Salvadoran guerrilla leaders Guillermo Ungo and Ruben Zamora gesture while talking Sunday about their hopes.

By The Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Two top guerrilla leaders arrived Sunday for meetings with President Jose Napoleon Duarte aimed at ending the country's five-year civil war. It was the first time in more than four years that rebel leaders had appeared in public here.

Guillermo Ungo and Ruben Zamora, president and vice president respectively of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, political ally of leftist guerrillas fighting the government, arrived at 2:30 p.m. EDT aboard a Colombian air force plane accompanied by Latin and European diplomats. They landed at San Salvador International airport, 25 miles southeast of the city.

"We are here because we want a dialogue, we want progress towards peace," Ungo said.

"Personally, this is a very emotional time for me. But personal feelings aside, we are here to seek peace, justice and democracy for El Salvador," Zamora said.

Ungo said two guerrilla commanders — Eduardo Sancho Castaneda, known as Ferman Cienfuegos, of the Armed Forces of National Liberation; and Joaquin Villa Lobos of the Revolutionary People's Army — would attend the talks, although a Salvadoran church source said they would.

El Salvador's five main guerrilla groups form the umbrella Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front.

"I cannot speak for Mr. Duarte, but the (rebels) have sufficient power, political and military, to start a conversation aimed at peace," Zamora said.

A guerrilla leader said that although the rebels are committed to attending the talks Monday, four key points remained to be settled in order for the negotiations to proceed smoothly.

Salvador Samayoa, one of seven members of the commission that represents the rebels' political and military fronts in negotiations, said Duarte has created a "circus atmosphere" in La Palma, the northern mountain town where the talks are to be held.

"There are no controls on the population and this could lead to an unpleasant incident," Samayoa said in a telephone interview from Panama with Radio Sonora of San Salvador.

Duarte has invited his supporters in the labor movement to organize a caravan of thousands of workers and peasants to accompany him to La Palma. Samayoa said rebels are concerned someone violent could mix with the crowd.

A French diplomat, who asked not to be identified for protocol reasons, said France's ambassador to El Salvador, Jean Pierre Chauvet, and other diplomats who arrived with Zamora and Ungo planned to travel to La Palma with the rebels.

Ungo said he wanted the diplomats to witness the talks because "it would guarantee a more complete and fair dialogue."

"I don't know if they will be invited to take part in the talks, but everybody else is going along for the drive so why shouldn't we," the French diplomat said.

Samayoa said the unresolved points were: — Demilitarization: The rebels have requested that a six-mile radius around La Palma be demilitarized 24 hours before the meeting. Samayoa said troops had been seen controlling very close to that perimeter.

— Security: He said a security arrangements within La Palma had not yet been established. Duarte said Saturday the Red Cross, Green Cross and Boy Scout Volunteers were being organized to provide crowd control and security.

Witnesses: Both sides have agreed upon San Salvador Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas, but Duarte has vetoed the presence of foreigners.

Leftist rebels moderating their goals amid falling strength

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Internal divisions and a series of punishing military drives have weakened the Salvadoran Revolutionary movement considerably over the last year, say sources both inside and close to the movement.

The sources, interviewed here and in Costa Rica, say the movement began to go into decline after the violent deaths of two prominent rebel leaders 12 months ago, and that the process was accelerated by the coming to power of civilian President Jose Napoleon Duarte on June 1. The moderate Christian Democrat, in a surprise move at the United Nations last week, offered to meet the leftist guerrillas Monday in (the town of La Palma near the Honduran border). Ruben Zamora, vice president of the rebel's political arm, denied that the guerrillas are weaker militarily but admitted that Duarte has the political initiative in the five-year-old civil war in El Salvador.

"Temporarily, Duarte has taken the political initiative," Zamora said in an interview in Costa Rica before the announcement of talks between

Jubilant Tiger fans go on a wild rampage

DETROIT (AP) — Rowdy fans celebrating the Detroit Tigers' World Series victory Sunday burned one patrol car and destroyed others, torched an overturned taxi, and set off smoke bombs as police closed freeways into the city.

Police also closed the Renaissance Center, a major downtown building complex, to clear the area, but two hours after the Tigers' 8-4 victory over the San Diego Padres, more than a thousand people milled in the street outside Tiger Stadium, occasionally tossing bottles at helmeted police and kicking sides of a smoking squad car.

"They destroyed five of them," said a police officer who declined to identify himself. Scores of officers, some in riot gear, and about three dozen mounted police moved in to clear Michigan Avenue, but the crowd dispersed slowly.

The street was clear by 10:15 p.m. EDT, about 2 1/2 hours after the game ended. Police also closed Hart Plaza, a downtown riverfront park, and dispersed a rowdy crowd there.

As people watched, a man walked to an overturned taxicab and removed the gasoline tank cap. Minutes later, he tossed a match and it burst into flames with a roar. Later, the crowd tossed a motorcycle into the flames.

Dozens of people were arrested and an undetermined number were injured, but police refused to provide details.

Lying in the middle of the street at the stadium was a man witnesses said was clubbed by police. Maureen Nystrom, 20, of Dearborn Heights, Mich., said she saw police officers hit the man, whom she identified as Anthony Mack.

Rescue vehicles could not get to him because of the crowd. Many streets surrounding the stadium were impassable because of the crowds.

Car horns blared throughout the city's center.

Street vendor Ron Smith clung to his pennants. "I'm praying just to survive," he said.

"You have to dodge a few beer cans, but what the hell," said Mike Labeuf of Taylor.

Elsewhere the celebration was more peaceful. "This is unbelievable," said Tigers owner and pizza mogul Tom Monaghan after the game. "This is fun. There isn't anything in my life that would be greater than this," he said, adding to companion Gov. James Blanchard, "even being governor."

"I agree," said Blanchard. "It's a very deserving team, and the fans were very loyal. It's real uplifting for the state."

About 45 minutes after the game ended, a helicopter bearing 200 pizzas landed just behind second base.

"Gentlemen," a voice on the pressbox loudspeaker said, "dinner is served."

Employees of Domino's pizza chain, which Monaghan owns, delivered the pizzas to the press box to feed about 850 writers and broadcasters.

For seven months, Tigers fans wailed the rallying cry of "Bless You Boys" as Detroit headed toward their first World Series since 1969.

Holding a square foot of sod from the field, Fred Amen, 17, of Dearborn, Mich., said, "Some fan came up to me and said 'Here, have a part of the World Series.' I couldn't resist."

"I think they've been real good fans in Detroit. They are real sports fans, and when they win, they're happy," said Jim Campbell, president of the Tigers. Looking at his mutilated playing field, he said, "Well, we don't have to play tomorrow."

For Bob Wilcoxson, 33, and Tommy Caslas, both of San Diego, it was a rainy, gloomy night.

"I'm a little disappointed, but the Padres did have a good year," said Caslas. "This isn't really the Padres we've seen."

San Rodney Smith, 42, Detroit, no piece of earth was more hallowed than the section of right field he held in his hands as he strutted down Michigan Avenue.

Ten miles from the stadium, the Motor City got more good news, as Ford Motor Co. reached a tentative contract agreement with the United Auto Workers union Sunday, while the union announced that a similar accord with General Motors Corp. was formally ratified. Both involved thousands of workers.

'Drunken' KSU fans celebrate in near riot

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Thousands of drunken Kansas State University football fans celebrating a victory over their arch-rival attacked police early Sunday in a "frightening" near-riot in which several officers were injured and 25 people were arrested, police said.

"We had several thousand drunk people on our hands ... and they started attacking officers," said Manhattan police Sgt. Darrell Yarnall. The situation came close to erupting into a riot, he said.

As many as 8,000 people, most of them students, had packed into a two-square-block area of shops and bars known as Aggieville to celebrate Kansas State's 24-7 victory Saturday over the University of Kansas, Yarnall said. The victory gave Kansas State the Governor's Cup, awarded each year to the winner of the game between the two schools.

Egypt asks Weinberger for U.S. arms sales to Jordan

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — Egypt asked the United States Sunday to sell Jordan air defense weapons whose sale was canceled earlier this year because of opposition by Israel and members of the U.S. Congress, Egyptian sources said.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the request was made during meetings Sunday between U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and President Hosni Mubarak and other senior Egyptian officials.

The sources said Weinberger refused to commit President Reagan's administration to supporting the sale of Stinger ground-to-air missiles, which Egypt said should be sold as an incentive to bring Jordan's King Hussein into the peace process with Israel.

They said Weinberger also refused to give assurances that the United States would meet Egyptian requests for more advanced weaponry for its own armed forces. Weinberger arrived Saturday for a three-day visit.

The Stinger is a shoulder-fired, heat-seeking missile most effective against low-flying aircraft. A major objection to its being sold to Jordan was the fear that it could fall into the hands of terrorists.

Reagan last March withdrew a request to sell more than 1,600 Stinger missiles to Jordan for $133 million after Hussein blasted U.S. Middle East policy as unprincipled and pro-Israel. Those comments set off a furor in Congress.

Hussein then said he would "look anywhere," including the Soviet Union, to buy weaponry, even though he traditionally has favored U.S. armaments.

The sources said Egyptian officials, including Defense Minister Field Marshal Abdel Halim Abu-Ghazala, were disappointed by Weinberger's initial response.

There was no comment on the report by U.S. officials traveling with Weinberger.

Egypt's request on behalf of Jordan for the missiles and for more military and economic aid for Egypt followed Hussein's decision on Sept. 22 to restore full diplomatic relations with Egypt.

The Egyptians were believed eager to show Hussein and other Arab leaders that Cairo's unique status as the only Arab country with relations both with Washington and Israel gives it a special role in promoting Arab causes.

UAW workers ratify GM labor contract

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Rank and file members of the United Auto Workers ratified a three-year labor contract with General Motors Corp. on Sunday, the same day the union reached a tentative accord with the Ford Motor Co.

The vote on the agreement with the nation's No. 1 automaker was 138,410 in favor to 102,529 against, or 57.4 percent to 42.6 percent, union spokeswoman Jessica Katz said.

The contract with General Motors gives it three years of labor peace and sets up worker aid programs of a size unprecedented in American industry.

The Ford agreement, covering 115,000 hourly workers in the United States, is similar to the GM pact and was struck during a 24-hour bargaining session that ended Sunday morning at Ford headquarters.

UAW President Owen Bieber, tired and unshaven, declared that the Ford pact "follows closely the pattern established at General Motors."

However, Ford said it preserved demands pressed by chief bargainer Peter Fasslio that the contract be tailored to fit Ford's smaller size and resources.

A major difference between the Ford and GM agreements is a four-year moratorium on Ford plant closings, according to former UAW President Douglas Fraser.

The ban is "a very firm one," Fraser told The Associated Press at Tiger Stadium during Sunday's World Series game between Detroit and the San Diego Padres.

Asked if the agreement would be costly to Ford, national bargaining chairman Stan Surma replied, "We don't think so."

Surma spoke at a news conference for Fasslio, who had lost his voice during the marathon negotiating session.

Both contracts would return to workers much of the $3.5 billion in wage and benefit concessions granted the two companies in 1982 at the depths of the U.S. car industry's recession.

Both companies now are making record profits, and the UAW had some difficulty getting its agreement approved by its rank and file at GM, many of whom said they did not gain back enough.

The union had also set out to place strict curbs on the subcontracting of work to overseas and non-union domestic shops, particularly those making parts and small cars.

Falling that, it got the companies to agree to make their best efforts to keep jobs and small-car manufacturing in the United States.

"Like General Motors, here too at Ford, job security was the key issue," Bieber said.

Both agreements would establish "job banks" to maintain income and provide retraining for workers who lose their jobs to subcontracting, automation or productivity gains.

GM's fund would provide up to $1 billion. Bieber said the Ford pact would be more than $300 million.

The union said the wages in the Ford agreement also follow closely the GM pact, which provides a 15-cent-an-hour pay raise to $12.82.

There would be no other base-rate raises over the contract's three years. But that raise, plus lump-sum payments, profit-sharing and cost-of-living allowances, would provide the average GM worker about $12,000 over the three years, the union says.

Like their GM counterparts, the Ford workers must ratify the accord before it can take effect.

The GM vote took a week longer than usual to give union leaders from Detroit headquarters time to scurry from union hall to union hall lobbying for and explaining the complex agreement.

Despite their current prosperity, GM and Ford expressed reservations about high labor rates and their ability to compete with foreign carmakers, particularly the Japanese.

GM made a company record $3.73 billion last year and is expected to earn more than $5 billion this year.

No. 2 Ford made $1.87 billion and is expected to top $3 billion for 1984.

"They got to drinking, it kept getting more crowded and they started to take over the streets," said Yarnall, who was among officers from Manhattan, Junction City and the Kansas Highway Patrol who were called to the scene. "I can tell you it definitely was frightening."

Police Sgt. Vernon Brown said the "mass disturbance" erupted about midnight.

The celebrants, chanting "We're number one," started to get unruly and choke off streets, he said. One officer was stabbed in the forearm with a knife and others were pelted with bottles and debris, he said.

Reinforcements were called in, and it took about 75 officers, most of them wearing riot helmets and carrying wooden clubs, a couple of hours to clear the area and restore peace, Brown said.

Six officers were treated at a hospital and released, and several other officers sustained injuries that did not require hospital treatment, Brown said. Most of the injuries were cuts and bruises on the face and arms, he said.

Twenty-five people were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct and battery of a police officer, Yarnall said. By mid-morning Sunday, most had been released after posting bail, he said.

Rioting fans in Detroit destroyed a city police car

There were no reports of serious property damage, but at one point a crowd rushed into a convenience store and began stealing beer from the cooler, Brown said.

Yarnall said police did not use tear gas, but that a "civilian type" set off a canister of tear gas in a bar. After Saturday's game ended, about a half-dozen uniformed security guards confronted a large group of students who surged onto the field to turn down the goal posts, authorities said.

Duarte and the rebel leaders. Zamora planned to represent the Democratic Revolutionary Front, the guerrillas' political ally, along with its president Guillermo Ungo in La Palma.

An important dissident within the guerrilla movement, interviewed in Costa Rica on condition he not be named, said the strategy of the Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front, or FMLN, is to push for a negotiated settlement while abandoning many of the program goals the FMLN set up when it was formed by five guerrilla armies four years ago.

The dissident, who opposes the policy, said it had come to the fore as the Salvadoran Communist Party, a Soviet-line group, gradually took over policy formulation within the FMLN over the last year.

A Western intelligence source confirmed this, saying the Communists had been the main players in rebel talks with U.S. special envoy Richard Stone last year and in contacts with the Salvadoran government.

The Communists, the third biggest rebel group in numerical terms, are said by these sources to be responsible for the development of the rebels' current political platform, which calls for establishing a government of broad participation and is more moderate than previous programs.

The platform, which guerrilla commanders are likely to bring to Duarte at Monday's meeting, supports an interim power-sharing agreement before elections are held.

The program is considered unacceptable by Duarte and those to his political right and is also rejected by radicals within the rebel movement.

"The focus on negotiations leads to a compromising of the goals of the revolution," the leading dissident said. "The government of broad participation is not only vague, it is unobtainable."

There is some belief that the international communist movement would prefer to avoid provoking further U.S. military activity in Central America that could threaten the survival of the Marxist Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

In April 1983, a clique of leftist radicals within the Popular Liberation Forces, the biggest guerrilla group, killed Ana Melinda Anaya Montes, who was the FPL's second-in-command and considered a moderate.

Shortly after her death, FPL supreme commander Cayetano

Carpio committed suicide.

The charismatic Carpio, who had been jailed and tortured for his beliefs before many of the current rebel commanders were born, had exercised a powerful influence within the FMLN, espousing a radical, Marxist-Leninist ideology.

After his death, guerrilla and Western officials said, the Communist Party, from which Carpio split in 1970, reasserted its ideological hold over the FPL.

By late 1983, meanwhile, the second largest guerrilla group, the Revolutionary Peoples' Army, was registering startling military triumphs in its area of influence east of the Lempa River.

Its commander, Joaquin Villalobos, instructed cohorts to begin a huge drive to incorporate new fighters to build up his army, according to a rebel document from 1983. To get new fighters, in some cases the rebels used forced recruitment, a tactic they had avoided in the past as unpopular.

Senators stall reforestation cuts

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A group of 18 U.S. senators, nearly all of them from the West, are working to stall Reagan administration plans to eliminate next year the $30 million reforestation trust fund.

The fund is used to pay for tree planting and timber-stand improvements. The administration has proposed legislation that would end the fund Sept. 30, the end of the 1985 fiscal year.

Led by Oregon Sen. Bob Packwood, who sponsored the trust-fund legislation four years ago, the group of senators were led by David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, urging the administration to forgo its plans.

"The reforestation trust fund clearly works," Packwood said. "What sense does it make to destroy a program that not only has helped to reduce an enormous timber backlog, but also guarantees permanent funding to replace and plan for future generations of trees on our national forest lands?"

According to The Oregonian newspaper in Portland, joining Packwood on the letter were all the senators from Oregon, Washington, Idaho, California, Montana, and one each from New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming and Georgia.

Queen tours ranch house on last day of vacation

BIG HORN, Wyo. (AP) — With snow-dusted mountains providing a background, Queen Elizabeth II toured a Victorian-era ranch house preserved as a Western museum, chatted with its cowboy caretaker and petted his dogs Sunday, the last day of her vacation.

Andy Kukulchka flew a Union Jack from the porch at the Quarter Circle A Ranch to greet the queen.

She walked with Kukulchka and patted the heads of his golden Labrador retrievers, Katie and Boe, after arriving by limousine at the ranch where he is foreman and caretaker. The ranch includes the Bradford Brinton Memorial museum.

He was dressed in his usual garb — faded denim jeans, work shirt, weathered jacket, well-worn Western boots and cowboy hat — in contrast to her suit of nubby brown and grey wool, brown leather shoes and beige gloves.

Queen Elizabeth's headquarters during a mainly private vacation in Wyoming is the Canyon Ranch down the road, owned by horse racing manager Lord Porchester and his Wyoming-born wife.

Lady Porchester, the former Jean Margaret Wallop, was raised at Canyon Ranch where the queen has been staying at a simple three-bedroom house during the "first" three-day stop on her three-week visit to Canada and the United States.

During the nearly three decades he worked for — their father, Kukulchka taught Lady Porchester, her brother U.S. Sen. Malcolm Wallop and their siblings to hunt, fish and ride. His wife, Grace, has been coming for the queen back at Canyon Ranch.

Other official greeters at the Quarter Circle A included Dan Nelson, a guide at the museum during the summer months when it is open to the public, and Dorothy Savage, housekeeper for the ranch house since 1945.

The queen spent 15 minutes touring the grounds outside the Brinton Memorial, enjoying the bright sunlight before going inside to see the artifacts, furnishings and decorations still intact as they might have been found in a well-to-do ranch house late in the last century.

Sunday afternoon's schedule, like most of the queen's three days in the West, was private. Kukulchka said the Porchesters and their royal visitor would picnic in the sagebrush of the foothills behind Canyon Ranch.

He was pleased that a herd of elk had been spotted nearby that morning.

"There's also moose and deer up there, and I hope they'll cooperate for the queen and make an appearance," he said.

The queen was scheduled to leave Wyoming at midday Monday.

Idaho loses on road funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Funding proposals for two Idaho highway projects, a major downtown connector in Boise and a new portion of Idaho 55 on Horseshoe Bend Hill, were defeated in a House committee Friday in the closing hours of the 98th Congress. Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, said.

A conference committee was unable to iron out differences between the Senate and House versions of the Federal Highway Act that granted more than $7 billion in federal highway money to all 50 states.

The Senate passed the bill last week, but because of big differences between House and Senate lists of hometown highway projects, the measure had to go to a conference committee.

The bill, which would have been financed by the federal gasoline tax, included funding for a new highway on Horseshoe Bend Hill, where mud slides have ravaged the road in the past few years.

Bill Scheit, a district engineer with the state highway department, said study of the Horseshoe Bend Hill project will continue on schedule.

The Highway Act also included $7.5 million for the Broadway-Clinden project in Boise, which was estimated to cost $35 million.

Falling rocks kill two in car

HOOD RIVER, Ore. (AP) — Two children were killed and four people injured when rocks as large as 2 feet across fell off the sides of the Columbia River Gorge and hit a passing car, police said.

Jacob Peterson, 8, and his cousin

Corrine Herrera, 9, died in the accident Saturday on Interstate 84 about nine miles west of here, police said.

Rocks struck the side of the station wagon in which they were riding, and a large rock landed on top of the car behind the front seat.

Idaho wilderness fight shifts to Forest Service's arena

BOISE (AP) — The fight over Idaho wilderness is moving to a new battlefield, as the task of recommending how much Idaho backcountry should be protected falls to the U.S. Forest Service.

Between now and next spring, officials of the state's national forests plan to recommend how much non-wilderness should be designated in the federal government's 9 million acres of undeveloped lands.

The issue of what to do with Idaho's roadless forestland was left in Forest Service hands, at least temporarily, on Thursday when Sen. Jim McClure announced the failure of his attempt to pass an Idaho wilderness bill in Congress.

"We will go through the planning process and make recommendations about what we think it should be," Boise National Forest Supervisor Jack Lavin said Friday. "But keep in mind, the final decision is a political one, since it is made by Congress."

Lavin said Congress has yet to act on the last Forest Service wilderness study, the 1979 Second Roadless Area Review and Evaluation. RARE II studied 6.5 million acres of roadless lands and recommended about 1 million acres of wilderness and 640,000 acres for further study. A federal court in 1982 overturned the study.

Now, each national forest must protect roadless lands until it completes a new study, and then protect its recommended wilderness areas until Congress acts. Recommended non-wilderness lands could be opened to development after the study is completed.

If Congress had acted this year, it would have made most of those decisions, and the Forest Service would have stopped most of its wilderness studies.

But negotiators were unable to forge a compromise between competing environmental and political interests, and the stage is being set for a new round of battles over the wilderness question.

Legal challenges to the Forest Service plans can be brought through administrative appeals and even lawsuits.

Joe Hinson, director of the Idaho Forest Industry Council, said that the group will turn its attention and money to those plans and away from a wilderness bill in Congress.

"What we will do is spend our chips on the forest," Hinson said. "In litigation," Hinson said.

Idaho Wilderness Coalition member Chris Yoder of Boise said conservationists are worried that the Forest Service's recommendations will be biased.

Yoder noted that the agency is overseen by Assistant Agriculture Secretary John Crowell, who previously was an executive with a large timber company.

"We could be shooting craps with loaded dice because Crowell is the head of the Forest Service," Yoder said. "But we have ultimate fallback... Lawsuits have overturned a lot of bad attempts by the Forest Service in the past. We have that club on our side."

Each national forest's wilderness recommendation will be part of a larger land-use plan for all activities in the whole forest.

The recommendations will affect 1.2 million acres in the Boise National Forest, 941,000 acres in the Payette National Forest, and 1.1 million acres in the Sawtooth National Forest, including the White Cloud Mountains.

State cops give county help

IDAHO CITY (AP) — Boise County sheriff's deputies will be able to devote more time to investigating a recent series of burglaries, thanks to the Idaho State Police's decision to keep up patrols on Idaho 21 and 55, Sheriff Lynn Bowerman says.

State police officers will maintain their summertime patrol schedule in Boise County, which normally would be discontinued in late October, ISP Lt. Chuck Peugh said.

"With the problems he (Bowerman) has, we don't want to leave the people up there high and dry," Peugh said.

Bowerman's department absorbed a 26 percent budget cut for fiscal 1985, which started Oct. 1. His staff, including deputies and dispatchers, has been cut from nine to six. Some Boise County departments were cut even more.

The cuts were made after county voters rejected a $150,000 override tax levy in May. That override would have helped make up for Forest Service timber revenues, a major source of funds, which have dropped from more than $450,000 in 1981 to $55,000 in 1983.

The sheriff's office now is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. At other times, emergency calls are routed to the state police.

However, deputies are scheduled on duty for all but the early morning hours.

Bowerman said the state police decided to maintain patrols after meeting with county and other state officials, including state Reps. Lydia Edwards, R-Donnelly, and Bob Fry, R-Horseshoe Bend.

Peugh said an ISP officer will patrol Idaho 21 through Idaho City and Lowman daily. At least one officer, and sometimes two, will cover Idaho 55 through Horseshoe Bend and Banks every day, he said.

Night patrols will be made as traffic warrants, Peugh said.

"This is a temporary situation, unless Boise County can get themselves straightened away," Peugh said.

With state police helping on the county's two highways, Bowerman said, deputies will have more time to patrol county roads and to investigate burglaries.

About 10 to 15 cabins, houses, and other buildings have been broken into since Oct. 1, the sheriff said. In the biggest, thieves made off with an estimated $20,000 worth of equipment, tools, motorcycles, tractors and other goods from cabins at Pioneerville.

Low funds hurt UI grad program

MOSCOW (AP) — Superhuman efforts by students and faculty no longer can ensure a high-quality graduate program at the University of Idaho, a 200-page in-house review says.

"Faculty members have reached the limits of their abilities in time and effort," the study says. "It is increasingly difficult to meet the demands of maintaining quality."

Most upsetting, according to the review, are heavy teaching loads that interfere with the graduate faculty's ability to attract — and make good use of — research dollars. Then, too, there are the problems of an underfunded university library, low graduate student stipends, a lack of up-to-date equipment and insufficient access to computers.

"It is testimony to the quality of the faculty that, with stringent financial support, they have succeeded so well with their graduate students," says the report prepared for a team from the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges.

A non-governmental review group, NWASC will be on the Moscow campus next week to conduct the university's 10-year accreditation survey. UI has been continuously accredited since 1918.

UI's study fills three volumes and includes a discussion of finances, institutional objectives, library resources, physical plant, continuing education, faculty, administration, students, research and graduate programs.

Most deficiencies described — like the cancellation of 200 serial subscriptions by the UI library — are linked to state budget cutbacks during the past five years.

Most strengths — including a $10 million increase in funding for research since 1978 — are tied to the dedication and commitment of individual faculty members, "near superhuman effort," according to the report.

The longest litany of woes is found in the appraisal of UI's Graduate School.

Bush-Ferraro duel: One to mull over

They both had their moments, the vice-presidential debaters. By that we mean good moments and bad. Rep. Ferraro was somewhat stumbling in her presentation — at least part of the time. She had the disconcerting habit of looking down as if to consult notes she was making.

And her tour of the horizon, especially of Central American terrain, was pretty shaky. She was strong in many of her diatribes to Vice President Bush's attacks on the Mondale-Ferraro ticket's positions, however, extremely effective when she got angry at him and also in her closing statement.

And she demonstrated, in talking about her senior running mate, Mr. Mondale, that it is possible for a vice presidential candidate to be supportive and respectful of the man running for president without being obsequious and groveling about it.

Here she differed from Mr. Bush who, in the grand and gushy tradition, fawned all over his president in an appalling way. Mr. Bush had much more authority in the second (foreign policy) part of the debate than the first (domestic affairs), and in this area he was much more masterful than she.

(Both debaters seemed skilled to us, incidentally, in justifying what were, in both cases, politically difficult and vulnerable positions on abortion.)

Mr. Bush was at his worst, we thought, when he got stacy and by turns seemed to be frantic and heavily-handed in his politics and overpracticed jokes and highly imitative — down to the last-aw-shucks gesture — of his mentor, Ronald Reagan, who didn't do so well at the old gig Sunday night. These moments were almost embarrassing. Let Reagan be Reagan, as the saying goes — George Bush should be himself.

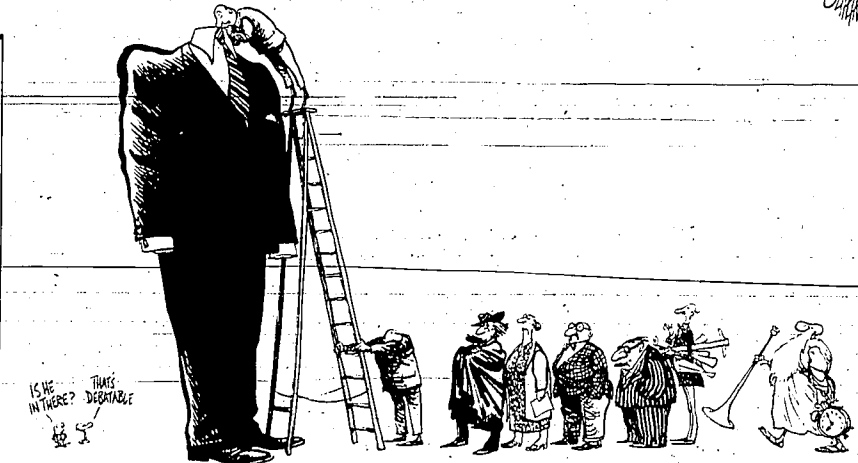

A word on expectations: Much that was anticipated didn't come to pass. The delicacies about how he mustn't bully and she mustn't shriek and so on seemed irrelevant. His "preppy" manner, a source of anxiety to his own friends, was not apparent.

She, again defying the common wisdom, held her own in the debate with a more experienced public figure and so may have furthered her purpose of demonstrating that she is a plausible candidate for vice president. This is something George Bush didn't have to worry about.

Much as we like to spot outright winners and losers, this one seemed to us a "muller." It will be much muller over by the public before the winner is proclaimed.

SOME PEOPLE TO SEE YOU, MR. PRESIDENT — YOUR DRAMA COACH, YOUR SPEECH COACH, YOUR DEBATING COACH, YOUR IMAGE TECHNICIAN, YOUR KITCHEN REMODELER, ER... ETCETERA.

Debate scene characterized by drama

David Leroy

There is a powerful drama about presidential debates. Even as you sit in front of your TV, this is politics as a gladiator sport, as a naked combat. Tonight the "Great Communicator" without note cards faces "Fighting Fritz" without Ferraro. Neither man has any place to hide from the prying camera, the questions of the reporters and the criticisms of his opponent. Even worse, each debater must face and master the anxiety inside his chest and the thickness of his tongue.

Inside the hall the audience feels a tension of its own. Most of us have waited for blocks through the drizzle and chill of the Kentucky evening to get here. We passed through security perimeters with barricades to the sweeping steps and plaza of the Center for the Arts that is brilliantly lit by a rack of floodlights held a hundred feet in the air by a portable crane. Secret Service personnel with their stiped pants and metal summer frames serve as solemn greeters just inside the doors.

The auditorium is much like our own Morrison Center, but seems smaller somehow, especially with the double-tier platform bristling with camera tripods which cover over or block the view from 200 seats. We know somehow that the real audience, millions strong, will be seated there and in the balcony boxes which have been converted into network booths where the nation's new stars sit with their backs to the stage, practicing and smiling.

This is an opening night to end all opening nights. The media hangers for a stumble to make a story. The President will work to protect his lead. Mondale must go for broke as an aggressor.

Without knowing any of the dialogue, this crowd can guess the plot the writer will take.

Yet, Richard Nixon learned in 1960 that it's the personalities people see at home, not the thespians' command of the immediate audience that counts. By being here tonight we will have forfeited any certain idea of who is winning in the television arena of public opinion.

Still the tension and excitement in this house makes us all lean forward to fix upon the stage. The layout and props there are starkly simple. At stage left sits the moderator's table with a swivel chair so high that Barbara Walters will soon have to leap backwards to reach its seat. Downstage right is the panelist's set with its curving wood corners built for four chairs, but containing only three tonight because the combatants were unable to agree on a last interrogator. And in the center, dwarfed by the length and width of the stage itself, are the only tools of combat. Sitting on an oval rug spaced four steps apart and slightly facing toward each other are two identical podiums. On four feet of polished wood base rests a molded blue fiberglass top with a triple mount of microphones used to avoid embarrassing technical problems. Each podium was flown to Louisville in its own steel crate. Each has been gripped and tested by the man who will work behind it tonight. Each has a small hook on the front, imperceptible in the hall, where usually the presidential seal is hung.

But tonight neither has a seal, for the President is only a debater here. He is contesting with another man for the right to stand behind and under and around that seal for "four more years."

At 8:38 the panelists enter and take their places to light applause. At 8:49 Mrs. Walters launches to her left as the audience chuckles. At 8:50 both "first" ladies enter simultaneously. The crowd greets them with a reserved standing ovation. The minutes seem to become longer, especially as the National President of the League of Women Voters gives some preliminary instructions to us.

It is 8:58. Still the candidates are not on stage. Barbara swings to her right to look over the audience. Diane Sawyer coughs nervously and chats with another panelist who gulps a glass of water.

Suddenly the President is visible, standing nearly alone, waiting for a cue to move from the wings. And then he is alone — striding quickly and confidently to center stage, past his podium to meet the firmly walking challenger in a brief handshake. As the two part and take positions, there is a sense of electricity, of history, of risk, of drama in the hall. It grips us all, just as it must make the debaters anxious for action.

We do not have to wait long. The first question has an unfriendly implication that seems to discomfort the President. His voice cracks slightly as he begins to frame the answer and the emotions in the Hall begin a coaster ride that will sweep us to personal highs and lows. Some of us applaud continually despite rules against clapping and continually to stop. The night will leave all of us with a powerful, moving memory of this tense struggle of words and ideas where the stakes are "only" the future of the nation.

This is an America where fast food and fiberglass podiums carry us through the common days. But there are occasionally uncommon days when we do something important for ourselves. Debate day and election day are two times when the people's opinions do count. So here in the hall and at your house, we will make a little history in the next 90 minutes. A President may be chosen by how well he does tonight.

Idaho Lt. Gov. David Leroy attended the first presidential debate between President Ronald Reagan and Democratic challenger Walter Mondale in Louisville, Ky. last week.

Hansen isn't voting

I have a question for that self-proclaimed champion of the people, George the Dragon Slayer. I would like to know why Idaho's congressional representative has been in Twin Falls following a group of out-of-state ministers around and appearing on radio talk shows while most of the nation's law makers have been in Washington, D.C., trying to settle the money bill problem? Difficult as the problem of national finances is, we certainly don't need for the government to come to a dead halt.

"George votes right" is a campaign slogan of the Hansen faithful but I don't see how he can vote at all when he's in Nebraska or Iran or who knows where, instead of doing what he talks so loudly about doing, "representing Idaho." Now he's in Idaho campaigning before Congress has even recessed, and before that he was busily trying to defend himself because he didn't see fit to obey the law.

Isn't it interesting how quickly our elected representatives rush to change the law when it starts to hit horns on radio talk shows while most of the nation's law makers have been in Washington, D.C., trying to settle the money bill problem? Difficult as the problem of national finances is, we certainly don't need for the government to come to a dead halt.

"George votes right" is a campaign slogan of the Hansen faithful but I don't see how he can vote at all when he's in Nebraska or Iran or who knows where, instead of doing what he talks so loudly about doing, "representing Idaho." Now he's in George any less guilty of breaking the law himself.

Unusual logic seems to be a hallmark of Idaho politics though, take for example the Dragon Slayer cartoon book and now the attack on the FBI; withdrawn for the same reason by the same people — to distort, misrepresent and cloud the truth.

If you recognize the latest effort for the sleazy, sorry piece of trash it is, then you have got to understand that the George comic was drawn at the same table with the same lack of consideration for the facts.

And the next time you see that dragon slayer, ask him how he voted on the money bill, ask him how he managed to vote at all when he wasn't even in his office.

Poster vandalism a problem in Hansen-Stallings contest

BOISE — A huge billboard for Richard Stallings is sporting a new look these days — black paint defacing the Stallings photograph that's the billboard's centerpiece.

Vandalism of the other side of the campaign material is common in a hotly contested race. In the battle between Stallings, the Democratic challenger, and Republican George Hansen shapes up as the state's closest election this fall.

The vandalism already has started. No one can say, or would admit, that campaign volunteers have done any of it.

But besides the Boise billboard defaced by vandals, another Stallings board in Burley also sports black-painted mustache and whiskers that weren't there when the sign went up.

It's no small feat, because both billboards, vandalized in a very similar manner, are at least 20 feet off the ground.

Quane Kenyon

Both candidates decry the practice, but acknowledge it will happen. And Hansen says he's been through a lot of "dirty tricks" in more than 20 years of campaigning in Idaho.

There was the time he was advised that "the other side" was paying a sort of "bounty" on his campaign signs.

"They were paying something like 25 cents or 50 cents for people who turned in my yard signs and posters. People were picking them up by the truckful," he said.

That was several campaigns ago. This time, Hansen says, as soon as his big billboards went up in the Boise and Pocatello areas in recent days, the vandalism started.

But Hansen has an advantage over Stallings. His posters don't have his picture on them, so most of them can't be as easily vandalized.

"Nobody dislikes George Hansen more than I do," said Angie Neitzel, a campaign volunteer at Stallings headquarters in Pocatello. "But I wouldn't touch a George Hansen poster. I know how expensive they are, and how hard it is to raise money to pay for them."

Mrs. Neitzel said that's about the first thing she tells campaign workers in local meetings — that no matter what the temptation, don't vandalize the other side.

"The word is out to every volunteer that that's intolerable and unacceptable and will not be permitted," said Stallings.

Hansen said he doesn't even like to talk about campaign vandalism, because that seems to fuel the problem.

But he said he likes a "gentleman's agreement" between the candidates that they won't encourage, or tolerate, vandalism of the other side.

Besides the Boise and Burley damage, Stallings said some of his campaign material also has been tampered with in the Jerome area. And Mrs. Neitzel said it's almost impossible to repair the damage, because only enough printed material is ordered to cover the billboards which are under contract.

Stallings said he had similar problems in his 1982 campaign against Hansen. "We had some (vandalism) in the Upper Snake River Valley, in the Bonneville County area, in the last campaign and it happened in the Twin Falls area," he said.

But Stallings said he doesn't plan to concentrate on large billboards in the final three weeks of the campaign. His effort will be more toward the mass media like newspapers and television.

"I don't think we are spending as much this time as last time" on billboards, he said.

Hansen said he's endured a lot of "dirty tricks" in his many congressional and U.S. Senate campaigns.

But some stick out in his memory.

Like the time someone went along with a pickup truck in the Pocatello area, gathering up small yard signs. Many were found later in a garbage dumpster.

Guthers wound up in the parking lot of a local Mormon Church chapel.

"Maybe there was some sort of a message there," Hansen said.

Next debate to be different: officials

By DAVID GOELLER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Top officials of the Reagan and Mondale campaigns drew a picture Sunday of what to expect from next Sunday's debate: a president armed with vision instead of statistics and a challenger spilling for a fight.

"We're going to go into the debate next Sunday night and have it out," said James A. Johnson, chairman of Walter F. Mondale's campaign. He said the Democrat would "confront" President Reagan about American policy in Lebanon during the debate on foreign policy.

As for Reagan, his campaign chairman, Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, reiterated his contention that Reagan had an off night in the Oct. 7 debate because aides had overburdened him with statistics.

"There was much too infense, much too statistical, and I think that's much of a burden on the president, so that when he went into that debate in Louisville, his circuits literally were overloaded," Laxalt said.

"For the next debate, he said, 'I think the greatest thing we can do, and we will do this week believe me, is let Ronald Reagan be Ronald Reagan. ... He should deal as he always has on a conceptual visionary basis. That's where Ronald Reagan is best. That's the reason he is where he is. He didn't become president because he had statistical knowledge."

Johnson and Laxalt made their comments on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley." Discussing the debates on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" were the respective campaign managers, Bob Beckel for Mondale and Ed Rollins for Reagan.

Johnson said Mondale would ask Reagan about the vice President George Bush's claim during the vice presidential debate last Thursday that the Democrats have said U.S. troops died in "shame" in Lebanon.

"I think we'll have to go into that debate and discuss it," Johnson said. "Confront the president with this charge, which is not true, and ask him for his explanation and hopefully his apology."

Beckel said that for the next debate, "Mondale is going to be Mondale, the Mondale you saw Sunday night. I think he's going to be in command of the issues. I think he's going to ask Reagan a lot of hard questions. And I think we're going to expect some answers."

"This one is a question that concerns the most fundamental issue of this campaign," Beckel said. "That's a question of nuclear weapons and war and peace — Ronald Reagan's greatest failing so far. I don't think he can 'Ah, shucks' himself out of this one."

Rollins predicted Reagan would rebound because he "always performs well in a second go-round, and I think he'll do extremely well."

He said that in the Oct. 7 encounter, which most political observers and voter polls say Mondale won, "the president may have gotten caught a little off guard by Mondale's performance. But I think there's no question he himself will be performing extremely well next time."

Rollins disputed Laxalt's assessment that Reagan had been overprepared for the first debate.

"I don't think that was the problem," he said. "I think there may have been a little complacency on our part. ... It's been very hard to take the Mondale campaign very seriously. I think now we're taking him seriously."

"This was the first week we really felt we were in a campaign," Rollins said. "I think what Mr. Mondale did in that debate is he became a credible candidate."

Rollins said that although Reagan "did an effective job" in the first debate, he "wasn't Ronald Reagan."

"Ronald Reagan gets measured against Ronald Reagan," he said. "He's like Babe Ruth. Everytime he went to bat people expected him to hit a home run. I think he (Reagan) hit a triple."

Ferraro says Bush shouldn't embrace right-wing position

NEW YORK (AP) — Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro said Sunday that Vice President George Bush's wholehearted embrace of the Reagan administration's conservative philosophy may backfire if he seeks the presidency in 1988.

Ms. Ferraro also refused to say whether she thinks President Reagan's performance in his first debate with Walter Mondale makes the Republican incumbent's age, 73, and competence a credible issue.

"You're not going to push me to answer that," she said after several questions on the subject. She said Americans should make that judgment for themselves.

On NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," Ms. Ferraro said Bush's apparent departure from his earlier, more moderate stands is likely to cause him political difficulties later.

"I think his total support of the president is going to be a bothersome thing for him in 1988. He embraced wholeheartedly the right wing philosophy that has driven this administration for the past four years and is part of their platform," she said.

During the vice presidential debate

Thursday night, Bush minimized differences he has had with the president over such issues as abortion and the economy. Bush called Reagan's economic policies "voodoo economics" while both were candidates in the 1980 primary season. Bush now says he supports Reagan's opposition to abortion unless the mother's life is in danger — a departure from his past exceptions of rape, incest or risk of the mother's life.

Ms. Ferraro acknowledged a difference of her own with Mondale, on whether the U.S. invasion of Grenada in 1983 was justified to save the lives of American students. But she said Mondale has some additional information on the subject which she does not have and has not sought.

Ferraro and I do not agree on that. He is ready to believe the invasion was justified because he has some information with reference to those student's lives that I do not have." Asked why she hadn't been given that information, she said, "I never bothered to go find out."

She said she faults the administration for failing to talk with the Grenada government during the two preceding years when overtures from that country were made.

Mondale: weapons a 'hoax'

By DAVID ESPO
The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Walter F. Mondale charged Sunday that President Reagan's proposal for "Star Wars" space weaponry is a "hoax," adding sarcastically that the president's approach to arms control is "if there's a dangerous weapon, buy it."

Mondale also renewed his challenge to the president to embrace a freeze on weapons in space. In his weekly radio address, the Democrat said Reagan's plan for anti-satellite weapons "would not protect us. It would squander hundreds of billions of dollars."

Mondale said he would spend the week campaigning on "the most crucial issue in this election: war and peace," ahead of a second presidential debate focusing on foreign policy issues next Sunday.

Reagan, who spent a quiet weekend at the presidential retreat in Camp David, Md., campaigns Monday in Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina and Tuesday in Illinois.

"Vice President George Bush, a former college baseball star, traveled to Detroit on Sunday to watch the World Series.

Mondale's running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, sidestepped questions about whether Reagan's debate performance makes his age, 73, a credible campaign issue. "You're not going to push me to answer that," she said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

Ms. Ferraro also said that Bush's wholehearted embrace of the Reagan administration's conservative philosophy after years of a more moderate stance "is going to be bothersome" should Bush seek the presidency in 1988.

Mondale said the Soviet announcement Saturday of deployment of long-range cruise missiles was part of the "dreary pattern" of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union in which each side matches the other's arms capability.

"There's no question that we're

Walter Mondale meets with the press after taping his weekly radio broadcast now in a very serious arms race, we are less secure and the cost of defense is needlessly soaring," he said.

He said Reagan's approach could be summarized this way: "If there's an arms control agreement, oppose it. If there's a dangerous weapon, buy it. If the Pentagon wants a blank check, sign it. If there's a crucial fact, don't learn it."

Mondale first challenged Reagan several months ago to drop his "Star Wars" proposal, calling for a moratorium on deployment and testing of such weapons.

In renewing his call, he said, "If a new system would truly protect our people from nuclear weapons, I'd be for it. But based on what we know now, Star Wars is a hoax."

Mondale was in public for only a few hours during the day, attending church services, driving across town to a radio station to make his weekly address, then stopping to repeat much the same message outside the studio for the benefit of television cameras.

Asked about next Sunday's confrontation in Kansas City, Mondale said the debate is "very important."

When a reporter asked him if his chances of victory would be "down the tubes" without a strong showing, he replied, "I don't look at it that way at all."

Most public opinion polls indicate Mondale cut into Reagan's healthy lead with his performance in their first debate, and the Democrat's aides see a strong showing in the second debate as crucial to his chances for victory.

"We're going to go into the debate next Sunday night and have it out," especially on the deaths of Americans in Lebanon over the past 18 months, said James A. Johnson, Mondale's campaign chairman.

As for Reagan's strategy, his campaign chairman, Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, said, "I think the greatest thing we can do, and we will do this week believe me, is let Ronald Reagan be Ronald Reagan."

Their comments came on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

Bush goes to baseball game

WASHINGTON (AP) — Given the choice of campaigning in Arizona or attending the World Series in Detroit, Vice President George Bush headed for the ball game Sunday.

Bush scrapped earlier plans for campaign appearances in Tucson, Ariz., and set out for Tiger Stadium to watch the Detroit Tigers try to whip the San Diego Padres to win the best-of-seven series.

For Bush, it was an opportunity to mix business and pleasure. What better way to campaign than to appear at a stadium packed with 52,000 people at an event watched on television by millions at home?

Bush was the captain of his college baseball team at Yale and remains an avid follower of the sport.

From a practical standpoint, at least, there was no real need for Bush to go to Arizona. The state packs only seven electoral votes and President Reagan already is believed to be far ahead of Walter Mondale there.

Campaign strategists obviously thought more votes could be won in Detroit than in Tucson.

From Detroit, Bush heads west for a five-day campaign swing through California, Oregon, Washington and Iowa. Fully half of the trip will be devoted to California, a state where Reagan is leading but Mondale is catching up.

Shultz to meet Canadian leaders

TORONTO (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz travels to Canada on Monday for a 23-hour visit intended to maintain the momentum of rapidly improving relations with Canada's new Progressive Conservative government.

The meetings will give Shultz his first opportunity to review with new Foreign Secretary Joe Clark disputes between the neighboring nations that arose under the Liberal governments of Pierre Elliott Trudeau and John Turner.

The Tory government led by Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, elected in a landslide last month, has pleased the United States by moving quickly to bolster Canada's armed forces and promising to revise nationalistic investment policies.

But there is no indication of any movement on the impose on acid rain.

Congress to face leftover bills again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation on immigration and civil rights will be at the top of the agenda in January when the 99th Congress starts up where the 98th left off Friday.

Senators and House members, eager to face Washington to campaign for re-election, also left behind several significant environmental control bills, including "superfund" program to clean up abandoned chemical waste dumps, and much of President Reagan's wish-list of legislation.

All proposed bills and unconfirmed nominations to federal posts die at the end of a two-year Congress and must be re-introduced as new bills when the new Congress convenes. Often, complex legislation takes years to pass.

In contrast to the first years of Reagan's term, when Congress approved the lion's share of the president's economic program, this session ended without action on several White House proposals.

Dying with adjournment were:

- Reagan's nomination of his counselor, Edwin Meese III, as attorney general.
- Tuition tax credit proposal.
- Line-item veto proposal.
- Enterprise zone legislation.

- School prayer constitutional amendment.
- Balanced federal budget constitutional amendment.

The civil rights legislation led to some of the most turbulent debate during the waning days of the session. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., denounced his colleagues with shouts of "Shame on this body!" for opting to dump the legislation, said by its conservative foes to go beyond its intended purpose.

The bill was designed to nullify a Supreme Court decision that limited the application of a law enabling the government to withhold aid from colleges and other institutions that engaged in sex discrimination.

Under the decision, the cut-off of funds may apply only to the specific department or program in which the discrimination took place — not the entire institution.

On immigration, the House and Senate came close to agreement on the first sweeping revision of U.S. immigration law in 30 years.

The bill, dubbed "Simpson-Mazzoli" for its sponsors — Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., and Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky. — was designed to stop illegal aliens from crossing U.S. borders. It called for stiff penalties against employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers, but it also offered legal status to aliens who could prove they lived in the country since before Jan. 1, 1981.

Compromise was deemed impossible after the two houses disagreed about placing a $1 billion annual cap on federal assistance to aliens legalized under the measure. It was the second Congress in a row that took immigration control legislation to its final days and then failed to act.

Following is a list of some of the other major items that failed to get through Congress, many of which are likely to emerge again next year:

- Expansion of the $1.6 billion waste clean-up "superfund." The House voted to expand the fund to $10.2 billion, and the Senate Environment Committee approved expansion to $7.5 billion, but the Senate Finance Committee failed to act on the measure.
- Reauthorization of the Clean Water Act, which fell after two senators blocked Senate debate because they did not like the impact of the bill's standards on two pulp mills in Alaska.

Cancer deaths up in rural areas with growth in industry

NEW YORK (AP) — An "alarming" increase in cancer deaths has shown up in rural counties where employment in petroleum and chemical industries has risen in the past 25 years, a research group said Sunday.

The finding suggests a stronger link between toxic waste and cancer than previously shown, the Council on Economic Priorities, a private research center on public policy, said in a preliminary report on a five-year study.

Cancer deaths increased 265 percent from 1950 to 1975 in 59 rural counties with large concentrations of chemical and petroleum industries, the council said. The increase was 148 percent in 71 industrialized urban counties.

Further, cancer deaths in both the urban and rural industrialized counties evened to about 1,134 per 100,000 people from 1970 to 1975, the council said. From 1970 to 1975, there were more cancer deaths in the urban areas — 456 per 100,000 people, compared with about 394 per 100,000 in the rural counties, it said.

The council said it produced the figures by comparing cancer statistics compiled by the National Cancer Institute with figures on increasing chemical and petroleum industry employment in rural areas.

An institute study on the subject 10 years ago may have missed the rise in rural cancer rates because the disease takes so long to show up, and many of the rural chemical and petroleum plants are relatively new.

Under that finding, Ms. Marlin said, "The hypothesis is that there would be a stronger link between toxic waste and the incidence of cancer."

She noted that the study found higher cancer death rates in both rural and urban industrialized counties than in the nation as a whole. In those counties, the per capita production of toxic waste was well above the national average, the study said.

Another report Sunday, by the American Cancer Society, said patients who recover from cancer face another obstacle: job discrimination. It said 84 percent of cancer patients returning to blue-collar jobs were discriminated against in the workplace.

The figure was included in an article in the society's magazine, over the weekend.

The barricades will be controlled from sidewalk guard booths at street side entrances to the department's huge underground parking garage.

NASA engineers inspect space shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA engineers began a detailed inspection of the space shuttle Challenger on Sunday to determine whether it suffered major damage during its successful eight-day orbital trip.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said a preliminary look following Saturday's picture-perfect landing here showed that the space plane received some minor nicks on a few of its thermal protection tiles which keep the craft from burning up when re-entering Earth's atmosphere.

The space agency said a strip of insulating tile also was missing from the tail area. It was believed to have been ripped away during the stress of liftoff.

Engineers also want to know why one of Challenger's 44 steering jets failed early in the mission. The failure had no impact because of the shuttle's many backup systems.

After the landing at Kennedy Space Center, the second of the shuttle in 13 flights, it was towed to a hangar bay where residual fuel was drained and equipment and supplies removed.

The five men and two women — the largest space crew ever — flew back to the astronaut training base in Houston on Saturday afternoon. They were relaxing there Sunday.

Monday, they will begin debriefing experts on their flight, whose major goal was a scientific survey of the Earth, its oceans and its atmosphere.

Mission commander Robert Crippen, who has flown on four shuttle flights, called the trip "fantastic." For him, the Kennedy Space Center landing was a personal triumph. On two previous flights, both of which he

Mission specialist Kathryn Sullivan became the first woman to walk in space commanded, Crippen was waved off to land in California because of foul weather at Cape Canaveral.

The flight featured the first space walk by an American woman, Kathy Sullivan. During a 3½-hour excursion in the open cargo bay, she and David Leebma demonstrated that astronauts could refuel a satellite in space.

Shuttle director Jesse Moore termed it a very successful mission that demonstrated NASA's capability of meeting its projected one-a-month launch schedule.

Landing shuttles back at the launch site is critical to maintaining that pace. California touchdowns add about a week to the turnaround time because the spacecraft must be ferried back here atop a Boeing 747 jet.

Discovery is next in line. It is being groomed for a Nov. 7 flight in which the astronauts will deploy two commercial communications satellites and retrieve and return to Earth two satellites that were injected into improper orbits after being released successfully from by a shuttle crew in February.

Challenger is scheduled to be launched again Dec. 8.

Barricades go up in D.C.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, concerned that attacks on its embassies overseas could be extended to its home ground, is installing anti-terrorist barricades at garage entrances to its headquarters building.

The heavy metal blockades, set in moats, can be activated in seconds to stop a vehicle in its tracks.

The barricades are one element in a comprehensive package of security improvements at the State Department, although not in response to any specific threat, department spokeswoman Kathleen Lang said.

LBJ's security adviser to testify in CBS trial

NEW YORK (AP) — President Lyndon Johnson's national security adviser during the Vietnam War, who a lawyer says warned that the CBS documentary was wrong, will be Monday's leadoff witness in retired Gen. William E. Westmoreland's libel suit against the network.

Westmoreland, commander of the American forces in Vietnam from 1964 to 1968, says CBS and three of its employees — including correspondent Mike Wallace — falsely and maliciously accused him in "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Story" of mistaking his superiors about U.S. progress in the war.

Former national security adviser Walt Rostow, now a professor of political economy at the University of Texas at Austin, was interviewed by Wallace for three hours in 1981, but none of that interview appeared in the Jan. 23, 1982, broadcast.

Westmoreland's suit claims the program falsely portrayed him as the head of a conspiracy to report enemy strength in 1967 at under 300,000 men when the CIA believed the number to be two times higher. The program said the alleged deception left American forces unprepared for the strength of the Communists' Tet Offensive in early 1968.

Westmoreland's attorney, Dan M. Burt, said in his opening arguments last week that the issue of enemy strength was merely a technical disagreement among intelligence analysts and that CBS distorted the facts to make it appear the general was guilty of "a crime punishable by 20 years at hard labor."

Burt maintains that Rostow warned Wallace "the show's thesis was wrong" because Johnson was aware of the dispute over the strength of the enemy forces.

CBS lawyer David Boles, however, argued that Rostow was unable to demonstrate that Johnson knew the details of enemy troop concentrations, which had been reported to Westmoreland's staff but were not passed on to Washington.

Burt's opening statement portrayed George Crile, the show's producer and another defendant, as an ambitious man who wanted "a sensational story" to make him famous. Boles countered that Crile is an Emmy Award winner with a "promising career" who had no incentive to twist the facts.

Nurse trial to resume

NEWBURYPORT, Mass. (AP) — Jurors who resume deliberating an attempted murder charge against a nurse Monday must decide whether the woman, an admitted alcoholic, switched off a patient's respirator in cold calculation or panicked when she thought he was having a heart attack.

Victoria Knowlton, a 36-year-old home-care nurse, is accused of deliberately turning off the respirator of William Cronin, 59, who is mostly paralyzed from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, a progressive and incurable nervous system disorder commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease.

Prosecutors contend that early in the morning of Feb. 17, Mrs. Knowlton moved Cronin's respirator two feet, switched it off, told him "You're going to die," and then left the room to smoke a cigarette.

Mrs. Knowlton, of Rockport, testified in a murder charge against her that she moved Cronin's respirator when she thought he was suffering a heart attack and was trying to help him, but "didn't know what to do."

The jury began deliberations Friday after listening to five days of testimony, but broke for the weekend.

Mrs. Knowlton's chief accuser has been Cronin. The gravely ill man, who cannot speak and can barely move his arms, testified by videotape from a hospital bed, answering questions by nodding or shaking his head.

Israelis: plan was necessary

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres said Sunday that Israel had to devise a plan for withdrawing its troops from Lebanon and not depend on the Syrians to provide guarantees.

Peres said on his return from a week-long visit to the United States that Israel's Defense Ministry was drawing up a blueprint for a pullout and reiterated that a decision by the Cabinet was expected within a month.

"I estimate that within three or four weeks the Cabinet will discuss a plan for security arrangements for the Galilee (border region) and a withdrawal from Lebanon," he told reporters at Ben Gurion Airport.

He expressed anew the hope that a withdrawal could be completed six to nine months after the Cabinet approved a plan.

Peres disavowed knowledge of an "Israel Radio report saying that the government had notified the 10 nations contributing troops to a U.N. peacekeeping force in Lebanon that a pullback would take place in six months."

"I don't know anything about that," said Peres.

Israel has occupied the southern third of Lebanon since invading that country in June 1982. Israel's avowed aim was to root out Palestinian guerrillas raiding settlements in northern Israel from bases in south Lebanon.

The prime minister said his government would continue to use the "good offices of the United States toward reaching a security arrangement that will insure peace for the Galilee and bring our sons home."

But he stressed that Israel had to make its own decision and not depend on promises from Syria.

"What we need is an Israeli decision and Israel has various options," said Peres. "We cannot hang everything on what the Syrians do."

Israel is concerned that Syrian troops or Palestinian guerrillas would attempt to grab territory evacuated by withdrawing Israeli troops, then once again threaten Israel's northern border. The Jewish state has sought a guarantee that Damascus would maintain its current front line in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

Hindus rally for shrine

LUCKNOW, India (AP) — More than 100,000 Hindus, beating drums and shouting, "Open the gates," rallied Sunday to demand return of Hinduism's holiest shrine, which was converted to a mosque by Moslem conquerors 400 years ago.

Hindu leaders had threatened in a memorandum to Uttar Pradesh state officials that they would launch a nationwide agitation to "liberate" the shrine in Ayodhya, which they believe is the birthplace of Lord Rama, the Hindu creator god.

Hindu leaders also are demanding return of two other Hindu holy places in northern Uttar Pradesh state, one associated with Lord Shiva in Varanasi on the Ganges, and one said to be the birthplace of Lord Krishna in Mathura.

"Hindus have been feeling humiliated for the past centuries," the memorandum said, "and now, 37 years after independence, they still are being treated with contempt. This situation will not be tolerated anymore and Hindus are determined to fight together for their honor."

The state and central governments are not expected to grant the demands of Hindu revivalists, particularly with national elections expected soon. Doing so would alienate India's Moslems. Political observers say the temple liberation movement could have serious repercussions and aggravate relations between the Hindu and Moslem communities.

Hindus comprise about 84 percent of India's 750 million people and Moslems 13 percent.

Pope: religious freedom needed

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II lashed out Sunday against treating people as "second-class citizens" because of their religious faith, and urged governments to ensure religious freedom.

The pontiff, back from a whirlwind tour of Spain and the Caribbean, also expressed hope during a later speech that a meeting Monday between government officials and rebels in El Salvador will bring peace to that country, "too long tested by sorrow and violence."

First, John Paul spoke at a special Mass for 103 martyrs of the Roman Catholic Church whom he canonized during his trip to South Korea last May. The 93 Koreans and 10 French were slain in Korea in the 19th century during massacres of more than 10,000 Catholics.

British expecting more IRA bombs

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — The bomb that blew up Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's convention hotel might presage a wave of IRA bombings on the British mainland, police said Sunday.

Politicians, judges and military personnel were warned to take precautions in case Irish Republican Army bombers strike again in their fight to drive Britain out of its Northern Ireland province.

Police said they picked up two men over the weekend and held them under the Prevention of Terrorism Act, but denied they were being questioned about Friday's bombing. No leads in the investigation were announced Sunday.

Police were under fire from some newspapers for purportedly ignoring an intelligence warning that an attack was planned. They confirmed that a warning in general terms had come but strongly denied their security measures were lax.

Armed police and a dog trained to sniff for explosives were deployed in an unprecedented show of security around the country church where Mrs. Thatcher attended Sunday worship services.

Former Conservative Prime Minister Edward Heath called for a new drive against terrorism Sunday to with more cash, vigilance and international cooperation. "We have to accept that there must be some restrictions if we are going to protect our society," he said in a radio interview.

In Northern Ireland, about 200 guests were evacuated from their hotel on Lough Erne in the west of the province early Sunday after police, tipped off by an anonymous caller, found two bombs on the premises. Demolitions experts detonated them without problem.

In Dublin, the Sunday Press newspaper said Friday's bombing of the hotel housing Mrs. Thatcher and hundreds of delegates to the annual Conservative Party conference was originally intended for the 1983 Tory conference in Blackpool, but could not be arranged in time.

It reported that the IRA targeted Mrs. Thatcher and her Cabinet after the 1981 hunger strike by IRA inmates at Belfast's Maze prison. Ten inmates died in a failed bid to pressure Mrs. Thatcher into recognizing them as political detainees.

The paper, which supports the opposition Flanna Fail Party, said the IRAS director of operations recruited a team of "English-born men and women from Irish families who had offered their services" to carry out the violence.

Nobel prize winners to be announced

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — With the 1984 Nobel Prize in Literature already awarded to a little-known Czechoslovak poet, committees get down this week to the unpredictable business of choosing winners of three science prizes, and one each for peace and economics.

The prize in medicine is to be announced in Stockholm on Monday, physics and chemistry Wednesday. The Nobel Peace Prize will be announced Tuesday in Oslo, Norway by a committee of laymen appointed by the Norwegian Parliament.

The 1984 Nobel series began on Oct. 11 with the Swedish Academy of Letters' surprise choice for the literature prize of Jaroslav Seifert, an ailing 83-year-old lyric poet known to few outside his native Czechoslovakia.

It ends on Thursday with the announcement of the winner of the Alfred Nobel Memorial Prize in Economics, established by the Riksbank, Sweden's central bank, in memory of the Swedish discoverer of dynamite whose foundation set up the other five prizes.

Each of this year's prizes carries a stipend amounting to $196,000. As always, the prizes will be presented around the anniversary of Nobel's death.

"We had to tear away that platform of injustice."

You have seen this happen. Until the last year or so our senior citizens, more than any other group, have been bludgeoned by inflation — a platform of injustice for those to whom we owe so much.

With inflation rampant, there was little or nothing anyone could do to help them in a meaningful way.

Jim McClure was a leader in the congressional action that brought inflation down . . . now less than 4% per year, lowest in eleven years.

We've begun the long road back. We are re-orienting the economy for growth . . . jobs . . . productivity. We are setting the stage for a day when private retirement plans will again have meaning.

When savings will count for something.

When the 'worry of retirement' will be a thing of the past.

The golden years should be the upbeat years. Jim McClure is working for that.

L.M. Boyd
What's what

Does a person with an artistic nature tend to be moody? Or is it that a person with a moody nature tends to be artistic? Never mind; too deep! All I know is artists, writers and poets are 35 times more likely than others to seek professional treatment for mood swings.

Remember, says our Language man, you may "sneer" with the mouth, but you "leer" with the eyes only, and if it isn't lascivious, it's not a leer.

Ever ride a bicycle or drive a car? Certainly not. You "drive" a bicycle and "ride" a car. A Chattanooga poet named Paul Ramsey insists on it. Believe he's right.

TROLLEYS
Q. How in the world can you say major league baseball owes its existence to trolley cars?

None other than Dr. Joyce Brothers has said wives start most fights between couples.

A. Without the trolleys, too few fans would've been able to show up for the games.

Q. Most of the sailors with Columbus were Spaniards, right?

A. Bascques. They made up the biggest ethnic group among them all.

FLY
A fly that eats nothing but sugar will never lay eggs.

Those who believe Harry S Truman was the best of the 20th century presidents note also he was the only 20th century president without a college education. Still, Truman's education, both formal and otherwise, was far far greater than George Washington's. The Father-of-our-Country was one of the least educated.

Q. Which sting is the worst — the wasp's, hornet's, yellow jacket's or honeybee's?

A. Hornet's. It injects more poison into the wound than any of the others...

Deep-sea divers who've had flesh wounds 50 feet underwater say their blood at that depth is green.

Yes, some say, television is a medium. Neither rare nor well done.

The law of Wisconsin specifically forbids a railroad conductor from kissing a passenger.

Daily Horoscope

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Find whatever it is you desire to make your outside duties more pleasant. Good day to see a powerful person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Talk with a new contact can reveal how to become more successful in the near future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study your many responsibilities and don't get nervous, and handle them with poise and accuracy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) First stop an irritated associate before discussing some good plan you have in mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Begin the week properly by studying the work ahead of you very carefully and then handle it conscientiously.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't go off on any tangents now, and in the evening you can enjoy a couple of parties, or whatever else you prefer.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) You may feel nervous about some home situation but be poised, otherwise you make matters worse.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will quickly understand any condition and then be very quick in handling it precisely and intelligently; be give an education as you can and there can be much success during this lifetime.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Some differences are entering into your life which have an element of confusion connected with them, but go along with them in an intelligent manner.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Run hither and you only if you have some worthwhile purpose to accomplish. Gain added data that can be most helpful to you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You understand now how a few changes made in practical affairs can bring you a greater abundance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Find a better method of operating now and bring forth that sense of humor you possess. Later join with those who are cheerful.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan how to change some condition in your living so that you are happier and more prosperous.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You must come to a decision about a friend today, so do so, even if you have to get the relationship on a different basis.

Outlook exceeds ex-husband's help

DEAR ABBY: "Mad in Dallas" complained because the court increased her husband's child support payments from $70 a month to $300. She says her husband's ex-wife lives in a $100,000 condo, drives a Mercedes and shops at Neiman's, while she, her husband and small baby are perching pennies in a cramped trailer.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

"Mad" must have known her husband was obligated to pay child support before she married him, and she certainly knew about it before she decided to have a child.

Many of my friends either pay child support or receive it, and not one thinks the amount decided by the court is fair! (Myself included.) Let's look at the other side: I am a single working mother who receives $150 per month in child support. I pay for child care in order to go to work at a job where the government takes one-third of my salary. Sometimes I don't get child support — my "ex," who lives out of state, owes me $1,000 in back payments.

Abby, I thank God every day that I am alive, have a healthy daughter, a roof over my head, a car to drive, a job to go to, and food to eat (even if it's only beans and wieners). On my bathroom mirror I have written "COMPARED TO WHAT?" Instead of angry about what I don't have, I would suggest — that "Mad in Dallas" change her attitude because that's the only thing in her life she can control.

This may not help anyone else, but it makes it easier for me to sleep, and I'm the one I have to live with.

— ONE DAY AT A TIME

DEAR ONE: Your positive attitude and the absence of bitterness and anger are commendable. Your letter may help child support victims who have been dealt a raw deal. Sometimes we have to be reminded of what we already know. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: If Jesus Christ was really the Immaculate Conception — born to the Virgin Mary — can you explain why this never happened to another human being anywhere in the world since Biblical times?

— BIBLE STUDENT

DEAR BIBLE STUDENT: The genetic rules that apply to mortals did not apply to the Christ child, who, according to the New Testament, was the son of God.

However, may I point out a common misconception (no pun intended): Jesus was NOT the Immaculate Conception — Mary was. Mary was born without the original sin on her soul because she was destined to be the mother of Christ.

You, like many others, are confusing the Immaculate Conception with the Virgin Birth. They are not one and the same.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ALL WHO WROTE WANTING TO KNOW WHAT HAPPENED TO "THE CAMBRIDGE BUM": He's alive and well, happily married and living in a small town. He diverts his time between delivering the U.S. mail and repairing automobiles at his own "body shop."

In a telephone interview he told me that he had a short temper and a long history of resorting to violence to settle all his arguments.

He also learned that he couldn't handle alcohol. His probation officer insisted that he join Alcoholics Anonymous. And when he quit drinking, he turned his life around.

Congratulations to "The Cambridge Bum," who is not a "bum" anymore; he's a solid citizen.

Somebody needs you

"Somebody Needs You," a public-service column that appears each week in the Times-News, is designed to match those in the community who need volunteer help with those who need volunteer help.

Have you lived through the death-of-a-loved-one? You may have a great deal to share with someone going through the same experience. Hospice for South Central Idaho has scheduled trainings in November for volunteers interested in helping with terminally ill patients. If you are willing to help, call 734-2455.

Can't afford to donate to every good cause that comes along? Why not give something more valuable — your time. You can set your schedule, and do something truly rewarding. Please help us help others. Contact Volunteer Services at 734-7583.

Hospice for South Central Idaho, located in Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's Annex needs a volunteer to do some general office work and answer the phones. If interested, call Byron McCurdy at 734-2455.

Retired people! When things start settling down after this busy summer, why not schedule some time to help others? The Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) can help you find volunteer service you will enjoy. Insurance will be provided, and travel and meal expenses will be paid. Call Bruce Bennett at 734-7583.

If you need a volunteer, call Bruce Bennett at the College of Southern Idaho at 734-7583 to have it appear in this column.

Grandparents get to work with youths

Elders enjoy foster program

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Foster Grandparent program provides a way for older people to give and receive love — and get paid, too. Currently there are 43 foster grandparents. However, only two are men. Marcie Donner, the program's director, says "I have a waiting list of women, but I need some men for the program."

"All they'd need to do is talk to the men I have," Paul Ferguson is one of them. He says his wife Clara was a foster grandmother until a heart attack forced her to quit. He says he was talking into entering the program.

"I said, 'Well, I'll give it a whirl, and this is my fourth year, and I love it,'" she says.

Ferguson works with 60 kindergarten children at Morningside School. He assists their teacher, Barbara Beck, to help those children who are not making the adjustment of going to school and whose basic skill levels are very low.

He says by explaining, showing and helping these children, because he loves them, they soon do a better job.

"Tell me," he says, "what kind of pay could beat this for your health? When a man reaches my age, 76, and his lifespan is about to run out, there is no greater honor or achievement than receiving the love and respect of those children."

Watching Ferguson at work in the classroom, one would not guess that in September he had his fourth heart attack.

"The doctor told me I couldn't come back to school, I said, 'Doc, if you think I'm going to sit around on my dead fanny all winter, you're crazy.'"

He says the doctor told him he figured that's what he would say.

Ferguson's affection for the children is evident as he walks around the classroom, seeing it that the children are grasping the lessons and giving help and suggestions along the way. seeing a little boy dabbing little blobs of glue onto a picture of an octopus and sticking on individual cheerios, prompts him to say, "Let me show you something, buddy. You're doing it the hard way."

And, he picks up the glue bottle and squirts it in a continuous line onto the sea creature legs. He then explains that if he puts the little 'o' shapes on before the glue dries, the task will be easier.

Ferguson says the students work two weeks on each letter of the alphabet. He says this week they are studying the letter "o" and that with his loving guidance they will soon know it.

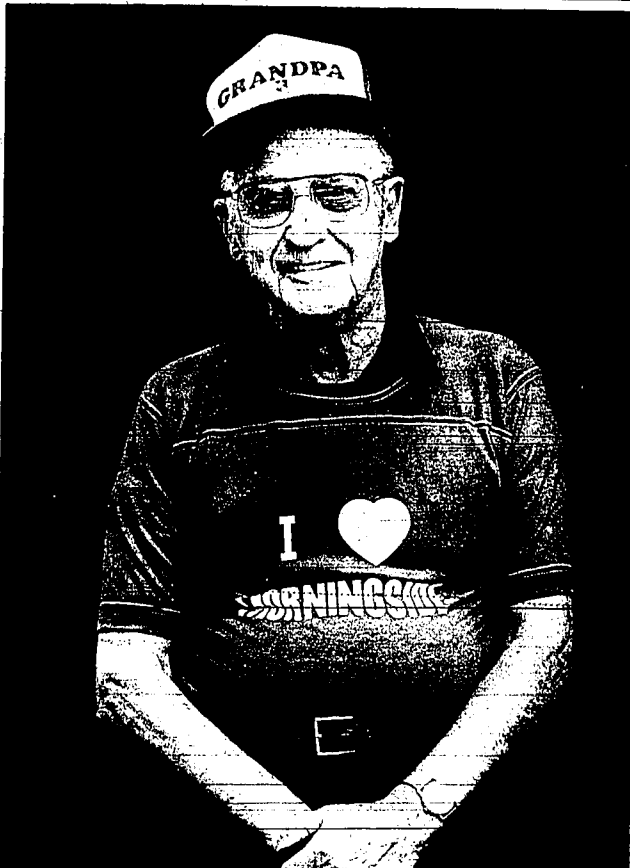

To qualify for the foster grandparent program, a person must be 60 or above, with an income low enough to fit the guidelines: At present, the grandparents are earning $2 an hour, plus mileage, working four hours a day, five days a week. Some work five hours a day, four days a week.

Donner says what the Office on Economic Opportunity tried to prove 20 years ago, when the program began, was that the older person has the maturity to build a relationship with a young person who has special and exceptional needs.

"The children with special needs," she says, "are defined as those having learning disabilities, problems in school, possibly having emotional problems or family trauma of some kind."

"The exceptional children are those that are handicapped for the most part. We have foster grandparents over at the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind, who work not only with the deaf and blind children, but they work with the mentally retarded children at Green Acres in Gooding, which has a special facility for children with multiple handicaps."

Donner says she puts the foster grandparents through a 40-hour orientation at the grandparents' work sites, the participants receive more instruction.

At age 76, Paul Ferguson spends a lot of time in the kindergarten at Morningside School

"Usually when we get together we talk about problems. We get to know each other a little better, and I usually try to provide them with some sort of information — anything that would apply to them in their work."

"We had Dr. Paul Miles last month talking about recognizing the disease of children, and people from Child Development talking about working with the multihandicapped child."

The foster grandparents build up a marvelous camaraderie between themselves. And these are people who have never met before.

"Take Bickel School for example," Donner says, "those grandparents not only work there all year, they also work at the migrant school during the summer. They're just so loved here. The whole school staff thinks they are gold plated."

and they are."

Paul Ferguson says he would gladly answer any questions about the Foster Grandparent program. His enthusiasm leaves little doubt as to how he feels about it.

"If I could be assured of relatively fair health, I'd like to be doing this — working with these children when I'm 100 years old," he said.

Jerome school reopens

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — For the first time since 1964, scurrying feet, giggles and the inquisitive voices of classroom children are filling the 65-year-old Canyonside School four miles south of Jerome.

Renamed "The Rock pre-School House — the day care center" is the effort of a former K-12 district director of personnel, Jer' Bohof, and her two daughters, Darlene LaPuzza and Darla Devries.

After leaving her job, Bohof tried the life of a farm wife on her and husband Roger's 80 acre dairy farm west of the school.

"But," she says, "I wanted to be independent again," adding that she loves kids and purchased the rock building which had been converted into a home seven years ago, strictly for the purpose of making it a school again.

"I want this to be really top rate," she says while standing in the daylight basement that is presently being remodeled. Bohof waves a hand and says, "I'm so excited," explaining that the area will provide nearly 3,600 feet of play space for the children.

Upstairs in the plushly designed interior, Shelly Green, known as the Sandman, is lulling some 25 youngsters to sleep with a phonograph of children's stories while Bohof shows off her building, which sports five bathrooms upstairs, a huge kitchen and four rooms for teaching as well as a child-sized locker room where the kids have their own space.

Daughter, Darlene LaPuzza says, "My husband and I have wanted to do this for years. We spent the summer going to seminars and classes and other day care centers."

LaPuzza says though they're not a kindergarten, they teach the kids numbers, letters and name writing for two hours in the morning and an hour and a half in the afternoon.

"The kids get a schedule, their own little lockers and a project once a week," she says. "And all our toys are educational and safety toys that are age grouped."

Bohof says the school takes drop-in children who come by after school as well as the full-time children.

"We keep a menu posted and encourage parents to come by anytime to check on it and their children," she says.

Teacher nominated for honor

JEROME — A Jerome High School English and literature teacher, described by her students and fellow educators as one who really cares about education and her students, has been nominated for Idaho Teacher of the Year by the Jerome School District.

Judi Fredericksen has been a teacher for 12 years, devoting the past six years to high school English, literature and speech in grades 9 through 12 in Jerome. Superintendent Stephenson Youngman said in endorsing her nomination that Fredericksen was involved in re-vamping the English curriculum to fit the needs of the students and the changing times. He said she has created a friendly but controlled atmosphere conducive to student learning.

Youngman said a typical example of her "caring" came last year when she volunteered to teach advanced speech classes when it was announced the class would have to be deleted from the curriculum.

Her students say she is a teacher who really cares, and one who makes learning enjoyable. She has a special interest in each student as a person, says one of the young people in her classes.

A graduate of the Caldwell High School in 1959, she gives credit to her father, a former educator and superintendent, and her high school English teacher, Eleanor Peterson, for inspiring her selection of a teaching career. She is also a graduate of the University of Idaho and has completed courses at the College of Idaho and Idaho State University.

Jerome's nominee for the 1985 honor is the wife of Jerome Attorney Gene Fredericksen, and the mother of four children, two of whom are still in school.

Of her teaching, Fredericksen says, "It is my devoted career and I can't imagine life without it. Teaching is my second husband and my fifth child."

Hagerman native makes good with pharmacy work

By APRIL BISHOP
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — JoAnn Berry Lawrason is truly the picture of the hometown girl making good. The owner and proprietor of the Hagerman Valley Pharmacy, Lawrason has come far in the eight years since her graduation from Idaho State University's pharmacy school.

While a woman pharmacist isn't unusual, a woman pharmacist who owns and operates her own business is considered something of a rarity, says Lawrason.

"The only other woman pharmacist who owns her business that I know of is in Oregon," says Lawrason. "Other women pharmacists work for chain stores or someone else. They consider their work more as something to do until they get married rather than a career."

Married to Gooding County Deputy Sheriff Steve Lawrason and the mother of two children, Lawrason gives her husband credit for helping her career. "He has been the most supportive individual in my whole career."

A native of Hagerman, Lawrason originally planned to become either a psychologist or psychiatrist to fulfill her lifelong dream of helping people.

However, she credits her turn to pharmacology to a class on popcorn popping and cookie raising.

Laughing at the memory, Lawrason recalls how she excelled in a basic chemistry class to find out just why popcorn popped and cookies rose. Her professor discovered Lawrason's fascination with chemical reactions and suggested she take a more intensive chemistry class.

"She says she remembers telling the instructor that "taking chemistry doesn't help people." The professor promptly informed her about the merits of pharmacology and how it helps people.

"It wasn't an overnight decision," says Lawrason but she switched her major to pharmacology during her first semester at college.

She says as a pharmacist, she can touch more lives than can a member of the nursing profession.

"For example, how well do you know your pharmacist? How well do you know your nurse? Do you have a nurse?" she asks, smiling.

Lawrason opened her own business with three afternoons a week in September of 1980 after working for four years in chain stores and hospitals.

"My first pharmacy was a 10 by 12-foot room with cinderblock and particleboard shelves. Now it's the doctor's waiting room," she laughs.

Lawrason expanded to afternoon hours five days per week in May of 1981. In February of 1983, she moved to a 200-square-foot pharmacy and expanded business hours to 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Hagerman now has one full-time doctor and one part-time, so she is planning to move her pharmacy yet again to a 700-square foot facility.

The new pharmacy will include a full line of gift items such as cards, jewelry and toys as well as local handicrafts.

Lawrason says she enjoys the friendly atmosphere of Hagerman and even though her business is growing rapidly, she still knows most of her customers on a first name basis.

She still laughs at the memory of how many of her customers would hold her infant son, now a 2-year-old, while she filled their prescriptions.

JoAnn Berry Lawrason, a Hagerman native, owns and operates her own pharmacy in town.

Birds of Prey area developing reputation for rare raptors

By LARRY SWISHER
The Idaho Statesman

BOISE — Name a bird that spends the summers in southern Idaho, then flies 7,000 miles north when fall arrives, to reach the Argentine pampas of South America.

If you said Swainson's hawk, you probably are a biologist or a birdwatcher.

The little-known long-distance flyer, which makes the trip so it can continue to feed on its diet of small mammals during the southern hemisphere's summer season, is one member of Idaho's increasingly famous population of birds of prey.

In fact, Idaho has more kinds of hawk, eagles, falcons, owls and other raptors than any other state in the continental United States. There are about 30 species, according to Marc Bechard, Boise State University assistant biology professor.

"I'm still amazed," said Bechard, who was hired last year to teach raptor biology and coordinate the new World Center for Birds of Prey south of Boise, which opened last month.

"We can go out and see five prairie falcons and say, 'So what?'" he said. "But people in the East will think nothing of flying from Boston to Boise to see a prairie falcon for the first time in their lives."

Raptors are predatory birds that have strong, hooked beaks, sharp talons and keen vision and can soar through the air.

Americans have a renewed interest and appreciation for raptors and their place in nature — a change from the days-when-people-spot-the-birds-on-sight or hunted them for bounty because they were thought to prey on domestic fowl and game birds.

One sign of the change in attitude is the recent first-ever National Birds of Prey Conservation Week, which was established by Congress.

With the growth in appreciation, Idaho is becoming known for its birds of prey, research and protection efforts.

The new $1.2 million World Center for Birds of Prey was built by the Peregrine Fund to house the peregrine stock and begin new projects to study, breed and save endangered raptors from around the world.

Boise has the chance to become an international "hub of activity," Bechard said. Arabian falconers and other people around the world want to study the center's breeding techniques, he said.

Boise State University, which is affiliated with the new World Center for Birds of Prey, hopes next year to start a graduate program in raptor biology, assistant professor Bechard said. Graduate students could train at the center.

The Biology Department is planning a proposed curriculum and budget for submission later to the university and eventually the state Board of Education.

Already, students from around the country have asked about the program, and Bechard has conducted workshops and field trips for hundreds of school teachers. "I'm finding that people around here are dying to learn more about raptors," he said.

The Snake River Birds of Prey Area, which officially was established in 1971 about 30 miles south of Boise, is ideal for both raptors and scientists. About 1,600 birds of prey, including 400 prairie falcons, nest in an 80-mile stretch of canyon. Other raptors visit the area in the winter.

The number of nesting birds is up 400 from a 1979 count. Scientists have made more detailed surveys since then and have discovered more nests of certain species, like marsh hawks and long-eared owls, according to the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, which manages the 480,000-acre area.

"It's even more special than we realized," BLM biologist Mark Hilliard said.

The area is so dense with raptors, because of unlimited cliffs for nests and nearby food in the desert, mainly jack rabbits, and ground squirrels, which Hilliard says are "Big Macs with legs" to the birds.

Outside the area, the Snake River Canyon has one-fifth the number of nests or less, he said.

In addition to the Birds of Prey area, several other projects have been launched, often with the aid of large Idaho corporations, who were wooed by Boise raptor expert Morley Nelson, a Peregrine Fund director.

Recently, the bald eagle and peregrine falcon, both endangered, have shown signs of recovering in Idaho. The falcons disappeared from Idaho in the mid-1970s, according to Jay Gore of the U.S. Endangered Species Office.

But a population could return in five to 10 years, if federal funding continues, Gore said. Federal and state agencies and Boise-Cascade Corp. in 1982 started a program that has restored the birds in other states, he said.

The Peregrine Fund has raised about a dozen young birds in captivity for release into the wild each year.

Hellar attacks Craig failure to get wilderness bill passed

By The Associated Press

CONGRESS' failure to pass an Idaho wilderness bill will hurt Idaho timber workers, Democrat congressional candidate Bill Hellar says.

"Timber companies need a bill passed so they can plan for the future," Hellar said, in a statement released Sunday in Boise. "If they don't know their resource base, they can't make planning decisions and that affects jobs."

Hellar accused Republican incumbent Larry Craig of exploiting the issue rather than trying to get a bill passed quickly.

"Instead of bringing the opposing sides together, he used the politics of fear," Hellar said. "He helped drive a wedge of bitterness between loggers and environmentalists for political reasons."

Elsewhere in Idaho politics, incumbent Republicans Greg and James McClure launched their major re-election drives.

McClure, running against Democrat Pete Bush, planned to start at McCall on Monday on what will be a 3,000-mile, 196-community bus tour. McClure planned to spend Monday working his way south and west from McCall, through the Marsing and Wilder areas, winding up with a Canyon County fundraiser Monday night.

Craig planned a similar schedule, starting at Naylor and working the route of Boise to Cottonwood and Grandview.

Bush called a Boise news conference for Monday, reportedly to take McClure to task for his failure to produce an Idaho wilderness bill this session.

Democrat Richard Stallings, who's challenging Republican George Hansen in the 2nd District, planned a Monday news conference to discuss his recent negotiations with Hansen. The two 2nd District candidates meet Thursday night in Pocatello on the Idaho State University campus in what will be the first of the statewide televised debates this fall.

District court

TWIN FALLS — A man accused of molesting an 8-year-old girl was among those appearing this week in Fifth District Court.

Robert Rogers, 30, of 164 Blue Lakes Blvd. S. in Twin Falls, pleaded innocent Tuesday to a charge of lewd conduct with a minor less than 16 years old. The alleged incident occurred in 1983, according to a complaint filed with the court.

A trial date will be scheduled on the charge, which carries upon conviction a sentence of life in prison. Rogers was released on his own recognizance.

Other cases on the court docket included:

Brent L. Gelay, 33, of Twin Falls, pleaded innocent Tuesday to charges of writing checks totaling $2,550 without having the funds in his account to cover them.

The checks allegedly were written March 9 and 10 to Person's IGA store in Kimberly and D & B Supply and Blue Lakes Sporting Goods, both in Twin Falls.

A trial will be set later.

Gwynell Marie Baker, 23, of 1239 Fourth Ave. E. in Twin Falls admitted Tuesday to forging a stolen check Aug. 16. Judge Daniel Hurbutt accepted the plea and ordered a pre-sentence investigation.

Baker was released on his own recognizance until sentencing.

Mark Ottman, 21, and Kyle Turner, 22, both of Route 2, Hazelton, pleaded guilty Tuesday to a charge of attempted grand theft. The pair originally pleaded not guilty to a grand theft charge. But a plea agreement resulted in a change of plea to a reduced charge.

The pair admitted they attempted to steal a 16-foot trailer from Western Stockman's Supply at 330 Fifth St. S. in Twin Falls.

A pre-sentence investigation will be prepared on the men, who were released.

David McGuinn, 27, of 205 Ash St. N. in Kimberly, pleaded innocent to a charge of conspiracy to sell marijuana March 27.

McGuinn will stand trial on the allegation.

At a Tuesday hearing, Judge Daniel Mehl extended the probation of James Thomas Modrell, 29, of Twin Falls, for a probation violation.

Modrell was serving a two-year probation for burglarizing Twin Falls Veterinarian Hospital February 1983.

No sanctions were placed. Modrell for the violation, but he will serve an extra year on probation, according to court records.

Correction

TWIN FALLS — A headline in the Saturday edition of The Times-News incorrectly reported that a land division request had been denied to Larry Anderson on a Thursday meeting of the Twin Falls County Zoning Commission.

The commission previously had denied Anderson's request concerning a larger parcel of land. As the story correctly reported, the members approved the split of a smaller section of the land at the Thursday meeting.

Pharmacist

Lawson juggles her duo careers as a pharmacist and the mother of 5-year-old Carolee and 2-year-old Daniel with only occasional crises, which is to be expected with small children. Husband Steve gets his fair share of credit for the smoothly run home, even though his hours as a deputy are irregular.

Lawson says she even manages to squeeze her favorite hobbies, like painting, sewing and knitting, into her spare moments.

Becoming a pharmacist isn't easy, says Lawson, but she isn't, she is maintaining your skill in the field. A minimum of 15 hours of continuing education classes are required per year.

"If I had dropped out for five years to have children, I'd be lost," says Lawson.

She expresses disappointment at the very idea of Idaho State University dropping their pharmacy program.

"I would really deplete medical learning and teaching in Idaho. The supply of pharmacists would diminish. I'm disappointed that they would even consider it."

Tigers win it all in five

By JOHN NELSON
 The Associated Press

DETROIT — The Detroit Tigers did at the end what they had done all season — win. Their final victory capped a classic runaway year and carried them to their first World Series championship since 1908.

Yankees slugger San Diego Padres slugger Kirby Puckett, and this time it was Kirby Gibson at center stage as the Tigers finally unveiled baseball's most potent offense.

"It's a dream come true," Gibson said. "It's the perfect end to the season. I think the Detroit Tigers proved we were the world champions when we finished the series."

Gibson drove in five runs with two homers, and scored a tie-breaking run from third base on a sacrifice fly to the infield. There was nothing pretty about it.

Lance Parrish hit a home run, and Aurelio Lopez and Willie Hernandez bailed out starter Dan Petry when Detroit's starting pitching finally faltered — a problem that plagued

DETROIT — Detroit slugger Kirk Gibson, who was booed by his own fans just a year ago, turned the jeers to cheers Sunday night.

Gibson slugged two home runs, driving in five runs, to lead the Tigers to an 8-4 victory over the San Diego Padres and the 1984 World Series championship.

"I think I've just proved what a lot of people said about me," Gibson explained in the joyous and noisy Tiger dressing room. "I've always thought of myself as a clutch player, but when things were going the Padres during the whole Series. There was nothing elegant about that. Jack Morris threw two bad last year, not many people believed that."

Gibson struggled at the plate and in the field a year ago, hitting only .227 with 15 home runs and 51 RBI. This year, Gibson improved markedly on defense and blossomed at the plate. He finished complete-game victories, winning Games One and Four. There was nothing fancy about it. And Sparky Anderson became the regular season batting .282 with 27 homers, 91 RBI and stole 20 bases.

"Sometimes I'm a little too intense," Gibson said as he gulped a can of beer, eschewing the traditional champagne which his teammates were pouring over one another. "When the game's on the line, I want to be at the plate. That's what I dream of. My concentration seems to be greater when the situation is tighter."

"I don't care about hitting .350. I gave away so many at-bats this year it's not even funny, because I didn't care — they weren't pressure record 104 victories, the most in baseball, and a three-game sweep of Kansas City in the American League playoffs.

There was no strategic magic in managing what many have called a mechanical team — wind them up and watch them win.

All they did was win. The Tigers won 25 of their first 40 games and became only the third team in baseball history to lead from wire-to-wire. The last to do it was the 1927 New York Yankees, and the 1957 New York Giants also did it.

"We started 3-and-5," Gibson said. "And it seemed like everybody wanted us to blow the lead, but we never wilted under the pressure."

"Then we got to the playoffs, and everybody wanted us to lose, but we never did," Gibson said. "And then we got to the World Series, and now we're world champions."

Not only did the Tigers win it, but after a poor hitting series, they did it the way Anderson had said they could. They led the majors with 855. • See WORLD SERIES on Page B4.

Woeful pitching keeps Padres in starting gate

By MARK KREIDLER
 The Associated Press

DETROIT — Game Five slipped away from Mark Thurmond. The World Series slipped away from San Diego.

"What happened out there speaks for itself," Thurmond said Sunday night after the Padres were beaten by Detroit 8-4 in the deciding game of the Series. "They just beat me up. There is not much you can say."

Thurmond, 44 and a 2.37 earned run average during the regular season, was ripped for live hits and three runs and able to retire only one Tiger batter before being pulled in the bottom of the first inning. It was his second miserable outing of the Series.

Thurmond's performance was the finale of one of the most horrific collapses of starting pitching in a World Series. In five games, Padres starters lasted only 11.4 innings and gave up 28 hits and 17 runs.

Counting five games against Chicago in the National League Championship Series, San Diego's starters surrendered 44 had 20 runs in 21.4 innings.

"I've never really seen anything like it," said reliever Craig Lefferts, one of three long relievers who saw extensive season action and were credited with keeping the Padres in contention in several games. "Every one of our starters got in trouble, one after the other, and it just kind of snowballed."

"But it's really hard to put the blame on those guys. After all, they were the ones who got us here in the first place, and I don't think too many people expected us to do that."

Indeed, the mood in the Padres' locker room was surprisingly upbeat, especially compared to the near-silence they had demonstrated after losses on Friday and Saturday.

"All we can do, really, is look at the things we did accomplish," said outfielder Tony Gwynn. "We won a division when nobody expected us to. We won a championship and nobody expected us to. We got to the Series and just didn't play well."

"You can't explain something like that. Things just went all wrong for us, and we ran out of games to play. But I think we're less disappointed than we would have been if we'd lost in the playoffs."

Steve Garvey, the 33-year-old first baseman whose experience as a Los Angeles Dodgers leader, was credited with helping the Padres reach the first championship in their 16-year history, agreed.

"I'm not embarrassed. I wish we could have gone back to San Diego, but you can't always have what you want."

"I'm proud of what we started with this year, in spring training. This has been an outstanding year for all the guys involved. We gave our best shot, but we got beat by a better team."

Thurmond said he knew he was in trouble before he ever took the mound Sunday. • See PADRES on Page B4

Boise State University's biggest challenge for the Big Sky Conference football championship is coming from a most unlikely source — Montana State, a school which won just one game last season.

Boise State squeezed out a 14-12 decision over Northern Arizona Saturday night for its third straight Big Sky victory. That leaves Boise the only undefeated team in conference play.

MSU jumped into second place with a 3-1 Big Sky record, thanks to a 44-14 overtime decision over Nevada-Reno. That also was Montana State's fourth victory over the season, a sharp improvement over last year's dismal 1-10 record.

In the other Big Sky game, Weber State rallied from a 24-7 halftime deficit to whip Idaho 40-37 on sophomore kicker Craig Winberg's 79-yard field goal with seven seconds left. In nonconference games, Nevada-Las Vegas rallied late to beat Idaho State, 33-20, and Montana and Eastern Washington battled to a 14-14 tie.

Montana State's Dave Arnold said he's now 5-0 in overtime games, 2-0 at MSU and 3-0 in high school. "I don't like to play them, but I'll take the wins. It's so much a pressure situation everywhere, it's not very easy," he said.

In the fourth overtime, Nevada-Reno settled for a field goal by Marty Zendejas. But Quarterback Kelly Bradley passed 13 yards to running back David Pandt for the touchdown that produced victory.

"The thing is, you don't want to get hit for big losses. In our game plan, we have overtime series right here. We go through it every week," he said.

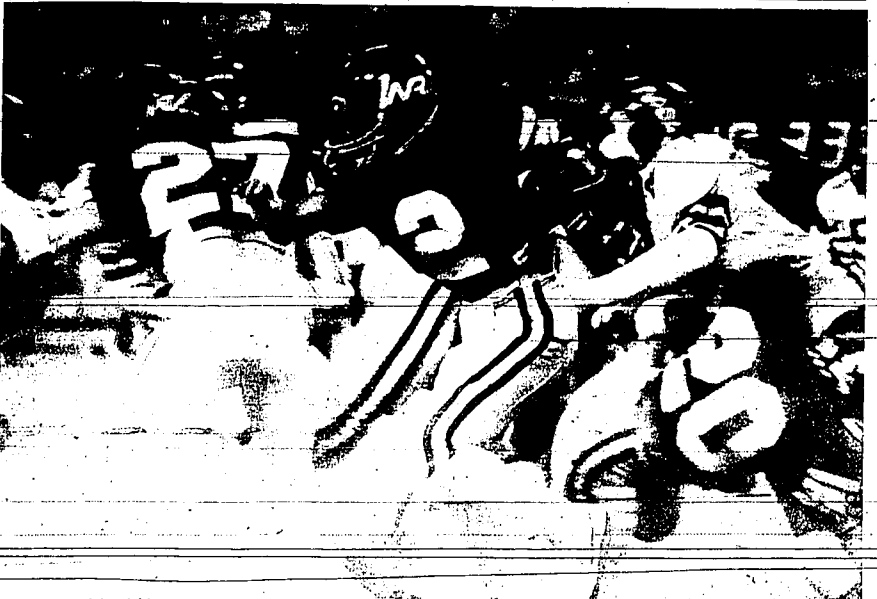

NAU went into the Boise game leading the league in scoring, and Boise State led in total offense. But instead of a high-scoring contest, the game at Flagstaff settled down to a series of defensive stands, fumbles and intercepted passes.

Boise lost three of six fumbles, and Northern Arizona lost three intercepted passes and three fumbles.

"They fumble, we fumble, they throw a pass interception," said Boise's Lyle Selenech. "Any problems we had was because Northern Arizona played like hell."

NAU's Joe Harper said his team had plenty of chances to win, but didn't take advantage of them. "I think our defense played a great game. It was our best game against like to play them, but I'll take the

SAN FRANCISCO — The Pittsburgh Steelers, in a performance reminiscent of their Super Bowl glory days, capitalized on a late interception by young linebacker Bryan Hinkle and dealt the San Francisco 49ers their first loss of the season Sunday.

"Super Bowl victories are great, but I've never been associated with a greater victory than this one," Coach Chuck Noll said after his team's 20-17 National Football League victory.

Hinkle made a leaping, one-handed catch near midfield for his interception and returned the ball 43 yards, setting up Gary Anderson's 21-yard field goal which came with 1:42 remaining and broke a 17-17 tie.

The 49ers' Joe Montana came back to complete six passes in a 54-yard drive to the Steelers' 28-yard line, but Ray Werschling missed a 37-yard field goal attempt with seven seconds left.

"I knew Werschling was going to miss, because we worked our butts off and desired to win this game," third-year NFL player Hinkle said.

"I wasn't rushed, my swing felt good. I felt good all day. That one just didn't go through," Werschling said. "I looked up expecting to see it going through."

The Steelers, who have only a handful of players remaining from the teams which sustained four Super Bowl titles in the 1970s, pulled off the upset with many young players in key roles.

"They played just like the Steelers of the mid-70s, they played us very physically," San Francisco guard Randy Cross said.

"That showed us we have the capability to beat the good teams," said John Stallworth, one of the Steelers' veterans.

Hinkle's interception, on a pass Montana intended for running back Bill Ring, was only the second of the season off the 49ers' quarterback. Hinkle ran down the right sideline to the San Francisco 3-yard line, before being tackled.

The loss by the 49ers, 6-1, left the Miami Dolphins as the only unbeaten team in the NFL. The Steelers, who lost to Miami 31-7 a week earlier, improved to 4-3 with their upset victory.

The 49ers drove 76 yards late in the third period and tied the score, 10-10, when Werschling kicked a 30-yard field goal on the opening play of the fourth quarter. A 51-yard field goal by Werschling in the first half was nullified by a penalty.

San Francisco got the ball back a few minutes after Werschling's fourth-quarter field goal when linebacker Kenna Turner intercepted a pass by Mark Malone, who started at quarterback for Pittsburgh in place of injured David Woodley.

Defensive tackle Gary Johnson tackled Malone as the quarterback was releasing the ball, creating a wobbly pass which Turner intercepted and returned 19 yards to the Pittsburgh 20-yard line.

Woodley threw an seven yards, spinning into the end zone, to send the 49ers ahead for the first time.

Miami subdues Oilers, improves mark to 7-0

By FRED GOODALL
 The Associated Press

MIAMI — The Miami Dolphins remained unbeaten with a 28-10 National Football League victory over Houston Sunday, but the defending AFC East champions farly breezed past the winless Oilers.

"It was a tough day for us to get started," Coach Don Shula said after watching his team bury the pesky Oilers "with a 21-point second half." "This game typified that Houston wasn't as bad as people thought."

Dan Marino, the NFL's top-rated quarterback, exploited the Oilers' secondary for 321 yards and three touchdowns and rookie Joe Carter became the first Dolphin to rush for more than 100 yards in two years as Miami improved its record to 7-0.

Marino, hitting his season totals to 2,074 yards and 20 TDs, completed 25 of 32 passes, including scoring strikes of 27 yards to Mark Clayton, 17 yards to Mark Duper and 32 yards to Nat Moore, who tied a club record for career touchdowns.

The unblemished start is Miami's best since 1975 when the Dolphins won seven of their first eight, three years after posting a perfect 17-0 record. Houston, 6-7 under first-year Coach Hugh Campbell, lost for the 29th time in its last 32 games.

"This was a very tough loss. Tougher than the others because we played very, very hard," Campbell said.

"Except for the last touchdown, we tackled well, blocked well and executed well," he added. "We just played a team that was better than us... and I think that's an understatement."

"The difference was the Dolphins made the big plays. That's what they've been doing all year," said Oilers quarterback Warren Moon. "Some calls and breaks went against us, but that wasn't the difference in the game."

Marino completed 18 of 20 passes for 218 yards in the first half, but Miami could only manage a 7-0 lead on Clayton's sixth touchdown reception of the season.

Duper caught his seventh scoring pass of the year for a 140 lead 6:30 into the third quarter, and Moore's 57th career touchdown — moving him into a tie with Larry Conka on the

Riggo runs as Redskins rout Dallas

By The Associated Press

There was no other way of looking at it Sunday — the Washington Redskins pounded the Dallas Cowboys into the turf of RFK Stadium in the first meeting of the season between the two teams that usually dominate the National Football Conference East.

Except that in true coachy fashion, the two men that run the teams declined to say so.

The Redskins trounced the Cowboys 24-14 in Washington, totally dominating Dallas after the Cowboys had taken a 7-0 lead just 2:32 into the game.

They accomplished that in the most basic way possible — on three touchdown passes by Joe Theismann and a 166-yard day by John Riggins, who also became the fifth running back in NFL history to run for 10,000 yards. For the game, the Redskins ran over the Cowboys for 241 rushing yards and picked off three passes, one of which Monte Coleman returned 49 yards for a touchdown.

Bill Coach Joe Gibbs wasn't about to accept the Redskins fifth straight win after two opening losses as a sign of his team's dominance.

"Dallas is still a very good football team," Gibbs said. "I expected a great team to come in here and that's what we got. They will be there to be answered to."

Riggins, who passed the 10,000-yard milestone with a seven-yard run on the final play of the first quarter and carried the ball on 32 of the Redskins' 63 offensive plays, paid tribute once again to his "Hogs." The Redskins' offensive line, and line coach Joe Bugel said: "There was nothing fancy about it. We must have run up the gut 30 times. You can't run wide on Dallas."

New York Giants 19, Atlanta 7
In Atlanta, Phil Simms passed for 246 yards and one touchdown and New York's mangled defense staged one goal line stand and set up a touchdown with a pass interception as the Giants downed the Atlanta Falcons.

The victory snapped a two-game losing streak for New York, which had allowed 41 points in those two games.

Philadelphia 16, Indianapolis 7
In Philadelphia, quarterback Ron Jaworski played only the first half but directed a touchdown and two-field goal drives that enabled the Philadelphia Eagles to beat the Indianapolis Colts.

St. Louis 38, Chicago 21
In St. Louis, Neil Lomax, plagued by a vicious Chicago pass rush, responded Sunday by hooking up with Roy Green for long gains and also scored a touchdown in the closing minutes while guiding the St. Louis Cardinals to a triumph over the Bears.

Los Angeles Rams dominated the disgruntled New Orleans Saints 28-10 in a National Football League game Sunday.

Saints Coach Bum Phillips alternated quarterbacks Richard Todd and Ken Stabler as well as running backs Earl Campbell and George Rogers series by series through the first half, and the Saints could muster no offensive spark at all through those first 30 minutes.

In the second half, Phillips settled on Stabler, and the Saints began to show more consistency.

The Rams exploded for 21 points in the second quarter on touchdown passes of 25 yards by Kemp to Drew Hill and 12 yards to Henry Ellard. Safety Nolan Cromwell returned an interception of one of Todd's passes 33 yards for a second-quarter touchdown.

The Rams got a third-quarter touchdown on a 21-yard pass from Kemp to Ron Brown.

The Saints' scoring came on a 47-yard field goal by Morten Andersen in the first quarter and a 1-yard plunge by Hokie Gajan early in the fourth quarter.

Cromwell and Dickerson combined to run a second-quarter Saints' drive into a Rams' touchdown. Cromwell picked off a Stabler pass at the 2-yard line and returned it to the 23.

The Rams now are 4-3, and the Saints 3-4.

Pats rally to beat Cincinnati

By The Associated Press

New England was in a familiar position Sunday, trailing in a National Football League game, when quarterback Tony Eason relied on something that is becoming familiar to him, running the ball.

"I didn't plan it that way, but I see some opening I'll run as far as I can," he said after doing that for 25-and-13-yard touchdowns to spark the Patriots to their fourth comeback victory of the season, 20-14, over the Cincinnati Bengals in Foxboro, Mass.

"We can't do that every week," Eason, who has rushed for 100 touchdowns this year, said of the comebacks. "We try to do that every week, somebody is going to get on top of you and stay there."

But New England coach Ron Meyer saw some benefit in repeatedly rallying from behind.

"It gives our team confidence on both sides of the ball, offensively and defensively. That if we keep playing hard we're always going to be in a position to strike," Meyer said.

Eason thought he had another touchdown in a controversial play that brought complaints from both sides.

Early in the final period with Cincinnati leading 14-10 and the ball inside the Bengals' 1-yard line, Eason seemed to lean over the goal line on a second-down play before he fumbled. Free safety Robert Jackson recovered the ball and started running toward the Patriots' end zone before an official's whistle stopped him.

New England protested that Eason crossed the goal line before losing the ball. Cincinnati Coach Sam Wyche claimed that Jackson should have been allowed to run.

New York Jets 24, Cleveland 20
In Cleveland, Freeman McNeil, playing despite bruised ribs, ran for a pair of first-half touchdowns and rookie Tony Paig rammed into the end zone from the 1-yard line for the game-winning score in the fourth quarter as the New York Jets won their fourth straight road game, defeating the Cleveland Browns.

Paig, a sixth-round draft choice from Virginia Tech, scored his fourth touchdown of the year to cap an 80-yard Jets' drive with 5:39 to go in the game.

Cleveland, 1-6, whose Ozzie Newsome set team records for 14 receptions for 197 yards, had taken the lead 20-7 when Matt Bahr kicked an 18-yard field goal two minutes into the fourth quarter.

Another cardiac climax for Raiders

By The Associated Press

Chris Bahr boiled a 20-yard field goal as time expired Sunday to give the defending Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Raiders a hard-fought 23-20 National Football League victory over the Minnesota Vikings in Los Angeles.

The Raiders moved from the Minnesota 36-yard line to the Vikings' 2 on six running plays before Bahr kicked his third field goal of the game.

Los Angeles, now 6-1, got the ball in good field position after Minnesota's Greg Coleman was forced to pass from the back line of the Vikings' end zone.

Of the six running plays, five were by Frank Hawkins and were good for a total of 30 yards.

The Vikings, who were 10-point underdogs, fell to 2-5.

The Raiders won despite being penalized 10 times for 140 yards. Los Angeles' quarterback Marc Wilson completed 21 of his 37 passes for 258 yards, all but 64 of them in the first half.

Minnesota quarterback Tommy Kramer hit on 11 of his 19 throws for 168 yards and two touchdowns.

The Raiders tied the game 20-20 on a 1-yard dive by Marcus Allen with 12:52 remaining in the contest. The touchdown was set up when Jack Squirrak recovered a fumble by Minnesota's Alfred Anderson at the Los Angeles 20-yard line.

AFC West

The Vikings had taken a seven-point lead just 3:54 earlier on a 2-yard scoring pass from Kramer to light end Mike Mularky. Minnesota moved 31 yards in six plays after Carl Lee recovered a fumble by Allen.

Kansas City 31, San Diego 13
In Kansas City, Mo., Bill Kenney, striking quickly after one of his passes was intercepted and returned 99 yards, tossed a 20-yard scoring strike for the go-ahead touchdown in Kansas City's wild victory over the San Diego Chargers.

Kenny, who threw for more than 4,000 yards last season but sat out the first six games this year with an injured thumb, threw for 238 yards in his 1984 debut, including a 5-yard touchdown pass to Ed Beckman in the fourth period.

He entered the game early in the second half and moments later cornerback Gill Byrd intercepted one of his passes at the 1-yard line, broke a tackle and burst 93 yards up the middle for a touchdown.

It was just one yard short of the Chargers' record for an interception return, but San Diego's 13-10 lead lasted less than 90 seconds. Kenney whipped the Chiefs 71 yards in only four plays, capping the march with a 24-yard toss to Stephane Paige for a 17-13 advantage.

With 4:37 left, rookie Herman Heard broke free over the middle and raced 69 yards for Kansas City's final touchdown.

The Chiefs built a 10-6 halftime lead with the help of 102 yards in penalties against the Chargers, who wound up with 17.

Benny Ricardo, signed as a free agent Friday, kicked two field goals for the Chargers, 4-3. Nick Lowery booted one for the Chiefs, also 4-3, who got a 29-yard touchdown run from Ken Lacy in the first period.

Seattle 31, Buffalo 28
In Seattle, Dave Krieg and old pro Steve Largent teamed on a 51-yard touchdown pass with 8:07 left to give the Seattle Seahawks a victory over the winless Buffalo Bills.

The Seahawks, 5-2, had to go 88 yards in six plays for their game-winning touchdown on a day when they couldn't hold leads of 17-0 after the first quarter and 24-14 in the third period.

The experience-aleck Largent caught Krieg's go-ahead scoring pass in isolation on the Buffalo 25 and virtually strolled into the end zone because Bills' defender Charles Rome had fallen down on the play.

Largent's second touchdown reception of the game gave him 496 for his NFL career, making him the 12th leading receiver in NFL history.

The Bills, 0-7, went ahead 28-24 with 11:10 remaining on Joe Ferguson's second touchdown pass of the second half.

He fired a 39-yarder to Preston Denmark in the end zone for the Bills' only lead of the afternoon.

Ferguson, who returned to the Bills' starting lineup after missing two games because of a severely sprained ankle, found Byron Franklin behind the Seahawks' defense and hit him with a 50-yard touchdown bomb.

Krieg teamed with Largent for a 10-yard scoring pass and rookie Daryl Turner for a 4-yard TD pass in the first period after the Sealwicks blocked two John Kidd touchdowns.

Utes manage to tie San Diego St.

By The Associated Press

Quarterback Mark Stevens hit wide receiver Danny Huey with a 49-yard touchdown pass with 2:19 remaining, then passed to Thurman Beard for the two-point conversion as Utah tied San Diego State 24-24 Saturday night in a Western Athletic Conference football game in San Diego.

Utah's late score spotted a fourth-quarter comeback by San Diego State, which had sailed 14 fourth-quarter points to take a 24-16 lead with 3:40 left to play.

The Utes marched 74 yards in five plays for the tying score, with Huey breaking open down the left sideline and hauling in the throw from Stevens. The Utah quarterback then found Beard all alone in the right corner of the end zone for the two-point.

Aztec's freshman Todd Santos, unseated this week as San Diego State's starting quarterback, came off the bench to engineer two fourth-quarter scoring drives.

The Ute gave San Diego State a 2-31 overall record, and the Aztecs are 2-1-1 in WAC play. Utah is 3-3-1 overall and 2-1-1 in the conference.

period, guided an eight-play, 71-yard drive capped by Dan Laster's 9-yard scoring strike for a touchdown with 9:46 remaining. Santos, who was demoted in favor of Plum after ineffective outings in two previous games, completed four of his four passes in the scoring drive.

The Aztecs came right back on their next possession, as Santos directed a nine-play, 72-yard drive culminated by a 9-yard touchdown pass to Vince Warren.

Utah's Andre Guardl kicked three field goals, including a 22-yarder early in the fourth quarter after hitting from 34 and 27 yards in the first half.

Hawaii 24, UTEP 20
In El Paso, Texas, Hawaii quarterback Raphael Coker took his team 90 yards in the game's final three minutes, and freshman tailback Junior Lopati's seven-yard run with 17 seconds remaining gave the Rainbow Warriors a victory over Texas-El Paso.

In the closing seconds, UTEP took the kickoff and moved to the Hawaii 37 on Sammy Garza's 36-yard pass to Arnold Duere, but Garza's desperation into the end zone was tipped away as time expired.

Hawaii improved its record to 3-3 for the season and 2-1 in Western Athletic Conference play. UTEP fell to 1-5 for the year and 0-4 in league play.

The winning drive covered 80 yards in 14 plays. Cherry's 25-yard pass to Walter Murray, on third-and-20 from the Hawaii 10 with 2:39 left in the game got a stalled attack going.

UTEP had gone ahead 20-17 with three minutes to play on senior tailback James Rose's two-yard run. A roughing-the-punter penalty against Hawaii at the UTEP 31 enabled the Miners to sustain the 17-play, 79-yard drive.

Hawaii took an early 3-0 lead after UTEP fumbled the opening kickoff at the Miners 30. Four plays later, the Warriors' Richard Spellman kicked a 36-yard field goal.

But field goals of 24 and 25 yards by Hugo Castellanos enabled UTEP to lead 6-3 at halftime.

LEGAL NOTICE

STATE OF IDAHO DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

In the Matter of the Proposed Amendment of the Health Regulations

NOTICE OF INTENDED AGENCY ACTION

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE, that the undersigned proposes to amend the regulations of the Department of Agriculture concerning Animal Health pursuant to the procedure prescribed by Section 67-5203, Idaho Code, and that the authority for amending such regulations is provided by Sections 25-203, 207, and 601, Idaho Code.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE, that the undersigned proposes to amend Animal Health Rules and Regulations 30-114, 115, 117, 118, 176, and 183; to delete Regulations 159 and 160; and to add Regulations 35-186. The revisions relating to brucellosis amend testing and identification procedures, provide for the classification of Idaho as a state, allow transfer of brucellosis status to and from the Federal Quarantined Feedlots and Idaho Registered Quarantined Feedlots, impose stricter import requirements for cattle from states with high disease risk, and otherwise conform the wording of the regulations to the requirements of the National Brucellosis Program. Further, the amendments allow alternatives in the treatment of scabies.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that a copy of the said amendments may be obtained from the undersigned at 120 Klotz Street, Idaho, or by writing the undersigned at P.O. Box 790, Boise, Idaho 83701.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that for the purpose of determining whether the amendments will be adopted as stated above, any person or group interested in the amendments may submit oral or written testimony to the undersigned on or before November 19, 1984, at the aforementioned address. This department shall fully review and consider all written and oral submissions concerning this amendment received on or before the date. Unless twenty-five or more persons or governmental subdivision or agency, or an association representing a profession, signed by not less than twenty-five members of the organization, make a written request for general hearing on the proposed amendment before November 19, 1984, no such general hearing shall be convened. Any hearing will be accessible to the physically disabled. Interpreters for persons with hearing impairment and/or taped information for persons with visual impairment can be provided on live circuit notice. For arrangements, contact the undersigned at 334-3240.

DATED this 3rd day of October, 1984.

MAX HANSEN
Director, Idaho Department of Agriculture

PUBLISH: Monday, October 15, 22, and 29, 1984.

formance to Idaho's Water Pollution Abatement Code, Chapter 36). The priority-ruling-and-ranking system is revised to the proposed rules according to water quality or public health needs, thus offering grant monies to those with the most serious water quality impacts first. The revision also more clearly defines the request status of the program and removes redundancies found in the existing regulations.

Within the time limits specified below, any person can review the proposed rules in the DHW Administrative Procedure Section or in any of the regional administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the proposed rules will be made available without charge to those requesting specifying the docket number cited above and at a rate of ten cents per copy. A check must accompany the request and be made payable to the Department of Health and Welfare for the amount of $3.30.

Anyone can submit written comments regarding the proposed rules-and any individual or industry who may be affected by the proposed rules is encouraged to submit information concerning the impact of the proposed action. For assistance on technical questions concerning the proposed rules, contact Robert Braun, Department of Health and Welfare, (208) 334-4252, Boise. All written comments and data concerning the proposed rules must be directed to the undersigned and must be postmarked or delivered on or before October 22, 1984.

Rule making hearing(s) will be held at the undersigned, written requests for a hearing are submitted and personal or addressed to the undersigned and postmarked on or before October 22, 1984, from two (2) or more interested persons, or from an association presenting a petition containing the signatures of less than twenty-five (25) members of the organization, on or before October 1, 8, and 15, 1984.

Lendl falls to unsung newcomer

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Anders Jarryd of Sweden gained his first major singles victory of his career by defeating Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, the world's No. 2 player, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4 in the final of the Australian Indoor Tennis Championships Sunday.

The 23-year-old Swede needed two hours and two minutes to dispose of Lendl.

Jarryd completely outplayed the Czech, who seemed bewildered. The power play Lendl had used so effectively to blast his way into the final with the loss of just 18 games dissolved as Jarryd moved him around the court at will.

"It is the best match I have ever played," a jubilant Jarryd said.

Jarryd completed his biggest day in world tennis when he and countryman Hans Simonsson won the doubles title with a 6-4, 6-4 victory over defending champions Mark Edmondson of Australia and American Sherwood Stewart.

Jarryd collected more than $56,000 for the two title triumphs.

The Swede had lost his previous five matches against Lendl in straight sets, the last three at Brussels in a Grand Prix event and at the French and U.S. opens.

The victory likely will move Jarryd, ranked sixth in the world before this tournament, further up the official rankings ladder.

Swedish players now hold the two major singles titles of the Australian calendar after Mats Wilander won the Australian Open at Kooyong in December.

Showdown looms for district honors

Defending District 4 Class A-2 champion Buhl and perennial powerhouse Wood River will be seeking something besides victories tonight when they open district volleyball tournament competition in Buhl and Halley.

"The girls are playing pretty good, but I'd like to see them play with more consistency," says Buhl High Coach Pat Thornberry, whose Indians are the second seeds in the four-team tournament. "We've had some good games, but we've had some bad ones too. We're going to have to play our best to beat Wood River."

"We're attacking real well right now, but we're going to have to attack with consistency when we play Buhl," says Coach David Neumann of top-seeded Wood River. "We're going to have to pass the ball up to our setters. If we have a poor passing game, they'll be tough for us to beat."

First, however, both teams must get through their opening-round matches. Buhl, 15-5 for the season and 5-1 in district play, will entertain third-seeded Jerome (7-9, 2-4) while Wood River (16-3, 5-1) will host Burley (4-14, 0-6). Both matches are scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m. The winners will advance to the semifinal match, to be played on the home court of the highest seed Tuesday night at 7:30. The two first-match losers will also play Tuesday on the court of the highest seed, with the winner of that consolation-round match scheduled to face the loser of Tuesday's winners-bracket game at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, prior to the district championship game. Thursday's action will also take place on the home court of the highest remaining seed.

If necessary, a second title game will be played at 8:30 Thursday.

The tournament winner will get the district's single berth to the state A-2 tournament, which will be played Oct. 26-27 in Sandpoint.

The Wolverines, who have won the state title twice in the eight years the sport has been played in Idaho high schools, came on strongly in the end of the season with victories over a couple of A-1 opponents, including Gem State Conference champion Twin Falls last week. Neumann credits teamwork for Wood River's success.

"The major strength of this team is that it communicates well," he says. "We run a 5-1 offense, so the most important single individual is our setter, and Sheila Tracy has done a good job for us this year."

Neumann estimates that Tracy, a senior, has accounted by 350 assists this year.

By contrast, serving tends to be Buhl's forte, due largely to senior Ann Hamilton.

"Buhl adjusted pretty well when we played them down there," says Neumann, whose team lost at Buhl and beat the Indians in Halley. "We had the opportunity to win that match, but we didn't do it. We know what we've got to do to beat them; it's just a case of doing it."

CSI turns up wins in Boise

BOISE — Sally Butts, Macle Miller, Don McMurtion and the men's 1600-meter relay team took firsts Saturday in a five-way college track meet at Boise State.

Butts, her sights set on the national heptathlon title next spring, won her specialty with 5,066 points while freshman Jennifer Whelan was third with 4,213.

Miller sailed 18-6 to easily win the long-jump competition and McMurtion bit 22 feet to win the men's.

The relay squad of Andy Bopp, Devore Whaley, Tim Stevens and Junior James turned their 1500 meters in 3:22.12, beating University of Utah and Idaho State by about 40 yards in 20-mile per hour winds.

Torrid Indians face tough crowd in Wendell

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

WENDELL — Amazing Shoshone, bidding to alter the longstanding balance of power in District 4 Class A-3 prep volleyball, will open the district tournament as the clear favorite here today.

But the Indians, who claimed the Canyon Conference championship last week with a 7-0 record (13-2 overall), must face a competitive field that includes defending district champion Kimberly and perennial power Gooding.

"We've had a pretty good season so far," concedes Shoshone Coach Larry Messick. "But it's going to be close-from-top-to-bottom. Gooding has to be a contender because they're the perennial district champs, but I don't rate Kimberly and Filer too far behind us."

Shoshone will open up this afternoon at 4 against Wendell (1-6, 4-11), while No. 4 seed Filer (no records available) will play Deelo (3-4, 9-7) at 5. At 6 p.m., Kimberly (4-2, no overall record available) will take on Valley (2-5, 4-9), while at 7 second-seeded Gooding (5-1, 9-6) will face Glenns Ferry (1-6, 2-8). The winners of those matches will play at 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. on Wednesday, while the losers will meet at 4 and 7. On Thursday, the semifinal match will be played at 5 p.m. with the championship game slated for 7. The two teams in that match will advance to the state A-3 tournament, which will be played Oct. 26-27 at Idaho Falls High School.

"Shoshone's a very good team," says Gooding Coach Jolene Toone. "Our main fault when we played them was serving, but that was in their gym which is pretty small. In a bigger gym, I think we might do better."

"Serving has been probably our best strength this year," says Messick. "Plus I think we've got the best hitter in the conference in Julie Hibbard and a good sophomore setter in Patty O'Malley."

Kimberly Coach Jean Emerson, who lost most of her powerhouse team last season to graduation, rates the Bulldogs chances as improving.

Blazers prepared to re-ink Paxson

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers may sign free-agent Jim Paxson as early as today if final details can be worked out, says Larry Weinberg, president of the National Basketball Association.

Weinberg has said the Blazers would match any offer for Paxson from another team. Paxson said Friday that the New York Knicks had submitted an offer sheet proposal.

Green wins Southern Open easily

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Veteran Hubert Green ended a three-year drought Sunday by shooting a steady, error-free 3-under-par 67 Sunday to capture the $300,000 Southern Open Golf Tournament by six strokes.

The 37-year-old Green, who had not won on the tour since taking the Greater Hartford Open in 1981, led from the second round. He took charge immediately Sunday with a birdie on the opening hole and never was in danger in winning the first prize of $54,000.

Green wound up with a 265, 15-under-par over the hilly, narrow par 70, 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course.

Scott Hoch, who trailed Green by three shots entering the final round, never mounted a charge and wound up in a three-way tie for second at 270 after shooting a 70.

Also at 270 were rookie Corey Pavin and Rex Caldwell. Pavin had a 68 and Caldwell a 66.

The triumph was the 18th of Green's 15-year career and increased his earnings for the year to $135,753 and $1.76 million lifetime, but the 1977 U.S. Open winner, hit bottom in 1983 when he earned just over $29,000 and was 145th on the money list.

Whitworth takes Irish Open golf trophy home

BANGOR, Northern Ireland (AP) — Kathy Whitworth, winner of more tournaments than any woman in professional golf history, captured her first event outside the United States Sunday with a two-stroke triumph in the $150,000 Irish Open Championship at Clondeboyne.

The 45-year-old golfing star capitalized when her major rival, Pat Bradley of the U.S., faltered over the closing holes.

Lars Hovey captures Canyon Springs event

TWIN FALLS — Lars Hovey of Boise carded an eight-under par 82 to win individual honors in the Canyon Club Invitational golf tournament Sunday.

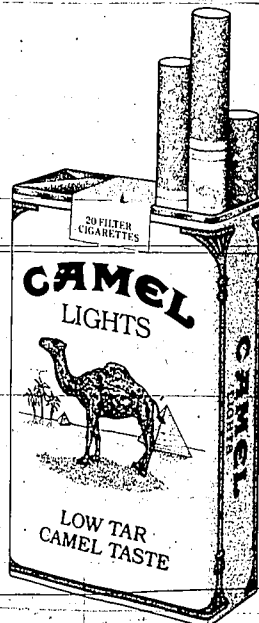

Hovey nipped Perry Hanchey of Twin Falls by one stroke while Bill Durbin and Gary Jenkins, both Twin Falls, carded 84s.

Knotted at 85 were Wes Startin, Kimberly, Davey Jones, Piler, and Gary Roland, Twin Falls.
