Board to explain water agreement

By HAL BERNTON
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — Gov. John Evans, state Attorney General Jim Jones, and Idaho Power vice president Logan Lanham showed up at a state Water Resources Board meeting in Pocatello Friday to make a joint pitch for the new Swan Falls agreement.

Jones and Lanham, who exchanged a series of vitriolic personal attacks last spring, were all smiles Friday as they lined up beside Evans to tout the new agreement.

Board members asked few questions as they briefly reviewed the agreement and scheduled a series of information meetings later this month to explain the document to the public.

"It's extremely exciting for the state of Idaho and I congratulate all of you for what you have done," said Gene Gray, a board member from Pocatello.

Evans spoke of the new settlement as a "gentleman's agreement" that will be formalized in a legal document now being drawn up by attorneys.

Evans said the legal document should be signed by Oct. 15 to try and defuse the Swan Falls dispute as a campaign issue in the Nov. 6 elections. The dispute has been "so controversial" that regulators "didn't want it to influence the election efforts of some of our legislators," he said.

But Evans said the extended negotiations that led to the settlement proved that Idaho Power and state officials had "many more areas of agreement than disagreement."

The water board, a citizen board that helps formulate state water policy, will have a major role in implementing the settlement agreement, Evans said. The board, pending the outcome of a Nov. 6 vote on a proposed constitutional amendment, is likely to be responsible for amending the state water plan to incorporate the language of the settlement agreement.

Evans also said there was "no pride of authorship" in the agreement and that board members should feel free to recommend changes in the document.

The agreement would raise the state-mandated Snake River minimum stream flow from 3,300 cubic feet per second below Swan Falls to 3,600 cfs and would establish new "public interest criteria" to allocate up to 600 cfs of water for new development.

The agreement, once implemented, will also result in Idaho Power relinquishing its rights to 8,400 cfs of Swan Falls water, lifting legal clouds that have been cast on the water rights of thousands of upstream users.

Jones, who had formerly advocated the "total subordination of Idaho Power's water rights, called the agreement a "reasonable compromise" that allowed state officials and Idaho Power to avoid the entanglement of Swan Falls lawsuits.

Lanham, in a brief testimony to the board, said he would throw his full support behind the agreement and its subsequent implementation.

"I'm not running for office so I don't need to give you a 30-minute talk, but I believe the agreement is equitable to the state of Idaho and our customers," he said.

Don Kramer, chairman of the water board, said the information meetings would be tentatively scheduled for Oct. 22 in Idaho Falls, Oct. 23 in Pocatello, Oct. 24 in Burley and Oct. 25 in Twin Falls. Additional meetings will be held in Lewiston and Boise, he said.

Immigration bill impasse broken

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Backers of legislation curbing the influx of illegal aliens across U.S. borders announced Friday they have broken the impasse that kept the bill languishing in committee.

Now they will try to push it through Congress next week.

But members of the Hispanic Caucus who oppose the measure said they will continue to work to kill the bill, which will die when Congress adjourns unless it is ratified by both chambers.

"The desire to pass this bill is enormous," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., author of the proposal that broke the deadlock. "We've reached agreement with all the parties concerned... but time is running out."

Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., the chief House sponsor of the bill, said the House will have a chance to have an "up-or-down vote" on the measure next week and that he was confident Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., the Senate sponsor, will be able to guide it through that chamber by mid-week.

"One way or the other, he's got the votes," Mazzoli said.

But both men acknowledged that the path to final passage was a tenuous one.

"It's going to be damn close," said Schumer.

The two congressmen said they broke the impasse by getting Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., and Simpson to settle their differences over an anti-discrimination clause that has stood in the way of House-Senate agreement over the bill, the nation's first major revision of immigration law since 1952.

They also said the agreement appeared to be acceptable to President Reagan because a $1 billion cap on annual federal expenditures will be included in the bill, something that the administration said was necessary for the legislation to be signed into law.

Meanwhile, Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., announced that the members of the conference committee that had broken up in disagreement over the bill last week would meet again on Tuesday to vote on the compromise proposal.

Congress still wrangling over emergency money bills, must return to town to pass legislation to keep the government afloat financially.

Mazzoli and Schumer said they believe this will give them enough time to maneuver the bill through a

Mondale to debate by rules

WASHINGTON — Walter F. Mondale said Friday that he will "live by the rules" agreed to for Sunday's debate with President Reagan and will not try to bypass them and directly question the president.

Mondale originally proposed a format that would allow the candidates to question each other but the White House refused to go along.

Talking to reporters after an interview with ABC News, Mondale said Sunday's debate would be "more like a news conference where four gifted journalists will ask questions of us and we will respond to those questions and then Americans will have a chance to measure what they think the quality of those responses is."

Asked if he would assume the stance of "fighting Fritz" in the debate, Mondale replied that he would be "that true, wonderful, courageous, decent, gifted, caring, balanced Walter Mondale, just plain Fritz."

At the White House, President Reagan told reporters he was "ready as I'm every going

Money bills stall Congress

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Legislators failed to meet their goal of adjourning for the year Friday as they struggled to clear the last two obstacles to ending the 98th Congress: major bills to keep most of the government in business and allow the Treasury to borrow another $50 billion.

House and Senate negotiators adjourned until Tuesday morning after conference committee members found themselves in a stalemate over aid to U.S.-backed rebels in Nicaragua and other items in the Pentagon budget.

"It appears we cannot come to an agreement at this point in time," said

Adjournment plan goes awry — A4

Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee's defense subcommittee.

Presidential politics and the threat of a veto also complicated the bargaining.

White action bogged down on the omnibus spending bill, Congress passed a stopgap measure that would temporarily provide money to government agencies through midnight Tuesday. That would avert disruptions of government operations such as those that occurred Thursday when some 500,000 workers were sent home at midday.

The House, by voice vote, passed the stopgap bill and sent it to the Senate, which also agreed to it on a voice vote. The measure then went to the White House, where a spokesman for the president, Anson Franklin, said President Reagan will sign it. A stopgap bill already in place expired at 6 p.m. Friday.

Meanwhile, the Senate stalled in its effort to increase the government's borrowing authority — the national debt — to $1.823 trillion from its current level of $1.573 trillion.

Idaho wilderness deal still alive

WASHINGTON (AP) — An impasse over spending authority for the federal government has given negotiators in the Idaho wilderness battle additional time "in their drive to reach agreement on the issue, but Congressmen Larry Craig remained pessimistic.

"There's been a reprieve," said Bill Livingstone, an aide to Sen. James McClure, after the House and Senate missed their Friday adjournment target.

The two houses failed to resolve differences on a major spending bill and agreed to take the matter up again next Tuesday, giving the wilderness negotiators an additional four days.

"I'm not sure that another couple of days to the session improves the possibility," Craig said. "It does give us a little longer to look at the differences... But they are quite large at the moment and I can't make any prediction."

Before delaying congressional adjournment there appeared little hope that a compromise could be reached on additional Idaho wilderness acreage between the all-Republican congressional delegation and the Democratic leaders of the House Interior Committee.

An exchange-of-new-wilderness proposals over the past week still left the sides about 1 million acres apart, according to reports, as the delegation increased the acreage in its original 526,000-acre plan and Public Lands Subcommittee Chairman John Seiberling, D-Ohio, countered with a 2 million-acre alternative.

Nation's jobless rate declines in September

By MERRILL HARTSON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than 270,000 Americans got jobs in September as civilian unemployment dipped to 7.4 percent, the government said Friday, taking this politically sensitive economic indicator a notch below where it was when President Reagan took office.

With just over a month to go before the presidential election, Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the report showed that "the economy continues to expand."

economic growth and the creation of more jobs," Speakes said.

Some private analysts, however, noted that job growth has slowed as the pace of economic recovery has slackened. These analysts said they were concerned by the figures which showed that the employment gains were registered mostly in service-oriented and retail business while there actually were losses in manufacturing.

The total number of Americans with jobs rose by 270,000, to 105.2 million last month, 7.5 percent, and the ranks of those officially categorized as unemployed shrank by 66,000, from 8,526,000 to 8,460,000, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

The seasonally adjusted civilian unemployment rate stood at 7.5 percent in January 1981, when Reagan was inaugurated, and soared to a peak of 10.2 percent in November 1982 during the depth of the long recession and fell to a low of 7.1 percent during this administration in June.

In September 1980, when then-President Jimmy Carter was nearing an electoral verdict on his re-election bid, the rate stood at 7.5 percent.

Last month, new hiring by business accommodated entry into the labor force of about 200,000 job-seekers, thus preventing the unemployment rate from rising.

And the BLS report showed that the pool of so-called "discouraged workers" — people not counted as unemployed because they've given up looking for jobs — shrank by 106,000 in the period from June-September, to 1.7 million.

"The overall employment figures, which had shown a moderation in the pace of the labor market improvement in recent months, were little changed in September, but job declines occurred in several key manufacturing industries," Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, told the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

In fact, the bulk of the more than 270,000 jobs created in September came from service-oriented businesses such as restaurants, retail and wholesale trade, and health care institutions along with state and local government. Several categories of manufacturing industries suffered declines, according to the bureau's report.

Barry Bluestone, a Boston College economist, said he found that "disturbing"

SAL conference opens today

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church celebrated its 150th Semianual General Conference on Saturday with a meeting presided and prophesied by Spencer W. Kimball, likely to attend at least one of the four general sessions.

Fair weather was forecast for the two-day conference, which was expected to draw about 6,000 to the Tabernacle on Temple Square. In addition, all conference sessions are to be televised live by satellite to more than 900 stake centers in the United States and Canada.

Kimball, 89, and his first counselor, President Marion G. Romney, 87, have been confined to their homes for many months because of age and failing health.

Officially, spokesman for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints said it would not be known until the conference began at 10 a.m. today whether Kimball would attend because he is stronger on some days than others.

Child suffocates in gate

MERIDIAN (AP) — An 11-month-old boy died after he became caught in a folding, accordion-style safety gate at his home in Meridian.

An autopsy showed James Moss died of suffocation caused by the accident Thursday, Ada County Coroner Mike Johnson said.

The baby was found by one of his parents and died soon after being taken to a Boise hospital, Johnson said.

Panel gives Hansen backing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Republican Congressional Committee is throwing its full financial weight behind convicted Idaho Congressman George Hansen, committee executive director Joe Gaylord announced Friday.

"We believe George Hansen will be re-elected," Gaylord said. "And to help insure he is re-elected we are providing his campaign with the maximum contribution allowed by law."

He said Hansen would receive almost $45,000 in cash and coordinated expenditures for his campaign against Democratic challenger Richard Stallings.

Despite the seven-term congressman's four felony convictions for financial disclosure discrepancies, a pending jail sentence and fine, and an official reprimand from colleagues in the House, Gaylord said the NRCC Executive Committee voted unanimously to fund the Hansen race.

Chinese continue Gem visit

BOISE (AP) — A Chinese delegation observing agricultural production and marketing methods in Idaho will remain in the state until Tuesday.

Eight delegates from the Shanxi Province of the People's Republic of China have spent the past week observing potato cultivation and processing, farm irrigation, soil improvement, marketing of farm-goods and the processing of timber.

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas: Variable high clouds through the weekend. Highs in the mid 60s to the mid 70s today and 70 to 80 on Sunday. Overnight lows in the upper 30s and 40s.

Northern Nevada and northern Utah: Northern Utah will have variable clouds through Sunday. Lows in the upper 30s and 40s. Highs in the upper 60s to near 80. Northern Nevada will be partly cloudy today and Sunday. Chance of showers in the extreme northwest late Sunday. Highs 70 to 80.

Synopsis: A weak low pressure system moved over eastern Idaho Friday afternoon, which triggered some showers and thunderstorms over that portion of the state. In western Idaho, the skies were sunny, and fair skies are expected to move east to cover all of the state. Over the weekend, a Pacific storm anchored off the Pacific Northwest Coast will cause variable high clouds over Idaho. But the Columbus Bay forecast is expected to continue dry with warm temperatures.

Friday morning lows ranged from the 20s in the mountains to the 40s in the lower valleys, while afternoon temperatures warmed into the 60s statewide.

Suspect linked to robberies

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A Texan charged Friday with the robbery of a small-town bank also is suspected of being one of two men who used helicopters to pull bank jobs in Texas and Louisiana, authorities said.

Russell Earl Austzon, 38, of Conroe, Texas, was arrested here Friday and charged with a Sept. 7 armed bank robbery in Overton, Nev., said FBI Agent John Schreiber. Austzon was ordered held in lieu of $300,000 bond.

Charles Ray Holden of Houston is being sought on a warrant issued earlier this week in the same robbery, Schreiber said.

Fed ready to loosen grip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve policymakers decided in late August to keep a steady grip on the nation's credit reins but to stand ready to loosen them a bit if it had to be, according to minutes of the meeting released Friday.

The members of the Fed's Open Market Committee agreed, on an 11-1 vote, to maintain the existing restraint on growth in the money supply but to ease up a bit if there was "significantly slower growth."

Indeed, growth in the weekly measure of the money supply has been quite sluggish. And private analysts say they have detected clues in the money markets that the Fed has adopted an easier stance.

The Open Market Committee held another closed-door meeting on Tuesday to chart monetary policy through Election Day.

Senate rejects freeze again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of a nuclear freeze resolution did better than last time but not well enough as the Senate rejected their proposal by a vote of 55-42 on Friday.

The resolution, calling for a mutual and verifiable freeze of U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals, was rejected 58-40 last time it came up, on Oct. 31, 1983.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., led the fight for the freeze resolution. Kennedy and Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., introduced the measure as an amendment to a bill increasing the debt ceiling.

Ford offers workers pay hike

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. offered its 115,000 blue-collar workers a pay raise Friday in a labor contract proposal that the United Auto Workers union said could avoid a strike in a week.

However, UAW President Owen Bieber admitted being troubled by reports that four large union locals in early balloting had voted down the tentative contract reached across town two weeks ago with General Motors Corp.

Bieber delivered a stern warning to the 350,000 UAW workers at GM that if the agreement is defeated, "we'll be in a nationwide strike against General Motors."

FBI confines former agent in tight protective custody

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former FBI agent accused of conspiring to sell secrets to the Soviet Union for $50,000 a year had each week brought to Terminal Island prison before dawn Friday and placed in special protective custody to "make sure nothing happens to him," a prosecutor said.

Richard W. Miller, the first FBI agent in history to be arrested on espionage charges, was placed in the same maximum-security cell block with his two Russian co-defendants after being driven here from San Diego before 5:30 a.m., said Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Kendall.

Svetlana Ogorodnikov, 34, and her estranged husband, Nikolay, 51, have been at Terminal Island since their arrest Wednesday. Government sources have said Mrs. Ogorodnikov and Miller, who worked in counter-intelligence in the FBI, may have been lovers during the months he allegedly passed classified documents to her, but there has been no official confirmation. Miller may need extra security because of publicity about the case, Kendall said.

"When you have a person who is sensitive (in relation) to other prisoners, as this person is, you have to take special precautions," Kendall said. "The main thing is having the guards make sure nothing happens to him."

Miller would not appear in court again until at least Oct. 15 and more likely Oct. 22 after an indictment is sought from a federal grand jury. He and the Russian couple are being held without bail.

Meanwhile, CBS News reported Friday night that Miller's family has approached Howard Weitzman, the attorney who successfully won acquittal for John Z. De Loren in the automaker's cocaine-trafficking case, to defend the fired FBI agent.

"I really don't want to comment whether I've been contacted or not," Weitzman said Friday evening. But he added: "It sounds like an interesting case and something that we would be interested in getting involved in if the opportunity presents itself."

Weitzman said he would be willing to discuss the matter further today. In an affidavit released Wednesday, the FBI said Miller conspired to sell government secrets to the Soviet Union for $50,000 in gold and about $15,000 in cash. Los Angeles FBI chief Richard Bretzing said Miller had been having financial problems and money was believed to be the motive.

actors who will be affected by this legislation — the nation's Hispanic community."

Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., past chairman of the caucus, noted that the bill is opposed by the AFL-CIO and the business community because of its sanctions against employers and its program to bring temporary foreign workers into the country to pick perishable crops.

"We will be ready, we will see who wins... but we'll be in there fighting to kill this bill," Garcia said.

Aliens

maze of parliamentary procedure in order to get it to the House and Senate floors for a vote, which could come by mid-week.

Prospects for the bill dimmed last week when the negotiators failed to reach a compromise over the discrimination clause after Simpson refused to accept Frank's proposal.

That provision would have prohibited employers from discriminating against U.S. citizens, as well as non-citizens given the right to work in America, because of their national origin or status as aliens.

Simpson argued that this would give the non-citizens a right to sue on the basis of discrimination in cases where a U.S. citizen would not have the same right.

But Schumer said the gist of the compromise involved granting the anti-discrimination protection to those legal aliens who signed statements that they intended to become citizens. If such people did not apply to become citizens six months after their time to do so expired, the protections would cease.

The protection against discrimination would be extended to the U.S. citizen as well.

The compromise also includes Frank's plan that a special agency be set up in the Justice Department to pursue the discrimination complaints, and that the special prosecutor has the right to pursue cases if he or she wishes to do so, Schumer said.

During more than a week of intense discussions, the negotiators agreed on the basic items in the bill — fines and possible prison sentences for employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens and a program to legalize those aliens who can prove they have lived in the country since before Jan. 1, 1981.

But opponents argued that the bill will tempt employers to discriminate against anyone who looks foreign — in particular Hispanic — in a mistaken attempt to dodge penalties.

Members of the Hispanic Caucus decried the compromise.

"This compromise has unacceptable standards of discrimination protection," said Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., the caucus chairman. "The sponsors have forgotten the 15-million-to be" for the debate, adding that his strategy would be "just to tell the truth."

"I think in the world of politics that would be so unusual it ought to cause a starting ovation," Reagan quipped in the Rose Garden after praising the Defense Department employees who helped cut government costs.

Mondale said he originally recommended "more debates and an environment in which we could challenge each other directly with questions and answers. That is not going to be the format... I will live by the rules."

As he prepared for the debate, Mondale received more bad news from pollsters, when an ABC News-Washington Post survey made public Friday said Reagan was leading by 16 points nationwide.

Despite the latest poll, Mondale told campaign workers at his headquarters: "I wanted to announce something that needed to be announced: We're going to win."

He said the party was "as united as this Democratic Party has been for many, many years."

Because the American people are getting increasingly angry about what they see and the response of this leader... things are happening... that cry out for change if we're going to build our nation's future."

The ABC News-Washington Post poll of 11,000 registered voters interviewed nationwide by telephone between Sept. 22 and Oct. 2 showed Reagan leading 55 percent to 37 percent.

The margin of error was plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Reagan was ahead in 45 states and three others — Tennessee, West Virginia and Mondale's home state of Minnesota — were leaning toward the president. If Reagan won all 48 states, he would have 527 electoral votes, double the number necessary to win.

Mondale was only ahead in the District of Columbia, with Rhode Island and Hawaii leaning his way.

Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro was in New York and planned to spend the weekend and the early part of next week in intense preparations for her debate next Thursday with Vice President George Bush.

Robert Barnett, a Washington lawyer with close ties to Mondale, will play the role of Bush in Ms. Ferraro's debate preparations.

Highest temperature in the state Friday was Weiser with 76 degrees, while Dixie had the low of 25 degrees.

Light showers fell over the southeast Friday afternoon, with some thunder showers building over the East Central mountains. Burley picked up a trace of rain while Malad reported a light shower in the afternoon.

Winds were light in northern Idaho, and were in the 10 to 15 mph range in the south.

The extended outlook for southern Idaho shows dry and warm Monday through Wednesday. Highs 75 to 85, Lows 35 to 45.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Friday was 73 particles per cubic meter of air.

and said "we've gotten about as much employment growth as we're going to get for the next year or so."

In a telephone interview, Bluestone said that behind the overall improvement in the nation's jobless rates is "a question about the quality of the new jobs created. In terms of people's standard of living, he said, it would take three fast-food industry jobs to make up for the loss of one job" in heavy manufacturing.

In her Capitol Hill appearance, Ms. Norwood told the committee that only 40 percent of the 185 industries surveyed increased employment in September.

"This is the lowest percentage since the trough of the 1981-82 recession nearly two years ago," she said.

The September payroll expansion in the auto industry was less than usual, resulting in a net decline after adjustment for seasonal variation, and this added several allied industries, Ms. Norwood said.

She explained this was because new auto industry jobs, typically added in September as the model year changes, came in August this year as manufacturers "increased payrolls and built up inventories in anticipation of a strike by auto workers."

Jack O'Connell, chief economist for the National Association of Realtors, said "conditions in the labor markets are continuing to improve, but at a modest pace compared to the first six months of this year."

"If noted that the survey of business payrolls showed an addition of only 16,000 jobs, compared with 18,000 in August and an average of 350,000 a month from January through June.

In a report titled "Everybody Must Have Recovered Except Me," the Full Employment Action Council, a coalition of religious, civil rights and labor groups, maintained that the 7.4 percent overall civilian rate overestimated the strength of the labor market.

Referring to "the phantom unemployed," the group said the actual unemployment rate would be well over 13 percent if the government counted the discouraged and adjusted the jobless rate to reflect "some 3.5 million part-time employees."

Americans who held only part-time jobs in September were said to be the best they could find.

Homeless voters stir controversy

One of Philadelphia's homeless residents sits in loneliness

By LEE MITGANG
The Associated Press

They claim they live in soup kitchens, Salvation Army shelters, street corners, even under bridges or trees.

Now these homeless Americans are insisting on the right to a few seconds in the voting booth.

As registration deadlines approach for the Nov. 6 election, the growing ranks of the homeless are forcing state and local election officials to decide whether a citizen must have a conventional street address in order to vote. A recent federal study estimates the number of homeless at 250,000; advocates for the homeless put the figure at 2 million.

Partisan politics is adding to the push for homeless rights in some cities. In Philadelphia, Portland, Ore., Los Angeles and San Francisco, Democratic Party officials have been actively registering hundreds of homeless voters in the belief that most will vote for Walter Mondale and other Democrats.

Some election officials insist that granting the vote to persons with no established address is an invitation to fraud. In Rhode Island, a 1983 statute aimed at cutting down voter fraud requires proof of residence — effectively excluding that state's homeless from registering, except those who spend extended time in established shelters.

But civil liberties lawyers have argued, with increasing success in court, that denying the homeless the right to vote is unconstitutional.

"There is nothing in the constitution that says you have to own or rent property," said Jeffrey Fogel of the American Civil Liberties Union in New Jersey, a state with an estimated 12,000 to 20,000 homeless.

"The homeless cannot vote," countered Christine St. John, an election official in New Jersey. "You've got to have an address so that election officials know you live in New Jersey."

Chicago's estimated 25,000 homeless are up against a state law requiring persons registering to vote to produce two pieces of identification — one of which must have a home address on it. "So in no way, someone with no address whatsoever, there is no way they can register to vote," said Tom Leach, a spokesman for the Chicago Board of Election Commissioners.

On the other end of the spectrum, the District of Columbia Board of Election granted that city's estimated 5,000 to 10,000 homeless the right to register last June if they live in an identifiable location, even if it's a heating grate or doorway. Some 1,000 homeless, most of them using shelters as their address, have registered since then, according to Mitch Snyder, a Washington homeless advocate.

But election officials elsewhere seem less certain about homeless voting rights. Many cities and states allow the homeless to register if they can at least list a shelter, or, like, as an address. The tougher problem is street people who live under bridges, trees or on street corners and have no mailing address.

"What we attempt to establish is some kind of residency," said Don Perrin, superintendent of elections in King County which covers Seattle. "The interpretation is very broad. We have no alternative but to use the address they give us. The only alternative is to turn them down, and we're not inclined to do that."

In some places the question is being settled in court. On Friday, federal judge Mary Johnson Lowe was to rule whether a case begun in July to establish the rights of New York City's estimated 60,000 homeless should be given class-action status. Robert Hayes, an attorney for the homeless, said there is a slim chance the judge might postpone the election in New York state if she found those rights were being violated.

New York City and New York state election officials had agreed last month to allow the homeless living in shelters or welfare hotels to register. But they have resisted demands that street people be allowed to vote.

"A park bench or a grating or a bench in Grand Central Terminal is not an address," said Ben Dolan, executive director of New York City's Board of Election.

Four homeless Santa Barbara, Calif., men who list a 107-year-old fig tree as their address were told they could not vote, and are now seeking a state Supreme Court ruling.

Ethics panel meets for Ferraro case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee met behind closed doors Friday as part of its probe of whether Rep. Geraldine Ferraro violated a financial disclosure law in her yearly reports to Congress.

The panel members gave no sign that they were through with their investigation, nor was there any indication whether it would be done before next month's elections.

Ms. Ferraro, the Democratic vice presidential candidate, filed amended reports Tuesday for all six years she has served as a congresswoman from Queens, N.Y. She said "slippery errors" by her accountant had caused her to omit some details from the original forms.

Paul Kamenar, executive director of the Washington Legal Foundation, the conservative group that sparked the probe with a formal complaint, speculated that the fact that the committee did not make a public statement "means they apparently have not accepted her amended forms and are apparently continuing their investigation."

"It's an indication they were not ready to close the matter," he said. "These are blatant partisan political statements by Mr. Kamenar, designed to help President Reagan and hurt Congresswoman Ferraro as well as being highly inappropriate in light of the confidential nature of the proceeding," said a statement by the Mondale-Ferraro campaign.

"The Washington Legal Foundation's annual report for 1983 emphasizes 'its strong working relations with the administration' and that it, acts as legal adviser to the White House on 'critical legal issues,'" said the Mondale-Ferraro statement.

Rep. — Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, — the committee chairman, declined comment through an aide and barred reporters, photographers and camera crews from the hallway outside the room.

Debate arrangements keep candidates' aides occupied

By MAUREEN SANTINI
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Aides to President Reagan and Walter F. Mondale, intent on keeping each other from any unfair advantage in Sunday's debate, have been conducting behind-the-scenes negotiations for weeks on such issues as how to arrange the stage and what color the backdrop should be.

Just two days before the confrontation before an estimated television audience of 75 million, most of the issues had been settled, except for an announcement of which four reporters would pose questions.

By midafternoon on Friday, both sides had agreed on three of the four panelists, according to a Mondale aide, but no names had been announced.

"It's been a long and torturous process," he said of the week-long negotiations over panelists. "The other side has probably rejected two for every one we have not agreed to."

The League of Women Voters, which is sponsoring the debate, had submitted a list of perhaps 100 reporters to each side, which then had the right to strike anyone it did not wish to see on the panel.

During the 90-minute session, which begins at 7 p.m. MDT, Reagan and his Democratic challenger will field questions from behind identical podiums supplied by the White House. Reagan's will not bear the presidential seal, but will likely include an amplification device because of his hearing difficulty.

The president won his request for a blue curtain as backdrop on the stage at the Kentucky Center for the Arts. Mondale had wanted black.

Throughout the debate, they will stand eight feet apart, facing the audience, with the bank of reporters on stage left facing them and the moderator, Barbara Walters, on stage right.

Though some 2,000 people will watch the encounter in the audience, all of the arrangements were made with television in mind.

"Since the vast majority of people are going to be watching on television, you always do it with an eye to making sure your candidate looks as good as possible," said a White House aide, who commented only on conditions he not be identified.

"There are very subtle issues there," he said. "You need a competent television producer" to give advice. Both campaigns called in media consultants to help them decide what would look best.

Perhaps as much attention has been paid to such technical details as lighting and set designs as to the actual negotiations over debate terms. That's because both sides recall that Richard M. Nixon, perspiring and bearing deep circles under his eyes, provided a stark, unappealing visual contrast with a cool, crisp John F. Kennedy during their historic 1960 debate.

Additional high-intensity lighting will be installed to soften the appearance of the candidates' faces, according to a technician at the arts center. And a grey carpet will be installed on the stage, which is currently being used for a ballet.

Both Reagan and Mondale are expected to make separate visits to the stage on Sunday afternoon to familiarize themselves with the layout, check the microphones and pose for pictures.

At the outset of the negotiations, which began Aug. 31, the Mondale camp wanted six debates, a format allowing the candidates to question each other directly and a schedule that would begin the debates early and end the sessions very close to the Nov. 6 election.

The White House, led by Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, wanted two debates at most, a format allowing questions to be asked only by reporters, and a time schedule that concluded by Oct. 15 but didn't start too early.

"As they talked, the Mondale campaign agreed to just two presidential debates, plus a vice presidential debate, and the Reagan campaign agreed to have the debates last 90 minutes instead of their original proposal for 60 minutes.

By the fourth negotiating session, the aide said, the Mondale camp had agreed to a format under which a panel of four reporters would ask questions and the candidates would not be permitted to question each other. That format was used in past presidential debates, but Mondale had sought direct questioning, which benefited him during his long primary election struggle.

In return for Mondale's acceptance of the traditional format, the Reagan campaign agreed to hold the last debate on Oct. 21, six days later than it had originally sought.

"We felt the debate ought to be one element of the public's decision and not the final element" as it might have been if the last debate occurred close to the election, the aide said.

As for format, the aide said the White House feared that direct questioning by candidates could result in catfights, which it wanted to avoid.

Lawsuit over national debt dropped

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A man who filed a $5 trillion lawsuit against the federal government and its officials over the national debt says he is dropping the action because of "insufficient funds and knowledge of the legal processes involved."

Gregory C. Marsh, a city Water Department worker, notified the U.S. District Court in Dayton on Thursday that he's dropping the handwritten suit he filed in June.

The suit also sought to turn over the federal government to Marsh because he claimed laws were being made in violation of the Constitution and the federal deficit was unconstitutional.

Congress fails to meet adjournment target

By TOM RAUM
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The 98th Congress lost another battle with the clock Friday.

Members failed to meet their planned adjournment target, forcing lawmakers to return next week to resolve the nation's spending crisis instead of going home to campaign for re-election.

Major election-year differences between Democrats in Congress and President Reagan sent lawmakers into overtime.

"I've got plenty of time. I've already missed my weekly schedule," said assistant Senate Republican Leader Ted Stevens of Alaska. "And I've had just enough sleep to get mean."

One third of Senate seats — including Stevens' — are up for grabs in November, as are all 435 House slots.

Congress had intended to quit for the year on Friday, and the pace on Capitol Hill had become fast and furious as the final day approached.

But the failure of House-Senate negotiators to reach agreement on a $50 billion measure needed to keep most of the government solvent through the fiscal year that began on Monday made that impossible.

Instead, both the House and the Senate will return on Tuesday to take another stab at approving both the emergency spending bill, called "continuing resolution," and legislation to raise the national debt ceiling to prevent the government's borrowing power from lapsing.

Without passage of both bills, Congress cannot go home for the year.

Disagreements between the White House and congressional Democrats over Central America, defense spending and the measure's overall pricing kept House-Senate conferees from reaching accord on Friday.

Congressional leaders were less than optimistic over a quick resolution of the impasse next week, now that the momentum of a week of marathon work has been broken.

Some suggested that the first debate between President Reagan and his Democratic challenger, Walter Mondale, could have an impact on Congress' deliberations, depending on the outcome.

And there remained the possibility of a presidential veto of the spending bill, one that leaders agree could not be overridden.

As it became clear that members were not going to be able to get away as planned this weekend, partisan bickering intensified.

"It's been mean. People are at each other," said Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., one of the conferees.

And Rep. William E. Dannemeyer, R-Calif., maneuvered to block an effort to bring up a short-term bill that would guarantee there would be no further disruptions in government services through 6 p.m. Tuesday — unless Democratic leaders agreed to bring up a proposed constitutional amendment for a balanced budget favored by President Reagan.

However, the House and later the Senate approved and sent to President Reagan for his signature another stopgap bill so that government offices could remain open as usual into next week. This measure would expire at midnight Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Democrats continued to fume over Reagan's claim that House Democrats were to blame for the fiscal impasse and Thursday's partial government shutdown.

"The Republicans in the Senate have caused us to be here an extra week," declared House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass.

And Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said Reagan "either is acting on very bad advice or he is knowingly misstating the facts and misleading the American people."

In other congressional action on what was supposed to have been the 98th Congress' final day:

• The Senate rejected, 55-42, a resolution calling for a mutual and verifiable freeze of U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals.

• The House sent to President Reagan on a 308-98 vote legislation designed to assure the financial health of the nation's public radio and television stations through the end of the decade.

• Sponsors of controversial legislation to overhaul the nation's immigration laws vowed to make one last major effort next week to win approval of a compromise version.

• The Senate, managing to meet one deadline, sent to the president a bill that will permit the U.S. Army to sell military ammunition in states for use in snow avalanche control this winter.

Militant Moslems still have bombs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The militant Moslem group suspected of carrying out the fatal Sept. 20 truck-bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex in Beirut still possesses some of the explosives from Iran believed used in the attack, a senior Reagan administration official said Friday.

Administration and congressional sources, who insisted on anonymity, identified the group as Hezbollah, or the Party of God, considered one of the terrorist organizations that calls itself Islamic Jihad (Holy War) — the name used by those who claimed responsibility for the bombing.

The officials said the Party of God is based in Baalbek in the Bekaa valley in eastern Lebanon, but its leaders are believed to travel widely in the country and are seldom together, making possible retaliation difficult.

Administration officials reportedly have discussed the possibility of launching a reprisal raid against those responsible for the bombing, which killed 14 people, including two Americans. But the idea has met strong resistance.

particularly from the Pentagon's Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Military and intelligence advisers have told the White House that an air attack would likely kill innocent civilians and offer little hope of eliminating the group's leaders, officials said.

But one senior official said the administration is concerned about reports that the suspect organization still possesses a stockpile of explosives that could be used in a future attack.

He said the explosives were received from Iran and are believed part of the shipment used in the Sept. 20 attack.

The official added that U.S. evidence about the group's role in the attack is not yet conclusive. "We're not ready to go to court," he said in assessing the certainty of the evidence.

He also said the group's relationship to the radical Moslem fundamentalist government in Iran is not entirely clear. While U.S. intelligence is convinced Iran has supplied the group, it is less clear as to whether Iranian officials direct the group's activities, he said.

Administration to stand trial in ranch takeover lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court on Friday ordered the Reagan administration to stand trial in a suit by a U.S. citizen whose ranch in Honduras has been turned into a U.S. military training base.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, by a 6-4 vote, said that Temelescos Ramirez deserves his day in court to prove that his constitutional rights were violated by the occupation of his 14,000-acre cattle ranch.

Ramirez and co-investors in meat-packing and shrimp-packing operations on the ranch are seeking to force the U.S. government to give back the land and possibly compensate them for the takeover. They claim losses of $13 million.

Judge Malcolm R. Wilkey, in his opinion for the court, noted that Ramirez has charged that the establishment in 1983 of the military base is causing serious harm to Ramirez and his co-investors.

Over half of the ranch's 14,000 acres and nearly 90 percent of the year-round grazing land has been seized by soldiers," said Wilkey.

Ramirez charged that prime grazing land and fences have been bulldozed; the flow of water to the meat-packing plant has been interrupted; cattle have been shot by stray bullets; and ranch employees, "feared for their lives."

The Senate, managing to meet one deadline, sent to the president a bill that will permit the U.S. Army to sell military ammunition in states for use in snow avalanche control this winter.

Heckler hits medical indifference to women

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler outlined positive changes in America's health care in a speech Friday, but took the medical profession to task for its slow acceptance of women.

"My only reservation, my only quarrel with America's brilliant and winning track record, arises from its very late awakening to women as equal partners in the crusade against disease," Mrs. Heckler told a crowd of 400 at the University of Massachusetts Medical School.

The school honored Mrs. Heckler and four others with honorary doctor of science degrees at its fifth annual convocation.

"The presence of 43 women in your 1984 graduating class — not quite a majority (out of 100 students) — testifies to the fallen walls that did yield to the courage, the persistence and the insistence of women pioneers of American medicine," she said.

Mrs. Heckler, a former Massachusetts state representative, pointed out other unprecedented changes in the history of medicine, such as "an adequate supply of health professionals."

Hazardous waste bill approved by Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill tightening the federal law covering hazardous waste disposal was sent to President Reagan on Friday, making it the first major piece of anti-pollution legislation enacted by the 98th Congress.

The Senate, acting on vote vote and without debate, approved the bill and sent it to the White House. The House passed the bill earlier this week.

Sponsors say the bill will end exemptions and exceptions that allow millions of tons of hazardous waste to escape federal regulation each year.

Ending one of those exemptions will bring an estimated 130,000 small businesses under the regulation of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Another provision regulates the currently legal practice of blending hazardous waste with heating oil and selling it, sometimes without notice.

for home heating.

And a third provision will forbid blending hazardous waste with waste oil and using it for dust suppression, the practice that resulted in extensive dioxin contamination of Times Beach, Mo.

The changes are made in the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, the hazardous waste law first enacted in 1976 and now considered one of the nation's seven principal anti-pollution laws.

"Our current RCRA program is riddled with loopholes," said Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., in a statement submitted to the Senate. "That is why this bill is so important."

The original law attempted to control hazardous wastes by dictating a "cradle-to-grave" tracking system to assure that hazardous wastes are properly handled and safely disposed of.

'Trailside Killer' faces death sentence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury on Friday urged a judge to sentence convicted "Trailside Killer" David Carpenter to death in the gas chamber for the murders of two women on hiking trails among California's redwood trees.

Carpenter, 54, was convicted by another jury last July of murdering Ellen Marie Hansen and Heather Seaggs, both 20, in separate 1981 attacks in Santa Cruz County and of attempted murder on Ms. Hansen's companion Steven Haeberl, then 20.

The sligh, balding Carpenter showed no emotion as the verdict was read. Formal sentencing was set for Nov. 2.

DAVID CARPENTER
Convicted for two murders.

The same sentence was read in the death of Ms. Seaggs, and Superior Court Judge Dion Morrow praised the eight women and four men of the jury who began deliberating Sept. 27. "I know how seriously each of you has undertaken your responsibility in this very tragic situation," Morrow said. "You've done remarkably well. You've done exactly as you've been asked to do."

Mary Seaggs, mother of Ms. Seaggs, said she felt "just mixed emotions, not any triumph" after the verdict.

"I hope the state will follow through with the will of the people," she said. She complimented the penalty-phase panel as "a good jury" and Santa Cruz County District Attorney Arthur Danner as "a good man."

As she spoke, Marilyn Hansen, mother of the other victim, walked up, and the two embraced in a long hug before they turned to face reporters together.

"I don't know how the jury could vote otherwise," Mrs. Hansen said. Asked Carpenter's reaction, deense attorney Larry Biggam said: "I don't think he was surprised."

"I respect their verdict. I'm just disappointed," Biggam said, adding he would appeal.

Jury foreman LaBlanche Cowart said the panel's first vote on the two murder counts, it had decided 10-2 and 11-1 in favor of death.

"It was very difficult because this was someone's life we were dealing with," Mrs. Cowart.

Biggam had contended that Carpenter should be spared the gas chamber because he had suffered abuse as a speech-impaired child and was emotionally disturbed as a result. Ms. Seaggs' body was found on a hiking trail in Big Basin State Park in May 1981, about three weeks after she disappeared. Ms. Hansen, a University of California at Davis student, was killed in March 1981 in Henry Cowell Redwoods State Park.

De Lorean's estranged wife files for divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cristina Ferrar De Lorean, who stood by her automaker husband, John Z. De Lorean, through a five-month cocaine conspiracy trial, filed for divorce Friday, less than two months after his acquittal.

"It's regrettable," said De Lorean's attorney, Howard Weltzman. "He's sorry it had to happen. He believes, like all of us do, that it is all a result of what the government has put the two of them through."

"He knows the pressures she's been going through," Weltzman said. "Obviously, he regrets it."

De Lorean, 59, is living at the West Los Angeles home of his wife's mother, Weltzman said. Mrs. De Lorean, 34, is living at a separate residence nearby.

In her divorce petition, filed by attorney Jerome Goldberg, the model and TV hostess sought to dissolve the couple's 11-year marriage on grounds of irreconcilable differences.

She sought custody of their two children, Zachary, 12, and Kathryn, 6, with visitation rights to be granted to De Lorean. She also asked for child support from her onetime millionaire husband, whose assets have been tied up by the financial collapse of the Northern Ireland auto company that built his sleek, gull-winged sports car.

De Lorean is currently "trying to resolve the bankruptcy matter" and wrap up "loose ends" of a Detroit investigation of his finances, Weltzman said.

Mrs. De Lorean sought a share of the community property accumulated by the couple before Sept. 13, the date of their separation. She also sought restoration of her maiden name of Ferrar, which she now uses on her daily TV show, "AM Los Angeles."

She launched her new TV career with weeks after De Lorean was acquitted Aug. 16 by a jury that suggested he had been entrapped by government dirty tricks.

Mrs. De Lorean, who was her husband's most avid supporter during his trial, wept at the verdict, and the couple embraced in tears.

The space shuttle Challenger rises on a column of smoke

Space shuttle goes up again

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Rising on twin columns of fire that rivaled the sunrise, Challenger began an eight-day Earth observation flight Friday with the largest space crew ever.

The spectacular liftoff finally put America's space shuttle program on a launch-a-month schedule.

The astronauts were nearly three hours late, however, in their first major task of the day, lifting a 5,000-pound satellite out of the shuttle's cargo bay with the robot arm and releasing it into its own orbit.

First, the satellite's folded solar panels, which produce electricity to run its instruments, were locked to frozen latches. The solution was to turn the latches toward the sun for a few minutes. By the time they thawed, the opportunity to release the $40 million Earth Radiation Budget Satellite was gone and deployment was scheduled one orbit later.

But then, ground controllers had trouble sending commands to the satellite's spherical antenna and the release of the satellite was put off for another 90 minutes.

That problem, too, was solved and the satellite was sent off on its own so gently that mission control had no need to fire its small jets for stabilization.

"We aim to please," said Sally Ride, who was controlling the arm from Challenger's cabin.

The satellite will help scientists better understand and predict climate and weather. It will measure how much energy Earth receives from the sun and how much it radiates back into space, an energy exchange that must balance precisely or the world would gradually grow hotter or colder.

The liftoff, just before sunup at 5:03 a.m. MDT, was the 13th for a shuttle and it may have been the most beautiful of all. The ship, spewing fire from its two rocket boosters, cut through a low cloud layer into a just-brightening sky with the rising sun illuminating its smoke trail.

"If you thought that launch was spectacular from your standpoint, you should have seen it from ours," commander Robert Crippen said.

Challenger could be seen 160 miles south in Miami and 150 miles north in Jacksonville as it headed into the ocean on a northeast path up the East Coast of the United States.

"We're off and running on a launch a month," said launch director Bob Steek.

The ship suffered minor damage to its protective tiles and blankets in the violent climb to its 219-mile altitude, and one of the 41 small steering jets failed, but Crippen reported: "The vehicle looks in good clean shape to us."

Engineers studied television pictures beamed down from the spacecraft showing a 3-foot-long strip of insulating blanket missing from the curved surface of one maneuvering engine and two tiles coming unstuck elsewhere.

Mission Control told Crippen the worst that might happen is some charring, where insulation is missing when Challenger returns to Earth next week and "we're very confident there will be no impact to entry and no injury."

No spacecraft, American or Soviet, ever held more than six people. Challenger has seven, including two women — Ms. Ride and Kathy Sullivan. It is also an international crew. Marc Garneau is a physicist from Canada and Paul Scully-Power, a civilian oceanographer, is a naturalized U.S. citizen who was born in Australia.

Fair director indicted for kickback try

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A former director of marketing for the world's fair was indicted by a federal grand jury Friday on a charge of operating a kickback scheme in the sale of fair souvenirs.

Frank Kennedy, 51, who now lives in Valencia, Calif., was charged with devising a scheme to defraud the fair by "depriving it of the right to have its affairs conducted free from kickbacks, bribes, payoffs, corruption and conflict of interest."

Also indicted were Gary Kennedy, 26, of New Orleans, and Charles Wilton Burris, 34, of Hattiesburg, Miss.

Gary Kennedy is Frank Kennedy's son. He was chief executive officer of East Kendall Co. Inc., solely owned by Frank Kennedy.

The indictment said East Kendall was the company which received the payments described as kickbacks from companies seeking licenses from the world's fair, which is scheduled to close next month and has been losing money because of low attendance.

"What we have here is a kickback scheme," said U.S. Attorney John Volz. "Frank Kennedy was very influential in who was going to get world's fair logo business. He used his position to influence the awarding of licenses."

Volz said the world's fair was the victim because Kennedy's operations were concealed from other fair officials.

Kennedy was director of marketing from July 6, 1982, to March 1, 1984. The fair opened May 11, 1984, and is scheduled to close on Nov. 11.

Texas considers prisoner swap

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Officials of the Texas Department of Corrections are considering a plan to swap prison troublemakers with other states to break up inmate gangs which are blamed in part for an explosion of prison violence, Gov. Mark White said.

Under the plan, Texas would be obliged to accept prisoners just as likely to create trouble as the ones shipped out, White said Thursday.

Prison Director Ray Proctor supports the swapping plan and intends to seek approval for it when the state Legislature convenes in January, said corrections department spokesman Phil Guthrie in Huntsville.

Seventeen Texas prison inmates have been slain this year, and at least 294 stabbings have been reported, officials say.

When a man is exposed to extremely cold weather, his toes turn white. When a woman is exposed to the same cold weather, her fingertips turn white. Why this difference? Medical researchers say they don't know yet. Might mention these are not the same medical researchers who are still trying to figure out why more men than women are left-handed.

Death-row inmate switches with twin

By BRUCE SCHREINER
The Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — A death-row inmate swapped places with his identical twin — also a prisoner at the state penitentiary — but a sharp-eyed supervisor spotted the switch because one weighs more than the other.

Authorities said they didn't know whether the switch was a prank or part of an escape attempt. Carey Dean Moore, sentenced to death in the electric chair for murdering two Omaha cab drivers in August 1979, and David Moore, convicted of theft, traded clothes and jobs for a few hours Wednesday until food service manager Bob Austin noticed the change.

Carey Dean was working David's shift at the prison kitchen, while David was sitting in Carey Dean's cell on death row.

Austin, an eight-year employee at the maximum-security state penitentiary, said he noticed the man working in his kitchen was heavier than Carey Dean.

"Unless you saw them every day, you couldn't tell them apart," Austin said. "They're awfully close, but Carey Dean is probably 10 to 15 pounds heavier and he's got a ruddier complexion."

The switch occurred when the brothers requested a meeting to discuss family matters, a request which was granted because it was not unusual, said John Dahm, assistant director of the state corrections department.

Guards took Carey Dean from death row and David from the general prison population to meet in a conference room. During the private meeting, the two men apparently changed clothes. Guards unknowingly escorted David back to his brother's death row cell.

Prison officials were questioning the 27-year-old brothers to determine if the switch was part of an escape plot, Dahm said.

"Maybe Carey Dean wanted to get out of death row for awhile because it's pretty restrictive," Dahm said. "Maybe he wanted to get out for awhile to break the boredom of death row and do something like pitch horseshoes."

Dahm said neither brother has admitted to planning an escape, but "that's the obvious conclusion."

"If Carey Dean had hit the fence or made some overt move to get out, then it would be more clear-cut," Dahm said.

The brothers might simply have been playing a prank, but "both have been in trouble often with the law and I don't think they are considered funny or pranksters," Dahm said.

He added that guards found no escape tools or getaway vehicles outside prison walls.

Austin said another clue that allowed him to spot the switch was that Carey Dean asked another inmate where to place a pan that had been dried.

"David would have known where to put the pan," Austin said. "But I probably wouldn't have picked it up if we hadn't had the other clues."

Carey was "pretty cool" during his stay in the kitchen, Austin said.

"He seemed a little nervous... but he was a little lost on what to do," he said. "But it was not detectable unless you watched him closely, and we have so many people that we can't usually do that. For a short time, he pulled it off pretty good."

Austin said Carey Dean never appeared to be contemplating an escape.

Bachelor, at age 101, to tie knot

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — One year into his second century, Artur Jonsson is about to try something new — marriage.

Jonsson spend his first 101 years single — mostly farming and dealing in horses near the town of Askersund, about 110 miles southwest of Stockholm. However, he began to feel his age earlier this year and advertised for a housekeeper, the newspaper Aftonbladet said today.

He found 55-year-old Ingrid Engdal, who moved in this spring to take care of Jonsson and became his fiancée this week, the newspaper said.

"I'd planned to stay for a couple of weeks, but then love intervened," she was quoted as saying.

Jonsson, who celebrated the engagement with his fiancée's four grown children, was quoted as saying: "This is the best old-age care you can get."

"After 100 years as a bachelor I've got a lot to catch up on," the newspaper quoted him as saying, and then advising: "Never say never."

Syria to endorse U.S. mediation in Lebanon

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Syria's foreign minister met with Secretary of State George P. Shultz on Friday and then said Syria would endorse a U.S. mediation role aimed solely at removing Israeli forces from Lebanon.

Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa stressed any such U.S. initiative should have some kind of U.N. framework and a resulting agreement should place no conditions on Lebanon.

Sharaa met with Shultz for 45 minutes in a hotel across from U.N. headquarters. Afterward, the Syrian said the two discussed "the responsibility and the role — the contribution — of the U.S.A. to help Lebanon in ridding itself from the Israeli occupation."

A senior U.S. official who briefed reporters said Shultz told Sharaa the same thing he told Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami three days earlier: Although the United States was "prepared to help in constructive efforts" it "does not see that the moment has come to mediate" and "everybody's got to be more flexible."

The official, who spoke on condition that he not be identified, said Sharaa had not mentioned a U.N. framework in discussing an Israeli withdrawal.

He added there was nothing in the talks to suggest that "anyone moved positions a great deal."

During the meeting in Shultz' hotel suite, the secretary expressed concern about terrorism.

U.S. installations had been a "big target," and spoke of the "kind of forcefulness we and other countries must take in combatting it," the official said.

Sharaa "made clear that the Syrian government deplored terrorism" and was ready to help in trying to locate three Americans and a Saudi diplomat abducted in Lebanon, the official added.

Israelis observe Yom Kippur fast

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel ground to a halt Friday as people began the Yom Kippur fast to atone for their sins, taking time to reflect on the same date 11 years ago when Arab armies attacked on Judaism's holiest day.

The Jewish calendar date of Yom Kippur falls on Oct. 6 this year for the first time since "the 1973 war," a coincidence that stimulated bitter memories of the war which taught Israelis their army was not invincible.

The Yom Kippur fast began at 5 p.m. and will end at 6 p.m. Saturday.

East Germans ask asylum in Prague

BONN, West Germany (AP) — At least 80 East Germans seeking political asylum are holed up in the closed West German Embassy in Czechoslovakia amid tough negotiations with Communist authorities over their future, government officials said Friday.

Diplomatic sources in Prague, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there were about 100 refugees inside the embassy, many of them suffering from colds. More than 20 of the refugees are children, the West German government said.

The East German government built the Berlin Wall in 1961 to block massive emigration of East Germans to the West. And although about 1,000 East Germans have been allowed to leave each month recently, East Germany discourages emigration. Boenisch said a lasting solution to the problem can only come through a move by East Germany to liberalize its regulations governing travel and emigration.

The embassy is so crowded that it was forced to close its doors to the public Thursday night, and "cannot reopen until the dilemma is resolved," he said.

Boenisch did not say whether any breakthrough was expected in what he indicated were tough negotiations between the Bonn government and Communist officials in East Berlin.

The East German Foreign Ministry refused comment on the situation, which went unreported in the official East German media.

Boenisch said East German authorities indicated they were willing to let those seeking asylum return home without punishment, but would not grant them exit visas.

Pope assails Italy's code of underworld

PAOLA, Italy (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Friday denounced the Italian crime underworld's code of silence as a practice that promotes "squalid complicity dictated by fear."

John Paul's words came in a speech on the first day of a journey to the poverty-ridden Calabria region at the southern tip of the Italian peninsula. The area, which has some of the highest unemployment in Western Europe, has been plagued by an underworld organization known as the 'Ndrangheta.

The pope delivered the speech in this Tyrrhenian seacoast city as Italian lawmen continued to reap the fruits of convictions of Sicilian mobster Tommaso Buscetta, one of the few top crime figures to break the code that has protected mobsters and stymied investigators.

Buscetta's dramatic rupture of the code of silence known as "omertà" has been hailed as a crime-fighting breakthrough by government officials in Rome and

Washington, D.C. Scores of organized crime suspects have been arrested in the past week, and hundreds of arrest warrants have been issued.

The pontiff urged several thousand people gathered in Paola's main square to "have the courage to wipe out omertà, which blinds so many people in a type of squalid complicity dictated by fear."

He added that if omertà is ended and if Calabrians become more "open and sincere" among themselves, "then relations among families will improve, the tragic chain of vendettas will be broken, peaceful co-existence will flourish."

John Paul also called for an end to "the plague of kidnappings, violence and other terrible evils" in today's society. At his various stops, loudspeakers mounted on windows and rooftops belted the pope's message into nearby narrow streets and squares, where mothers milled about with their young children.

Marcos claims prelate is backing revolution

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos accused the nation's Roman Catholic prelate Friday of encouraging revolution and said he would deal sternly with any new demonstrations.

Cardinal Jaime Sin replied that he merely is doing his duty and protesting the use of violence against peaceful demonstrations.

Jesus said in a nationwide radio television address that by urging community leaders to join a demonstration set for Sunday, Sin is "fanning the flames of rebellion" and violating the constitutionally-mandated separation of church and state.

"Of late we have heard the good name Cardinal Sin, the highest prelate of our church, the church to which I belong, has come out with statements... trying to destabilize the government," Marcos said.

"He would encourage killing, perhaps rebellion in the sense that it would be bloody and violent," Marcos said, adding he was appealing to the 56-year-old archbishop of Manila "not to wreck our country."

Sin issued a statement denying he has violated the principle of separation of church and state. He said he has a "duty" to speak out on the morality of government actions.

"It is my opinion that using violence on peaceful demonstrators and killing them is immoral, and I have a duty to try and stop it," Sin's statement said.

Sunday's demonstration has been called to protest military and police violence at recent anti-government demonstrations. One man was killed and dozens were injured Sept. 27 when troops used guns, clubs and tear gas to disperse 3,000 protesters preparing to march to Marcos' palace.

Salvadoran switches prisoners

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Salvadoran leftist leaders said Friday the biggest prisoner exchange of the five-year-old civil war is "virtually complete," involving 64 members of the guerrilla forces and eight army officers.

"All the negotiations were conducted and achieved before the first of June," said Ruben Zamora, one of seven members of the political-diplomatic commission maintained by Salvadoran guerrillas.

tions took place after moderate President Jose Napoleon Duarte took office June 1.

Zamora said the arrangement calls for evacuation of 60 of the guerrillas "disabled veterans" from rebel-held territory to other countries, the release of four guerrilla commanders from government jails and the release of eight army officers held by guerrillas.

Zamora said the evacuation was almost complete. The four guerrilla commanders and four of the army officers were said to have been exchanged Sept. 21, with four officers remaining to be released, apparently at the completion of the evacuation.

Region employment attains all-time high

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — More people were working in the Magic Valley last month than ever before, the Idaho Department of Employment reported Friday.

"Total employment hit an all-time high of 37,393," said Lon McDonald, state job-force analyst based in Twin Falls.

Meanwhile, the opposite side of the picture — the unemployment rate — also showed improvement. The seasonally adjusted rate for Twin Falls, Gooding and Jerome counties officially was pegged at 5.8 percent last month, its lowest point since December 1981.

The Magic Valley's unemployment report was brighter than that for the rest of the state. The department announced that unemployment in Idaho nudged up to 6.3 percent after having held at 6.2 percent throughout much of the summer.

Employment director Scott McDonald blamed the slight increase on high joblessness in the construction and timber industries. "We didn't have any major layoffs, but those two sectors didn't do what they usually do for us," McDonald said.

In the Magic Valley, the harvest was under way and food processors were canning and freezing crops coming out of the fields last month, putting many people to work. "September is the month when Magic Valley residents typically have the least difficulty finding employment," said Lon McDonald. "This September has been exceptionally good."

The department estimated 237 more people at work than in the previous record month, which was September 1982. Job Service of Idaho, a branch of the department, also has been very busy placing people in jobs in the Magic Valley, he said.

The overall labor force also has grown to 39,141, and 1,748 people are out of work, McDonald said. October also is expected to be a high-employment month, he said.

Statewide, agriculture also was creating new jobs. But the timber and construction industries still could not join the general recovery.

Unemployment in the Panhandle, which is greatly affected by the forestry industry, was the state's high at 9 percent. In the Canyon County area, unemployment was at 7.9 percent, and the Pocatello area posted a 2 percentage point increase to 6.8 percent.

Unemployment in Idaho Falls plummeted 5 percentage point from August to a low 4.6 percent. Lewiston's rate was at 5.1 percent. The Boise area rose slightly from August, but only to 4.7 percent.

All the rates reported for areas in the state had been significantly higher a year ago.

Idaho has shown only a 5 percentage point range in unemployment so far during 1984. After opening the year with a 5.9 percent unemployment rate, the rate moved higher through the winter and spring to peak at 6.4 percent. Since then, the jobless level has hovered around the 6.2 percent level. Department director McDonald said he does not see any indication of significant fluctuations through the rest of the year.

Positions dominate at forum

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Three Magic Valley senate candidates were quick to stake out their ideological turf Friday when area reporters quizzed them on issues ranging from the quality of Idaho's leaders to the prospects of economic growth to the conduct of each others' campaigns. But Republican Larry Anderson, Independent Bill Chisholm and Democrat Nick Nicholson — all candidates for the eight-county Magic Valley floating legislative district — actually appeared to begin their positioning before the questioning began.

In his opening statement, Nicholson cast himself as the middle-of-the-road candidate among the three, and he struck out at Anderson for his association and alliance with Rep. George Hansen.

Anderson is a former Hansen staff worker who co-wrote Hansen's book "To Harass Our People." Nicholson called the book "a literary travesty" and suggested that Anderson's name does not appear on the second edition of the book because of the political liabilities that accrue from associations with the felon congressman.

Nicholson said Anderson has adopted Hansen's "political tactic of attacking" in fund raising appeals and in statements to reporters.

Anderson had to wait until his closing statement to respond, saying only: "Where I stand is clear. What I believe is clear. I don't desert my friends."

But even before the candidates spoke, positioning appeared to be occurring. Anderson was first to arrive at the Sawtooth Press Club headliner lunch and chose a seat conspicuously far to the right of center at the head table.

Chisholm, a former Democrat, best known locally as an environmental and peace activist, chose a seat on the far left and Nicholson sat just left of center.

The positions proved more than just a convenient location for seating. More often than not the candidates' positions proved more than just a convenient location for seating.

Reading teachers consider various approaches

By SARAH MURPHY
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Reading teachers from all over the state of Idaho came away from a conference Thursday and Friday agreeing there is no one single approach to teaching reading.

The teachers — 1,000 of them — met at the Burley Junior High School for the annual state reading conference.

Robert Pehrsson, associate professor and reading specialist at Idaho State University, said one basic concept seemed to be the theme of the meetings.

"We are agreeing more and more that there are as many answers to the questions about the teaching of reading as there are kids who need the instruction," said Pehrsson, who conducted one of the workshop sessions.

"We've got to get away from narrow strategies — there is no one single approach to the teaching of reading. We need to present a balanced diet of reading strategies to our students," Pehrsson said.

"We can compare the teaching of reading to driving a car. An automobile has high and low gears and you shift the gears when it is appropriate to shift," said Pehrsson, illustrating the point that all students don't learn at the same speed and need individualized instruction. Pehrsson says for a long time the teaching of reading was a controversial subject, one which resulted in a dichotomy in the reading instruction field. There were those who advocated phonics and those who believed that language experience was the only answer.

"As Dr. George Canney (associate professor, University of Idaho) says, 'Teaching reading is like offering a kid a whole box of candy. You have to let him choose his own piece of candy from it.' That is a statement which makes sense to me," said Pehrsson.

"In other words, no one program that is narrow in perspective is going to work for every student. Phonics alone is not the answer; it is only part of the answer," added Pehrsson.

Pehrsson teaches that different brains seem to process information in different ways and these styles seem to be related to reading success or failure.

"When we teach narrow strategies, we activate only narrow parts of the brain," Pehrsson explains. "Wide strategies activate wider areas of the brain."

"For instance, Warnecke's area, the part of the brain which deals with comprehension of material being read, is activated by the use of various strategies which deal with the skill of reading comprehension, but it is not activated by the use of only one isolated strategy," he says.

Pehrsson says there are many excellent programs available to reading instructors at all levels. He says it is up to the individual teachers to choose which works best for them and for their students.

"The main thing to remember is to realize that success in reading is developed by reinforcing the student's strengths first, then to develop his weaker areas after he has succeeded in reading via his strengths," says Pehrsson who emphasized different students have different strengths.

The conference Burley coordinator was Kathryn Bryan, a reading teacher at Burley Junior High School.

Stuffed cat scores away pesky birds

TWIN FALLS — Scott Williams first found the restaurant he is standing in this city's busy building downtown.

But he has had no trouble because worker Curt Chang brought Leopold, also known as Spot, to work.

Spot is an overwinter leopard, somewhat the worse for wear at the hands of Chugg's daughters — who are scaring the feathers off the downtown blues.

Williams says that while he has had the upstairs windows during the finishing, he would come to work in the morning to find catheads hanging, trying to beat their way out of the building.

He has the windows back in now, but so many of them can't be closed, he has committed to the city to have the dropped over and the city will keep the windows closed.

Besides that, Spot is continuing to keep the place clean, Williams says.

"You walk along in front of some stores in downtown, you had better be careful if you say, 'This place, don't get me wrong, it's not a little bit. But we have the man.'"

Williams hopes to have the restaurant open by Thanksgiving and will give Spot, or a replacement, a building.

Leopold the leopard has been drawing several double-takes from passersby since he appeared in the upstairs windows of the old City Drug building.

Woman dies, leaves bill to county

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls County indigent has died, leaving bills of more than $200,000 for medical services.

County commissioners have declined to pay one bill for now, saying they first want to investigate the $181,000 claim from the University of Utah Health Sciences Center. That claim alone is equal to nearly a third of the $550,000 budgeted by the county this year to pay for indigent medical care.

They have already turned down a claim from the Twin Falls Clinic and another for about $21,000 because it was submitted past both the 30-day time limit and the additional 15-day extension sometimes granted.

The woman was not lucid when brought to the Twin Falls hospital in early August, but physicians determined from X-rays that the woman was pregnant.

The baby was delivered and taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center since the private hospital has no nursery. MVRMC did not submit an indigent claim for the baby.

The mother was taken to the intensive care unit of the Health Sciences Center on Aug. 7 since no regional Idaho hospitals are equipped to give the acute care she needed. She remained "in critical condition with multi-system problems" much of the time until her death a week ago, according to Ken Johnson, a hospital spokesman.

Rick Fullmer, the comptroller of the Health Sciences Center, notified county commissioners Friday of the final bill. He says the medical expenses incurred by the patient were not unusual for someone in the intensive care unit.

Commissioner Judy Felton says the commissioners want to investigate the bill and see if there are other public agencies that may be obligated to pick up part of the tab, possibly because of the agencies' links with the woman's estranged husband.

Felton declined to name the agencies she was considering, saying their responsibility for the bill was still being investigated.

The hospital's lawyer has requested a hearing to discuss payment of the bill. He and the county commissioners have not yet agreed upon a date, Felton says.

Rural cooperatives questioning area energy conservation plan

By MARK WARBIS
The Associated Press

BOISE — Representatives of rural electric cooperatives in Idaho say an energy conservation plan being considered for the region is "imprudent, uneconomical and probably illegal."

Officials for the Idaho Cooperative Utilities Association told members of the Northwest Power Planning Council at a hearing in Boise Friday that they oppose the council's model conservation standards.

The program calls for imposing a 10-percent surcharge on electricity that utilities purchase from the federal Bonneville Power Administration if they fail to comply with tougher, more energy efficient building codes established by the council by Jan. 1, 1986. The plan would allow utilities to avoid the surcharge by implementing comparable energy savings programs.

But Chuck Dawsey, engineering manager for Fall River Electric Cooperative in Ashton, said Idaho's rural electric cooperatives would prefer a carrot to a stick.

He recommended the council delay action on a surcharge until it reviews proposed exemption criteria being developed by some rural utilities.

"Our concept would be to provide incentives rather than surcharges to promote a program," Dawsey said. "We have found that members of our cooperatives are considerably more receptive to incentives than penalties."

relative positions at the table reflected their relative positions on the issues discussed during the program.

"I favor right to work as part of an overall plan to promote industrial activity in the state," Anderson responded when asked how the state could best foster economic growth. "You have to sell the state. You have to sell the quality of life," Anderson said. The 30-year-old Twin Falls native said the state should promote the level of workmanship available in the state and should promote its tourism opportunities to motorists who are traveling through Idaho.

Democrat Nicholson sided with Gov. John Evans on the issue of promoting economic growth and expanding the state's agricultural economic base. He chided the Republican-controlled Legislature for attracting new industry to the state. Nicholson said that to foster continued economic growth also requires a careful look at the state's overall tax structure, which he referred to as a "hand-aid structure" resulting from short-term Republican solutions to revenue shortfalls.

Chisholm questioned the need for diversifying the state's agricultural economic base.

"There is a lot of talk about increasing our industrial base. People go ga-ga about Silicon Valley," he said. "I'm not going to go out and put up neon signs saying everybody come to Idaho."

The agricultural base is the base to making Idaho a state that is not to be found for Idaho agriculturists. Chisholm also said the state needs to develop sound energy policies to support existing commerce.

When asked to evaluate Idaho's elected leaders, Chisholm assigned letter grades. Speaker of the House Tom Silvers received an "F" for being "muleheaded." Senate President Pro-Tem Jim Risch failed better, a "D" for being "a little looser (and) a little more open-minded."

Gov. John Evans received a "B" from Chisholm because he "has the Legislature stacked" against him (but) doesn't take strong enough stands on environmental issues.

Anderson appeared the most conciliatory of the candidates on the subject. He declined to give letter grades, but "in evaluating" Evans as "not totally out of touch with the state" he said the governor falls to "take the opportunity to work with the Legislature... (and) is sort of veto happy."

Anderson delivered accolades upon Risch and said "if we had Tom Silvers in place of Tip O'Neill in Washington we'd have a lot fewer problems."

Nicholson, however, criticized Silvers' battles with teachers' associations and called him an "obstructionist." Nicholson predicted Silvers will not be elected to a second term as Speaker of the House of Representatives and suggested that Silvers is in danger of losing his house seat to Democrat Lee Wilson.

Nicholson said Risch and Silvers pulled last year against providing junior colleges with any state support. But the Twin Falls High School teacher and debate coach had only raves for Evans. In grading Evans an A+, Nicholson said the governor operates under extreme difficulties and is forced to veto "abominable legislation" passed for political mileage.

State Sen. Laird Noe, R-Kimberly, chairman of the Senate's Resources and Environment Committee, told council members Idaho utilities would be "reluctant to adopt a federal stick or a regional-stick" to enforce energy conservation standards.

He said regional energy surplus and the danger of pollution trapped in "highly constructed" homes and offices should convince the council to take a second look at the need for the model conservation standards.

Roy Elguren, general counsel for ICAU, told council members Robert Saxvik and W. Larry Mills that implementing the conservation standards presents problems of legal authority and enforcement. He said Idaho law puts the responsibility for enforcement of building codes on local governments, which possess police powers.

Electric cooperatives, as private entities, lack those powers, and so probably could not force their customers to adopt the building standards, Elguren said.

He said trying to enforce the measures by refusing electric service to individuals or businesses not meeting the standards also could lead to legal problems.

Elguren said although Idaho cooperatives "wholeheartedly endorse" conservation measures, the EPA surcharge would cause "quite astronomical" rate hikes for rural consumers.

He said a study of the economic impact of the surcharge on four of the association's cooperatives shows they would have to raise rates between 4 percent and 8.2 percent to meet the penalty.

Dawsey said such a rate increase would be "even more frightening" if it involved utilities with primarily irrigation customers, to which the building efficiency standards would not be directly applicable.

But Tracy, assistant manager of Raft River Rural Electric Cooperative in Malta, said that would include about 80 percent of his customers.

The Idaho Cooperative Utilities Association represents 13 rural electric cooperatives with some 100,000 customers.

The Boise hearing was the last in a series of public meetings scheduled in the region. The planning council will accept comments on the conservation standards and the proposed surcharge through next Friday.

Book sees cracks in Mormonism's foundations

By VERN ANDERSON Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Mormonism is the nation's fastest-growing religion but faces a "bleak and difficult future" despite its wealth and expanding influence, say the authors of a new book that has drawn criticism from a Mormon Church official.

Two authors say that Ezra Taft Benson may take the LDS Church down a conservative path

Since publication less than a month ago, the first printing of 6,000 copies has sold briskly in the West and is nearly exhausted, while libraries in Salt Lake City report long waiting lists.

While acknowledging the book "makes interesting reading," Lindsay said it "widely misses the mark," because the authors chose to ignore the essentially spiritual nature of the church "and its mission to draw man closer to God."

"We didn't set out to write a book about the spiritual side of the church," Wiley said in a telephone interview from San Francisco, "but how the church interacts with the rest of the world."

But mere numbers don't account for Mormonism's growing political and economic influence. More important, the authors maintain, are the portents of its all-male hierarchy, an expanding bureaucracy to do its bidding and the premium placed on strict obedience to what is an all-encompassing way of life.

Mormonism — can — become — in effect, America's dominant religion, a religion that is at once a civil society and a theocratic empire," the authors write.

But they see problems now and for the future. Gottlieb and Wiley believe that under the death of ailing church President Spencer W. Kimball, 83, his designated successor, former U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson, could take the church down a far more authoritarian and politically conservative path.

A Benson presidency, they maintain, would dangerously heighten existing political and doctrinal tensions within the hierarchy and membership at large, and further alienate those female members unhappy with subservient roles in the church infrastructure.

Moreover, and apart from any change in leadership, the authors see a tug-of-war being waged between Mormons at home and abroad, a struggle made more unpredictable by the unstable political atmosphere in Latin America, where, they claim, conservative church authorities have tilted toward right-wing regimes.

It is, no matter who the Prophet, a bleak and difficult future," wrote Gottlieb and Wiley.

Lindsay, in an interview, said such dire forecasts have been common since Mormonism's founder, Joseph Smith, was assassinated in 1844.

GOODING — The Rev. Stephen Manley of Marion, Ind., will conduct revival services at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at the Church of the Nazarene at Sixth and Idaho in Gooding. Bob and Becky Gray, song evangelists, will perform during the four-day event which will conclude at a service at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 14.

TWIN FALLS — David Spencer will conduct a series of discussions on "The Heritage of Post-Biblical Jewish Thought" beginning at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the periodicals room at the Twin Falls Public Library. The sessions are correlated with the airings of the public broadcast documentaries "Heritage: Civilization and the Jews." For more information, inquire at the library or call 733-2964.

Specialists look at how to reunite Christianity, education

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — A panel of Christian specialists, deploring the general blackout on religion in the public schools, offers mixed answers on what could be done about it.

While some say restoration of moments of prayer in public schools would help, others contend that the main need is for quality teachers who exemplify high standards and uphold discipline.

Joyce Vedral, an English teacher in a New York high school who teaches a popular course on the Bible as literature, contends that such courses are a legal and effective way of instilling moral values in students.

preach. But God reveals himself, it happens in class." The forum on public education and Christianity was sponsored by the interdenominational monthly Christian Herald, one of America's oldest continuously published periodicals, begun in 1878.

Participants included some top conservative and mainline church experts. Among them were Lynn Buzzard of Chicago, head of the Christian Legal Society; Robert Dugan, public affairs director of the National Association of Evangelicals; and Dean Kelly, church-state specialist for the National Council of Churches.

They generally agreed that moral standards have plunged in the country, with religion often shoved aside, and blame for much of the overall problem was heaped on public schools.

"Recently the general tendency of the whole society has been to marginalize, privatize and put to the periphery people's religious concerns and convictions," Kelly said. "What the remedy is, I don't know. But people have the right to express their religious concerns and convictions anywhere, anytime, including in the public schools, so long as the power of the state is not used for it."

However, the courts have not agreed, and recent rulings have eliminated scheduled periods of prayer or Bible reading, or expressions of faith by teachers.

"We've kind of lost our moorings and by choice, put God outside all the debate," said Bob Slosser, a journalist, evangelical Christian, author and now president of Christian Broadcasting Network University at Virginia Beach, Va.

"We've removed the ultimate standard — and thus all standards. We need to put God back into education."

He, along with Dugan, maintained that a constitutional amendment allowing school prayers or a moment of silence, would help attain right balance, even if only symbolically.

"God has been gerrymandered out of the classroom," Dugan said, contending it would be beneficial to allow a moment for students "who wish to acknowledge God," to "recognize a power greater than the state."

"We don't want our schools to say there's no room for a power greater than the state," Slosser said. "Schools have been 'moved away' from being neutral about religion to being hostile" toward it, and to help counteract that tendency a prayerful interlude would "tell the kids God belongs in the debate."

However, Buzzard, whose legal organization backs conservative Christian causes, saw little value in a moment of prayer or silence.

"The problem is much deeper than that," he said. "I don't care a lot about what happens in the first 30 seconds of a school day. He said the important need was for quality education, including religion-based values. He said the public schools have become a "convenient target, partly symbolic" of a "much broader sense of frustration" people feel about the entire culture. "I'm suggesting that evangelicals may consider abandoning public education," he added. "I don't like it, but indications are they are considering it."

With private church-run schools spreading across the country, Kelly observed, "I support private education. I think public education is hurting on its fabric and has abandoned what it's supposed to do."

He said the "big problem" of the schools was their "failure to recognize, observe and live out good values, particularly Christian values," of teachers failing to exemplify a "moral stance" and school administrators failing to "exert discipline."

He also discounted the benefit of organized prayer moments, saying students already could pray individually if they wished. However, Mrs. Vedral, with her classroom experience, interjected that in the present situation, "A student would look very foolish if he wants to pray out loud, or even bow his head. Few do."

Challenger Hellar's income runs ahead of Rep. Craig's

BOISE (AP) — Bill Hellar, the Coeur d'Alene businessman challenging Congressman Larry Craig, is making more money this year than he did last with assets greater than those held by the Republican incumbent, according to federally-mandated financial disclosure reports.

Hellar, a Democrat and president of Available Hardware Supply Co. Inc. and his wife Gretchen, also an officer in the company, received salaries and net earnings from the business of nearly $2,000 from January through August. Their income from the company totaled just over $75,000 for all of 1983.

In addition, Hellar reported unearned income, mainly from commercial real estate, of between $20,000 and $66,000 during the first eight months of this year compared to between $25,500 and $37,500 for all of 1983.

Craig, a Midvale rancher seeking his third term in Congress, reported

BILL HELLAR
Supply business pays well
Income for 1983 of less than $12,000. His 1984 financial disclosure statement is not due until next May.

The financial disclosure requirement is at the heart of Idaho Congressman George Hansen's April 2 felony conviction. He is appealing the jury verdict that he filed false disclosure statements.

Hellar reported only two major assets worth in excess of $50,000. The hardware company is worth more than $250,000 and commercial real estate that includes 44 acres of land and a 14,000-square-foot building was also valued at more than $250,000. The property is rented Available Hardware and Darnell Sprinklers and has an outstanding loan on it of more than $250,000.

The only other outstanding debt reported by Hellar, was a stock purchase agreement involving the hardware company. Hellar placed that debt at between $15,000 and $50,000.

On his 1983 disclosure report, Craig listed assets valued between $215,000 and $400,000 and outstanding debts of between $115,000 and $215,000.

Comic book attacking NEA being distributed in Idaho

BOISE (AP) — A Coeur d'Alene businessman is distributing a comic book through Idaho newspapers blasting the National Education Association for its stands on issues from homosexual teachers to decriminalization of marijuana.

Ron Rankin said Friday that he has distributed more than 190,000 copies of the comic book, written by self-proclaimed "Comics Comedian" Dick Hater.

The Maryland-based cartoonist produced Congressman George Hansen's "George the Dragon Slayer" comic book earlier this year, and in 1982 came out with "Big John," criticizing Gov. John Evans' connections with organized labor during his campaign for reelection.

Hater's newest venture, entitled "What In The World's Going On In Your School?" attacks the NEA for its record of political activism for liberal causes.

The book depicts the teachers' union as victimizing well-intentioned local educators and using the vast majority of union dues to promote such causes as the Equal Rights Amendment and stricter gun control, while opposing tuition tax credits, voluntary prayer in public schools and other conservative stands.

But Counte Hutchison, president of the Idaho Education Association, the NEA's local affiliate, called allegations in the book "slanderous material" and "simply not true."

"It's unfortunate that they're resorting to using smear tactics in this campaign because it's not the kind of thing that Idaho people really appreciate," Hutchison said. "It's obviously a political piece. We said before that the attacks are going to come faster and harder between now and Nov. 6, and this is just another sign of it."

Rankin, who publishes the anti-union tabloid Vox Evy, said he had delivered copies of the book to all 12 daily newspapers in the state, and some Idaho weeklies.

The Blackfoot Morning News distributed about 9,000 copies as an advertising supplement to its Friday editions, managing editor Lamar Crosby said. Representatives of some other newspapers said they were not sure or could not say how the book would be handled.

The Times-News will insert the comic as a paid advertisement in its Tuesday's edition. Managing Editor Stephen Hartgen said that the comic met the paper's legal standards and that "it would be inappropriate for us to deny someone's right to publish material expressing his opinion if the material is within the law."

Rankin said the cost of publication and distribution totaled about $12,000.

She said the book, in making reference to the NEA Handbook and a Reader's Digest article critical of the organization, deleted paragraphs, added words and completely ignored the group's work in other, non-political areas of basic education.

Tribe asks McClure for help

LAPWAI (AP) — The Nez Perce Tribal Executive Committee is asking President Reagan and Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, for help in confronting the endangered Indian Health Improvement Act.

"We feel it may be at least curtailed," committee secretary Allen Silkpoo said. "And that would destroy the Indian Self-determination Act passed by Congress."

In a letter to McClure, the committee urged the state's senior senator "to reconsider his action in regard to not funding certain tribal programs" on the Nez Perce Reservation.

The tribe also wants McClure, chairman of a tribal fisheries Appropriations subcommittee, to seek funding for a tribal fisheries program. The Nez Perce have been working for some time on a fisheries plan designed "to work hand-in-hand with co-management programs of Idaho and other states," Silkpoo said.

He said McClure did not seek funding for the tribe's programs during a recent report to the subcommittee.

Tribes in Alaska and the Southwest fared better than the Nez Perce in recommendations of McClure's subcommittee, Silkpoo said, adding that the panel asked that one Alaskan tribe's fisheries program request of $130,000 be doubled.

New school challenged

EMMETT (AP) — A group of residents in Gem County, where secondary-school students are on double shifts, is challenging claims that a new school is needed.

The Citizens' Committee for the Upgrading of the Gem County Schools is not convinced Emmett needs the school that would have been built had a $6.8 million bond issue passed last month, said committee leader Jimmie Lou Aquino.

He said his group believes a levy for renovation of existing facilities should be placed on the ballot.

The school district has closed two deteriorated buildings. As a result, Emmett High School now is used by senior high students from 6:20 a.m. until noon, and by junior high students from 12:15 p.m. until 6:15 p.m.

Despite opposition, School Superintendent Richard Morton said that in six months he wants to try again for passage of a bond measure to finance another building.

Meanwhile, students who have been subjected to double shifts for the past month are reacting to the schedule with mixed feelings.

Students who attend classes in the morning say they like having afternoons free for jobs and hobbies. Others complain the schedules disrupt their social lives.

Ray Mullins, a teacher at Emmett High School for 23 years, said early classes aren't conducive to sound education. Among other things, it's harder to arrange special help for students, he said.

Kellogg to take over ski area

KELLOGG (AP) — The city of Kellogg has agreed to take over operation of the Silverhorn Ski Area to prevent it from closing.

Mayor Jim Vergobbi said at a special City Council meeting Thursday that a committee was formed to negotiate with the ski resort's owners in hopes of keeping the resort in business.

Silverhorn is owned by Bunker Limited Partnership, which had purchased it when it bought all Bunker Hill assets.

Although the partnership had operated the resort for the past two winters, Bunker President Jack Kendrick said the firm could not tolerate the operating losses of the ski resort on top of the costs of maintaining the Bunker Hill mine and surface plants.

He and other owners began looking for a buyer for the resort but found none.

School official faces probe

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The Kootenai County Prosecutor's office is investigating the assistant superintendent of the Coeur d'Alene School District on allegations of sexual misconduct with children, Prosecutor Glen Walker announced Friday.

Walker said no charges have been filed against Walt Powers. But he held a news conference on the matter because he said a number of letters about whether the investigation was underway had arisen in the city.

The matter has been under investigation for about a week, he said. Meanwhile, Powers denied the allegations and said he is cooperating fully with officials.

Jobless benefits overpaid

BOISE (AP) — Mistakes made by workers in reporting part-time earnings or by employers in reporting wages may have resulted in up to $1.6 million in overpayment of unemployment benefits last quarter, state Department of Employment director Scott McDonald says.

A random audit of the department's unemployment insurance benefit payments revealed there also may have been as much as $135,000 overpaid to people receiving jobless compensation in Idaho from April through June, he said.

McDonald put the primary blame for the "erroneous benefit payments" on incorrect reporting of part-time earnings by those applying for unemployment benefits. Employers' misreporting base-period wages caused the second highest incidence of improper payments.

The Department of Employment paid out more than $13.5 million in unemployment insurance claims during the second quarter of 1984, McDonald said. That money comes from an employer-financed benefit fund maintained by the state.

Energy loan rates lowered

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Department of Water Resources has again lowered the interest rate on loans it offers for energy conservation programs, department officials say.

Loans are available through First Interstate Bank at 7 percent interest on funds Water Resources received from the U.S. Department of Energy, department director Ken Dunn said.

He said the loan program is targeted at commercial, agricultural and local government energy users. Money for qualifying projects previously was available at two points below market.

Projects which conserve energy or use a renewable resource which will result in the conservation of energy can be considered under the low-interest loan program, Dunn said.

He said loans may range from a minimum of $1,000 to $200,000. Projects must pass a technical and economic feasibility review, and loans must be paid back within 10 years.

Aluminum merger gains federal approval

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department Friday approved a Canadian company's purchase of Atlantic Richfield Co.'s aluminum assets after forcing them to restructure the deal so that Atlantic Richfield will still begin the production of aluminum for beverage cans.

The agreement between the department's antitrust division and the two companies marked the first time the government has ever turned to a joint venture between two competitors as a solution for potential competitive problems in a proposal by one simply to acquire the other.

Under the revised deal, Alcan Aluminum

Ltd. of Montreal will acquire most of the aluminum assets of Arco, based in Los Angeles, but the two companies will form a joint venture to run Arco's newly completed rolling mill in Logan County, Ky. This mill was designed to produce aluminum can body stock, a sheet product used to make beverage cans and was to be Arco's means of moving into that business.

The original deal for cash and securities was valued at between $600 million and $1 billion. There was no immediate word on how the agreement affected that figure.

The case also is one of the first in recent years based on allegations that Section 7 of the Clayton Act would be violated by a deal that reduced potential rather than actual competition. The section prohibits mergers or acquisition that tend to substantially lessen competition. Arco, and Alcan would each market its share of the plant's production independently and would be barred from even discussing price or marketing information.

Each company would be allowed to independently expand its share of the capacity of the facility, the only aluminum rolling mill built in this country for more than a decade.

"The use of a production joint venture as a means of settling a section 7 case is an innovation," said Assistant Attorney General J. Paul McGrath, head of the department's antitrust division.

McGrath added that this "is the first potential competition case brought by the Department of Justice in recent years." He said the settlement "preserves Arco or its successor as an independent and meaningful participant in the can body stock market." The deal was initially announced Jan. 5 and the department said on June 19 that it wanted a restructuring or it would move to block the sale.

Although the department did not give its reasons at that time, industry analysts noted that Arco had a reputation as one of the most aggressive price cutters in the industry.

Outside of communist countries, Alcan is the world's largest aluminum producer. Its U.S. sales accounted for one quarter of its total 1983 revenues of $5.2 billion.

Arco is primarily an oil company. It entered the aluminum industry in 1977 by acquiring Anconda Aluminum Co. of Louisville. Its aluminum operations contributed $718 million to the company's total 1983 revenues of $26 billion.

New mortgage retains level payments

By BILL McCLOSKEY
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A new type of mortgage, designed to have the combined advantages of fixed monthly payments and adjustable interest rates, is being introduced by the Federal National Mortgage Association.

Robert J. Mylod, president and chief operating officer of the mortgage association, known as Fannie Mae, said indications are "lenders expect this mortgage to be popular with consumers."

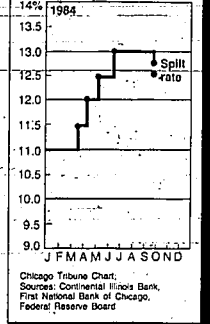

He said more than 200 lenders nationwide have already made commitments for the new loans.

Fannie Mae purchases mortgages from lenders, giving them new money to use. As the biggest single buyer of mortgages, the association can affect the types of mortgage terms offered by banks, savings and loans and mortgage companies by specifying the terms of loans it is willing to buy.

Interest rates on the new "fixed-payment, adjustable-rate" mortgage are keyed to the one-year Treasury securities index, which has been running 2 to 2 1/2 percent lower than

The prime rate

Interest rate banks charge to their most credit-worthy customers rates on fixed-rate 30-year loans. Lenders usually offer lower rates on any adjustable rate mortgage because the risk of changes in interest rates is shared by lender and borrower. Many lenders are still stuck holding fixed-rate loans that were entered into during the days of single-digit interest rates.

However, borrowers and their representatives in Congress have been critical of some adjustable rate mortgages that have had frequent rate shifts, leaving home buyers unsure what their monthly payments will be.

As interest rates have stayed high or increased, most of the adjustments have been upwards, especially on loans that started out with adjustable "leaser rates," some as low as 5 percent. Some borrowers have seen their monthly payments double.

"Consumers are concerned about the high mortgage interest rates and fluctuating monthly payments of many loans being offered today," Mylod said. "The fixed-payment ARM is a very positive response to those concerns."

With the new home loan, payments change only every five years, even though the interest rate could change once a year.

At the end of the first five years, the borrower may negotiate a fixed-rate mortgage for the remaining 25 years or a new five-year contract at a new interest rate and payment schedule.

The new payment would be based on the average of the previous four years' rates and the current market rate on one-year ARMs.

Here is an example given by Mylod: "If a homebuyer borrowed $50,000 at a 12.75 percent interest rate, the monthly payment on a fixed-payment ARM would be $652. That monthly payment would remain $652 for the first five years, whether or not interest rates in general rose through the period."

If the interest rate adjusts upward during the five-year period, then the monthly payment will not be enough to cover principal and interest. Anything left unpaid each month would be added to the outstanding balance. A borrower could end up owing more at the end of the five years than he or she did at the beginning of the loan, a situation known as negative amortization.

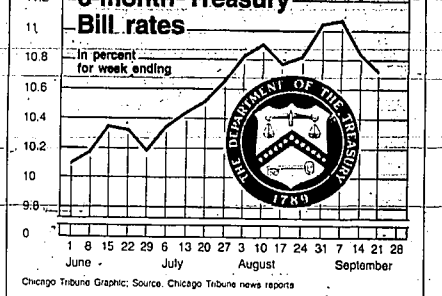

The rules for the new type loan limit negative amortization so a borrower could never owe more than 125 percent of the initial loan.

The new Fannie Mae loan has an annual interest rate increase cap of two percentage points and a cap of 4 1/2 percentage points over the life of the loan.

The loan package requires a relatively low down payment of 5 percent for owner-occupied homes.

A builder could further reduce the homebuyer's initial payments by paying part of the initial interest rate for the first two years, under the provisions of the Fannie Mae package.

3-month Treasury Bill rates

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed Friday in a driftless session as investors mustered little response to some favorable economic and monetary news.

Prevalent metals stocks ran into some selling as gold and silver prices fell.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slipped 4.86 to 1,162.53, finishing the week with a net loss of 24.18 points.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 62.85 million shares, against 76.70 million Thursday.

Analysts said the news background was generally positive. Late Thursday the Federal Reserve reported a larger-than-expected $2.4 billion drop in money supply.

In the metals sector, ASA Ltd. fell 1 1/4 to $6 1/4; Homestake Mining 1/4 to 26 1/4; Hecla Mining 7/8 to 18 1/4; and Campbell Red Lake Mines 1/2 to 23. The price of gold dropped $5.50 to $341.40 an ounce, and silver fell 32.8 cents to $7.275, on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

Bank stocks, which had a rocky week after First Chicago Corp. said it would post a large third-quarter loss, posted some further declines. First Chicago was off 1/4 at 20 1/4; Citicorp 1/4 to 33 1/4; Chase Manhattan 1/4 to 40 1/4; and BankAmerica 1/4 to 17 1/4.

News and conjecture about takeover developments accounted for most of the action elsewhere.

Utah computer firm reorganizing

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Computer terminal manufacturer Beehive International, Inc. filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act Thursday.

The Salt Lake City firm said it laid off 75 employees, cutting its workforce by 20 percent.

Warren B. Clifford, president and chief executive officer of the company, said Beehive could not pay both its debts to suppliers and its operating costs without additional financing.

Continental Illinois Bank, the company's principal lender, "had been unwilling to acquiesce to the use of a $2.5 million loan from another lender for payment of the company's suppliers," Clifford said.

Chapter 11 protects businesses from their creditors and allows them to remain in business while they work out a reorganization plan.

Trading of the company's stock on the American Stock Exchange was suspended earlier Thursday, before the announcement. The last trade was at $2.12 1/2 per share.

Documents filed with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court showed Beehive's assets totalled more than $32 million and its liabilities about $17 million.

Clifford said the company planned to go ahead with plans to market new products and continue servicing products for its customers.

Tigers earn AL crown

DETROIT (AP) — Look out, National League, these Detroit Tigers are for real — and are ready to rip.

"Don't dare us, because when people dare us, we put them away," vowed Kirk Gibson, voted the most valuable player of the American League Championship Series after the Tigers completed a three-game sweep of the Kansas City Royals 1-0 Friday night.

The Tigers, baseball's most dominant team in the regular season, showed why they had the best record in 1984.

They outthrew the Royals, they outpitched the Royals and they outfielded the Royals.

AL playoffs

(Detroit wins series, 3-0)

Game 1, Tuesday — Detroit 8, Kansas City 1
Game 2, Wednesday — Detroit 5, Kansas City 3 (11 innings)
Game 3, Friday — Detroit 1, Kansas City 0

"We were very confident coming in," Gibson said. "We could taste it."

"Detroit, in reaching the World Series for the first time since 1968, got the best game of the year from starter Milt Wilcox, who allowed just two hits through eight innings.

"I didn't know if I would be sharp. I hadn't pitched in 10 days and missed my last start with some shoulder problems," said Wilcox, who struck out eight and walked just two. "I was a little rusty the first two innings, but then I got into my rhythm."

Willie Hernandez, the ace of the Tigers' bullpen who got hit hard in Game 2, allowed one hit in the ninth inning before getting the last out to trigger a wild celebration.

"Nobody would have ever thought one run could hold up in this ballpark," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson, who became the fourth skipper to win pennants in both leagues, said.

The Tigers will open the World Series on Tuesday night against either the Chicago Cubs or the San Diego Padres. Chicago leads the National League playoffs two games-to-one with Game 4 scheduled for Saturday in San Diego.

Wilcox symbolized the Tigers' efficiency, allowing just a fourth-inning single to George Brett and an eighth-inning single to Don Slaught. Wilcox, who did not complete any of his 33 starts this year, got a second-inning run on an RBI-forcort by Marty Castillo and made it stand up, walking two and striking out eight in

Domination: Declo 54, Kimberly 0

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

DECLO — Quarterback Brad Matthews threw it high and outside where only end Dan Bristol could catch them Friday night.

And that combination, augmented liberally by the inside slash running of Bart Kelsey and the domination of the line, carried the undefeated Declo Hornets to a surprising 54-0 Canyon Conference victory over the previously-unbeaten Kimberly Bulldogs.

That Matthews also was a member of Idaho's Basketball Congress state team last summer was evident in his touch throwing. The 6-3 Bristol had touch an eight-inch height advantage on the diminutive Kimberly secondary and three times that Declo battery simply played catch over the Bulldogs' heads for touchdowns.

"We had the people there. They were covered. We just couldn't get up to the ball," said Kimberly assistant Coach George Arrossa.

Matthews ended the night with 13 completions in 18 attempts for 249 yards and four touchdowns. Add the plus 100-yard on the ground for Kelsey and some big runs by Tab Butters and Ty Bryan and it amounted to the biggest offense showing against a Division I defense in years. In fact, it ended five years of Kimberly domination in the series.

For Kimberly Mentor Gordon Hogan the difference was clear.

"They just kicked our fanlines up front," he said.

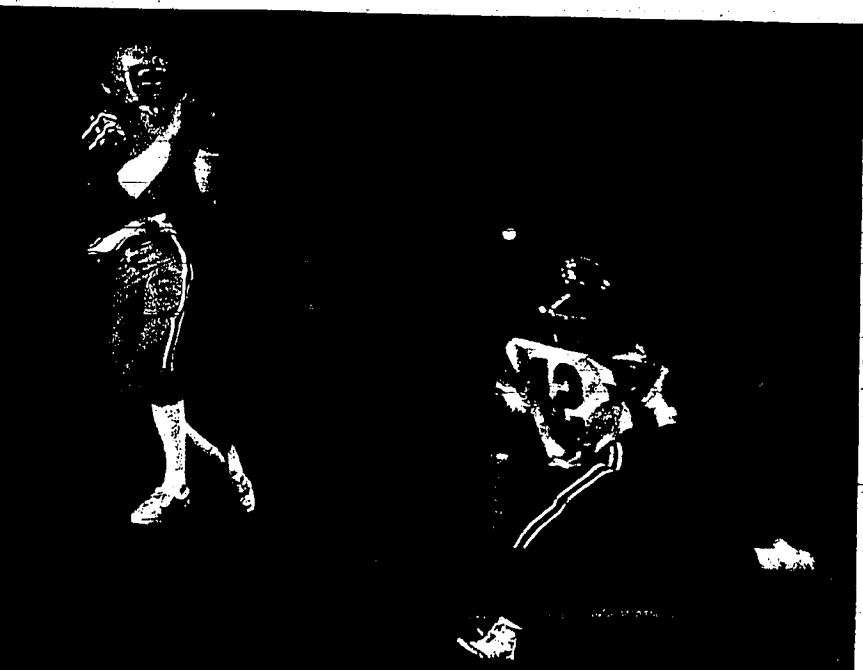

That was seconded by Declo Coach Mike Matthews, who noted, "Our offensive and defensive lines did a whole of a job. They gave us time to throw and opened the holes for us."

Hogan, who this week had to pull six sophomores up from the junior varsity squad to cover injury vacancies — and started two of them, noted before the game, "We've got to hold them early. If we can, maybe we can keep it close. But if they get away early on the scoreboard, watch out."

Two things happened early, one good, one bad, for the Bulldogs. First, Declo took its first possession on a grinding march that carried to the 11 before an interception killed it.

"The pass wasn't called," Matthews said afterward. "We'd called a running play but he (quarterback and son Brad) noticed our receiver was uncovered and he checked off. But it turned out they were in a zone and when he threw it, the Kimberly boy simply stepped in front and picked it off. If Brad had lobbed it, it would have been a touchdown and he'd have been a hero. Instead he drilled it and wound up being the dummy with me chewing him out on the sideline," he added with a laugh.

On its next possession, Declo uncollected another march, wound up on

Bruins end eight-year jinx with 21-6 triumph over Skyline

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE
Times-News writer

IDaho FALLS — An eight-year jinx at Ravsten Stadium ended Friday night when the Twin Falls Bruins overcame their own problems to defeat the Skyline Grizzlies 21-6 in a Gem State Conference football game.

"That's what got the kids fired up," Twin Falls Coach Bill Jones said after the triumph. "It's been at least eight years since we've won here, and you have to find something else to get you going when you're out of the race like we are."

However, Twin Falls lost the services of wide receiver Todd Jones in the first quarter. Jones, the conference's leading pass-catcher, apparently suffered a broken left leg and was admitted to an Idaho Falls hospital, according to Coach Jones.

Twin Falls, 3-3 overall, stands 2-2 in the league while the Grizzlies fall to 1-5, 1-4 in conference play.

Jones said that the Bruins had a slow first half while the Skyline scored first, thanks partly to seven dives for 27 yards by running back Kelly Merrill. After Twin Falls stopped up the inside, Skyline went to its option pass.

It was easy to see why. Skyline, essentially had two quarterbacks in the backfield with Kurt Machen receiving the snap and Jeff Burtenshaw at wing. It was Burtenshaw who, after taking a pitch, threw to tight end Greg Copp to set up first-and-goal.

Machen, on fourth-and-9, hit wing Ty Morgan for the score and the only hitch in the 16-play, 66-yard drive was a missed conversion kick.

Twin Falls got its delayed-reaction offense going in the second quarter, after being virtually stilled the first 12 minutes.

In that scoring drive, quarterback Doug Petersen lobbed a 27-yard pass to Nick Baument, turning Baument around in the right corner of the end zone. The Bruins' kick also failed, keeping the score tied.

After that it was all Twin Falls. Following linebacker Jon Sander's sack of Burton Shaw on an aborted reverse, the Grizzlies stared at a fourth-and-20 dilemma deep in their own territory.

Five plays after Skyline's punt, running back Jim Lutz walked into Skyline's end zone from 74 yards out on a screen pass, accompanied by teammate Tom McLinn. The senior running back held the ball aloft as he scored the end zone. Troy Luechik's kick was good, putting the Bruins ahead 13-6.

Now it was time for the insurance score. With four minutes left in the final quarter, Jeff Lambert lowered his head and scored from the 1. A Petersen-to-Baument pass accounted for the conversion points.

Skyline nearly notched its second touchdown pass with 40 seconds to play, but an incomplete pass from Machen to running back Doug Clark foiled that opportunity.

History sways in Boise State's favor

POCATELLO — Back in 1967, then-Idaho State University athletic director Dubby Holt did then-Boise State athletic director Lyle Smith a favor. Holt made Idaho State the first Big Sky Conference school to schedule Boise State in football.

Big mistake.

Starting in 1968, the Broncos won 14 of the subsequent 16 meetings between the two schools. If Boise State hasn't owned its oldest rival in the interim, it has certainly tamed the Bengals during that time.

Consider these nuggets from the Boise State record book:

- Most passing attempts, single game — Eric Guthrie vs. Idaho State, 1972, 44.
- Most punt returns, single game — Rick Woods vs. Idaho State, 1979, 9.
- Longest punt return — Henry Jenkins vs. Idaho State, 1979, 91 yards.
- Highest punting average — Ron Talbot vs. Idaho State, 1983, 51.3 yards.
- Highest average yards per run, single game vs. Idaho State, 1979, 9.4 yards.
- Most touchdowns rushing, single game vs. Idaho State, 1979, 6.
- Fewest rushing attempts, opponent, single game — vs. Idaho State, 1980, 25.
- In 16 meetings, Boise State has outscored Idaho State 455-223.

The reasons have a lot to do with the fact that Boise State has won 76 percent of its games since 1968. But it probably has more to do with the fact that the Broncos have made a tradition of grazing in the Minjipone.

"From the coaches' point of view, we don't approach the Boise State game differently than any other game," says Idaho State head Coach

Steve Beller's blocked punt in 1972 gave the Boise State another three-point win, 31-28. In 1978, Bronco placekicker Tom Sarette sprained his ankle and was replaced by punter Ed Thomas, who kicked three field goals — his only field goals as a collegian — the last one with seven seconds left in the game to give BSU a 16-14 victory.

As ISU sports information director Glenn Alford, who has attended every Idaho State-Boise State game since 1968, points out, the games have not been one-sided. Seven of the Broncos' wins have been by a touchdown or less; the game has decided the conference championship for one team or the other six times — in 1971, 1972, 1973, 1976, 1980 and 1981.

The game is also an excellent predictor of subsequent success. Boise State has won the Big Sky title five years since it joined the league in 1970 and has beaten ISU each time. Idaho State has won the league championship once since BSU signed on and defeated the Broncos this season.

That victory — in 1981 — was an odd one. The winning touchdown came on a 10-yard quarterback draw play run by Mike Machurek, the all-time leading passer in the school's history. He was hit at the goal line, fumbled and the ball was recovered in the end zone by Charles Ewing, the Bengals' leading pass-eater that season. In 1971, Boise State came into the game at 8-1, leading the league. The Bengals won 21-17 on the only pass by running back James Jackson, an interception pass completed as a collegian. That gave Idaho the league title.

But perhaps the last BSU-ISU game was typical of the other 15 — at least typically bizarre. With the Bengals trailing by a field goal in the second quarter, ISU quarterback Paul Peterson left the game spitting up blood (he'd broken a rib and that in turn had punctured his lung.) The margin of victory for Boise State was a 90-yard screen pass to Rodney Webster, the Bronco tailback, and a safety — which occurred when Idaho State's Ed Scott ran the ensuing kickoff out of the end zone, changed his mind, and ran back in.

The key to this year's game might be a man named Harry Hedrick. Hedrick coached the quarterbacks, receivers and tight ends at Idaho State in 1981, the last time the Broncos beat Boise State. He was hired to handle the same job at Boise State in 1983 — when the Broncos won the game — and that's bad news for Idaho State.

He's back.

Differences in ballpark affect NL's action

San Diego pitcher Tim Lollar takes batting practice Friday.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The vast differences between San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium here and Wrigley Field in Chicago have added another element to the National League Championship Series, which resumes today with the Cubs clinging to a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five set.

"The differences in size between the two parks have been widely recognized. The alleys in Jack Murphy are 355 feet; they're 370 in Wrigley. And when the wind blows out at Wrigley, fly balls become home runs. We've been awesome in Wrigley Field this year," says Cubs third base coach Don Zimmer. "Our club is more suited to Wrigley. We have a lot of guys that loft the ball. They've got guys that hit line drives and ground balls, like Alan Wiggins and Tony Gwynn."

And therein lies an even more important difference between the two ballparks — the way in which the two infields are maintained. At Wrigley, the infield grass grows lush — like the rough on a U.S. Open golf course — and ground balls roll slowly to the infielders. At Jack Murphy, the infield is hard and the grass is cut short, making it play more like AstroTurf. "It's done for a purpose," says Padres General Manager Jack McKeon. "They can't cover much ground out there in the infield, so they don't want the balls to get through. Everybody doctors their own field to suit their own purposes. It's part of the game."

The grass is especially long on the left side at Wrigley Field to protect 36-year-old third baseman Ron Cey and 38-year-old shortstop Larry Bowa. The Padres, meanwhile, have Gold Glover Graig Nettles at third, still superb at the corner despite his 39 years, and fleet-footed Garry Templeton at shortstop. "Our field is suited to our club," Templeton says. "They have a slow infield. I saw two balls up the middle here last night that wouldn't have gotten through in Chicago, one by Terry Kennedy. Our infield's a lot faster than theirs, and that's to our advantage." After losing the first two games of the NLCS in Chicago — 13-6 and 4-2 — the Padres came back to win Game Three Thursday night in San Diego, 7-1, behind right-hander Ed Whitson's strong eight innings of pitching and the hitting of Templeton and Kevin McReynolds. Templeton hit a two-run double that erased a 1-0 Chicago lead, and McReynolds later hit a three-run homer.

No team in the NL has come back to win the playoffs after losing the first two games. Milwaukee did it in the American League in 1982, and it was done before the homeown fans.

In Game Four today (6:25 p.m. MDT; KIVI-TV, Channel 6), the Padres will start left-hander Tim Lollar, 11-13 during the season with a 3.91 ERA, against Cubs right-hander Scott Sanderson, 9-5 and 3.14.

Both managers, Dick Williams of San Diego and Jim Frey of Chicago, also agreed that a change of fans had affected the series. "We've got to use our 10th man, too," Williams said. "I haven't heard that much noise since, maybe, the confines of Fenway Park (where Williams managed the Boston Red Sox from 1967-68). That's a smaller ballpark, and this was louder. I was really impressed."

Frey theorized that all the attention given to the bleacher bums in Chicago had given the San Diego fans incentive to turn out in record numbers Thursday night.

"I feel the attention given to the Cubs fans — being labeled the 10th man and getting all that national attention — it was almost like the San Diego fans decided to show us that they're not all laid back and on the beach. Maybe that was their revenge to the media for being pictured as laid back."

Lollar missed his last start of the regular season with a stiff pitching shoulder, an affliction that caused him to miss several starts in 1983. Lollar worked one 6½-inning stint this year against the Cubs, getting no decision despite giving up just one run on four hits. He led the club in walks this season with 105.

"I feel pretty good now," Lollar said before a Friday workout. "I've thrown twice along the sidelines without any problem."

Williams said Lollar would get the quick hook if he were ineffective against the Cubs.

"If he has some problem, I won't hesitate to get somebody up. I'll go right away to Dave Dravecky or Andy Hawkins," Williams said.

Umpires' strike talks remain stalled

DETROIT (AP) — No progress toward resolving the major league umpires' strike was reported Friday following a meeting between American League President Bobby Brown and Richie Phillips, head of the umpires' union.

Brown asked if a settlement was possible before the World Series opens next week, said, "I don't know. It's something you just can't predict. You always hope for a settlement."

An AL official said the two sides remained far apart on the main issue — money for post-season games — and indicated a quick settlement was not likely.

The meeting took place prior to Game 3 of the AL Championship Series between the Kansas City

Royals and the Detroit Tigers. There was no indication when Phillips might meet again with Brown or with Chub Feeney, the National League president.

Meanwhile, Brown said that three umpires who are working the entire AL playoffs would receive a flat payment of $10,000 apiece, equal to the amount which the regular AL umpires would have received.

Six umpires who worked one game apiece in Kansas City will be paid $2,000 each, plus that wouldn't have been on hand for the other game there.

The local umpires who worked in Detroit will get $4,000 apiece, regardless of how many games they call. The NL umpires are receiving $2,000 a game.

Phillips was in Kansas City to meet with Brown Tuesday night and then Wednesday to Chicago, where the Cubs played the San Diego Padres in the NL playoffs.

Phillips returned to his Philadelphia office Thursday and spent the day on the phone with both league presidents.

Dick Deegan, a major-league umpire for 10 seasons who retired in 1980, worked home plate for the first two AL games. He was joined by amateur umpires on a six-man crew.

The NL has used four-man crews. Some of the substitute umpires used by each league worked regular-season games in the majors during an umpires' strike in 1979.

There have been no major controversial calls in the playoffs, although several players have said the quality of umpiring has fallen off and have complained about inconsistency in calls.

The issues which prompted the strike — salaries, job security and post-season assignments — were covered for only two years in the four-year agreement signed by the umpires' union in April 1982. The two-year segments of the contract expired at the end of the regular season.

In addition to money, umpires have expressed concern that their only avenue of appeal in case of firing is to the league president. And while they appear content with the merit selection process for post-season games, they want the entire umpiring crew to share revenues from such games.

Sub-district volleyball slated

GOODING — The A-4 girls' sub-district volleyball tournament has been scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 13 and Monday, Oct. 15 at the State School for the Deaf and Blind.

The seven teams competing will be Gooding State, the Ketchum-Sun Valley Community School, Carey, Bliss, Camas County, Dietrich and Richfield.

Action will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday, with seven games slated. Monday's final round will start at 4 p.m. The top two finishers will advance to A-4 Fourth District tourney at Jerome.

Ketchum-S.V. booters win

DIETRICH — Jack Weeks headed in a corner kick with a minute and a half left in the second overtime, lifting the Ketchum-Sun Valley Community School over Dietrich, 2-1, in high school soccer.

Reggie Crisp gave Ketchum-Sun Valley an early lead by scoring with 30 seconds elapsed. But Dietrich's Shane Swift scored for Dietrich on a direct kick with two minutes left in regulation, forcing overtime.

Neither side scored in the first overtime period.

Burial for Walter Alston

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — Walter Alston, who managed the Brooklyn and Los Angeles Dodgers to four World Series championships, was buried Friday after being honored by hundreds of friends and baseball associates. Alston, 72, died Monday.

Executives, players and former teammates packed into a small chapel to attend the funeral for Alston, who managed the Dodgers 23 years and led his teams to seven league pennants.

Alston had lived quietly at his home in nearby Darrown since resigning as Dodgers' manager at the end of the 1976 season. He had been in ill health since suffering a heart attack in April 1983. Dodgers' owner Peter O'Malley, Buzzy Bavasi, former general manager of the Dodgers, and Dodgers' Manager Tom Lasorda were among a group of mourners attending the funeral in the 210-seat Sesqui-centennial Chapel on the Miami University campus. Alston graduated from the school in 1935.

Pirates deny Tanner rumors

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates denied a published report Friday that the Montreal Expos were negotiating to obtain Manager Chuck Tanner through a trade.

The Expos are "making a spirited bid" for Tanner by offering outfielder Mike Fuentes and first baseman-outfielder Mike Stenhouse. The Pittsburgh Press reported Friday. Expos' pitcher Steve Rogers might also be involved, according to the newspaper.

But Pirates' spokesman Ed Wade denied Friday that Tanner would be traded.

"Chuck told me that he has signed with the Pirates through 1987 and has not talked with anyone in any other organization," Wade said.

AL names September's best

NEW YORK (AP) — First baseman Greg Walker of the Chicago White Sox, who hit .381 with six home runs and 20 runs batted in during September, was named the American League Player of the Month, the league announced Friday.

Doyle Alexander of the Toronto Blue Jays, who posted a 5-1 record with a 2.23 earned run average, was chosen AL Player of the Month. Walker, who will be 26 Saturday, finished the season with a .294 batting average, 24 homers and 75 RBI.

Miller 500 qualifying ends

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Ken Schrader stood on his first-day qualifying run Friday and headed the list of 11 drivers completing the lineup for Sunday's Miller High Life 500 Grand National stock car race.

Schrader, the former U.S. Auto Club sprint car champion from St. Louis, Mo., will start his second Grand National event after posting a four-lap, six-mile qualifying average of 162.999 mph Wednesday in a Ford Thunderbird.

The fastest actual qualifier Friday — the third and final qualifying session of the week — was Sterling Marlin, the 1983 Grand National Rookie of the Year. His Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS was clocked at 162.475.

Others making the 41-car field by standing on earlier qualifying runs were Jimmy Means, Ken Ragan and Kyle Petty. Joining Marlin in turning in successful qualifying runs Friday were Don Paul, Greg Sacks, Bobby Wakaw, Elliott Forbes-Robinson and Doug Leavelle.

Lennie Pond was added to the back of the grid as a provisional starter by virtue of his performance in last season's point standings.

Okamoto's lead widens to 11

WOBURN, England (AP) — Japan's Ayako Okamoto fired a three-under-par 70 Friday and opened a commanding 11-stroke lead after the third round of the $200,000 British Women's Open Golf Championship.

"While the dearest challengers were blown off the wind-whipped Dukes course, Okamoto had a 54-hole total of 212, seven under-par. "It got to the stage where I was getting bored," said Okamoto, who marked her round with a five-under-par burst over the first 12 holes.

"We needed three hours to play the last nine holes and all I wanted to do was get back to the clubhouse. I was so cold," she said.

Pat Bradley of the United States was the closest to Okamoto. Bradley was at 223 after a par 73. She was one stroke ahead of Scotland's Dale Reid, who slumped to a third-round 81.

Another 65 keeps Colbert atop Texas tourney

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Veteran Jim Colbert held a fairway shot for an eagle two that propelled him to another 5-under-par 65 and a three-stroke lead Friday in defense of his title in the $350,000 Texas Open Golf Tournament.

Colbert, 43, reached the 10th-inning halfway point with a 36-hole total of 130, 16 shots under par for two trips over the 6,525-yard Oak Hills Country Club course.

"That 65 just kind of snuck up on me," Colbert said, then grinned. "Of course, when you make two on a four-par, that tends to help a little."

The eagle came on the 463-yard 15th hole, which was playing downwind. Colbert hit a six-iron from 189 yards out on the fairway.

"It took one hop, hit the stick, crawled up the pin about three feet, then dropped back down, hung on the lip for a while, then fell in," he said.

Mark O'Meara, who has won once and been a runner-up five times this season, and former Texas Open champion Ron Streck shared second at 113, seven under.

O'Meara, who played with Colbert in the warm, windy weather, had a 66 while Streck shot 68.

"Jimmy is playing well, hitting the ball well, putting well. But my year has been made on the weekends. I'm looking forward to it," said O'Meara, who ranks second to the absent Tom Watson on the year's money-winning list.

"My goal is the money title," O'Meara said. "I'll do whatever I have to win it."

Cal Peete and rookie Jike Kane were next at 134, four off the pace. Kane had a 68 and Peete a second consecutive 67 that lifted him, at least temporarily, into the lead for the Vardon Trophy, which goes to the man with the low stroke average for the season. Peete reduced his average to 70.68. Craig Stadler, who led coming into this tournament at 70.73, is not competing here.

"I've been concentrating on the Vardon Trophy. Winning that would make it a real good season," Peete said.

Tom Kite, the other man in the Vardon Trophy race, struggled to another 72 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds at 144. PGA champ Lee Trevino also missed at 75-145.

Masters title-holder Ben Crenshaw was 72-140 — Colbert, who scored the high victory of his 18-year PGA Tour career in this event last year, did not make a bogey in his round. He dropped a pair of 25-foot birdie putts, on the 4th and 12th holes, scored from about 100 feet on the 6th and capped it all with the eagle.

3-hitter. Wilson went 0-for-4, making him 2-for-13 in the series, while Brett went 1-for-4 and finished at 3-for-13.

Tigers

The Tigers finished with just three hits off Royals starter Charlie Leibrandt, who walked four and struck six.

A capacity crowd of 52,168 jammed Tiger Stadium, chanting louder and louder as each Royals batter fell, and those fans were ready for the kill. So were a horde of policemen, who emerged on the field at the start of the eighth inning and ringed the field, crouching against the wall in foul territory.

Officials were determined not to see a recurrence of the night the Tigers clinched the AL East crown, when legions of fans stormed the field and savaged the surface, resulting in two dozen broken bats.

However, fans poured over the 20-foot fence in left and right-center field and policeman orderly tried to get them off the field and herded those on the field into a group in center field.

The closest Kansas City came to scoring was in second, and it would have been a failed run. With two out, Steve Balboni walked and was running on a full-count pitch that Frank White popped into short left field. Shortstop Alan Trammell and center fielder Chel Lemon both called for the ball and each backed off before Lemon caught it in the tip of his glove.

Leibrandt, like Wilcox a castoff of the Cincinnati Reds, didn't allow a hit after the third inning. But two of these hits came in the second. It was the

Barbaro Garbey tied off with a shot up the middle that Leibrandt deflected but couldn't stop, and it went for a single. Lemon forced Garbey at second, before Darrell Evans singled sharply to left-center, putting runners at the corners.

Castillo then hit a bounce to shortstop Onix Concepcion, who flipped the ball under-handed to second baseman White to force Evans at second. But White's relay to first was a shade late as Lemon scored the game's only run.

Detroit right fielder Kirk Gibson, who went 5-for-12 with one home run in the series was unanimously selected as the Most Valuable Player.

Again, the Tigers did what they had to do — they shut down leadoff batter Willie Wilson and Brett. The No.

Stevens-led Utes end New Mexico's undefeated record

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah quarterback Mark Stevens ran for 110 yards on 19 carries for Utah and scored late in the game on a one-yard plunge.

New Mexico got on the scoreboard first when Willie Turral ran 51 yards on the sixth play of the game. The kick was good and the Lobos led 7-0.

Utah's Andre Guard kicked a 49-yard field goal early in the second quarter. Then neither team could muster much offense until, with 1:18 remaining in the half, Utah's Reggie Richardson intercepted a Buddy Faneck pass and took it to the Lobo 39.

On the first play from scrimmage Stevens found Hardy open in the end zone.

Tural moments later fumbled and Utah's Farrell Price recovered on the Lobo 24. After a 20-yard pass to Hardy, Stevens took it in from the four and the half ended 17-7 for Utah.

Jerome nips Minico on FG

RUPERT — Todd Amundsen booted a 27-yard field goal with two seconds left to lift the embattled Jerome Tigers past the winless Minico Spartans 17-7 Friday night.

The winning points came in dramatic fashion just after Torrey Sheets picked off a Minico pass and rambled 42 yards to the Spartans five; Jerome ran one play to center the ball; and then used its last timeout to set up Amundsen's winning kick.

Jerome Coach Jon Jund expressed pleasure — with the way his Tigers came back, noting they had to adjust throughout the game.

The game occurred when the past-conscious Tigers lost starting quarterback Shane Jund on the first play of the game. That brought in Junior Jim Huber who had seen little offensive action through the first five games.

"It broke up our game plan," said Coach Jund, noting his son had reinforced a knee. "It was obvious our offensive timing was affected and we went more with the running game to compensate until Hubert could get into his rhythm. We told the defense they had to suck it up."

In fact, the defense won it. Minico, however, drew first blood when Todd Mackenzie hooked up with Steve Garland on a 25-yard scoring pass with five minutes left in the first period. Garland tacked on the extra point. Minutes later Garland saw a 30-yard field goal attempt stray wide.

Jerome was held in check until the closing two minutes of the half when Wendell intercepted a Mackenzie pass and returned it to the Spartans 13. The Tigers beat a fourth and inches at the three and Shawn Black then belted into the end zone. Amundsen's conversion tied it at 7 just before halftime.

Jerome, a closing drive thwarted by a 15-yard penalty, gave the ball up at the Minico 42 with 35 seconds left. On the first play, Sheets made his interception to set up the closing dramatics.

Raft River 25, Mackay 0

MACKAY — Raft River racked up 22 points in the second half Friday night as the Trojans blanked Mackay 25-0 in Magic Valley Conference play.

The game was pretty even in the first half with the 3-point edge going to Raft River on an 11-yard field goal by Travis Whitaker.

Disaster struck for the home town Miners when their starting quarterback went down and left the team with an injury and the second string quarterback was injured on the first play for the Miners.

Raft River was quick to take advantage of the situation after Whitaker took the ball in from the 11-yard line, his cousin, Justin found Justin Koyle on a 29-yard scoring strike.

Filer 16, Valley 6

FILER — "I'm feelin' good." That's how Filer Coach Wade Quessnell summed up his feelings after the Wildcats topped Valley 16-6 Friday night.

According to Quessnell, Filer's linemen made the difference. "Our offensive and defensive line dominated the game. It's the best we've had all year," he said.

Andy Sackett set up the first score for the Wildcats returning a short Valley punt to the 7-yard line.

One play later, Sackett found Brito open and hit him for a 7-yard touchdown pass.

Burley barely falls to Mountain Home

By FLYNN McROBERTS Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The Mountain Home Tigers stopped Burley's two-point conversion run with four minutes to play to snag their first Cross State Conference victory 8-6 Friday night.

In a defense-dominated struggle, the scoreboard remained silent until the first play of the fourth quarter when Tiger fullback David Abrahamson powered over from the Bobcat 4-yard line and backer quarterback Brian Munoz ran in for the conversion and an 8-0 mark.

Then with 4:12 left in the game, Tiger punter Chuck Art 'bobbled' the ball and just managed to gain control before Burley's Jeff Meade dove him on Mountain Home's Fred Ude. Bobcat runningback Brian Ude broke into the endzone on the next play and set the stage for Burley to tie the game.

On the PAT, Mountain Home pass coverage forced quarterback Alex Alejandre to run for the conversion as Tiger defensive back James Morris stopped him inches from the goal, dooming the Bobcats to an 8-6 loss.

"They just out hit us," said Burley Coach John Billetz. "They beat our guards off the ball all night. We just didn't move the ball offensively."
Absorbing four fumbles and 60 yards in penalties, Mountain Home still managed to pull out a win with strong denial by their defense. The Tigers held Burley to just 65 yards in total offense.
"Our defense gave our best performance against a ball team that can really move the ball," Mountain Home mentor Richard Pease said. "They rose to the occasion."
Tallback Maury Troy provided the bulk of the Tiger offensive attack, gaining 77 yards off 17 carries. After an illegal motion call brought back a touchdown by QB Gary Taylor, Troy came through with runs of 26 and 10 yards to set up Abrahamson's TD carry.
"Troy ran hard tonight," Pease agreed, the added, "our whole offense showed improvement from the last few games."

Shoshone 36, Rockland 0

ROCKLAND — The Shoshone Indians spread on their first three possessions and cruised to a 36-0 Sawtooth Conference victory Friday.

"We had so many kids hurt, we had to go light on practices all week," said Kirkland, whose team fell to 2-2 for the season and in Sawtooth Conference competition. "One of our starting guards — Jeff McNamey — couldn't play at all. In an injury program, you just can't afford injuries like that and expect to win."

The Panthers, with senior quarterback Kendall Peck hobbling on a sprained ankle and trying to throw with a sprained wrist, hit 30-0 to the fifth-ranked Cowboys and lost any chance of making the state eight-man playoffs. Peck and several of his teammates suffered those injuries in last week's 44-8 loss to Shoshone, which is dominating the Sawtooth Conference.

Glenns Ferry 12, Wendell 0

WENDELL — Juan Luna ran in two first-half touchdowns and Glenns Ferry's defense snatched Wendell's first scoring Friday night.

In the game, which moves Glenns Ferry to 1-3 in conference play and drops Wendell to 0-4, turnovers played a key role as both touchdowns were set up by interceptions.

After Luna's touchdown runs of 4 yards and 1 yard, the teams battled at midfield most of the second half with neither making progress.

Wendell made a comeback effort, just missing a block of a Glenns Ferry punt, but they were called for roughing the kicker, ending their hopes for a victory.

"We just made too many miscues to sustain any kind of a drive," Wendell Coach Jack Lancaster said. "Lancaster praised the performance of Eric Wetzelmeier, who was in on 19 tackles, and Brett Thackeray and Shane Dewep for their offensive and defensive efforts.

MURTAUGH — Troy Rovig threw three scoring strikes and Jotun Tribulla scored three touchdowns Friday night as Murtaugh erupted for 27 points in the second half to down Hansen 41-6 in Magic Valley conference action.

Hansen tallied first when Theron Walker scored on a 60-yard run, but the rest of the game belonged to Murtaugh.

Travis Slatmyer scored on a 10-yard run to give Murtaugh the lead and Rovig hit Tribulla on a 33-yard pass and Murtaugh led by eight at the half.

After Tribulla scored, Rovig hit a pair of touchdown passes to ice the game for the Red Devils.

Rovig hit on 10 of 16 passes for 189 yards, while the Murtaugh running game ran up 215 yards running.

Shoshone-imposed hangover costs Carey in 30-0 defeat

By STEVE CRUMP Times-News sports editor

CAREY — "I think," said a dejected Carey high football coach Heber Kirkland after his fourth-ranked Panthers were shut out Friday afternoon by North Gem, "that we lost this game last Friday night in Shoshone."

The Panthers, with senior quarterback Kendall Peck hobbling on a sprained ankle and trying to throw with a sprained wrist, hit 30-0 to the fifth-ranked Cowboys and lost any chance of making the state eight-man playoffs. Peck and several of his teammates suffered those injuries in last week's 44-8 loss to Shoshone, which is dominating the Sawtooth Conference.

"This is the fourth time we tried it and its the fourth time it's worked for a touchdown," said Buncie. "I don't know how much longer we can get away with it."

Carey mounted two serious scoring threats in the second quarter, the first stopped by Redford's interception at the North Gem 5-yard line. A few minutes later, Carey intercepted Wistensen at his 47 and with the help of a couple of penalties, the Panthers moved the ball down to the North Gem 15, where Carey had a third-and-three. But Peck fumbled on the next play after he had run for first-down yardage, and North Gem's Darin Wheeler recovered on the 9.

After moving the ball out to the Cowboys' 20, where North Gem had a first down, Wistensen was sacked twice for losses. On third-and-15, he fumbled back and threw deep to Derek Moser, who beat the defenders to the ball and sprinted all the way to the Patners' goal posts, although Carey twice turned back North Gem scoring drives inside its 15-yard-line in the final quarter of the game.

"It's frustrating to lose a game like this," said Kirkland. "But this is a young team. We only have three seniors on this ballclub, and these kids have done a fine job."

For North Gem's part, the win meant that a victory over Richfield in Saturday next Friday will all but wrap up a playoff berth for the Cowboys, now now 4-1 for the season and 3-1 in conference games.

"I think we showed today that we're a good team," said Buncie. "I think we're in the same class as Shoshone."

Payton goes for career rushing mark

By The Associated Press

All eyes will be on Walter Payton again this weekend as the Chicago Bears' star running back tries to break Jim Brown's all-time National Football League rushing record.

Payton, who needs 67 yards to pass Brown's career mark of 12,312 yards, will try to do it Sunday at Chicago's Soldier Field against the New Orleans Saints, against whom he ran for 161 yards and threw two touchdowns passes last season in a 34-3 overtime loss. At his current pace — an NFL-leading 124 yards a game — the record should be no problem.

But the game against the 3-2 Saints is another matter, particularly since the Bears go on the road for two games after this week.

"We have to regroup and beat New Orleans," said Ditka, whose team has been plagued by a lack of offense in its last three games — a 9-7 win over Green Bay, a 38-9 loss to Seattle and last week's 23-14 defeat by Dallas.

But the game against the 3-2 Saints is another matter, particularly since the Bears go on the road for two games after this week.

"They're one of the up-and-coming teams in the league and they are dangerous. We don't want to go on the road at 3-3."

DAVID WOODLEY Faces former teammates at the Los Angeles Rams, Houston at Cincinnati, San Diego at Green Bay and Seattle at the Los Angeles Raiders.

The San Francisco 49ers visit the New York Giants Monday night. New Orleans goes into Chicago with two straight wins, a 34-24 win over St. Louis followed by last week's 27-10 triumph over the winless Houston Oilers. Richard Todd, obtained from the New York Jets in the off-season, has been more solid in those two wins after opening the season shakily.

But Coach Bum Phillips thinks Payton, irrespective of the record, will be the key to the game.

"Walter Payton presents you with a challenge anytime you play the Bears," Phillips says. "Nobody has forgotten the game he had against us last year."

The game in Pittsburgh between the Steelers and the Dolphins, one of two unbeaten teams left in the NFL, features the red-hot Dolphin quarterback, Dan Marino, returning to his hometown to face the man he replaced, David Woodley.

"He has a twinkle in his eye this week," Miami Coach Don Shula says of Marino, who has passed for 15 touchdowns in five games and threw for a team-record 429 yards in last week's 35-28 win over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Shula, who traded Woodley last spring, isn't surprised by the success of his former quarterback, who has led the Steelers to a 3-2 mark.

"David is a guy who's a great competitor with a lot of athletic ability," Shula said. "He's made great improvement as a deep-back passer. He's a good athlete and he can move around back there."

There's also an interesting matchup in Cincinnati, where two of the league's three non-winners collide when the Bengals meet the Houston Oilers. Unless there's a tie, either Sam Wyche of the Bengals or Hugh Campbell of the Oilers will register his first win as an NFL coach.

"I can't say something that'll magically make things get better," said Campbell, in a comment that could stand for both coaches.

A similar kind of game takes place at Orchard Park, N.Y., where the 1-4 Eagles meet the 0-5 Bills, who have lost their three home games by a combined total of 10 points.

The matchup between the Raiders and the Seahawks features two of the three 4-1 teams in the American Football Conference West, where all five teams are 3-2 or better.

Dallas, 4-1, has won three straight since its meeting with the Giants. Quarterback Neil Lomax and the '23 Cardinals, who lead the NFC in offense, will have to crack a Dallas defense that is second in the conference to Chicago in yardage allowed.

The Chiefs, 3-2, hope to continue their sack performance against the Jets, also 3-2. But New York may be able to take some of the pressure off quarterback Pat Ryan with Freeman McNeil, the AFC's leading rusher.

Indianapolis, 2-3, will try and break new ground against Washington by beating a winning team — its two victims, Buffalo and Houston, still are winless. The Redskins have won three straight after losing their first two.

Walter Payton needs 67 yards to break Jim Brown's record

Oklahoma State tries to force Huskers to eat their words

By HERSHEL NISSENSON The Associated Press

The quote from Nebraska defensive tackle Rob Stuckey is posted at the entrance to Oklahoma State's football offices.

"All I can say is that Okie State better hook it up because we're going to shove the ball down their throats," Stuckey said following last week's 17-9 upset loss to Syracuse that knocked Nebraska from its No. 1 ranking to No. 8.

Stuckey has much support for his remark. The Cornhuskers lost the first two games of their series against Oklahoma State, but that was back in 1960-61. Since then, Nebraska is 22-1 against the Cowboys, and the last two times they met at Lincoln the margins were 48-7 and 48-10.

But for the first time in 16 years, Oklahoma State catches Nebraska coming off a defeat and, for president-wishers, the Cowboys' last victory in the series 22 years ago followed a Cornhuskers' loss to Syracuse. Oklahoma State, ranked No. 9, is 4-0 for only the third time in 38 years and hasn't been 5-0 since 1945.

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said the good thing about last week's loss to Syracuse "maybe is that Nebraska fans and players got a good dose of reality. I opened the door (at home) Saturday night and got one straight hour of 'What happened?'"

What happened, Osborne concluded, was that Syracuse "was the stronger football team and they deserved to win. On balance, we got outplayed and probably ought a little bit."

Today's clash with Oklahoma State marks the start of Big Eight Conference play for both teams, and it will be hard-fought, the winner not to begin studying travel schedules to Miami at Orange Bowl time, a trip Nebraska has taken the last three years.

Osborne warns that "most of the people they (Oklahoma State) have coming back are key operators. They have a three-year starter at quarterback (Rusty Hilger), an all-Big Eight running back (Shawn Jones) and a great kicker (Larry Roach). They have great overall team quickness and speed. Most of their defensive linemen are back and they were the best we saw last year."

Today's only other pairing of teams from The Associated Press Top Twenty finds No. 14 Miami at No. 16 Notre Dame. Meanwhile, top-ranked Texas visits Rice for a night game, runner-up Ohio State is at Purdue, and No. 3 Washington plays at Oregon State.

Fourth-ranked Boston College, No. 5 Oklahoma and No. 10 Southern Methodist are idle, while sixth-ranked Florida is at Memphis State at night and No. 7 Brigham Young visits Colorado State.

In the Second Ten, Maryland is at No. 11 Penn State, North Carolina State at No. 12 Georgia Tech, Michigan State at No. 13 Michigan, Stanford at No. 17 UCLA, No. 18 Auburn at Mississippi, Tulane at No. 19 Vanderbilt in a night game, and No. 20 Georgia meets Alabama at Birmingham, LSU, No. 15, is not scheduled.

The Miami-Notre Dame game is expected to be a passing show between a couple of sophomore quarterbacks. Miami's Bernie Kosar set a school record last week by throwing for 368 yards against Rice, while Steve Beuerlein is the key in a Notre Dame aerial attack which is averaging 198.5 yards per game, the best since Joe Montana led the Irish to the national championship in 1977.

Kosar completed 22 of 33 passes for 215 yards and a touchdown last year in Miami's 20-6 stomping of the Irish.

"Kosar caused problems for us a year ago, and he's obviously come a long way since that time," said Notre Dame Coach Gerry Faust.

As for Beuerlein, Faust said that "Steve has gotten a little bit better every week out. We'll take whatever a defense will give us, and so far this year we've had more opportunities to throw the ball than we have in the past."

The problem for Texas Coach Fred Akers is to keep his players' minds on Southwest Conference doormat Rice instead of looking ahead to next week's clash with Oklahoma.

"I know this," he said, "they've (Rice) got the same conference record (0-0) that we do, and the only thing really that's important about all these games is how you do in your conference. Anything else doesn't really make that much difference."

Rice's Watson Brown said that

"from what I've seen of them (Texas), I don't know of any team that I have coached against which has been better. Penn State is a very good football team and Texas dominated them (28-3 last week). They made a good team look like a poor one."

BC's starting fullback dropped by team for having 'powdery' stuff

BOSTON (AP) — James Browne, the starting fullback for fourth-ranked Boston College, has been suspended from the team following his arrest for possessing a "white, powdery" substance, drunken driving and speeding.

Metropolitan District Commission police say they arrested Browne, a senior, for speeding Sept. 28. "He was then searched — as is normal after an arrest — and the substance was found on his person," said MDC deputy superintendent Thomas White.

The substance, in a plastic container, was less than an ounce of "white powder, of the color and consistency of something that could be inferred to be, or suspected to be, cocaine," White told The Boston Globe Friday.

Police withdrew a drug charge against Browne Monday, pending analysis of the substance by the Food and Drug Administration. MDC spokesman Frank Muelo said the analysis could take one to three weeks, but White said the FDA agreed to expedite the analysis.

Browne, a native of Fontaine, Mich., was not at his apartment early Friday for comment, and his roommate, Carl Pellegrata, said he did not know where he was or when he would return.

Police charged Browne with driving without a license, failure to stop for a police officer and speeding, said MDC desk officer Bradford Waite. Browne was driving 53 mph in a 35-mph zone, he said.

Browne also was charged with drunken driving, although Waite said a breathalyzer test showed he had only .02 percent alcohol in his bloodstream, well below the .10 percent at which a driver is considered drunk in Massachusetts.

"He's devastated by the thing," said Coach Jack Bicknell, who spent Thursday night with Browne. "He didn't even know how to get a lawyer."

Bicknell said Friday that he suspended Browne from the team

Thursday "until we can find out what is going on."

"I suspended him not because I think he's guilty and not because I'm mad at him. It's just that it's distracting to the team," he said. "They can't concentrate on two things at once."

"The team can survive a lot of things," Bicknell added. "But Jim needs some friends right now, people who are not going to back out on him."

Quarterback Doug Flutie, who learned of the arrest Friday, said, "How many college students last night got picked up for drunk driving? The team will be fine. I'm just concerned that for Jim's sake this thing doesn't get blown out of proportion."

Kevin Duffy, vice president for student affairs, said the college would wait to hear the outcome of Browne's case before taking action.

Bicknell and Duffy said they did not learn of the arrest until Wednesday night.

"He told us he was charged with speeding and showed up (in court) Monday to pay a fine of $50," Duffy said. "He thought it was over." Bicknell quoted Browne as saying the arrest was "nothing. They thought I'd been drinking, but I'd only had one beer, and I passed the breathalyzer. I was caught speeding and I paid a $50 fine."

"So I went to sleep that night without worrying about it," Bicknell said.

"If I find out it was cocaine, then I'm going to sit down with the kid and help him and counsel him. I'm not going to overreact, I'm not going to be mad and I'm not judging him."

Following his arrest, Browne paid a $20 bail and was released early Saturday. He pleaded innocent Monday at Brighton District Court to speeding, failing to stop and driving without a license. The case was continued until Jan. 5, 1985.
