is comfortably ahead in only the District of Columbia with 3 electoral votes, the survey indicated.

The other nine states — Hawaii, Illinois, Massachusetts, Maryland, New York, Oregon, Rhode Island, West Virginia and Wisconsin — were rated tossups, accounting for 115 electoral votes.

WASHINGTON — Presidents often adjust their foreign policies during election years because of political imperatives, but few have undertaken the sweeping changes that President Reagan has in this campaign season.

The polls indicate Reagan's strategy has been highly successful but, for a president who took office intent on pursuing a "consistent" foreign policy, his behavior lately suggests this objective deserves a decidedly lower priority than the political requirements of the day.

In his shift toward the center, Reagan has alienated some conservatives; at least one, renowned fund-raiser Richard Viguerie, has accused Reagan of appeasement policies reminiscent of those of British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in the late 1930s.

When Reagan meets with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on Sept. 23, the veteran diplomat may be wondering whether he will encounter the Reagan who two years ago looked to relegating the Soviets to the "ash heap of history" or the one who last week said he "means no harm" to the Soviets after all.

Publicly, the administration has minimized the significance of the Gromyko meeting in the election campaign. But Reagan's eagerness to capitalize on it was reflected in his decision to announce the meeting himself last Tuesday.

All this year, in fact, Reagan has steadily disavowed hallowed foreign

George Hansen develops ties to Rev. Moon's church

Congressman helped by support from cult

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon's controversial Unification Church is distributing copies of Rep. George Hansen's book "To Harass Our People" and may be funding the financially beleaguered congressman's book publishing venture.

Meanwhile, Hansen's efforts to reopen Moon's criminal case are being criticized by religious leaders, including a top official of Moral Majority who Hansen attempted to ally to Moon's cause. Moon has been convicted and is serving jail time on federal income tax-evasion charges.

The nature of the relationship between Hansen and the Unification Church is difficult to determine exactly.

Cooperation between a congressman from a family-oriented rural and conservative district in the West with a religious movement that has been criticized for its alleged destruction of nuclear families might seem unusual. However, Hansen and the Unification Church share common ground.

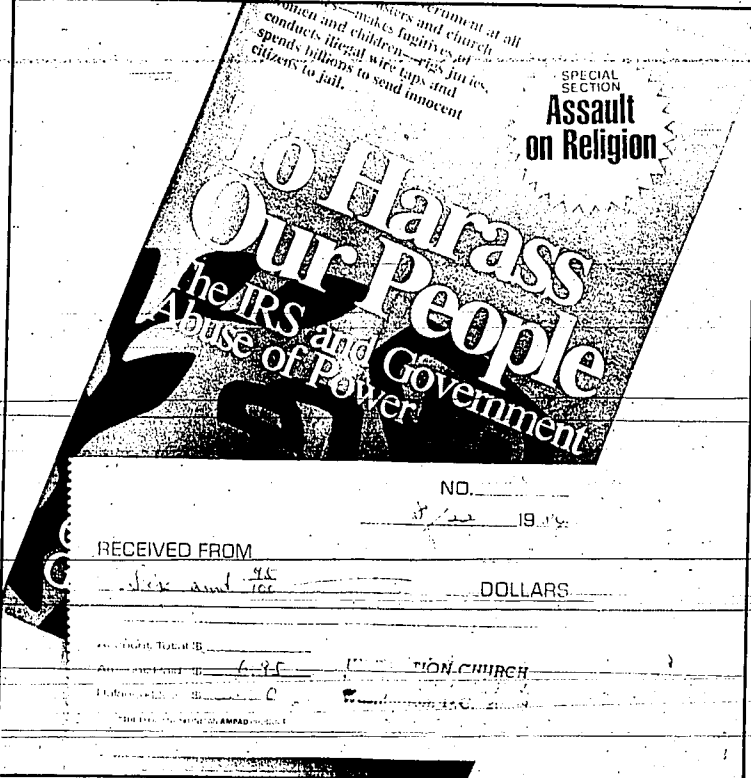

Both are considered among the most conservative of their peers, politically and socially. They both have been involved in vocal and intense battles with the Internal Revenue Service and both are vehemently anti-Communist. Both paint themselves as oppressed by bureaucratic and liberal forces in American society.

The Unification Church's national organization denies there is a relationship between it and the congressman and Hansen refuses to comment on his connections with the church.

He also refuses to disclose the financial backers of his publishing venture and declines to disclose the amount or source of personal income that has accrued to him from "Positive Publications" — a publishing company, apparently operated as a partnership or sole proprietorship of Hansen's.

But in the investigation, The Times-News learned of a number of apparent connections between Hansen and Unification Church-controlled organizations. Those connections include the following:

Moon imprisonment, funding nothing new

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — The August imprisonment of Unification Church founder Sun Myung Moon on federal income tax evasion charges is not the first time a Unification Church leader has found himself atoul of the law. Nor are recent reports of Unification Church money being surreptitiously passed to lobbyists and other organizations on the so-called "new right" unprecedented.

However, the church asserts that in Moon's tax case as in previous legal controversies the Church's probity result from racial and religious bigotry not from actual violations of law.

When Tongsun Park and the "Koreagate" influence-buying scandal surfaced in 1977, Moon and the Unification Church were central to both the controversy and the ensuing investigation.

Col. Bo Hl Pak, the church's second in command, responded to the Congressional investigations of Moon, the church and himself by placing a full-page advertisement in the Washington Post, saying the country was overcome by a climate of guilt by association. He said Moon was being victimized because he was yellow-skinned, Korean and anti-Communist.

However, the investigation of the "Koreagate" influence-buying scandal disclosed that the Unification Church or its ranking officers had illegally attempted to purchase a Washington D.C. bank, had engaged in deceptive fund-raising activities, had acted as unregistered agents of the Korean-CIA and had violated immigration and currency-smuggling laws.

The Church was also found to have sought to obtain access to members of Congress by planting Unification Church staff members in the offices of congressmen and senators. Most notable among their successful efforts in this regard was a relationship established between the Speaker of

Utahn crowned Miss America

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss Utah, Shariene Wells, a Mormon who often jogged up a mountain to train for swimsuit competitions, was crowned Miss America 1985 on Saturday night, ending the most scandalous of the pageant's 63 years.

Miss Ohio, Melissa Bradley, 23, of Mansfield, who was once accused of shoplifting, was chosen as the first runner-up.

The second runner-up was Miss Mississippi, Kelly Manning, 22, of Drew, Minnesota. Lauren Susan Green, 26, of Minneapolis, was third runner-up, and Miss Texas, Tamara Hext, 21, of Fort Worth, was the fourth runner-up.

Miss Wells, a 20-year-old resident of Salt Lake City, threw her arms around Miss New York, Mary-Ann Farrell, and then hugged Miss Tennessee, Shelley Mangrum, as she was pronounced the winner in a nationally televised show and before a capacity crowd of 21,000 people at Convention Hall.

Her crowning ends a year that saw Vanessa Williams, 21, of New York, become the first black to win the contest and the first woman to relinquish the crown after Penthouse magazine published nude photographs of her — taken before last year's contest in its September issue.

Miss Wells was crowned by her predecessor, Suzette Charles, 21, of Mays Landing, who replaced Miss Williams in July. Miss Charles also is black.

A junior studying communications and broadcast journalism at Brigham Young University, Miss Wells says she hopes to become a news anchorwoman in a major television market. She also wants to pursue a master's degree in business administration, specializing in international business and economic reporting.

For her talent competition, Miss Wells, who lived for 11 years in South America, sang a medley of Paraguayan folk songs and played a gold-colored Latin American classic harp.

Miss Wells, an aqua-eyed strawberry blonde, stands 5-foot-8, and weighs 120 pounds. She said she keeps physically fit by jogging up Mount Olympus near her home.

The other finalists were Miss Hawaii, Debbie Nakanelua, 26, of Honolulu; Miss Kentucky, Kelly Lin Brumagen, 22, of Lexington; Miss Massachusetts, Margaret Marie O'Brien, 26, of Weymouth;

SHARLENE WELLS Studies Journalism at BYU

Miss Farrell, 22, of New York City, and Miss Manning, 22, of Nashville.

Miss Green was the only black to reach the finals.

Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione had said before the pageant that he had nude photographs of her, and she had to be crowned and would punish them if she won. Sy Preston, a spokesman for Guccione, said after the pageant: "There's no comment other than you'll have to wait and see."

Another controversy shook the pageant's glittery girl-next-door image during the week when contest officials had to decide on the eligibility of Miss Bradley, who was accused of shoplifting two years ago.

Miss Bradley pleaded no contest in the case, and officials decided that she could continue in the pageant because the charges eventually were dropped.

The chairman of the Miss Texas Pageant, B. Don Magness, created a small furor early this month when he said Miss Hext had "all the parts it takes" to be Miss America and "there may not be a better body in the United States."

During a noon-time assembly of the contestants Saturday, the women thanked pageant Executive Director Albert A. Marks Jr. for the way he handled the adversity of recent weeks.

Candidates praise Italian-Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The four major candidates in the national election competed mostly in launching ethnic tributes Saturday as guests at a bipartisan dinner honoring Americans of Italian descent.

An obvious star was Geraldine Ferraro, herself a board member for the dinner's sponsor, the National Italian American Foundation.

However, President Reagan may have topped what almost seemed to be a competition in praising Italian-Americans with his thanks to the milkman whose son became a surgeon and "saved the life of a president" after Reagan was shot three years ago.

Challenger Walter Mondale simply asserted that he was changing his name to "Mondale" — at least for the night.

The speakers' comments were contained in remarks prepared for delivery at the dinner and released earlier in the day.

Mondale focused a portion of his own praise on Ms. Ferraro herself, calling her "tough and honorable" in the face of smears as well as "intense and legitimate scrutiny."

He gave no details about the "smears" focused on her, but was referring to

Other than that, Mondale steered clear of anything that might be considered a controversial political statement.

Reagan, however, used the occasion to talk about America's need for strong military defense and to try to reassure foreigners that the nation's motives are peaceful.

Earlier Saturday, speaking at Syracuse University, Ms. Ferraro had criticized administration policy in the Middle East and in Central America, saying actions in the latter were based on "half-truths" — an awareness of a communist threat in the region without an understanding of the reasons for social upheaval there.

"Central America is now bristling with weapons — in more tents than ever," she said. "This administration is lowering the flashpoint throughout the region. And nothing could be more dangerous — because a military solution is no solution."

"I want to see an administration that stops spending so much on weapons for other countries and starts spending more money on education here at home," she told the students.

The president said at the dinner that this nation "will always be a haven to the immigrants who've enriched it."

"The unusual appearance by all four major candidates signified the importance both parties see in the nation's 12 million voters of Italian descent, most of whom are ethnically Democrats.

Crime figure dies in power struggle

GLOUCESTER TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — The body of reputed organized crime figure Salvatore Testa was discovered here, the victim of another apparent execution in a continuing underworld power struggle involving casino-rich Atlantic City, authorities said Saturday.

An autopsy showed that Testa, 27, whose body was discovered Friday night alongside a road in this town southeast of Philadelphia, had been shot twice in the back of the head at close range with a small-caliber weapon, said George Kerns, a spokesman for the Camden County prosecutor's office.

Ferraro's finances still raise questions

By AMANDA HARRIS and ROBERT W. GREENE
Newsday

GERALDINE FERRARO 1978-campaign investigated

The furor over Geraldine Ferraro's personal finances may have quieted after her dramatic press conference three weeks ago but her campaign has been unable to shake questions stemming from the 1978 congressional primary which launched the Democratic vice presidential candidate's political career.

An examination of public records on the financing of that race shows that the 1978 Ferraro campaign, which was fined for taking illegal loans, also made inaccurate, incomplete and misleading statements to investigating officials.

Those officials have recently been asked to take a second look at the case. In the past few weeks, the Federal Election Commission has received at least two formal requests to reopen its investigation into the financing of that first Ferraro race. The requests came from John Banzhaf, a George Washington University law professor, and from the Fund for a Conservative Majority, FEC spokeswoman Sharon Snyder said that she would not comment on the requests except to say that "the matter is pending." By federal law, an FEC investigation remains confidential until the inquiry has been closed.

Barbara Dixon, a campaign spokeswoman for Ferraro, said that the campaign is now preparing a response to the request to reopen the case. She said that there is no reason to investigate the new complaints. "We're just spinning our wheels," Dixon said. "We've been round and round on this."

Like the House ethics committee's probe of Ferraro's decision to excide her husband's finances on her annual financial disclosure reports to Congress, the matter before the FEC involves actions that have been on the public record for more than five years but which attracted new and intense scrutiny after the Queens congresswoman was nominated for $50,000 on speculative real estate investments within six months of embarking on the expensive congressional race. These investments enabled her to repay the illegal loans immediately after the FEC questioned them, a coincidence that has triggered questions about whether the transactions were set up in advance to funnel cash to her campaign, a charge Ferraro has denied.

Analysis

An examination of these and other public records shows the following:

- In its initial campaign finance report to the FEC, the Ferraro campaign inaccurately represented the first $40,000 in loans, stating on the summary page that no money had been borrowed, and later in the report providing a breakdown of the $40,000 that did not clearly identify it as the proceeds of loans.

- After she was informed by the FEC that the first $84,000 in family loans were illegal, Ferraro failed to tell the agency that she had accepted another $50,000 in family loans.
- Ferraro and Zaccaro admit, through aides, that key documents on the 1978 real estate transactions were never filed with public agencies, a departure from usual business practice and which now makes it impossible to determine whether the transactions were related to the financing of the 1978 primary. Her campaign staff now declines to comment on any documents related to those activities.

- All but about $15,000 of the $150,000 that Ferraro spent during the four-month primary campaign came from these illegal loans. The money allowed Ferraro, a political newcomer, to outspend each of her two opponents by more than two to one.

- Once Ferraro won the primary, she began to attract the attention and contributions that often accrue to Democratic candidates for Congress in New York City. And after she took office on Jan. 1, 1979, she never again had to face a primary challenge or a financially impoverished general election campaign.

Banzhaf said that one of the questions he wants the FEC to answer is, what advice did lawyer Stein give Ferraro and Zaccaro about financing the primary?

In a sworn affidavit dated Feb. 2, 1979, Zaccaro told the FEC that Stein, a former FEC attorney, told the couple that Ferraro's relatives could make unlimited contributions to the campaign.

FEC records include no supporting or responding affidavit from Stein. Last month, Stein told reporters that he had given the Ferraro campaign no such advice. Ferraro and other persons active in her first campaign have countered by accusing Stein of lying.

Federal election laws permit candidates to make unlimited contributions or loans to their own campaigns but they can accept no more than $1,000 per election from other individuals, including relatives.

An examination of public records on the case shows that between May 10 and Sept. 5, the Ferraro campaign received a total of $134,000 in loans — $95,000 from Zaccaro and $39,000 from accounts held in trust for their children. Of the $95,000, $25,000 was borrowed by Zaccaro using a joint account with Ferraro as collateral. Another $20,000 was borrowed by Zaccaro using life insurance policies as collateral.

At the time that the campaign was violating FEC rules on reporting campaign finances. On July 10, for example, the FEC should have received the first financial report from the Committee to Elect Geraldine Ferraro, covering money raised and spent between April 1 and June 30.

Instead, a few days later, the FEC received a report from Ferraro herself even though she was not authorized to file. Not only was the report filed by the wrong party; it also included erroneous information.

parts of the country in which the Unification Church has distributed copies of "To Harass Our People."

The Times-News purchased one copy of August from the church's Washington, D.C. center and obtained a stamped receipt.

A second copy of the book was mailed free of charge on Aug. 28 to a Times-News reporter from the Rose of Sharon Press in New York City.

Joy Garrett, Director of Public Affairs for the Unification Church, told The Times-News "our church had nothing to do with the publishing of the book." She added "nobody at the church's national headquarters office purchased these (Hansen books) on a national basis."

She said purchasing decisions by church organizations at the state or local levels would be made there. Garrett said the book is being distributed by many religious groups, including the Unification Church. She said she obtained her personal copy of the book from a Pentecostal church.

A Washington, D.C., Unification Church member identified only as Katy told The Times-News copies of the books were purchased from Hansen by the Washington church on several occasions. "We bought them from him. He'd sell them at quite a low price," she said. The woman said Unification Church members were assigned to distribute the books at a Washington, D.C., rally on May 30 and at a pageant in the nation's capital on July 29.

Both events were organized by the Ad Hoc Committee for Religious Freedom — a group that appears to act as an alter-ego of the Hansen-founded Coalition for Religious Freedom.

Hansen is actively promoting the Unification Church's cause. The 1984 version of Hansen's book includes a new, 61-page "Special Section, Assault on Religion," which was not contained in the 1980 version of the book. In it, Hansen vigorously defends Unification Church founder Moon. He says the would-be messiah conviction and tax-evasion charges are the result of "politics and prejudice carrying the offensive." He blames the Internal Revenue Service for persecuting Moon.

At the May 30th rally of the Ad-Hoc Committee for Religious Freedom in Washington, D.C., Hansen again rose in Moon's defense. "Reverend Moon's Unification Church seems apply named for the fight that's going on today, because it is indeed important that we unify to bring freedom of religion fully to this country," he said.

Hansen's politicking for Moon alienated at least two prominent clergyman. Joshua O. Haberman, senior rabbi for the Washington Hebrew Congregation says Hansen has misrepresented Haberman's views on the Moon tax case.

Haberman was one of nine clergyman to sign a Hansen-circulated "Declaration on Religious Freedom." The declaration was circulated by Hansen and endorsed by the religious leaders in January.

Copies of the declaration were enclosed in a mass-mailed, fundraising letter sent by Hansen in late January, soliciting money for the Coalition for Religious Freedom. That organization was founded by Hansen in conjunction with his Association of Concerned Taxpayers.

"He used my name improperly and without authorization," Haberman said in a recent telephone interview. "I had approved of a general statement of principles. He said I would like a review of the Moon case," Haberman says, adding that the claim is untrue. "I feel justice has been done to Moon."

Haberman said he has always been reluctant to sign petitions or statements because of a fear of being misrepresented. "I thought a congressman wouldn't do that but, to behold, not long after the list of signatures was complete, I was recommended to favor other cases."

Haberman says after he complained to Hansen about the representation, Hansen's spokesman apologized by letter.

Jerry Falwell, the Baptist minister who heads the Moral Majority, also signed the Hansen-circulated petition and has also dissociated himself from the Coalition for Religious Freedom.

Explaining Falwell's retreat, Ron Godwin, executive vice president for Moral Majority, said the coalition's finances were too secretive and the source of funds was suspect. He added that the main focus of the organization appeared to be helping Moon get out of jail.

Godwin questioned the motives of the fundamentalist Christian leaders who are involved with the coalition, saying "they're taking money from a cult whose own doctrines are 180 degrees opposed. It's a little bit like the Jewish National Fund accepting money from Arab."

"We're not against the Unification Church and we're not against Rev. Moon," Godwin said, "but we don't like to be associated with groups that are secretly funded." Godwin said Moral Majority experienced difficulty determining the source of financing of the Hansen-founded coalition.

He says in addition to Haberman, he is aware of at least two other signers of the Declaration on Religious Freedom who claim to have been misrepresented by Hansen.

In his January fund-raising appeal for the coalition, Hansen wrote "Government planners knew that most people would not defend the smaller sects like Scientologists, Unificationists, Pentecostals and Mormons."

"It's no accident that government picked an unpopular sect of Oriental origin, the Unification Church, to begin establishing an ultimate government control over the finances of all churches."

In a telephone interview Thursday, The Times-News asked Hansen: "What is your relationship with the Unification Church as far as bringing clergyman aboard — attempting to enlist support for their cause?"

"I don't even hear your questions," Hansen responded.

Some of the organizations promoting Hansen's book are administered by Unification Church members, agents or former members. It is difficult to determine the activities of the Coalition for Religious Freedom, which Hansen founded, and the Ad Hoc Committee for Religious Freedom, which has spent lavishly on rallies and pageants, promoting both the cause of religious freedom and Hansen's book. Both groups have strong associations with the Unification Church.

The Coalition for Religious Freedom was run until August by Warren Richardson, who also served as legal counsel and business agent for the Unification Church's Washington Times newspaper when the church began that venture in 1982.

Richardson was also executive director of Causa, the Unification Church's political arm in Central and South America and now serves that organization as a consultant and member of its board of trustees.

Causa has been tied to the U.S. CIA in aiding Honduran-based anti-Sandinista contras and has been condemned along with the Unification Church by a conference of Honduran Roman Catholic bishops as anti-Christian.

On Thursday, Causa was named by both the Washington Post and NBC News as being the source of a $500,000 donation, arranged by Col. Bo Hii Pak, the number two man in the Unification Church. The money went to the Conservative Alliance, a lobbying organization headed by Terry Dolan, who also heads the National Conservative Political Action Committee.

Hansen was endorsed by Dolan's NCPAC in July. As of June 30, Hansen's campaign committee had not reported any donations from NCPAC. The next campaign-finance disclosure form is due to be filed by October 15.

Richardson told The Times-News that the Coalition for Religious Freedom is incorporated in the District of Columbia under its known name. When he was informed that the District of Columbia corporations bureau found no such listing when requested by The Times-News, Richardson said he would make inquiries to determine the structure of the organization and to determine its source of financing and annual budget.

At this writing, Richardson did not provide the information and additional efforts to contact him have proved unsuccessful.

In the Maple Valley, Unification Church members and Hansen supporters have worked together. Paul Carlson, a Unification Church missionary stationed in Twin Falls, hosted a dinner meeting on religious freedom at the Canyon Springs Inn on July 12. Carlson's event was not conducted under the name of the ad hoc committee but materials from the ad hoc committee were distributed and video tapes of the May 30 ad hoc committee rally in Washington, D.C., were shown. Hansen's book was distributed, free of charge.

Carlson, who worked in the John Birch Society booth at the Twin Falls County Fair, also helped promote a religious freedom rally at Anderson's Campground in Jerome County on Aug. 14. The campground is partially owned by Larry Anderson — a former Hansen staff worker who co-authored, with Hansen, the first edition of "To Harass Our People."

Anderson's wife, Ellen, is a Twin Falls staff worker for Hansen. The 1984 edition of the book was also available, free-of-charge, at the Anderson's Campground rally.

Hansen associations the Washington Times. The Washington Times has published stories that support Hansen's claim that he was singled out for prosecution under the Ethics in Government Act.

During Geraldine Ferraro's "full-disclosure" press conference in August, Washington Times reporter George Archibald repeatedly referred to Hansen's case while attempting to grill the Democratic vice-presidential nominee. Previous Archibald stories, which generally support Hansen positions on the ethics law and its application, were delivered to The Times-News by Hansen supporters on the day of their publication, July 17.

And on at least one occasion, information provided only to Archibald from The Times-News surfaced almost immediately in Hansen statements on KLIJ Radio's "Partyline."

Hansen told radio talk show host L. James Koutnick that a Times-News reporter was in the Washington D.C. area "going through the Arlington Courthouse records, interviewing with reporters of other newspapers. I guess trying to see if we were the instigators of Mrs. Ferraro's problems, trying to — I guess — to poison the minds of a few people since they don't happen to report in Washington, my case like The Times-News reports it."

Archibald, who is one of a few Washington Times reporters hired by church officials, says he doesn't know how Hansen knew that The Times-News had contacted him for an interview that was scheduled but had not yet taken place.

Archibald's hiring situation is unusual for the Times. Most of that paper's reporters were hired by editor Smith Hemphstone and publisher Jim Whelan after they assumed control of the paper in 1982.

Whelan, who has since left the Washington Times, questioned the newspaper's integrity at the time of his firing, claiming he had lost control of the paper to Unification Church leader Pak.

Moon

the House Chief Albert J. Unification Church member Susan Bergman.

In his book, "Gifts of Deceit," Robert Boettcher, staff director of the House Subcommittee on International Relations quotes Moon, articulating this strategy: "Some day in the near future, when I walk into the congressman's or senator's offices without notice or appointment, the aides will jump out of their seats and go to get the senator. They will get their senator or congressman saying 'he must see Rev. Moon.'"

Pak was considered the most uncooperative of witnesses questioned by the subcommittee. He and the Unification Church filed a $30-million law suit against the subcommittee chairman, Rep. Donald Fraser, and his investigators on the grounds that they conspired to violate the civil rights of Pak and the church through the investigation.

Unification Church leaders and leaders in the religious freedom movement make similar claims about Moon's jailing on the tax-evasion charges.

Unification Church members are encouraged to participate in the religious freedom movement, but they are also instructed to downplay their religious affiliation while performing that work. In the Church's July 1, Washington D.C. newsletter, members were advised:

"A religious liberty movement is forming throughout the country. Such a movement must not be tied to any one denomination or church... When you volunteer your time to meet clergy, please bear in mind that your efforts do not stem from the Unification Church but from a broad-based concern for the religious liberty of all people. Your participation is essential, but the ownership belongs to God and not to the Unification Church."

Questions surround Unification Church

WASHINGTON — Since the early 1970s when growing numbers of American youths began giving up school books and family life to hawk flowers and live in communal quarters for Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, the organization has been at the center of controversy.

Parents and cult awareness groups accuse the Unification Church and its Korean founder, with brainwashing its young devotees, luring them into "Moonies." The critics claim the church inducts members with a highly regimented lifestyle that is both physically exhausting and emotionally altering and renders members incapable of independent thought.

"They quote Moon's statement — 'I am a thinker—I am your brain. When you join in an effort with me I can do everything in utter obedience to me because what I am doing is not done at random.

Selecting and Arranging Furnishings

By Jo Ann Rose

The striking beauty of fall foliage — the burst of autumn reds and yellows, russets and browns that make the traditional fall landscape so beautiful, can teach us all a decorating lesson. That is the importance of a dramatic gesture, an unexpected burst of color in a room, a traditional chair or chest in the midst of a modern setting, an accessory or accent piece that brings a sharp point of contrast with the rest of the decor.

These unexpected gestures place the eye in the same way autumn colors bring such pleasing contrast with what has gone before. They also wake up a sleeping room. And there is plenty of room for the individual touch here, since your dramatic gesture can be a single piece of furniture you love, or a wall boldly done in your favorite color.

Nature isn't humdrum or "conservative." So don't be afraid to break with the traditional in an unexpected way. The result can add excitement and that much-needed personal touch.

And whether you are looking for a roomful of furniture or that single dramatic piece — a beautiful chest, a handsome wing-back chair, an imposing breakfast cabinet or some other personal choice — you'll find a dramatic selection in our furniture showroom. Come in!

Parks isn't sure of why he was fired

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Five years later, Bert Parks says he still isn't sure why he was fired in 1979 after nearly a quarter-century as host of the Miss America pageant.

"They accomplished nothing by letting me go," the 69-year-old Parks said Friday during an appearance at the world's fair.

"You never throw away something in which you are proficient, and I seem to be the beauty contest maven of the United States. Why throw away that kind of attribute and that kind of asset?"

He said the attention drawn to this year's pageant is "kind of a hollow-victory" because of "all the stases" associated with Vanessa Williams' resignation in July—after nude photographs of her were published in a men's magazine.

PG-13 Rated Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13." Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for attendance of children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

- PG: General Audiences, all ages admitted.
- PG-13: Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.
- R: Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
- X: No one under 17 admitted.
- All-time-rated-after-July-1: Will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

Pope gives strong technological plea

TORONTO (AP) — Pope John Paul II, cheered by the greatest throng of his Canadian tour, championed the cause of the unemployed Saturday and called on society's leaders to make technology "truly serve man, woman and child."

"At times technology cannot decide the full measure of its own allegiance: whether it is for humanity or against it," the pope declared at a Mass for a crowd estimated by organizers at a half-million, spread over the runways of a military airport in suburban Toronto.

It was the fourth time in as many days that the leader of the world's Catholics took a tough line on industry and government economic policies.

Canadian business was showing its irritation. "It's a message that we regret having heard because it means, really, that the economic realities have not penetrated the people who wrote the text for the pope," the Canadian Chamber of Commerce president, Sam Hughes, said of the pope's calls for a restructuring of Western economies.

Much of what the pope has said reflects recent economic statements by the bishops of the relatively liberal Catholic Church in Canada, where 1.3 million people, 11 percent of the workforce, are unemployed.

But the bishops insist they are not echoing John Paul's own social thinking.

"The pope says massive unemployment is an evil. He's talking against maximization of profits at the expense of workers," Bishop Remi de Roo, head of the Canadian church's social affairs commission, told a reporter.

PRINCESS DIANA Gives birth to boy

Princess has second boy

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana gave birth Saturday to a 6-pound, 14-ounce boy, her second child and the newest heir to the 1,000-year-old-British crown after his father, Prince Charles, and brother, 3-year-old Prince William.

"We have nearly got a full polo team now," Charles, an avid polo player, exulted to crowds of well-wishers before heading off for "a stiff drink." Polo is played with four players on horseback on each side of Buckingham Palace announced that the child was born at 4:20 p.m. (11:20 a.m. EDT) at St. Mary's Hospital, 8½ hours after Diana was admitted in the early stages of labor. Charles, who two years ago became the first royal father ever to attend the birth of an heir, was again present in the delivery room.

Battle's anniversary marked

GROESBEEK, Netherlands (AP) — Forty years ago Monday, American and British paratroopers plummeted out of the sky over occupied Holland in the biggest air-landing attack in history, a daring thrust the planners hoped would end World War II early.

Modern-day paratroopers of the U.S. Army's 82nd Airborne Division planned to re-enact their unit landing here today to commemorate the Allies' last great military failure in Western Europe, the Battle of Arnhem.

Retired Lt.-Gen. James M. Gavin, who led the division 40 years ago, is scheduled to watch them hit the ground.

"We thought when the operation was launched that the Germans were beaten, and a really good blow might have finished them off," recalled retired Maj.-Gen. R. E. Urquhart, who commanded the British paratroopers.

"But of course, it wasn't the case." The Sunday jump will be part of the biggest-ever World War II commemoration in the Netherlands, a month-long period of remembrance and reunion for British, American and Polish troops involved in the Allied thrust that did manage to liberate southern Holland from German forces.

Among others scheduled to attend observances will be President Chaim Herzog of Israel, who fought as a

Evans optimistic about wilds bill

BOISE (AP) — Gov. John Evans is giving even odds to passage of an Idaho wilderness bill before Congress adjourns next month.

Evans said he detected a mood of "compromise in the wind" as he left Washington earlier this week after meeting with House Democrats and members of Idaho's congressional delegation.

Negotiators were talking about an expanded wilderness of up to 2 million acres, Evans said. He said the addition could end up being about 1.5 million acres. The Idaho delegation's bill calls for 526,000 acres.

The governor said during the taping of KTVB's Viewpoint program that 1.5 million acres is not a large area, considering that 9 million acres could be studied for wilderness.

Evans said wilderness negotiations have been hampered by poor communications and a weakening desire to settle the issue this year.

The Democratic governor said that when he arrived in Washington this week, Sen. Jim McClure, R-Idaho, said he had not received a proposed bill from Rep. John Selberling, chairman of the subcommittee studying the wilderness issue, though Selberling had promised a bill by Sept. 1.

"So here was a communication breakdown between the chairman of the subcommittee on public lands, John Selberling, and Sen. McClure, the chairman of the Interior Committee in the Senate," Evans said.

As he flew home Wednesday, Evans said, Selberling, D-Ohio; Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz.; chairman of the House Interior Committee; and McClure met to discuss what kind of wilderness bill would be acceptable to Idaho.

The Idaho forest-products industry also has softened its stand on the need to get a solution to the wilderness issue this year, Evans said. That may have been one stumbling block during negotiations, he said.

On other issues, Evans said House Speaker Tom Steyer's proposal to cut the number of state employees by 10 percent was unrealistic.

"Once again, I think Tom Steyer is shooting from the hip," Evans said. He said the state payroll has been cut over the past five years and cannot be cut further.

Death row wedding plans hit snag

BOISE (AP) — Prison walls could not keep Cupid's bow from piercing the hearts of two Death Row inmates, but a decision by the Idaho State Penitentiary warden may thwart their wedding plans.

Nuptial arrangements were going smoothly for Betty Martinson, 43, and for Lucy Hill, 39, Boise, bride-to-be of Thomas Creech, until this week, when they were informed they no longer could visit the men because they had applied to marry them.

Ms. Martinson planned to marry Paradisi, 39, on Sept. 22, and Ms. Hill to marry Creech, 34, on Oct. 1.

Warden Arvon Arave said the women had been visiting the prisoners as spiritual advisers, and that their change in relationship to the men, as fiancées, made them unqualified by state law to visit them.

Idaho Deputy Attorney General Timothy McNeese said statutes allow only lawyers, immediate family (including wives), spiritual advisers, physicians and law enforcement officers to visit Death Row inmates.

Arave said letters were written to Ms. Martinson and Ms. Hill informing them they could not visit the men until they met with him to discuss their future plans.

After he meets with them, Arave said, he will decide whether the women will be allowed to marry or to visit the men.

The prison's policy on inmate marriages is, he said, "Anyone can get married unless the warden doesn't think they should."

If the couples marry, their weddings will be the first to take place on Idaho's Death Row.

Retail sales increasing

BOISE (AP) — The growth of retail sales in Idaho was up 35 percent between 1977 and 1982, but still fell 13 percent below the national average, federal Census officials say.

Despite the worst economic recession in recent memory, figures released by the Bureau of the Census Friday showed Idaho's retail sales climbed from $3 billion in 1977 to $4.1 billion in 1982, an increase of 35 percent. That compared with an estimated 48-percent rise nationwide.

Among businesses with employees, Idaho's grocery stores had the highest sales in 1982 at $1 billion, up 62 percent from 1977. New car dealers were second at $588 million, up 11 percent, and gasoline service stations were third at $353 million, up 69 percent.

Used car dealers had the highest sales per employee in 1982 at $205,000, followed by new car dealers at $184,000. The lowest average was reported by bakeries, bringing in just $17,000 per employee.

Retail businesses with no employees had average sales of $38,000 in 1982.

Ada County led the state's counties in retail sales at $892 million, accounting for 22 percent of the state's total. Bonneville County followed at $392 million, about 10 percent of the state total.

Idaho's economy is thought to be the least among the state's 44 counties during 1982 at just over $1 million.

Justice official eyes Hispanic-police relations

BOISE (AP) — Improved communication can help overcome traditionally poor relations between Hispanics and police, a U.S. Justice Department spokesman says.

"Hispanics throughout history, and particularly today, are arrested in a greater number than the white population," said Leo Cardenas, director of the regional office of the Rocky Mountain Community Relations Service of the Justice Department. He also is editor of Latino Magazine, a publication of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Speaking Friday at a conference sponsored by Image de Idaho, an organization that educates Hispanics and promotes Hispanic interests, Cardenas said that although Hispanics make up about 8.5 percent of the U.S. population, the country's prison populations are between 20 to 25 percent Hispanic.

Fifteen percent of the more than 900 inmates at the Idaho State Penitentiary are Hispanic.

Cardenas told the audience of 60, most of them Hispanic, that in order to break the "cycle of crime" that afflicts many Hispanic communities, Hispanics must become involved in selecting sheriffs and police chiefs and in deciding subjects taught in training programs attended by law enforcement officers.

Cardenas said the recent incident in which a 32-year-old Peruvian national, living in the small farm community of Oakley, shot and killed his wife, two children, an Oakley man and himself, could have been the result of frustration from living in another culture.

The folks who live there say it's the best place in the world...

Castleford

Balanced rock (above), just northwest of town, is one of Castleford's scenic attractions. James L. "Buck" Hilliard (below), 70, a retired Castleford farmer, watches the downtown traffic go by.

Pat Bean
Out and about

Diane Schorzman, Times-News correspondent for the Castleford area, says the town guide, points out the "new gym" behind the school.

"Well, it's not exactly new," she adds. "But not too many new things get built in Castleford, so everything stays new for a long time."

Later learn the "new" gym was built in 1961. Diane and I stop by to chat a few minutes with Mary Pinkston, who was a first grade teacher at the Castleford School for 37 years before retiring two years ago.

Christmas tree lights decorate the porch roof of Mary's home and a wind chime hangs by her door. A large stack of wood, sheltered on her front porch, waits in readiness for the cold days ahead. Mary tells me she has lived in her Castleford home for 37 years, moving in right after she went to work for the school.

She says she came to Roseworth, a farming community 10 miles south, as a baby and has "never been very far away."

Her students, I learn, have included six of her own grandchildren plus many students who were children of former students. She says before she started getting students of students of students, she thought it was about time to retire.

She's active in the town's pinocle and bridge clubs and has belonged to the Everywoman's Club and Grandmother's Club.

Castleford, I learn, depends a lot on club activities to provide entertainment. Probably the most active club in town is the Castleford

Men's Club, which from a recent roster of members appears to include every male in the area.

A visit to Balanced Rock Park, six miles from Castleford near Salmon Falls Creek, may in fact be one's only reason for ever passing through this sagebrush-surrounded town. The road to Castleford doesn't really lead anywhere else much.

The majestic rock formations near the early ford across Salmon Falls Creek are what gave the town its name. In 1906, the town needed a name for its post office and the name of Castleford was submitted because someone thought the rocks were similar to castles.

After leaving Mary, we stop by to visit Hubert Sample, who has to be the most civic-minded and busiest person in town. He is mayor, fire chief, school board trustee and city marshal.

He is on his way out the door from lunch back to his job at Bilek's, which is the biggest employer for the town, providing numerous services to farmers. The potato harvest is just him at a very busy time.

Later learn Sample was born in Castleford and has lived there his entire 39 years, "enjoying every minute of it. You get to know everybody," he says.

As I get ready to leave Castleford, I take one last quick drive around the town, not hard to do when there are only 10 short streets to explore, Main Street being the only paved one.

A man sits on a bench in front of one such empty building, a former trading post, waiting or watching for what I can only imagine. It is the second time I have passed him in my reconnaissance of the town. I wave a friendly greeting in passing and head back to a faster-paced way of life again.

CASTLEFORD—This small five-block long and four-block wide out-of-the-way town is more than just a dot on the map to the folks who live there.

Ask anyone—native or relative newcomer—and they'll tell you Castleford's just about the best place to live in the world.

Never mind that Castleford has no doctor, no dentist and no home-delivered mail—correspondence has to be picked up personally at the small blue cinderblock post office building in the center of town. And one could look forever without finding a modern shopping mall that most city folks take for granted nowadays.

Why, the town has only had cable television for less than a year.

It does have two churches, a Methodist and a Baptist (the nearest LDS church is in Buhl), and there is one small grocery store in town that carries most necessities.

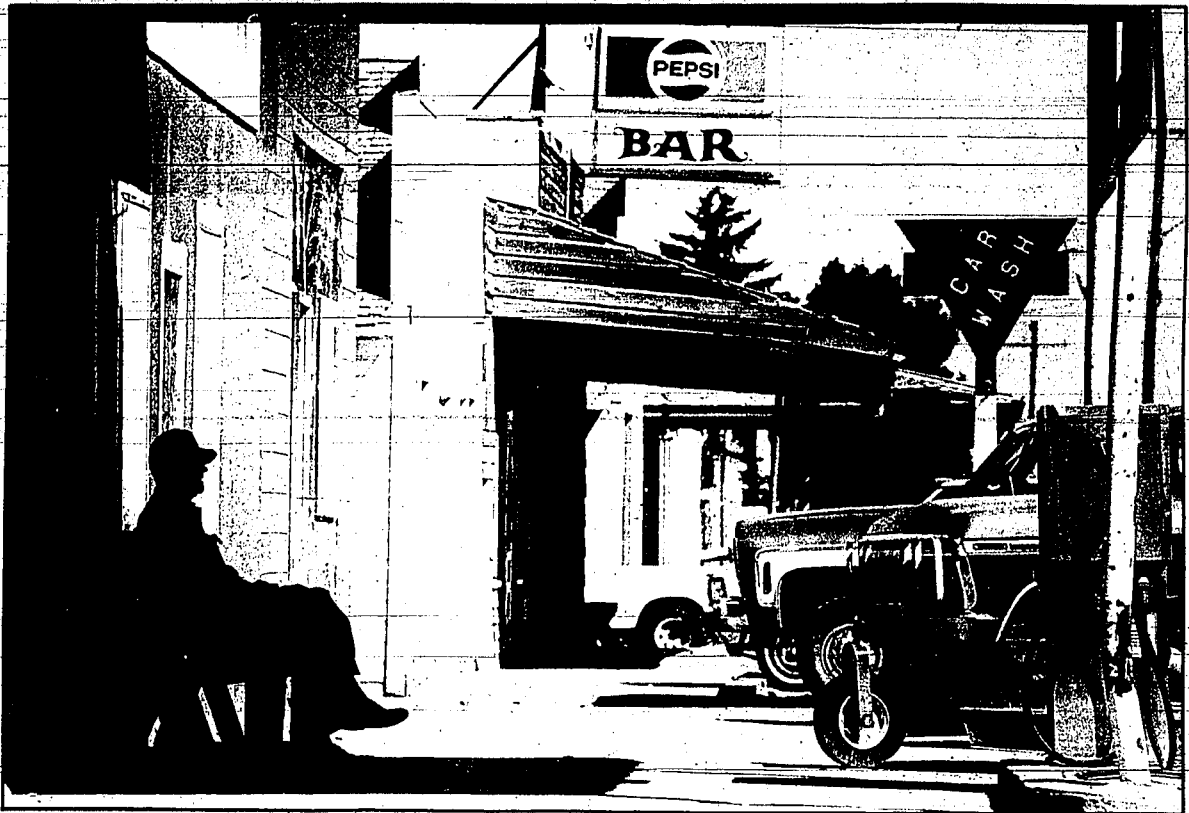

There's a meat-cutting service to the area's farmers...

It's run by Jack and Kathy Wiggs, who came to the town four years ago to escape "the California rat race."

Castleford is a place that revolves around its school, with just about the entire population turning out for every home school event, be it a football game or a graduation ceremony. And a good number travel to out-of-town events to support their students—and they support a losing team just as much as a winning team, one resident tells me proudly.

Right now the town is all excited about a new high school, plans for which have just been finalized following approval in May of a $1.05 million bond levy.

The need for the school is quite evident as we drive past the 61-year-old green, concrete building (built at a cost of $28,000 equipped in 1923) with one entire outside wall being supported by strong wooden braces.

Dear Mr. Wolff: A reward was paid by my side after agreement by all concerned. Later we consulted the laws and found that we had acted in error. Should there have been any redress?

Quick Reply, Trinidad, Colo.

ANSWER: Law 14 states, "... A penalty once paid, or any decision agreed and acted upon by the players, stands and should not be corrected even though at some later time it may be judged incorrect, except by agreement of all four players."

Dear Mr. Wolff: I opened one no-trump and partner jumped to five diamonds. I had full values, including the A-Q-x-x of diamonds, and pushed on to six. We went set. Must I shoulder all the blame?

Low Resch, San Bernardino, Calif.

ANSWER: Afraid so. When partner jumps to any game after a no-trump opening, it is a shut-out bid. Partner should not bid again.

Dear Mr. Wolff: Partner opens one spade and jumps to four hearts after my one no-trump response. What sort of hand should I expect?

Minor Seitz, Montgomery, Ala.

Young fails Miami physical

MIAMI (AP) — Rickey Young, former Minnesota Vikings' running back hoping to catch on with the Miami Dolphins, failed the physical part of his physical examination Saturday — the second prospective player to do so in many days, team officials said.

Young, a 10-year veteran of the National Football League, was cut by the Dolphins during preseason this year.

"He was a free agent, so there was no trade or deal," said Dolphins' spokesman Dan Edwards.

Edwards said he didn't know what the urine test showed, adding that the team "wouldn't give out that information anyway."

76ers trade top draft pick

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers traded forward Lee Hawkins, their top 1983 draft choice, to the Indiana Pacers for future considerations Saturday.

Hawkins, a 6-foot-8, 220-pound forward at Syracuse, was hampered by injuries during his rookie National Basketball Association season.

Hawkins played in only 28 games for the Sixers, scoring 48 points for a 1.7 average.

Throw costs Payton $500

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Bears running back Walter Payton has been fined $500 for throwing the ball into the stands at Soldier Field last Sunday after a 72-yard touchdown run — the lowest of his career — the Chicago Sun-Times reported in its Sunday edition.

The newspaper said that the National Football League had confirmed the fine, although the league officially had not informed Payton.

"It's not the cost of the balls we're worried about," the newspaper quoted an unnamed NFL official as saying. "We get those free from Wilson. We're concerned with the safety factor from a spectator standpoint. It could lead to a potential lawsuit."

Slew O'Gold wins Woodward

NEW YORK (AP) — Slew o' Gold, the 3-5 favorite, overtook Shifty Sheik with a sixteenth of a mile to go and posted a half-length triumph Saturday in the $202,000 Woodward Stakes at Belmont Park.

It was the second straight Woodward victory for the 4-year-old son of Seattle Slew and gave him a start on capturing Belmont's fall championship series.

Bowie seeks pay changes

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The agent for former University of Kentucky star Sam Bowie has reached agreement on a contract with the Portland Trail Blazers, but Bowie is seeking changes in the way the National Basketball Association team will pay him, an attorney who negotiates contracts for the Blazers says.

Bowie's agent, Larry Fleisher, agreed on terms with Alan Rothenberg, the Los Angeles-based attorney who is president of the Los Angeles Clippers, Rothenberg said Friday. Larry Weinberg, the Blazers' president, "was ready to go along," Rothenberg said.

Scott, Sly favored in mile

NEW YORK (AP) — Defending champions Steve Scott of the United States and Wendy Sly of Britain will head the men's and women's fields for the 5th Avenue Mile, the prestigious mile road race along one of the most well-known thoroughfares in the world.

The event, featuring men's and women's elite miles, will be held Sept. 22 and nationally televised by ABC, starting at 4:35 p.m. EDT.

Scott, the American record holder in the men's mile with a time of 3 minutes, 47.69 seconds, held off Ross Donoghue to win last year's 5th Avenue Mile in 3:49.77.

Georgia Tech topples Alabama 16-6

ATLANTA (AP) — Robert Lavette scored the only touchdown on a 1-yard run and David Bell kicked three field goals as Georgia Tech upset 19th-ranked Alabama, 16-6 Saturday, leaving the Crimson Tide with their worst start in 28 years.

It was the second loss in a row for Alabama, which blew a 17-point second half lead in a 38-31 loss to Boston College. The defeat left the Tide with an 0-2 record for the first time since 1956 — two years before Paul "Bear" Bryant returned to his alma mater to develop a perennial national power.

Lavette's touchdown scamper with 10:23 left in the second quarter capped a 71-yard Jacket drive that produced a 10-0 lead. He gained 128 yards on 26 carries.

Bell had field goals of 46 yards in the first quarter, 37 yards in the second and 23 yards in the third as Tech built a 13-0 lead before Alabama claimed its initial first down midway through the second period.

It was the season-opener for Tech, which had lost its last five battles with Southeastern Conference foes and 16 of 18 against the SEC since Bill Curry became head coach in 1980.

The Tide faltered on a 2-point conversion attempt, and then saw all hopes fade when they moved to the Tech 27 with seven minutes to play, but failed on a fourth-and-10 pass.

Navy drops Maryland

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Bill Byrne's 6-yard scoring strike to tailback Riker Clouse with 2:24 left Saturday gave Navy a 33-30 college football victory over North Carolina.

Navy had taken a 25-24 edge on Byrne's 11-yard scoring pass to Chris Weller with 8:07 left. Byrne's two-point conversion pass failed.

The Tar Heels took the kickoff and marched from their 17 to take the lead on Ethan Horton's 2-yard run with 4:02 remaining. Kevin Anthony tried a pass for the conversion but missed, leaving North Carolina with a 30-25 advantage.

After Byrne was sacked at his 21, he got Navy out of a hole with a 19-yard

Oklahoma mauls Pitt

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Danny Bradley scored twice on plunges of less than a yard and also threw two touchdown passes Saturday in leading 15th-ranked Oklahoma to a 42-10 romp over No. 17 Pitt and its best start in five years.

The Sooners, 2-0 for the first time since 1979, spotted Pitt a 3-0 lead midway through the first period on Mark Brasco's 37-yard field goal.

Then they took advantage of two mistakes by the Panthers. An on-punt plays plus Bradley's 22-yard scoring pass to Derrick Shepard for a 21-3 halftime lead.

Both errors set up touchdowns and enabled the Sooners to weather a third-period passing barrage by Pitt's John Congemi, who left with a sprained ankle with just over 11 minutes to play.

The loss saddled the Panthers with an 0-2 start for the first time in 12 years.

Bradley's second touchdown pass was a 6-yarder to freshman tight end Keith Jackson with 11:28 left in the game after Congemi's 25-yard scoring pass to Bill Wallace had pulled Pitt within 21-10 early in the third period.

Wyoming's late rally surprises Air Force 26-20

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Freshman quarterback Scott Runyan threw for a pair of fourth-quarter touchdowns as the Cowboys came from behind to upset Air Force 26-20 in Western Athletic Conference college football action Saturday.

Both Wyoming and Air Force, which had a 10-game winning streak broken, are 2-1 for the season.

Runyan gave Wyoming its first lead, 19-14, with an 88-yard strike to junior Allen Griffin, then sealed the victory with a disputed 12-yard strike to senior Jay Novacek. Air Force claimed Novacek trapped the ball in the end zone.

The 5-foot-9-inch redshirt freshman engineered all three Wyoming touchdown drives as the Cowboys won the battle of the wishbone offenses.

Air Force scored the first time it had the ball in both halves, on a 6-yard run by starting quarterback Brian Knorr and a 4-yard run by backup Bart Weis.

Ohio State 44, WSU 0
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Quarterback Mike Tomczak, seeing his first action of the season, led ninth-ranked Ohio State on two first-half touchdown drives as the Buckeyes whipped Washington State 44-0 in college football.

It was the first shutout in 43 games for the 'Buckeyes,' 2-0. Washington State, losing to Ohio State for the fifth consecutive time, dropped to 1-2 this fall. Ohio State beat Wisconsin 21-0 for its last shutout in 1981.

Colorado St. 10, Hawaii 3
FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Sophomore running back Steve Bartalo rushed for 170 yards and a fourth-quarter touchdown on Saturday, sparking Colorado State to a 10-3 victory over Hawaii in a Western Athletic Conference football game dominated by defense.

Bartalo dived over the top from the 1-yard line for the clinching score with 12:10 remaining, capping a nine-play, 67-yard drive. Bartalo's 33-yard run to the Hawaii 16 highlighted the drive.

BYU Drills Tulsa

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Quarterback Robbie Bosco passed for one touchdown and ran for another and linebacker Mary Allen picked off two passes Saturday as No. 8 Brigham Young won its 14th straight game with a 38-15 triumph over Tulsa.

BYU, which owns the nation's longest winning streak, advanced its season record to 9-0 heading into its first Western Athletic Conference game next weekend at Hawaii. Tulsa, winners of the Missouri Valley Conference the past four seasons, went to 1-1.

BYU's defense repeatedly negated Tulsa drives throughout the game, holding the Golden Hurricane to three field goals by Jason Staurourosy until the fourth quarter when quarterback Steve Gage flipped a 4-yard pass to Ron Kelley.

The BYU 20 in the first half and dominated time of possession, 26:26 to 9:34. BYU, however, made the most of its time and led 21-6 at halftime.

Bosco threw 7 yards to tight end David Mills for BYU's second touchdown of the game. In the fourth quarter, he went 33 yards on a bootleg to score and give the Cougars a 31-9 advantage.

For the game, the junior's passing statistics read 23-33-0 for 337 yards.

BYU opened the scoring in uncharacteristic fashion. After the Cougars stopped Tulsa at its 49, BYU's Val Sihakema fielded a Rich Stephenson punt at the Cougar 9, broke a tackle and fell in behind a wall of blockers and went 89 yards for the touchdown.

Bosco's touchdown to Mills came with 2:06 left in the first quarter. It came after Allen intercepted Gage on a third down pass in the end zone from the 6 yard line. BYU's main pass in the drive was a 29-yard pass from Bosco to Mark Bellini.

BYU scored again with 6:27 left in the second quarter on Helmut's run to make it 21-0. The next two scores belonged to Tulsa, with Staurourosy hitting field goals of 31 and 30 yards.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Quarterback Hugh Miller connected on a 73-yard scoring pass to split end Mark Pattison early in the third quarter Saturday, breaking open a tight game and helping No. 16 Washington to a 20-11 college football upset victory over third-ranked Michigan.

Pattison caught the pass at the Michigan 27 over the mistretched fingertips of Garland Rivers and scampered untouched into the end zone, as the 24 Huskies increased their lead to 17-3, 3:44 into the second half.

Sophomore Jeff Jaeger kicked field goals of 25 and 38 yards for Washington and fullback Rick Renney scored on a 2-yard dive for the Huskies, who dominated every phase of the game.

Notre Dame 24, Mich. St. 20
EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Notre Dame tailback Allen Pinkett caught a 40-yard touchdown pass and ran five yards for another score and the Fighting Irish rallied from a 10-point deficit in the fourth quarter to defeat stubborn Michigan State 24-20 Saturday in college football.

Michigan State, 1-1, capitalizing on Notre Dame mistakes, had jumped out to a 17-0 first-quarter lead. But in the second half, a fired-up Notre Dame defense bottled up the Spartan offense.

Notre Dame, 1-1, opened the second half by scoring on a six-play, 62-yard touchdown drive capped by a 40-yard touchdown lob from quarterback Steve Beuerlein to Pinkett. Michigan State's Ralf Mojslejenko countered with a 43-yard field goal in the third quarter to make the score 20-10.

Nebraska 38, Minnesota 7
LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Jeff Smith rushed for 183 yards and Craig Sundberg threw two touchdown passes as No. 1-ranked Nebraska romped over Minnesota 38-7 in a non-conference college football game Saturday.

Smith, the successor to Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier as the Cornhuskers' back, gained 107 yards in the opening quarter and scored the game's first touchdown on a 13-yard run early in the second quarter.

Smith carried 26 times to accumulate his career-high yardage total before going to the sidelines.

Buhl claims league title in volleyball

BURLEY — Boosted by the serving of Lori Jagels, the Buhl Indians swept to a three-game victory over South Fremont, 5-15, 15-7, 15-7, to take the championship in Saturday's Cross State Conference volleyball tournament.

Jagels did some "excellent hitting," according to Buhl coach Pat Thornsberry in the Indians' victories over Mountain Home, Rigby and South Fremont.

Buhl downed Mountain Home, 15-10, 15-6, in their first round, and went on to beat Rigby, 15-5, 15-2, in the second round.

"We got our momentum going (against South Fremont) and I guess they lost it," Thornsberry said. "We had some nice team hitting — especially from Jayme Paulson." South Fremont, admittedly the Indians' toughest competition, combated Buhl's powerful hitting with their own Amber Thompson. "She was fast on the court," Thornsberry pointed out.

Strong setting for Buhl came in the form of Gina Smuty and Lori Euston. Ann Hamilton played a good all-around game, said Thornsberry.

With South Fremont in second, Caldwell captured third and Mountain Home placed fourth in the tourney. The Burley varsity and Jayvee and Jerome also competed.

Now 8-1 on the season, Buhl faces the Filer Wildcats in the Indian gym Tuesday night, a game their coach is confident about playing.

"I think we have a pretty good chance of beating them," Thornsberry said.

Livingston leads seniors tourney

GOODING — Carlos Livingston of Boise, 75 years young, fired a 79 gross score to take the first-round lead Saturday in the Bob Lyons Seniors Golf Tournament at the Gooding Golf Course.

Forty-eight golfers participated in the event under pleasant conditions. The tourney concludes today.

Saturday's results:

Championship night — 1. Carlos Livingston, Boise, 79; 2. Bob Bacon, Jerome, 89; 3. Leo Phillips, Boise, 81.

First night — 1. Joe Asplarte, Twin Falls, 81; 2. Lowell Wills, Twin Falls, 82; 3. Glenn Blakeslee, Gooding, 83.

Second night — 1. Al Glanders, Twin Falls, 82; 2. Jack Cox, Twin Falls, 83; 3. Tim Forrest-Brown, Gooding and John Asplarte, Twin Falls, 86.

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Greg Allen shattered Florida State rushing scoring and all-purpose running records and led the 18th-ranked Seminoles to a 42-16 college football victory over Kansas.

The heavily favored Seminoles, 2-0, held a lenuous 14-10 lead at halftime, thanks in part to Florida State mistakes and a 70-yard touchdown play by Kansas.

But Cletis Jones, who burst 40 yards to score in the second quarter, dived in from the 1 with 4:07 remaining in the third period to give Florida State breathing room at 21-10.

Penn State 20, Iowa 17

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Doug Strang passed for one touchdown and ran for another and Nick Ganelano kicked a pair of field goals to lift

12th-ranked Penn State to a 20-17 upset of No. 5 Iowa in college football. Strang, who had a subpar outing in Penn State's 15-12 victory over Rutgers last week, fired a 24-yard touchdown pass to Herb Bellamy in the final minute of the first half to give the Nittany Lions a 13-3 lead and scored on a 1-yard run in the first minute of the final quarter to put his team ahead 20-10.

Oklahoma St. 31, Bowling Green 14
STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State defenders Rod Brown and Mark Moore scored on interception returns while Shawn Jones rushed for more than 100 yards for the second straight game as the 13th-ranked Cowboys turned away pass-happy Bowling Green 31-14 Saturday.

With Bowling Green trailing 21-7, Brown stepped in front of Falcon tight end Mark Dowdell, intercepted a pass and streaked downfield 95 yards untouched for a school record.

Soviet Union to import 46 million metric tons of grain

By DON KENDALL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union, which has another skimpy harvest to contend with, is expected to import a record-matching 46 million metric tons of grain from other countries in 1984-85.

"There are indications that the U.S.S.R. will import grain at an unprecedented pace during the August-December 1984 period," the Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service said.

"The shipments can be handled on schedule, and the 'unusual heavy purchasing and importing pace continues' through the winter and next spring, total volume could exceed 46 million tons, the record level first reached in 1981-82.

"Also, judging from the intensity of the import program thus far, it appears likely that relatively heavy imports could continue well into the summer months of 1985," the report said.

Soviet grain production was forecast on Wednesday by USDA at 175 million tons, down 5 million tons from indications last month and about 65 million tons below Moscow's 1984 target. Last year's harvest was estimated at 195 million tons, the most since the record yield of 237.4 million tons in 1978.

The report said the grain area for harvest in the Soviet Union this year was projected at 120 million hectares, the smallest since 1972. The 1983 area was 120.8 million hectares.

One hectare is about 2.47 acres and a metric ton is approximately 2,205 pounds.

As of Sept. 3 the Soviet harvest was at its slowest pace since 1980, with many fields being subjected to "unduly long walls" before harvesting, the report said.

The Soviet import figures are for the international grain marketing year which runs from July 1 through the following June 30. A long-term grain agreement with the United States is based on a slightly different year, from Oct. 1 through the following Sept. 30.

Moscow has turned heavily to the United States in recent months, buying nearly 14 million tons of wheat and corn since June 29, mostly for delivery in 1984-85.

President Reagan this past Tuesday announced that the Soviets will be allowed to buy an additional 10 million tons of grain during the second year of the supply agreement, beginning Oct. 1. The pact guarantees Moscow up to 12 million tons of wheat and corn annually, but if more is wanted the United States must decide whether the grain is available.

"Normally, such action is taken at the time of regular semiannual consultations," the report said. "However, this year, in light of heavy early season buying, and since regular consultations will not be held until late November, the United States initiated an adjustment of the 1984-85 supply level somewhat earlier than usual."

Further, the report said, the 22 million tons now cleared for the Soviet Union to buy in 1984-85 "could be reviewed further for adequacy" during the regular meeting in November.

The United States is enjoying bumper harvests of wheat and corn this year, and the extra business from the Soviets is welcome news to farmers who hope that additional exports will bolster market prices.

Sales for delivery in the agreement's first year, which will end Sept. 30, total more than 14.8 million tons, including 7.8 million tons of wheat, 6.5 million tons of corn and 0.5 million tons of soybeans. Sales for the second year total 16.8 million tons, including 7.45 million tons of corn and 1.36 million tons of wheat.

The Soviets were also given the go-ahead to buy 22 million tons of grain in the first year of the agreement, the same level as Reagan announced for 1984-85.

Strong U.S. dollar crimping sales by soybean farmers

DES MOINES (AP) — While Iowa soybean farmers are getting about the same per bushel today that they did three years ago, the cost to foreign buyers has jumped as much as 70 percent over the same period, thanks to the strong U.S. dollar.

Iowa State Economist Bob Wisner said that because of that disparity, soybean exports are off sharply this year and the blame, he said, can be placed on the federal deficit.

"Another way to look at it is that what to us looks like slightly over $6 per bushel looks like $8 to $11 beans to foreign buyers because of the rise of the dollar," Wisner said.

The deficit requires the government to borrow, thus squeezing money supplies and raising interest rates, he said, and the higher rates in turn attract foreign capital, boosting the value of the dollar against other currencies.

"Agriculture has been penalized through the strong dollar and probably the most important single thing that can be done to improve export demand would be to permit the dollar to drop back to a lower level."

"The remedy is dealing with the deficit," Wisner said. "There's no painless way of doing that. It seems to me it would require a combination of increased taxes and reduced spending."

Wisner said corn farmers are much less affected by the currency differences because of trade barriers and tariffs that already serve to depress exports to European countries.

The sole reason is price, he said, and the villain is the strong dollar. This week, soybean farmers are getting about $6.32 per bushel, which is about 2 percent higher than the comparable price Oct. 1, 1981.

Fruit exports off

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exports of horticultural products are down this year, says the Agriculture Department.

In July, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said, shipments were valued at $217 million.

Capitalism — a dirty word?

That's what Twin Falls man finds during 3-year stay in Africa

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — People in Third World countries, particularly government officials, do look glibly in the mouth, says a longtime Twin Falls businessman who spent three years in Africa.

But Norm Tarter, who operated the OK Tire shop here for about 30 years, says he understands why black leaders in the newer African nations are initially suspicious of "improvement projects" of any type — even when sponsored by churches and other international volunteer groups with nothing to gain.

Native Africans have been exploited for so many years and well-meaning help from abroad sometimes has ended helping the greedy, instead of the needy, he says.

"Then, there is always the possibility that even a seemingly non-controversial project, such as building a desperately needed village well, will promote capitalism.

"Capitalism is a dirty word throughout Africa," Tarter says. He speaks with some authority having dealt with officials throughout seven African countries during his volunteer work for the Seventh Day Adventist Church. He and his wife, Verla, paid their own travel expense to Zimbabwe, formerly Southern Rhodesia, where Tarter was the coordinator of development for the church's Trans Africa Division.

"I had a demanding schedule of conferring with German officials one hour, then catching a plane to Norway the next.

"They (agency people) wanted three things from me," Tarter says. "A periodic report showing how the project was going, human interest stories to illustrate how the project was helping the 'poorest of the needy' and a plain thank you."

In too many cases, he said, donor agencies found once they received funds for some project, the Africans "felt they didn't need the donors."

But by his thorough reporting on how the money was being spent, from training native nurses to teaching gardening and building wells, Tarter says he was able to build solid rapport with the donor agencies.

"By the last year they were contacting me," he said. However, once he obtained funding for a project, Tarter says his problems had just begun. Getting cooperation from suspicious native officials often proved more difficult.

Once, he recalls, he was stopped by machine-gunning guards on the Zambia border. Tarter says he probably would have been unable to bring a pump into the country to provide desperately needed water for a village. If he had not had in his possession a letter of approval for the project from the country's prime minister.

Deep-seated tribal rivalries and lack of natives trained in business and industry combine to make many things Americans take for granted — such as ease of banking and travel across bordering countries — a continual hassle, Tarter said.

He and his wife say witchcraft "is the most powerful force in Africa" despite the growth of Christianity.

In Zimbabwe, which gained its independence just two months before the Tarters arrived here, the administrator of one of the large hospitals built by the British was immediately replaced by a black nurse who gave equal space to the local witch doctor.

One of the first projects Tarter "got together" was to bring an agronomist from Salt Lake City to Zimbabwe to teach natives about modern gardening so they could take the information to their villages.

"There were no tractors. All they needed was a hoe and a shovel," Tarter says. "But we showed how by using fertilizer and carrying water in a bucket they could grow all kinds of vegetables such as tomatoes, cabbage and cauliflower."

The natives, who subsist primarily on maize grown during the rainy season and traditionally "sat and waited for rain" during the dry season, were shown how with wells they could grow gardens year around and improve their own limited diets and also earn extra income.

He said one man with an average $200 yearly income, realized $800 from his first crop of tomatoes, enabling him "put his kids in school."

Most children are undernourished, not from starvation, he said but from eating only ground maize. Fifty percent of the children die before 5 years of age, usually from measles, he said, because they are so malnourished.

In addition to the training of some 600 natives in gardening, other projects Tarter managed included bringing in U. S. nurses to train native women to work in the clinics out in the bush, and obtaining funding to build six new clinics.

The Adventist church has 86 elementary schools in the Zimbabwe bush, plus a boarding college and academy and throughout the seven countries, operates five large hospitals with satellite clinics. The latter are simple four-room buildings where babies are born and nurses provide the only medical help available to the rural population.

Since returning to Twin Falls, Tarter has made one trip to Denmark for the church, but ill health this summer probably will keep him from working on any more projects.

Although much aware of the huge problems facing the African governments, he is optimistic about the eventual outcome.

"If we don't give up and keep the schools and churches going, help them physically by healing, teaching and showing how to feed themselves, then they'll ask about Christianity, which will finally defeat witchcraft," Tarter said.

"If we don't give up and keep the schools and churches going, help them physically by healing, teaching and showing how to feed themselves, then they'll ask about Christianity, which will finally defeat witchcraft," Tarter said.

Women's mythology workshop slated for late September

By MEBB BRUMBACH
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — A mythological workshop for women, "Return to the Goddess," will be held in Twin Falls the weekend of Sept. 28-30.

The primary workshop coordinator will be Ella Nelson-Eagle, a 20-year resident of Twin Falls, who is now living in Walnut Creek, Calif., while working on her dissertation for her doctorate in transpersonal psychology at International College in Los Angeles.

She was a counselor in Twin Falls for three years and still continues with a limited local practice. A former League of Women Voters' president and twice nominated to Outstanding Young Women of America, she has a bachelor's degree from the University of Idaho and a master's degree from the University of Utah.

The mythological workshop, planned as a personal growth experience, is based on the work of Dr. Jean Houston, an expert in mythology, psychology and mind research.

Nelson-Eagle notes she is currently involved in a three-year "Cultivation of Human Capacities" training program under Houston, which involves approximately 20 participants from Europe, Canada and the United States.

She says the program is designed for those who want to reach out in their professions and participants include priests, rabbis, nuns, psychiatrists and counselors.

The focus is on "creative ways for people to grow — in education, business and spirituality, and the emphasis is on using new scientific findings about brain and mind research," she explains.

Nelson-Eagle says the "Return to the Goddess" workshop is based on the mythological teachings of Houston.

"By using the mythological story, there is form to each woman's personal search," Nelson-Eagle says, emphasizing the word "personal," and adding, "the search is within the framework of one's own beliefs."

She says this is a rare opportunity to attend such a workshop because Idaho is seldom chosen as a site to conduct workshops with such dynamic and transformative opportunity.

"Many women in our society are trying to define and live within a multitude of roles. I want to bring what I've been doing the last three years back to the women I know in the Valley. I have an allegiance here," Nelson-Eagle says.

The mythological story of the Sumerian goddess, Inanna, will provide the context for a psychological journey for the participants, she adds.

"Inanna," she explains, "is the earliest recorded goddess in history and symbolizes the feminine search for identity and relationship with the earth." The goddesses in mythology represent different things at different times in history, so that's just a "broad brush stroke," she adds.

The Magic Valley workshop will include guided sensory imagery, movement, dance, art, play and ritual. The latter, Nelson-Eagle says, is designed to help understand the mythological story. It is fun and joyous.

Some of the ritual is created around American Indian ceremonies, she adds.

The purpose of such a workshop is "to reclaim our spiritual selves, our feminine intuition and learn how to better utilize our energy patterns," she adds.

It is a "powerful way to get a person to look at her depth levels in the physical, psychological, mythological and spiritual realms — an intensive, two-day 'seeding on moving in all these levels.'"

Two other leaders for the workshop include Sharon Melanson from Vancouver, B.C. and Mary Possley from Houston, Texas.

We are all "therapists, teachers and healers," Nelson-Eagle says. She, Melanson and Possley have previously conducted this workshop in Houston, Texas.

Dorothy Courtright stands in front of Minidoka's post office; Courtright served as town postmaster for years

Minidoka's Courtright has done it all

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

MINIDOKA — Dorothy Courtright could be called Minidoka's leading citizen.

A former mayor of this small town 13 miles northeast of Rupert, she served for 13 years as postmaster, retiring from that post Sept 1.

Speaking of the "once-a-fourishing" railroad junction, Courtright says during the summer migrant laborers on surrounding farms swell Minidoka's population, but in the winter, "you're doing good to have 50 permanent families."

One indication of the sleepy atmosphere of her long-time hometown is that no one yet applied for the postmaster position and the post office is temporarily being operated by a postal employee imported from Marsing.

But they as it is, the town is not likely to lose its post-office because of the unusually large number of money orders purchased by the migrant workers.

Although postal regulations do not allow divulging figures, the former postmaster indicated that "thousands of dollars" pass through the tiny one-room office before being sent by registered mail into Rupert on the one daily delivery from the county seat.

Minidoka was a much larger place when Courtright and her husband, Paul, moved here in 1952. The town's population was 100 at that time. See ELDER on Page F7

76-year-old man climbs top peak of Teton range

Paul Petzoldt, Landers, Wyo., who spent his boyhood in Twin Falls more than 70 years ago, recently climbed the top peak in the Grand Teton mountains at age 76.

The climb was just 60 years since the nationally known mountain climber, first scaled the peak with another boy at age 16, according to his sister, Violet Herrick, Twin Falls.

She said at the time "nobody believed that two boys could make the climb unaided" but they returned with convincing evidence, bringing back papers left there by an earlier climber, reportedly the first to scale the peak.

Since leaving Twin Falls 60 years ago for a summer job hayring on a ranch in the Teton area and, subsequently, climbing the peak, her brother has gone on to become known nationwide in mountain climbing circles. He has worked as a guide in Colorado, established climbing schools in Landers and also in Driggs while he still operates. He and his wife spend summers in Victor, on the Idaho side of the Teton.

He also has written several books on the subject, Mrs. Herrick said. Another brother, Herman Petzoldt, lives in Jerome and there are several other relatives in Magic Valley, Mrs. Herrick said.

Idaho potatoes took the spotlight last week at the national American Legation convention in Salt Lake City.

Mrs. Ray Berlie, president of the Pfler Legion auxiliary, reports Idaho members served baked potatoes to more than 1,000 delegates at the Marriott Hotel.

The Filer woman has been selected as alternate "Member of the Year" for Idaho because of promotion of various projects for veterans during her term as president of the Filer group.

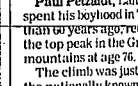

Three of the 12 national Legion auxiliary awards were won by Idaho girls. One to person and one to Penelope Reedy, Fairfield writer and member of the Association for the Humanities in Idaho, will be one of four people from the state to attend a three-day training workshop in Pomona, Calif., Sept 21-24, for a national reading and discussion project.

The project, sponsored by the American Library Association and funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities, is designed to offer grant money, technical assistance and materials to enable public libraries across the U.S. to present reading and discussion programs for out-of-school adults.

Susan Short, daughter of Harold and Rosemary Short of Rupert and a Minico High School student, has been named an Academic All-American. She was nominated for the award by Apple Gunther, band instructor.

'Old-fashioned' banking costs customers money

NEW YORK (AP) — Banking in the old-fashioned way can cost a customer more money, according to the American Bankers Association.

"Many banks now charge fees for checks or require minimum balances," says James D. Mullen, an ABA banking advisor.

"They are doing so to compensate for the higher rates of interest they now pay depositors as a result of deregulation as well as increased costs for operational overhead."

To help reduce costs, Mullen suggests customers use automatic teller machines, direct deposit of checks and check safekeeping, a system in which the bank keeps your cancelled checks and sends you a monthly statement of checks written.

Why do visitors ignore guest towels?

DEAR ABBY: May I air my pet peeve? I always put out pretty little hand towels for guests to use. They are easy to launder, but I never have to launder them because nobody ever uses them.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Instead they dry their hands on the lip of a king-size bath towel, so I'm forced to launder a big bath towel rather than little hand towels that easily could be tossed into my washing machine. Instead of making less work for me, my guests make more work for me. Do other people have this problem?

— ANNOYED IN GEORGIA
DEAR ANNOYED: Yes. In fact, Mabel Craddock of Ventura, Calif., grew so weary of guests who dried their hands on toilet paper, bath mats and even her shower curtain, she wrote the following poem, which I published.

Her poem was embroidered in cross-stitch, and she framed it and hung it on the wall in her powder room over her guest towels. That solved her problem. So here's the poem, and be my guest:
A GUEST TOWEL SPEAKS
Please use me, guest;

Don't hesitate.
Don't turn your back Or vacillate.
Don't dry your hands On petticoat,
On handkerchief, Or redingote.
I'm here to use; I'm made for drying.

1943. She says many railroad and section crews lived here and worked out of Minidoka 40 years ago. Her husband was a Union Pacific employee, working as a brakeman and conductor on freight trains.

"He'd put in 16 hours a day with the trains starting in Minidoka," his wife said.

The Courtright's previously lived briefly in a Portenau Park housing unit in Pocatello before moving here. But coming to a small town was no shock for Courtright because her own home town — Mackay — is also in an "out of the way" location.

The former Dorothy Frost was born in Challis March 5, 1917, moving to Mackay with her family when she was in grade school. Her father died when she was 7 and her mother raised her four children by working in cafes and taking in laundry.

Although Mackay was too small for much community activity, Courtright remembers swimming with friends in the Lost River in summer and making trips to the school.

Homance deterred her formal education when she married Courtright in April 1934 without finishing high school. He had left his home state of Pennsylvania to join the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) and was stationed at Wildhorse Camp near Mackay.

After his CCC term was completed, he worked for the Forest Service in Mackay and served as town marshal. That job was paid not in cash, but in warrants.

"We could take out $40 in trade each month," she said. To get extra cash, her husband worked as watchman for the railroad, which led to his permanent employment.

The Courtright's have four children, Don Courtright of Salt Lake City; Nina Stephenson of Aequia; Charles R. Courtright of Carson City, Nev., and Paul Courtright of Paul, 13 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

She says she didn't work outside her home until her children were older. She first was a waitress in a local cafe but soon switched to a grocery store where she was a clerk for several years.

Then the post office was moved into that store building so she helped the postmaster, serving 23 years as relief postmaster before being sworn in as postmaster in 1972.

She had served nine years on the Minidoka City Council when the current mayor moved out to a grocery store where she was a clerk for several years.

"I think when they elected me, they'd run out of men," Courtright laughed. She then was elected several more terms and doesn't remember anyone ever running against her.
