Reagan offers to talk with Soviets

By MAUREEN SANTINI
The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — President Reagan, striking a conciliatory chord, said Monday he would work to narrow "the clear differences" between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The president proposed high-level meetings that could be essential if crises are to be avoided.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko listened with a poker face, hands folded in his lap, as Reagan addressed the 39th session of the United Nations General Assembly.

"America has repaired its strength... We are ready for constructive negotiations with the Soviet Union," Reagan said.

The president adopted his most conciliatory line yet toward the Soviets in the speech, which came just over six weeks before the Nov. 6 election.

His most specific proposal, to "institutionalize" contacts between top U.S. and Soviet officials, resembled a plank of the Democratic party platform.

Reagan, pressed repeatedly by U.S. allies to soften his once harsh anti-Soviet rhetoric, was interrupted just once by applause, when he marked:

"Outside this room, while there still will be clear differences, there's every reason why we should do all that is possible to shorten that distance. And that's why we're here."

Gromyko, impassive as ever, did not join in the clapping at that point or at the conclusion of Reagan's speech.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said U.S. ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick had told Reagan that General Assembly speeches aren't generally intended to be taken seriously.

Reagan told reporters later that he and Gromyko had exchanged pleasantries during their five-minute encounter at a reception

Sunday night, but refused to predict the outcome of their talks at the White House on Friday. The talks will represent Reagan's first formal meeting with a top Kremlin official during his presidency.

After returning to the White House, Reagan was asked how he expects the Soviets to respond to his proposal.

"We'll know Thursday" when Gromyko addresses the assembly, Reagan said, adding he made an effort to hope they would agree on something that he hoped they could do together.

But the Soviets' initial reaction to Reagan's speech was critical. Radio Moscow said the speech was critical. Radio Moscow said the speech was critical.

Monday's address a surprising switch for president

By DON OBERDORFER
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — President Reagan's appearance before the United Nations Monday as the apostle of East-West conciliation was an extraordinary turnabout for a lifelong anti-communist who previously regarded the "focus of evil," as he once described the Soviet system, "to the ash heap of history."

Peering at Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, who sat stonemfaced in the front row of the General Assembly chamber, Reagan delivered a lengthy plea for "a new beginning" in the affairs of nations. The plea was more suggestive of the start of a presidential term than its 11th hour.

The speech was popular with diplomats in the hall, who always prefer cooperation to conflict among the superpowers, and was calculated to impress the American electorate, which has expressed repeated concern via the nuclear freeze movement and public-opinion polls that Reagan's characteristic hard line against the Soviets could bring the two superpowers to nuclear blows.

It is too early to say whether Kremlin leaders will regard the speech as anything more than a political ploy. More important, there is no hard evidence about whether the Soviets will respond in kind, whatever their view of Reagan's motivation.

In his first three years in office, Reagan took a strikingly tough posture toward the Soviets, in policy and rhetoric, as he presided over the biggest peacetime military buildup in U.S. history.

Last Jan. 16, as the new year dawned and memories faded of the Soviet downing of the Korean Air Lines jet four months earlier, Reagan shifted toward a more conciliatory stance.

His East Room address that day addressed to "Ivan and Anya" and their leaders in Moscow called for improved relations. But the Downtown fire helps clear lot

TWIN FALLS — Firefighters from the Twin Falls Public Safety department were on the scene of a downtown Twin Falls fire for nearly five hours Monday, but they made no effort to save the building.

The owner of the building set the fire, according to firemen, but there won't be any arson charges filed.

The blaze that began at 8:53 a.m. at 326 Shoshone St. W. was a controlled fire aimed at clearing the structure from the lot to make way for parking for Willis Motor Co. vehicles.

Jerry Hafer, fire battalion chief, said as in other such burns, the owner starts the fire and firemen and equipment maintain a control. During the past week the department has used the building for training fires. The remaining walls, Hafer said, will be pushed into the 12-foot basement and the lot level.

The structure had housed the Kirkham Auto Parts and, more recently, the Darryl Seed Co. However, it has been vacant for some time until purchased by Willis Motor Co.

Attorneys challenge validity of Hansen felony conviction

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Attorneys for Idaho Congressman George Hansen have filed a 700-page brief with the federal appeals court, challenging the validity of the seven-term incumbent's four-count felony conviction.

"There's nothing new from what we've been saying all along," Hansen staff attorney James McKenna said Monday shortly after the brief was filed in Washington.

In addition to Hansen's own brief, attorneys for more than 100 of his House colleagues,

Complaint improper — B1

Democrats as well as Republicans, filed a separate brief on the congressman's behalf, agreeing with his contention that the Ethics in Government Act under which he was convicted was never intended to permit criminal prosecution.

Hansen called that bipartisan support of his appeal "most significant," and he pointed out that House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill has publicly agreed with that contention. The flamboyant conservative, locked in a tight re-election campaign against Democrat Richard Stallings, faces up to 15 months in prison and $40,000 in fines for his April 2 conviction of falsifying financial disclosure statements. He has maintained his innocence of any wrongdoing throughout.

The signers of the congressional brief, filed by Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, included House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, and House Republican Whip Trent Lott,

That brief said the signers "are of the firmly held and unanimous opinion that EIGA, as passed by Congress in 1978 and signed into law by the president, specifically does not allow criminal penalties to flow from its violations."

Hansen's colleagues cited a prior court ruling that said no conduct is a federal crime unless Congress plainly and unmistakably makes it so. They noted that early versions of the ethics law contained criminal penalties, but they were dropped in the final version. Federal prosecutors argued that by violating the ethics law, Hansen was subject to criminal penalties under a fraud and false claims statute, the brief said.

"In the final compromise, criminal sanctions were specifically deleted from the final bill, thereby allowing passage of the bill and expressing clear congressional intent that violators would in no event be in jeopardy of becoming criminals for violations of these new reporting requirements," the brief said.

In addition to the claim that the law never intended prosecution, Hansen's attorneys also

Autumn brings record snow to Rockies, northern plains

By ROGER PETERSON
The Associated Press

Record cold and up to 15 inches of snow ushered in autumn over the northern Plains and Rockies Monday.

Wintry weather led roads, downed power lines and spread flakes mixed with rain as far east as Minnesota. Temperatures plummeted as the mass of arctic air spread out with brisk north winds. The National Weather Service reported that most of Nebraska was down in the 30s and 40s by midday, but the southeastern corner of the state was still in the upper 60s.

The calendar said Monday was the second day of the fall season, with winter not officially scheduled until Dec. 21. But a winter storm watch was in effect Monday for central Wyoming. Travelers' advisories were issued for southeastern Montana and north-central and southwestern Wyoming.

Frost a killer — B1

Light snow continued falling over eastern Montana, eastern Wyoming and the western Dakotas.

Sheridan, Wyo., got the most snow from the storm that started Sunday with 16 inches. That broke a record for the month of September, 9.5 inches in 1970. The 12.3 inches that fell Sunday broke a 24-hour September record of 6.9 inches, set in 1922.

Bismarck, N.D., received 4.6 inches of snow, breaking the previous record for all of September of 4.1 inches, set in 1942, but most of it melted Monday on the warm ground.

"It's good, wet moisture (and) they (farmers) can now use it," said Isabelle Nielson at Haley, about 120 miles southwest of Bismarck. She said 9 inches fell there Sunday.

Broads, Mont., got 11 inches of snow. Up to 14 inches of snow fell on parts of northwestern South Dakota, but it had dwindled to 12 inches by midday morning and snow quickly melted off roads there.

Wyoming's Pacific Power & Light Co. crews worked to repair scattered power outages in the Green River area, where about an inch of wet snow downed tree limbs and power lines during the night.

Roads in northern Wyoming were snowpacked and wet or slushy elsewhere in the state. The state Highway Patrol said U.S. 14A between Lovell and Burgess Junction, over the Big Horn Mountains, was closed Monday. Yellowstone National Park's eastern entrance at Cody was closed during the morning but reopened by midday.

Readings in Montana by mid-morning were at or below freezing throughout the state.

Temperature rises as drill punches deeper. Thermal well project may leave school district in hot water

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls School District may be in hot water financially if it does not find warmer water in a geothermal well.

RIKING Drilling Co. has reached the 1,500-foot bottom mark specified in a contract with the school district. The geothermal well being drilled behind the high school. District officials had hoped to find water of 101 or 102 degrees there.

Listen: The water's only 91 degrees. Acting Superintendent Carl Snow says the drilling will continue. "We may need 20 more feet or we may need 100 more to reach 100 degree water," he says.

Doyle Smoore, a district official monitoring the drilling, says the district still has excellent chances of hitting hotter water. The soil strata in the well has been comparable to that in other geothermal wells in the area, he says. "The water has been progressively warmer as the district has drilled deeper, he says. Cold water was caused off stream. The water at 1,050 feet was 80 degrees. At 1,400 feet it was 91 degrees, warming to 91 degrees 200 feet higher up.

The 91 degree water, bubbling out at the rate of 30 to 40 gallons per minute, would be adequate for heating Sawtooth Elementary, says Snow. That school has heat pumps. But whether it requires heat is needed for the most efficient use at the high school, where pipes would be installed to circulate the floor-to-ceiling heat.

The district has several matching grants of $125,000 from the Department of Energy and the Bonneville Power Administration for installing the well and converting the heating systems of the two buildings for geothermal heat.

But the grant's contingent on the district hitting hot water. When drilling is complete, engineers will determine if the geothermal water is warm enough for the project to continue, and the grant money to be awarded.

Smoore says the additional drilling should be completed in the next three days.

Gas company wants rate cut

BOISE (AP) — Intermountain Gas Co. has asked the Idaho Public Utilities Commission for permission to reduce its rates, effective Nov. 1. Intermountain, the target of recent takeover bids, said an average 4 percent reduction is possible because of a new gas-supply contract. The contract is between Salt Lake City-based Northwest Pipeline Corp., which supplies Intermountain, and Westcoast Transmission Co. of Canada, which supplies Northwest.

Intermountain spokesman Reed Penning said the reduction would cut the average residential customer's annual bill by $15. It would be Intermountain's sixth reduction in gas prices since late 1982.

Butte murder suspects in jail

BUTTE, Mont. (AP) — Sheriff's officers from Butte traveled to Idaho Monday to retrieve two teenage boys who are accused of murdering their mothers and the sister of one of the boys. The two women and the teen-age girl were found shot to death in a trailer house in Butte early Monday.

Michael Eugene Horvath, 15, and Ted Lloyd Gibson, 14, were arrested in Wallace, Idaho, by Idaho state troopers after they allegedly robbed a restaurant in Superior, Mont., of $130 about 4 a.m., Mineral County Sheriff Wade Vandall said.

Youth Court documents released by District Judge Mark Sullivan of Butte charge the boys with three counts of juvenile delinquency by reason of deliberate homicide and say they had a .22-caliber rifle and a .357 Magnum pistol when they were arrested.

Storm sweeps Wasatch Front

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A band of snow and rain showers along with an isolated thunderstorm cell moved southward along the northern Utah's heavily populated Wasatch Front Monday night.

The showers were associated with the tail end of the disturbance which gave most of northern Utah a good soaking during the previous 24 hours, the National Weather Service said.

A thunderstorm was reported from the Ogden area about 8 p.m. Snow showers developed over the Bountiful area and drifted southward toward Salt Lake Valley.

Union chief defends contract

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers union President UAW leader on Monday defended the union's tentative contract agreement with General Motors Corp. against a dissident member of his national negotiating team.

The approval vote Friday on the tentative national contract by the union's national negotiating committee was 10-1. The negative vote came from Peter Kelly, an official of UAW Local 160 at the GM Technical Center, a research facility in Warren, a Detroit suburb.

Immigration bill advances

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators, trying to wrap up work on a complex immigration control bill, said Monday that aliens who come forward to legalize their status, as well as the employers who hired them, should not be hounded or penalized for unpaid taxes.

Opponents of the immigration legislation have argued that few workers would actually come forward if the bill became law for fear of action by the Internal Revenue Service.

In their seventh day of discussions on the bill, the conferees agreed to add language about the tax issue in a statement accompanying their legislation.

Although it will not be part of the law, the courts have traditionally used such statements to determine the intent of Congress.

Avoid politics, churches told

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Roman Catholic politicians who oppose abortion should not be afraid to mix their religious values with politics, but churches should not become "unnecessarily entangled in the political process," Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill., said Monday.

Hyde, who authored legislation to ban federal funding of abortions, said Catholic political leaders cannot divide personal conscience and civic responsibility.

"It is clearly insufficient for a Catholic public official to hold that his or her personal, conscientious objection to abortion as a matter of personal choice for himself or herself ends the matter," he said.

The University of Notre Dame invited Hyde to rebuke a Sept. 13 campus speech by New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who personally opposes abortion but supports public funding for abortions.

Rites honor bombing victims

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — The latest U.S. casualties of war-torn Lebanon were honored in a solemn ceremony Monday as an Air Force general pledged the United States will not flee from terrorism.

Air Force Lt. Gen. John T. Chalm said the bombing deaths of Army Chief Warrant Officer Kenneth V. Welch, 33, of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Navy Petty Officer 1st Class Michael Ray Wagner, 30, of Zebulon, N.C., "reminds us of the burden of responsibility that we as a nation must bear."

"We cannot turn and flee from the war-ravaged city of Beirut. The threats, the car bombs, the kidnappings, the assassinations, would only follow us wherever else democracy is threatened," Chalm said. "The answer is not to flee, but to stand, and with the help of God to find the will and the way to assist the free countries of this world to defeat terrorism and the dark forces of evil it represents."

Welch and Wagner were killed Thursday in a terrorist bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex in Lebanon.

step (arms control) negotiations and enable us to avoid having all of our hopes or expectations ride on any single set or series of negotiations," Reagan said.

Assuring that "spheres of influence are a thing of the past," the president suggested that senior experts from both nations should begin regular "in-depth exchanges of views" on regional problems, such as Central America and the Middle East.

"The objectives of this political dialogue will be to help avoid miscalculation, reduce the potential risk of U.S.-Soviet confrontation and help the people in areas of conflict to find peaceful solutions," Reagan said.

Separately, the president proposed that the United States and Russia "institutionalize regular ministerial or Cabinet-level meetings . . . on the whole agenda of issues before us, including the problem of needless obstacles to understanding."

Such talks, he said, could "work rapidly toward developing a new climate of policy understanding, one that is essential if crises are to be avoided and real arms control is to be negotiated."

Reagan said he hoped ways could be found by next spring to have Soviet and U.S. observers at each other's nuclear test sites, and called for negotiations to begin in Vienna by early 1985 on ways to prevent the militarization of space.

While Reagan did not accept the Soviets' demand for a test ban preceding such talks, he said he would consider what measures of restraint both sides might take while negotiations proceed.

The Radio Moscow broadcast noted that Reagan called for negotiations to prevent the militarization of space but added, "He again rejected the Soviet proposal to ban the testing and deployment of anti-satellite weapons when talks (on space arsenals) open."

realistic appraisal of what is going on the world." Gromyko's response to the Reagan peace offensive is likely to unfold slowly this week as he sees senior European and Asian diplomats Monday and Tuesday, meets Shultz in a full diplomatic review Wednesday, confers with Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale Thursday and comes to the White House Friday to say and hear more in a private meeting with Reagan.

U.S. officials concede uncertainty about how the veteran Soviet diplomat will respond, but the best president also bluntly condemned Soviet exploitation of regional problems, the "outright Soviet invasion" of Afghanistan, Soviet human-rights practices and "mounting evidence" of arms-control violations.

Monday, Reagan advanced a full-scale appeal for good relations, complete with suggestions for regular high-level meetings and a new "umbrella" framework to shield arms-control negotiators from individual storms.

And this time, unlike other such statements this year, the Reagan eagle carried no sharp arrows for the Soviets to balance against the olive branch in the other hand. Monday, mention of Soviet perfidy in Afghanistan, Cambodia, human-rights abuses, yellow rain and arms violations gave way to talk of "the moral obligation to try and try again" for good relations and to quotations from Mahatma Gandhi and Ignatius Loyola.

Hardly anyone, least of all the wary and hard-bitten Soviets, suggested that Reagan's appeal was the true abandonment of his anti-communist policy and posture. Asked about the notable omissions from the address, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Reagan has not changed his views on questions of substance but concentrated today on putting forward "an invitation to the Soviet Union" to work constructively with the United States "based on a guess among Soviet-affairs experts is that, more than anything, Gromyko will listen, at least in private. The officials thought it significant that Gromyko postponed his U.N. speech, his major public utterance this week, from Tuesday until Thursday, which gives him much more time to consider his reaction.

It would not surprise the experts if the Soviets picked up Reagan's suggestions about arms or other fields before the U.S. election. The Soviets are well aware of the U.S. political calendar.

More Soviet talks proposed

By CAROLE FELDMAN
The Associated Press

As President Reagan proposed regular high-level meetings between the United States and the Soviet Union, Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale urged voters on Monday to elect a president "who knows what he's doing in foreign policy."

Reagan told the 39th session of the United Nations General Assembly, "America has repaired its strength. We are ready for constructive negotiations with the Soviet Union."

"Outside this room, while there still will be clear differences, there's every reason why we should do all that is possible to shorten that distance. And that's why we're here," Reagan said.

Reagan, devoting most of the week to foreign policy, scheduled no campaign appearances until Wednesday, when he travels to Ohio and Wisconsin. He will meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on Friday — one day after Mondale talks with the Kremlin official.

Mondale, campaigning Monday in Texarkana, Texas, wondered whether Reagan's decision to sit down with Gromyko for the first time less than six weeks before the election amounted to a "deathbed conversion."

He said he was glad Reagan had improved "his rhetoric. On Friday he has a chance to improve his record."

The Democratic presidential nominee also accused Reagan of letting terrorists "humiliate us and push us around and kill our people" in Lebanon — a reference to last week's bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut.

"Elect me and let's have a president who knows what he's doing in foreign policy," Mondale told a crowd of several thousand.

He belittled Reagan's comment Sunday that security was incomplete at the new embassy, quoting the president as saying, "Anyone that's ever had their kitchen done over knows that it never gets done as soon as you wish it would."

Vice President George Bush takes a ride in an Illinois mine

Mondale responded, "Being a president and countering terrorists is a much more difficult task than fixing up your kitchen."

Mondale's running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, did not raise the bombing issue during her campaign appearances but she mentioned it in a Baltimore television interview and in a statement issued later.

In the interview, she criticized Reagan's kitchen remark as "totally inappropriate" and said it "reflects the fact that this president does not understand truly what the situation is in the Middle East." In the statement, she said the Reagan administration "cannot deal with the underlying questions of this tragedy by trying to shield Mr. Reagan from presidential accountability."

While Reagan adopted a more conciliatory line toward the Kremlin during his U.N. address, Vice President George Bush said Americans "still have that ugly feeling" about the Soviets' attack last year on a Korean airliner.

He said the destruction of the jet, which was carrying more than 60 Americans, "made it extraordinarily difficult to move anything forward" in agreements between the superpowers.

Asked if the United States was ready to forgive and forget the incident, Bush said, "No. I don't think so but I think the trauma is somewhat reduced."

Bush spoke at an airport news conference in Marion, Ill., before touring the Brushy Creek coal mine in Galatia.

Ms. Ferraro accused Reagan of trying to win re-election by portraying himself "as something he is not" and by posing for an album of "pretty pictures" designed to hide his record.

She said Reagan went to Los Angeles to congratulate the women who won Olympic medals, but his administration sides "with those who discriminate against women in sports."

"I want to help women get out of the back when they cross the finish line," she said.

Ms. Ferraro said Reagan dedicated a senior citizens residence in Buffalo, N.Y., but said he "destituted" the program that helped build it and that shelters the elderly and doesn't just shelter the income of the wealthy.

And she said Reagan recently visited a black family that was the victim of bigotry, but "in reality" his administration was slow to support an extension of the Civil Rights Act. "I fully supports our civil rights laws, not segregated academies," she said.

At Texas Southern University, a predominantly black college in Houston, Mondale told an enthusiastic rally that the Reagan administration's policy of "constructive engagement" with the apartheid government of South Africa "was code for saying the heat's off." He pledged, if elected, to pressure South Africa by restricting International Monetary Fund loans to the country and banning landing rights for South African planes.

Miners hear opposing sides

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Reagan administration has shown it will do nothing for the copper industry but that it will continue to support foreign copper competitors, Arizona Sen. Dennis DeConcini contended Monday.

Interior Secretary William Clark, also addressing the opening session of the American Mining Congress' three-day meeting, countered that the president has provided the climate "for industry to recover."

DeConcini, however, contended that "Arizona is capable of producing two-thirds of the nation's copper but it will not be allowed to do so."

The Democratic lawmaker said Congress had approved $8.5 billion for the International Monetary Fund and argue that nothing the congressman did was so serious as warrant prosecution under any circumstances and that in fact he was selectively prosecuted by government agencies that he has harshly criticized during his tenure in the Capitol.

McKenna said the appeal also alleges numerous errors by trial court Judge Joyce Hens Green.

Government prosecutors have been given until early November to reply to the congressman's brief, and arguments in the appeal are expected to take place sometime next January.

Although Hansen has said his attorneys have confirmed his legal right to vote in the Nov. 6 election amid questions about that right in view of his felony conviction, Hansen announced last week that he will not vote until his appeal has been resolved.

From April 2 until the end of July, Hansen refrained from voting on issues before the House while the ethics committee considered his case.

He resumed voting only after the House voted to reprimand him for violating financial disclosure regulations. It was the most lenient penalty the chamber could impose.

Though extremely popular in the past with conservative voters in his southern Idaho district, Hansen apparently faces his toughest reelection bid yet amid his legal and financial troubles.

Stallings claims new polling information shows him with at least a 15-point lead over Hansen, who has been the target of a number of published reports questioning his financial dealings and linking him to the controversial Unification Church of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon.

He has already asked the Federal Election Commission to look into the handling of the Unification Church story by the Twin Falls Times-News, claiming it was intended only to damage his re-election chances and should be viewed at least as an indirect campaign contribution to Stallings.

More Soviet talks proposed

By CAROLE FELDMAN
The Associated Press

As President Reagan proposed regular high-level meetings between the United States and the Soviet Union, Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale urged voters on Monday to elect a president "who knows what he's doing in foreign policy."

Reagan told the 39th session of the United Nations General Assembly, "America has repaired its strength. We are ready for constructive negotiations with the Soviet Union."

"Outside this room, while there still will be clear differences, there's every reason why we should do all that is possible to shorten that distance. And that's why we're here," Reagan said.

Reagan, devoting most of the week to foreign policy, scheduled no campaign appearances until Wednesday, when he travels to Ohio and Wisconsin. He will meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on Friday — one day after Mondale talks with the Kremlin official.

Mondale, campaigning Monday in Tawarkan, Texas, wondered whether Reagan's decision to sit down with Gromyko for the first time less than six weeks before the election amounted to a "deathbed conversion."

He said he was glad Reagan had improved "his rhetoric. On Friday he has a chance to improve his record." The Democratic presidential nominee also accused Reagan of letting terrorists "humiliate us and push us around and kill our people" in Lebanon — a reference to last week's bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut.

"Elect me and let's have a president who knows what he's doing in foreign policy," Mondale told a crowd of several thousand.

He belittled Reagan's comment Sunday that security was incomplete at the new embassy, quoting the president as saying, "Anyone that's ever had their kitchen done over knows that it never gets done as soon as you wish it would."

Vice President George Bush takes a ride in an Illinois mine

Mondale responded, "Being a president and countering terrorists is a much more difficult task than fixing up your kitchen."

Mondale's running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, did not raise the bombing issue during her campaign appearances but she mentioned it in a Baltimore television interview and in a statement issued later.

In the interview, she criticized Reagan's kitchen remark as "totally inappropriate" and said it "reflects the fact that this president does not understand truly what the situation is in the Middle East." In the statement, she said the Reagan administration "cannot deal with the underlying questions of this tragedy by trying to shield Mr. Reagan from presidential accountability."

While Reagan adopted a more conciliatory line toward the Kremlin during his U.N. address, Vice President George Bush said Americans "still have that ugly feeling" about the Soviets' attack last year on a Korean airliner.

He said the destruction of the jet, which was carrying more than 60 Americans, "made it extraordinarily difficult to move anything forward" in agreements between the superpowers.

Asked if the United States was ready to forgive and forget the incident, Bush said, "No. I don't think so but I think the trauma is somewhat reduced."

Bush spoke at an airport news conference in Marion, Ill., before touring the Brushy Creek coal mine in Galatia.

Ms. Ferraro accused Reagan of trying to win re-election by portraying himself "as something he is not" and by posing for an album of "pretty pictures" designed to hide his record.

She said Reagan went to Los Angeles to congratulate the women who won Olympic medals, but his administration sides "with those who discriminate against women in sports."

"I want to help women get out of the starting blocks, not just pat them on the back when they cross the finish line," she said.

Ms. Ferraro said Reagan dedicated a senior citizens residence in Buffalo, N.Y., but said he "declined" the program that helped build it, and added, "I want an administration that shelters the elderly and doesn't just shelter the income of the wealthy."

And she said Reagan recently visited a black family that was the victim of bigotry, but "in reality" his administration was slow to support an extension of the Civil Rights Act. "I want an administration that fully supports our civil rights laws, not segregated academies," she said.

At Texas Southern University, a predominantly black college in Houston, Mondale told an enthusiastic rally that the Reagan administration's policy of "constructive engagement" with the apartheid government of South Africa "was code for saying the heat's off." He pledged, if elected, to pressure South Africa by restricting International Monetary Fund loans to the country and banning lending rights for South African planes.

Miners hear opposing sides

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Reagan administration has shown it will do nothing for the copper industry but that it will continue to support foreign copper competitors, Arizona Sen. Dennis DeConcini contended Monday.

Interior Secretary William Clark, also addressing the opening session of the American Mining Congress' three-day meeting, countered that the president has provided the climate "for industry to recover."

DeConcini, however, contended that "Arizona is capable of producing two-thirds of the nation's copper but it will not be allowed to do so."

The Democratic lawmaker said Congress had approved $8.5 billion for the International Monetary Fund and another $1 billion for the World Bank.

argue that nothing the congressman did was so serious as to warrant prosecution under any circumstances and that in fact he was selectively prosecuted by government agencies that he has harshly criticized during his tenure in the Capitol.

McKenna said the appeal also alleges numerous errors by trial court Judge Joyce Hens Green.

Government prosecutors have been given until early November to reply to the congressman's brief, and arguments in the appeal are expected to take place sometime next January.

Although Hansen has said his attorneys have confirmed his legal right to vote in the Nov. 6 election amid questions about that right in view of his felony conviction, Hansen announced last week that he will not vote until his appeal has been resolved.

From April 2 until the end of July, Hansen refrained from voting on issues before the House while the ethics committee considered his case.

He resumed voting only after the House voted to reprimand him for violating financial disclosure regulations. It was the most lenient penalty the chamber could impose.

Though extremely popular in the past with conservative voters in his southern Idaho district, Hansen apparently faces his toughest re-election bid yet amid his legal and financial troubles.

Stallings claims new polling information shows him with at least a 15-point lead over Hansen, who has been the target of a number of published reports questioning his financial dealings and linking him to the controversial Unification Church of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon.

He has already asked the Federal Election Commission to look into the handling of the Unification Church story by the Twin Falls Times-News, claiming it was intended only to damage his re-election chances and should be viewed at least as an indirect campaign contribution to Stallings.

Organized heckling must not be tolerated

The ugly turn of events on the campaign trail was not altogether unexpected, if you think about it. It's really more of the logical conclusion.

Really, how big of a step is it from election by slogan and hype to election by heckling.

But just because this nasty business is the direction in which we have been headed the past few years is no reason for Americans to put up with it. The ugly insults, the epithets and the shouting that is an attempt to stifle campaign speeches is a sad turn of events. It must go.

Of course, it can be argued that heckling is unavoidable in a country that values free speech as much as we do. We value it so much that we give the right to those louts who use it to deprive others of the right to be heard. But there are indications there are more than a few extremists involved here. There are indications of an organized effort.

Vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, who has been the victim of much of the harassment, says she has seen enough of a pattern to indicate an organizational hand behind the political thuggery. She has seen such indications as hecklers carrying identical signs at various campaign stops and a phone system to coordinate the attacks.

Worse still, one heckler last week said Reagan campaign workers coached those who shouted down Walter Mondale at a campaign stop at the University of Southern California.

That allegation brings back some terrible memories. That brings back names like Donald Segretti, G. Gordon Liddy and John Mitchell and terms like "dirty tricks." That is a sense of deja vu that most Americans would just as soon forgo.

There is no proof that the Reagan campaign, at least at the upper levels, is behind the attacks. That remains an allegation and may only be a candidate's attempt to make some political mileage.

But there is also no indication that the leaders of the Reagan campaign are behind a firm effort to stop the hecklers.

They should be. It is a safe bet that those who are heckling Mondale and Ferraro support Reagan. If so, then they would probably abide by the wishes of the president.

If Reagan were to tell them in unmistakable terms that they should knock off the nonsense, they just might do so.

That's precisely what the president should do. I don't think Reagan or most other Americans would like to see the political process turned over to mob rule.

Gromyko surprised to hear election talk from candidates

The only danger I can see from Fritz Mondale meeting with Soviet Minister Andrei Gromyko this week is that the Democratic candidate may want to show the American voters how tough he can be with the Soviets. Since Mr. Mondale is going to meet with Mr. Gromyko first, the press will be watching for any sign of weakness.

The conversation could go something like this:

Mondale: Welcome to America, Mr. Foreign Minister. How is everything in the evil empire?

Gromyko: I thought this was a friendly visit.

Mondale: How can it be friendly after what you people did in Afghanistan and the Los Angeles Olympics? Let me give it to you straight. If I am elected president, I'm going to take a harder line toward the Kremlin than President Reagan. He's been pussyfooting with you people too long.

Gromyko: I can't believe I'm hearing this. You have said in your speeches that you were willing to sit down and talk to us.

Mondale: I'm still willing to sit down but we have to talk about substance. I will never fear to negotiate, but I will not negotiate out of fear.

Gromyko: So how can we reduce tensions if the Democrats get into power?

Mondale: That's up to you people, not to us.

Gromyko: Do we have to do all these television cameras while we're talking? The light hurts my eyes.

Mondale: I want the American people to know where I stand when it comes to Soviet-U.S. relations. If you came to win me over you are sadly mistaken. I'm much tougher than I look on the evening news.

Gromyko: Mr. Mondale, if you feel this way, why did you ask to see me?

Mondale: Because I wanted you to take a message back to Moscow. Tell them this country has only one president at a time.

When I get to the Oval Office my finger will be just inches from the button, and if you people think I won't push it, just try me.

Gromyko: Is that all you have to say to me?

Mondale: There's one more thing. Your fly

While my biggest fear is that Mondale will take a hard line with Gromyko, President Reagan will lean over the other way to show the voters he is a man of peace.

Reagan: Comrade Gromyko, what a pleasure to meet you at last. I hope the wheat we're sending you is satisfactory?

Gromyko: Yes, it's good. Thank you for filling our order so speedily.

Reagan: What are friends for? As long as I'm president, I will never allow a Soviet citizen to go hungry.

Gromyko: Shall we talk about how we can stop the arms race?

Reagan: Of course we can. But first a toast to peace.

Gromyko: We have to get back to the tables in Geneva.

Reagan: That's exactly what I was telling George Shultz. The Americans have been intractable on arms negotiations, and it's gotten us nowhere. We have some great new ideas we'd like to put forward and I don't mind telling you that when your people hear them, you'll know we're giving up a lot more than we're getting in return.

Reagan: You can't be serious.

Gromyko: Andrei, we're superpowers. You cheat, we cheat, but what difference does it make as long as we can live together side by

Reagan responsible for military safety

A few minutes ago this writer broke down and cried, once again, as the wounded Americans were shown being carried away, those lucky enough to be alive, after Friday morning's bombings at the United States Embassy in Lebanon.

A few minutes later the person responsible for placing Americans there without proper security, the man who, according to the Constitution of the United States, is the commander-in-chief of our military, was shown telling reporters that he can keep up with the situation on the road as well as from the White House.

When a reporter asked Commander-in-Chief Reagan if he thought the security at the embassy was good, he replied, "Yes, as much as I know about it."

This is the man who wants to build the great "Star Wars" defense system. This is the man who is suddenly helping the farmer, the small businessman, the good guy who wants only peace and is finally going to prove it by meeting with a top Soviet just before election.

Oh, yes, and this is the man who recently told the American people that the Democratic Party is far to the left. I wonder, did he, as commander-in-chief, check all the U.S. Marines last October to make sure none were Democrats before they died in the airport bombing? And did he make sure, like maybe yesterday, that each American who died this morning in another bombing, or who were wounded; yeah, did he make sure none were Democrat's?

Guest opinion
E. William Mason

We, as Democrats, have a sense of outrage over the loss of so many Americans, both last October, and now again today, the same as, what we hope, all Republicans have.

We know, as tears run down the cheeks so bad that it's almost impossible to see to write this letter, that our neighbors who live next door, and across the street, and they are Republicans, feel the same as we do.

Maybe our Republican neighbors don't feel that the commander-in-chief is responsible, but we know they are filled with the same extreme sadness that we feel. And how will the mother and father, wife or girlfriend, brothers and sisters, friends; how will they feel as they ponder over their loss?

And will the telegram to the next of kin of the two more dead Americans be a form telegram like a government form letter? Will it say they died fighting for their country? Will it say they died with their boots on, firing their weapons as they fell in glory? Or will it say they died because they were in a very hostile country and did not have proper security?

Many of us remember serving in Germany in the United States Army during the occupation of Germany after World War II. When not in the field or on border patrol, we had many guards inside and outside our bases.

The weapons we used were fully loaded at all times when on duty. Our orders and security was so tight that for example, if a civilian came close to a base with even just a camera, we had to confiscate it. If the person tried to run, we had orders to shoot to kill.

When moving to various locations all men were armed with loaded weapons, and all vehicles such as our M-47 tanks were fully armed at all times. It made no difference whether our Commander-in-Chief was "give-em-hell" Harry, or golf-playing Ike, our security both overseas and in the United States was excellent.

Both Harry and Ike knew they were in charge, and so help me God, neither Harry nor Ike would have answered a reporter's question, "Do you think security is all right?" with "Yes, as much as I know about it."

Letters

Family members defended

Of the several misrepresentations in last Sunday's article about our Congressman and the Unification Church, I feel obligated to point out one error in particular. Before I do, I want to say that I rarely feel it necessary to write to the editor — but because the article in question was so grossly inaccurate, as well as a personal attack on my daughter and son-in-law, I feel a duty to try and set the record straight.

In your article your reporter implied that my son-in-law, Larry Anderson, Jr., had approved or arranged a meeting at his campground, which was sponsored by the Unification Church. You further indicated that the Unification Church had distributed books written by Congressman Hansen's staff. All in all, you suggested that my family was cooperating in some effort by the Unification Church to promote Congressman Hansen or his book.

Here is the truth: The meeting in question was not sponsored by the Unification Church. In fact, the meeting was put on by the Freeman Institute and was attended by several prominent members and local leaders of Protestant, LDS and Catholic faiths.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss government intrusion into religion (for example, the new social security laws and religious schools were discussed). The main speaker was a Baptist minister. Among several pieces of material distributed at the meeting were copies of Congressman Hansen's book.

Of the fifty people in attendance only two were from the Unification Church. They were two young missionaries who had called and expressed an interest in religious freedom. They were given a ride to the meeting.

Mr. Editor, I will reiterate. I am Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Freeman Institute for the State of Idaho. I organized the meeting. I made the arrangements for holding it at Anderson's Campground.

Your implication that members of my family were or are working with the Unification Church is not only a very sad attempt at guilt by association, it is also untrue.

Bankers hit acts of rich nations

The Washington Post-

WASHINGTON — The heads of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund joined Monday in a particularly vigorous denunciation of a growing protectionist trend that they said threatens to sabotage a still fragile recovery.

Bank President A.W. Clausen, in his address to the opening session of the joint annual World Bank-IMF meeting, said that recovery in the Third World will be "a pipe dream" if the richer nations continue their protectionist measures instead of liberalizing trade. "It is now of crucial importance that governments stop simply making general declarations of interest, and start taking concrete steps to liberalize trade," Clausen said.

In his speech, Jacques de Larosiere, managing director of the IMF, noted that the "hard-lesson" is that so-called temporary protectionist measures tend to "become entrenched and spread. They do not just poison the trading climate in certain industries, but weaken the fabric of international economic and political cooperation as a whole."

De Larosiere and Clausen were reflecting the concern among Third World countries that at the time their economic prospects seem to be improving after great pain and sacrifice — the industrial countries are curbing their exports by formal and "voluntary" quotas. Privately, some delegates cited the recent U.S. decision to negotiate "voluntary" steel quotas as a case in point.

The protectionist theme was a major element of the welcoming speech by the chairman of the joint conference, Japanese Minister of Finance Noboru Takeshita, who also took the opportunity to point out that high interest rates, producing "uncertainties in the exchange market," remain a threat to recovery.

Clausen made much the same argument, suggesting that the industrialized countries have not yet fully recognized "the plight of the heavily indebted countries" because real rates of interest have not yet declined. He also said a way must be found "to feather out . . . the bunching of maturities" facing the debtor nations, as was done in the case of Mexico.

Former FAA chief faces charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission Monday charged J. Lynn Helms, former head of the Federal Aviation Administration, with fraud in the sale of $2 million worth of government bonds, and Helms signed a consent agreement.

Helms, who resigned as FAA administrator last January after published reports linked him to a series of questionable business dealings, signed a consent agreement that bars him from engaging in future violations. The agreement neither admits nor denies the allegations against him.

The consent agreement ends the SEC's case against Helms, according to Tom Monahan, the SEC lawyer that handled the case.

In addition to Helms, the SEC complaint filed with the U.S. District Court in Philadelphia, also named Helms' former business partner, Vincent Roggio, and one of Roggio's associates, Charles J. Asenzzi.

The injunction against Helms was issued in Philadelphia, but copies of the SEC complaint and the court's order were made available by the SEC here. Roggio and Asenzzi have 20 days to file a response to the SEC complaint.

The SEC alleged that Helms and his business partners violated federal securities laws in connection with the offer and sale in December, 1980 of $2 million worth of industrial development bonds in West Memphis, Ark.

The bond proceeds were to be used to equip and operate Memphis Chapman Corp. of Arkansas, a company owned by the Helms and Roggio.

Tobacco lobby OKs warnings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A compromise agreement has been fashioned on legislation replacing the general health warning on cigarettes with four alternating specific warnings, Sen. Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., said Monday.

Ford said the agreement appears satisfactory to all aspects of the tobacco industry — growers, distributors, retailers and manufacturers — as well as to health groups.

The House has passed legislation that would replace the 13-year-old health warning on cigarette packages and advertising with four alternating warnings about the specific dangers cigarettes pose to smokers and their future children.

De Lorean accomplice sentenced

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William Morgan Hetrick, the admitted drug smuggler who was indicted with John Z. De Lorean, was sentenced Monday to 10 years in federal prison after prosecutors said he had "cooperated handsomely" with the government.

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi, who presided over De Lorean's trial, imposed a series of concurrent sentences on charges that include conspiracy to possess and distribute cocaine, cocaine possession with intent to distribute and income tax evasion.

The heaviest sentence was for the charge of conspiracy to possess and distribute cocaine.

Takasugi also ordered Hetrick, 53, to serve five years of special parole to be added to normal parole after he is released from prison.

The pudgy, bespectacled Hetrick stood silently before the judge in a crowded courtroom and heard himself described by his attorney as "a man who is broken" and by the prosecutor as "a man who may border on genius."

De Lorean, the former automaker who produced the gull-winged sports car bearing his name, was acquitted last month of charges of conspiracy to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine.

Spend some money and make your surroundings more as you would like them to be and more functional.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will early know just what kind of profession to follow and work and study along such lines, so give free reign to follow inclinations and don't try to force your will on your progeny. Be very cooperative and the results will be excellent, both for him or her.

McCartney defends marijuana to kids

LONDON (AP) — Former Beatle Paul McCartney, with four drugs in the past 12 years, is quoted as saying he defends marijuana-smoking to his children by telling them he finds it less harmful than alcohol.

McCartney, 42, in an interview with weekly magazine Woman's Own, being published Tuesday, said he tells his children:

"I don't preach this stuff. I used to drink. I'm from this society where if you drink eight pints a day, you're a man. But I think that's dumb. Sorry, kids, but I genuinely feel pot (marijuana) is less harmful to me."

The millionaire singer, who has two teen-age daughters, a 6-year-old son and a 21-year-old stepdaughter, said his children understand.

He said the lough part was explaining that marijuana is illegal. "I hate that part, because I want to be the most upstanding father in the world," he said.

Meanwhile, the late John Lennon's first electric guitar, signed by all the Beatles, was put on display Monday at their hometown of Liverpool in a "Beatles City" exhibition.

The six-string hollow guitar, which has spent the last 20 years in a bank vault in Hamburg, West Germany, is owned by Frank Dostal, former lead singer of a West German band called "The Faces."

The group won the guitar in a talent contest in 1962 at the Star-Club in Hamburg where the Beatles began their rise to fame.

"Some wealthy American Beatles collectors traced the guitar to Hamburg earlier this year and offered me a six figure sum for it," Dostal said. "In fact, it's truly priceless and I'd never sell it."

PAUL MCCARTNEY Pot less harmful than booze

Congressman finally purchases D.C. home

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — It took Rep. James Jeffords 11 years to do it, but he has finally invested in a home in Washington, D.C.

Ten years ago, instead of buying a home to use when he was in Washington he lived in a 22-foot mobile home parked behind a motel in Cherry Hill Camp City in Maryland.

Three years ago, he got more public attention when he moved into his office with a sofa bed and a hot plate.

Jeffords, 50, moved into his new home a few days ago.

"I'm tired of throwing money down the rent hole," he said.

He concedes the move to a home 10 blocks from his office also signals that he is pretty confident of reelection.

Jeffords' main challenger in the general election is Democrat Anthony Pollina of Middlesex. Three other candidates also are running.

DETROIT (AP) — The new edition of "Who's Who in the Midwest" is full of names, but some are missing — like Michigan Gov. James Blanchard.

He is the only governor in 12 Midwestern states covered by the book who is not listed. But his press secretary, Richard Cole, is included, and so is Lt. Gov. Martha Griffiths, a former member of Congress.

A spokesman for Marquis Professional Publications, the Chicago-based company that prints the $82 book, said he was shocked.

"I am embarrassed to say I don't know why Blanchard was not included," said Morris Wattenberg. "That shouldn't happen."

There are 21,000 entries in the 19th edition of the reference book.

Blanchard isn't the only one left out. There's also no mention of Wayne County Executive William Lucas, Detroit area millionaire developer Alfred Taubman, Detroit Tigers owner and pizza franchisor Tom Monaghan, or state Department of Social Services Director Agnes Mary Mansour, a former Roman-Catholic nun who quit her order in a battle with the Church over abortion.

Writer James Baldwin turns 60 years old

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Occasionally wiping away a tear, author James Baldwin celebrated his 60th birthday with tributes from friends and former colleagues.

"What audacity, what hope, what irony that the son of a son of a slave should have greater impact on the thinking of conscious whites than any other writer," Leone Bennett, editor of Ebony Magazine, said at Saturday night's party at the University of Massachusetts.

Author and actress Maya Angelou praised Baldwin, whose books include "Go Tell It on the Mountain," "Nobody Knows My Name" and "Notes of a Native Son," for his crusade against racism.

Racism is "the most crucial crime of which my country is guilty because

First bridge spanning S.F. bay exploded

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — With a crash into the San Francisco Bay, the center span of the Dumbarton Bridge ended 57 years of service as the first structure to reach across the shallow waters.

While tourists lined the shores and helicopters circled overhead, the 225-foot drawbridge section of the steel bridge was blasted on Sunday with dynamite planted by state Department of Transportation engineers.

The explosion had been set for Thursday but was rescheduled several times by demolition experts.

Opened to the public on Jan. 15, 1927, the bridge was the first span to traverse any part of the bay, preceding the Golden Gate, Bay and San Rafael-Richmond bridges.

The outdated drawbridge has been replaced by the new Dumbarton Bridge, a larger, concrete span that opened in October 1982. The new bridge rises 85 feet above the southern bay, making a drawbridge unnecessary.

Engineers said the demolition could occur only during four months of the year — September, October, January or February — when migratory birds abandon nests they build on inaccessible portions of the old bridge.

Chernenko is 73

MOSCOW (AP) — Konstantin U. Chernenko turned 73 on Monday. He was awarded the Order of Lenin — his third — but none of the government-run news media mentioned that it was his birthday.

The medal was awarded through a decree from the President of the Supreme Soviet and the event was given front-page and top-of-broadcast treatment.

The decree bestowing the Soviet leader's latest medal, the nation's second-highest civilian award, said the honor was given to the Communist Party chief "for his outstanding services."

Boys returning cash get thanks, rewards — but not from owner

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — Two boys who found $4,000 and gave it to police won praise and $5 rewards, but no thanks came from the money's owner.

She complained angrily that "no one had the right to take her bag from the seawall," police said.

Marc Norcross, 11, and Bekim Demiral, 12, found the money, mostly in $20 bills, in a shopping bag on the Nahant Beach seawall Saturday afternoon. The bag also contained a bathing suit, shampoo, toothbrush, pocketbook, passport and photos.

"We couldn't take the money 'cause it wouldn't be right, and if we took it we couldn't spend it," Bekim said Monday. "I couldn't buy anything like a radio 'cause my mother would know."

The boys turned the bag over to Metropolitan District Police, who told them, "You're probably gonna be rewarded for this," Bekim said.

Instead, "the lady was mad," he said.

"She was irate," said Officer Frank Anderson. "She said no one had the right to take her bag from the seawall."

The bag's owner, 28-year-old Anna Maria Altman, told police she had left it behind while she went on a two-mile jog, Anderson said. She had an unlisted East Boston number and could not be reached for comment Monday.

"The boys' good deed went unrewarded until Sunday, when Marc's family found two letters on the doorknob from Lynn resident Jane Coles. Each contained $5 for the boys and key chains with whistles and magnifying glasses attached.

"I don't have much money, so I can only give you $5," she wrote, adding that the boys deserved "some recognition for being so helpful and honest."

Ms. Coles, a 31-year-old programmer analyst for the General Electric Co. in Lynn, said the key chains, souvenirs from GE, "were the only things I had two of."

She gave the boys the chains because "they would use them when they grew older, and when anybody asks them where they got them, they'll be able to tell the world their story."

"Whether or not they got a reward is not important," said Marc's mother, April. "They did the right thing turning the money in, and that's what's important."

"I'm so proud of him," added Marc's father, William, who lost his job as a computer operator.

Moscow joggers move site

MOSCOW (AP) — Prohibited by Soviet authorities from holding their weekly "fun run" in the streets, 50 to 60 Westerners ran through Gorky Park on Monday in a 2.5-mile dash along the paths of Moscow's most famous recreation area.

The Hash House Harriers running club had to give-up running through central Moscow, but those who took part in Monday's run did not seem disappointed.

"It's actually better in the park because people were off the roadway and away from cars," said Neil Woods of the Australian Embassy. "It's a much better environment."

His wife, Debra, agreed. She said the park was "more scenic" than the streets of Moscow.

The Hash House Harriers, formed last spring, take their name from a running club established by diplomats in Malaysia. They run every Monday evening along a course laid out in advance by the park and municipal authorities.

The club used to run anywhere the route organizer fancied. But last week organizers said all Western embassies received a letter from the Soviet Foreign Ministry, saying the runs impeded traffic, and that future runs would be allowed only in parks, athletic fields and stadiums.

One runner grumbled at the time, "They probably didn't like their citizens to see all these happy foreigners."

Monday's run was the first under the new policy, and the turnout of up to 60 people from about 15 Western nations was about average for the weekly event.

The race began at the 30-foot-high gates of Gorky Park and wound through the park's roadways and paths.

Along the way, curious Soviets stopped to watch the runners — an odd sight in Moscow.

Many smiled and laughed and one gave a shout of encouragement, calling "Good health!" to a runner.

One or two came up to the group offering to buy their running shoes and T-shirts.

Queen tours Canada

MONCTON, New Brunswick (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II began her two-week Canadian tour Monday, visiting a town known more for having survived the British monarchy than for being attached to it.

The queen and her husband, Prince Philip, made Shediac the first stop on their visit, and were given a friendly welcome by the residents of the town of 4,300.

Shediac, a predominantly French-speaking fishing town, is commemorating the 100th anniversary of the Roman Catholic parish of St. Joseph. After unveiling a plaque marking the centennial, the queen received a bouquet from 102-year-old Leona Williams.

"I didn't want to do it but they made me," said the Shediac native, with a smile. "I felt somebody else could do it better."

Maurice Léger, a Catholic priest and historian, said it was "gracious" for the queen to visit Shediac, but "I don't think royalty plays a very important part in life here."

After the ceremony in Shediac, the royal couple came to Moncton's Victoria Park for a "walkabout," with police forming corridors through the crowd of about 5,000 people.

It is the queen's 14th visit to Canada, but her first major tour since 1976. She will be in New Brunswick for two days and then leaves for Ontario and Manitoba. Phillip, 63, will return to England from Toronto on Oct. 5, but the 58-year-old queen will continue the trip, going to the United States on Oct. 7 for private visits to a stud farm in Kentucky and a ranch in Wyoming to complete the 22-day tour.

Mulroney seeks ties with U.S.

TORONTO (AP) — Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, head of Canada's new Progressive Conservative government, is meeting with President Reagan today to start what Mulroney says is a drive for warmer U.S.-Canadian relations.

For Reagan, the meeting and working lunch with Mulroney is part of a week with a heavy foreign policy emphasis, highlighted by the president's session Friday with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. U.S. officials, speaking on condition they not be identified, said the talks between Reagan and Mulroney — who has been in office less than a week — would focus on global affairs, especially relations with the Soviet Union, rather than on Canada-U.S. issues.

Bilateral matters may be touched on, but the details would be left to a meeting expected next month between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Joe Clark, the former prime minister who is Mulroney's new foreign minister.

Mulroney and Reagan first met in June, when Mulroney was opposition leader, and joked about two Irishmen running the governments in North America.

"We like Brian Mulroney," Assistant Secretary of State Richard Burt said in a recent interview with the Toronto Star. "He made a superb impression when he came to see the president."

Under Liberal Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, who resigned June 30, relations often were uneasy. Some U.S. officials privately objected to Trudeau's "peace initiative," in which he traveled the globe urging steps to ease East-West tension and get arms talks moving.

Soldiers appeal sentences

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — An appeals court is considering a request by lawyers for five former national guardsmen to reduce the 30-year sentences they received for the 1980 murders of four American churchwomen.

Luis Zapata, secretary in the Third Appeals Court in San Vicente, 37 miles east of the capital, said in a telephone interview Monday that the appeal arrived late last week. Defense lawyers filed it in June but it was routed through bureaucratic channels to the proper court.

Zapata said Judge Luis Melara, the presiding magistrate in San Vicente, is considering the appeal. A public defender has been appointed to develop an argument in support of the appeal, which was filed by three defense lawyers who then retired from the case, said Zapata.

The guardsmen have been in detention since February 1982. A jury in Zacatecoluca, 10 miles south of San Salvador, found the five men guilty of aggravated homicide, aggravated theft and destruction of property on May 24.

Vietnam detains American

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam has been detaining an American and an Australian since their private yacht drifted into Vietnamese territorial waters on its way to Hong Kong two months ago, diplomats said Monday.

Four French passengers, two women and two children, who were being held have reportedly been released.

An American Embassy spokesman, speaking on condition that he not be named, identified the yacht captain in custody as William Mathers. The spokesman, citing U.S. privacy laws, declined to release any other information on Mathers except that Vietnamese officials said he was "in good health and being well treated."

There was no indication when Mathers would be released and there was no other information on the Australian being held with him, the spokesman said.

Frost nips crops as temperatures plummet

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If the potato vines in Magic Valley farm fields hadn't been frozen by Monday, they ought to be this morning.

The National Weather Service was predicting a crop-stopping freeze Monday night. The chill also should linger in the valley tonight, with a low in the area of 26 degrees, forecast, said Bill Galkin, who runs the NWS station at Kimberly.

The cold weather will mean more than tiring up the furnace for Magic Valley farmers and gardeners.

Gardeners should throw a blanket or plastic sheet over their tomatoes and other garden vegetables to ward off the frost. Farmers also may want to adjust harvesting schedules for some crops.

This year's big freeze is blowing into the heart of the Magic Valley at about the usual time. There's about a 50 percent chance each year that frost will start settling into the area on Sept. 22, Galkin says.

But, normally a temperature of 26 degrees Monday night's forecast isn't expected until Oct. 21.

Some areas of Jerome and Gooding counties already have recorded temperatures in the high 20s. And, of course, the Wood River Valley and the Camas Prairie have felt the chill of fall. Fairfield farmers had to cope with 15-degree temperatures, said NWS agricultural forecaster Scott Brown at Boise. "That will frost anything you've got," he says.

Rod McCoy, extension agent in Blaine County, said his thermometer plunged to 22 degrees Sunday night.

However, the official low at the NWS station in Kimberly had been somewhat milder at 32 degrees before Monday night.

For many plants, that's tolerable. But last night's freeze is not.

"If we get 24 degrees, it's pretty well going to stop most things (crops)," says Dale Beck, Twin Falls County agricultural extension agent.

The cold should end this season's growth for unprotected tomatoes, cantaloupes and other garden produce, experts say.

The only chance is if they have some sort of canopy over them, said Gene Gibson, agricultural extension agent for Gooding County.

"If they keep their gardens well covered for two or three days to get past this frost, then they'd be just as well off to leave most of that stuff on the vine," said Gibson. Gardeners ought to be checking closely, he and other advisers said.

Most commercial crops already are out of the fields or are coming out of the ground soon, farm agents say.

The freeze will benefit some harvest situations, but could threaten others.

—Although most of the valley's bean crop is ready-for-harvest, beans that are not mature could be hurt by the cold weather, Beck says. Kernels on such corn also may be damaged, with those scheduled for the latest harvest being in the most jeopardy, he says.

Sugar beets should not be affected, and field corn will begin to dry down after the cold, he says.

The shivering weather actually should help potato farmers, who have been anxious for the vines on their plants to die. Some already have used chemicals so that they could get the harvest under way.

"We like to kill the vines at least a week or 10 days before we dig so the tubers have a chance to set," Beck says. The setting firms up the potato skin, which will protect the tuber.

At the same time, the cold will drop soil temperatures early in the day to the point where potatoes are susceptible to bruising during harvest.

Galkin, who now is reporting soil temperatures in his daily agricultural forecast, says Monday's temperatures were at 47 degrees, and the cold snap most likely will drop them below 45 degrees at least early in the day.

Beck advises farmers to check soil temperatures and wait until they are higher than 45 degrees before moving into the fields for harvesting.

Despite the cold nights, though, the harvest forecast for the next few days looks excellent.

A suspect is taken from the Deloye Hase residence for questioning. He was later released, but Hase was charged.

Teen draws BB gun on officers

TWIN FALLS — Deloye Hase, 19, of Twin Falls, was charged with aggravated assault on a police officer Monday; the rifle used in the alleged assault was a BB gun.

Hase was arrested about 10:30 a.m. at his home at 231 Bell St. by Twin Falls Police detectives Don Walden and Ron Axتمان. Hase remained in custody at the police department Monday afternoon pending court arraignment.

Hase allegedly threatened the officers and aimed a rifle at them as they walked around the front of his home. Unable to determine at that point if the gun was genuine and loaded, officers called for assistance and drew their own weapons.

The officers went to the Hase home about 10:15 a.m. Monday to discuss a burglary case, according to the police report. Hase was asked to go to the police department and "declined."

He ordered officers off the property, police said, and then began yelling and cursing. He allegedly told the detectives he would "blow your heads off" when advised the police planned to return with a warrant. As the two officers walked around the front of the Hase mobile home toward their car, they said, a window opened and the barrel of a rifle was thrust out toward them.

Axتمان and Walden jumped aside and then with their own guns drawn, went back into the house where they confiscated two rifles and arrested Hase.

On examination it was determined the guns were both Daisy pump-type air rifles.

A brother of the suspect and a friend, who were at the Hase home at the time, were also taken to the police department for statements.

State board to review CSI building request

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Planning money for the proposed $8 million College of Southern Idaho-Idaho State University agriculture science building has been delayed once more, although the fate of the project is not necessarily in jeopardy.

Board of Education spokeswoman Kim Phillips said Monday the Finance Committee of the State Board of Education Friday approved the request for $100,000 to plan the structure, but later postponed sending that request to the Permanent Building Fund Council of the Department of Public Works so that the education board can take a closer look at the project.

category begins in the Academic Affairs Committee and proceeds through the Finance Committee of the Board of Education and the Department of Public Works and ends in the Legislature.

"The proposal was before the Finance Committee to give it some visibility, but it still has to follow the same path as other proposals," Mitchell said.

"I can't say what our recommendations will be," Mitchell said, though he did say his committee will have to look at how other institutions can use the proposed facility.

Mitchell said the committee will review whether other four-year and two-year schools can share the facility. "I can't believe they can't be of assistance to one another and the taxpayers expect us to get the best bang for the buck."

That review will take place in the Academic Affairs Committee of the Board of Education, chaired by Mike Mitchell of Lewiston.

The CSI-ISU project was originally in a high-priority category with a Lewis-Clark College library project and improving the pharmacy building at ISU.

Mitchell said Monday the CSI-ISU joint proposal had to be considered separately, because it involves new and expanded programs. "It wasn't taken off the list, it rightly should be in a different category," Mitchell said.

The usual path for a project in this

The original proposal calls for a structure to house CSI laboratories and class and meeting rooms as well as ISU facilities currently housed at the Snake River Research Center in Kimberly and a Filer Avenue office.

ISU officials have said the building could lead to full undergraduate and graduate-level degree programs on the CSI campus.

Brian Chase, of the Public Works Administration, said the request will compete in a pool of $36 million of requests from other state agencies for $6.2 million to be spent in fiscal 1986.

Pilot: crash caused by maintenance errors

HAILEY — The pilot of a Transwestern Airlines plane that crashed near Hailey last year testified Monday that he knows the "cause" was caused by "errors in maintenance."

Speaking during the opening day of testimony in the trial of a negligence lawsuit brought by two of the crash's victims, pilot Don Moline also said records that would show who was responsible for the improper maintenance and inspection that led to the accident have disappeared from the files of his company, Sierra Pacific Airlines of Tucson, Ariz.

Moline testified in Hailey's Fifth District Court that he does not believe anything he did as the plane's pilot caused it to lose control on its approach to Friedman Memorial Airport in Hailey on Feb. 15, 1983, and crash violently on Idaho 75.

He said that since the accident, his questions into why the plane was improperly maintained and why the maintenance records disappeared have gone unanswered by Sierra Pacific officials.

However, he said, maintenance workers for the company have told

FEC complaint improperly filed

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Federal Election Commission has informed Rep. George Hansen that his complaint alleging the Times-News violated the Federal Election Campaign Act was improperly filed since it lacked notarization.

If the complaint is not resubmitted by Oct. 5, the file will be closed, said Kenneth Gross, an FEC general counsel in a Sept. 20 letter to Times-News editor Stephen Hartgen.

James McKenna, a staff counsel for Hansen, said Monday that the congressman's initial Sept. 17 letter to the FEC was not a formal complaint, but simply a letter requesting information.

"I explained to those gentlemen (at the FEC) that we weren't asking for prosecution or to put anyone in jail — just asking for information. It's absurd that you can't ask the FEC a question without you having to ask them to arrest somebody."

But McKenna said that Hansen was now in the process of filing a formal complaint with the FEC. He said the complaint would be mailed to the FEC "within the next 48 hours."

McKenna said the complaint would contain additional information to bolster Hansen's assertion that a $17,750 grant to the Times-News from the Washington-based Project for Investigative Reporting constituted at least an indirect contribution to the campaign of his challenger, Democrat Richard Stallings.

The grant helped pay costs of a Sept. 16 article published in the Times-News stating that the church headed by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon is distributing copies of a book written by Hansen and may be handling the congressman's publishing venture.

The Federal Campaign Act requires all election contributions to be declared to the Federal Election Commission.

Hartgen has said that the grant "was given to us by a legal organization. There were no strings attached as to what, if anything, we would report."

"It was not our intent to get George Hansen or the Unification Church," Hartgen said.

McKenna said the complaint would be filed against six different entities. They include the Times-News, Hartgen, Times-News reporter Rick Shaughnessy, and the Project for Investigative Reporting.

Also to be named in the complaint are the Stern Foundation and the Center for Campaign Fi-

Health tests show no contamination

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Department of Health and Welfare has found "basically no contamination" to the Buena Vista neighborhood from pesticide warehouses, says Twin Falls city council member Gale Kleinkopf.

He told council members at a Monday work session that Dr. Fritz Dixon, head of the department's Bureau of Preventive Medicine, has completed tests on 55 samples of blood, urine, air and soil taken in the Buena Vista neighborhood.

No evidence of Furidan or other toxic pesticide residue from a series of warehouses on Canyon Drive was found in enough amounts to be accurately detected by the state's equipment, Kleinkopf said.

Eleven samples have yet to be analyzed. When work on them is completed in about a month, Dixon will prepare a final report for the council.

The council had tabled action in mid-winter on special pesticide storage regulations requested by Buena Vista residents. Then, Kleinkopf contacted the state department to see if it could prove or disprove the residents' claims of contamination.

The residents had hired Boise toxicologist Charles Scott to investigate the alleged problem. His report contained results of two residents' urine tests showing traces of Furidan, a toxic pesticide residue.

Dixon said then that the residents would have to have been "exposed to a fairly high level" of the chemical for Scott to have found the results he did. Saying he had no idea if a pesticide residue was present or was creating a health hazard, he agreed to commit the department to the tests which will cost from $5,000 to $10,000.

Council members have been skeptical of residents' claims of health hazards from pesticides.

"The council has felt all along it was just clouds in the sky," said council member John Peterson Monday.

But the neighbors have been adamant since March of 1983 that chemicals are contaminating their neighborhood. They proposed that the city pass an ordinance restricting the storage of pesticides and other toxic materials in the city.

The matter has been the subject of numerous heated public meetings since then.

Manners gets suspended sentence

TWIN FALLS — After four months in prison, Charles Manners, 50, former Twin Falls veterinarian, Monday was handed a suspended sentence and five years probation for molesting a child. The sentence ended four years of court battles.

In February of 1984, Manners pleaded guilty to sexually molesting a Twin Falls 9-year-old in exchange for his admission, three charges of rape of the same girl were dismissed. However, Manners pleaded guilty to a charge of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor under 16.

Manners was also accused of molesting the 10-year-old sister of the Twin Falls victim. As part of a plea-bargain agreement, the charges were dropped.

"I owe a debt to society," said Manners. When asked by Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl, if he had anything to say.

Manners appeared in court after serving 120 days in the state penitentiary, following the May 22 sentencing by Meehl for lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor.

Following the recommendation of the public defender Mike Powers, Meehl sentenced Manners to five years probation to be served in New Mexico (Manners' residence), under the jurisdiction of the Department of Parole and Probation there.

Manners was also ordered to pay any expenses incurred by the victim for counseling and to reimburse the Twin Falls Department of Parole and Probation $30 per month for services. He must also refrain from consuming any alcoholic beverages or drugs.

Manners' problems began with a 1980 felony conviction for selling marijuana, for which Judge Vernon Ward ordered a suspended sentence, one-year probation and a $2,400 fine. At the end of the year, Manners returned to court and Ward reversed the conviction, dismissed the charge and freed Manners of all restrictions. Later, the state Board of Veterinary Medicine revoked Manners' license.

Voter pamphlet in today's paper

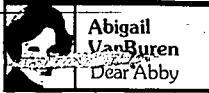

TWIN FALLS — Today's Times-News includes the state's official Voters' Pamphlet — a guide to the proposed initiative and two proposed constitutional amendments that will appear on ballots in Idaho on Nov. 6.

The pamphlet includes arguments for and against each of the three ballot issues, as well as information on voter qualifications and registration.

The pamphlet is required by law, but is being inserted in Idaho newspapers for the first time.

Asking who's calling is proper; polite response required

DEAR ABBY: A friend of ours (we'll call her Joan) telephoned her mother, Mrs. A, long distance. A gentleman answered Mrs. A's telephone. Joan did not identify herself as Mrs. A's daughter, so the gentleman asked Joan, "Who is calling, please?"

Joan responded, "Who are YOU?" The gentleman replied, "My name is Paul."

Then Joan said, "Well, Paul, please put Mrs. A on the phone." Joan believes that Paul was rude to have asked who was calling, as it was none of his business. We believe it was an appropriate question. We would like your opinion.

FRIENDS OF JOAN
DEAR FRIENDS: It was not rude of Paul to have asked who was calling. (Perhaps Mrs. A had instructed him to inquire.) Joan should have immediately identified herself as Mrs. A's daughter.

And speaking of rudeness, I think Joan was rude to demand that Paul identify himself, as it was none of her business.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you a few weeks ago telling you that Michael Jackson — was...my...idol...that...I worshipped him and would give anything in the world if I could meet him personally. I asked you for a few suggestions on how I could meet him, and you wrote me back a crummy letter full of put-downs.

You gave me no hope at all. Instead you told me that thousands of girls felt the same way about Michael, and I didn't have a chance of meeting him in person.

Abby, I turned to you hoping you would give me some advice, and I can't believe how bad you made me feel.

EX-READER
DEAR EX: Sorry I let you down, but I gave you the best advice I had to offer. Celebrities like Michael Jackson hire a retinue of bodyguards to protect them from all the admirers who want to meet him personally. I would have been even more unkind to have given you false hope.

DEAR ABBY: Here is one older widow who elects to be called by her Christian name. I deplore being called "Mrs." anybody.

How can "Missus" be abbreviated Mrs.? There is no "r" in Missus. I can only presume we get a Mrs. when we marry because we become a plural of a Mr. Or perhaps in some bygone era the apostrophe was deleted and we then belonged to a Mr., as in Mr.'s.

I will accept the unpronounceable "Ms." (Mizz) when men are addressed as Mr. with no vowel sound or as Merr — since we really can't pronounce either without a vowel. When will we delete the absurd labels, which mean nothing?

I am even occasionally addressed as "Miss" — with three children, 13 grandchildren and — a great-grandchild! Considering that record, "Miss" is absurd. With no husband, "Mrs." is absurd. And "Ms." is the most absurd of all!

When John Doe can be just that, and no one asks if he is single or married, why do women clamor to have their status cluttered with some meaningless title? I like my name, and I want to be called... —MARGARET CONFIDENTIAL TO J.D. IN SAN ANTONIO: People who demand respect rarely get it. Respect must be earned.

DEAR ABBY: I have two beautiful grandchildren — a boy and a girl. They are, of course, perfect in the sight of Grandma. I do not want to state their ages because my daughter-in-law reads your column and she might recognize the situation, but I need to know something.

At what ages should a brother and sister equate together?

In this case, I think it's time they bathed separately, but I don't want to be meddling, mother-in-law. Can you help?

WORRIED GRANDMA
DEAR WORRIED: Much depends on the physical and emotional maturity of the boy and the girl.

When children are very young, I think it's healthy to bathe them together. It eliminates a lot of natural curiosity later on.

But when one or the other reaches the age when he or she becomes sexually aware, modesty and privacy are recommended.

Unisex baby, wedding showers key to future equality of sexes

I'd like to put you in the mood for this column.

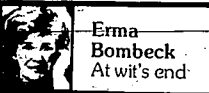

Imagine you're a part of a militant group of women marching around the park holding banners that read, "UNISEX BABY SHOWERS! LET IT RAIN ON MEN'S FADEDES," and "EVERY TOILET BOWL COULD USE A FEW GOOD MEN!"

Standing on a tree stump is a woman shouting, "Wedding and baby showers have done more to hold women down in the depths of oppression than any other single custom in our society. (SHOUTS OF "RIGHT ON, SISTERS!")

"Think of it! When... from your future mother-in-law a gift of matched pots and pans, a cookbook, a dozen dish towels and a cute little scouring-pad holder, who do you think will be using them? Her precious son! (WOMEN BEGIN SHAKING TREES IN ANGER AND PULLING OVER STATUES SHOUTING, "NO!")

The television crews for the six o'clock news move in for a tight shot. "Men are nowhere near a baby shower when you get all those feeding spoons and plastic bibs and carriers to strap on your back. Why? Because they'll never use them. I say women will never be free until both members of the union attend showers and share in all those gifts that keep giving." (POLICE HAVE TO BE SUMMONED AS WOMEN TRY TO TURN OVER A BUS.)

Now, I'm a realistic woman. Somehow I don't see men sitting around at a unisex wedding or baby shower in this decade. But what is own set of headphones, and his own set of lug wrenches awaiting his return.

Think how choked up he'd be with a gift box of charcoal grill cleaner, a book on how to paint your own home on weekends, and a gift certificate for two 50-pound bags of lawn fertilizer.

Why shouldn't men have the thrill of a baby shower? He should have his own bottle warmer, carry-all bag, and unassembled beds and swings. I don't want to be selfish about marriage and children. I want men to know what it's like to break 15 ribbons during a shower and wonder if it's an old-fashioned tale or if they may just have 15 children to support.

Women! Please! Would you keep the cheering down?

reasonable are wedding and baby showers for men who can at least get some feeling of what it is like to share responsibilities.

It would warm my heart to see the dapper of the bride give his future son-in-law a tool box, a lawn mower, or a cute little can of cleanser to clean the sink.

His friends could send him on his honeymoon with dreams of a new step ladder, an alarm clock with his

My child is complaining of headaches and that her eyes hurt while reading. We had an eye exam about 2 years ago, and everything was OK. Do we need another exam?

Answer:
Children's eyes can change very quickly due to rapid growth during the early school years. Regular vision care is essential to insure proper functioning of the eyes for the many visual tasks that your child will encounter.

Broadway play urges respect for each word

By James J. Kilpatrick
Universal Press Syndicate

One of Broadway's hit plays this year is "The Real Thing" by Tom Stoppard. It's about a playwright, Henry, and his love for an actress, Annie. She has taken up the cause of a young radical named Brodie and has persuaded him to write a play to vent his anarchic ideas. Annie asks Henry what he thinks of Brodie's play, and Henry responds that the play is no good. "He can't write."

Annie takes offense at his criticism of her protégé. They quarrel over what good writing is all about. He invokes the analogy of a cricket bat, which is made of several pieces of particular wood cunningly put together. "If you get it right, the cricket ball will travel a hundred yards in four seconds." But if a player employs a lump of wood that is merely trying to be a cricket bat, the ball will go nowhere. "What we're trying to do is to write cricket bats, so that when we throw up an idea and give it a little knock, it might... travel."

Writer's art

It's better. It's the difference between cricket bats and two-by-fours.

And sad to say, words do get badly mistreated. They get their corners knocked off in headlines. Thus the News Guard of Lincoln City, Ore., recently welcomed a new sports columnist: "Honsowetz Assumes Reins." The Wichita Falls (Texas) Times lets us know in an eight-column, 60-pint streamer, "Rain Whets Parched North Texas." The Miami Herald tells us of Sen. Goldwater, "An Old GOP Warhorse Rides Again." The Pineville Central Oregonian reports that "Two Nabbed for Alluding Police." The Middlesex (Mass.) News advises that "Sore Throat Infatuates Rod Stewart."

The Miami Herald describes a fascinating architectural detail: "coltured ceilings formed by a reverse molding process." The Rapid City (S.D.) Guide, in an editorial of rapturous praise for our gymnastic medalists, says their names "will live in sports infamy." The Youngstown (Ohio) Vindicator says that Rep. Ferraro "can be counted on to go for the juggler." In a debate with Vice President Bush, in the Seattle Times a graphics company advertises for an artist: "Salary commiserate with experience." The Sarasota (Fla.) Herald-Tribune editorially approves a recent touch-on criminals law in Washington. The law "is based on the principle of just desserts." Cherries jubilee, we may suppose, for aronists.

The moral to all this is simply stated: Carefully written headlines and sentences are better because they're written carefully.

(James J. Kilpatrick's new book, "The Writer's Art," is a timely, practical, witty guide to writing well. Order your copy of this 200-page, hardbound edition by sending $14.95 plus $1 for postage and handling to Writer's Art, care of this newspaper, 4400 Johnson Drive, Fairway, Kan. 66205. Make checks payable to Universal Press Syndicate.)

Their argument continues, and Annie asks Henry to rewrite Brodie's stuff. He begs off. He can't help. Somebody who thinks that editing a newspaper is censorship, or that throwing bricks is a demonstration while building useful buildings is social violence, or that unpalatable speech is provocation while disrupting the speaker is the exercise of free speech.

Words don't deserve that kind of malarkey," says Henry. "They're innocent, neutral, precise, standing for this, describing that, meaning the other, so if you look after them you can build bridges across incomprehension and chaos. But when they get their corners knocked off, they're no good any more, and Brodie knocks corners off without knowing he's doing it. So everything he builds is jerry-built. It's rubbish. An intelligent child could push it over. I don't think writers are sacred, but words are. They deserve respect. If you get the right ones in the right order, you can nudge the world a little or make a poem which children will speak for you when you're dead."

Beautiful! As Stoppard says at another point, good writing isn't better than poor writing because of some conspiracy among grammarians. "It's better because

Pair files discrimination suit

BOISE (AP) — Two employees of the Idaho Commission for the Blind say they're being demoted because they are loyal to a former director of the agency.

In a U.S. District Court lawsuit here, veteran employees Frank Smith and Ray Martin claim they're being reassigned to lesser positions because of their support for former director Ramona Walhof.

Mrs. Walhof was removed as director of the agency earlier this year as part of a long-running dispute between the National Federation of the Blind and the Idaho Commission for the Blind.

Hai Barton, executive director of the agency, was out of the office Monday and could not be reached for comment, his office said. Barton was named as defendant in the lawsuit along with Blind Commission members Jack Ugaki and Brian Wardle.

Smith and Martin allege that Barton has downgraded their jobs and created a new position, "rehabilitation services chief," which will essentially take away most of the authority and responsibility they had in the past.

Applications filed in court order barring appointment of someone to fill the position until the lawsuit is decided.

A hearing may be held here Thursday on the request. But Barton's office said Monday no one has been appointed to the position.

Smith, who has worked for the Blind Commission since 1969, and Martin, a nine-year veteran, claim they're victims of discrimination because they are blind.

And they claim they're being removed from their positions as retaliation for their support for

Mrs. Walhof and because of their "lack of enthusiasm or unwillingness" to declare loyalty to the new director. They have "substantial personal and philosophical differences" with Barton, the lawsuit said.

"Both men said they have not been asked to take pay cuts, but the change will mean 'substantial demotion' for them personally and will result in 'inefficient' gains in efficiency.

"The decision to create a new position is a 'ruse' to conceal retaliation against Smith and Martin.

"The court must be aware of subtle as well as blatant forms of discrimination," the suit said.

Smith has been serving as chief of field services for the agency. Martin was chief of the orientation and adjustment center.

The men say they change will "diminish, dilute and downgrade" their jobs and responsibilities.

Hunters safe after nights in forest

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — A fallen in the Dixie area since Saturday night, according to Murray.

Murray said the case was one of several over the weekend involving missing or injured hunters.

He expressed frustration with the time and money the department spends annually to find missing or injured hunters.

"We need legislation like what they have in Alaska prohibiting non-resident hunters from going into primitive areas without a licensed guide," he said. "I can't remember a hunter ever getting lost with a guide.

He said the department's search and rescue budget of $5,000 has already been spent.

Relatives' employment under fire

THOMAS (AP) — Amid complaints from some patrons, Snake River School District officials are defending their decision to hire the superintendent's daughter and a principal's wife as elementary school reading aides.

"We knew that hiring (them) would create a big stink, but we really prefer to use the best people," said Carl Jacobia, the district official who oversees the reading aide program.

Although several applicants were interviewed for both jobs, Jacobia said Mindy McLaren, daughter of Superintendent John McLaren, and Janet Williams, wife of Middle School Principal David Williams, were the best suited for the jobs.

Miss McLaren was hired as a full-time aide at $3,370 and Mrs. Williams as a part-time aide at $2,656.

He said neither McLaren nor Williams was involved in the hiring decisions. They also have nothing to do with the direct supervision of either woman, he said.

There is no legal prohibition against members of the same family working for the district, and Jacobia said there are a number of those cases in the Snake River District.

Idaho's wholesale trade soars, rate beats national growth figures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale trade in Idaho soared nearly 59 percent between 1977 and 1982, an expansion that eclipsed the growth nationally, according to new Census Bureau figures.

The state's wholesale trade, bolstered by the final years of rapid economic growth prior to the onslaught of the recent recession, totaled $5.1 billion in 1982, up from $3.2 billion five years earlier.

The increase occurred despite a slight contraction in the number of wholesalers operating in Idaho. That group dropped by nine to 2,026 two years ago.

Nationally, the increase in wholesale trade over the five-year period was only 57 percent.

According to the bureau's Economic Census, trade in nondurable goods was responsible for the overall increase in Idaho activity, jumping nearly 90 percent during the five-year period. Wholesale activity in durable goods was up just over 10 percent as the lumber industry posted an actual decline in sales after the recession knocked the bottom out of the housing market.

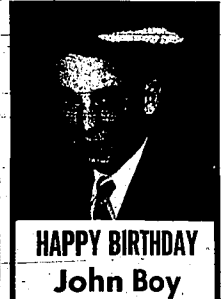

Wholesale trade in chemicals more than tripled during the period while activity in the petroleum and farm supply sectors more than doubled.

Trade in groceries and related products, up 75.5 percent over the period, was responsible for more than a fifth of all wholesale activity in the state in 1982.

The healthy growth in wholesale trade in Idaho also led to a significant expansion of that sector's payroll, again with the bulk of that increase in the nondurable goods area. Overall, the statewide payroll grew from just over $210 million in 1977 to nearly $308 million five years later to average $14,100 per employee.

As expected, the bulk of wholesale activity was concentrated in the state's urban areas with Ada County responsible for nearly a third of all sales in 1982. The Pocatello, Idaho Falls, Twin Falls and Nampa-Caldwell areas accounted for another third.

Cubs capture first title since 1945

By ALAN ROBINSON
The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Chicago Cubs, once comical but now champions, washed away the frustration of 39 years with champagne, beer and tears Monday night after winning the National League East championship — their first title of any kind since World War II.

"The magic number is zero," shouted winning pitcher Rick Sutcliffe, who tossed a sparkling two-hitter in a 4-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates that sent the Cubs into the NL playoffs next week against the San Diego Padres.

"San Diego is going to have their hands full," shouted shortstop Larry Bowa.

"This team deserves this," said third baseman Roy Cey. "This team has the second-best record in baseball and the best record in the National League. The numbers are right and so are we."

Jim Frey, doused by bubbling champagne by several players, was jubilant that he was able to celebrate the Cubs' first title of any kind since 1945 in his first season as manager.

"I'm buying beer for the whole city of Pittsburgh!" he shouted, his face beaming with a broad smile. "I had a great day, a wonderful afternoon and an excellent evening. Somebody told me the Cubs won the National League East championship tonight? Is that true? I'm not going to come back down to earth for three days."

But Frey said the Cubs won't consider their work done until they beat the Padres, who open the best-of-five NL Championship Series in Chicago on Oct. 2.

"It's taken six months to do this, now we have to take care of business in five more days. The Cubs haven't won a pennant in 39 years and everybody said they'd have a monkey on their back. Maybe we've taken the monkey off their back," Frey said.

General Manager Dallas Green, who engineered deals that brought the Cubs key players such as Ryne

Sandberg, Sutcliffe, Bob Demler and Gary Matthews, said, "I'm tickled to death."

"I've got a lot of confidence in this team and now, let's go get San Diego."

Ironically, Chicago and San Diego began the season as the only NL teams never to win a title since divisional play started in 1969.

Sutcliffe, 16-1, became just the fourth pitcher in major-league history to win 20 games while pitching for two clubs in different leagues in the same season. He was 4-5 with Cleveland before being traded to the Cubs in June.

Chicago jumped on Pirates starter Larry McWilliams for solo runs in each of the first three innings and then breezed behind Sutcliffe, who tied the team record for consecutive victories while striking out nine and walking none.

The Cubs took a 4-0 lead in the first when Sandberg lined the first of his two doubles and came home on Matthews' single to left, his league-high 19th game-winning RBI.

Bowa, batting just .220, singled down the third base line to start the Cubs' second and moved to second on the play when third baseman Jim Mingo advanced. Sutcliffe then singled up the middle to make it 2-0.

Sandberg doubled off McWilliams, 11-1, to lead off the Chicago third before Matthews walked. Keith Moreland followed with a bunt single and when Morrison threw the ball away, Sandberg scored to put Chicago ahead 3-0.

Chicago added its run in the fifth when Matthews walked, Moreland singled and Jody Davis bounced into a double play.

The Pirates, who delayed the Cubs' pennant express with a three-game sweep last week in Chicago, did not manage a hit until rookie Joe Orsulak led off the fourth with a shot just under the glove of first baseman Leon Durham that rolled to the right field for a triple. Orsulak came home on Johnny Ray's groundout.

Sutcliffe then retired the next eight batters he faced and did not allow another hit until Orsulak laid down a bunt single in the sixth. Sutcliffe promptly picked off Orsulak to end the inning.

Sutcliffe, who faced just 28 batters, joined Joe McGinnity in 1902, Pat Flaherty in 1904 and Hank Borowy in 1945 as other hurlers to win 20 games while pitching for two teams in both leagues in one season.

The crowd of 5,472 included several thousand banner-waving Cubs fans who drove hours from the Midwest to root the Cubs to their first championship since 1945.

For Cub fans, next year has arrived at last

By EDMUND O. LAWLER
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — The long-suffering fans of the Chicago Cubs, proclaiming "Next year is here!" poured into the streets of this toddlin' town Monday night as their baseball team won its first title in 39 seasons.

"This is not really happening!" exclaimed Les Sidney, 34, after the Cubs defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1 to win the National League's East Division. "Somebody pinch me! It's a dream!"

Sidney was one of the nearly 1,000 revelers — including Gov. James R. Thompson — who were packed into the Ultimate Sports Bar, a tavern on Chicago's North Side.

"We had this coming to us," shouted Lucy Perez, 21, another of the patrons standing elbow-to-elbow in the bar about two miles from the friendly confines of Wrigley Field. "We're the most loyal fans in the world. This is our night!"

Thompson, who watched the game on TV, sported a Cubs hat and reminded the youthful crowd he'd been living and dying with the team for years.

"I've been a Cubs fan longer than most of you have been alive," he said.

For Harry Hammond, the wait had been a little shorter, just 35 years.

"Next year is here!" he shouted.

RICK SUTCLIFFE
Miracle of '84

At the Billy Goat Tavern downtown, die-hard fan and Chicago Tribune columnist Mike Royko said, "I'm bounding off the ceiling. It's a remarkable moment."

"I'm also worried — they've got the playoffs coming up," he continued. "My stomach's all knotted up..."

In Pittsburgh, where Cubs ace pitcher Rick Sutcliffe hurled a two-hitter for his 14th straight victory, the crowd of 5,472 at Three Rivers Stadium included thousands of banner-waving Chicago fans who drove hours from the Midwest to root their team on.

Around the world, from the White House to bars in Central America, the vast array of fans of the team followed the fortunes of the team with fervor. The effort has even been discussed in diplomatic cables.

The Cubs' mystique long ago penetrated the nation's corridors of power, mainly as a ball club unable to win games. The Cubs last won the pennant in 1945, before divisional play.

There is a club in Washington devoted to the Cubs. The Emil Verban Memorial Society, named after an obscure former Cub second baseman and founder by lobbyist Bruce Ladd MISSION, Kan. — Idaho State University has become the second Big Sky Conference school to crack the NCAA Division I-AA Top 20 this fall.

In a weekly survey of sportswriters and broadcasters conducted by the NCAA, the Bengals are ranked 18th, tied with the University of Rhode Island.

ISU improved its season record to 2-1 last Saturday with a 43-9 rout of Montana.

Northern Arizona University, 3-1, is ranked 10th this week. The Lumberjacks were 11th in last week's poll, but suffered their first loss of the season last Saturday when they fell to the University of Pacific, 38-23.

Furman University, with a 4-0 record, is ranked 19th.

Weber JVs thump Bengals

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News Staff Writer

BUHL — It was an entertaining evening for the few hundred football fans who braved the chill air and passed-up the Raiders and Chargers on television.

It was a successful two-touchdown outing for Corky Federico, the former Twin Falls High School star who now calls himself an Idaho State Bengal.

And it was a victorious affair for the Weber State Wildcat junior varsity, which thumped the Bengal JVs 42-22 Monday night at Bowers Field.

The game was as close to a circus as football can come. Not only did the Wildcats amass 513 yards total offense, but two of their touchdowns were particularly eye-opening: Darrell Van Amen's 79-yard sprint with a screen pass after he had been apparently tackled, and Wade Orton's 56-yard grab of a bomb from ellow receiver (and reserve quarterback) Ferrares Reid on a flanker option.

Meanwhile, the Bengals contributed to the show the best way they know how — by passing with numbing regularity. Quarterback Gino Mariani threw 51 times and completed 23 for 329 yards. However, he suffered five interceptions, a more telling figure.

Indeed, turnovers were another characteristic feature. Besides Mariani's interceptions, the Bengals lost two of five fumbles. The Wildcats threw two interceptions and fumbled the ball away three times.

The performer perhaps most immune to miscues was starting Wildcat quarterback Jeff Carlson, who completed his first five passes in leading WSC to a 14-0 first-quarter lead. After the Weber look the opening kickoff, the left-play drive capped by Sean Sanders'

4-yard run with 11:47 left.

Following an ISU punt, Carlson completed a 36-yarder to Reid. Two running plays gained 20 yards, then Carlson rolled left and whipped a 14-yard strike to Robb Akey for another touchdown with 8:28 to go. Van Amen added his second of six conversion kicks.

But the Bengals managed a serious, though brief, challenge. To the crowd's delight, Federico was at the forefront of the comeback.

With 5:46 left in the half, the freshman fullback pounded across the goal line from the 1, narrowing the difference to 14-6. In the third quarter, Federico notched his second touchdown, a 2-yard burst, to tie the score up to 21-19 with 9:59 remaining.

In all, Federico gained 43 yards on 13 carries and caught three passes for 20 yards. He was happy to be on the field, and not just because of his proficiency.

Raiders pull yet another Monday night miracle

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Raiders haven't looked like a Super Bowl champion this season except in one area — their 4-0 record.

The Raiders, who had to rally last week to beat Kansas City, pulled out another one Monday night when Marcus Allen dove over from the 1-yard line, his fourth touchdown of the game, with 46 seconds left to give them a 33-30 National Football League victory over the San Diego Chargers. It extended their Monday Night Magic record to 21-1.

"Winning close games is Raiders tradition," said mangled but effective quarterback Jim Plunkett, who directed the winning drive and completed 24 for 33 passes for 363 yards in his best game of the season.

"It doesn't matter who's wearing the uniform. It's nice for us when the defense doesn't play well and the offense does. That's how you get to the Super Bowl."

The defense didn't play that well, allowing Earnest Jackson, a second-year San Diego running back who replaced the troubled Chuck Muncie and the traded Pete Johnson, to run for 155 yards on 29 carries. The Chargers, 10 points behind at one point, also scored 20 straight points, including 17 in a span of 3:21 early in the fourth quarter to take a 30-20 lead.

That rally was capped by Woodrow Lowe's 32-yard return of a Upked Plunkett pass for a touchdown.

"It's a win. It's a Monday night. I'm very pleased," said Raiders Coach Tom Flores, clearly relieved at the late-game heroics by his team. "We don't plan to win them in the last quarter, but as long as we continue to do so, I'll be happy."

San Diego Coach Don Coryell, who charged on the field on the next-to-last play of the game to complain that the Raiders had 12 men on the field, had no quarrel with his team's play.

"I'm proud of the players. I think they played hard," he said. "Obviously, we played against a very fine football team. We just didn't win it. It was one of those games where one play here and one play there made the difference."

The Chargers' record fell to 2-2. Allen earlier scored on two other short plunges and also caught a 30-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter that gave the Raiders a short-lived 20-10 lead that was overcome quickly by San Diego's 17-point spur.

Lowe, beaten earlier on a touchdown pass from Plunkett to Allen, picked off a pass deflected by Christensen and raced down the sideline into the end zone for the score that gave San Diego, down 20-13 going into the fourth quarter, a 30-20 lead with 10:21 left.

The Raiders came right back, scoring just over two minutes later when Allen dove in from two yards out at the end of a 53-yard, eight-play drive. The drive was set up by Dokie Williams' 44-yard kickoff return.

But Los Angeles missed the extra point when holder Mark Wilson fumbled the snap.

It didn't matter, however, because after Rod Martin's sack of quarterback Dan Fouts cut short a Chargers drive that reached midfield, San Diego was forced to punt to the Raiders, who then began their game-winning drive.

The Raiders scored first, taking a 3-0 lead on Chris Bah's 42-yard field goal on their first possession of the game. But the Chargers came right back with a 75-yard, 10-play touchdown drive capped by an 11-yard scoring pass to Kellen Winslow. Bah's 36-yard field goal cut the deficit to 7-6 with 2:51 left in the first period, but San Diego's Rolf Benruschke responded with a 51-yarder that gave the Chargers a 10-6 lead midway through the second period.

Then Plunkett, completing seven straight passes for 61 yards, directed a 71-yard drive that culminated when Allen went over from one foot out on fourth down with six seconds left to go.

Los Angeles a 13-10 halftime lead.

Los Angeles extended its lead to 20-10 on their first possession of the second half, taking only four plays to go 72 yards. The touchdown came on the 39-yard pass from Plunkett to Allen.

Mets lose, but keep winning

Pinch-hitter Rusty Staub delivered a two-run double to snap an eight-inning tie Monday night and lift the New York Mets over the Philadelphia Phillies 7-5 in New York. Despite New York's fourth straight victory, the second-place Mets were eliminated from the National League pennant race when division-leading Chicago beat Pittsburgh 4-1. The Mets began their uprising with consecutive singles by Hubie Brooks and Ray Knight off reliever Larry Andersen, 3-6. New York then loaded the bases as third baseman Mike Schmidt thrived wildly on Mike Fitzgerald's sacrifice bunt...

National

New York broke the deadlock when Wally Backman walked on four pitches with the bases loaded in the fourth, but Philadelphia tied the game in the fifth when Von Hayes greeted reliever Tom Gorman with a home run, his 18th. Los Angeles 5, Houston 1. In Los Angeles, Pedro Guerrero slammed a three-run homer to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers over the Houston Astros. Jerry Reuss, 5-7, hurled seven innings to earn the victory, his third straight after he had dropped six consecutive decisions. Mike Eassey, 7-5, took the loss. Guerrero hit his 16th homer with two outs in the third. Los Angeles reliever Jeff Littleton, German Rivera doubled and pinch-hitter Tony Brewer followed with an infield single. Rivera and Brewer executed a double steal and when catcher Alan Ashby's throw to third was wild for an error, Rivera scored and Brewer continued to third. Steve Sax, who earlier extended his hitting streak to 12 games, brought home Brewer with a squeeze bunt. Montreal 2, St. Louis 1. In Montreal, Tim Lincecum stroked a one-out single in the ninth inning to drive in pinch-runner Miguel Dilone from second base with the winning run as the Montreal Expos snapped a five-game losing streak by defeating the St. Louis Cardinals. After reliever Nell Allen, 9-6, re-fed the first batter in the ninth, Gary Carter and Dan DeLeone singled. Rainey, who had entered the game as a defensive replacement in the top of the inning, then singled to score Dilone, who was running for Carter. Jeff Reardon, 6-7, worked two-thirds on an inning for the victory. San Diego 7, San Francisco 1. In San Francisco, Greg Harris, Luis Delzon and Craig Lefters combined on a three-hitter and the San Diego Padres pounded 17 hits for a victory over the San Francisco Giants in the first game of a double-header. Harris, 2-2, worked the first five innings, yielding two hits and an unearned run. DeLeon and Lefters blanketed the Giants the rest of the way. The Padres took a 1-0 lead in the second on singles by Graig Nettles, Terry Kennedy and Carmelo Martinez. The added a run in the third on Harris' double, Alan Wiggins' bunt single and a throwing error by third baseman Chris Brown. Kennedy's run-scoring double and Kevin McReynolds' sacrifice fly made it 4-0 in the fifth and Tony Gwynn and Doug Gotszold had run-scoring singles in the sixth. San Diego 8, San Francisco 6. In the second game, Mario Ramirez cracked an RBI-single in the 11th inning that sent the Padres to a victory and a double-header sweep of the Giants.

Bengals

Continued from Page C1. "A lot of guys on the team didn't want to come down here," he said, explaining that many of the junior varsity players had seen action in the fourth quarter of the varsity's 43-3 victory Saturday night over Montana. "But I was looking forward to being here and seeing people I know." Unfortunately for the Bengals, Mariani threw a few too many passes to people he didn't know. After Federico's second score, the Wildcats roared for three touchdowns, one following a Mariani turnover. Randy Hill's 32-yard field goal with 14:25 left put ISU within 28-22, but it wasn't nearly enough. Carson finished with 10 completions in 18 attempts for 167 yards and two touchdowns. Reid, his favorite receiver, latched onto six passes good for 148 yards. Running back Willie McDonald also enjoyed a productive night for the Wildcats, rushing 16 times for 72 yards. ISU's Shawn Beals endured a horrid first quarter - after having a fumbled punt nullified by a Wildcat penalty, he proceeded to fumble the ball away to WSC on the subsequent kick - yet recovered to catch six passes for 116 yards.

Vandals' Smith out for year

MOSCOW — University of Idaho running back Andrew Smith, injured in Saturday night's 34-28 loss to Montana State, will undergo surgery for torn knee ligaments and will miss the rest of the season. That's the word from University of Idaho head coach Dennis Erickson.

Smith, a 5-foot-10, 183-pound senior from Los Angeles, was injured after a short gain the first quarter of Saturday night's game. He was the leading Idaho rusher at the time, having carried the ball for 152 yards in three games. He had also caught nine passes for an additional 103 yards.

Smith redshirted the 1982 season after transferring from Pierce Community College and will thus not be eligible to redshirt this year. The Vandals had previously lost defensive end Sam Manoa, defensive Scott Katz and defensive back Mike Johnson for the season to knee injuries.

ISU, NAU dominate 'Sky stats

BOISE (AP) — Idaho State quarterback Vern Harris rose in the Big Sky Conference football standings on the strength of a 359-yard performance, while his school and Northern Arizona easily outpaced defending football champion Nevada-Reno in team statistics.

Nevada-Reno led only in rushing offense, with 193 yards per game. Boise State is No. 2, with 193 yards.

Idaho State leads in total offense with 488.7 yards per game, followed by Montana State with 460.3. Montana State holds the No. 1 spot in passing offense, with 345 yards per game, and Idaho State nudges closely with 337.7.

Northern Arizona took the top spot in scoring offense with an average 160 points, followed by Idaho State with 104. NAU also ranks first in punt returns, averaging 11.9. Again, Idaho State is second with 9.9.

The two schools also dominate in punt returns and total defense, with Northern Arizona averaging 11.9 in the first category and Idaho State 9.9. In total defense, Northern Arizona averaged 203.2 yards per game, and Idaho State 228.7.

They're at the top again in rushing defense, Northern Arizona with 69.5 yards per game and Idaho State with 79.

Northern Arizona holds the lead in pass defense, averaging 133.7 yards per game. Montana State is No. 2 with 144.

Leaders in individual statistics include Montana State quarterback Kelly Bradley, who led in total offense with 309 yards per game, followed by Harris, with 291 yards per game.

Rangers extend Rader's pact

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers Manager Doug Rader received an extension on his contract to manage the American League club through 1987, team officials announced Monday.

Rader, who is completing his second year at the Rangers' helm, previously had been signed through the 1985 season.

"We are pleased to make this extension of Doug's contract and gratified that he has made a commitment to the organization," said team president Mike Stone. "We believe Doug will continue to develop into an outstanding major league manager."

Prior to his stint with the Rangers, Rader, 40, managed Hawaii of the Pacific Coast League.

BYU netter new BSU coach

BOISE (AP) — A former All-American tennis player and Brigham Young University graduate is the new coach of men's and women's tennis at Boise State University.

The selection of John Bennett was announced on Monday by BSU Athletic Director Gene Blyemaler.

Bennett comes to Boise State after a year as the tennis professional and camp instructor at BYU.

He earned bachelor's and master's degrees in physical education at the Utah school, where he was a four-year letterman in tennis. He earned All-American honors in 1976, the same year he won the Western Athletic Conference Championship and went on to play in the European Circuit.

Lanier calls it a career

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Bucks center Bob Lanier announced his retirement Monday afternoon, ending a 14-year quest for a National Basketball Association championship ring.

"Today's decision is the result of a great deal of mind-and-soul-searching for me," Lanier said in a release distributed at a news conference. "I wanted to be a productive part of the team. I wanted to make a difference if I played, and I am not sure that I could get through another season. A part of me still lusts for the challenge, but my mind tells me it's time."

Lanier scored 19,248 points over his career, ranking 12th on the all-time list, and grabbed 9,688 rebounds.

Lanier, who underwent surgery on his knees eight times during his career, was acquired by the Bucks in a trade with the Detroit Pistons midway through the 1980 season. He spent his first nine years with the Pistons after being drafted in the first round in 1970 out of St. Bonaventure.

3-year probation for Florida?

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The NCAA, which turned up 107 violations in a 21-month investigation of the University of Florida football program, will slap the Gators with a severe three-year probation. The Fort Lauderdale Sun Sentinel and News reported.

The newspaper, quoting an unnamed source, said Monday that the Southeastern Conference school will be notified of the sanctions within two weeks.

The penalties will include loss of scholarships and sanctions on television appearances and post-season play, the newspaper reported.

University of Florida officials contacted Monday refused to confirm or deny the report.

Harris, Despot share Big Sky honors

BOISE (AP) — Boise State University offensive guard Steve Despot, Idaho State University quarterback Vern Harris and Montana State free safety, Doug Kimball have been awarded Player of the Week honors in the Big Sky Conference.

Despot and Harris share the offensive award. Kimball is the recipient on defense.

Despot, a 6-2, 245-pound senior from Boise, is one of the few offensive linemen ever to receive the Big Sky's Offensive Player of the Week honor. He received the highest rating for any Boise State linemen dating back to the 1979 season.

He graded out to a 100 in 68 plays in the Broncos' 37-12 win over Nevada-Reno on Saturday.

In that game, BSU gained 223 yards rushing on 55 attempts for an average of just over four yards per play, and passed for 215 yards without losing a turnover.

Harris, a 6-2, 191-pound junior from LaMirada, Calif., guided Idaho State to a 42-3 Big Sky win over Montana on Saturday. He completed 22 of 37 passes for 349 yards.

Although he didn't throw a touchdown pass in the game, Harris was 13-of-14 for 203 yards on the five Bengal touchdown scoring drives setting up four short scoring runs.

Kimball, a 6-0, 185-pound junior from Chester, Mont., intercepted three passes, the last to thwart a last-minute drive near the goal line in MSU's 34-28 come-from-behind road win over the University of Idaho.

Kimball also had two pass deflections and was credited with six total tackles; four unassisted including one for minus four yards.

Others nominated for the weekly award on offense were Idaho tight end Scott Auker; Montana punter Eby Dobson; Montana State runningback Tim Clements; Northern Arizona wide receiver Ben Richardson; and Weber State runningback Wes Cooper.

Those nominated for the weekly award on defense were Boise State nose-guard Glenn Simonson; Idaho free safety Mark Tidd; Idaho State nose guard Steve Anderson; Montana free safety Scott Timberman; and Weber State cornerback Todd Boyer.

Oliver, Snow capture Burley seniors' tourney

BURLEY — Former rodeo star Dean Oliver-of-Boise fired a five-under-par 137 over two days to capture the Burley tournament on the Idaho seniors circuit here Sunday.

Oliver combined a 73 on Sunday with his 64 on Saturday to take a five-stroke victory over Doyle Dugger of Twin Falls. Dugger had back-to-back '85, even par on the Burley Municipal Golf Course.

Bob Siroderstu of Twin Falls was the net winner, at 130, followed by Bob Meyer of Boise at 131.

Jeanne Snow of Burley won the women's division of the tournament, shooting 85-90-116, followed by Judy Cutler of Burley at 186. Elaine Schreiber of Pocatello was the net champion, at 143.

One hundred-two golfers took part in the tournament, the fifth in a series of six being held this summer. The

Delays on nuke plants urged

By LES BLUMENTHAL
 The Associated Press

SEATTLE — The Bonneville Power Administration has tentatively recommended that construction on two mothballed Washington Public Power Supply System nuclear power plants not be resumed for up to two more years.

The recommendation Monday for extended construction delays resulted from new forecasts that the demand for electricity in the Northwest will be lower than previously thought. Another factor is Wall Street's continued refusal to fund WPSS projects.

BPA officials emphasized that the recommendation will not become final until November and could be changed.

"We're still not sure how this thing will come out," said Peter Johnson, BPA administrator.

Four private Northwest utilities that own part of one of the mothballed plants have already filed suit in federal court seeking damages for the original decision to mothball the plants.

PETER JOHNSON
 Not sure of final result

"This concerns us greatly," said Bob Gillespie, a spokesman for Puget Sound Power & Light, one of the private utilities. "Further delay will add to the cost substantially."

WPSS was formed in the late 1950s as the construction arm of public utilities in the Northwest. The BPA markets power from federal hydroelectric plants on the Columbia River and was underwriting the costs of the mothballed plants.

WPSS officials also were concerned about the difficulty in procuring the plants during a longer mothballing.

"We are disappointed," said Gary Petersen, a spokesman for the supply system in Richland, Wash. "Further delay is not comfortable for the staff."

About $1.5 billion has already been spent on the two plants. It's estimated that $1 billion will have to be borrowed to finance completion of each one.

WPSS has been in dire financial straits since it defaulted on $2.25 billion borrowed to build two other nuclear power plants which were eventually terminated. Only one of the plants WPSS launched has been finished, the No. 2 project which was dedicated Saturday.

BPA officials said the plants remain an option against the possibility of increased power demand.

"The plants in their present state are a valuable insurance policy against high load growth," said Jim Curtis, BPA's deputy financial manager. "The delay would give everyone a chance to learn about future loads and certain other key variables before making a large irrevocable commitment."

BPA said the mothballing would cost $24 million to $80 million a year. Work on the No. 3 plant, located at Satsop west of Olympia, was scheduled to resume next July. The plant was 75 percent complete when mothballed in 1983 because of financing difficulties. BPA owns 70 percent of the plant and the private utilities own the other 30 percent.

The No. 1 plant, on the Hanford federal nuclear reservation, was mothballed in 1982 when it was 65 percent complete. Construction had been scheduled to resume in July 1986. BPA owns all of the No. 1 project.

BPA will hold a series of public hearings in early October and make a final recommendation on whether to extend mothballing in November.

Four perish in shooting spree

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A domestic dispute apparently sparked a shooting spree early Sunday that left four prominent Las Vegas dead at a luxury home in one of the city's most exclusive areas.

Three others escaped injury by hiding in the home and in a car.

Police have described the shootings as a case of murder and suicide.

Killed at the exclusive Rancho Circle home were socialite interior decorator Virginia Mallin Egged, 45; her husband, cable television company executive Alex Egged; clothing store manager Betty DiFlore, 52; and jewelry store owner Jack Levy, 66.

One of separated Siamese twins contracts bacterial meningitis

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Six-month-old Ashley, one of the Siamese twins separated in a 31-hour operation 19 days ago, has suffered a serious setback by contracting bacterial spinal meningitis.

However, Ashley was responding well to antibiotic treatment, University of Utah Medical Center spokesman John Dwan said Monday.

Bacterial meningitis is an inflammation of the membranes covering the brain and the spinal cord and fluid, he said.

"This is a serious problem and a setback to her recovery," Dwan said. "It is a very dangerous condition for anyone."

He said Ashley's sister, Patricia, to whom she was attached at the top of the head at birth, has shown no signs of the infection.

However, she has been moved to another room in the hospital's cerebrovascular intensive care unit, where both have stayed since the Sept. 13-14 surgery in critical condition.

The girls' parents have requested anonymity for their daughters and themselves. The twins were born March 9 in Southern California to a Utah couple stationed there in the Air Force. They have since moved to Utah.

Ashley and Patricia, who were found to share some brain tissue, had undergone five previous operations before their separation.

Dwan earlier had said the girls could remain in intensive care for weeks during their recovery.

Ashley's condition was discovered when she developed a fever during the weekend and a spinal fluid culture confirmed the infection, Dwan said.

"Patricia continues to progress, but we're still carrying them critical condition because the surgery was intense and things can happen very fast," he said.

Dwan said that unlike viral meningitis, bacterial meningitis can be contracted only through an entry way to the membranes and spinal cord.

The condition could take days or more than a week to clear up.

Dwan said once the girls have recovered sufficiently, they will probably return to the operating room for minor surgery to adjust the skin flaps placed over the spaces in their skulls that once were joined.
