Chernenko eases arms talk stance

By R. GREGORY NOKES The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev was quoted Friday as saying the top priority in U.S.-Soviet relations during President Reagan's second term should be to limit and reduce nuclear weapons, and he pledged "to work vigorously" to attain those aims.

Comments to NBC News, Chernenko didn't repeat some of the pre-conditions for arms control talks the Soviets have set previously, nor did he insist on any particular negotiating approach.

He said in recent statements by the Reagan administration concerning a desire for improved relations with Moscow "do not remain just words," the two superpowers could "start moving toward more normal relations between our two countries and toward a more secure world."

But Chernenko also said he doesn't think "conditions now are ripe" for a summit meeting between him and Reagan for the next six months at least.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Friday that Chernenko's emphasis on the need to address arms control issues "is a top priority in U.S.-Soviet relations was a positive statement."

"I think that we are seeing results; we are seeing progress," Shultz said in an interview with NBC News. He said it is time for Moscow and Washington to begin "the private processes of diplomacy" aimed at achieving "real results" in super-power relations.

Informed officials told The Associated Press separately Friday that Shultz may go to Moscow sometime in January for a meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. One official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said preliminary contacts have already been made between Moscow and Washington about such a meeting, although it hasn't yet been definitely arranged.

Such a meeting would be seen as a return visit for Gromyko's visit to Washington in late September and his talks with Shultz and Reagan at which U.S. proposals for improved relations were discussed — with special focus on ways of resuming arms control negotiations.

Chernenko provided written comments to the press.

Baby Fae in her Loma Linda hospital crib after receiving a baboon's heart on Oct. 26

Despite death of Baby Fae, surgeon ready to try again

By LEE SIEGEL The Associated Press

LOMA LINDA, Calif. — The doctor who replaced Baby Fae's malformed heart with a baboon's said Friday that despite her death after 21 days the operation "opened up new vistas for all children" and he plans to "try it again."

Speaking to reporters in a quavering voice, Dr. Leonard L. Bailey said the infant's parents were with their daughter when she died at 10 p.m. MST Thursday.

"The last thing the mom said to me was to carry this on — to not let this experience be wasted," Bailey said. The Baby Fae's and her parents are the real pioneers in this quest to enrich our quality of life," he said. "Today we grieve the loss of this patient's life... her unique place in our memories will derive from what she and her parents have done to give rise to a ray of hope for the babies to come."

The brown-haired, month-old girl, whose real name has not been disclosed, died at Loma Linda University Medical Center after undergoing kidney failure, hospital officials said.

She survived longer than anybody else with an animal heart and had lived longer with the simian heart than with her own. The operation raised profound ethical questions and generated cries of "ghoulish tinkering" from animal rights groups, but Bailey called it a "victory."

"I plan to try it again, by and by," Bailey said. "We will attempt to learn from Baby Fae. We've already done so to a great degree."

Bailey said that while the exact cause of death had not been determined, he did not believe the baboon heart was at fault. He said the baby lost "cardio function in the last two hours of her existence — not from a rejection but from a culmination of events surrounding rejection."

"It's probably a combination of things," Bailey said, noting that cytolysin, the anti-rejection drug used to suppress the baby's immune system, "has been touted as a drug that can kill kidneys. That isn't entirely correct, of course. There are a host of other things."

A preliminary autopsy was performed with the parents' encouragement, he said.

"I've seen the heart. The heart muscle is inflamed, which confirms the rejection," Bailey said. "She clearly had a rejection episode... Here was no more than moderately a problem."

Baby Fae received the heart Oct. 26 at the Seventh-Day Adventist university. She started showing signs of rejection last weekend, and while she was put back on a respirator, hospital officials said as late as Thursday morning that her condition was improving.

However, the infant's kidney function deteriorated later Thursday, and at around 7 p.m. she required peritoneal dialysis, hospital officials said.

"Her parents were with her as much as possible during this period and are receiving support from chaplains and the physicians," spokesman Ed Wines said.

Discovery lands safely

Salvage mission opens space door

By PAUL RECER The Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — The spectacular success of the first satellite salvage mission could profoundly affect space travel because "psychological boost" to satellite insurance companies and the new ideas it gives design engineers.

By proving that satellites can be brought back to Earth for repairs, the Discovery crew has reduced the risks of putting machines into orbit.

The shuttle and its crew landed in Florida Saturday morning after a successful mission, bringing back the two malfunctioning satellites.

Merrett, head of an insurance underwriting organization that paid NASA to attempt to salvage the Palapa B2 and Westar 6 communications satellites, said the mission's success will have a stunning effect on satellite insurance rates.

"The psychological boost to the insurance industry will be very considerable," said Merrett. Rates will go up, because satellite insurers have had a disastrous year, but by not as much as some feared now that there is a demonstrated ability to recover malfunctioning machines from orbit.

Palapa and Westar cost the industry about $180 million when they were sent into useless orbits by misfiring rocket engines after they were taken into space aboard a shuttle. Another communications satellite was lost and others have malfunctioned.

Because of the losses, some in the industry had predicted that insurance rates would double or triple for later satellites.

Merrett refused to put a figure what new rates will be, but he did say that the mission's success would have an immediate beneficial effect.

"The industry is absolutely over the moon about it," he said.

Merrett said the Palapa will be sold for $30 million to $40 million, and the Westar, which experienced some damage to batteries while in orbit, for about $30 million.

"The sales are to be completed very shortly," he said. "We would expect to recover about $50 million."

The method used in the salvage might also have a dramatic effect on the design and cost of future space stations.

Engineers at the Johnson Space Center were stunned at the ability of spacemen Joe Allen and Dale Gardner to hold and maneuver the 1,200-pound satellites, cumbersome in spite of the weightlessness of orbit.

Allen, by himself, held each of the satellites steady above the shuttle's cargo bay for more than 30 minutes.

Dole puts priority on deficit

Los Angeles Times

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, warned Friday that the Reagan administration should not promote proposals for tax reform and tax simplification until Congress first works on cutting the federal budget deficit.

"There are a lot of people who believe in tax simplification, but we ought to know what it is before we buy it, whether it's Ronald Reagan's program or somebody else's program," Dole told the annual meeting of the National Gas Supply Association.

"Before we spend all the political capital on tax simplification, we'd better concern ourselves with the deficit," he said.

Dole, whose committee handles all tax legislation, has been irritated by what he regards as excessive White House emphasis on politically attractive changes in the tax code. "It's one thing to discuss it with non-voting staff people at the White House and another thing to pass it in the Congress," he said.

Dole's objections are significant not only because he runs the Finance Committee but because he is one of the leading candidates for the job of majority leader in the Senate. And, if he wins the leadership post later this month, he would become the man in charge of moving President Reagan's entire legislative agenda through the Senate.

Dole said any effort to simplify the tax code would consume at least six months of Congress' working time in 1985.

No obstacles to Hansen's latest effort

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rep. George Hansen — a man who has been tripped up repeatedly in his political career by laws requiring disclosure of personal and campaign finances — may be free of those obstacles in his latest fund-raising effort.

The seven-term incumbent, who was convicted in April of four felony counts of filing false financial disclosure forms with Congress, is reportedly stamping the state seeking donations to pay for a recount of the votes cast in his 83-votes defeat to Democrat Richard Stalling. And he has established — independent of his campaign committee — and with himself as chairman — the Hansen Recount Committee to collect the tendered donations.

Lee Caldwell, Hansen's accountant and the treasurer of the recount committee, says that "there are no" contributions and no disclosure requirements" for a committee operating independently of a candidate's campaign committee.

Sharon Snyder, a public information officer for the Federal Election Commission, confirms Caldwell's contention.

However, she says, while there are

BOISE — Five southern Idaho men comprise a committee that will raise money to fund an election recount, if Republican Congressman George Hansen requests one.

Hansen, trailing Democrat Richard Stallings by 80 to 100 votes in an unofficial tally, filed suit he will wait until the state Board of Canvassers acts on the election results before deciding whether to request a recount. The board will meet on Wednesday.

no donation limits and no reporting requirements, Hansen will still be precluded from obtaining donations from sources which are prohibited from contributing to congressional campaigns, namely, corporations, labor unions, national banks, government contractors and others.

If Snyder and Caldwell are correct about the lack of disclosure requirements, the activities of the recount committee would appear to fall somewhere between the disclosure provisions of the Ethics in Governmental information and also precludes members from soliciting donations for "unrestricted personal use."

Hansen's latest fund-raising appeal appears to be for other than such personal use. A passage in the "Ethics Manual for Members and Employees of the U.S. House of Representatives," states that the House ethics committee "has given informal opinions... that money raised through fundraisers may be used as a member's 'legal defense fund' to pay legal expenses arising out of... one's campaign and election."

However, the manual also states that funds raised for that purpose "shall be considered 'campaign related'" and "are under all the restrictions and prohibitions of other campaign contributions, including... reporting requirements and contribution limitations."

"If Hansen's recount effort proves unsuccessful, the two-deposed representative will be required to file his last personal, financial disclosure form under the ethics act next spring. However, it may not be forthcoming, because Hansen has failed to file his last two ethics act disclosure forms, citing potential complications to his ongoing felony trial and appeal as the reason.

Disclosure of almost all of the fund-raising and income-earning activities of a congressional member or candidate. The election act requires members and candidates to disclose the income and expenditures of their campaign committees. The ethics act requires them to disclose personal fi-

'Tails' call costs Kansas sheriff job

The Associated Press

TOPEKA, Kan. — Sheriff Thomas M. Lambeth called "heads" Friday, but the quarter came up tails.

As a result, Lambeth won't be sheriff much longer.

Starting in January, Daniel Levens — who led Lambeth in the Nov. 6 election — will take over as top lawman in Hamilton County in sparsely populated southwestern Kansas.

"I'm still in shock right now, probably too shocked to be excited," Levens said by telephone Tuesday. "I've been in a quarter landed falling up and carried him to victory. I'm sure it will take a while to get used to."

Levens, a Republican, initially appeared to have little by three-to-one margin in the Democratic incumbent in the Nov. 6 general election. But he lost to a Republican, which showed each county pulled 700 votes in the county of 2,514 residents, bordering Colorado.

"That forced the matter to the Hamilton County Commission, in accordance with state law, which calls for a lottery of some sort on such occasions. Commissioner John L. Helfrich pulled a quarter from his pocket Friday and tossed it into the air to settle the issue.

It was out in the General Election, Helfrich has flipped pocket change to decide an election. In August, he flipped a quarter to decide the winner of the Democratic primary for county treasurer. Betty J. Burch won that coin toss, but Helfrich was out in the General Election, as she lost to Republican Lucille States — without a tie or a recount.

County Attorney Rob Gale said "just two other" races in the county have ended in the votes and coin toss. "The last time a 'coin toss' race by a coin toss was about 12 years ago, and the grandfather of Deputy Sheriff Terry Hansen lost a sheriff's race the same way some 25 years ago."

Levens said he will be sheriff for 25 years.

IPUC orders hookup refunds

BOISE (AP) — Responding to an Idaho Supreme Court opinion, the Federal Public Utilities Commission wants two power companies to refund hookup fees customers paid as part of a conservation program the PUC ordered.

Commissioners will seek comment through Nov. 26 on their proposal affecting Idaho Power Co. and Washington Electric Power Co. If no protests are received, the refund of 60-per-cent hookup fees will be ordered. The fees were collected from customers who chose electric space heating over natural gas. The Supreme Court said the fees, imposed under a PUC-endorsed conservation plan, were unjust.

Foreign aid may be increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz and National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane are discussing a $7 billion to $8 billion increase in U.S. foreign aid next year, the Washington Post reported in Saturday editions.

The newspaper said that the additional military and economic assistance would be targeted on such areas as the Middle East, Egypt and Israel, the Caribbean, Latin America and other nations such as South Korea and Turkey. The United States is spending $14.4 billion on foreign aid for the fiscal year which began Oct. 1.

Jet blows tires, aborts takeoff

HONOLULU (AP) — A United Airlines 747 bound for Los Angeles aborted takeoff here Friday when two of its tires blew out and a fuel tank ruptured, officials said. At least 25 people were injured evacuating the plane.

The rupture occurred the tires blew out, causing a piece of metal to pierce a fuel access valve, said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman George Hawley.

The plane came to a stop on the runway at Honolulu International Airport, and passengers were evacuated by emergency slides, said Eileen Golab, spokeswoman for United Airlines in Chicago. Most of the injuries were reported to be minor, and many involved skin burns and sprains sustained during the evacuation.

Svetlana interviewed on TV

MOSCOW — The daughter of Josef Stalin said Friday that she returned to the Soviet Union so she could be closer to her family and to end the personal torment that stemmed from her defection to the United States in 1967. Svetlana Alliluyeva, 56, once labeled a traitor and as morally unstable by Soviet leaders, gave a quiet but emotional account of her "human decision" to come back to Moscow.

She said she was never really free for a single day of the 17 years she spent in the West and pictured herself as a homebody without any concern for East-West political issues.

Thousands protest Marcos rule

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An estimated 10,000 people marched through the streets of the capital Friday to the heavily guarded presidential palace, where they burned effigies of President Ferdinand E. Marcos and Uncle Sam. Many of the protesters were leftist students and workers who waved red flags and shouted slogans against Marcos and the United States. They carried a huge streamer protesting "interference of the imperialist United States."

Police had said they would prevent the march, but retreated at dusk and allowed a 90-minute rally at the foot of a bridge leading to the palace.

Craig unwilling to hike taxes

BOISE (AP) — Congressman Larry Craig says he's not willing to vote for a tax increase, even if it becomes obvious that's the only way to reach a compromise with House Democrats on reduction of the enormous federal budget deficit.

The Idaho Republican said in an interview Friday that he still believes the government's budget problems are the result of too much spending, and sees no need to increase revenues through more taxation. "If we were to freeze budget growth in an equitable manner, there would be no reason to argue revenue increases," he said.

Craig's comments came just days after Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, told an Elks meeting in Boise that he would consider voting for a tax increase if convinced it's the only way reach a compromise on reduction of the deficit.

Comparable pay for women called 'looney' idea by panel's chairman

By KAREN TUMULTY The Los Angeles Times

the subject last June.

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission on Friday called the concept of "comparable worth" a controversial proposal aimed at reducing the gap between women's and men's earnings, "the loneliest idea since Louie Lutes came on the screen."

At a news conference, commission Chairman Clarence M. Pendleton and staff director Linda Chavez expressed only their personal opposition to the idea. But they said they hope the commission itself — an advisory body with no regulatory powers — will take an official stand on comparable worth next year.

Pendleton and Chavez also released 16 scholarly papers, which argued both sides of the issue and were presented at a commission consultation on

The idea of comparable worth had been advanced by those who believe that discrimination is the reason why occupations dominated by women almost always pay less than those which most workers are men. They insist that it is not fair that nurses, for example, are paid less than house painters; or that teachers do not earn as much as carpenters.

The only way to close the gap, they say, is to base earnings on the experience and working conditions required by individual jobs — rather than what the market is willing to pay for them.

However, Chavez said comparable worth would create chaos in the job market and "decrease financial incentives for women to seek higher-paying jobs traditionally held by men."

"The whole thrust of the women's movement for the last 20 years has been to open doors for women so they can go into these non-traditional jobs," she said, adding that the idea of comparable worth is "one more step against the grain of what the women's movement stood for, for 20 years."

President Reagan has expressed reservations about the concept, as have other administration officials, but it is picking up political steam: Comparable worth systems are being considered by dozens of state and local governments, and several have already put them into practice. Moreover, a federal judge last year ordered Washington state to establish a comparable worth system that the state predicts will cost it up to $1 billion in back-pay and salary adjustments.

The issue also is central to the ongoing strike by 1,600 Yale University clerical and technical workers.

Honduran faces smuggling charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Honduran exile businessman, already charged with trying to overthrow the government of his homeland, was indicted Friday on charges of running a marijuana smuggling ring.

Attorney General William French Smith said the indictment was returned in U.S. District Court in New Orleans against Pat J. Sikafy, 42, a Honduran citizen who runs a seafood business in Miami.

The grand jury said Sikafy and others smuggled more than a ton of marijuana into the United States and plotted to smuggle it even more.

Sikafy was charged with engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise and with 10 other counts relating to conspiracy, possession or importation of marijuana.

On Nov. 1, Sikafy and eight others, including a Honduran general were charged by the FBI with plotting to assassinate Honduran president Francisco Robles and overthrow his government in a coup allegedly to be financed with illegal drug profits.

Sikafy, who has since been charged in Honduras with the same alleged scheme, has been held without bond in Miami until his trial there on charges under the Racketeer-Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act.

of narcotics importation, possession and distribution; transportation of explosives; and interstate travel in the commission of murder-for-hire.

When he was arrested, Sikafy was said by the FBI to have lost $7 million during his cement business in Honduras was nationalized by the government.

The FBI said it discovered that plot with the help of an informant and an undercover agent who was offered $300,000 to assemble a hit team — cost the worth $10.3 million was seized in south Florida shortly after it was smuggled in, the FBI said.

On Friday, the New Orleans grand jury charged Sikafy in the marijuana case under the federal law aimed at drug trafficking kingpins, which carries a maximum penalty of life in prison without parole.

U.S. Attorney John Volz of New Orleans said the other defendants included: Manuel Binker, 48, of Miami; Miguel Canabuit, 29, of Coral Gables, Fla.; Curtis Saucer, 21, of Houma, La.; Stephen Darie, 57, of Honduras; Michael Suriano and Hector Perez.

Binker was also charged in the Miami plot earlier this month. All of these defendants were charged with conspiracy to import marijuana and to possess marijuana with intent to distribute.

Soviet

Continued from Page 1 answers to questions submitted by Marvin Kalb of NBC News. The written answers were returned to Kalb on Friday and aired on the network's evening news program.

The Soviet leader suggested Moscow is not now interested in the kind of consultations Reagan has proposed aimed at establishing overall goals in U.S.-Soviet relations. "It is this — the limitation and reduction of arms, and above all nuclear arms, prevention of the spread of the arms race into areas which have been free of that race — so far that the USSR and the U.S. should reach agreement on in the first place," he said.

"For our part we are prepared to work — and to work vigorously — toward that end," he said. Chernenko noted that he had outlined the reasons in an interview with the Washington Post various ways of beginning negotiations, such as a ban on militarization of outer space, a nuclear weapons freeze and ratification of an agreement to ban nuclear weapons tests.

However, he voiced an even more flexible position than he did in the Post interview, saying, "The list of possible steps aimed at strengthening stability and security can, certainly, be made longer."

Future

Gerald Griffin, director of the Johnson Space Center where the manned space station is being designed, said the astronaut's ability to handle such large masses "is a significant capability" for engineers to consider.

"It is another point to consider which we didn't have before when we think about how to assemble a space station," said Griffin. "You might not after all need a highly tuned maneuvering system."

"None of us had seriously considered it (moving large masses by hand) until we saw little Joe (Allen, who is 5-foot-6) out there holding those satellites," Griffin added.

If engineers determine that space assembly systems can rely more heavily upon the ability of spacewalking astronauts, then the cost of putting large structures together in orbit could be substantially reduced.

It is much cheaper to train astronauts to move large masses than it is to design, build, deliver, maintain and operate a highly complex piece of machinery to do the same job.

Officials reviewing Medicare under order to cut spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal policymakers, under orders from President Reagan to suggest further cuts in domestic spending, were reported Friday to be reviewing a series of Medicare changes, some of which have been rejected or ignored by Congress in the past four years.

Some of the proposals under consideration would raise out-of-pocket costs to beneficiaries of the federal health care plan for the elderly, said government sources familiar with the discussions.

None of the proposed changes have been approved for inclusion in Reagan's fiscal 1988 budget plan to be submitted to Congress early next year.

The options under scrutiny include a plan for Medicare coverage of catastrophic illnesses — those lasting longer than 60 days — which would be financed by beneficiary copayments or through collection of a monthly premium from beneficiaries.

Among other ideas under discussion is one that would require workers to count employer-paid health insurance premiums as income and pay taxes on them if they exceed a certain amount.

Others would reduce the federal tax deduction for medical expenses, and raise the premium collected to cover Medicare doctors' bills.

While House policy advisers also are considering again giving Medicare beneficiaries the option of buying private insurance with vouchers issued by the program instead of sticking with traditional Medicare coverage.

The president instructed his Cabinet at a meeting Thursday to find ways to reduce federal spending without raising taxes, interfering with the defense buildup or touching Social Security. Estimates are that the budget deficit this year will exceed $200 billion.

General praises troops in Vietnam

NEW YORK (AP) — Retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland gave an emotional defense Friday of the troops under his command during the Vietnam War, saying they did a "great job" that the media failed to appreciate.

Testifying for a second day in U.S. District Court in Manhattan in his $120 million libel suit against CBS, Westmoreland made a long, impassioned statement to the jurors who will decide whether the network was correct in charging that he suppressed unfavorable information about enemy troop strength.

The trial is not expected to go to the jury until as late as February.

The main issue has boiled down to whether there was any impropriety in Westmoreland's reluctance to include more than 100,000 Communist "irregulars" in estimates of the enemy strength in late 1967.

A few months later the Communists launched their powerful Tet offensive, and the network charged in a documentary on "CBS Reports" that American leaders relying on Westmoreland's information were unprepared for the force of the attack.

Westmoreland's lawyer, Dan M. Burt, set the stage for the general's discourse with a question about a document that showed Pentagon concern about how the press would portray news of an enemy that was larger than first believed.

"Sure we were sensitive to press reactions," Westmoreland said. "I felt an obligation that my troops be given the credit they deserved; and to come out publicly with a statement that we were fighting 100,000 more people than we said we were would have been a distortion."

...would have been terribly detrimental to the morale of my troops. They would say, 'What the hell have we been doing? We were doing a great job; now we find out the enemy's increased.'"

Westmoreland insisted that the irregulars were a lightly armed "home guard" who posed no military threat. "These were not people we were trying to fight," he said. "They were basically civilians."

The general also testified that he forwarded information about rising enemy strength to his superiors after first requiring his staff "to separate the fighters from the non-fighters."

The 1982 CBS documentary, "The Unaccounted Enemy: A Vietnam Conspiracy," cited interviews with former military and CIA officials who said Westmoreland's staff insisted on keeping estimates of enemy strength at less than 300,000, when the best evidence pointed to a figure of more than 500,000.

Westmoreland has portrayed the issue as a technical dispute among experts and has denied any effort to suppress information.

The four-star general, who commanded U.S. forces in Vietnam from 1964 to 1968, detailed a series of meetings in May 1967 in which his staff outlined a growing belief that American intelligence was underestimating the number of enemy "irregulars."

Westmoreland said the exchange began when his intelligence chief, Gen. Joseph M. Christian, came to him one night with a draft of a cable he intended to send to "higher headquarters" estimating that there were 185,300 irregulars, compared with the figure of 100,000 then in use.

Westmoreland said he told Christian that the higher echelons would "cause a political problem" and asked for a briefing on the subject.

But he said he never ordered Christian to reduce the figures.

"You're sure?" asked his attorney, Dan M. Burt.

"I'm positive," Westmoreland replied.

Within the next two weeks, Christian's staff gave him two briefings detailing the intelligence information that supported the higher figure, Westmoreland said.

He said he objected at first to the decision to continue counting all irregulars as one group. That category, he said, included the well-armed guerrillas who then constituted the main opposition to the U.S. forces, as well as lightly armed "self-defense" and "secret self-defense" units.

Coffee baron faces charges

MIAMI (AP) — Colombian coffee baron Alberto Duque surrendered Friday to face a 95-count indictment that accused him and 11 others of a $105 million bank fraud — said to be the largest in U.S. history.

After five hours in custody, he was released on a $1 million personal surety bond set by U.S. Magistrate Charlene Sorrentino. Over government protests, she said the 33-year-old millionaire could travel abroad on business if he first notified federal authorities.

Five of the co-defendants named in the 37-page indictment made public Thursday surrendered to the FBI

Friday, and more were expected, officials said.

The charges included "violations of the conspiracy laws, mail fraud, wire fraud, misapplication of bank funds, negotiating false bills of lading, and filing false statements with banks insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation," said U.S. Attorney Stanley Marcus.

The indictment charged that between November 1981 and May 1983 Duque, his brother and the others inflated coffee and fruit-juice inventories beyond their actual value and forged bills of lading to indicate shipments of produce were en route in order to secure loans from banks.

Nimitz out for training

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. naval presence in the Caribbean will grow this weekend with the arrival of the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Nimitz, a Defense Department official said Friday.

"While the ship has its air wing on board, this has nothing to do with Central America," the source said. "It's heading toward Puerto Rico and will be on training."

The official said such training cruises normally last about 10 days.

The Nimitz will be cruising in the same general area as 25 other ships already participating in a separate training exercise. The Pentagon official said the Nimitz would not be joining those vessels.

Ethical questions persist in the wake of Baby Fae's death

By The Associated Press

The death of Baby Fae three weeks after a baboon's heart was implanted in her chest is not likely to end debate over using animal organs in an attempt to save human lives.

While some animal rights activists decried sacrificing a healthy baboon to "ghoulish tinkering," doctors raised ethical questions about the Oct. 26 operation, the first of its kind on an infant.

The longest-lived previous patient in such a transplant operation was a man who survived for 3½ days.

"You've got to remember that this was an infant and all the others were adults," said heart expert Dr. Michael DeBakey. "In an infant the immune mechanism is much less well developed so it is not too surprising that it lasted this long. I don't think in an adult it would have lasted that long."

DeBakey, who 21 years ago implanted the first mechanism to assist a heart in pumping, said Friday in New York that he thought there was a possibility of using a baboon heart "as a temporary measure to extend the life of the individual until a human transplant can be found, but that's about it."

Asked what he would say to those who criticize the taking of an animal life to obtain an organ for transplant, DeBakey said, "It's a matter of values."

"It depends on whether you put a higher value on a human life," he said. "I don't think one should simply destroy animals for trivial reasons, but when it may save the life of a human being, I would put a higher value on the life of a human being."

Doctors at Loma Linda University Medical Center, where the operation on Baby Fae was performed, and others in the medical community had defended the procedure as a necessary step to save the infant's life. Some doctors questioned that.

"I think that they did not make any effort to get a human infant heart because they were set on doing a baboon," said Dr. Paul I. Terasaki, professor of surgery at UCLA and director of the California Regional Organ Procurement Agency.

Dr. Leonard Bailey, who led Baby Fae's transplant team, said the focus of years of lab research had been on xenotransplantation, the science of developing animal hearts that are compatible in cell and tissue structure with the recipient.

"Science must develop hand-in-hand with ethics," Bailey said in an interview with the American Medical Association Publication released Thursday.

"From the start of this formal project 14 months ago, we have clearly insisted upon a therapeutic intent. This is not simply experimentation for experimentation. For the first time, it appears possible to do a xenograft not by random chance, but with science beforehand."

"I suppose we could have used a human heart that was outlized and that was not tissue-matched, and that would have pacified some people, but it would have been poor science," he added.

Dr. Robert J. Levine, a Yale University medical ethics expert, said the chances of finding compatible human hearts for infants born with congenitally deformed hearts "has a very low likelihood."

"Most heart donors are accident victims, and most infants don't drive cars," Levine said.

"Somewhere along the line, somebody has to take the leap," said Dr. Jack Provnosha, director of Loma Linda's Center for Christian Bioethics.

"I think it is a very significant accomplishment," said Dr. Adrian Kantrovitz, who performed the first U.S. heart operation, on an infant. "I must say in all honesty that I didn't expect this baby to live this long."

But he said in an interview Friday on the "CBS Morning News" that he wouldn't try an animal-to-human transplant.

"I think there are human infant hearts available," he said, noting that about 1,000 babies are born without brains each year.

Court turns down Kelly's appeal on entrapment grounds in Abscam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Richard Kelly's 1981 conviction in the FBI's Abscam operation was upheld Friday by a federal appeals court, which ruled that Kelly "knew what he was getting into" when he accepted a bribe from a government agent posing as an agent for two Arab sheiks.

In a 21-page opinion written by District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell, a three-member panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals said Kelly's appeal on the grounds of entrapment is without merit.

"We are persuaded there is ample evidence, much of it out of Kelly's own mouth, to support a finding beyond a reasonable doubt that he was predisposed to commit the three crimes of which he was convicted," the appellate court panel said. "The evidence of Kelly's predisposition is copious."

'Killer' sentenced

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Carpenter, 54, convicted of murdering two women in a redwood forest and charged with five other killings in the so-called Tralalde slayings was sentenced Friday to die in the gas chamber.

"I must conclude with the prosecution that if ever there was a case for the death penalty, this is that case," Superior Court Judge Dion Morrow said in passing sentence.

The court said a videotape of a meeting between the former congressman and the FBI undercover agents "contradicts Kelly's portrait of repeated and insistent government importunings wearing down his reluctance. The evidence of his reluctance is largely vaporous."

Kelly and two others were convicted on Jan. 26, 1981, on three counts of accepting a $25,000 bribe from an FBI agent posing as an aide to two Arab sheiks. Kelly, who was videotaped accepting the money, testified that he took the payoff only to conduct his own investigation of men he said he regarded as shady characters.

Duarte says peace talk may be delayed

PRESIDENT DUARTE
Moves back peace talks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Peace talks between the government and leftist guerrillas will continue, but the next round may be delayed from late November to a date in December, President Jose Napoleon Duarte said Friday.

Duarte and guerrilla leaders agreed to meet again in late November after they held their first meeting in the northern city of La Palma on Oct. 15.

The president told reporters Friday: "If they (the talks) are a little earlier, a little later, it does not matter. It depends on the conditions. When the moment comes, I will say when, where and who is going to go to the talks."

"I can assure you there will be a dialogue. This is a political issue, not an arbitrary one," he said.

A ranking Roman Catholic church official, who did not want to be identified because of security reasons, said the government failed to respond to a proposed date and place for the second round of talks.

The official said the archbishop of San Salvador, Monsignor Arturo Rivera y Damas, brought the proposal to Duarte when he returned Nov. 5 from a trip to the United States. Church officials have been serving as "mediators between the government and guerrillas."

The rebels' clandestine Radio Venceremos said Friday that guerrilla leaders had been waiting for a response, but received none. The church official said the radio report was true and attributed the lack of government response to "rightist criticism of the peace talks."

"We are still awaiting a response to the proposal," the guerrilla radio said. "The government's silence makes us believe the La Palma peace initiative responded to the electoral needs of Mr. Ronald Reagan, and not to a real decision to seek negotiations as the solution to the crisis."

The rebels' statement was made in a special communiqué signed by the high command of the rebels' military umbrella group, the Farabundo Martí

National Liberation Front, and its political arm, the Democratic Revolutionary Front, the radio station said.

Duarte said the rebels' charge of government foot-dragging "shows you that they are looking for advantages. I'm not trying to get an advantage. I'm looking for peace. It does not interest me to get into a polemic over whether (what Venceremos said) is true or untrue. The important thing is that the Salvadoran people want peace."

In another development Friday, Radio Venceremos said Honduran troops clashed this week with guerrillas on Salvadoran soil. The Salvadoran government denied the claim.

The radio report also said El Salvador and Honduras were preparing a joint attack on rebel strongholds in the northeastern corner of the country near the Honduran border.

It reported that a company of Honduran soldiers penetrated three miles into El Salvador on Wednesday.

Libyan troops reported still in Chad

PARIS (AP) — President Francois Mitterrand confirmed Friday that Libyan troops remain in Chad despite a joint announcement last week that both France and Libya had withdrawn all their troops from the African nation.

The French president, under mounting pressure to explain U.S. and Chadian reports indicating a continued Libyan presence in Chad, conceded "two to three battalions" of Libyan soldiers remain in Chad.

He stressed, however, that the evacuation "was continuing" and said he and Libyan leader Muammar Khadafy had firmly agreed that not a single French or Libyan soldier should stay in the former French colony.

Leftist guerrillas willing to consider cease-fire, participation in election

WASHINGTON (AP) — Salvadoran rebel leader Guillermo Ungo said Friday his group is willing to consider a unilateral cease fire and some form of participation in upcoming elections as part of a process he hopes will lead to a political settlement with the U.S.-backed government.

Ungo said the leftist rebels would agree to a cease-fire if certain conditions are agreed to by the Salvadoran Army. He did not specify the conditions.

Ungo, accompanied by three colleagues, spoke to a news conference sponsored by Foreign Policy magazine.

Hector Oguel, one of Ungo's colleagues, declined to say whether the rebels will formally set forth a cease-fire proposal at the next round of talks between the government and the insurgents, which may be held later this month.

Ungo is head of the Democratic Revolutionary Force, the political arm of the Salvadoran rebel movement.

According to published reports Friday from Mexico City, Ungo's home base, insurgent leaders have begun discussions on the possibility of participating in Salvadoran municipal elections set for March.

While saying it "would be impossible for us to participate," Ungo said the rebels "will not" just be bystanders during the election.

Asked what type of involvement he was contemplating, Ungo said, "We will tell the Salvadoran people what is our position and we will ask the Salvadoran people to support that position."

President Jose Napoleon Duarte has ruled out any settlement under which the rebels would be given a share of power and has said his objective is to incorporate them into the electoral process.

S. African suspects arrested

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police have arrested 2,300 people, most of them migrant workers, in a "mopping-up operation" following widespread rioting in black townships, authorities said Friday.

Col. Vic Haynes at police headquarters in Pretoria said most of those arrested Thursday were released by Friday morning after they paid fines on a variety of charges. The most common charge, he said, was non-payment of tax.

Defense Minister Magnus Malan, in a speech Friday night, blamed the rioting and unrest since late August on "calculated action by hostile elements" seeking to overthrow South Africa's white-minority rule.

He said the government was trying to move ahead with race reform, "but at the same time we must ensure that the progress we make is not threatened by the radical consequences of rapid and unruly change."

Minister of Law and Order Louis le Grange acknowledged Thursday night that 130 people, all but one of them black, died in the recent unrest. He said 95 of the victims were killed by police. Private groups maintain about 150 people died in the unrest.

Le Grange also said he has asked for criminal investigation of the Rev. Allan Boesak, one of the nation's most prominent anti-apartheid clerics, because of an interview Boesak gave to the Sydney Morning Herald in Australia.

Diplomat suspected in Gandhi plot

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Investigators probing Indira Gandhi's assassination have asked that a former Indian diplomat be extradited from Norway on grounds he was involved in a conspiracy to kill her, news reports said.

The former diplomat, I. Harinder Singh, a Sikh, told Norwegian television in Oslo Friday night that he was surprised by the charge by the pro-government Hindustan Times newspaper and the Press Trust of India news agency.

"When I was told about the report in Hindustan Times today I was completely taken aback, sort of numb. I did not expect that the government of a country like India would use such mean tricks to prevent me from obtaining asylum in this country," he said without elaboration.

He added that he did not defend the slaying of Mrs. Gandhi, but considered her death "the revenge of fate."

Harinder Singh, 37, resigned last June as India's charge d'affaires in Oslo, renounced his Indian citizenship and applied for asylum in Norway after the Indian army's assault on the Golden Temple, the holiest Sikh shrine, which had become a sanctuary for Sikh terrorists.

Alleged madam no longer on social list

NEW YORK (AP) — The woman accused of being the "Mayflower Madam" operator of a call girl ring has been dropped from the trimmed-down 1985 Social Register, along with more than 3,000 others previously listed among the cream of society.

A spokesman at the Social Register Association said he could not positively say that Sidney Biddle Barrows and her family were deleted because she was charged with operating a $1 million-a-year call girl ring. But he added that it was probably more than a good guess.

"Generally speaking, any kind of public scandal or any kind of notoriety would result in deletion," said the spokesman. He declined to identify himself, saying: "It's an old SR tradition not to give our names to the press."

Miss Barrows, 32, accused of operating a ritzy Manhattan ring under the name of Stella Devin, was listed in the 1984 Social Register along with her mother, stepfather and brother Craig.

She is the daughter of New Jersey socialite Jeanette Biddle Ballantine Barrows Molzer and is said to have prominent English ancestors who came to America on the Mayflower.

On Friday, as the Social Register was released, Miss Barrows was providing handwriting samples under a court order.

The Social Register spokesman said the decision to delete Miss Barrows and her family was made by a national advisory committee. He did not know what specific criteria were used but said the committee decided the register was getting a bit unwieldy. "It was getting so large that they decided it was time to take a very careful look at who was in the book and whether they should stay there."

In addition to Miss Barrows, 3,750 other names were erased. The spokesman said 96 families who were dropped from the 1984 edition were reinstated and 66 new families were added.

"One new listing is that of Mr. and Mrs. Sid Bass, featured on the cover of Newsweek magazine this week," the spokesman said.

The official Thanksgiving turkey startles President Reagan

Turkey snubs Reagan at holiday ceremony

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the United States was snubbed by a turkey Friday.

The turkey, the pick of its breed, flapped its wings wildly in President Reagan's face and leaped off a table in the White House Rose Garden, where it was making a symbolic appearance in honor of Thanksgiving.

"At least one person thinks we've been here long enough," said Reagan, holding aloft one of the turkey's pure-white feathers as the 53-pound bird made its unceremonious departure, its rose-red wattles shaking.

John Hendricks, a turkey farmer from Shelby, N.C., said the bird was 26 weeks old, had been hatched at North Carolina State University, and was picked for White House duty from a pampered flock of 10.

The turkey, the star of the 37th annual White House turkey presentation by the National Turkey Foundation, is called "R.J."

Hendricks explained that the initials stand for "Robust" and "Juicy." Reagan and his Cabinet have begun their struggle with the sea of red ink overhauling the next federal budget and someone asked if the turkey's name was "Deficit."

"If I said his name was Deficit it would scare him to death," the president replied, grinning.

Reagan walked behind the turkey for a time as it strutted slowly away from him, across the Rose Garden grass.

A reporter tried to ask a serious question focused on the proposal the United States has made to the Soviet Union about opening "umbrella" arms control talks.

"This is the only turkey I'm going to talk about today," said the president, leaving his remark unexplained.

The White House explained that a "backup turkey" had been available if R.J. had become too excited to appear in public.

And it said Reagan also will be given two frozen turkeys for Thanksgiving dinner.

As for R.J. and his understudy, they may be two of the safest turkeys in America this Thanksgiving season.

The White House said both birds will be sent to "petting farms" in Virginia where they will lead a well-fed and protected existence "for the rest of their natural lives."

Police have suspects in brick-throwing attack

CHICAGO (AP) — An anonymous tipster has given police names of two people who may have participated in the brick-throwing siege of a black family's apartment in an all-white West Side neighborhood bordering suburban Cicero.

"This has gone on long enough," Cicero Town Attorney Steven Filipowicz quoted the tipster as saying.

He refused to identify the suspects, but said Cicero police turned the names over to Chicago authorities and the FBI, which is investigating possible civil rights violations in the case.

"I'm sure if they have those two suspects' names, they're pursuing them," Chicago police spokesman Justice Redmond said Friday.

She would not confirm officially that any action was being taken, however. FBI spokesman Bob Long would say only that the investigation was continuing.

Filipowicz said Thursday that police files indicate to suspects both have arrest records, and Chicago police have described one of the suspects as a "youthful white male."

In the Nov. 7 siege, auto mechanic Spencer Goffer said a dozen white youths tossed bricks and bottles through the windows of his apartment for six hours as he, his fiancée Patricia Franklin, and their 8-year-old son Michael hid in terror inside. They had moved in Nov. 3.

Chicago Police Lt. Joseph Kelly of the human relations section said Thursday that evidence gathered so far indicates there may not have been as many attackers as Goffer first indicated.

And Filipowicz criticized reports that subpoenas may be issued to three Cicero police officers who responded to a burglary in the same area, known as the Island, the night of the attack.

Ann Cover and Retired District Judge Theron Ward share a laugh during ceremony renaming the Twin Falls County Judicial Building in Ward's honor

Judicial building renamed for Ward

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Judicial Building was renamed Friday after former District Judge Theron Ward, whose efforts resulted in the construction of the building.

Ward, who retired last year after 25 years on the bench in Twin Falls County, was honored at a ceremony held as part of the county's open house.

Ann Cover, the chairman of the Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners, read the proclamation naming the structure the Theron W. Ward Judicial Building to a large crowd of well-wishers, Ward's former colleagues and the public. The proclamation said that Ward gave "unselfishly of himself" and brought distinction to Twin Falls County. Through his efforts the county had erected the judicial building, she read.

"I am totally overwhelmed," Ward said. "But, he added, he accepted the honor mostly for the then Board of County Commissioners and county clerk who were the main force behind the construction of the building, which was completed in 1967.

He dispelled the rumor that he had ordered the commissioners to build one. An Idaho law passed in 1966 had created another judgeship in the county, Ward said. That created a problem because there only was one courtroom in the courthouse and no place to add another one.

The judicial building was the result of the work of the "most active and responsible" board of commissioners he had worked with and former clerk Harold Lancaster, who found the money to build the structure, Ward said.

Ward also was honored for his duties on the bench. Twin Falls attorney and former Judge Lloyd Webb said Ward was a role model as yet unmatched.

Ward had all the attributes respected by the public and lawyers, Webb said. He had control of the courtroom and the ability to restrict issues of law with quick determination that

Ward "had good strong common sense," Webb said.

Ward's successor, Daniel Hurlbutt, said that the judge "set the foundation upon which the Twin Falls County judiciary will grow."

A bronze plaque bearing the new name of the building will be donated by the Twin Falls County Bar Association and Judges organization, Hurlbutt said.

Hurlbutt added that when the county's judges recommended the name change to the commissioners they also wanted to honor those who served the judicial system.

"Thank you for your fine leadership," Hurlbutt told Ward.

Council fails to hobble dancers

By MICHELE SNYDER
Times-News correspondent

PAUL, — Male strippers, who prefer to be called "male dancers," will continue dancing at the Sports Shop Bar In Paul, despite the adoption of an ordinance prohibiting nude or semi-nude dancers.

City Attorney Kent Fletcher drafted the ordinance at the request and concern of the Paul City Council, which indicated it wanted to protect the public health, safety, welfare and morals of the community.

The ordinance is aimed at curbing the activities which "pander to gross sexuality in a manner that would detract from the neighborhood, adversely affect the property values, increase crime and violence, and be repugnant to the morals of the community."

After the reading of the ordinance, Ben Park, representing Fantasy Productions in Burley which stages the stripper shows, defended the male dancers employed by the tavern on Thursday evenings.

"I understand your concern and hope to put your minds at ease," he said.

While producing an example of the men's dancewear, a bright pair of nylon-lined briefs made of flashy colorful sequins, Park informed the council that the dancers were family men who were merely providing a form of "clean adult entertainment."

Park said "nice women come to watch the dancers, ... they're not undressables. We're drawing a clean audience made up mostly of women between the ages of 25 and 40," many, he said, who are wives of businessmen and other professionals.

He said his grandmother had viewed the production and that it would even be safe for his 4-year-old daughter to see.

Sandy Dickson, manager of the tavern, replied to the council's previous concern that "the type of clientele that this would draw is the

Drug busts to include inmates

By Times-News staff and The Associated Press

BOISE — Five inmates at the Idaho State Penitentiary will be arrested Monday on charges of conspiracy to smuggle drugs into the prison.

The arrests will be the latest in a series this week of related drug busts that included the roundup of 14 people in Twin Falls County and the confiscation of five pounds of marijuana from a county residence.

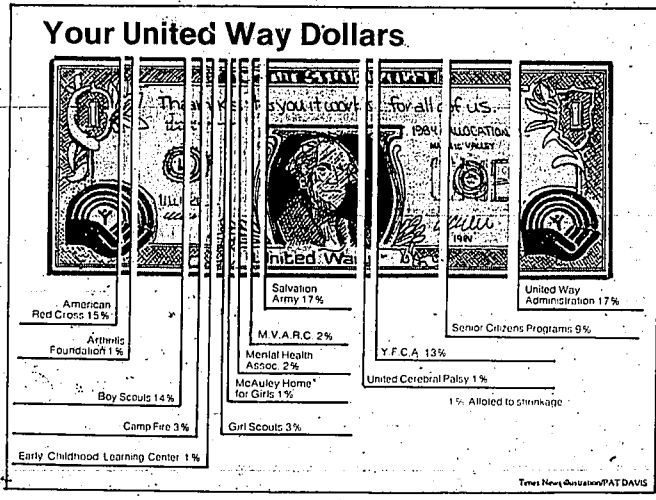

All the busts are the result of a three-month, multi-agency investigation across southern Idaho that's uncovered what Boise Police Lt. Pat Brown called a major drug ring in the Gem State.

The investigation at the prison is connected to charges filed against nine Boise residents Wednesday night, Brown said.

The planned arrests at the prison will stop up to 70 percent of the drug traffic into the facility, police said.

Police had initially planned to arrest the five inmates Friday after

United Way sets money allocations

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The United Way Board will give generous donations to the Salvation Army, the American Red Cross, the Boy Scouts and the Y.F.C.A. and will keep more for the organization's administration this year.

The decisions were made at a Friday meeting to divide up the money collected in the 1985 fund drive, one that promises to be among the best in the organization's 24-year history in the Magic Valley.

Volunteers have not quite met this year's goal of $210,000, but board members were confident enough to allocate the full amount plus $10,000 to be collected in interest. The drive is still about $15,000 short of its goal.

But even with the $220,000 hoped for, United Way will not be able to meet the obligations of the 18 affiliate organizations it has accepted this year. The organizations requested $256,000, said Jerry Dodds, chairman of the allocation committee.

The largest change between the 1984 and 1985 campaign allocations was for administration. Last year 14 percent of the $201,480 allocated was earmarked for United Way administration. This year, more than 16 percent of the budget, or $36,454, will be used for United Way administration.

The administrative budget had been frozen for three years, Dodds says.

"In the past, if we had to do any ripping and slashing, her (executive director Sandy Thomas's) budget was first," Dodds says.

This year, they have given her a modest raise and more clerical assistance.

Most of the allocations for the 18 groups remain about the same percentage as last year, even though the allocations committee had many new people and last year's figures were not used in making decisions, Dodds says.

Before making decisions, the 11 members considered the programs offered by the organizations and reviewed their financial histories.

Chamber fetes 'Policeman Jim' Mildon as Person of Year

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Police Sgt. Jim Mildon didn't detect the honor although he might have suspected something was up.

He had been persuaded to tumble out of bed Friday on two hours of sleep to dutifully share breakfast with 350 business executives and other community leaders. The arguments ranged from "We need a police officer there for insurance purposes" to "You'll like this speaker."

Not until he heard a list of his accomplishments rolling out over the loudspeaker did he put the pieces of the deception together. By then it was too late.

The Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce already was applauding him as its Chamber Person of the Year.

As traffic sergeant, Mildon might have met a few of the members over a ticket book, but he's met thousands of the community's youth during the past 15 years on bicycle safety courses, in the schools and on the football field. He's on a first-name basis with many grade school children. They call him "Policeman Jim."

Mildon, 37, joined the Twin Falls police force in 1969 and quickly started bringing bicycle safety programs to the schools in his home city. Since then he has kept traffic safety in students' minds, and, at the same time, taken his interest in youth beyond official duties.

For the past nine years, Mildon has coached the seventh-grade football team at O'Leary Junior High School. He also has contributed to a number of community organizations, such as the Twin Falls Optimists, which sponsor youth programs. The Modern Woodmen of America in 1983 honored him for community work.

Professionally, Mildon is a past president of the Magic Valley Police Officers Association and has earned compliments from commanders.

Curtis Eaton Sr., who was the chamber's first Person of the Year in 1983, lauded Mildon Friday for investing thousands of hours in community work. Mildon accepted gratefully, passing along part of the credit to his family, police colleagues and the community in general.

Later, he said his greatest rewards come in being "Policeman Jim" to the seventh graders on the football field and the young bicycle riders and the grade school students in the classrooms.

"That's what's neat," he said. "After clapping the hands of well wishers after the breakfast, you might have thought Mildon would be heading back home to finish his interrupted sleep."

But the Person of the Year instead was doing what he has done for the past 15 years in Twin Falls — volunteering.

Mildon said he had promised to help out a fellow officer by taking his daytime shift Friday.

 some clientele that would bring the police problems."

In defense, Dickson said "There has never been any fighting," attributing it to the fact that it is entirely a female audience on Thursday evenings.

"Some of the husbands drop their wives off and pick them up two hours later. Most of the ladies go home at 9 o'clock... they're not staying around causing problems," she told the council.

Paul told the council that it is the policy of Fantasy Productions to announce before each program that women are not allowed to touch the men, nor are the men allowed to molest their lips with their tongues, and that if anyone is considered a provocative move.

Appealing to the council in the area of city finances, Park said "If this entertainment is allowed, it can be a valuable tourist attraction to help the city out of its financial crunch." He said other businesses, such as gas stations and grocery stores, can benefit from the crowds on Thursday night.

Another benefit he mentioned is the fact that the tavern has employed extra people to accommodate the larger crowds — "People who would otherwise be without a job," he reminded the council.

After much discussion, it was determined "the male dancers" would be allowed to stay since the ordinance is apparently not being violated.

Park invited members of the council to view the show and "if you find anything to be offensive, let me know."

Councilman Gene Hansen, while acknowledging that the male dancers may be "above board," pointed out that the council was not singling out the Sports Shop Bar, but that certain steps must be taken to "control the situation."

"For example, another establishment may want to go into competition with you and the only way it could compete is to offer a better show than yours."

"Unless we take control now, it can lead to problems," he said.

Park also mentioned a new form of entertainment that Fantasy Productions will be bringing to the city, with no apparent objections from the council.

He said "cream puff wrestling" will soon be introduced, where trained lady wrestlers will tangle with one another in modest one-piece bathing suits, in contrast to the mud wrestling that is taking place in other parts of the country, where "two-piece bikinis are worn."

"Park said whipped cream will be used at the Sport Shop rather than mud.

 noon, but Brown said they decided to wait until Monday when the prisoners could be arraigned on drug charges.

The investigation at the prison has primarily focused on marijuana smuggling, though Brown said they also had reports that other drugs are involved.

Police did not witness the actual smuggling, Brown said, but are speculating that visitors may have placed marijuana-filled balloons in their mouths and kissed inmates to transfer the drugs.

Outsiders also could have thrown a package of drugs over the security fence to an inmate waiting inside, Brown said. In the minimum-security area, a visitor could have simply carried drugs in a pocket and given them to a prisoner, the officer said.

The arrests at the prison have been preceded by others. The State Department of Law Enforcement on Thursday announced the arrests of 14 people Wednesday in the Twin Falls area after the search of a city and county residence that also uncovered weapons and suspected cocaine.

Most of those arrested were charged with frequenting a "drug establishment," a misdemeanor. But, three persons were charged Thursday in Fifth District Magistrate Court with felony possession and intent to sell marijuana.

None of the other suspects in the Twin Falls arrests have yet made a court appearance on the charges.

Brown said some of the Twin Falls arrests were connected with the recent arrests in Boise. Some of those arrested in the Twin Falls area had been "suppliers" for the people charged in Boise, he said.

Brown said he could not arrest the names of those situated for review at the prison.

Those charged with felonies in Twin Falls were 22-year-old Diane E. Nogler, 22-year-old Tammy Fay Webb also known as Tammy Sartin, both of Twin Falls, and 32-year-old Lytle Harmon of Eden.

Those arrested in Boise Wednesday included Judy Thompson, 44, Debbie Thompson, 19, John Rinker, 48, Julie Thompson, 21, Gary Day, 24, Rebecca Nelson, 21, Rene Brown, 20, Teresa Vermaas, 29, Donald Smith, 41. All have been charged with conspiracy to deliver a controlled substance.

Donald Smith only was charged with frequenting.

Taking part in the drug arrests, most made Wednesday night, were officers from the state Department of Law Enforcement in Boise and Twin Falls police departments, state police, the Twin Falls sheriff's office and two federal agencies.

Money

 The American Red Cross and the Salvation Army will receive the largest amounts of money given to the 18 organizations, receiving $23,900 and $37,200 respectively. Both received slight increases because of a growing demand for food and shelter for the poor, Dadds says.

The YFCA, traditionally a major recipient of United Way funds, will receive $27,920, about the same as last year.

The Boy Scouts will actually receive a slightly smaller percentage of the money collected, but a stronger fund-raising drive should increase its allocation a few hundred dollars to $29,880.

The 14 percent of the total it will receive is smaller than the organization received a decade ago. Then the Boy Scouts spent 30 percent of the money collected and even five years ago they received almost a quarter of the donations.

Although the committee felt the amount had been disproportionate to what others got," Dadds says. So as United Way expanded to serve 18 instead of 10 agencies, the percentage of the total money given to the Boy Scouts declined.

Although that may have created some resentment in the past, Dadds says in the last year the relationship between the Boy Scouts and United Way has been strengthened through efforts by both to learn more about the problems and responsibilities of each.

The sixth largest chunk of the budget, over 9 percent, went to senior citizen groups in Kimberly, Hagerman, Jerome, Twin Falls, Buhl and Eden.

Early Childhood Learning Center and the McAuley Home for Girls in Buhl did receive more money, he says. Last year, as organizations new to the United Way, allocations to them were modest.

The Mental Health Association also received a modest increase because of new and expanding programs, Dadds says.

Telling A Child About Death...
 Ages 11-12... A youngster eleven or twelve has the emotions of love and deep feelings of loss. He knows what death is. He will want to be helpful so as to resolve his own feelings of loss. Include him in the arrangements and service. Call for a free booklet, "Answers to a child's questions about death."

The sixth largest chunk of the budget, over 9 percent, went to senior citizen groups in Kimberly, Hagerman, Jerome, Twin Falls, Buhl and Eden.

Early Childhood Learning Center and the McAuley Home for Girls in Buhl did receive more money, he says. Last year, as organizations new to the United Way, allocations to them were modest.

The Mental Health Association also received a modest increase because of new and expanding programs, Dadds says.

Analysts see trend in high court to allow church-state link

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

A summary of recent court decisions about the relationship of religion to government conduct that the U.S. Supreme Court, in contrast to previous trends, seems inclined to allow more room for religion in the public sphere.

Numerous analysts have cited signs of that shift over the past three years, some condemning it, others approving it.

With the high court facing a record number of church-state cases this term, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith issued a 30-page summary of recent and pending decisions.

"A closer link between the state and religion has been sanctioned by the Supreme Court," the report, prepared by the league's legal affairs department, says the tendency endangers the principle of separation between church and state, declaring:

"These recent court decisions and legislative proposals seem to indicate that if the 'wall of separation' is not crumbling it has become transparent."

Referring to the Constitution's First Amendment ban against "an establishment of religion," the report adds:

"Effectively establishing is the growing inclusion of the Supreme Court's method of evaluating establishment clause controversies. It is undergoing pervasive changes, ones that permit increasing incursions on establishment principles."

However, several other legal experts applauded the recent court decisions as tending to balance out a long line of decisions that increasingly isolated religion and banned its expression from American institutional life.

"A swing back from anti-religion to accommodation of it is taking place, a swing back from a hard-and-fast separatist mindset," says Sam Ericsson of the Christian Legal Society in Washington.

"The court has begun to recognize that religion cannot be excluded from the secular setting."

Law professor A.E. Dick Howard of the University of Virginia says that "a swing to the right has been in the works for a decade but the momentum has quickened," adding: "In some ways the court is responding to the climate of the country."

The courts seem to be rejecting the claim that religion is "strictly private," says the lay-edited, independent Catholic weekly, Commonweal, and adds:

"The court has set itself firmly against that view which seems to demand an absolute scouring of all religious references from the public forum. To exile religion from the public forum, or simply to handicap its role there heavily, is to perform a kind of lobotomy on the American culture."

On the other hand, the Anti-Defamation League and numerous groups emphasizing strict separation of church from state sharply criticize what they see as a tendency to erode that boundary.

The trend "has accelerated in the last three years," the league's report says, contending that court decisions and legislation has brought a "proliferation of government aid to and sponsorship of religious activities."

Specifically cited were Supreme Court decisions allowing state legislators to employ a chaplain for daily opening prayers (in a Nebraska case), upholding publicly sponsored Christmas displays (a Pawtucket, R.I., case) and permitting tuition tax credits for non-public school pupils (in Minnesota).

The league also cited action by Congress last August to require "equal access" for student-initiated groups to meet in high schools in non-instructional time on the same basis as other extracurricular groups.

At least seven church-state cases are on the Supreme Court's calendar for this term on such issues as a "mini-fair" for meditation in public schools, Sabbath observance rights, public remedial teachers for parochial pupils, religious displays and student religion clubs in high schools.

"The resolution of these issues could determine the future role of church-state separation in American society," the league says.

It says a recent federal appeals court decision, outlawing a student religion club at Guilderland, N.Y., high school, "articulates the potential effect of religious activities in public schools."

New pastor raised on southern Idaho farm

TWIN FALLS — The Rev. John T. Parish Jr. assumed the pastorate of the First Christian Church of Twin Falls last month.

Raised on a farm in southern Idaho, Parish was a volunteer in the U.S. Army after graduating from Twin Falls High School in 1944 and while in the Pacific, he aided in mission work on New Guinea.

He graduated from Northwest Christian College in Eugene, Ore., where he met his wife, Erma. The couple has served churches in Oregon, Indiana, California and Washington, starting in Parish's junior year in college when he began and helped organize the Christian church in Lowell, Ore., the village without a church.

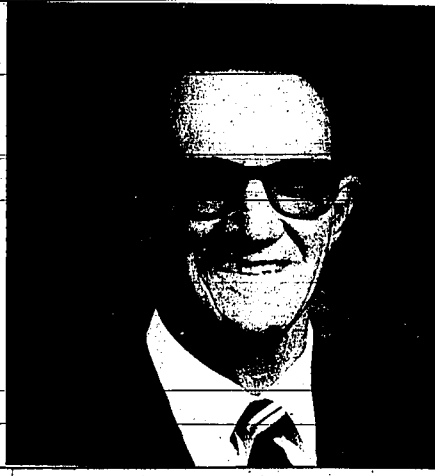

In the summer of 1955, under a partial scholarship awarded by New York University, he studied Hebrew in Israel, with the social, religious and cultural factors of that state considered. Since then, he has led many tour groups to that part of the world.

Parish received his bachelor of divinity degree from Christian Theological Seminary and his master's from Butler University, both in Indianapolis; and earned his doctorate from the California Graduate School of Theology.

As an associate professor at Puget Sound Christian College in Seattle, he taught classes in church administration, preaching, speech, finance and biblical subjects, then held the position of president for nine years before returning to Twin Falls.

The Parishes have three children: Ruth Ann, a pediatrician teaching medicine at the University of Washington, John III, with Bell Telephone Co. in Seattle and Marilyn, with that company in Bellevue, Wash.

Parish is affiliated with the National Association of Independent College Presidents, the Association of Bible College Presidents of Christian Churches and Churches of Christ and the Planned Giving Officers of Puget Sound.

Statewide toxic dump plan focus of panel recommendation

By MARILYN HAUKE ESSEX
The Associated Press

BOISE — An interim legislative committee has adopted a recommendation for hazardous waste legislation that would create a citizens' committee to draw up a statewide toxic dump plan.

recommendation will be presented to the Legislature when it convenes in January.

Idaho doesn't have a law to regulate siting of toxic waste dumps. There have been claims that the state's lone facility, operated by Enviro-safe Services of Idaho Inc., near Grand View, is too close to farms and the Snake River.

The committee's recommendation would not force the firm to move or close, but Enviro-safe would have to follow the new guidelines if it expands or does any new construction, committee members said.

Meanwhile, Dr. Charles Scott, environmental safety officer for Owyhee County, tests recently conducted by Enviro-safe showed dangerous levels of up to 15 man-made chemicals in the aquifer below the hazardous waste firm. Scott said he received a copy of the Environmental Protection Agency report Thursday showing results of the test.

Two of the proposals called for a citizens' panel to draw up the hazardous waste plan, but committee members chose the proposal that also requires legislative approval of that group's draft management plan.

The governor would appoint the committee members, which will include representatives from city and county government, an environmentalist, a hazardous waste generator and transporter, employees from the state Health and Welfare and Water Resources departments, and academicians.

The panel would be charged with establishing operating guidelines and specifying site locations geographically distributed within the state.

Once the panel's plan is adopted by the Legislature, no permits will be issued for a toxic dump site until the Health and Welfare director has determined the site will comply with the guidelines.

A nine-member review board would be established to give final approval for site construction permits recommended by the Health and Welfare director.

The board grants no control to local governments over location of a dump site in an area — an item favored by Dr. Charles Scott, environmental safety officer for Owyhee County, where Enviro-safe is located.

Before the committee decided on the particular plan, Scott said he didn't like any of the proposals. He said he wanted local governments to have some control over hazardous waste sites in their area.

However, the proposal would require the board granting site permits to consider the local units of government and any city or county ordinances regarding hazardous waste sites.

Scott said he had planned to present the EPA report showing dangerous chemical levels to members of the interim committee.

But testimony wasn't accepted at the Friday meeting.

The legislation also would require placing a tag on the deed to property that is used as a hazardous waste site so developers wouldn't inadvertently construct buildings over the toxic dumps in the future.

Lawmakers on Friday considered four proposed pieces of legislation dealing with regulation of hazardous waste sites. The

Basement house blaze kills three children in Pocatello

POCATELLO (AP) — Three Pocatello children died early Friday when smoldering ashes ignited a cardboard box and turned a basement house into an inferno, fire officials said.

Gary Michael Gunter, 11, the son of Debbie Gunter; Michelle Nielson, 5, and Michael Nielson, 2, the children of David and Mary Nielson, were apparently asleep when the fire broke out about 3 a.m. Friday. They were trapped by flames in the older home by the time firefighters arrived on the scene, Pocatello Fire Marshal Steve Millward said.

One child was found in the bathroom of the house and two others were found in a bedroom. Millward said a bed in a narrow hallway added to the difficulty rescuers had reaching the children. They were declared dead at the scene.

"They just couldn't get to the kids because of the flames," dispatcher Ken Senman said. "It wasn't till they controlled that area until they found the three fatalities."

Millward said the children were being tended by their grandmother, JoAnn Nielson, while Mrs. Gunter was at work in Blackfoot, about 25 miles away, and the Nielsons were in California seeking work.

Mrs. Nielson was admitted to Pocatello Regional Medical Center for observation suffering from smoke inhalation and shock.

Three firefighters also were taken to the hospital suffering smoke inhalation. Millward said one of the men also received an electrical shock while fighting the fire. He remained under observation Friday evening.

Millward said the fire apparently was started by smoldering ashes from a wood stove left in a cardboard box nearby in the living room.

The age of the house and the lack of sheet-rock protection on walls around the heating stove added to the fire risk, he said.

Leaking trucks ordered held at site

GRAND VIEW (AP) — State police have ordered seven trucks grounded at the Enviro-safe Services of Idaho Grand View site after dangerous chemicals were discovered leaking from them.

State Police Officer Larry McGill said Health and Welfare representative Pat Stoll is inspecting the vehicles that arrived in Grand View from Zionsville, Ind.

The trucks were carrying a hazardous liquid that had been mixed with dirt and other materials to solidify it, McGill said.

But part of the liquid apparently was frozen when it was mixed and began to leak from the trucks as it thawed, McGill said.

"It was running like a leaky faucet," he said.

McGill said he put the vehicles out of service, which means they can't leave the Enviro-safe grounds until "somebody says they're clean enough to leave."

The restriction applies to both the cab and trailer portions of the trucks, he said.

McGill said he photographed the trucks and traced the routes drivers had taken from Indiana in the case the leakage posed a serious public threat.

Woman jailed after fatal car collision

BOISE (AP) — An Ada County woman was arrested early Friday after a traffic accident west of Boise that took the life of a Star man, authorities said.

Scott Stillwell, 30, was killed when the motorcycle he was riding was struck from behind while at a stop sign on a county road west of the city, Chief Deputy Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg said. The accident occurred about 2 a.m., he said.

Bonnie Small, 29, of Meridian, was taken into custody at the scene and booked into the county jail for suspicion of vehicular manslaughter and possession of a controlled substance, an informant said.

She was scheduled to be arraigned Friday afternoon in Ada County Magistrate Court.

More legislators to seek positions

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — State Sen. Ann-Rydzalch of Idaho Falls has announced her candidacy for Senate Majority Caucus Chairman, a post that involves membership on the Senate State Affairs Committee and inclusion within the leadership of circle of the Republican-dominated Legislature.

Sens. Dane Watkins of Idaho Falls and Atwell Parry of Melba also have been mentioned as potential candidates for the position, left vacant by the retirement of nine-term Sen.

Marsden Williams of Idaho Falls. It's the only vacancy in the Idaho Senate's GOP leadership this year.

Mrs. Rydzalch said she is sending out letters to Republican senators seeking their support for her candidacy when lawmakers gather to choose their leaders at an organizational session scheduled for Dec. 6 and 7 in Boise.

Mrs. Rydzalch is beginning her second term in the Senate and served last term on Agricultural Affairs, Judiciary-Rules, and Commerce-Labor committees. She said she will actively seek reappointment to the Judiciary-Rules committee, one of the few privileged committees allowed to introduce bills late in legislative sessions.

Democratic and Republican House caucuses and the Senate Democratic caucus announced the lineup for the leadership positions during a legislative tour of northern Idaho last week.

In the House Republican caucus, House Speaker Tom Silvers of Twin Falls faces opposition from moderate Rep. Steve Antonio, Rupert, Majority Leader Jack Kennevik of Boise is opposed by Rep. Tom Boyd of Genesee. Assistant Majority Leader Robert Geddes of Preston apparently is unopposed.

Fire destroys vacant house

LEWISTON (AP) — An overheated water heater caused a fire that destroyed a vacant house in north Lewiston early Friday, fire investigators said.

A fire was raged out as a cause of the blaze, a department spokeswoman said. Investigators are still working on a string of arson-caused fires that have struck the Lewiston area in recent months. Investigators said electricity was left on in the rental home and the water heater apparently overheated, starting the fire. Damages were estimated at $20,000.

Fire Capt. Duane Jones said the single-story, wood-frame house was completely in flames when crews arrived at the scene shortly after 4 a.m. He said 14 firefighters spent about 2½ hours at the scene.

Hispanic affairs eyed

BOISE (AP) — An interim legislative committee is recommending the creation of an Hispanic Affairs Commission within an existing state agency.

Sen. C.A. "Skip" Smyser said Friday the commission would be composed of one state senator, one state representative, and three laymen.

The commission would be bound under a "sunset clause" that would require legislative review in June 1987, he said.

Smyser, R-Parma, said legislators could then decide whether to dissolve the commission, make no changes, or make adjustments in how the commission is operated.

The interim committee met Friday to draft a proposal for submission to the Legislature in January.

Smyser said committee members decided to house the commission in an existing state agency to save on costs. It would cost up to $50,000 a year alone to hire an executive director, he said.

"I have no doubt I can find an agency in state government that would welcome this responsibility," he said.

Sharp decline leaves Dow under 1,200 line

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market closed on a generally dismal week with a sharp decline Friday in selling that drove the Dow Jones industrial average below 1,200.

Investors joined many big-name industrialists in the ranks of the day's most conspicuous losers. Dow Jones' average of 30 blue chips fell 18.22 to 1,187.94, bringing its loss for the week to 31.43 points. That marked the average's first close below 1,200 since Oct. 17 and its lowest since it stood at 1,177.23 on Oct. 10.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 83.14 million shares, up from 81.53 million on Thursday.

The market also was unsettled since the election early this month, when investors turned their attention to the question of the federal budget deficit and what action President Reagan might propose to deal with it during his second term.

Wall Street has also been unsettled by increasing evidence of a slowing economy and talk of a possible recession.

The Federal Reserve reported Friday that industry operated at 81.8 percent of capacity last month, down from 82 percent in September and 82.6 percent in August.

With these concerns weighing on it, the market has shown little response to declining interest rates. Rates dropped sharply in the bond and short-term money markets

Thursday. They fell a bit further Friday amid conjecture that the Federal Reserve might soon lower its discount rate — the charge it sets on loans to private financial institutions.

Among airline stocks, which were downgraded by a brokerage house, AMR fell 1 to 30 1/4; UAL 1 1/4 to 39 3/4; Delta 1 1/4 to 37 1/4; U.S. Air 1 1/4 to 30 3/4; Southwest Airlines 3/4 to 18 3/4, and Trans World Airlines 3/4 to 9 3/4.

Point-plus losers in the blue-chip sector included International Business Machines, down 1 1/4 at 121 1/4; Procter & Gamble, off 1 1/4 at 56 3/4; Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing, down 2 1/4 at 79; International Paper, down 1 1/4 at 43 1/4; Eastman Kodak, down 1 1/4 at 73 1/4; and Merck, down 1 1/4 at 85 1/4.

General Electric lost 1 1/4 to 56 despite an increase in the quarterly dividend from 50 to 55 cents a share. Auto stocks suffered a similar fate. General Motors dropped 2 1/4 to 74 1/4; Ford Motor 1 to 45 1/4; and Chrysler 3/4 to 27 1/4.

The daily tally on the Big Board showed more than two issues falling in price for every one that gained ground, and the exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .98 to 94.70.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in these stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 100.00 million shares.

Major banks to beef up guard against possible loan losses

By The Associated Press

First National Bank of Chicago and San Francisco's Bank of America have agreed to join in a government's request they bolster their capital and tighten loan procedures to guard against losses from Latin American loans, the banks and an analyst said.

First Chicago, the nation's eighth largest bank, on Thursday announced details of an agreement with the U.S. comptroller of the currency calling on the bank to take 11 steps to maintain a higher ratio of capital to total assets and to assure proper management of loans.

The bank will maintain capital equal to 6 percent of total assets, an increase from 5 percent, officials said. And the agreement calls for the directors of the parent corporation, First Chicago Corp., to become directly involved in operating the bank's internal controls systems, especially problem loans of more than $10 million.

The agreement with First Chicago was disclosed in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

A similar agreement was announced Thursday in San Francisco by Bank of America, the nation's largest, which also promised to increase the percentage of capital to assets to 6 percent by the end of 1986.

BankAmerica Corp., the bank's holding company, had a capital ratio of 5.7 percent at the end of the third quarter of 1984. This represents a total of $6.13 billion, including a $93 million loan loss reserve, according to Leland S. Prussia, BankAmerica's chairman.

"Given the uncertainties surrounding exposures by major banks — specifically to Latin America — the comptroller of the currency has expressed interest in increasing bank capital ratios," said Paul Baastad, a rating analyst at Rowe & Pittman in San Francisco.

The move "is not expected to have any material adverse effect on our operations or financial results," Prussia said.

The New York Times in today's editions said directors of the two companies have been required to sign formal pledges to make the changes.

If the banks do not comply, the comptroller can go to court to obtain removal of the banks' senior officers, the newspaper said.

In its SEC filing, First Chicago also disclosed the SEC is conducting a three-part investigation into its report in October that it lost about $300 million in bad loans.

In its formal investigation, the SEC is seeking to determine whether First Chicago insiders traded their stock before the Oct. 3 announcement that the bank expected a $38 million loss in the third quarter related to bad loans.

The SEC also is investigating whether the bank violated securities law "with respect to the timing of loan charge-offs and additions to loan loss reserves since Jan. 1, 1982."

The SEC said the investigation "should not be construed as an indication that any violations of law have occurred."

North Idaho river port managers fear losses to lower rail grain rates

LEWISTON (AP) — A 20 to 25-percent drop in rail rates for southern Idaho grain shipments will undoubtedly affect business at the ports of Lewiston as well as Clarkston and Wilma, Wash., port managers and grain terminal operators say.

But a Boise manager for Union Pacific Railroad said the ports were getting more than their fair share of the grain shipping business from the southern part of the state anyway.

The rate decrease, which went into effect last week, will help "stimulate the grain market," Union Pacific regional manager Joe Habgood said. He said Lewiston-area ports might lose some grain shipping business, but it's too soon to tell what will happen.

"They don't have a lock on that business," he said. "It's very competitive."

Port of Clarkston manager Gary Neal said the railroad's move is bound to decrease truck grain shipments to the area from southern Idaho. He said he has written letters to legislators protesting UP's rate drop.

"We feel that what they're doing in southern Idaho is charging a fee that is below their costs," Neal said. "People don't mind fair competition, but they don't like predatory competition."

Neal said the railroad took on the ports two years ago when it decreased grain shipment rates by 30 to 40 percent just in the Columbia-Snake River system area.

Gary Schmadeka, manager of the Port of Lewiston, said he did not know what the impact of the rate decrease would be, but predicted it would slow truck grain shipments into area ports. "Of course they (Union Pacific officials) are playing the rate game again, and they're good at it," Schmadeka said. "They're trying to put the truckers out of business is what they're trying to do."

Grain shipments at the Port of Lewiston were up slightly last year to 807,000 tons, and Schmadeka said he hoped the facility would break the million-ton mark again this year.

Boise Cascade tells plans to close retail outlet at Nampa

BOISE (AP) — Citing poor market conditions, Boise Cascade Corp. has announced it will close its retail building materials center in Nampa on Dec. 31.

About 49 employees at the Nampa Building Materials Center will be dismissed or placed at other company sites by the end of the year, said Carol Moller, a Boise Cascade spokeswoman.

She said the forest-products company will look at other wholesale and retail building materials centers in Utah, Idaho, Montana and Colorado in an effort to find jobs for the workers.

Boise Cascade's wholesale and retail building materials outlets in Boise and a retail outlet in Emmett are not in jeopardy of immediate closure, Ms. Moller said.

She said the Nampa store that opened in 1969 didn't provide a reasonable return on Boise Cascade's investment, although the store was profitable at times. It was hurt by lack of construction activity, she said.

The store was targeted for the do-it-yourself building and remodeling markets. Until this summer, it also served residential and commercial contractors.

Production levels decline for U.S. factories in October

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's factory use dropped slightly in October, the third consecutive month production levels have declined.

The report by the Federal Reserve Board put the operating rate at 81.8 percent of capacity in October, down from a level of 82 percent in September.

The 0.2 percentage point drop compared to a 0.6 percentage point decline in September and a 0.1 percentage point fall in August.

The operating rate at the nation's factories, mines and utilities had advanced every month since the low point of the recession until August, reaching a high of 82.7 percent of capacity in July.

The decline since July is attributed to the dramatic slowdown the economy underwent this summer. The pace of economic growth, as measured by the gross national product, was 2.7 percent from July through September, less than one-third the rate turned in during the first half of the year.

The report on factory operating rates showed all three major segments posted a decline with mining falling the most. The operating rate at the nation's mines dropped to 74.4 percent, compared to 77.3 percent the month before.

The sharp fall was blamed on a steep 25 percent cutback in coal production as producers worked off stockpiles built up in anticipation of a strike.

The operating rate at manufacturing plants dropped slightly to 82.1 percent from 82.2 percent with production of durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, dropping 0.4 percentage point to 82 percent while production of nondurable goods remained unchanged at 82 percent.

The operating rate for utility companies fell slightly to 82.8 percent from 82.9 percent the month before.

The report said there was no pattern to the declines. The operating rate for auto production moved up modestly from its September low, but the motor vehicle and parts industry as a whole declined a percentage point because of a sharp cutback in the production of trucks.

The operating rate for plants making electrical machinery also fell while rates for petroleum refineries were up.

Here are suggestions about writing job recommendations

A young woman I know told me that she had just received such glowing recommendations from her former boss that she didn't dare show it to anyone.

"They'd never believe I simply worked for the guy," she recalls. "It was just too compromising."

While that may be an extreme exaggeration, the same can ring true. The reader may wonder either why you let this jewel go, or more likely, what was wrong.

The maxim drilled into your consciousness from an early age has been: If you can't say something nice, don't say anything at all.

But for sound reasons, you may have abandoned its practice a long time ago, only to be reminded of this homespun saying whenever an employee or former student asks you for a recommendation.

Writing one of these letters, or providing a recommendation over the phone to a prospective employer, can be perplexing even if you genuinely want to praise your colleague or subordinate.

You may be unsure what style or form to use, how to express your praise, how to steepest harsh criticism or avoid ticklish subjects. Or, still more difficult, you may have little, if anything, complimentary to say about this person.

There is no way to provide a solid recommendation unless there is no code language. There are, however, some general guidelines to rely on.

Acquaintances of mine at various firms in New York City have shown me examples of recent recommendation letters and have explained how they screen job candidates, and what they look for in these references, both written and oral.

Among their suggestions:

- If you're writing a letter of reference, keep it simple. Start at the beginning. Tell the reader how you know the candidate — former employee, ex-paperboy — and for how long.
- Tell something about the candidate's job with you, and provide examples and details to flesh out the description.

"As a result of Ms. Anderson's abilities in analyzing the Durabond market, she was promoted to vice president."

• Tell your reader something about the job candidate's special qualities: "His professionalism, and ability to meet all deadlines, complement his technical skills," or "The high regard in which she is held by her colleagues accurately reflects her talents and expertise."

• Wrap up the letter with a summary, and conclude with your actual recommendation. You don't have to endorse the candidate's application to the new firm in so many words, but the meaning should be clear:

"She has the ambition and talents to contribute high-quality work in challenging circumstances."

• Keep the letter to one page. It is not necessary to rehash the person's job resume.

• Watch your tone. Try not to damn with faint praise. Words such as "nice," "competent" and "acceptable" signal the reader that the candidate may be mediocre at best.

• Before you sit down to write the letter, get some basic details from the candidate. If the job is in a completely new field, find out how his or her previously learned skills will apply.

• But what do you do if the personnel office calls and asks for your assessment? One personnel director told me that she liked to catch a former employer off-guard.

If you need time, say so, or say you have an imminent deadline and you'll call back in an hour. Take a few minutes to gather your thoughts and jot down a few points to sprinkle judiciously throughout the conversation.

Perhaps, though, all the new employer will want to do is verify with you the candidate's employment history.

Be alert for potential minefields. Increasingly, former employers are concerned about being sued by disgruntled ex-employees. Don't give any of your years that opening by careless or defamatory remarks.

Gooding hopes platooning helps beat heat in Minidome

By CHRIS HAPT
Times-News writer

Idaho State Playoffs

(1400 AM) beginning immediately after the conclusion of the Brigham Young-Utah game, which goes on the air at 11:30 a.m.

As every Magic Valley and many-state high school football fan knows by now, the No. 1-ranked Senators have built their 11-0 record largely by switching offensive and defensive units. Few players go both ways. This maintains Gooding's strength that of the opposition.

The Trojans, who use "eight or nine" players both ways, according to Gooding Coach Bob Milligan, could be prime candidates for late-game fatigue. They had better be, as even Milligan admitted, they don't suffer from many other shortcomings.

"Maybe the only advantage we're gonna have, if you can call it that, is our platooning," Milligan said. "Last week we wore Teton out in the fourth quarter they were laying on the turf—literally—and I think that's (platooning) got quite a bit to do with it. A kid can only play so long at 100 percent, especially when the temperature is as high as it is (in the Minidome).

Homedale, ranked No. 2 with a 10-1 record, has performed at 100 percent throughout its football history. Since 1977 the Trojans have won 11 state A-3 titles while reaching the playoffs in every season except 1978.

This year the Trojans have exhibited characteristic strength. Senior quarterback Gary Kushlan (6-3, 185) has helped the Trojans score 30 or more points in 10 of their last eight games, including last week's 33-28 triumph over Grangeville which thrust Homedale into the finals.

Brincos from 1971 to 1974 and still holds nearly all of their passing records.

But Homedale is more than respectable on the ground, with an attack consisting of seniors Randy Jewett (6-0, 160) and Dan Collett (5-9, 160) and sophomore Steve Purdom (5-10, 175). Milligan said Homedale runs out of a variety of sets and uses a variety of plays—traps, misdirections, sweeps, dives, quarterback sweeps, options.

Defensively, Homedale relies mostly on senior down linemen Mike Frank (6-0, 180, T), Fred Brunel (5-9, 210, NG) and Dennis Taggart (5-11, 190, FB). Outside linemen Dave Hyde (6-0, 190, sr.) and Nettleton have also made significant contributions.

"It looks like they're pretty strong against the run," Milligan said. "The line does an excellent job of reading the linebackers but is really active and their defensive backs do a good job of not letting the big pass over them. The one thing we've been successful with every game so far is we've been able to throw deep on people. So we'll see what happens. Maybe we'll throw our stuff underneath enough so they'll come up."

"The Senators' offense should be enhanced by the return of two injured starters, running back Danny Dally and tight end Bryan Darcy. Dally was out of both playoff games with sprained ankles but is at full speed; Darcy missed last week's Teton encounter with a bad back.

Homedale definitely won't be taking the Senators for granted. "They're pretty impressive," McMillan said. "We know they're going to be the toughest team we've played all year and you can just see in one thing—they can run and throw."

However, McMillan believes the Trojans can cope with the Senators' platooning. "I feel we're in good enough shape," he said. "The last two weeks we've eased up on conditioning. I feel like they can do the entire game. They've been doing it all year."

Of course, today "all year" means one game.

POCATELLO — It was actually kind of funny, if you weren't a Teton player, coach or fan.

Toward the end of their 34-24 loss to Gooding in last Saturday's semifinal at the ISU Minidome, the Redskins sat on the field during timeouts, almost completely exhausted.

Gooding hopes the same scene can be repeated in today's state A-3 championship game at the Minidome—with the Homedale Trojans lying down on the job this time.

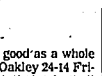

Kickoff is scheduled for 1 p.m. with the broadcast on KATV Radio.

Gooding's Danny Dally hopes to get loose like this against Homedale and help the Senators claim the state A-2 title

Mullan tops Oakley 24-14 to repeat as state A-4 champion

By CHRIS HAPT
Times-News writer

Idaho State Playoffs

POCATELLO — Half an effort was as good as a whole one for the Mullan Tigers, who defeated Oakley 24-14 Friday night for their second consecutive state A-4 football championship at the ISU Minidome.

Ronnie Jacobson, a 6-0, 210-pound running back, scored two of his three touchdowns in the second half, helping ignite Mullan.

The Eagles then recovered "on the sidelines" leading to a 16-yard scoring strike from Vern Brady and kicked the extra point.

This time Highland recovered the onside attempt and managed to pick up a first down in wearing the rest of the clock away.

While Arsten had a big yardage night, it also was blotted slightly by five interceptions. However, he and Eric VanOrden hooked up on touchdown passes of 53 and 57 to explode Highland into its big lead in the third quarter. VanOrden ended up with a receiving record for yardage, catching six for 155 yards.

Highland led 17-7 at halftime.

and allowed them to maintain possession, the Hornets surged from their own 14 to the Tigers.

On second-and-goal, Oakley quarterback Arden Cranney looped one to Bruce Strauss, who was angling toward the near right corner of the end zone. Heigbloom, one of two defenders draping Strauss, bobbled the ball but held onto it long enough for Cranney to intercept, killing Oakley's bid with 11:53 left in the game.

Upon recalling that play, Tompkins second-guessed himself.

"We should have kept it on the ground or gone to the left (away from Jacobson and 245-pound end Scott Johnson)," he said. "They stunted on that play, too, and that threw us for a loop."

Mullan wasn't idle abusing the Hornets. Taking over at their 1, the Tigers spent the next 5:11 surging for their clinching score, Jacobson's 4-yard run with 6:42 to go. Jacobson accounted for 65 of the drive's 99 yards, doing most of his damage with a 30-yard burst to Oakley's 16. Heigbloom, who finished with 12 completions in 22 attempts for 185 yards, contributed an 11-yard pass to Wilson which helped sustain the march.

By contrast, Oakley controlled the first half. A roughing-the-punter penalty precipitated Jacobson's first touchdown, a 1-yard plunge with 4:01 to go in the first quarter.

But at the first play of the second quarter Oakley's Keith Cranney recovered Jacobson's fumble at Mullan's 32.

Idaho State Playoffs

Highland takes title from Capital

POCATELLO — A state playoff passing record by Highland quarterback Mark Arsten provided just enough points to allow the Rams to outlast a furious fourth-quarter comeback by Capital and claim the Idaho State A-1 football championship 36-33 Friday night.

Arsten hit on 17 of 34 passing attempts for three touchdowns and 349 yards to help the Rams into a seemingly comfortable 35-14 advantage with five minutes left in the game.

But Capital then exploded for three touchdowns in less than three minutes and in the end had the Eagles then recovered "on the sidelines" leading to a 16-yard scoring strike from Vern Brady and kicked the extra point.

"We should have kept it on the ground or gone to the left (away from Jacobson and 245-pound end Scott Johnson)," he said. "They stunted on that play, too, and that threw us for a loop."

The Tigers trailed 14-6 after a first half in which they committed three turnovers, amassed just 33 yards rushing and generally lacked verve.

"For some reason we didn't play with any enthusiasm or concentration," said Coach John Drager, whose Tigers finished 9-1. "We dropped passes, we didn't run hard and we didn't block hard."

"We decided to get our heads out of our rear ends and play ball," Drager continued — except he actually didn't use the term "rear end."

The change was most noticeable in Jacobson, who had gained just 25 yards in nine carries during the first half. After intermission, the senior amassed 137 yards to finish with 162 on 28 carries.

"They just pounded us to death," Oakley Coach Don Tompkins said. "There wasn't much we could do about it."

Oakley didn't do as much as it could, period. The Hornets blew two genuine scoring opportunities, one in each half. "We could have been up 28-6 at halftime," Tompkins said, overstating matters only slightly.

Though the results weren't what the Hornets wanted, Tompkins didn't fault their effort against Mullan's physical superiority.

POCATELLO — The Madison Bobcats, bidding good-bye to the A-2 classification, jumped ahead of Bishop Kelly 21-0 at halftime Friday night in their bid for a third straight state title.

The Bobcats took the lead in the first quarter on a 19-yard pass from Steve Young to Dirk Daverport. Robert Wilson booted the and made a difficult over-the-shoulder catch on the left side of the end zone. Jacobson's conversion kick failed, but Mullan led 18-14 with 4:39 to go.

While Tompkins dwelled on Jacobson's running, Drager felt Heigbloom's throwing to Wilson (five catches for 105 yards) and Zueflf (five catches, 66 yards) proved decisive. "That was opening it up," Drager said.

"The next two series essentially settled matters. Aided by a personal foul against Mullan which nullified a punt and allowed them to maintain possession, the Hornets surged from their own 14 to the Tigers.

As for its skill positions and backfield positions, we were playing people far better than we were," said Tompkins, whose previously top-ranked Hornets finished 9-1. "We played a heck of a halfgame."

So did Mullan — after halftime. The Tigers took the kickoff and moved 73 yards in six plays, Jacobson accounting for the final 30 yards with his second touchdown run. On the two plays before Jacobson's tally, quarterback Van Heigbloom brought Mullan within scoring range by completing passes of 9 and 22 yards to Terry Zueflf.

Heigbloom, one of two defenders draping Strauss, bobbled the ball but held onto it long enough for Cranney to intercept, killing Oakley's bid with 11:53 left in the game.

Upon recalling that play, Tompkins second-guessed himself.

"We should have kept it on the ground or gone to the left (away from Jacobson and 245-pound end Scott Johnson)," he said. "They stunted on that play, too, and that threw us for a loop."

Mullan wasn't idle abusing the Hornets. Taking over at their 1, the Tigers spent the next 5:11 surging for their clinching score, Jacobson's 4-yard run with 6:42 to go. Jacobson accounted for 65 of the drive's 99 yards, doing most of his damage with a 30-yard burst to Oakley's 16. Heigbloom, who finished with 12 completions in 22 attempts for 185 yards, contributed an 11-yard pass to Wilson which helped sustain the march.

By contrast, Oakley controlled the first half. A roughing-the-punter penalty precipitated Jacobson's first touchdown, a 1-yard plunge with 4:01 to go in the first quarter.

But at the first play of the second quarter Oakley's Keith Cranney recovered Jacobson's fumble at Mullan's 32.

Express guarantees Young's pact Army drops Montana

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Express have settled any questions still surrounding the $60-million contract of quarterback Steve Young, Young's agent said Friday.

Leigh Steinberg, the agent who negotiated the multi-million dollar contract signed by Young last winter, said Friday that the United States Football League has "officially" fulfilled the terms of Steve's contract. "Neither Steinberg nor the Express would comment on what steps were taken by the Express."

The status of the controversial 34-year contract that has been called the richest in the history of sports was

Buckeyes to opt for Cotton

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — If Ohio State loses a close game to visiting Michigan Saturday, the 11th-ranked Buckeyes are expected to play in either the Cotton or the Fiesta Bowls, The Associated Press learned Friday night.

Of course, if Ohio State wins, the Buckeyes will be undisputed Big 10 Conference champions, and will face Southern California in the Rose Bowl.

"If we play respectable against Michigan and lose, we will probably play in the Cotton Bowl," an official of the Ohio State athletic department told the AP.

"Boston College is the No. 1 choice of a Sugar Bowl and Cotton Bowl," he said, "but ABC will apply the pressure and sweeten the pot to get Boston College in the Sugar Bowl. That's why the Cotton Bowl is here."

Jim Ray Smith, the president of the Cotton Bowl, will see the Buckeyes play the Wolverines on CBS-TV at 12:10 p.m. EST Saturday. The Cotton is one of six bowls that will be represented at the game, with the others being from the Rose, Fiesta, Bluebonnet, Citrus, and Holiday bowls.

The Cotton Bowl never has had a representative from the Big 10 appear in its contest. The Buckeyes have played twice in the Fiesta Bowl, defeating Pittsburgh earlier this year in the postseason contest in Tempe, Ariz.

A representative of the Citrus Bowl was amazed that so many bowls are still interested in the Buckeyes, even if they lose. Ohio State is 8-2 overall, and leads the Big 10 with a 6-2 record.

"I'm surprised the Cotton and Fiesta Bowls are here," said a spokesman for the Citrus Bowl. Ohio State never has played in the Orlando, Fla., contest either.

"The Fiesta Bowl would love to match Boston College and Ohio State. They would have Doug Flutie against Keith Byars, the two leading candidates for the Heisman Trophy, but I don't think they'll be able to pull that off," said the Ohio State athletic official.

Dietrich, Mushers gain finals

DIETRICH — Homestanding Dietrich and Carnas County advanced into the finals of the Dietrich Girls Invitational Basketball Tournament and will play for the title tonight.

Carnas County nipped Raft River 31-28 while Dietrich, after leading much of the game, had to rally from three points down in the closing minutes to knock off the Twin Falls Jayvees 36-33. Twin Falls and Raft River play for consolation honors at 8:30 p.m. in a preliminary in the all-North Idaho final.

Three stiffs for cripples by Sunny Knowles and another by Wendey Stoddard in the third quarter appeared to have broken Dietrich away from the young Bruins.

The lead hung about seven points until Twin Falls jumped ahead 33-30 with two and a-half minutes left. But the Bruins couldn't score again as Sherry Astle hit a field goal and two free throws and Laurie Kisser added a field goal to give Dietrich the victory.

Home pulled away as three minutes went to the bench with five violations each.

Denver rushes past Rockets

DENVER (AP) — Alex English continued his torrid pace with 32 points as Denver defeated Houston 113-102 Friday night before 19,887 fans — the biggest crowd ever to see a National Basketball Association game in Denver.

The Nuggets' fifth straight victory gave them an 8-2 record and moved Denver into a first-place tie in the Midwest Division with the Rockets, who lost for the second straight game after winning the first eight of the season.

Denver is off to its best start since 1976-77, its first year in the NBA. Denver entered a first-place tie in the 28th birthday as he helped neutralize Houston's Ralph Sampson with 14 points, 13 rebounds and six blocked shots.

Denver led from start to finish in trouncing Houston, which came into the game allowing only 99 points per contest. Sampson scored a season-high 23 points, all in the first three quarters, but the Rockets were hurt by limited playing time by Akeem Olatunju, who was in foul trouble throughout the game.

The Nuggets led 58-49 at the half, and were challenged only briefly by Houston at the start of the third quarter.

The Spurs, who were paced by Artis Gilmore's 33 points, held a 79-68 lead with 4:57 left in the third period and led 91-82 at the end of the quarter.

But the Pacers, after trailing 95-88, ran off 11 straight points to take a 99-96 lead. Thomas, who finished with 19 points, put the Pacers ahead for the first time with a layup at the 8:24 mark to give Indiana a 97-96 advantage.

The Pacers pulled to a five-point lead at 103-98 on a Thomas basket, but the Spurs rallied to take a 111-110 lead on Johnny Moore's steal and basket.

Herb Williams hit a free throw to tie the game 111-111 and later blocked two San Antonio shots on the Spurs' final possession in regulation play.

Williams missed a shot at the buzzer to send the game into overtime.

Thomas gave the Pacers a 122-117 lead with 1:19 left in overtime when he scored on a basket and converted a free throw, and Williams boosted the lead to seven at 124-117 when he scored on a drive.

Richardson, subbing for injured guard Andrew Toney, added two more as the Sixers built an 88-78 lead.

Detroit got a field goal from Kent Benson and moments later had a chance to cut Philadelphia's lead to nine points. Moses Malone, however, blocked Bill Laimbeer's shot and tossed a full-court pass to Charles Barkley, who slammed home a dunk to put the 76ers ahead 88-78 with 6:42 to play.

Bullets 118, Knicks 104 LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Gus Williams scored 25 points to lead Washington to its fifth straight victory, a 118-104 triumph over the New York Knicks.

The loss was the Knicks' ninth in the last 10 games and the seventh straight on the road. Bernard King led New York with a game-high 34 points, but it was not enough to keep the Knicks from sinking deeper into the Atlantic Division cellar.

Williams scored five of his 14 first-quarter points during a 9-0 Washington scoring spurt that enabled the Bullets to turn a 21-17 deficit late to a 26-21 lead. Washington never trailed thereafter.

The Bullets took a 36-27 lead into the second quarter and upped the margin to 15 points before settling for a comfortable 68-56 advantage at halftime.
