Reagan, Mondale debate policies

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Walter F. Mondale said Sunday night that President Reagan is an out-of-touch leader whose foreign policy has "humiliated" the United States. Reagan retorted in the climactic campaign debate that Mondale has a "record of weakness ... that is second to none" on national defense.

In his closing argument, Mondale told viewers to imagine the United States under nuclear attack, asking:

"Pick a president that you know will know — if that tragic moment ever comes — what he must know. Because there will be no time for staffing, committees or advisers. A president must know right then."

Reagan had the final words, saying, "I want more than anything else to try to complete the new beginning that we charted four years ago."

"It may come as a surprise to Mr. Mondale, but I am in charge," Reagan had replied lastly after his Democratic opponent assailed his policies on arms control, Lebanon, Central America and elsewhere.

"I will keep us strong," was Mondale's reply after Reagan listed a series of weapons that he said his presidential opponent had once opposed. He said that as a result of the president's policies in Central America, "we have been humiliated and our opponents are stronger."

The 90-minute televised debate began and ended with a handshake at center stage between the president and his Democratic challenger, far behind in the polls and hoping, still, for a final surge to victory.

But in between the gestures of courtesy Reagan and Mondale traded sharply worded charges of weakness. Reagan said that is Mondale's record. Mondale said Reagan is ignorant of some essentials needed for leadership, and "Strength requires knowledge."

Midway through, Reagan was asked directly if he feels he is too old to handle a nuclear crisis.

"Not at all," he said. In the type of humorous follow-up he often uses to defuse the "age issue," the 73-year-old Reagan also said he would not make age a campaign issue. "I am not going to exploit ... my opponent's youth and inexperience," he said.

Mondale agreed that age should not be an issue in the campaign. But he turned the question, like almost every other asked of him, to an attack on Reagan's leadership, his ability to "command."

"A president has to lead his government or it won't be done," he said after attacking Reagan's policy in Lebanon and on arms control. "Good intentions I grant, but it takes more than that," Mondale said. "You must be tough and smart."

The president had a little trouble with his summation. He began with a question that mistated his own argument, "Do you want to see America return to the policies of weakness of the past four years..." That was apparently intended to be a reference to the preceding four years, when Mondale was vice president under Jimmy Carter.

Mondale, after attacking Reagan's policy in Lebanon, said:

Ronald Reagan and Walter Mondale shake hands after their second and last debate Sunday night

In Idaho, no huzzahs, just confidence in the candidates

By The Associated Press

More stories, photos on the debate — C1

There were no huzzahs or handstands from either Idaho Democratic or Republican leaders after Sunday night's second presidential debate in Kansas City, but rather confidence and a feeling that now the choice between Ronald Reagan and Walter Mondale is in the hands of the American people.

"This debate was actually dull," state Democratic Party Chairman Mel Morgan said from Pocatello. "There wasn't the zip and fire there was in the other ones. The president did well and Mondale did well. While hoping momentum picked up in recent weeks will continue, Morgan said Mondale "could have been more aggressive" in attacking administration policies.

"I was disappointed in both their performances," he said. "And one of them's an actor."

But Lt. Gov. David Leroy, co-chairman of the Reagan-Bush campaign in Idaho, was more enthusiastic in his support of a president he saw as back in control after what some considered a disastrous performance two weeks ago in Louisville, Ky.

"The winner and still champion is Ronald Reagan," Leroy said. "He was combative and personable, well schooled and relaxed, and the combination is a very successful presentation at a critical time for the president."

He said Reagan's proposal to share Star Wars technology with the Soviet Union stifled the Democratic challenger's attempts to use the controversial weapons program against the president.

"It certainly is not the rhetoric that you would associate with someone who's trigger-happy in a nuclear age," Leroy said.

Antarctic resources may be opened by treaty

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
The Associated Press

The United States and 15 other "Antarctic nations" are debating a proposed treaty that would let mineral companies dig for that vast continent's resources on the vote of just a handful of governments.

The negotiating text of the Antarctic agreement has been kept confidential, but The Associated Press obtained a copy from the environmental group Greenpeace.

Environmentalists object that the suggested system for mining and oil drilling does not adequately protect the Antarctic ecology.

Some Third World governments, meanwhile, want the United Nations to take control of Antarctica.

They complain that the 16 nations — those active in exploring Antarctica — comprise a "rich man's club" ready to exploit the icebound land's potential wealth for their own gain. The U.N. General Assembly is to debate the issue next month.

In an interview, the chief U.S. negotiator in the mineral talks countered that the 16 governments have a good record in protecting the Antarctic environment, and that only those nations involved in Antarctica should decide its future.

The 16 are signatories to the 1959 Antarctica Treaty, which suspended territorial claims on the southern continent for 30 years, declared it non-military zone and encouraged scientific cooperation. The treaty said nothing about resource management, however.

Although the extent of deposits remains uncertain, the Transantarctic Mountains are believed to hold coal, iron, copper and gold, and possibly platinum and chromium.

Seven of the 16 principal treaty nations have territorial claims in Antarctica — Argentina, Australia, Britain, Chile, France, New Zealand and Norway. The other nations are Belgium, Brazil, India, Japan, Poland, South Africa, the Soviet Union, the United States and West Germany.

Some claimants want exclusive rights to mineral exploitation in their sectors. The United States and others want the continent open to anyone who can develop it. Negotiations for a minerals agreement began in June 1982.

Greenpeace said it obtained the latest negotiating text from sympathizers among the delegations involved.

The proposal, circulated last March by New Zealand, the talks' chairman, seeks a balance between exploitation and protection, declaring that the parties believe environmental protection must be "a basic consideration" in development.

"Let's draw the line here," Jim Barnes, Greenpeace's Antarctica specialist, said in a telephone interview from Washington D.C.

United States maintains role as world's 'melting pot'

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Long known as a nation of nations, the United States is home to residents born in 155 other countries, from Mexico to Madagascar, the Census Bureau reports.

First centered in Northern and Western Europe, the immigration largely responsible for building the U.S. population since colonial days expanded to include Southern and Eastern Europe in the last century, later adding many Asians.

Now, the biggest influx of new residents is arriving from countries in this hemisphere, notably Mexico.

Data compiled by the bureau from the 1980 census discloses that 1,079,906 people listed birthplaces in other countries, including 2,199,291 from Mexico.

The actual Mexican-born total is likely to be higher than that because of the reluctance of many immigrants, especially those who have arrived illegally, to cooperate with government authorities counting them, officials say.

In addition, the flow of Mexicans and others, both legal and illegal, has continued since the headcount was taken. Some estimates put the total of illegal aliens currently in the country as high as 4 million or more, although not all are from Mexico.

The bureau counted more than 14 million Americans of Hispanic heritage, 60 percent tracing their roots to Mexico, but many of those are native-born Americans.

Mexico was the source of more than twice as many foreign-born U.S. residents as the country in second place, Germany, which had 849,384.

In contrast to the Mexicans, the vast majority of Germans arrived in this country more than 25 years ago. Many came to the United States in the years before and after World War II, and only 6 percent of their total has arrived since 1975.

In addition to the German-born residents, some 49 million U.S.-born Americans trace their roots to that country, making it also the second-largest ancestry-listed by Americans. Only the 50 million Americans who said one of more of their ancestors came from England outnumbered those of German stock.

On the list of current residents born elsewhere, however, the United Kingdom ranked only fifth, totaling 683,149. That total included 442,459 people born in England, 142,001 from Scotland and the balance from Wales, Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands.

Ahead of the British in contributing to the current U.S. population were Canada, with 842,859 people who have come south, and Italy, which has sent 831,324 people to this country. Rounding out the top 10 contributors to foreign-born residents in this country are Cuba, 607,814; Philippines, 501,440; Poland, 418,128; the Soviet Union, 406,022 and Korea, 289,853.

The current total for Cuba is higher than listed by the census, because the 1980 head count was taken a few months before an estimated 125,000 refugees came to these shores in the Mariel boatlift.

At the other end of the scale, the foreigner hardest to find in the United States is probably someone from Madagascar.

The Census Bureau counted only 419 U.S. residents who were born on that island off the southeast coast of Africa. The search would be nearly as tough on one of the 425 current residents born in the Pacific island nation of Papua-New Guinea.

Other countries with tiny representation in the current U.S. population include Burundi, 627,817, and Haiti, 625,836.

470; Anguilla, 477; and Malawi, 502. California, the state with the most American-born, also has the biggest share of those who were born in another country, including 1,277,569 from Mexico. Texas had the second-largest Mexican-born population, 498,181.

German natives, on the other hand, have their largest representations in New York, 134,991, and California, 112,673.

Italians also are concentrated in New York, with centers from Canada and Britain are more heavily represented in California.

Of the 419 residents from Madagascar, 114 make their homes in New York and 52 in California.

The five states with the most foreign-born residents are California, 3,589,039; New York, 2,388,338; Florida, 1,056,722; Texas, 827,817; and Hawaii, 825,836.

Teachers remain on strike

Schools still closed

By DEANS MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Schools will be closed indefinitely while teachers and the school district's board disagree over the conditions under which teachers will return to work during contract talks.

The next scheduled negotiating session will be presided over by federal mediator Tom Curdie at 7 p.m. Tuesday night.

Acting superintendent Carl Snow said Sunday night schools will be closed because the teachers would not agree to discontinue demonstrations and "disruptions" unless the board were at the bargaining table with them.

In a Sunday morning statement, board spokesman Gary Fay said the board would open schools Monday "in return" for the union's agreement to discontinue disruptions, demonstrations and walkouts which have affected the quality of our children's education in this district.

In a Sunday afternoon statement, union president Dick Chilcote said, "Teachers are willing to curtail all their activities on every day that the board meets directly with the teachers to resolve the dispute."

Board chairman Gene Champlin says the board decided to keep schools closed because the wording of the statement left open the possibility that teachers could walk out before the Tuesday meeting. "They rejected our offer."

Teacher negotiator Jana Roy said Sunday night that the teachers could not agree to return to school under the board's conditions.

"Snow said, 'If we have another walkout some kid is going to get hurt.'"

"The safety of the children is number one," Snow said. Of particular concern to the board are reports that schoolchildren waited at bus stops Friday morning because their parents had not been apprised of the walkout, said Snow.

Snow said teachers did not give the district sufficient time to warn parents when it decided to walk out last Thursday night.

"The union cannot dictate when we have school," said Snow. "They want to go back on their terms, but it would be negligent on our part to turn the decision as to when to hold school over their heads," said Snow.

In a Sunday afternoon statement Chilcote said, "The teachers negotiating team is available to start now and at any time that the board determines that this problem is serious enough to warrant its immediate attention."

Chilcote delivered petitions supporting the union signed by 5,079 people to Champlin on Sunday evening. The petition calls on the board to spend the House Bill 475 funds for teacher salary increases and to meet with the teacher negotiating team.

Fay said board members discussed the offer to reopen schools by phone Saturday night and Champlin conducted a poll Sunday morning in which all four available members voted in favor of reopening schools under the conditions forbidding demonstrations. Board member Jack

Francois Truffaut dies at 52

PARIS (AP) — Francois Truffaut, the French film director who spearheaded New Wave cinema and won awards from Cannes to Hollywood for his portrayals of ordinary people, died Sunday of cancer at the age of 52.

Truffaut died at the American Hospital in the Paris suburb of Neuilly, a spokesman there said. He said Truffaut was admitted about 10 days ago and fell into a coma, regaining consciousness only briefly, from time to time.

Truffaut found out in 1963 that he had a brain tumor and took on a secluded life, seeing few people.

Last year, he became the father of a girl. The mother of the child was his companion of several years, French actress Fanny Ardant, who was the leading lady in his movie "The Woman Next Door."

He also had two daughters from his marriage with Madeleine Morgenstern.

His first feature film, "The 400 Blows," in 1960, about a sensitive teen-ager "bounced between callous parents and reform schools, brought him international renown.

Truffaut later established the concept of the director as the "auteur," or author, of his work, and carved out a reputation charming moviegoers with portrayals of the everyday lives and loves of common people.

His last film, a comedy, was "Confidentially Yours," released last January.

Fraternity hit by morning fire

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — A pre-dawn blaze roared through an Indiana University fraternity house Sunday, killing one person and injuring 34 others during homecoming weekend, and authorities suspect the fire was deliberately set.

Israel D. Edelman, 19, a student at the school's campus at Richmond, Ind., and a guest at the Zeta Beta Tau fraternity house, was pronounced dead on arrival at Bloomington Hospital. Deputy Monroe County Coroner Dr. Tony Pizzo said Edelman died of smoke inhalation.

Monroe County Prosecutor Ron Walukauskas said he was investigating Edelman's death as a murder.

"It appears to have been a set fire," Walukauskas said.

Some type of flammable liquid had been poured in the living room of the house, Indiana State Fire Marshal James Skaggs said.

Canada UAW strike continues

TORONTO (AP) — The chief Canadian negotiators for the United Auto Workers union and General Motors Corp. met informally Sunday but reported progress in contract talks aimed at ending a strike that has forced the layoffs of more than 13,000 U.S. autoworkers.

Robert White, the UAW's director for Canada, said Sunday that he was looking for "common ground" in talks with Roy Andrew, negotiator for General Motors Canada Ltd., in end a strike by 36,000 workers that began Wednesday.

But White said there were no signs of progress Sunday in what he described as "a couple of yelling sessions" with Andrew.

"Each meeting we have now is getting more critical," said Byron Blundell, a GM spokesman. "They're going to have to get something going."

No main-table bargaining session was scheduled, and there was no indication of a new offer from GM.

Jackson plays host to 'SNL'

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson sang and danced as host of NBC-TV's "Saturday Night Live," but while he called his performance "political satire, perhaps at its best," not everyone saw it that way.

Jackson said he tried to "walk this delicate balance between message and celebration" as he did impressions of President Reagan and others, portrayed a game show host and chastised NPR for failing to give a minority worker's son the job.

The former Democratic presidential candidate's raucous laughter when he confessed to having a "silent passion" for United Nations Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, one of the staunchest conservatives in the Reagan administration.

But not everyone was amused.

NBC spokesman Alan Baker said the network received about 300 calls from viewers in New York, many complaining that the show was in bad taste and lacking humor. Baker said the show usually generates about 75 to 100 calls.

About 40 members of the Jewish Defense League and Jews Against Jackson demonstrated outside NBC's headquarters, calling Jackson "a racist and an anti-Semite."

Greens gain force in Finland

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Finland went into two-day local elections Sunday with polls indicating gains for the anti-establishment Greens and major losses for the country's bickering Communists.

A poll published Saturday showed 3.8 percent voter support for the Greens, a loose confederation of anti-party environmentalist groups that elected two members of Parliament in last year's national elections.

The Greens did not even exist when the last municipal vote was held, in 1980.

But for the Communists, wracked by internal strife between the moderate majority and a Moscow-backed ideological minority, the polls predict the poorest showing since the party was legalized in 1945.

More than 65,000 candidates have been put up by 10 parties for 12,000 seats in 445 municipal councils, responsible for local government in Finland.

While the elections have a predominantly local flavor, they serve as an indicator of how the parties have fared since the 1983 parliamentary elections. The next parliament will be chosen in January 1987.

The Sunday and Monday voting also could have general political repercussions if large enough shifts occur in constituencies.

Three Utah deer hunters die

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Three Utah deer hunters have died, two from heart attacks, as the state's big game hunting season got under way, authorities said.

One man suffered a heart attack Saturday east of Junction in Piute County. He was pronounced dead at Garfield Memorial Hospital in Panguitch.

The other cardiac victim died after suffering an attack in Strawberry Valley, the Wasatch County Sheriff's Department said.

A 16-year-old boy became ill for an unspecified reason and died in his sleeping bag Saturday about 15 miles north of Loa, the Sevier County Sheriff's Department said.

The identities of the victims were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

mid 40s Tuesday. Lows tonight 15 to 25. Winds light.

Synopsis:

Skies varied from partly cloudy in northern Idaho to mostly cloudy in the south Sunday. Light snow showers fell over the southeastern area Sunday morning, but by mid afternoon were limited to the mountains.

Both Burley and Malta reported a trace of precipitation in the form of light snow showers during the morning. Afternoon winds were in the 10 to 10 mph range over the state.

The harvest conditions in southern Idaho should improve somewhat with mostly dry conditions through Tuesday. There is a chance of a shower in the southeast by Wednesday. Precipitation amounts should average between one and two-tenths of an inch with slightly higher amounts in the east. Conditions for field work will be good through Thursday in the southwest but hampered somewhat in the southeast on Wednesday.

Soil temperatures for the potato harvest are expected to remain at or below 45 degrees through Tuesday.

The extended forecast Wednesday through Friday in southern Idaho is for a chance of showers in the east on Wednesday and over the entire area on Friday. Highs upper 40s and 50s. Lows 20s and 30s. The highest Idaho recorded temperature Sunday was 58 in Hagerman while Deadwood was 7 degrees reading was the lowest.

Lebanon and on arms control, said. "A president has to lead his government or it won't be done."

"The president's failure to master the central elements of arms control has cost us dearly," he said at another point.

In response to the opening question of the second debate, Mondale referred to recent disclosures of a CIA manual as "this recent embarrassment in Nicaragua, where we are being instructed to hire assassins." Reagan denounced the document, produced by the Central Intelligence Agency, and said if an investigation turns up the culprit, "We will deal with that situation and they will be removed."

Reagan said the CIA manual did not amount to what a questioner called "state supported terrorism."

Reagan said the manual was written by a CIA contract employee in the field, edited by the CIA chief in Nicaragua, and edited again by CIA officials in Washington. But that an original, unedited copy was nonetheless released.

Columist Georgie Anne Geyer immediately asked about the CIA, having a ranking agent in Nicaragua. The president then corrected himself and said the ranking official was not in Nicaragua.

Mondale said such tactics as those discussed in the CIA manual served to "strengthen our opponents" in Central America.

Mondale, aggressive from the beginning, charged in the opening moments that the president had once said that missiles could be recalled after they were launched.

"I never over miscalculated such a thing," Reagan shot back. He said he had said that submarines carrying missiles and airplanes carrying missiles could be recalled.

The reference apparently was to a May 13, 1982, news conference when Reagan, responding to a question about arms control, said that missiles pose a threat of miscalculation because "once that button is pushed, there is no defense; there is no recall. And it's a matter of minutes, and the missiles reach the other country."

The president continued: "Those that are carried in bombers, those that are carried in ships of one kind or another, or submarines, you are dealing there with a conventional type of weapon or instrument, and those instruments can be intercepted. They can be recalled if there has been a miscalculation. And so they don't have the same, I think, psychological effect that the presence of those other ones that, once launched, that it's preventing, or stopping them."

At one point, Reagan said he would not try to respond "to these repetitions of the falsehoods that have been stated here." He ridiculed a Mondale campaign commercial depicting the aircraft carrier Nimitz, saying if it was up to Mondale, the carrier would never have been built.

"He has a record of weakness with regard to our national defense that is second to none," Reagan said.

Mondale said Reagan's definition of a strong defense was to throw money at the Pentagon. He said Reagan's record on arms control was not helping the nation.

Mondale criticized Reagan as the only recent American president who has not achieved an arms accord with the Soviet Union.

He said Reagan's so-called Star Wars anti-satellite proposal "would make us all less secure" and leave it to a computer to decide whether a nuclear missile would be fired. He predicted the Soviet Union would try to match whatever system the United States developed, and said, "Why don't we stop this madness now and draw a line and keep the heavens free from war?"

But Reagan said he wanted a strong deterrent force to the Russians, and that is behind his proposal for "Star Wars."

He said "why not" offer to share such technology with the Soviet Union. Reagan said if such a defense were developed, the United States could say to Moscow, "here's what we can do, we'll even give it to you" and then propose arms talks to get rid of nuclear weapons.

The president said that while the United States must plan and try to assure national survival in the event of nuclear war, the fact is that nuclear war cannot be won and must never be fought."

Asked about his past harshly worded denunciations of the Soviet Union, Reagan said, "I retract nothing."

But he said the United States does not seek military superiority. "We simply are going to provide a deterrent," he said.

Mondale, who smiled at Reagan's remarks, agreed the Russians were a dangerous adversary, but said the president had produced no progress on arms control. "There will be no unilateral disarmament" under a Mondale administration, he said.

The first question was about the CIA manual that appears to back assassination of political opponents in El Salvador, but Mondale quickly turned in his answer to the overall question of whether Reagan was in command.

"A President can't know everything but a president has to know those things that are essential to his leadership," he said.

As for the mining of the harbors in Nicaragua, he noted that Reagan had said he didn't know about it.

"I don't know which is worse, not knowing or not stopping" it.

Mondale also accused the Reagan administration of "coying up to the Argentine dictators" when they were in power, and cited statements that the administration is seen as helping the apartheid regime in South Africa. "That hurts this nation," he said. "We need to stand for human rights... This administration time, and time again has lost its way in this field."

But Reagan said his record on human rights "can't be assailed."

"Human rights are not advanced when at the same time you then stand back and say, 'Oops, I didn't know the gun was loaded, and then you have another totalitarian state on your hands.'"

"The Invasion of Afghanistan didn't take place on our watch," nor the revolution in Iran, Reagan said.

McNees was out of town for the weekend and did not participate in the decision.

The board's last offer places all but $40,000 of the $596,000 allocated to the district under House Bill 475 into teacher salaries. Pay said.

Pay said the district pays for one of the best insurance coverage plans in the state. The district has offered $100,000 "on deposit" in the district health insurance account to teachers in a one-time payout.

The total cost of the board's $13,300 base pay offer and the lump sum payment from the $100,000 deposit in the district health insurance plan would be more than the $596,000 allocated to the district under House Bill 475.

Pay said the district would not place the insurance money into the salary pool because the board would not have control from which to pay that portion of the increase next year.

Champlin says the earlier meetings with the mediator were not particularly productive, but "I'm hoping there can be some give on both sides."

School buildings will be locked all day, with only principals allowed in the buildings, Champlin said. Teachers will not be paid for days they are locked out, but will be paid for make-up days in the spring term.

Debate lessened effect of Reagan's coattails for GOP

By TOM RAUM
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Democratic campaign analysts are claiming that President Reagan's last momentum between the two presidential debates has all but dashed Republican hopes of sweeping scores of GOP candidates into House seats on the president's coattails.

While Republican strategists dispute any lessening of Reagan's popularity, they generally agree that a GOP landslide in the Democrat-run House now seems unlikely. Even if Reagan surges ahead in the polls, it is probably too late in the campaign to be translated into a tide of extra votes for It's difficult to put a number on how big our gains will be.

—Rep. Guy Vander Jagt

Republican congressional candidates, Democratic campaign officials contend. Democrats had feared that Reagan would be so far ahead of Democratic nominee Walter F. Mondale in the polls by early October that he would turn his attention to helping GOP congressional candidates. But the first televised presidential debate on Oct. 7, he Reagan was widely regarded as giving a halting performance, changed the dynamics not only of the presidential contest but of the congressional campaigns as well. "We thought by this time they (Reagan and Vice President George Bush) would be out campaigning for their House candidates. Obviously, they are not," said Martin Franks, executive director of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. "I am skeptical that even if Ronald Reagan has a home run Sunday night (in the second debate), that they would be able to capitalize on it" to help GOP House candidates, Franks said last week.

Republicans say they still hope to win enough seats in the election to regain effective, if not actual, control of the House. Democrats now dominate the chamber, 266-167 with two vacancies. "Our candidates are running strong. We see a realligning process," said Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee.

He said the fact that almost as many voters now identify themselves as Republicans as Democrats speaks well for the likelihood of significant GOP gains in the House.

However, he added, "It's difficult to put a number on how big our gains will be. It is more difficult to predict, in 1984, than ever before."

Vander Jagt and other GOP strategists are playing down prospects of a GOP landslide, although he noted "a gain of 25 seats would give us effective control."

However, Vander Jagt added, "I don't rule out the possibility that we could slide back some." Democrats have been the majority party in the House for the past 30 years. However, large gains made by Republicans in the 1980 election that brought Reagan to power set up a coalition in the House between Republicans and about 50 conservative Democrats. That coalition propelled Reagan's economic programs through the House and frustrated the Democratic leadership.

Marines re-enact military invasion

RED BEACH, Philippines (AP) — The taped sound of machinegun fire echoed through the coconut trees as hundreds of U.S. and Filipino marines stormed ashore Sunday in a re-enactment of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Leyte island invasion 40 years ago.

President Ferdinand E. Marcos joined diplomats from the United States, Japan, Australia and more than a dozen other countries in witnessing the recreation of a decisive World War II Allied invasion that led to Philippine liberation and tolled the end of Japan's military empire in the Pacific.

About 5,000 Leyte inhabitants were kept 300 feet away from the beach by lines of policemen and school cadets, but they broke through the cordon and ran cheering to Red Beach as a U.S. Air Force colonel playing MacArthur's role waded ashore with his troops. U.S. fighter jets roared overhead.

Red Beach, 350 miles southeast of Manila, was also the Allied code name for Palo, a fishing town in the central Philippine island of Leyte where MacArthur, commanding 174,000 men and an armada of 700 ships, landed on Oct. 20, 1944, to redeem his "I shall return" promise to Filipinos. MacArthur died in 1951. When the exercise — dubbed Homecoming — ended, Leyte Gov. Benjamin Romualdez, Marcos' brother-in-law, shook hands with Billy J. Robertson, a crippled veteran from Sherman, Texas, and told him, "Thank you for being here 40 years ago. Thank you for being here today."

Robertson, 63, whose legs were nearly blown off when a Japanese plane bombed an ammunition depot near him, was speechless.

The re-enactment was set back 24 hours because the arrival of Marcos, the main guest, was delayed by what the government said on Sunday was an "annual checkup." A spokesman said Marcos passed it successfully.

Marcos, 67, arrived nearly an hour late for the ceremony. He was breathing hard after reviewing the honor guard on his arrival and a news photographer overheard his wife, Imelda, asking him, "Are you feeling well?"

A former war veteran himself who fought on the main island of Luzon, Marcos wore his purple overseas cap for the occasion. Pinned to the cap were some of the decorations he won in the war as the Philippines' most decorated soldier.

The president immediately flew back to Manila after the ceremonies and did not attend a seaside luncheon for the veterans where Mrs. Marcos sang wartime love songs.

Atomic physicist, 82, dies

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Physicist Paul A.M. Dirac, winner of the Nobel Prize in 1933 for his discoveries in atomic theory, died at his home here after a long illness. He was 82.

Dirac, who joined the physics faculty at Florida State University in 1971, continued teaching until shortly before his death Saturday, said university spokeswoman Marcee Willis.

He won the Nobel Prize in physics along with Erwin Schrodinger, an Austrian scientist, for research in atomic physics. Working separately, the two pioneered quantum mechanics, a mathematical system for describing the behavior of molecules, atoms, sub-atomic particles and other aspects of physics.

Dirac's work established the base from which television, computers, space travel and other high technology have emerged.

A native of Bristol, England, Dirac received degrees from Bristol and Cambridge universities. In 1930, he became a fellow of the Royal Society. He taught at Cambridge until reaching the mandatory retirement age of 67. He frequently traveled to the United States as a visiting lecturer and to serve as a member of Princeton University's Institute for Advanced Study.

Dirac was a member of the Pontifical Academy of Science and said he agreed with Pope John Paul II that science and religion aren't contradictory. "They are both seekers after truth," he said in a 1983 interview.

Debates may make difference in race

Speculation can end on the effect of the first presidential debate: enough post-Oct. 7 polls are in to give a pretty clear answer — just in time for the final debate. By agreement of just about everyone except Nancy Reagan, Walter Mondale was the winner of the candidates' first encounter; and the polls register some gains for him. In The Washington Post-ABC News poll, for example, Mr. Mondale rose from a pre-debate 37 percent to a post-debate 42 percent — a statistically significant difference. Also, his post-debate support was notably firmer. The debate enabled Mr. Mondale to increase the size of and firm up his Democratic base. It improved the morale, and hence probably increased the turnout, of core Democratic voters.

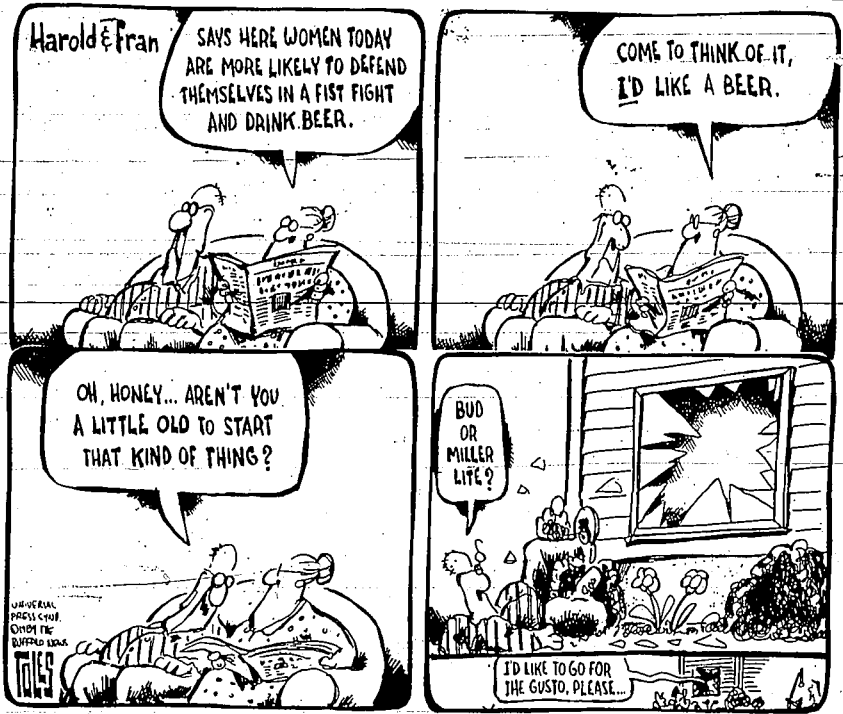

But it did not result in massive erosion of the Reagan majority. From the end of August until Oct. 7, Mr. Reagan's percentage — the single most important result in any poll when you have an incumbent running — oscillated between 55 percent and 60 percent in most public polls. In most public polls taken after the debate, the Reagan percentage seems to be oscillating in the 53-58 percent range. The sensible conclusion is that Mr. Reagan's support is down, a little. That conclusion is confirmed by results in many statewide polls since the debate.

So Mr. Reagan is not down to the danger zone — yet. A candidate can win 53 percent of the popular vote and win more than 400 electoral votes, as Franklin Roosevelt did in 1944. Mr. Reagan still has the inherent advantages that accrue to an incumbent president credited with strong leadership running at a time of peace and prosperity.

But a couple of things make the race still tantalizing. One is this Sunday's debate. The other is the fact that, aside from his 60 percent-plus showings in a dozen or so states, Mr. Reagan is running pretty evenly around the country. This is good news for him as long as he maintains his current levels of support: in only a few states have his poll showings dipped below 50 percent. But those include the two biggest states, California and New York, and his showings in several large electoral-vote states are only a few points higher. But consider what happens if the president falls from the 53-58 percent range to, say, the 49-54 percent range, which is where he is in polls against Mr. Mondale from February through June. At that point, as many as 200 hitherto safe electoral votes are at risk (with 270 needed to win).

All this speculation may be academic. But it, or something very much like it, is very much on the minds of both campaigns' strategists as they ponder the debate and the two weeks and two days that follow.

—The Washington Post

Hansen wasn't helped by the debate

Embattled Republican Congressman George Hansen's a tough target to hit. Democratic challenger Richard Stallings found that out Thursday night, as the two 2nd Congressional District candidates met in a debate televised debate.

Try as he might, Stallings couldn't pin Hansen down on key issues. Instead, the Republican incumbent ignored most of the questions and hammered away repeatedly on his major theme: That if Idahoans elect Stallings to Congress, it will mean a vote for all Democratic Party programs. Stallings and Hansen have run against each other twice, but seldom appear together. This summer, the candidates appeared before a meeting of Boise realtors, and that event proved to be a preview of what happened Thursday night.

Stallings appeared calm and almost scholarly. Hansen was much more animated as he trotted out familiar themes, attacking federal agencies and big government, with fewer specifics. It wasn't a friendly debate. The Stallings-Hansen race is considered the state's closest, the only real chance Democrats have to capture a major office this year.

The exchanges in Thursday night's debate were sharp and personal. At one point, moderator Marc Johnson had to stop proceedings, as Hansen interrupted Stallings to blurt out a rejoinder to a Stallings statement.

At another time, Hansen hinted that Stallings was involved in undisclosed irregularities in the 1976 Stan Kress campaign against him. "Nobody tried to prosecute you," said Hansen. "You could have been right where I am, friend."

As might be expected from a politician who has been involved in a campaign every election except one since 1962, Hansen appeared a little quicker with his responses. A couple of times Stallings appeared a mite rattled at Hansen's non-response to questions and abrupt changes in direction.

Hansen's energetic, sometimes impassioned statements were in sharp contrast to Stallings' calmer, slower statements. Hansen may have lost points in one area. He was grilled repeatedly, both by Stallings and the three journalists present, about a Glens Ferry bank account reportedly used by Hansen to write more than $800,000 in checks in a single month.

"It's your bank accounts that are important, not mine," Hansen said to the audience. He claimed that Stallings will be forced to support the Democrats' tax programs, which could boost personal taxes $17 per month. "And somebody's bank accounts will be hurting."

But Stallings said several times, "I still haven't heard an answer" about the Glens Ferry bank account. And the journalists repeated their questions about the money several times, in different forms, with no success.

Stallings claimed his poll shows 90 percent of the people in the district want more information about Hansen's financial dealings. Even a blunt, direct question on the subject drew no direct answer from Hansen.

But Hansen kept Stallings off balance much of the debate, turning almost every question posed to him into links between Stallings and the national Democratic Party programs.

"I'm a Democrat, and I am proud to be a Democrat," Stallings said. "But I disagree with some of the national platform. Every candidate has the right, the responsibility to let his constituents know what parts he disagrees with."

The candidates spent considerable time debating how Hansen uses his time. Stallings claimed Hansen's wasted much valuable time in Congress by going off to fight battles which have little to do with Idaho's problems.

That brought a sharp response from Hansen, who claimed he wouldn't want Stallings for a neighbor if his house were afire, because Stallings wouldn't get involved.

As he has done earlier in the campaign, Stallings trotted out reports showing Hansen has had a dismal attendance and voting record in Congress. "I'm there when it counts," said Hansen. "And Hansen laid heavy stress on his populist appeal, claiming he's a candidate "for the people."

"I'm a candidate of the people. If it doesn't work, at least I'm going down with my boots on," he said.

Who won? Most polls indicate Hansen is trailing, so he had the most ground to gain with a statewide, face-to-face exposure. But he didn't come up with answers to most of the questions.

Stallings at least made his position clear on several issues. It still isn't clear how Hansen stands on those issues. That won't hurt him with the famous "Hansen Hard Corps," but may not help with the undecided voters.

Letter/ Hansen-Stallings debate an 'eye-opener' for reader

They're out to get George

The Hansen/Stallings debate was an eye-opener and question raiser for many of us. It should awaken us to the liberal political leaning of the press and the panel of their members who questioned the debaters, and the sponsor, the League of Women Voters.

1. Stallings has received approximately $200,000 in donations from some of the most liberal organizations and persons in America. He claims that he is not loyal to the goals of these gift givers, and he took the donations totally free from ties. Does he expect logical thinking people to believe such large sums of money have been given by stupid people who throw money away without knowledge of the allegiance of the recipient?

2. Stallings has continually portrayed himself as a man of character, and Congressman Hansen as an enemy of all righteousness. He has stated his intent to leave Hansen's problems alone and stick strictly to the issues. Most of his campaign efforts, including the debate, however, concentrate on smearing Hansen. How does one come to me with the understanding that if elected he, too, would be a champion of conservative action, since he claims very little difference in philosophy with the Congressman. How can he be honest and affiliate with a national party with views, policies, and goals so diametrically opposed to his own? Is he willing to be all things to all people?

3. Does Mr. Stallings, even though he is a college history professor, fail to recognize that the Democrats, as the front runners, in 50 years have taken this nation from a beacon for the world, a people of self-reliance, and free enterprise, to a bankrupt bureaucratic jungle called socialism? Is he so naive as to know that this type of system has failure for both itself and its people built in?

4. Stallings spoke with disdain for the failure of Congressman Hansen to be more effective in authoring and passing legislation.

He measures office effectiveness by this method. I believe the ailments of America have come from the avalanche of legislation, bureaucratic control, and taxing, during the past 50 years. Heaven knows the solution to our plight is not more legislation, bureaucrats, and taxes, but to dismantle the beast we now have. Congressman Hansen is a champion dismantler.

No, Mr. Stallings, the Democrats cannot take all of the credit for nearly destroying constitutional government, and bankrupting America, they have had lots of help from the Republicans who wanted to be in on the action. I believe with all of my heart that George Hansen has been a maverick, a patriot, a statesman, who loved our country more than personal wealth, and more than personal acceptance. None of us are free from the possible harassment he has been submitted to when guns are aimed our way, and not for personal dishonesty. Should your supporters, and international planners be successful in defeating Congressman Hansen, it will pressure the remaining few conservative patriots in Congress to immediately submit or face similar punishment. Keep in mind that you cannot serve two masters.

Next four years will decide the Supreme Court's makeup

WASHINGTON — Little by little attention seems to be focusing on the most important issue in the presidential campaign. It's not the deficit; it's not a budget for defense; it's not a resumption of arms control talks with the Soviet Union.

It's the power to appoint federal judges over the next four years.

I have harped on this theme before, and I will keep harping. The Mondale campaign has come to the prospect of what a Reagan victory would mean: "Do you want Jerry Falwell to name the next members of the U.S. Supreme Court?"

It's a dumb question? The Reagan camp might as stupidly insinuate that Jane Fonda would name Mondale's choices, but it gets to the heart of the matter.

The point quite simply is that Reagan would nominate jurists of one cast of mind. Mondale would nominate jurists of precisely the opposite cast of mind. Because five members of the Supreme Court are more than 75 years of age, we can expect vacancies to develop between 1985 and 1989. Who will make the nominations? The meaning of the Constitution (and of key statutes as well) will depend upon the answer to that question. Reagan's appointees, or Mondale's, will serve until well into the next century. The court is now closely divided in terms of judicial philosophy. Two or three consistent conservatives, in the pattern of William Rehnquist and Sandra Day O'Connor, would like the law in one direction. Two or three consistent liberals, in the pattern of William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, would take the law in another direction. Where do we want the law to go? Think for a moment about the 1983-84 term.

It saw 26 cases decided by votes of 5-4. In six of these cases, no pattern could be perceived. O'Connor jumped her traces and joined the liberals in a case involving the Miranda rule; Blackmun uncharacteristically joined the conservatives in a case involving the right of freedom to search for evidence of arson. The views of the justices are not cast in stone.

But in the other 20 cases the conservative and liberal blocs could be plainly seen. The six. Not all the cases, of course, were of equal importance; no great divisions of judicial philosophy can be read into an opinion. Construing the oil depletion allowance. Yet most of the 5-4 decisions were significant.

For example, the conservatives came together in the case of the Pawtucket creche; the opinion by Chief Justice Burger moved the court one more step away from the supposed "wall of separation" of church and state. They came together in the case of the Pennhurst Hospital in Pennsylvania; the opinion by Justice Powell curbed the power of federal courts over state officials.

The conservative bloc shaped the Miranda Rule. Over a passionate dissent from the liberal wing, the conservatives were able to impose Burger's reading of the Fourth Amendment on the rights of prison inmates. In a statutory case, the conservatives upheld the power of the president to restrict travel to Cuba. In each of these cases one vote made all the difference.

It is not only the nomination of Supreme Court justices that matters; the naming of federal circuit and district court judges is also of great importance. Jimmy Carter was lucky in this regard. Under one bill alone, he was able to nominate 117 district and 35 circuit judges. By the time he left office, Carter had put on the bench almost half of all active circuit judges. Nine of every 10 of his appointees were liberal Democrats. The next president, either Reagan or Mondale, will have an opportunity to nominate another 24 circuit judges. This is how the law is shaped.

The next few years will see the federal courts involved in issues of grave concern — equal pay for equal jobs, the accommodation of religion in public life, a continuing definition of the rights of an accused to due process of law, the power of the states to manage their own interests without interference from federal courts. The judges of Walter Mondale predictably would rule one way, the judges of Ronald Reagan a different way. On Nov. 6, as the saying goes, you pay your money and you take your choice.

Shultz not impressed by new Soviet position

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Sunday that the Soviet Union may be changing its position on arms control talks on deployment of intermediate-range missiles in Europe, but the new position probably would be unacceptable.

Shultz, interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press," also said that Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger "very well may" have recommended against keeping U.S. peacekeeping troops in Lebanon in the weeks before a truck-bombing demolished a Marine headquarters building in Beirut on Oct. 23, 1983 and killed 241 servicemen.

A Soviet official was quoted Friday as suggesting that Moscow might no longer insist that the United States withdraw all of the new cruise and Pershing 2 missiles it has deployed in Britain, Italy and West Germany since last December as a condition for resuming negotiations aimed at limiting such missiles.

In the past, Moscow usually insisted that the United States would have to dismantle all of the missiles before it would agree to resume negotiations.

Shultz said the official may have been suggesting "a little different stance," and that a moratorium on deployment of the American missiles may be sufficient to get arms talks under way again.

But, he added, "to think in terms of a moratorium of some sort at the present, very unequal level would not be to our advantage."

"To suggest it would be their advantage," he said. "But to accept it would not be to ours."

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization deployed the new American missiles in response to a continued buildup of Soviet intermediate-range missiles, known as SS-20s, targeted on Western Europe.

Moscow broke off arms talks in Geneva, aimed at limiting missiles of both sides, as the NATO deployment was getting under way.

Shultz also acknowledged that differences remain between Moscow and Washington over a Soviet proposal to hold talks in Vienna over limiting arms in outer space, including anti-satellite weapons. He said the United States has accepted "without any pre-condition" a Soviet proposal for such talks last September and still will be willing to meet on the subject.

On Lebanon, Shultz said "Secretary Weinberger had been reluctant from the beginning about the Marine presence in Lebanon" and "very well may" have pressed for their removal before the bombing attack.

"Our mission in Lebanon was a mission of peace, a mission to help bring stability to that troubled part of the world; and that's what we were there for," he said.

On another topic, Shultz said he could not confirm a report that more American troops died in the invasion of Grenada last October than the 19 officially listed by the Pentagon.

The Philadelphia Inquirer reported in Sunday editions that a forthcoming book by Richard Gabriel and Paul Savage, former intelligence officers, will charge that the Pentagon never reported the deaths of six members of a commando unit sent in to seize control of an airport runway in Grenada before the main assault began.

Asked if he knew of any American deaths before the invasion on Oct. 25, 1983, Shultz said, "No... according to the Pentagon, there weren't... I have to rely on the Pentagon report, which was quite unequivocal."

And a Defense Department spokesman, Marine Maj. James Pisciotano, told The Associated Press. "We challenge anyone to say there were more than 19 killed. Anything else is completely false."

Meanwhile, President Reagan's national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, said that any one found responsible for producing a CIA-financed manual advocating killings and kidnappings "ought to be fired."

Reagan has ordered investigations into production of the manual, which was distributed to guerrillas fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

McFarlane, appearing on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley," said the probe of the manual should be completed "surely within a week or so."

"The president has made clear if there were U.S. officials involved they ought to be fired," McFarlane said.

But he pointed out that preliminary evidence indicates that a low-ranking CIA contract employee was responsible for the publication.

David Aaron, top foreign affairs adviser to Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale, said on "Meet the Press," meantime, that he didn't know whether President Reagan knew about the CIA manual or recent agency actions in El Salvador.

But Aaron declared, "He's supposed to be told." Mondale has called for the resignation of CIA Director William Casey because of revelations about the document.

Rain, tornadoes hit hard in South

By The Associated Press

Fast-moving thunderstorms erupted Sunday over the lower Mississippi Valley, spinning off tornadoes and dumping rain on parts of Texas and Louisiana that already were saturated from waves of storms the day before.

Tornadoes touched down Sunday in eastern Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi—and other possible twisters were detected on radar, the National Weather Service said.

A severe thunderstorm watch also was posted for parts of southeastern Texas and much of southwestern Louisiana, accompanied by flash flood watches in areas where small streams and streets had filled with rushing water Saturday. Flash flood watches also extended into southwestern Mississippi.

One man was killed in a tornado late Saturday—the nation's 11th storm-related death in a week—and twisters and high winds caused widely scattered damage to homes and other buildings as bands of thunderstorms churned from central Texas as far east as Tennessee.

Rain was locally heavy, causing some street and highway flooding, with Vidalia, La., getting 10 inches in 24 hours from Saturday into Sunday. Woodville, Texas, got 7 inches between 7 a.m. and noon. More than 5 inches of rain fell during the night near Glenora and Bayou Boueff, La. Jackson, Miss., got more than 3 inches of rain Sunday morning. Early Sunday, and Monday, Miss., had 2.3 inches in the same period.

Lesser amounts of rain Sunday in Oklahoma, but the precipitation combined with rain from Friday and Saturday to close numerous roads and highways for part of the day, the Oklahoma Highway Patrol reported.

The storm moved to the east and northeast at 20 to 40 mph, and one storm west of Austin, Texas, sped over the ground at 50 mph and generated winds in excess of 80 mph.

A tornado touched down about 10 miles east of Lufkin, Texas, on Sunday morning, but Sandy Raines, a dispatcher with the Angelina County sheriff's office, said authorities received no reports of injuries or damage. Several roads were closed as heavy rain blocked overpasses and poorly drained streets, she said.

Johnson questioned escalation of war

NEW YORK (AP) — It was April of 1967 and President Lyndon B. Johnson had a question about escalating the Vietnam War that many Americans would come to share.

"Where does it all end?" he asked Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam.

Their meeting was outlined in a Pentagon memo shown to the jury last week in Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit against CBS over a documentary that accused the general of deliberately keeping bad news about the war from Johnson.

The documentary, "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception," asserted that Westmoreland deliberately suppressed a truthful estimate of enemy troop strength and misled the president with assurances that America was winning the war.

Again and again, U.S. District Judge Pierre N. Leval has tried to focus the trial, which continues Monday, on the question of whether or not Westmoreland attempted to deceive his military superiors and the president.

"It's not a trial about whether we won or lost in Vietnam," he told lawyers for both sides at one point. "I am not going to allow this trial to be broadened into some kind of historical inquiry," he told them later.

So the trial is taking jurors from battlefield to "back channel" — a term for communicating directly with the White House on high sensitive matters instead of passing the information through the chain of command.

What was the president told?

To help jurors decide, lawyers have shown them once-secrecy cables and have introduced testimony from Johnson administration insiders, including former national security adviser Walt Rostow and former Ambassador Robert W. Komer.

The Pentagon memo offered a view from the top.

It quotes Westmoreland as telling the president in their April 1967 meeting that "it appears that last month we reached the crossover point," killing or capturing more enemy soldiers than were being replaced.

Discussing whether to send more U.S. soldiers to Vietnam, Johnson asked the general: "When we add divisions, can't the enemy add divisions? If so, where does it all end?"

Westmoreland answered that the enemy, with eight divisions in South Vietnam, would be "hard pressed" to field more than another four. But he said the enemy would probably add more troops if the United States did.

Johnson asked: "At what point does the enemy ask for volunteers?"

Westmoreland responded: "That is a good question." He added that if the existing level of 470,000 American troops were not increased, "We would be setting up a meat grinder. We quote a little better than hold our own."

Testimony in the trial keeps taking jurors from military intelligence officials in Saigon to the White House.

Organized rings stage accidents to collect car insurance money

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Driver training classes and instruction manuals on how to cause a traffic accident are being used by organized rings that stage crashes to defraud insurance companies, officials say.

"We've found rings that involve up to 75, 100 people," said Ronald E. Warthen, supervising investigator in the Los Angeles fraud office of the state Department of Insurance.

"They have professional training manuals, driving classes that teach the finer points of staging accidents. They work in shifts with designated territories. They even have quotas to meet."

Victims often don't know until it's too late that they've been involved in a deliberately staged automobile accident, said Rick Dinon, a training manager for 20th Century Insurance Co., who conducts seminars on how to spot such crashes.

"The favorite target of these accident stages is a woman driving alone in a late-model car, or commercial vehicles that are likely to carry good, high-limit insurance," Dinon said.

He said crash staging rings often include crooked doctors, lawyers and chiropractors.

One such ring brought in up to $170,000 a week, Warthen said in a recent interview.

Insurance officials cited cases of two women who pulled out of the same parking lot near Los Angeles International Airport two days apart.

They were involved in almost identical collisions with oncoming cars carrying several people.

The oncoming cars were maneuvered into position so that they were sure to be hit. Weeks later, both women were advised by an attorney that there had been numerous injuries in each case.

Dinon says "crash staggers" will probably tell you the police won't come if there are no injuries.

"Don't buy it," he said. "Call the police yourself."

Further, he advised traffic victims to such data—license numbers, vehicle identification numbers, phone numbers, car registration numbers, year, model, make of car and names, addresses and phone numbers of all passengers, as well as their descriptions.

Thirty percent to 40 percent of all auto accident claims in Southern California are suspected to involve fraud, said Wally Rodgers of the Insurance Crime Prevention Institute in El Monte.

Drive-by shooting kills girl in L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 13-year-old girl was shot to death from a passing car. Five people at a party were injured and a man was critically wounded during an argument in weekend shootings in the city's poverty-stricken south-central section.

Authorities said there was no evidence the three attacks were linked or were part of the gang warfare that has claimed 10 lives in the area since Oct. 12.

and somebody fired shots from it," Gunning said, adding that there have been no arrests.

The dead girl was identified by the coroner's office as Tarshima Reiford.

Her brother, who was not identified, was in critical condition Sunday with a gunshot wound to the face following surgery at Martin Luther King Medical Center, said nursing supervisor Kathleen Jones.

The party shootings occurred early Sunday. About 25 partygoers and possible witnesses were being questioned, but deputies had yet to determine a motive for the attack, how it occurred or how many assailants were involved, said sheriff's Deputy Bruce Broussard.

Three men—ages 24, 25 and 29—were listed in very critical, critical and serious conditions at Daniel Freeman Memorial Hospital: with gunshot wounds, Broussard said.

A 25-year-old woman who was beaten on the head in the attack was in serious condition at Martin Luther King, and a 26-year-old man whose face was cut required treatment at Daniel Freeman, Broussard said.

None of the victims names was immediately released.

About 20 deputies, a canine unit and a helicopter searched for the gunman for more than three hours after the attack was reported at 3:57 a.m., but the effort was unsuccessful.

Union workers strike Mack Truck plants

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Picket lines went up Sunday at four Mack Trucks Inc. plants in Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey as about 9,000 members of the United Auto Workers union went on strike against the nation's No. 2 heavy-duty truck manufacturer.

Cass Stevens, director of the union's Mack Truck department, said after talks broke off that the company and the union "remain far apart on several key issues; most notably job security and economics."

The affected plants are in Hagerstown, Md., Bridgewater, N.J., Macungie, Pa., and Allentown, where failed to produce a master contract to replace the two-year agreement that expired at midnight, and no new talks had been scheduled.

UAW Vice President Bill

plant in Ontario, Canada, was not included in the strike, but might be affected because all the plants coordinate production, he said.

McCullough said the strike was the first authorized union walkout against Mack since 1964. Picketing was orderly Sunday and company managers were able to enter the plants freely, he said.

"It's all very new to everybody," he said. "The major portion of these people, I imagine, have never been on a picket line before."

Q. Among women divorced before they're 30, what proportion never marry again?
A. More than one out of four — 26.7 percent, precisely.

Q. Who was the first black woman to serve as adviser to a president?
A. A Publicly? Mary McLeod Bethune. Curiously she'd be relatively unknown today were it not for the football players who made names for themselves in the pros after coming out of the college she founded — Bethune-Cookman.

POTLINGERS
Q. How long does marijuana stay in the body after smoking?
A. About a month, according to the medics who study such.

BALDNESS
Q. That type of baldness most common among American men is "the haircut with the hole in it."
A. Both the students and the teachers perform better when the principal of the school is a woman. When I quoted the Education Testing Services on that, a kindly client wrote: "quality of the principal is the most important factor in the quality of the school. Women are still discriminated against. To become a principal, a woman has to perform better than a man. The female principals, therefore, are superior as a group to the male principals."

Church deplures guerrilla attacks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas armed with mortars and automatic weapons attacked an electrical installation north of the capital Sunday, killing 12 guerrillas and wounding seven, a military spokesman said.

He said 30 rebels were killed and 30 wounded when soldiers repelled the attack, and that two civilian employees were hurt in the fighting.

In a Sunday homily, a top Roman Catholic Church official deplored renewed violence in this Central American nation a week after President Jose Napoleon Duarte and leftist guerrillas held initial peace talks, and cited new military operations and the deaths of four CIA operatives in an air crash.

The military spokesman, who insisted on anonymity for security reasons, said the guerrillas attacked and partially destroyed a transformer station at Las Delicias, a village 16 miles north of San Salvador, before dawn.

Most of the soldiers killed were guarding the installation. "They (the rebels) opened fire with mortars while the soldiers were sleeping in the barracks," Sgt. Jorge Resueio, a civil guard commander in the area, said.

The installation was part of the state power monopoly.

"What has worried many people this week is the new outbreak of war almost immediately after the historic day at La Palma," auxiliary Archbishop Gregorio Rosa Chavez said in the homily at the Metropolitan Cathedral.

Duarte and four leftist leaders met seven hours Oct. 15 in the northern town of La Palma, in an initial stab at ending the five-year-old civil war that has killed 59,000 people, mostly civilians.

The two sides agreed to appoint a joint commission to study the issues raised at La Palma and explore ways of "humanizing" the war. They scheduled a second meeting for late November.

Almost immediately afterward, hostilities resumed.

"Thousands of soldiers are fighting in Morazan and Usulután (provinces) and the guerrillas are threatening traffic in the interior," Rosa Chavez said. "Friday night, we learned of the tragic deaths of four North American citizens who were flying over our territory on an intelligence mission."

Saying the La Palma talks "opened the door of hope" despite the renewed violence, Rosa Chavez asked that a "peace caravan" be organized for Nov. 21 from San Salvador to San Miguel, the country's third largest city, 81 miles east of the capital.

Sunday, highway traffic was back to normal after being paralyzed since Thursday by guerrilla threats. The rebels said they would "intercept" all vehicles again starting Monday until further notice. A broadcast by Radio Venceremos, the clandestine guerrilla station, said the rebels wanted to give people a day of "respite."

Secrecy and controversy continued surrounding the CIA spy plane crash Friday, in which four Americans were killed.

The Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front, a coalition of the country's five guerrilla groups, said rebel anti-aircraft fire in northeastern Morazan province hit and damaged the plane, which later crashed near the capital.

It claimed over Radio Venceremos that three Salvadoran soldiers accompanying the CIA operatives also had perished in the crash of the twin-engine Merlin aircraft.

But in Washington, State Department spokesman Brian Carlson denied this, saying: "Their claim that they shot it down is not true. The claim that it had three Salvadorans on board is not true. And the claim that it was directing some sort of bombing run is not true."

U.S. intelligence sources in Washington said the plane was equipped with night photography equipment and was tailing an aircraft suspected of carrying arms to rebels when the CIA plane crashed in a rainstorm.

Walesa expresses outrage

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa expressed outrage Sunday over the kidnapping of a popular, pro-Solidarity priest and said the priest's abductors would bear "a terrible responsibility" if they harm one hair on his head.

The Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, 37, of Warsaw has been missing since Friday evening, when he was abducted by unidentified assailants near the city of Torun, about 125 miles northwest of the capital. One kidnapper was wearing a traffic police uniform, the official news agency PAP reported.

Police were searching roads and countryside surrounding the abduction spot, the Rev. Jozef Nowakowski, a Torun priest, who was the first to learn about the kidnapping on Friday, said by telephone.

Nowakowski praised the work of police and said he believed the kidnapping was an act of "banditry." Police "are using every means possible" to solve the case, he told The Associated Press.

Polish television on Sunday broadcast police telephone numbers for people to call with information about Popieluszko's whereabouts.

Solidarity supporters gathered at Masses throughout the country to pray for the release of Popieluszko, who has been the target of frequent attacks by the communist government for his sermons denouncing the ideals of the now-outlawed Solidarity free trade union movement.

Walesa, leader of Solidarity and winner of the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize, cut short a family engagement to attend the weekly mid-morning Sunday Mass in Warsaw normally given by Popieluszko at St. Stanislaw Koska Church. Following the service, he stepped to the pulpit to enthusiastic applause from the more than 2,000 worshippers.

"If priest Jerzy (Popieluszko) loses only one hair from his head, someone will take on himself a terrible responsibility," said Walesa, drawing an ovation.

"We will think over how we should proceed in order to make sure... this kind of thing doesn't happen in our country," he added.

"I ask you not to let yourselves be moved by emotions. We will be pondering here together with other activists, looking for ways to have priest Jerzy back here as soon as possible."

Walesa, accompanied by his wife and four of his seven children, later left by car as hundreds of people chanted his name and that of Solidarity.

Solidarity supporters began a round-the-clock prayer vigil in the church and pledged to stay until the priest was released. On the gate of the church hung a banner reading "Give Us Back Father Popieluszko."

Speaking from the pulpit before the Mass, Seweryn Jaworski, a Warsaw Solidarity leader, said, "The life of Father Popieluszko is in our hands."

"We don't want to accuse anyone, the important thing is to save this great man," Jaworski said.

Popieluszko was abducted by "unknown perpetrators," who stopped his car on the pretense of checking whether the driver had been drinking, PAP said.

Chess match questioned

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Western press reports on the World Chess Championship, including an allegation that challenger Garry Kasparov may be under pressure to lose the match, have caused a stir in the sedate Moscow playing hall and prompted two protests by the head of the world chess body.

Much of the comment centers on an Oct. 13 column in the Times of London which suggests the 21-year-old Kasparov might be "the victim of foul play" in the match against 11thholder Anatoly Karpov, 33. Karpov has a powerful 4-0 lead against Kasparov, but has agreed to six draws in the last six games.

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13; Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance to children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children."

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

- G: General Audiences, all ages admitted.
- PG: Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.
- PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance to children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.
- R: Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
- X: No one under 17 admitted.

All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

China to 'soar' under new economy, says chief

PEKING (AP) — China's new blueprint for invigorating the economy with capitalist incentives and burying Mao Tse-tung's egalitarianism will allow the country to "soar" for the first time since Communist rule began 35 years ago, a party leader was quoted Sunday as saying.

Hu Yaobang, Communist Party general secretary and proge of China's paramount leader Deng Xiaoping, said that only twice this century has the nation "soared" — in 1911, when the emperor was overthrown; and 1949, when the People's Republic was founded.

China will "soar" for a third time in the 1980s, he said, with the eventual aim of quadrupling national output and reunifying Taiwan with the mainland by the end of the century.

The Xinhua news agency said Hu made the comments just before Saturday's proclamation of sweeping reforms to spur competition and raise initiative among China's production enterprises.

The changes include price and wage reforms, decentralization of planning and control, and the "bold" promotion of qualified managers. The reforms build on Deng's 1979 innovations in rural areas under which Mao's communes were dismantled and peasants were allowed to build up wealth by contracting their own plots and taking up sidelines.

Factories will be under general state guidelines, but otherwise will sink or swim on their own.

The proclamation by the third full meeting of the 12th Communist Party Central Committee also tries to allay fears that prices will rise, insisting that any increases will be carefully monitored and people's wages also will go up.

Xinhua quoted Hu Yaobang as saying the reforms "would by no means lower the people's living standards. On the contrary, they would rise steadily as the reform moved forward and production increased."

Deng has called the shift "a kind of revolution," and the 16,000-word document approved by the third plenum of the 12th Central Committee bears the stamp of the 88-year-old pragmatist.

A revolutionary comrade of Mao's in the Red Army, Deng twice argued and lost with him on post-1949 economic policy; in the years before Mao's 1958 "Great Leap Forward" into collective farming, which led to a famine that claimed millions of lives; and in the early 1960s before the "Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution."

Nobel winner predicts win for black majority

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu, preaching in a parish church for the first time since winning the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, declared Sunday that blacks are "on our way to victory, on our way to freedom" in the struggle for equal rights in South Africa.

Tutu said he wanted to tell the ruling white minority: "If you think you can stop us, you are going to be stamped, you are going to be overrun. We don't want you to be overrun. We say: come join us, join the winning side."

Arms outstretched, eyes closed, Tutu faced 300 parishioners — a few in their whites — in the hillside church overlooking rows of brick bungalows in this huge, sprawling, black township near Johannesburg and said of his Nobel award:

"I received this distinction on behalf of our children who are lost, our heroes in jail, those who are banned and in exile... God, we know you will lead us out of oppression and injustice to your promised land."

He spoke, thunder rattled St. Augustine's, Tutu's home church. Many in the congregation, taking it as a good omen, laughed and applauded.

In another part of Soweto, police said a bomb damaged three empty buses, causing $120,000 in damage. It was a continuation of two months of sabotage and rioting by blacks protesting rent increases and what they say are inferior schools. The violence has killed one white and at least 80 blacks.

Underlying the disturbances is black resentment of apartheid, the long-standing system of racial separation that reserves political power, the best jobs and the best homes for whites.

Anti-apartheid riots that broke out in Soweto in 1976 spread across South Africa for months, causing hundreds of deaths.

President Pieter W. Botha's government has had a dejected comment on the prize awarded to Tutu last week while he was in New York City on leave from his post as general secretary of the South African Council of Churches.

The government has pointed to the recent establishment of parliamentary chambers for Asian and mixed-race minorities as evidence that it is seeking gradual reform.

The black majority remains without the vote or other citizenship rights.

Tutu returns to New York on Monday to teach at a seminary through December.

Aquino panel delays report

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The citizens board looking into Benigno Aquino's assassination faces increasing government pressure, opposition impatience and public suspicion as it continues to delay release of its final report.

In the two months since board officials first said the report would be completed, detailed news leaks have revealed the board's apparently unanimous determination to cite a broad military conspiracy in the opposition leader's death at Manila airport on Aug. 21, 1983.

But one of the five board members told The Associated Press last week the board remained split over whether to name as a conspirator Gen. Fabian C. Ver, the armed forces chief of staff who is a relative- and longtime close ally of President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Ver, 64, has denied any involvement and vowed to keep his post even if the military is accused. Three of his sons are high-ranking officers in Marcos' Presidential Security Command. Ver commands 200,000 troops directly under Marcos.

No direct evidence against Marcos, 67, president since 1965, was presented to the board in its 10 months of hearings, although Aquino family members insist he plotted the death of his most prominent rival.

"The nation waits and waits," said Felix Bautista, editor of the Catholic church-based weekly Veritas. "But, lest the board does not know, every delay erodes its credibility and undermines its very integrity."

The board threw a "thank you" party for its staff of lawyers, secretaries and stenographers Sunday.

Rupert trio travels to France for long stay with host families

By SARAH MURPHY
Times-News writer

RUPERT — It was a long way from Idaho moose country to the land of French moussu, but Minidoka High School French teacher Janet Johnson and two of her Minico students, Margaret Henscheid and Robert Christensen, made the transition very nicely.

The trio from Rupert spent the month of July in France participating in the Navel Summer Discovery Program, for which Johnson acted as a chaperone, sharing the "French experience" with host families, each in a different area of a country not quite as big as the state of Texas, says Johnson.

Johnson says she stayed with the family of 18-year-old Philippe Melsner, a student from Freyming-Merlebach, a coal-mining town located in Northern France near the French-German border.

Melsner had spent the previous July with the Johnson family in Rupert, and a life-long bond has been established between the two families, says Johnson.

The Melsner family took Johnson on a fairy-tale tour of France, from the Riviera to the legendary castles of the Loire Valley, ending with a week in "Gay Paris" — and it was just that, she reminisces.

Along with the once-in-a-lifetime experience of visiting the places of her dreams, sharing everyday living with her family was as exciting as visiting castles, adds Johnson.

"They made me feel right at home," she says. "We would stay up until 1 in the morning, as is the custom with the French, only to be awakened by Monsieur Melsner at 6 a.m."

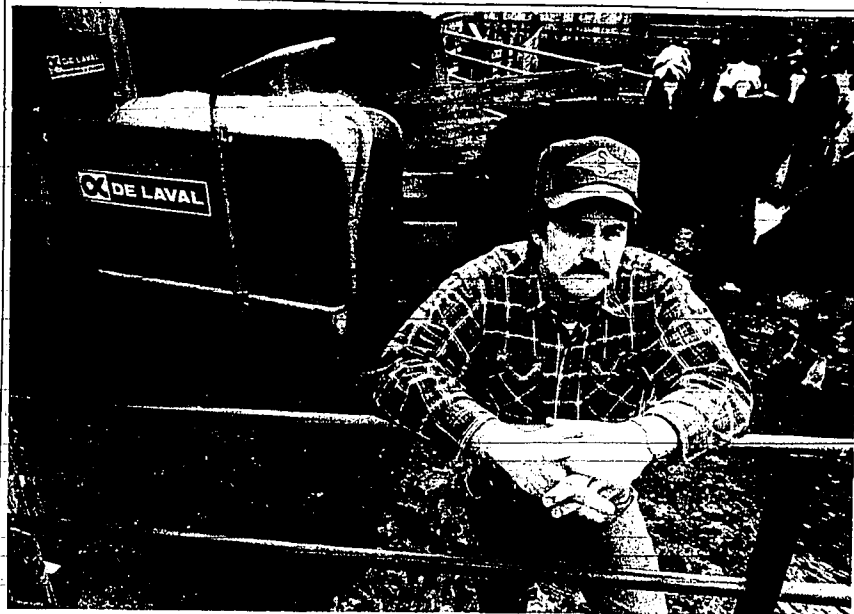

Although she finds it difficult to make a choice when asked what she liked best about France, Johnson speaks only in superlatives when she describes Provence, a region in the south of France.

The most highly prized souvenirs of her trip — besides an empty jar which once contained her favorite delicacy, a chocolate spread which the French serve with their morning croissants (flaky crescent-shaped breakfast pastries) — are the Santons de Provence, clay figures crafted in Provence that are placed in creches or manger scenes at Christmas, says Johnson.

She goes on to say that she brought home another souvenir which resulted in memories not so pleasant — a bottle of holy water from the renowned Lourdes shrine in France.

"My husband, who is a Catholic, was quite excited to receive this gift," says Johnson.

One of Howsden's cows, left, eats grain inside the protective stall which is controlled by computer from inside the barn

Dairyman feeds cows by computer

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — When John Howsden fed grain to his cows, the "hog cows" pushed the other Holsteins away and ate their fill.

"And then, too, a fresh cow with a lot of milk in her, needs more grain than a cow that's about to dry up," Howsden says. "So I was wasting feed."

These problems were solved this month when Howsden leased a computerized feeding and management system that automatically adjusts the ration for each cow each day.

Each cow wears an insulated microphone, hanging from a cord around its neck.

An outside "feeding station," a protective stall wide enough for one cow, is controlled by a computer inside the dairy barn.

When a hungry cow enters the station, its microphone activates the computer which identifies her and sprinkles grain into a small basin until she backs out.

"You can program it for whatever feed you want to give that cow," Howsden explains. "You can give her one pound or 51 pounds."

The computer is programmed to distribute only part of the cow's daily ration each hour.

"So she has to wait an hour to get the next five pounds," the dairyman says. "Once they get used to it, they'll go up and get a pound, a half pound, or just a mouthful, and then they'll go get a drink of water and go sit down."

The object of this system, says Howsden, is to make the cow's stomach work all the time instead of being very full and then empty.

Gradual feeding, he explains, increases her production and buttermilk content.

The cows use the feeder stall about as much throughout the night as they do during the day, Howsden says. Cows accustomed to the system learn to visit the station at nearly exact one hour intervals.

"You could almost time them," he notes. Inside at the small computer keyboard and screen, Howsden reads an update on his herd.

"Let's go down and see who ate what," he says as he begins, calling up each cow's number with its feeding chart and flipping through them like cards. "There's one that ate her total amount."

The computer includes a carryover program, where a percentage of uneaten grain is added to the next day's feed.

"So she's got a little bull in reserve there if she wants to eat it today," Howsden says.

Another program is called Alarm Cows, where those who are not eating are filed and listed at the push of a key.

"It's telling you, OK, better look at these cows," Howsden explains.

Comparing his production charts of each cow to his computer's feeding records, Howsden works to maintain peak milk yields without wasting grain.

In his "challenge system," a cow's ration is increased according to its production, until top yield is attained on the least amount of grain possible.

If electricity goes out, the computer reports how long it was off, and if no cows have visited the feed station for three hours, a warning light flashes.

One feeding station can handle about 30 cows, although Howsden uses it for only 16. The system, which he leased for $6,000, saves 10 to 30 percent in feed, he estimates.

Howsden, 31, has leased the dairy of Orville and Phyllis Mattles for five years. About 15 percent of his herd is registered and, through artificial breeding only, his herd of 60 is gradually increasing.

Even for a small dairy like his, says Howsden, the computer is fast becoming an essential management tool.

"You can treat your cow to an individual need. I feel I've got the edge over the regular dairyman."

"At first, I was kind of leery of it," Howsden continues, noting that he is the first in the Wendell area to invest in such a system. "I'm pretty well sold on it now. I can't wait to get more goodie pie on it."

Eventually, he plans to use the full capacity of his computerized system, adding a memory bank for up to 1,600 cows, more feeding stations and scales to daily record the weight.

Wide open spaces of Idaho impress West German visitor

By SARAH MURPHY
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — International 4-H Youth Exchange (IFYE) representative Angrit Gobbert from Hauslingen, West Germany says she is "fascinated with the wide-open spaces of Idaho."

Gobbert will be ending a six-month stay in the United States shortly after her visit with the Nathan Hager family of Burley.

"Everything is so far away here, so big," observes the 21-year-old Gobbert. "Driving for two hours in Germany is a major trip for us, while here you think of it as just a short hop from Burley to Stanley," she says.

"In Germany, we live so much closer together than you do here — the 120-acre farm I live on at home is considered to be quite large there, while the same amount of space in Idaho is thought of as a "small spread," she says.

Gobbert says she has had the opportunity to observe several different regions of the country during her stay here, since her itinerary included visits to five different families in West Virginia, as well as to a logging community near Bonanza Ferry in northern Idaho and to another "out in the desert" near American Falls.

In the interim between her scheduled visits in West Virginia and Idaho, Gobbert says she also visited Nebraska in the vast midlands — "very much like my home in northern Germany," — and "the spectacular Colorado Rocky Mountains," as she describes the area surrounding Denver where she stopped to visit with friends living there.

Gobbert says she sees little difference between young people living in the eastern or western United States, but says there are some distinct differences between this country and German young people.

"In the U.S., young people try to look and act much older than they are, while in Germany, we are allowed to — keep our childhood longer," she explains.

"I think sometimes, American

Crime Stopper fund running low

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — For every $1 paid in rewards through the Crime Stoppers program, $263 in drugs and stolen merchandise has been recovered.

The fund of money used to reward tipsters, however, needs replenishing.

The county-wide program, which is a joint effort of the Twin Falls police and the crime prevention committee of the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, depends on donations. At present, the fund is depleted, says police Lt. Jim Kistler.

"We are not broke, but way down from when we started," Kistler says. He added that it was policy not to disclose the amount of money in the fund.

Under the program, rewards are given to people who provide information about crimes. Informants may remain anonymous and receive a reward of up to $1,000 when an arrest is made.

From March 1, 1982, until Sept. 10, $4,375 in rewards was paid. 81 arrests made and 73 cases closed. A total of $1,150,984 in stolen goods and drugs were recovered.

A majority of the money involved drugs, Kistler says. This year alone, $30,000 in drugs were confiscated on an investigation sparked by a Crime Stopper's tip, he adds.

"Twin Falls-area businesses have provided the majority of the donations to the two-year-old program, Kistler says. Although Crime Stoppers is county-wide, little support has come from county businesses.

"Crime Stoppers has been just too successful for what we paid out and what we've recovered," Kistler says. "We have no intention of letting it be dropped if it can be helped."

Marion Peterson, the chairman of the crime prevention committee, says a donation to the program is a sound investment in the community.

The Twin Falls program has been so successful that Peterson has been helping other counties to begin their own.

Anyone who would like to make a donation to the program can send their contributions to Crime Stoppers, P.O. Box 1907, Twin Falls 83403-1907 or phone 733-0860. The contribution is tax deductible.

MS victim motivates others

By KRISTIN TUCKER
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Nita Trenkle is a woman who knows about motivation.

One morning last year, she awoke to discover her legs were paralyzed: all feeling and movement was gone below her waist. After lying in her bed crying for eight hours, she decided to try to "tell" her toes to move. She spent the next several hours concentrating on her toes.

Her efforts paid off. That evening, Nita was able to walk the length of the Blue Lakes Mall in Twin Falls, braced up between her children — "just to prove I had done it," she says.

Nita is a victim of multiple sclerosis. Her symptoms began 10 years ago, but went undiagnosed for eight years. At times she stutters, is easily fatigued, clumsy and forgetful.

More than once she has lost sight in her right eye, and has been temporarily paralyzed. But on most days she is vivacious, attractive, and compassionate — as "normal" as anyone.

Just ask her students — the 12 members of the College of Southern Idaho basketball team. She has been working with them on "The Making of a Champion" — a 12-session program on motivation and goal-setting.

Nita became acquainted with "The Making of a Champion" last December, when her MS had her bedridden and depressed. Her husband, CSI basketball coach Fred Trenkle, brought home the program, which had been purchased by the college but never used.

Nita spent two weeks studying the program, and was convinced of its value for the athletes at CSI. She developed an abbreviated version of the 12-session model to present to the basketball team in January, and was met with overwhelming enthusiasm by team members.

"One player told her, 'I can see that if I'm ever to be successful, it is my responsibility.'" Other seemingly motivated team members confessed they had never before set goals and were eager to learn how.

Yankee Fork dredge spruced up

By TERRY RICHARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

YANKEE FORK — The Yankee Fork Gold Dredge Association recently announced the completion of two major projects.

With money received as donations from people touring the dredge, a new roof was installed at a cost of $5,300 while the hull and deck were sand-blasted and marine paint applied for another $8,076.

Jo Anne Busch of Caldwell, who is secretary of the association, notes that a $1 donation is asked of all persons touring the dredge and that, "we're pretty good at collecting.

We've broken no arms or legs, yet, but we do collect our money."

Busch says that a Forest Service engineering structural inspection was performed last year on the structure, which is located eight miles up the Yankee Fork of the Salmon River.

"The engineers made up a booklet mapping out projects that need to be done," she says, adding, "The hull is rusting and needs to be stabilized, and volunteers have done a lot of safety work inside the dredge. But, the roof was first. When it rained outside, it rained inside," she says.

Busch says the association was formed five years ago by former employees and their families to preserve the dredge and develop it as a museum.

With the help of volunteers, tours are offered each year from July 1 through Labor Day. Some 6,000 persons from throughout the U.S. and many foreign countries toured it this year, she says.

Taking a month long leave of absence from her job as legal secretary, Busch says she conducted tours of the dredge this year and found tourists astounded that it was erected in 1940 rather than the 1800s.

She says it ran intermittently until 1953 and that Idaho's J.R. Simplot was the last owner before the U.S. Forest Service took control of it.

Republicans win in survey at CSI

TWIN FALLS — Aside from the Idaho 2nd Congressional District race, Republicans appear to be the candidates of choice for College of Southern Idaho social science students.

In a survey of 215 CSI students,

Republican candidates outpaced their Democratic opponents in every race except the one between Ricks College Professor Richard Stallings and convicted Congressman George Hansen.

The Democratic challenger Stallings outpaced the Republican incumbent and four-count-felon Hansen 54 percent to 32 percent in the polling.

In other races: President Reagan received 22 percent of the student's support to 1 percent for Democratic challenger.

Group calls for parent rights

TWIN FALLS—Members of the Idaho Family Education Assn. (IFEA), meeting in Twin Falls Saturday, called on legislators and school officials to recognize parent rights in the education and religious teachings of their children.

The organization is made up of parents who support home education programs and currently has membership of about 300 families.

Saturday delegates also elected James Salisbury of Twin Falls as their new state president. He succeeds Larry Olsen who stepped down from that position.

Salisbury said about 15 delegates from home education groups around the state attended the Twin Falls meeting.

The resolution adopted by delegates points to parental jurisdiction over education and religious decisions in families. It points out that legislative bodies, school boards and other federal, state and local "law bodies" do not have authority to "wrest children from loving, responsible, sober and conscientious parents to place them in public schools or other institutions against the will of parents."

It also stresses that Idaho laws should be interpreted and adjusted where necessary to conform with the principles of constitutional and inalienable, God-given rights.

Members also elected Cherie Wright of Eden as secretary-treasurer, and evangelist Bob Becker of Pocatello was named vice president.

Pesticide forum scheduled at CSI

TWIN FALLS—A public forum discussing pesticide use in the Magic Valley will be held Wednesday at the College of Southern Idaho.

The forum, one of 17 scheduled around the Pacific Northwest, is sponsored by the Institute of the Rockies and the Institute of the American West.

Forum participants will include:

- Robert Krieger, an environmental toxicologist and member of the University of Idaho School of Veterinary Medicine. He will discuss risk assessment of toxic substances.

• Steve Dewey, a University of Idaho extension weed specialist who will discuss different methods of weed control.

• Linda Scott-Bergin, a citizen activist from Eugene, Ore. who works with the Northwest Coalition for Alternatives to Pesticides. She will discuss the Environmental Protection Agency's chemical registration procedures.

Center board will meet at 7 p.m. in the board room at the hospital.

—The Mindoka County commission will meet at 9 a.m. at the Courthouse.

• Chuck Sherok, an attorney and citizen activist from Couer d'Alene who will discuss a bill package relating to pesticides that may be introduced into the 1985 session of the Idaho Legislature.

The forum will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Room 107 of the Shields Building. For more information, contact Marcia Jones at 622-3371.

Obituaries

Peggy May DeVall
FILER—Peggy May DeVall, 72, of Filer died Saturday evening at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center after a short illness. Funeral services and a complete obituary will be announced by Reynolds Funeral Chapel.

Leon Orlando Calhoun
BELLEVUE—Leon Orlando Calhoun, 83, longtime Blaine County resident, died at his home in Bellevue Sunday of a long illness.

He was born March 14, 1901, in Hagerman and graduated from the Twin Falls High School. He married Carrie Reeve April 18, 1926, in Orofino. During the depression years he worked as a farmer and logger in Washington and Oregon.

He moved to Bellevue in 1937 to work at the Little Wood River Dam. He attended machinist school in Boise and then returned to Bellevue where he was city marshal and superintendent of water works.

He was also a member of the crew that built the original Madison road. He then worked at the Triumph mine until it closed in 1956. He worked at a gold mine in Canyon Dam, Calif., before returning to Bellevue, working in the mines near Fairfield until his retirement. He cared for his semi-invalid wife for 27 years before her death July 5, 1983. He was well known for his skills as a machinist, draftsman, mechanic and gardener.

Surviving are three sons, Wayne Calhoun of Denver, Colo., Loren Calhoun of Burley and Ray Calhoun of Bellevue; three daughters: Lorenna Rose-Goreano of Seattle, Wash.; Janet M. Dabner of Anchorage, Alaska; and Thera Klene of Salt Lake City; two sisters, Loren Faye Bennett of Wapato, Wash., and Lauro Larson of Anacortes, Wash.; 23 grandchildren, and 11 great-grandchildren. In addition to his wife, he was preceded in death by one son and one daughter.

At his request there will be no services held. Wood River Chapel in Holey is in charge of services.

The family suggests memorials be made to the American Cancer Society or Elks Rehabilitation Center. Donations may be offered in care of the Wood River Chapel.

Gladys E. Hoshov
KIMBERLY—Gladys E. Hoshov, 62, of Kimberly, died at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Sunday of a short illness. A full obituary and funeral arrangements will be announced by White Mortuary in Twin Falls.

She may be left with the Rev. M. McNeill.

TWIN FALLS—A private cryptside services for Thelma Jeanina Warner, 67, of Twin Falls, who died Thursday, will be held at 1:30 p.m. today at Sunset Memorial Mausoleum. White Mortuary is in charge of arrangements. The family suggests that memorial contributions be made to the Friends of Hospice in Twin Falls or the Mountain States Tumor Institute in Boise.

France

"He grabbed the bottle and took several swallows before handing it to me," she goes on.

"I was reluctant to drink the unsterilized water, even though a woman at Lourdes told me that I could never become ill from drinking it. I had three caution to the winds, and took a swallow, only to regret it the next morning—my husband and I both suffered from the French version of Montezuma's revenge."

Johnson says she has warm and happy memories of her trip to a country of magnificent vineyards and sunny Mediterranean beaches to share with her students at Mindoka.

"It's a beautiful dream," she says.

"But it's a dream come true."

Henschel and Christensen say they, too, share Johnson's enthusiasm about their experiences with their French families.

Henschel, the daughter of Jim and Carolyn Henschel of Turpe, and a resident of Mindoka, is a teacher at Mindoka Middle School, was the guest of the Michel Faure family who live on a small farm located in the middle of France, about three hours' drive from Paris, she says.

Even though the Faures raise seed grass for a living, they live in La Motte, a real 17th century castle, she says.

Henschel says all the farm-work was done by hand and the farm equipment was not modern by Idaho standards, she says.

"The houses are big and the cars are small," says Henschel.

"The meals are big, too," she says, adding that French cuisine was somewhat different than American food—especially the preparation of the meat dishes.

"They sort of seared it on both sides, leaving the middle somewhat uncooked," she says.

Henschel encountered some difficulty when trying to describe for her French family some of the animals common to the American West.

"The hardest animal to describe was the moose," she says. "The French eat moose, a dessert which is very popular there, but they don't have any words in their language which even comes close to describing our moose," she recalls, laughing.

"They have the same word in their language, 'Elan,' to describe moose, elk and deer," she says. "I'm not sure they ever did figure out what a moose is."

Henschel encountered another obstacle when trying to share her Idaho culture with the Faures.

She says she thought it would be a good idea to take her adopted father a bonafide Idaho belt buckle—an idea which backfired when she discovered the belts the French wear are much too narrow to accommodate a wide western style buckle.

Faure handled the situation with typical Gallic grace, says Henschel. She recalls him hooking the buckle in his shirt pocket and saying with obvious pride, "Now, I am the sheriff!"

Christensen, the son of Chris and Louise Christensen of Rupert and a senior at Mindoka High School this year, spent his month with the Jacques Besson family who live in Uzes, a town about the size of Burley, located in southern France, about 20 kilometers from the city of Nimes.

Although Besson and his wife, both registered nurses, work in the hospital in town, says Christensen, the family lives in the country, with vineyards located only 20 yards from the house.

"Needles and syringes were served at every meal," he adds.

Christensen enjoyed French cooking, for the most part, although he, like Henschel, found the meal to be a little underdone by American standards.

"An incident involving a 'road-kill' rabbit almost turned him into a vegetarian," says Christensen.

"He tells about the time when the family was returning from a family gathering in a nearby town. 'We were driving home in the dark when Mr. Besson stopped the car and picked up a dead rabbit from the road,'" relates Christensen.

"I remember saying to myself 'I hope it is for the dog,' he continues.

"I was astounded when they took the rabbit home and put it in the refrigerator for a week before finally cooking it—fortunately—it was smothered in a sauce," he says, adding he "was surprised to find it was quite good—I even ate some more for supper that night," he adds.

parents try to push their children into adulthood before they are ready for it. In Germany, parents have a tendency to hold their children back," says Gobbert.

"I was the oldest of five children in my family," she adds, smiling wryly. "I had to fight my way out of the house."

Gobbert goes on to explain that dating practices in Germany emphasize group activities rather than "pairing off" at an early age, as she sees American teenagers do.

"We would go out for an evening in groups, rather than couples," she says. "We also liked to maintain our independence as individuals by going Dutch, paying our own way to the movies and buying our own food when we were on an outing."

After visiting several American schools, Gobbert, who is a home economist, also observes differences between the attitudes of American and German young people toward education.

"It is so much different, you can't explain it," she says. "For one thing, I think that German young people take their education more seriously than they do here; we have more respect for our teachers, and our teachers have more rights here also."

"We have lots of homework—we accept it as a matter of course in our schools," says Gobbert. "We attend school for six hours a day Mondays through Fridays; and for five hours on Saturdays—and there are no lunch periods," she adds.

"It is all hard learning, with no electives—and English is mandatory for all German students," continues Gobbert. "Although I hated English in school, just as many students here, I feel it is very important to learn a second language," says Gobbert, who also has a good command of French.

She says she finds the value system of Americans to be somewhat different too.

"Here, many families have two cars, a pickup, a snowmobile and only two drivers," she says. "In our society, we are more conservative—we save our money and get by without so many vehicles."

Gobbert's observations on American food are mostly complimentary, except for our commercial bread, which she says lacks substance. She says she loves Mexican food and potato chips.

She says she has found the American people to be a very friendly people, many of whom know someone in Germany—there are many ties between the American and German people, says Gobbert.

"The Making of a Champion" program includes taped messages and written texts on topics including confidence, motivation, realizing your potential, dedication, overcoming obstacles and goal-setting. Participants listen to each tape five or more times, and follow a "plan of action," a workbook-journal which accompanies the program.

"If you are receptive to the ideas presented, the philosophies affect your attitude, then your actions and your personality," explains Nita.

She describes the program as one which lets participants "taste success as they go along," saying, "success isn't just an overall goal, but something that you are moving closer to every day."

or a foundation," she says. "Now I see that if obstacles are approached the right way, you're such a better person for it."

"At age 17, I could never have persuaded my toes to move like I did that day," she says, recalling the morning last year when her legs were paralyzed. "When I was a teen-ager, if someone had told me I would have MS at age 27, I am not sure I would have wanted to go on."

She describes her teen-age years as "passive," a trait that she often sees among ball players.

"Every ball club has players who just sit back and settle for mediocrity. I would like to see all 12 players realize their potential—and I don't think that it is an impossible thing."

Nita tells her listeners, "When you are discouraged, you can quit or you can meet the challenge, but what will you become if you quit? And if you keep going, think how much closer you will be to being great."

One of Nita's dreams is that young persons in the future will have better chance against MS. She and several other MS sufferers recently spoke with a group from the National Rural Letter Carriers, an organization contributing to the Multiple Sclerosis Society as their 1984 charity.

As well as sharing information about MS, it was an opportunity for Nita to get acquainted with others who have MS.

Doll collectors turn hobby to big business

By INA HADAM
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Dolls are becoming big business in Magic Valley — as evidenced by the recent doll show presented by the Magic Doller Club.

During the sixth annual show, dolls ranging from six-inch reproductions with thumb-sized porcelain heads made by Raul Nath of Preston to the soft sculpture dolls made by Anne Walgorn of Jerome, were admired, examined, purchased and traded.

One woman was seen to walk away from the show with her arms full of dolls and heard to say it was the third time she had been there that day.

The Magic Dollers Club, with 25 members, was organized to help develop an appreciation of doll collecting as a serious hobby.

Karen Quinton, Magic Dollers show

Most people who once get 'hooked on dolls' develop an emotional attachment to their dolls...
—Karen Quinton

chairman, said many people believe dolls are just toys for children and "adults don't collect dolls."

However, history disputes this belief, she adds.

In ancient Rome and Greece, when girls married they consecrated their dolls to the Gods. In Syria, girls of marriageable age had dolls in their windows. A Japanese bride takes her doll collection to her new home.

Some doll experts say in ancient times, dolls were used mostly in religious rites and not as children's toys. Dolls dating from 3000 to 2000 B.C. have been found in graves in the Egyptian area.

Quinton said most people who once get 'hooked on dolls' develop an emotional attachment to their dolls and never quit collecting.

Ruby Lierman, who displayed several antique dolls, said a collector "will buy any doll, anywhere or in any way you can."

To illustrate this statement, Lierman pointed to a life size 36-inch tall 1950s Rando McCall boy doll that she purchased for $20 from an Indian boy on the Flathead Indian Reservation near St. Ignace, Mont.

"All collectors have their favorites," Lierman went on to say, as she talked about her 1880 German made "Kestner Pouty," or the 1880 Simon Hallig "Burmese" beauty or the 1900 French made Jumeau "Rosebud."

Dolls throughout the ages have been made of many different materials, such as bone, walrus ivory, mammoth tusk, fur, wax, wood, cactus roots, clay, terra cotta, tin, glass, alabaster, as well as the more common known leather, cloth or composition material.

Composition dolls are made of a granular cracker looking wood pulp bound together with glue and poured into molds.

Monica Rasmussen of Burley, who makes repair and custom dressing her specialty, says one should never attempt to clean a composition doll with water.

Valley Dollers of Doche makes research and identify her specialty as well as custom dressing. Jean Reichard of Jerome, with her Doll Hospital, also makes it support her other hobbies.

In addition to presenting the annual doll show, the Magic Dollers each year gather up "dirty," worn, undressed dolls from the Salvation Army and clean, repair and redress them and give them back for distribution at Christmas time.

Another community project is the presentation of books pertaining to dolls to the local libraries.

Randy C. Robbins of Twin Falls won the Madame Alexander doll "Puddin'" as the first door prize. "Kewpie" doll was the second prize for Jo Nelson, also of Twin Falls. A $10 gift certificate from Kernits, a Boise supplier of doll-related items, went to Linda Johnson of Kimberly.

New members are welcomed and information regarding membership can be had by calling Irene McRoberts, club President, in Buhl at 543-5334.

Lotto players dream big

By CONNIE McNAMARA
Harrisburg Patriot-News

HARRISBURG, Pa. — What would you do if you suddenly became a millionaire?

If you ask people waiting in line to buy state Lotto tickets this question, nearly everyone has an immediate answer.

Each Tuesday and Friday, people of all ages from all walks of life — from men and women dressed in business clothes to mothers with babies in tow to retirees — queue up at the computers that swallow up red and white checkered Lotto cards and spit them out again along with little green cards that could be tickets to instant wealth.

And while they wait in line, visitors of mansions, cars, boats, travel, etc., dance in their heads.

The chances of any one individual's winning are slim, but the pot is always at least $1 million and nearly every week at least one lucky person wins. Does the reality of becoming an instant millionaire live up to the fantasy?

Lotto winners find themselves instant celebrities. Everyone wants to know how they picked their numbers and what they are going to do with the prize.

And although the winners almost always say they won't change their lifestyle dramatically, that's easier said than done.

While winning the Lotto can put millions of dollars in your bank account, it also puts thousands of requests for financial assistance in your mailbox.

Because of this, most lottery winners quickly switch to unlisted phone numbers and stay away from publicity after receiving their winnings.

But the difficulties of being a millionaire don't seem to hurt the Lotto's popularity.

About a year ago, the lines were forming for a Friday night drawing only. The game became so popular, the state switched it to twice a week.

People interviewed while waiting in line to purchase tickets at Strawberry Square recently were asked what they would do if their dream of winning came true. The answers varied greatly.

Fred C. Miner of Camp Hill, who plays the Lotto every Tuesday and Friday, has been trying his luck at such games for 20 years.

"I started when New Jersey started," Miner said, adding that he used to travel through that state and played every now and then.

When the Pennsylvania lottery began, he started playing in this state, too.

Miner is a Lotto regular. He sometimes spends $10 a week, though it is usually less.

"I think my time is due," said Miner. Although he has won $30 and $40 several times, he has never won big, but the hope is still there.

When that winning day comes, Miner will be ready. He says he'd travel and buy a new car — maybe a Lincoln Continental for his wife. He'd remodel his house, but he wouldn't move away.

"Winning the money would 'just give us a little more operating room,'" he said. "It would certainly give you a little more time to do things you want to do."

Miner said he probably wouldn't do anything with the money until he had time to think about it.

"But, he admits, he really doesn't expect to win."

Diane Pelt of Camp Hill said if she saw her number come up she'd "probably pass out." Once recovered from the shock, she'd "buy that year's Jaguar" and find other ways to spend "the first couple of million."

"Everybody has to play Lotto once in a while," according to Barry Greenwald of Palmyra, who said he bought tickets "just on a whim."

Although those who win only come once every month, "I'd pay off debts and buy a bigger boat," he said.

Not all the Lotto players' fantasies go toward material items. Vaughn Hill of Harrisburg said he'd find "a perfect utopia somewhere."

Hill's working pretty hard to get there. He plays the twice weekly and sometimes spends $8 a week.

With dreams of big money also come dreams of helping one's fellow man.

Although Nancy King of Harrisburg admitted she'd like to buy a house for herself if her ticket matched the winning numbers, she also said she wanted to help her family out. Her father is close to retirement age, and she wants to make sure her parents are comfortable, she said.

Holly Gardner plays twice a week and spends about $5 each time.

"I'd open a humanistic spiritual enlightenment center right here in Harrisburg," Gardner said.

Husband's conscience, heart take opposing view of whom to marry

DEAR ABBY: I need your advice on a problem that has been bothering me for some time. I am 40 years old and am married to "Betty," a good woman who loves me very much.

I loved her when I married her, but I fell out of love with her over the years and became very unhappy at home. I moved out two years ago and found a job 500 miles away. I have continued to send Betty money for her support. (There are no children.)

Now I have fallen in love with "Lori," a wonderful person with extremely high morals. We have never made love. Lori and I are talking marriage, and I must now decide between her and Betty.

My heart tells me to divorce Betty and marry Lori, but my conscience keeps interfering. Lori did not take me away from Betty. My love for Betty was dead when I left home. Meanwhile, Betty keeps calling and begging me to come back.

I've talked to my pastor, who says I must honor my marriage vows with absolutely no regard for love. What do you say?

—GUILTY CONSCIENCE

DEAR GUILTY: I say you are shopping around for advice hoping to find someone who will give you approval to divorce your wife and marry your new love.

Your problem is an unwillingness to make a choice and take responsibility for your own actions — a hallmark of immaturity.

Grow up. And when you no longer feel the need to ask what to do, you will be a man, my son!

DEAR ABBY: I am a waitress, and my biggest complaint is customers who ask for coffee, and when it's served they say, "Could I have milk instead of cream?"

I go back to the kitchen for the milk, and when I serve it they ask, "Do you have any artificial sweetener?" Then I have to go all the way back to the kitchen again for the artificial sweetener.

Abby, after being on my feet for eight hours, three trips to the kitchen for one cup of coffee is really annoying. When people order coffee, why don't they say, "I'd like a cup of coffee with milk instead of cream, and please bring some artificial sweetener?"

I didn't mind all that walking when I was 20, but I'm 50 now, and I'm tired.

—VERICOSE VERA

DEAR VERA: Since that's a common problem, when someone orders coffee, simply ask, "and how do you take it?"

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

To make matters worse, I am engaged to a fine woman whom I expect to marry soon. Don't I have any legal rights in this matter? It doesn't seem fair that a divorced woman can continue to use her ex-husband's surname and bring disgrace upon his whole family.

What should I do?

Parents influence marriage

By REDBOOK

Many married couples are haunted by the ghosts of their parents.

They are the kind of relationships in their marriages that they had with their parents or observed in their parents' marriage, reports Jeffrey Blum, a psychologist from New Canaan, Conn., writing in the November issue of Redbook.

"For example, if a woman is lucky enough to have had a terrific relationship with her father," Blum says, "she may recreate this fine relationship with her husband in her own adult life."

"If, on the other hand, that early relationship was unhealthy or destructive, a woman may unconsciously create that same unhappy relationship in her marriage."

Some people pick partners who possess some of the same negative traits their opposite-sex parent exhibited — someone cold, perhaps, or weak — in the subconscious hope that in marriage they will be able to rectify what was "wrong" in their relationship with that parent.

"Another way in which we may recreate old patterns is by projecting all the negative characteristics of our opposite-sex parent on our spouse," Blum explains.

"To complicate matters, the marriage partner then may resemble the spouse for those very traits, even if they are imaginary."

"I participate in this 'negative transfer' by assuming that my wife is angry at me about something I have done, when in fact it isn't bother her at all," Blum says.

"For example, I am so sure that my wife will be upset about something I plan to do — such as going alone to spend an evening with old college friends — that I start acting sneaky about it way in advance. My meanness does upset her — even though she originally felt fine about my plans to see my friends."

"At times this pattern becomes so obvious to me that I wonder if I actually want my wife to become angry so that I can absolve myself of my guilt over seeing my friends alone or because anger is familiar and comfortable to me — part of my own early experience of love."

Communication is the key to getting rid of childhood ghosts. Blum suggests man and wife each write for 20 minutes on a subject such as: "What makes my partner angry?" or "Why my spouse loves me." He says there may be wide discrepancies between what your partner thinks and what you know to be true of yourself.

The most important step in getting rid of the past is to understand it. Blum recommends that marriage partners make a list of all the traits they associate with their parents, then objectively list them about your money to who did the dishes. Compare these descriptions of your parents' marriage with your own. There may be surprising similarities.

"Because we are human," Blum writes in Redbook, "the past is always with us. The more compulsively we try to deny it, the more likely it is to come up and pop us on the nose when we least expect it."

"No marriage is good or bad because it does or doesn't resemble the union of our parents. What causes trouble for spouses is the rigid expectations each partner may bring to the marriage."

High blood pressure affects many

By SCIENCE DIGEST

One of the most disturbing facts about hypertension, or high-blood pressure, is its prevalence in our society. About one in four Americans suffers from it, in varying degrees of severity. Left untreated, the disease is a killer. It is the primary cause of stroke, as well as a major risk factor in heart disease.

Yet, according to the November issue of Science Digest, no one knows why hypertension occurs, how to predict who is likely to get it or even how to treat it safely. That's why recent reports in the scientific literature have sparked considerable interest and controversy.

An article in Science challenges one of the current theories about hypertension, namely, that too much sodium causes the blood pressure of certain predisposed individuals. (Blood pressure is the outward force exerted by blood against the walls of arteries.)

Another article, in Nature, suggests that a chemical previously unidentified in humans plays an important role in the body's regulation of blood pressure.

The Science article, written by David McCarron, director of the Oregon Hypertension Program, and his coworkers at Oregon Health Sciences University, is based on an analysis of the diets of more than 10,000 Americans. His results suggest that too little calcium — rather than too much sodium — leads to the development of high blood pressure.

More surprising, the Oregon team found that the more salt (sodium chloride) people ate, the lower their blood pressure was. This goes against the standard medical advice long given to hypertensives; reduce salt intake.

Although scientists do not know for sure why salt may raise blood pressure, one possibility is as follows: When some people eat more salt than their body needs, their kidneys simply excrete the excess.

But in many people prone to hypertension, the kidneys, for some reason, do not get rid of the extra salt readily. In order to maintain the proper salt-to-water balance that is so critical to cellular function, the body may then retain fluid. This retention, through mechanisms not entirely understood but thought to involve the nervous system, leads to higher blood pressure.

Since McCarron's paper was published this summer, it has met with waves of criticism. Numerous statistical studies, experts claim, link increased salt intake to hypertension.

For example, in Japan, where salt consumption is at least 20 times more than bodily needs dictate, nearly 40 percent of some villages have hypertension. And in cultures where salt is seldom used, such as in rural Uganda, the condition occurs only rarely.

According to the National Heart and Lung and Blood Institute (NHLBI), McCarron's conclusions about sodium are dead wrong, the result of poor experimental methods.

Sweatband can be awesome

Anyone can intimidate me.

I'm easy. You show me an opponent who meets me on the tennis court wearing a sweatband on his wrist and it's all over for me. I'll lie down on the court, roll over and throw in a can of new balls to boot.

Sometimes the people don't even mean to unsettle my insecurities. It's just the way I am.

For years, I have considered people who write poetry "deep." The more of it I don't understand, the deeper I think they are. For all I know they could be people who are candidates for paper bedroom slippers, but I will go to my grave saying, "She was just too cerebral for us."

I'm also in awe of people who order artichokes in public. Oh sure, I cook them at home and go through the whole ritual of pulling off the petals and dragging them through sauce and then pulling them through my teeth, but in public? NEVER! I think people am not currently married.

Erma Bombeck

But the person who really makes me feel inadequate is the man or woman who can introduce eight people to one another without grabbing them by the chest and reading off their name tags. I would give anything to be able to retain names like that.

For years I whined around that it was sorcery training and I was too poor to fraternize, but it isn't true. It's just a superior human being who can say, "Armit Tragliano, I want you to meet Murcattile Zolbeize, Mycolcano Armageddon, Bonsal Schloroffite, Dick Dyjust and Carlyle Mohad. But we're all friends, so let's just make it Smilty, Bud, Myo, Bruiser, Dickie and Tom."

who eat artichokes in public are the same ones who park in front of a concert hall and leave their keys in their car, and send wine back after they've sampled it. They defy traditions and thumb their noses at rules.

Probably the bravest woman I ever met was a friend of mine who walked into a shoestore one day right off the street, sat down and said, "I want to try on boots."

Now that takes courage. She didn't ask if they had zippers, gussets, velcro, or a razor blade; she just said, "I want to try on boots." I still cannot show my calves to anyone to whom I

I went blank last week while introducing my mother.

Someone once asked me if you could die from intimidation.

Having just returned, the answer is yes.

The last debate

Reagan, Mondale face off on foreign policy issues

This time, there was no clear-cut winner

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

Analysis

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The stakes couldn't have been higher and from the opening question of their climactic debate Sunday Walter F. Mondale and President Reagan went after each other. But if Mondale needed a repeat of a victory like the one he scored in the debate on domestic issues two weeks ago to overtake the president in the remaining two weeks of the campaign, he didn't get it.

This time there was no clear winner.

Mondale was strong and articulate and so was the president. To listeners who have followed their campaigns closely, the arguments by the two candidates were echoes of their stump speeches.

Mondale was quick to portray the president as uninformed on the details of arms control and on activities of the CIA in Nicaragua. Reagan lost little time characterizing Mondale as weak on defense.

It was a gloves-off confrontation by two politicians who acted as if they had nothing to lose by going after each other.

Two weeks ago, when Reagan and Mondale debated domestic policy in Louisville, Ky., there was widespread agreement that the president's performance was superb and that Mondale had emerged the winner.

The president had been hesitant and appeared tired as he delivered his closing statement during the first debate.

Mondale had the advantage of the challenger, the man on the outside who could second-guess the policies of the incumbent. It was a position Reagan relished four years ago when he was campaigning against Democrat Jimmy Carter.

Reagan had the edge presidents customarily enjoy in the eyes of the public when the discussion is on defense and foreign policy.

Mondale sought to put Reagan on the defensive from the outset by raising the existence of a CIA manual which advocated terrorist acts against the Sardinia government of Nicaragua.

The president took his shot at putting Mondale on the defensive when he described the Carter-Mondale administration as pursuing "the policy of unilateral disarmament, of weakness if you will."

Moments later the president was back to say that Mondale "has a record of weakness with regard to our national defense that is second to none."

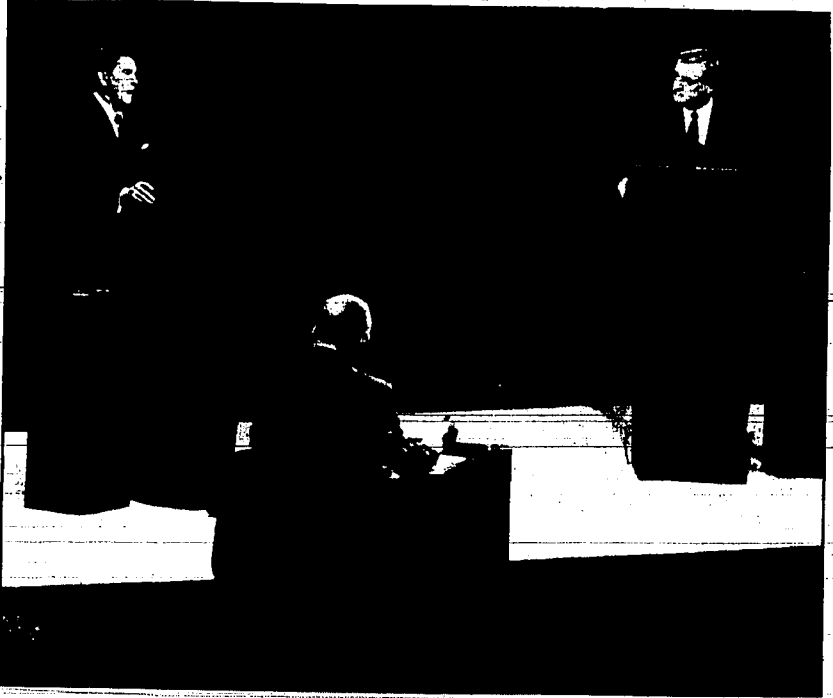

Mondale retorted: "Mr. President, I accept your commitment to peace but I want you to accept my commitment to a strong national defense."

He went on to say that Reagan's "definition of national strength is to throw money at the Defense Department."

Before the debate, many of the president's supporters were saying that to avoid a repetition of the Louisville debate, White House aides must "let Reagan be Reagan."

Reagan certainly was Reagan when he was asked about his age.

"I will not make age an issue of this campaign," said the 73-year-old president. "I am not going to exploit for political purposes my opponent's youth and inexperience."

The candidates' podiums were placed to give them the ability to look both at each other and the audience.

Both sides agree: Reagan was improved

By MIKE SILVERMAN
The Associated Press

Politicians of both major parties agreed Sunday night that President Reagan did far better in his second debate with Walter Mondale than in their first encounter, but Democrats insisted their underdog candidate won on the issues.

"It was less one-sided than the last time, and the president was good on themes. I'm not sure it will move public opinion very much," said Democratic Gov. Charles S. Robb of Virginia. "Walter Mondale scored the substantive points and dealt with the facts very well."

"It was a lot duller than the last debate," said Miller Hudson, chairman of the Denver Democratic Party. "I feel that Mondale maintained his edge from the last debate, but it was not as decisive. His answers were crisp and he finished points in time, better than the president did. I thought the president's closing was atrocious — he meandered off into a long story about a time capsule and never made his closing point."

"I thought he (Reagan) did fairly well," said John T. Dolan, chairman of the National Conservative Political Action Committee who had criticized Reagan's performance two weeks ago.

"I thought he showed Mondale favored disarmament... I think he made it very clear that he had no problem in showing decisiveness," Dolan said by telephone from Des Moines, Iowa.

Edward Coleman, Kentucky state Democratic Party chairman, also said Reagan "did better than last time. He was more relaxed." He said Mondale "did better on the facts," but added, "I don't know how it's going to help him in the polls."

Republican Gov. Lamar Alexander of Tennessee said Reagan "clearly won." He said the president "was at ease, confident, and looked and sounded exactly like the president most Tennesseans want."

Democratic Gov. Harry Hughes of Maryland called the outcome "about even-steven, and certainly the president didn't come back and have a great big win after losing seriously the one before."

"Throughout the whole thing Mondale showed a greater knowledge of the facts than the president," Hughes added.

North Carolina Republican Chairman David Flaherty thought Reagan "did super. I thought he was very positive and upbeat and it was obvious Walter Mondale had certain things" he is going to continue to harp on.

Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd of

West Virginia said "Once again, after this debate, I know whose finger I want on the button — Walter Mondale's. My impression was that Mr. Mondale had a superior knowledge of the facts of foreign and defense policy, and expressed that knowledge more succinctly."

Democratic Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York said Mondale was a "clear winner" on the "merits and issues... Whenever confronted with a hard problem, President Reagan said he didn't know or wasn't responsible. The most chilling moment in the debate came when President Reagan made it clear he still wants to extend nuclear weapons to the heavens. But Walter Mondale committed himself to reducing the threat of a nuclear holocaust."

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., said Reagan looked "much stronger" than he had in the initial debate. "He was able to get in a few little comments that clearly unsettled Mr. Mondale. But I also think Mr. Mondale was very forceful. I thought he was equally strong."

She said she doubted any of Reagan's support was shaken. "I think many people were reassured that the president could be his old masterful self in communicating, and I think that's what the debate did."

PAC money in Senate up by 35%

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 65 candidates for U.S. Senate seats this year are running far ahead of their 1982 counterparts in contributions received from political action committees, Common Cause reported Sunday.

The self-styled citizens' lobby said reports to the Federal Election Commission showed the candidates received nearly as much PAC money through Sept. 30 as their counterparts accumulated through the November elections two years ago.

The Common Cause study found that total PAC funds for the Senate hopefuls were up 35 percent over the amount raised at the same point of the 1982 Senate races and that three Senate candidates already have exceeded the highest amount spent by a candidate in 1982.

The North Carolina Senate race between incumbent Republican Jesse Helms and Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt will become the most expensive Senate campaign in U.S. history, the organization added.

The 1984 Senate figures vividly demonstrate that the current system of financing congressional campaigns is completely out of hand," said Common Cause President Fred Wertheimer, whose group advocates public financing of these campaigns.

The study said the 65 candidates received $112.7 million from Jan. 1, 1983, through Sept. 30, compared with $83.8 million at this point during the 1982 election, and had PAC receipts that were 39 percent greater than the figures of two years ago, $21 million vs. $15.1 million. PACs are giving Senate candidates $21.6 million for the entire 1982 election.

Helms has spent nearly $12.8 million, Gov. Jay Rockefeller of West Virginia nearly $8 million and Hunt $7.1 million in his effort to unseat Helms. In contrast, Mark Dayton of Minnesota reported the highest expenditures of the 1982 Senate races, $7.1 million, in his losing race.

The 10 women running for Senate seats in the general election have received an average of $76,999 in PAC contributions, according to Common Cause, while the 55 men averaged nearly five times as much, $366,519.

Among challengers, men have a $2.50 to $1 margin over women in receipt of PAC funds.

While the leading spender, Helms is in fifth place among the candidates in receipt of PAC money, with $671,843. Hunt, his opponent, is in fifth place with $702,433. The leader is Rep. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who was given $390,712 in such funds through Sept. 30.

Aides claim clear victory for president

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Reagan's advisers lost no time Sunday claiming Reagan won his showdown debate with Walter F. Mondale even though they had insisted in advance that the debate was not crucial to the Nov. 6 election.

"I think he clearly won," said Ed Rollins, director of Reagan-Bush '84, in a post-debate interview in the pressroom.

Rollins joked that Mondale had been "brutalized" in the debate preparation by his advisers, a reference to Sen. Paul Laxalt's assertion that the same thing happened to Reagan when he prepared for his first debate with Mondale two weeks ago.

Reagan aides had similarly claimed victory after that first debate, but then ceded over the next several days that the president's performance had been subpar.

"In the worst case scenario, I think it was a draw and in that case... it was a Ronald Reagan victory," Laxalt said Sunday night. "Mondale needed a knockout tonight and it was far from that. The president had an off-night in Louisville, but tonight he was on."

Added Rollins, "I think he (Reagan) felt he was much more effective (in this debate) and I certainly felt he was much more effective."

White House chief of staff James Baker said White House aides were in command during most of the debate — with the exception being the first question on Central America.

After the debate, Reagan was greeted on stage by two of his children as well as their spouses and his wife, Nancy. He left the stage "with a wide smile and a thumbs-up sign," according to White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

Reagan then attended a closed reception before returning to his hotel suite.

Lee Atwater, political director of Reagan's campaign, said of the debate: "We met all our political objectives. He (Mondale) met none of his."

Atwater said the age issue, which was raised after the first debate, "is behind us now for the rest of the campaign." Richard G. Darman, who oversaw the president's debate preparation, said Reagan had not anticipated the question about his age and that his joke about not exploiting Mondale's "youth and inexperience" was unhearsable.

"He won one for the gipper," Darman said. Atwater said he didn't see "anything that could happen" that could prevent Reagan from winning a second term.

Asked why Reagan was unable to complete his closing statement, speechwriter Ken Khachigian said "my sense of it was that he just had a lot to say."

The president warmed up for the 90-minute debate at a pep rally just a half-hour before the confrontation began.

"We don't claim to have remade the world but we have made it better and safer than the world the Carter administration left us," he said, as his son Ron and daughter Maureen and their spouses stood by.

Even before the high-stakes drama began, White House aides were trying to lower expectations, insisting that even a poor presidential showing would not jeopardize Reagan's commanding lead in his re-election bid.

"I would say he's ready. He's well-prepared. He's in a good frame of mind," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters.

This time Reagan spent his pre-debate preparation time differently — in an effort to deliver a polished performance.

Mondale

Debate was test of military leadership

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale said Sunday after his debate with President Reagan that their second confrontation demonstrated the president is unwilling to take responsibility for his own policies in Lebanon and Central America.

The Democratic presidential nominee told a cheering crowd of about 1,500 people that the debate marked a test of "who is ready to be commander in chief, who is ready to run this government, who has a vision of our future..."

But Mondale stopped short of making any claims of victory in the televised meeting with Reagan. He took no questions from reporters following the debate, unlike after the first matchup with the president two weeks ago in Louisville, Ky.

At a hotel rally about half an hour after the debate, Mondale said, "Tonight, despite all the tragedy in Lebanon, I think I heard the president, the commander in chief, blame it on somebody else."

"Tonight, despite all the embarrassment of that covert action in Nicaragua, which has strengthened our enemies, I think I heard the president, the commander in chief, blame somebody else."

Mondale said the debate demonstrated that he, not Reagan, would be "a real commander in chief who would take charge."

When he walked into the debate, Mondale was hoping to project the image of a strong and forceful leader more knowledgeable about foreign affairs than Reagan.

"He hasn't mastered his facts," Mondale said of Reagan.

After four days of preparations at his Washington home, the Democratic challenger attended church, then flew to Kansas City aboard a newly christened "Louisville Slugger" charter jet, symbolizing Mondale's successful debate performance two weeks ago in Kentucky.

"Tonight is a crucial night in our nation's future," Mondale said at a brief news conference before leaving Washington.

"I am confident as the debate goes on, the American people will see the difference (between the two candidates)," he said.

Mondale spent most of the afternoon making final debate preparations in the presidential room of the Radisson-Muehlbach Hotel, a suite which the late Harry S. Truman as an office after leaving the White House.

Mondale's aides said the candidate worked in a room where there was a portrait of the late president and a desk and piano once owned by Truman.

Before the short ride to the Kansas City Convention Center, Mondale was cheered by a crowd of about 200 people gathered on the sidewalk outside the hotel.

Before leaving Washington, Mondale said repeatedly that he would raise the issue of Reagan's record on strategic arms control during the 90-minute nationally televised debate devoted to foreign policy subjects.

He cited a new book on arms control, "Deadly Gambit," by Time magazine correspondent Strobe Talbot in which Reagan is portrayed as playing only a minor role in planning the administration's arms control policies over the last four years.

He also recalled former Secretary of State Alexander Haig's reference to the Reagan White House as a "ghost ship."

"The question is, who's in charge," said Mondale. "To be strong, the commander-in-chief must master what he must know to lead and command," Mondale said.

FDA issues Reyes advice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Frank E. Young, the new commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, has been cast in the lead of the agency's new messages warning that aspirin may be linked with Reyes's Syndrome, a sometimes-fatal childhood disease.

His role puts Young squarely in the center of the competition for the public's ears and eyes as the influenza season approaches.

An aspirin industry-financed group already is distributing radio and television public service announcements that say no drug causes Reyes's Syndrome and any parent who suspects a child has the disease should consult a physician.

And a consumer organization, Public Citizen's Health Research Group, has filed suit seeking reinstatement of an FDA plan to require notices on aspirin packages warning that children with viral illnesses such as flu or chickenpox should not be given the drug.

The group claims the FDA succumbed to pressure from the aspirin industry when it shelved its plans for warning labels in 1982.

"As a physician, I think it is fair to say there is a higher incidence of Reyes's Syndrome in young people who have been exposed to aspirin. But there is no absolute causal, one-to-one relationship," Young said in the first news interview he has granted since being sworn in as commissioner on Aug. 1.

Asked what he would advise the parents of small children, Young replied, "If there are signs and symptoms of Reyes's Syndrome, very rapidly seek medical attention because time is of the essence. If it is a self-limiting disease like chickenpox or flu, think through very carefully if you want to use aspirin."

Symptoms of Reyes's Syndrome include vomiting, lethargy, severe headaches and sudden changes in behavior.

Teacher faces sex charges

BOISE (AP) — A Meridian junior high school football coach and social studies teacher has been arrested and charged with statutory rape and lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor child, the Ada County Sheriff's Department says.

David Hall, 31, of Boise, a coach at Lake Hazel Junior High, was arrested Friday, Ada County Detective Ken Smith said.

Smith said the arrest followed an investigation that began Tuesday after the parents of a 16-year-old Boise girl, who is not a student at Lake Hazel Junior High, filed a complaint with the Sheriff's Department.

He said the complaint concerned an incident that allegedly occurred recently. Smith said force was not used in the alleged incident, but because the girl was a minor, it was considered statutory rape.

Hall, who was released on $10,000 bond late Friday, said Saturday that he did not wish to comment on the arrest.

Smith said Hall's past record revealed "nothing of this nature."

Phil Peterson, an assistant superintendent of the Meridian Joint School District, said Saturday that Hall would not be back in the classroom until more was known about the incident.

He said Hall, who is an assistant football coach, is in his first year at the Junior High school.

"He will be suspended at this point until the whole situation is resolved," Peterson said, in accordance with school policy on criminal offenses.

Smith said the Ada County Sheriff's Department is continuing an investigation into the case.

Snowstorms linked to pair of Wyoming plane crashes

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — A federal investigator said Sunday that snowstorms may have been a contributing factor in two airplane crashes that killed two people in the Cheyenne area in a 24-hour period.

But Verlin Tranter, air safety investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board, said the cause of the Friday night and Saturday afternoon crashes won't be known until more information is gathered and the wreckage is examined.

Tranter and other investigators braved sub-freezing temperatures and snowfall Sunday to sift through the wreckage of the two accidents.

The "twingent" Cessna crashed into a north Cheyenne home Saturday, killing a 2-year-old Nebraska boy sleeping inside the home, and injuring the four people aboard the aircraft, two of them critically.

One of the passengers who was less seriously injured told a police officer that the wings had led up.

"There's a possibility the wings lifted up. There was a lot of snowing on and off and it was quite cold," Tranter said. "There were conditions for icing."

"One FAA (Federal Aviation Administration) person in the tower indicated that the pilot brushed snow off the wing," Tranter said.

But other factors may have also contributed to the crash, such as a "very heavy load the pilot couldn't handle," he said.

The pilot, 58-year-old George Herman, is certified for instrument flight rules; meaning visibility did not have to be good for him to take off, Tranter said.

Herman is an experienced pilot who operates a business flying prisoners across the country — for extradition, according to Cheyenne Police Sgt. Blaine Smith.

NTSB investigators had not yet talked to any of the passengers who were in the plane. And engine and airframe specialists who arrived in Cheyenne Sunday to look for mechanical failures had not completed their on-site investigation.

Police officials said Herman, 58, his son Martin Herman, 25, Mary Scher, 46, and Laura Shoemaker, 24, all of Baltimore, were on their way to a police convention in Salt Lake City. They do not yet know where the flight originated from.

The elder Herman was in critical condition and Scher in stable but serious condition Sunday in Cheyenne Memorial Hospital.

The younger Herman and Ms. Shoemaker were treated and released Saturday from DePaul Hospital in Cheyenne.

The crash occurred about a mile from the Cheyenne airport. The plane sheared off three utility poles before slamming into the rear of the home owned by Helene Boham.

Mrs. Boham had just put her grandson to sleep in a rear room and gone back to the front of the house. The engine landed on top of the child's bed, killing 2-year-old Andrew Ediger, son of Rick and Pattl Ediger, of Scottsbluff, Neb.

The Edigers had left their children with Mrs. Boham and gone to the Nebraska-Colo. Colorado game in Boulder, Colo. Their other child, whose name and age were not released, escaped without injury.

Fred Newland, who lives next door, described the fire as a "ragging inferno" with heat "so intense, you couldn't stand it." "I knew my house was going to burn," he said. But firefighters from F.E. Warren Air Force Base and the Cheyenne Fire Department contained the fire and no other homes were damaged.

"I could hear screaming inside (the home which was hit)," Newland said.

Shortly after the plane hit, Mrs. Boham was outside the house crying and trying to get back inside to rescue her grandson, Newland said. But Newland's wife, Nadine, took the grandmother away from the house.

Paul Morse, who lives next to Newland, said neighbors felt helpless because they couldn't get inside the burning home to rescue the child.

Flames leapt 30 to 40 feet from the burning home and ammunition Herman carried aboard his plane was exploding, Sgt. Smith said.

As the plane descended, it broke a main power line over Interstate 25 in northwest Cheyenne, knocking out power for an area with about 600 residents. Crews worked in sub-freezing temperatures, for the next 12 hours before power was fully restored at 1:30 a.m., according to Bill Pomery, of Cheyenne Light, Fuel and Power Co.

The collision forced the Wyoming Highway Patrol to close a five-mile stretch of Interstate 25 for about an hour Saturday while the power lines were cleared from the road.

The other plane crash occurred Friday night, shortly after the pilot had taken off from the Cheyenne airport. Pilot John Baird, 49, of Casper, was killed when his plane crashed nine miles northeast of the airport.

Study: quake could disrupt oil supply

POCATELLO (AP) — A major earthquake in the Intermountain West could disrupt the supply of petroleum products to Utah and Idaho, according to an Idaho State University geologist studying the region's energy supply system.

"There is a possibility of a major earthquake near the Salt Lake City refineries, all of which are close to the Wasatch Fault," said Dr. Fred May, an associate professor of geology at ISU.

May and Dr. Charles Pace, an ISU assistant professor of economics, are working under contract to the Idaho Operations Office of the U.S. Department of Energy to study and define the Intermountain energy supply system.

The focus of their research, and of the region's oil supply, is the Overthrust Belt of the Rocky Mountains. It's been a geological fountainhead of mineral wealth for the area, but the stresses and strains beneath the earth along the belt's outer reaches may someday hamper man's attempts to reap that wealth.

All the petroleum products used in the Intermountain area originate from oil fields in Utah and eastern Colorado and, to a lesser extent, Wyoming.

May said about 126,000 barrels of crude oil are refined daily in North Salt Lake City refineries, supplying nearly all of the gasoline and diesel needs for Utah and Idaho.

A system of pipelines and trucks from the Utah refineries pumps some 50,000 barrels of refined petroleum products into Idaho each day. But Idaho's fuel lifeline to the south could quickly be severed by serious earthquake, May said.

He said an earthquake the magnitude of the Oct. 28, 1983, tremor in central Idaho, which registered 7.3 on the Richter scale and killed two children near, could wreak havoc on major energy facilities in the area.

A series of weaker aftershocks since that killer quake, and a Wyoming earthquake last week that registered 5.5 on the Richter scale, have raised fresh doubts about the safety of structures from nuclear reactors to dams in the region.

A more basic question concerning May is the reliability of the pipeline system from the Uinta Basin, Utah, and Rangely, Colo., oil fields to the Salt Lake City refineries. He said it may take some time for the delivery system to be re-established if interrupted by a major quake.

"About three years ago, a heating malfunction caused the pipeline carrying the waxy crude from the Uinta Basin to cool down and the waxy crude to set up in the pipeline," May said. "It took nearly a year to get that pipeline flowing again."

Potato museum celebrates tuber

By JEANETTE GERMAIN
The Idaho Statesman

WASHINGTON — Tom and Meredith Hughes are potato pitifuls. For almost 10 years, they have collected potato history and potato paraphernalia from around the world. They now serve as curators of The Potato Museum on the ground floor of their townhouse in the Capitol Hill district of Washington, D.C.

The museum boasts 2,000 pieces of potato art, potato history and potato kitsch. The collection ranges from a basket made of potato peelings to a clock powered by a potato to 400 potato postcards.

The museum even holds potato money. It was used in Germany during the runaway inflation following World War I. The bill, showing rich and poor people gathering potatoes in a field, was worth 50 kilos of the staple vegetable.

The Potato Museum actually began in Europe with memories of world wars and the Great Depression, Hughes said. He was teaching at an international school in Brussels, Belgium, in 1975 when he noticed potatoes growing in backyard gardens around the city. He asked his neighbors why they bothered to grow so inexpensive a vegetable.

They told him how the potato had kept them alive during the war.

"That got me thinking about the potato in ways I never had before," Hughes said.

The potato, he points out, has been carried from its native South America all over the world. It has caused wars, famines, and mass migrations. It has sustained people through good and bad times.

Hughes began using the potato to help teach history to his fifth grade students in Belgium. They put together an exhibit about the importance of the simple vegetable. The exhibit was featured in a television and in numerous newspaper articles.

A journalist dubbed it "The Potato Museum," and it remained on display in Europe for four years.

Hughes returned to the U.S. in 1979 and began traveling all over the country. He took parts of the collection to schools and science museums, and made appearances for the Frito-Lay company while he and his wife did research for their independent museum.

Idaho is extremely well represented in the collection, Hughes said. The Potato Museum has a complete collection of Shelley Spud Day buttons, for example, and numerous photographs of Idaho farmers holding very large potatoes.

Tom and Meredith are as interested in potato agriculture as in potato history.

Bilyeu defends state college funds formula

POCATELLO (AP) — The state Board of Education's funding formula is no more unfair to Idaho State University than it is to other schools, state Sen. C.E. "Chick" Bilyeu says.

Bilyeu told the Pocatello Chamber of Commerce on Friday that ISU receives more money per full-time equivalent (FTE) student than any other school in the state.

"The problem is not at ISU, but with the entire system," Bilyeu said. "We here in Pocatello don't hear the arguments from the other schools, but I hear all of them. All the schools are pleading for fiscal help, not just us."

The funding formula was devised precisely because the whole system has been underfunded, Bilyeu told the group. He said despite the local furor over the formula, it gives ISU $5,200 per FTE, while BSU gets only $3,600. The University of Idaho gets $5,000, while Lewis-Clark State College gets $4,900.

The Pocatello Democrat, running opposed for re-election this year, told the chamber the perception that Boise-area legislators "are stretching their long arms into the heart of Idaho State University and draining the lifeblood out of ISU" is a myth.

Bilyeu, whose wife Diane is a member of the state Board of Education, said he has pleaded with ISU administrators to give him specific examples of where the formula has discriminated against ISU.

He said Pocatello has three legislators — himself, Larry EchoHawk and Bert Marley — on the powerful Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee, while Boise has just one, Republican Kathleen "Kitty" Gurnsey.

Bilyeu also said he was the loudest voice for higher education in the Senate, and that no state senator from Boise spoke out for higher education during the last session of the Idaho Legislature.

The problem with ISU, and with every university in the state, is that the entire appropriation for higher education is too low, he said.

Car rolls over, kills man

EMMETT (AP) — A 23-year-old Wilder man was killed Saturday afternoon, about 5 miles south of Emmett, when an unoccupied car rolled over him, the Gem County Coroner's office reports.

David Hooper was killed when the car he was driving on a rural road became high-centered on a steep incline and rolled over him as he attempted to dislodge it, Gem County Coroner Walter Potter said.

Potter said Hooper and a friend were outside the car and Hooper was trying to move some dirt out of the way when the vehicle dislodged and rolled over him.

Earthquake book popular

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — An eight-page booklet recently sent to the shelves of the Laramie County Civil Defense Agency collecting dust. But in the wake of Thursday's ground rumblings, the "Family Earthquake Drill" booklet is suddenly in demand.

"No one ever asked for them in the past," said agency director David Guille, "but now we've had a run on them."

Thursday's earthquake, centered about 40 miles southeast of Casper, measured 5.5 on the Richter scale and was felt in six states.

The booklet suggests drills a family can use to anticipate a major tremor. It recommends acquainting family members with the safe spots in each room of a house. It also suggests that in the event of a major earthquake, people stand or crouch in a strong doorway, get under a sturdy table or brace themselves in an inside corner of the house.

Danger zones are near windows, bookcases and heating units, the booklet says.

According to the Wyoming Disaster and Civil Defense office in Cheyenne, western Wyoming is the most seismically active region. The northwestern area is considered a major risk area, the western border a moderate risk and the eastern portion a low risk.

There is no way to predict when the next earthquake could strike the state, according to Waverly Persons, spokesman for the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

But apparently no everyone knows that: Guille said he received a call from an irate woman who "tells me that we were going to have an earthquake."

LEGAL NOTICE

STATE OF IDAHO, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, NOTICE OF INTENDED AGENCY ACTION

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that the undersigned proposes to amend the regulations of the Idaho Department of Agriculture concerning Animal Health pursuant to the procedure prescribed by Section 67-203, Idaho Code, and that the authority for amending such regulations is provided by Sections 67-202, 207, and 601, Idaho Code.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that the undersigned proposes to amend the Idaho Health Regulations 28, 99, 113, 114, 117, 118, 176, and 183; to delete Regulations 159 and 160; and to add Regulations 185 and 186.

The revisions relating to the following testing and identification procedures: provide for the classification of Idaho as a state, allow transfer of brucellosis suspects to and define special Quarantined Feedlots and Idaho Quarantined Feedlots, impose stricter import requirements for cattle from states with high disease risk, and otherwise conform the wording of the regulations to the requirements of the National Brucellosis Program.

Further, the amendments allow alternatives to dipping in the treatment of scabies.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that a complete copy of the said amendments may be obtained from the undersigned at 1201 Kiow Lane, Boise, Idaho, or by title and undersigned at P.O. Box 799, Boise, Idaho 83701.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that for the purpose of determining whether the proposed amendments will be adopted as stated above, any person or group interested in the matter may submit oral or written testimony to the undersigned on or before November 19, 1984 at the aforementioned address.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that the undersigned on or before November 19, 1984, at the aforementioned address, will receive and consider all written and oral submissions concerning this amendment received on or before this date. Unless twenty-five or more persons, a governmental subdivision or agency, or an association presenting a petition signed by not less than twenty-five members of the organization, make a written request for a hearing on the proposed amendments on or before November 19, 1984, no such general hearing shall be convened. Any hearing (if any) will be accessible to the physically dis-

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING, COMPREHENSIVE PLAN MAP AMENDMENTS, CITY OF TWIN FALLS

Notice is hereby given by the City Council for the City of Twin Falls, Idaho, that a Public Hearing will be held at the hour of 7:00 o'clock P.M., on the 5th day of November, 1984, Monday, in the Council Chamber, City Hall, located at 321 Second Avenue East, Twin Falls, Idaho. The City of Twin Falls is amending the Comprehensive Plan Map for Twin Falls City and the surrounding Area of Impact. The proposed Comprehensive Plan Map changes include the following:

1. A Commercial designation is proposed to replace a Residential designation for the south side of Flirer Avenue, from Harrison Street to Tyler Street extended.
2. An industrial designation is proposed to replace a Commercial designation for that area south and west of the following described line: Northeast along Shoshone Street South, from 8th Avenue South to 4th Avenue South; then, east along 4th Avenue South, from Avenue South, from Shoshone Street South to 2nd Street South; then, northeast along 2nd Street South to the alley between 2nd Avenue South and 3rd Avenue South; then, east along the alley between 2nd Avenue South and 3rd Avenue South, then, southwest along 4th Street South to 3rd Avenue South; then, southeast along 3rd Avenue South to Minidoka Street South, then, northwest along 3rd Avenue South, from 3rd Avenue South to 4th Avenue South; then, northwest along 4th Avenue South to the alley parallel with Shoshone Street South, then, northwest along Shoshone Street South, then, northeast to Shoshone Street South.
3. A Commercial designation is proposed to replace a Residential designation along the north line of Addison Avenue East, from the City Limits line to East Road. The eastern portion being reserved for a Planned Unit Development.
4. A Residential designation is proposed to replace a Commercial designation for that area in the southern quadrant of the east side of the intersection of Avenue East and Eastland Drive, between the 600' foot.
5. An industrial designation is proposed to replace a Residential designation for area between south and east of the Orchard Drive/3200 East Road intersection, now particularly described as: SW¼ of Sec. 24 and that portion of the SE¼/NW¼ SW¼ of Block 11 and 120, Twin Falls Original Township, S.W. 1/4 Sec. 26, all in T. 10 S., R. 17 E., B.M.

The Comprehensive Plan Map, in conjunction with the Comprehensive Plan, will affect the direction and manner in which the City of Twin Falls will accommodate future growth consistent with the current environmental quality of the City of Twin Falls and the surrounding area.

Any comment upon the proposed amendments to the Comprehensive Plan Map may appear and be heard at the appointed time and place.

one burial plot and one funeral agreement excluded from his resources:

5. Conditional eligibility is granted for up to nine months where an individual with excess nonexcludable real property agrees to sell the property and to repay all taxes and other obligations.
6. Advance Earned Income Credit payments are not counted unless actually received.
7. All parents and minor siblings of a dependent child must be included in determining AFDC eligibility and grant amount, and their income and resources must also be included.
8. A minor unemerged mother must have her parents' income deemed available to her if she lives with them; and if eligible, her needs must be included in the AFDC grants.
9. The first $30 of child support received directly by or collected in behalf of an AFDC recipient is not excluded for AFDC purposes.
10. Exclusion of certain public and private in-kind aid is extended for three more years.
11. Exceptions where the usual requirements for a substitute payee when protective payments are made for children whose caretaker relative is not cooperating in work programs or child support enforcement will apply.
12. AFDC (But not refugees) do not qualify for AFDC for up to three years after entry into the United States if sponsored by a public or private agency contracted to provide assistance.

For Medical:

1. AFDC families who lose AFDC because their "one-third" earned income disregard expires can automatically qualify for MA for an additional nine months. This provision can also affect families terminated from AFDC between March 1, 1982 and September 30, 1984, if the family, had they not lost the "one-third" earned income disregard, would have been continuously eligible for AFDC from that time they were terminated until they apply for this MA extension and they apply for this MA extension before April 1, 1985, and their insurance;
2. A pregnant woman may qualify for MA if her child is deprived of parental support because his parent who is the family's principal earner is unemployed and the household does not qualify for AFDC.
3. A child may qualify for MA if he is born after September 30, 1983, is under age five, and meets AFDC income and resource requirements;
4. AFDC families who lose AFDC because of child support collected by the state also eligible for MA for four additional months. This provision expires September 30, 1988.

Notice of six regular rule-making only (Docket Number 0301-8406) and not as part of a larger rule-making (Docket Number 0301-8406E), the Department proposes to prorate the Shelter and utilities (SW 1/4 Sec. 26) and other income-eligible persons and members, including AFDC members and nonmembers, where there is a dependent living in the home. Proration is permitted under 45 CFR 233.20(a) (iv).

For Aid to the Aged, Blind, and Disabled (AABD) regular rule-making only (Docket Number 0301-8406), and not as part of emergency rule-making (Docket Number 0301-8406E), the Department proposes to increase the resource limitation for eligible persons and couples and to exclude corrective payments of SSI, Social Security, and AABD from resources for the implemented effective January 1, 1985, as mandated by Public Law 98-369.

Within the time limits specified below, any person who is interested in commenting on any proposed administrative Procedure Section or any other administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the proposed rules are made available upon request by the undersigned, and copies are made available upon a fee of $1.00 per copy (the dollar number) on the undersigned's request.

Checks must accompany the request and be made payable to the Department of Health and Welfare for the proposed rules. Anyone can submit written comment regarding the proposed rules, and any individual or industry who may be affected by the proposed rules is encouraged to submit comments concerning the anticipated economic impact of the proposed rules. ### LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF EMERGENCY RULE-MAKING AND NOTICE OF INTENDED REGULAR RULE-MAKING

In compliance with Sections 67-5203(b) and 67-5203(c) of Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Department of Health and Welfare has undertaken emergency procedures for rule-making. The action, under Docket Number 0301-8406E, involves the amendment of rules governing the Department of Health and Welfare. The action, under Docket Number 0301-8406, involves the amendment of rules governing the Department of Health and Welfare.

Emergency rule-making is necessary because Public Law 98-369 by the required effective date of October 1, 1984, and Public Law 98-376 which was effective upon enactment, August 16, 1984, would result in disallowance of federal funds used to make assistance and medical care payments to approximately 20,000 needy children and their families and medical care payments to approximately 9,500 needy aged, blind, and disabled people in Idaho, constituting an imminent peril to their health, safety, and welfare.

The rules, which were adopted by emergency procedures on the 25th day of September, 1984, and filed by the undersigned on the 25th day of September, 1984, and will expire at the end of one hundred twenty (120) days on the 23rd day of January, 1985.

In addition, notice is also given, in compliance with Section 67-5203(a)(1), Idaho Code, that the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, has also initiated regular rule-making under Docket Number 0301-8406, prior to adoption of the emergency rules as permanent rules.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the emergency and intended permanent actions of the principal issues involved:

The Department proposes to implement certain mandatory provisions of Public Law 98-369 and Public Law 98-376 affecting eligibility for Medicaid (MA) and eligibility and payment amount for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC). The

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

"The world is made of people who never quite get into the first team and who just miss the prizes at the flower show."

— J. Bronowski.

Plan the play at today's North. Plan to see if you can make the first team. Hint: South doesn't always break nicely and lack of entries can create problems.

East puts up the spade king and South wins the ace. Should South finesse in clubs?

If he does, the finesse wins (there's no law compelling East to take his king) and South returns to his hand in diamonds to repeat the club finesse. This time, East shatters South's dream by winning his king and returning a spade. South can now duck or win; it makes no difference. Dummy is left with only one entry and, when clubs and diamonds fall to split 3-3, the game goes one down.

South can make his game if he guards against a bad club break. After winning the spade ace, South should lead a club to dummy's eight. Instead of finessing dummy's jack, East wins and returns a spade, which South ducks. Another spade goes to South's queen and the club finesse follows. If East ducks, dummy can play the ace and another club to establish the fifth club. If East wins, the rest is easy. Either way, South manages three clubs and two tricks in each of the other suits for nine tricks.

Vulnerable: Both. Dealer: South. The bidding:

Cardinals rally to upset Redskins

By PAUL LeBAR
The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Neil O'Donoghue, making up for two earlier misses, booted a 21-yard field goal with three seconds remaining, lifting the St. Louis Cardinals to a 26-24 National Football League triumph over the Washington Redskins Sunday.

The field goal by O'Donoghue, who missed a 40-yard try with 2:53 remaining, capped a 63-yard drive by St. Louis.

Cards quarterback Neil Lomax connected with Pat Tilley on a 21-yard pass play to set up the winning kick.

The Cards, after falling behind 21-10, launched a comeback that at first stalled when O'Donoghue missed an extra point try following an 83-yard touchdown pass play.

The miss came with 11:31 remaining. With St. Louis trailing 24-23, the

Pile-driving runs by John Riggins and a fumble recovery by Pro Bowl tackle Dave Butz rallied Washington after St. Louis grabbed a 10-7 edge at halftime.

Riggins' touchdown, his ninth of the year, capped a 75-yard drive at the outset of the second half. Four minutes later, after veteran Tony McGee caused a fumble by Lomax and Butz recovered, Walker caught Joe Theismann's pass to build an 11-point lead for Washington.

St. Louis would not quit, however, trimming the Redskins' lead to 21-7 when Lomax and Doug Marsh hooked up on a 19-yard scoring play late in the third quarter.

Mark Moseley kicked a 39-yard field goal for appeared to be the winning points with 11:51 remaining following a 39-yard pass play between Theismann and Clint Didier. But 10 seconds after that, Roy Green hauled in a Lomax pass on the play that left the Cards just short.

In an opening half, which featured four sacks of Theismann by the Cards' unheralded defense, St. Louis grabbed the lead at the outset when Lomax found Green on a 38-yard bomb.

Washington countered late in the opening period on Theismann's 3-yard pass to Didier. O'Donoghue later kicked a 29-yard field goal to put the Cards back on top 10-7 at 4:43 of the second quarter but missed a 34-yard attempt later in the same period.

Lomax, while throwing against a roused Washington defense, completed 20 of 37 passes for 361 yards in a St. Louis offense that totaled 431 yards.

The result left both teams with 5-3 records.

Dolphins roll to their 8th straight win

By HOWARD ULMAN
The Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — Dan Marino led a 552-yard offensive explosion with four touchdown passes, setting a club record of 24 in one season, as the Miami Dolphins remained the National Football League's only unbeaten team with a 44-24 victory over the New England Patriots Sunday.

Marino, who completed 24 of 39 passes for 376 yards, needed just half a season to break Bob Griese's club record of 22 touchdown passes. The Dolphins' offensive output equaled the team mark set in the fifth game of the season against St. Louis.

The Patriots couldn't stop the Dolphins, who scored on seven of their nine possessions, including their last five.

Starting with the final series of the first half, Marino hurled scoring strikes on four consecutive Miami possessions. They covered 19 yards to Neil Moore, 5 yards to Dan Johnson, 15 yards to Mark Clayton and 15 yards to Moore to make the score 37-24.

But the Dolphins, who began the game as the NFL's highest-scoring team with 31.9 points per game, weren't comfortably on their way to their eighth victory until midway through the fourth quarter as New England's Tony Eason threw for three touchdowns.

Those plays covered 76 yards to Stanley Morgan, 14 yards to Clarence Weathers and 5 yards to Derrick Ramsey.

The Patriots, 5-3, had a three-game winning streak snapped and fell three games behind Miami in the American Conference East.

The game was tied 3-3 after one quarter as Uwe Von Schamann kicked a 28-yard field goal for Miami, and Tony Franklin connected from 48 yards for New England, the first points the Dolphins have allowed in the opening quarter this year.

Pete Johnson's 1-yard run gave the Dolphins a 10-3 lead but the pass to Weathers tied the game. Miami marched 80 yards in the final two minutes of the first half to take a 16-10 intermission lead on the 19-yard throw to Moore.

It was 30-17 after the third quarter on the passes to Dan Johnson and Clayton and Eason's bomb to Morgan.

Ramsey's catch cut the lead to six points early in the final period. But the Dolphins wrapped up the victory as Marino found Moore in the end zone for the second time, and Pete Johnson scored again on a 3-yard run.

Cougars closing out race

WAC football

By JOHN MOSSMAN
The Associated Press

Time is running out on the rest of the Western Athletic Conference. If unbeaten Brigham Young is to be deprived of its ninth straight WAC football title, two of the Cougars' final four league opponents will have to pull off upsets.

BYU raised its overall record to 7-0 and WAC mark to 4-0 with a 30-25 victory over Air Force on Saturday at the academy. The victory also extended BYU's winning streak to 18 games — longest in the nation.

The seventh-ranked Cougars will have a short week to prepare for their next WAC game. They play at New Mexico on Thursday night, but the Lobos, once 4-0, now are foundering. UNM suffered its third straight loss, a 59-21 setback at the hands of Wyoming in Laramie, on Saturday.

In other WAC action over the weekend, San Diego State stayed in contention, raising its WAC log to 3-1 with a 41-24 thrashing of Colorado State in San Diego. The Aztecs may have the only realistic shot at catching BYU, and they play in Provo on Nov. 10 in what could prove to be a crucial matchup. Utah, meanwhile, dropped to 2-2-1 by losing to Hawaii 20-17 in Honolulu. Texas-El Paso was idle.

BYU quarterback Robbie Bosco completed 23 of 41 passes for 494 yards and four touchdowns to lead the Cougars past Air Force. Bosco's touchdown passes covered 52, 22, 56 and 54 yards.

Lowly Colts rally to come-from-behind win over Steelers

By STEVE HERMAN
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Colts had hoped a change of quarterbacks would ignite a sluggish offense, but it was a job-hungry Mike Seal on the bench who sparked an incredible fourth-quarter rally over the Pittsburgh Steelers Sunday.

"The football god was on our side for a change," Indianapolis coach Frank Kush said after the last-minute, 17-16 come-from-behind vic-

More NFL — D3

Ray Butler grabbed a deflected pass on the run and completed a 54-yard touchdown play with 34 seconds remaining as the Colts shocked the Steelers and defender Sam Washington.

"I thought Mike looked good," Kush said of Pagel, his usual starter who had fallen from grace in recent weeks. "He was on target and picked his receivers well. He was more scared of losing his job (for good)."

The Colts, starting their last-ditch drive from their own 20 with 1:25 to go, reached the Pittsburgh 40. But Pagel, who replaced newly reacquired Mark Herrmann in the third quarter, was sacked for a 9-yard loss and the Colts were called for offside.

Then, on third down and 21 yards to go from their own 46, Pagel hurried a pass that was almost picked off by Washington, who bobbed the ball into the air and into the hands of Butler of the Steelers' 40.

He raced into the end zone to tie the game, and Raul Allegre's extra-point kick gave the Colts the lead for the first time in the game.

"We had three receivers going to one side," said Butler. "It was designed to go to me, but Pagel saw something and threw to (Bernard) Henry. Their defender (Washington) got a hand on the ball and it just popped into my hands."

"I went as hard as I could," said Butler, who got a key block by Phil Smith just before crossing the goal line.

Washington, who shared the NFL lead with six interceptions going into the game, said the Steelers "put good pressure on Pagel but he got out of the pocket. I didn't see Butler. I got a hand on the ball ... unfortunately too much of one hand."

"It has never happened before and it will never happen again," vowed Washington, who then buried his head in his hands and mumbled "boy-boy-oh-boy."

Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll said the winning play "wasn't lucky. We were in a prevent defense, but they were moving the ball."

"They deserved to win. They played hard football and busted their tails. We shouldn't have been in a situation where it came down to that, but we were."

Pittsburgh's Gary Anderson earlier kicked three field goals, including a team-record 53-yarder, and rookie Louis Lipps held onto another deflected pass for a 62-yard touchdown reception, to give the Steelers a seemingly safe lead.

Late FG rescues Cowboys

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
The Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — A 41-yard field goal by Rafael Septien with 3:42 elapsed in overtime Sunday night, capped the biggest comeback in Cowboy history and gave Dallas a 30-27 National Football League victory over the New Orleans Saints.

The Cowboys, who trailed 27-6 after the third quarter, scored 21 points behind reserve quarterback Danny White in the fourth quarter — the largest deficit they have ever overcome in the 24-year history of the club.

The Cowboys got a break in overtime when Saint defensive back Johnnie Poe was guilty of pass interference on Tony Hill at the New Orleans 47. The 24-yard penalty was followed by a 15-yard White to Mike Renfro pass to the Saint 31. White scrambled to the Saint 24 to set up Septien's kick.

Dallas, 5-3, moved into a tie with Washington and St. Louis for the lead in the National Football Conference Eastern Division.

New Orleans, 3-5, built a 17-6 halftime lead on a 38-yard pass from Richard Todd to Tyrone Young, a 62-yard run by Hokie Gajan and Morten Andersen's 49-yard field goal.

Dallas settled for two field goals by Septien.

The Saints built the lead to 27-6 in the third period on a 50-yard Andersen field goal and Innebaeker Dennis Winston's 43-yard return of an interception off Dallas quarterback Gary Hogeboom. It was the fourth time this year that a Hogeboom turnover has returned for a touchdown by Cowboy opponents. He only has four touchdown passes.

Hogeboom suffered a bruised right hand on the play and White was inserted into the game.

Tony Dorsett scored on 3-yard run on the first play after Chuck McSwain blocked a New Orleans punt to trim the Saint lead to 27-13 to start the fourth quarter.

After a New Orleans punt, White completed seven passes on an 88-yard drive, climaxed by a 12-yard touchdown toss to Renfro to give the Cowboys comeback hopes with 3:59 to play in the game.

The Cowboys capped their three-touchdown comeback with 2:53 to play when Randy White forced a fumble by Saint quarterback Ken Stabler, pressed into action when Todd injured a knee. The ball came loose at the New Orleans 33-yard line and end Jim Jeffcoat recovered the bouncing ball in the end zone for the game-tying touchdown.

White, who completed 15 of 25 passes for 132 yards, had been the Cowboy starting quarterback since the retirement of Roger Staubach.

College athletic abuses getting out of hand, says NCAA chief

NEW YORK (AP) — Claiming his group is losing ground in trying to check athletic abuses, Walter Byers, executive director of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, has called for a convention of university presidents to explore the possibility of a tougher violations code.

Acknowledging the size of payments to athletes for the first time — payments he estimates to be up to $20,000 or more a year — Byers said in an interview in New York that illegal payments and other improprieties are so widespread that stronger policing measures are needed.

"We're not keeping up with the chase," Byers said in the story in polites and procedures that require us to keep that information confidential."

Byers, interviewed at the NCAA offices at Shawnee Mission, Kan., said: "I have the belief that an overwhelming number of people — the presidents, athletic directors, faculty and coaches — want a better world in intercollegiate athletics. I think they will embrace a new order."

Dr. John Ryan, the president of Indiana University and chairman of the Presidents Commission which was formed to look into problems facing intercollegiate athletics — said Friday the feeling among the commission members is to accept Byers' assessment of the situation.

the Times' Saturday editions. "I've talked with our representatives and people I respect and the problem is much worse than I thought."

Byers would not identify schools or athletes involved in receiving payments. David Berts, the NCAA director of enforcement, was quoted by the Times as saying, "Mr. Byers is bound by the written

What's all the ruckus about Mike Rozier's lousy $2,400?

Another moment of the great con. Question remains, who is coming whom? When Sports Illustrated came out with its revelation that Mike Rozier had taken four payments of $600 each from a bargaining agent, that he already had signed with that bargaining agent before the season started, and a pro contract before his last college bowl game, a shrug is the appropriate reply.

What we'd most like to see anywhere is the "I was a major university football program's major bagman."

Larry Hovey

Then you'd hear some figures that would show your eyebrows a lot more than a total of $2,400.

If the intent of Sports Illustrated was to arouse righteous indignation, it missed its mark badly. One needn't go bad too far back in time to remember the two-part serial that took two years for Ohio State center Jerry Lucas to complete.

The first was an in-depth soul searching why he couldn't turn the entry amateur status of basketball by turning professional. Two years later, he used basically the same amount of space to explain why he decided to turn pro.

The second part needed only one word — money. The first one obviously was similarly motivated.

One would have to suspicion that when the editors of Sports Illustrated first were contacted by Rozier or his literary agent with the offer of "selling all," they thought it not far from $2,400 or leaving University of Nebraska pure.

One would suspect that a price was established before the final manuscript came in. One similarly would surmise that certain parts of it tend toward embellishment — at least through innuendo.

Of course, it must be realized that even a three-year, million-dollar contract-holder needs supplemental income.

But if the ultra-mild confessions of Rozier constitute a major indictment against college football, then it remains surprisingly pure. Much cleaner than was supposed here

Wilson guns down struggling Charger 'D'

By The Associated Press

Los Angeles quarterback Marc Wilson victimized an injury-ravaged San Diego secondary for 332 yards and five touchdowns Sunday, and the Raiders scored four times in a seven-minute span of that third quarter en route to a wild 43-7 National Football League victory over the Chargers in San Diego.

The Raiders withstood a 17-point Chargers' fourth quarter, and San Diego missed a chance to send the game into overtime when Earnest Jackson's 4-yard touchdown run with less than a minute left was nullified by a holding penalty against tight end Eric Slevers. Ted Watts then intercepted a Dan Fouts pass in the end zone to preserve the victory.

The Raiders overcame three first-half turnovers with the 20-point third period barrage, and improved to 7-1 at the midway point of the season. San Diego fell to 4-4, all four losses at the hands of fellow AFC West teams.

Wilson, a fifth-year pro from Brigham Young making his second start while Jim Plunkett recovers from torn abdominal muscles, completed 24 of 37 passes, with one interception. He threw scoring strikes of 51 and 45 yards to Malcolm Barnwell, a 20-yarder tookie and a wild score to Derrick Jensen after a fake dive over the goal line by Allen. Chris Bahr added field goals of 42, 33 and 32 yards.

Los Angeles used three straight turnovers by the Chargers at the outset of the second half—fumbles by Fouts and Lionel James and an interception by Brad Van Pelt, playing his first game as a Raider— to erase a 20-14 San Diego halftime lead.

Wilson victimized a Charger secondary that operated without starting cornerback Danny Walters and safeties Andre Young and Bob Gregor, all of whom are out with ankle injuries. He completed 17 of 24 passes for 219 yards in the first half, but two fumbles by Allen and a missed field goal by Bahr prevented the Raiders from taking charge.

Denver 37, Buffalo 7
In Orchard Park, N.Y., an opportunistic Denver defense set up two John Elway touchdown passes and helped the Broncos to a victory over the winless Buffalo Bills.

But Elway, who threw a 52-yard scoring bomb to Steve Watson and a short, roll-out touchdown to Clarence Kay, suffered a bruised shoulder late in the second quarter and missed the rest of the game.

The Broncos, now 7-1, also scored on a 3-yard touchdown scramble by back-up quarterback Gary Kubiak, a short touchdown pass from Kubiak to Sammy Winder and three field goals by Rich Karlis as the Bills absorbed their eighth straight loss of the season.

Seattle 30, Green Bay 24
In Milwaukee, Dave Krieg fired two touchdown passes and cornerback Terry Jackson intercepted a Lynn Dickey pass in the end zone with 24 seconds left as the Seattle Seahawks whipped Green Bay to hand the Packers their seventh straight setback.

The Packers moved the ball from their own 29 to the Seattle 10, but sacks by John Harris and Mike Fanning pushed Green Bay back yard.

Jackson then intercepted a last-ditch effort by Dickey in the end zone to seal the victory.

Seattle improved its record to 6-2 while the Packers fell to 1-7.

Seattle went ahead for good late in the second quarter after Terry Taylor intercepted a Dickey pass from the Green Bay 15. Four plays later, Eric Lane bolted over right tackle from the 1 to give the Seahawks a 20-17 lead with 55 left in the half.

The Seahawks drove 75 yards in seven plays on their first possession of the second half to go in front. 27-17. Krieg completed the march with a 25-yard pass to Daryl Turner with 11:17 left in the third period.

Murray delivers Detroit comeback win in Minnesota

By The Associated Press

Detroit's Eddie Murray kicked a trio of second-half field goals, including a 41-yard game-winner with 49 seconds left, to lift the resurgent Lions over Minnesota 16-14 Sunday in Minneapolis.

Billy Sims became Detroit's all-time leading ground-gainer and ignited the Lions' comeback, but he sprained his knee and missed the last 21 minutes of the National Football League game.

The Lions, 3-5, trailed 14-0 at halftime, but struck through Sims' 1-yard touchdown dive and field goals by Murray of 44, 41 and 41 yards to hand Minnesota its fourth straight defeat.

Alvin Hall intercepted a last-minute Minnesota pass to tie the victory.

The Vikings, 2-6, not only lost the game, but they also lost their top offensive weapon when quarterback Tommy Kramer left with a shoulder injury. He and Sims watched the Lions' comeback from the sidelines.

Sims became the Lions' leading runner when he ran 18 yards on Detroit's first play of the game.

Sims set the record, previously held by his backup, Dexter Bussey, with 103 yards in 22 carries. Sims now has amassed 5,106 career yards, but needed help walking off the field.

Kramer suffered a shoulder injury on a blind-side sack by Mike Cofer with 4:18 left in the half and was replaced by Archie Manning.

Kramer completed seven of 15 passes for 142 yards, including a 7-yard touchdown pass to Darrin Nelson at the end of first quarter to give Minnesota a 7-0 lead.

But Manning, playing the most since being traded to Minnesota last year, was ineffective.

He marched the Vikings only 14 yards in the third quarter and engineered to first-down drives the entire second half.

Chicago 44, Tampa Bay 9
In Tampa, Fla., Jim McMahon passed for 219 yards and three touchdowns and Walter Payton rushed for a pair of TDs to lead the Chicago Bears to a rout of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and a two-game lead in the NFC Central Division.

Payton, held to less than 100 yards rushing for only the second time this season, finished with 72 yards on 20 carries and failed in his attempt to become the third runner in NFL history to top the century mark in a record seven straight games.

Tampa Bay, 3-5, also limited the NFL's all-time leading rusher to 61 yards on 16 attempts during a 24-14 loss to the 5-3 Bears in the season opener seven weeks ago.

McMahon, slowed this year by a hairline fracture in his throwing hand, completed 12 of 18 passes and tossed a 32-yard touchdown pass to Dennis McKinnon on a flea-flicker play that also involved Payton, who hiked his NFL-leading season rushing total to 947 yards.

McMahon also flipped a 10-yard scoring pass to Willie Gault for a 27-3 third-quarter lead and later threw a 49-yard TD pass to rookie Brad Anderson for a 37-9 advantage with 4:47 left to play.

Chicago rolled to a 20-3 halftime lead on the strength of Payton TD runs of 8 and 3 yards and McKinnon's second touchdown reception of the year.

Payton, who now has 12,572 career rushing yards, also caught three passes for 25 yards and completed a pass to McMahon on a play covering 42 yards.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Pat Ryan hurried three touchdown passes and a suffocating New York defense, led by National Football League sack leader Mark Gastineau, carried the Jets to a 28-7 victory over the Kansas City Chiefs Sunday.

The Jets spoiled Bill Kenney's return as a starter for the Chiefs.

AFC East

Kenney, who passed for over 4,000 yards last season but sat out the first six games this year with a broken thumb, was sacked four times—including twice by Gastineau—and had a pass picked off that set up a Jets' touchdown.

For the game, Kenney completed 12 passes in 25 attempts for 124 yards, with the only score coming on a 7-yard pass to Ken Lacy in the fourth period when the game was out of reach.

A couple of passes were dropped in the end zone by Kenney's receivers on one second-half drive.

The Jets' also got good play from their special teams, especially kicker Chuck Ramsey, who continually kept the Chiefs in poor field position with his booming punts.

Gastineau, who started the day with 12 sacks, not only added to his league-leading total, but also scored a touchdown in the third quarter when he recovered a fumble by Kenney to give the Jets a 21-0 lead. The Jets' defensive end also made several key solo tackles, including a couple of running backs in the backfield.

Ryan, who completed 21 passes in 31 attempts for 229 yards, fumbled a touchdown pass to Bobby Humphrey in the first quarter and another to Mickey Shuler in the second period for a 14-0 halftime lead.

McLemore came up with a key interception to lead the 49ers to a 34-21 National Football League victory Sunday.

Montana hit tight end Russ Francis with an 11-yard touchdown pass on the first series of the game and went 26 yards to Wendell Tyler late in the second quarter. Ray Werschling kicked a 26-yard field goal as the 49ers took a 17-7 halftime lead.

The Oilers, 0-8, made it close in the final minutes with quarterback Warren Moon's 29-yard touchdown pass to tight end Jamie Williams, but Montana came back with an 80-yard bomb to Dwight Clark for his third touchdown pass with five minutes to play.

McLemore's interception came at the 49er three in the second quarter to blunt Houston's biggest momentum of the day and set up Tyler's catch for the halftime lead.

The 49ers, 7-1, stung their first loss of the season last week, struck quickly against the Oilers for a 10-4 lead on Francis' catch and Werschling's field goal that was set up by Montana's 22-yard pass to Carl Monroe.

Houston rallied after Oiler defensive back Steve Brown returned an interception 36 yards to the 49er 39 to set up a one-yard touchdown drive by Larry Moriarty.

CINCINNATI — Jim Breech kicked a 33-yard field goal, his fourth of the game, as time ran out Sunday to give the Cincinnati Bengals a 12-9 National Football League victory over the Cleveland Browns in a battle of bumbling intrastate rivals.

Breech's 4-for-4 kicking overshadowed owed a 60-yard field goal by Cleveland's Steve Cox, the second-longest in NFL history.

Cox, a straight-ahead kicker who handles kickoffs and punts, easily cleared the crossbar with the 60-yard field goal just before the half. It was the longest since Tom Dempsey drilled a 63-yarder for the New Orleans Saints in 1970.

The Bengals, 2-6, used all three of their quarterbacks against the AFC's top-ranked defense, with Turk Schonert coming off the bench to lead them to a pair of fourth-quarter field goals. Both teams wasted opportunities to get into the end zone with turnovers and mistakes.

Schonert hit his first five passes to march Cincinnati to the Browns' 5-yard line, but the drive stalled and Breech made good on a 25-yard kick with 14:14 to play for a 9-6 lead.

Matt Bahr tied it with a 47-yard kick with 2:02 to play, but Schonert quickly drove Cincinnati into range for Breech's winning kick, hitting wide receiver Mike Martin with a 42-yard bomb.

Rookie Boomer Esiason made his third consecutive start for Cincinnati, but was replaced by Ken Anderson in the first quarter. Anderson, playing for the first time in three weeks, was knocked out on a third-quarter scramble and replaced by Esiason, who yielded to Schonert near the end of the third quarter.

PHILADELPHIA — A fourth-period sack led to a fumble by Phil Simms and set up an 11-yard touchdown pass from Philadelphia quarterback Ron Jaworski to wide receiver Mel Hoover, triggering the Eagles to a 24-10 victory over the New York Giants in a National Football League game Sunday.

The victory gave the Eagles a three-game winning streak for the first time since 1961 and boosted their record to 4-4, even with the Giants.

The score was tied 10-10 when Simms fumbled after a sack by Eagles defensive end Greg Brown. Eagles linebacker Jerry Robinson recovered the ball at the New York 8-yard line.

NFC East

Hubie Oliver gained 3 yards, Wilbert Montgomery lost a yard and the Eagles were then penalized 5 yards for delay of game, moving them to the Giants' 11.

Jaworski, throwing out of the shotgun formation, then hit Hoover in the end zone with 6:13 to play.

The Eagles added an insurance touchdown with 1:04 left on a 37-yard pass from Jaworski to Tony Woodruff.

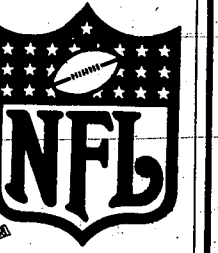

The Eagles had taken a 7-0 lead in the first period on an 83-yard pass play from Jaworski and No. 1 draft choice Kenny Jackson.

Chargers' Winslow is hurt; lost for balance of season

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego tight end Kellen Winslow suffered torn knee ligaments during Sunday's 44-37 loss to the Los Angeles Raiders and will be lost for the season, the National Football League team said.

Winslow, who leads the team with 55 receptions for 663 yards this season, went down following a 12-yard catch in the fourth quarter of the game. He left the field on a stretcher after being hit by Raiders linebacker Jeff Barnes.

The All-Pro, who sat out a week earlier this year because of a contract dispute, was to undergo surgery Sunday night at a San Diego hospital to repair the ligament damage to his right knee.

Wilson guns down struggling Charger 'D'

By The Associated Press

Los Angeles quarterback Marc Wilson victimized an injury-ravaged San Diego secondary for 332 yards and five touchdowns Sunday, and the Raiders scored four times in a seven-minute span of the third quarter en route to a wild 44-37 National Football League victory over the Chargers in San Diego.

The Raiders withstood a 17-point Chargers' fourth quarter, and San Diego missed a chance to send the game into overtime when Earnest Jackson's 4-yard touchdown run with less than a minute left was nullified by a holding penalty against tight end Eric Stevens. Ted Watts then intercepted a Dan Fouts pass in the end zone to preserve the victory.

The Raiders overcame three first-half turnovers with the 20-point third period barrage, and improved to 7-1 at the midway point of the season. San Diego fell to 4-4, all four losses at the hands of fellow AFC West teams.

Wilson, a fifth-year pro from Brigham Young making his second start while Jim Plunkett recovers from torn abdominal muscles, completed 24 of 37 passes, with one interception. He threw scoring strikes of 51 and 45 yards to Malcolm Barnwell, a 20-yarder to Dokie Williams, a 10-yarder to Marcus Allen and a 1-yard score to Derrick Jensen after a fake dive over the goal line by Allen. Chris Bahr added field goals of 42, 33 and 32 yards.

Los Angeles used three straight turnovers by the Chargers at the outset of the second half — fumbles by Fouts and Lionel James and an interception by Brad Van Pelt, playing his first game as a Raider — to erase a 20-14 San Diego halftime lead.

Wilson victimized a Charger secondary that operated without starting cornerback Danny Walters and safeties Andre Young and Bob Gregor, all of whom are out with ankle injuries. He completed 17 of 24 passes for 219 yards in the first half, but two fumbles by Allen and a missed field goal by Bahr prevented the Raiders from taking charge.

Jason ran for two touchdowns and Fouts hit Wes Chandler with a 22-yard pass for another score in the first half. The Chargers got a 29-yard field goal by Benny Ricardo, and touchdown passes from Fouts to Winslow and Bobby Duckworth in the fourth quarter, after the game was out of reach.

Fouts threw for 410 yards and three touchdowns, completing 24 of 45 passes. He was intercepted three times.

Attendance at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium was 57,442, the largest crowd ever to watch a Chargers home game.

Salary caps changing way NBA does business

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
The Associated Press

When a top-quality player comes available, either through the draft, free agency or on the trading block, a National Basketball Association general manager naturally looks at how the pass-fitting point guard or the 7-foot center with the sweeping skyhook might help his club.

He also must check the fit of his "cap."
This season, for the first time, all NBA teams are operating under a salary cap, which generally limits payrolls to an annual total of $3.6 million. The purpose is to help poor teams compete for star players, and it has made life more complex for front office officials who, nonetheless, support it.

"I feel like a bookkeeper, but I'm still for the cap," Kansas City General Manager Joe Axelson said. "I think it will help keep the league going."

"It's something you're always aware of," said Lewis Schaffel, executive vice president of the New Jersey Nets. "It's an added consideration in every player transaction."

Of the 23 NBA teams, 13 said in a recent Associated Press survey that their payrolls were under the $3.6 million ceiling. Eight said they were legally over the cap, while two —

Kansas City and Chicago — said they were right at the limit.

The teams are able to surpass the cap in several ways — through a "grandfather" clause for those already over the top when it took effect and through a key provision in the rules in which a team may spend any amount of money to retain its own free agents.

Five teams — Philadelphia, Los Angeles, New York, New Jersey and Seattle — have been under salary cap rules since the current collective bargaining agreement took effect at the beginning of last season. Payrolls were frozen, but they already were over the $3.6 million level. Since then, Seattle has fallen below the cap through trades and retirement, but the others remain far over Philadelphia by millions of dollars each.

Four other teams — Portland, Boston, Phoenix and Detroit — surpassed the cap limit in the year before the new rules took effect for the entire league. Boston and Detroit, especially, went on spending binges — the Celtics handing huge contracts to Larry Bird, Kevin McHale and Robert Parish, the Pistons to Isiah Thomas, Kelly Tripucka and Bill Laimbeer. Detroit also acquired veteran Dan Roundfield and his big salary.

One widely discussed rule at the time the collective bargaining agreement was signed by the NBA owners and players in April 1983 was one that said teams over the cap could sign first-round draft choices for only $75,000, a paltry sum in a league where the average salary is nearly $300,000.

But only three teams this year were forced to sign their first-round picks for $75,000 in their rookie seasons — Boston, with Michael Young; New Jersey, with Jeff Turner, and Los Angeles, with Earl Jones.

"Since Young was the last player picked in the first round, it's not likely he would have made much more than $75,000, but he and his agent understood the situation," Jan Volk, Boston's general manager, said.

Phoenix, Detroit and Portland signed their first-rounders to big contracts before going over the cap. Trail Blazers General Manager Stu Inman, for instance, made sure he signed rookie center Sam Bowie before turning his attention to free agent guard Jim Paxson, since he knew he could sign Paxson for any amount even if he had gone over the cap with Bowie.

Auburn and Leon Wood of Cal State-Fullerton both were high first-round picks who normally could expect far more than $75,000.

Barkley finally signed for $150,000 his first year after the Sixers made room on their salary roll by waiving Leo Rautins. Wood filed suit claiming the rule was illegal. The 76ers finally decided to ignore veteran free agent Franklin Johnson and, essentially, give his salary to Wood. One of the rules for teams over the cap allows them to elect not to re-sign their own free agents and recover the full amount of the contract by signing a rookie or another player.

The toughest rule for a team over a cap — and one that can have a substantial effect on the standings — says that it can sign replacements for injured players during the season only for the minimum yearly salary of $65,000.

In past years, the 76ers acquired valuable backup players like Mike Bantom and Censon Johnson by picking up their contracts from cash-starved Indiana. Last year, they had to sign minor-leaguers Bruce Kuzenski and Charles Jones to minimum-salary contracts when injuries struck.

"The system limits what you can do, you have to be careful," Philadelphia General Manager Pat Williams said. "That injury rule made it very difficult for us, but the system on the whole is working. But making deals is a lot tougher."

At least one big trade apparently was partly motivated by cap considerations.

The Milwaukee Bucks sent high-salaried veterans Marques Johnson and Junior Bridgeman to the Los Angeles Clippers for young forward Terry Cummings.

"We were very close to the cap and now we are under it," Bucks vice president John Steinmiller said. "We now have more flexibility in the future to deal with the cap."

"We've always been a long-term planning team, and the salary cap makes that more important than ever."
Chicago was far below the cap at the end of the 1983-84 season. Then it signed first-round draft pick Michael Jordan to a seven-year contract worth an estimated $4 million, and from now on, it will effect its move since we are very close to the $3.6 million," Bulls General Manager Rod Thorn said.

"The salary cap will have a profound effect on teams once they get close to the cap," Thorn continued. "It makes it tough to sign other team's free agents."
Axelson said that since the Kings are so close to the cap, "or maybe a little over," he was not able to pursue two free agents he wanted.

He predicted that "great players will not be hurt" by the cap system because teams will be willing to spend whatever is necessary to keep them when they become free agents.
"The fringe and average players will be hurt a little," Axelson said, "if you can call an average salary of $300,000 hurting."

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Larry Nelson turned his year around at least part of the way around — with a narrow victory in his last start of the season.

It changed a poor season into what Nelson called "a much better year."

"There had been a slow deterioration in my game for three years. It hit rock bottom in 1984. I've changed some things. I'm sure I'm on the right track. I'm very excited about 1985," Nelson said after his 2-under-par 70 in the final round had enabled him to hold off Hubert Green for a one-shot triumph in the Walt Disney World Golf Classic.

This one did not come easily, he said.

"It was a long, tough, hard day. Part of it is that I haven't been there (in position to win) in so long."
"I had a 2-shot lead most of the day, and then Hubert made it exciting. I just kind of had to hold on to get it finished," Nelson said.

Nelson, whose last previous victory had come in the 1983 U.S. Open, scored his seventh career victory with a spectacular 268 total for 72 holes. That's 22 under par — the greatest subpar total of the season — and broke Jack Nicklaus' tournament scoring record set in 1972.

The victory was worth $72,000 from the total purse of $400,000 and sent Nelson's total for the year to $154,689. It also made Nelson something of a prophet.

Coming into the event Nelson said this season, in which he had been afflicted by a variety of injuries and ailments, had been his worst since 1978. But, he added, "I said all along I wouldn't say it was a bad season until after Walt Disney."

Nelson started the hot, humid day with a 2-stroke advantage and held that margin most of the way. But a series of 2-shot turn-arounds — three of them over the last five holes — made it close. On the 14th, Nelson made bogey from the water and Green holed a 12-foot birdie putt, lifting Hubert into a tie for the lead. On 15th, but there was still another

2-shot swing on the 17th, Nelson making bogey from a bunker and Green dropping an 8-foot birdie putt.

That cut the lead to one, but Nelson won it when both made routine pars on the final hole.

Briton sets world record in marathon

CHICAGO (AP) — Steve Jones, a Royal Air Force corporal from Great Britain, became the fastest marathoner in history Sunday as he blazed through the wet, windy conditions to capture the America's Marathon — Chicago in 2 hours, 8 minutes, 5 seconds.

That broke the previous best time of 2:08.13 set by Alberto Salazar in New York City in 1981.

Rosa Mota of Portugal ran away with the women's race in 2:26.01 as she won her second consecutive Chicago marathon.

Jones, 29, of Barry, Wales, topped favored Olympic gold medalist Carlos Lopes of Portugal, who finished in 2:09.06, and Rob de Castella of Australia, who finished in 2:09.09.

A total of 10,112 runners started the race in wet, windy weather in downtown Chicago.
