'No forgetting,' Reagan says in welcome rite

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
The Associated Press

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. — Saying "there will be no forgetting," President Reagan on Tuesday welcomed home 30 of the men held hostage in Lebanon for 17 days. He insisted the terrorists who murdered one of the captives "must be brought to justice." The president, who shook the hands of the former captives as they came off the plane that brought them back to American soil, also said "the homecoming won't be complete" until seven other kidnapped Americans are returned home.

'It was hell' in Beirut — A3

"Wait for a second until I swallow the lump in my throat," said Reagan. "There is only one thing to say, and I say it from the bottom of my heart in the name of all the people of our country: Welcome home." The Air Force band played the national anthem and relatives of the former hostages waved signs and flags in the bright afternoon sunshine. At the end of his brief remarks, Reagan looked around and said, with a wide grin: "Go home!" From Andrews Air Force Base, the newly reunited families planned to return to their homes across the land. Nine other former hostages made their own travel plans from West Germany, where they were flown after their release. Reagan and his wife stopped at Arlington National Cemetery en route to the arrival ceremony and laid a wreath of white and red carnations and a small white bouquet of tulips and other flowers at the grave of Robert Dean Stethem. He was the only fatality among the 153 people kidnapped aboard Trans World Airlines Flight 847 by Shiite Moslem hijackers on June 14. They beat Robby Stethem with mercy, then shot him in the head, Reagan said a few minutes later at Andrews. "Our joy at your return is substantial, but so is our pain at what was done to that son of America." "I know you care deeply about Robby Stethem and what was done to him. We will not forget this. His murderers must be brought to justice." There are, Reagan said, "promises to be kept." The president also mentioned the seven Americans taken captive in Lebanon previously and still in terrorist hands. "They must be released," Reagan said. "The homecoming won't be complete until all have come home." He said America was never distracted from the plight of the hostages. "Whatever the presumed grievance or political motive that caused these actions, let there be no confusion," the president said. "A crime was committed against you. Hijacking is a crime, kidnapping is a crime, murder is a crime and holding our people prisoner is a crime." See HOSTAGES on Page A2.

Music, bombs end day

Twin Falls show on CSI campus

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls will celebrate Independence Day Thursday with bursting aerial bombs and spreading pinwheels at the College of Southern Idaho. The show will start at 8:15 p.m. with the Twin Falls Municipal Band's renditions of patriotic tunes. As dusk falls, the Twin Falls City firefighters will set off the first Chinese shells. The display is planned for last no longer than 15 minutes. The 15-minute show, but Phyllis Prentice of Idaho Frozen Foods says spectators can expect a more elaborate show. "Instead of one (skyrocket), we are going to be sending up three or four," she says. "The finale is going to be a bigger burst with more shells." Last year, the grand finale included 17 shells sent off at once. This is the second year Idaho Frozen Foods has sponsored the display. There should be about a half-hour intermission between the band concert and the fireworks display, says music director Ted Hadley. The program will begin with John Phillip Sousa's "The Liberty Bell March," "Star Spangled Spectacular," arranged by John Cavasas, and "Armed Forces Salute," arranged by Bob Lowden, will follow. "Paul Ravare's Ride" will be narrated by Paula Brown Sinclair. The second half of the concert includes such well-known marches as "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "The Stars and Stripes Forever." The program will conclude with a sing-along of patriotic favorites. The concert will be held in front of the Pine Arts Auditorium so the building can provide an acoustic backdrop. Listeners should bring their own chairs. To keep traffic moving, several city police, CSI security students and security personnel from the college will be directing traffic at the campus's four exits. However, residents who want to leave the campus quickly may want to park off-campus and walk to and from Frontier Park and other parts of the campus.

'Strategic areas' now being sprayed

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — While Malathion supplies are "tight" for the statewide grasshopper spraying program, the pesticide shortage hasn't kept any wheat in the ground, according to Anita McGrady, a spokeswoman for the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. Tuesday, McGrady said, the planes were able to spray full-time, covering an additional 288,509 acres. That figure brings the statewide spraying total to 3,743,688 acres. "Right now we're looking good," McGrady said. Although a limited availability of Malathion has forced APHIS to concentrate spraying on heavily infested areas, McGrady said they are still accepting new contracts and have not had to turn anyone down. McGrady said they are trying to place Malathion in "more strategic areas." One of those strategic areas is the western edge of Twin Falls County, where borders ungrazed earl range areas located to the west in Elmore and Owyhee counties. Spraying has been completed in a roughly horseshoe-shaped pattern around the Twin Falls area, said Dale Beck, county extension agent for Twin Falls County. But the open end of that horseshoe will have to be closed off to keep grasshoppers from infesting the prime agricultural land enclosed by it. Spraying planned for Wednesday morning will provide a thin buffer zone closing off the open end of the horseshoe, Beck said. More spraying, however, will have to be done in the range and desert areas to the west over the next several days to provide a truly effective barrier, he added. Beck said farmers on the western edge of the county report that grasshoppers are advancing as fast as two miles a day. With the spraying program expanding to other Western states, the supply of Malathion is unlikely to increase. The demand for Malathion in Idaho "has just about sucked us dry," said Carl Tanner of American Cyanamid, the New Jersey-based company that produces the insecticide used in the grasshopper spraying program. Tanner said "the whole place went bananas" when U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block declared a state of emergency. Spraying coverage for Tuesday in Idaho were as follows: 84,016 acres in the Jerome, Gooding and Lincoln County block; 23,584 acres in the two contract areas covering Twin Falls County; 11,680 acres in the Nampa area; 45,600 acres in Oneida County; 30,576 acres in Cassia County; 33,849 acres in Bingham County; 28,013 acres in Washington County; and 9,200 acres near Lucky Peak.

Hot time on July 4 holiday forecast for Magic Valley

By JeNEE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

MAGIC VALLEY — With the National Weather Service predicting temperatures of 95 to 105 degrees and a wide variety of events scheduled, the Fourth of July celebration should be a hot time throughout Magic Valley. The 59th annual celebration in Rupert will feature a professional rodeo produced by Mickey Young's Silver Lining Rodeo Company. Rupert Chamber of Commerce officials say the rodeo is being sponsored by Dodge Trucks, and a number of top professional rodeo cowboys are expected to compete in the three-day event which begins Thursday. Other celebration events include parimutuel horse racing, a quarterhorse futurity and thoroughbred derby, a grand parade at 11 a.m. Thursday and mule races Saturday and Sunday. Reigning rodeo queen Shelly Schoen will crown a new queen Sunday from a field of five contestants, and the Ehcapa Riders from Boise will perform. In Buhl, streets have been decorated with plenty of western sage in preparation for the annual Sagebrush Days which will continue Thursday with an early morning breakfast. The day's events will include a parade, a trout scramble at 1:30 p.m., and a fireworks display at dusk. Slash-T Rodeo Company of Shoshone will produce a Western States Junior Rodeo with the first performance at 2 p.m. Thursday. Additional performances are scheduled for Friday and Saturday. Halley's traditional Days of the Old West celebration begins today with a children's parade at 11:30 a.m. An old-time shoot-out will take place on Main Street at 6 p.m., and Muzzie Braun will provide the music for a dance later in the evening. Thursday's events include another shoot-out at 11:30 a.m., followed by the main parade at noon and a community barbecue in city park at 4 p.m. Slash-T Company will produce an Idaho Cowboy's Association rodeo at the Halley rodeo grounds with performances at 8 p.m. tonight and 2 p.m. Thursday. Several other communities have planned local celebrations and fireworks displays for the patriotic observance. See HOLIDAY on Page A2

Gromyko's elevation unlikely to alter Soviet foreign policy

By WILLIAM J. EATON
The Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW — The surprise elevation of Andrei A. Gromyko from foreign minister to president of the Soviet Union will not affect Soviet foreign policy, Kremlin officials and diplomats said Tuesday. While he also resigned another government post as deputy premier of the Council of Ministers, Gromyko is expected to play the role of elder statesman on selected foreign issues, the observers said following the changes in high office announced early Tuesday. Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who was expected to assume the presidential title to go with his powerful post as Communist Party general secretary, indicated that he shunned the additional job to devote more time to the lagging economy. Eduard A. Shevardnadze, Comminist Party chief in the Republic of Georgia and a new Politburo member, was named to replace Nyeft for casting a string of Soviet votes at the United Nations in the depths of the Cold War, has been foreign minister for 28 years under five party leaders, starting with Nikita S. Khrushchev.

He has conferred with every American president since Franklin D. Roosevelt, advised Soviet leader Josef Stalin at Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam conferences and assisted in founding the United Nations. In nominating him for the largely ceremonial position, Gorbachev called Gromyko "an eminent politician, one of the oldest party members." The 57-year-old Shevardnadze, by contrast, has practically no foreign experience, although he is regarded by Western observers as a smart and effective leader in the Gorbachev style. As usual in the Supreme Soviet, both Gromyko and Shevardnadze were elected by a show of hands, with no dissenting votes. The Gromyko switch came as a surprise because each of Gorbachev's three most recent predecessors also held the office of president. See SOVIET on Page A2

Beirut captivity included beatings, political propoganda

RICHARD HERZBERG
Wife has reason to smile

By The Associated Press

Several former hostages gave a sordid account Tuesday of their captivity in Lebanon that included beatings, sexual abuse, living quarters and political propaganda—an account markedly different from the rosier picture conveyed during their ordeal.

In contrast to the sympathy a few hostages expressed for their captors' cause while in Beirut, some of the Americans savored freedom for the first time in 17 days now had harsh words for their kidnappers.

Peter Hill, 57, said in an interview in Wiesbaden, West Germany, that the Shiite militiamen had tried to indoctrinate the hostages.

"There was an intense indoctrination, but I didn't buy any of it," said Hill, who characterized the Amal militiamen as "thieves, thugs and murderers."

"They would arrive in the middle of the night, roust you out of bed and subject you to all this crap—whatever you call it," he said.

Arriving at Andrews Air Force Base Tuesday afternoon, Hill was asked what should be done about the hijackers.

"Hunt them down, arrest them, try them and kill them, just that simple," Hill said. "Do it the legal way. What else do you do with murderers?"

He said there was little difference between the hijackers and the Amal

'It was hell. It is still hell right now.'

—Richard Herzberg

militia, calling them all "animals." Hill and others also took issue with hostage Ailyn Conwell and others who expressed strong sympathy for the Amal cause during their captivity.

"In most part I agreed with Ailyn," said Jimmy Dell Palmer, who was freed last week ahead of the others because of a heart ailment. "But towards the last I was beginning to get the feeling that he was abusing a little bit too much toward their side."

"I'm being held captive by the people that are trying to indoctrinate me and tell me their cause and how right they are, and I cannot ignore the fact that I'm being held captive," Palmer said, speaking from his home in Little Rock, Ark.

"You have to understand that most of those people, those hostages, couldn't find Lebanon on a map three weeks ago," said Hill, who had been to the Middle East more than 100 times and was leading a group of 34 tourists at the time of his capture. "So the only thing they knew about this was the indoctrination to which they were subjected. So I don't blame them."

"Some people were sucked in," said Hill. "I do not go along with all this crap about their religious fervor," he said, adding that the captors' crimes violated "every rule" in the Koran.

Conwell said in an interview on NBC's "Today" show that "we were a pretty large group, highly individualized people. Let's face it, we were Americans, we still are Americans, and as such we have very varied opinions on just about anything that gets thrown up to the group."

Richard Herzberg, 33, of Norfolk, Va., one of four men separated from the others because of his Jewish-sounding surname, called the hijacking "a publicity stunt." He said his captors had "duped the American public into thinking this was fun and these are nice people."

"It was hell," said Herzberg, who was on his honeymoon at the time of his capture. "It is still hell right now. If anybody thinks it was a party, they're sick."

At first, he said, "I was held in a cell for eight days without a shower, without seeing light, without having a toilet."

Arthur Toga, 33, of St. Louis, told reporters in Wiesbaden that the hostages were kept in small groups in rundown apartments crawling with cockroaches and rats.

The worst accounts involved the first days of the hijacking while the hostages were still aboard TWA flight 847. Clinton Suggs, a Navy diver stationed in Norfolk, Va., said he was "next in line to be shot" and was only five feet from fellow Navy diver Robert Stethem who was first beaten then shot to death. Suggs said in an interview on the "Today" show that flight attendant Ull Derickson saved his life. "While they were beating Robert when we landed in Beirut the second time, I could hear him screaming and yelling and he was just going to sheer agony. And then I heard the gun go off."

"And then I could hear them say, 'One more. Five minutes.' And the hijacker came back where I was and he was kicking me and hitting me and calling me 'American pig.' And then the stewardess rushed over and she talked to him and said, 'No, please, please.'"

Her pleas apparently bought precious time, because within minutes other Lebanese militiamen boarded the plane. "And then right after that, we all stood up and we were rushed off the back of the plane onto a truck."

Brown said that "when they (the hijackers) first gave the demand that everybody should be down, people did not go down far enough. They came along and hit them on the back and hit them on the back of the neck and hit them on the back of the head."

Captive Navy divers talked of escape plans

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—Four Navy divers thought about escaping while they were held hostage together in Lebanon, but they were unable to devise a workable plan, they said upon returning to their home base Tuesday.

"We had a plan to try to get away, but there was no way we could," Petty Officer Kenneth M. Bowen told reporters after he arrived at Norfolk Naval Air Station.

The divers were greeted by cheers and applause from friends and relatives wearing yellow ribbons and carrying yellow balloons. A Navy C-131 plane brought the former hostages to Norfolk after they landed at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, D.C., Tuesday afternoon and were greeted by President Reagan and his wife.

Bowen was held along with Petty Officers Stuart L.J. Dahl, Clinton L. Suggs and Tony D. Watson in a house in Beirut after they were taken off the TWA plane that was hijacked June 14 en route from Athens to Rome.

Also held with them was Kurt L. Carlson, a reserve Army major, Dahl said.

A fifth Navy diver, Jeffrey J. Ingalls, was held at a different location with three other hostages. "I was treated fine. I always had food and water. I wasn't beaten or abused," he said.

Bowen said they thought about an escape plan when they were taken to the building's roof once and could see the Mediterranean Sea not far away.

Bowen said they figured that if they could get away from their armed captors, they could swim out into the Mediterranean until help arrived.

"We were always thinking in terms of an escape plan, not in the immediate future, but two to three months down the road if it got to that," Dahl said.

TWA pilot selected new spokesman

WASHINGTON (AP)—Before arriving at Andrews Air Force Base on Tuesday, the hostages chose a Navy C-131 plane brought the former hostages to Norfolk after they landed at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, D.C., Tuesday afternoon and were greeted by President Reagan and his wife.

Bowen was held along with Petty Officers Stuart L.J. Dahl, Clinton L. Suggs and Tony D. Watson in a house pressing sympathy for the cause of the Amal militia who had held the Americans in Lebanon.

Asked Tuesday after a bemoaning ceremony about the controversy over his remarks as spokesman, Conwell said, "I didn't know there was a controversy surrounding me acting as spokesman. I'm aware there was some controversy about some of the comments I made."

Some improvised new identification

BOSTON (AP)—At least two hostages, stripped of their identification during the first day of the TWA hijacking, surreptitiously wrote their names on their stomachs with pens so they could be identified if killed, a former captive says.

"The man who sat next to me and the lady from Lexington showed me how, when no one was looking, they wrote their names on their bellies."

Christos Valerogiannis of Lowell said during an interview Monday. "They wanted to be sure their families knew what happened to them if they were slain."

The woman was Pamela Sukeforth, 45, who said she wrote her name and address on her stomach after becoming convinced that she was going to be killed.

The Reagan administration may exclude legal and political advocacy groups from a $100 million-a-year annual charity drive among federal employees, the Supreme Court said Tuesday.

By a 4-3 vote, the justices said exclusion from the Combined Federal Campaign, or CFC, does not necessarily violate the groups' free-speech rights.

The decision, announced as the court concluded its 1984-85 term, reversed a ruling that forced the government to include advocacy groups as diverse as the NAACP, Legal Defense and Educational Fund and the National Right to Work Legal Defense Foundation.

The administration now may move again to exclude such groups, but Tuesday's ruling left open the possibility that the exclusion could be invalidated as impermissible "viewpoint discrimination."

The CFC, created in 1961, is conducted among the federal government, military, civilian and military employees each year. Charities that receive contributions through the CFC are barred from themselves engaging in on-the-job solicitation of federal workers.

Until 1980, participation was limited to charities that provided "traditional health and welfare services to needy people." But various legal and political advocacy groups that year successfully challenged their exclusion.

The challenge led President Reagan in 1983 to order the exclusion of groups "that seek to influence the outcome of elections or the determination of public policy through political activity or advocacy, lobbying or litigation."

Various groups portrayed the exclusion as an attempt by the administration to punish groups opposed to its policies.

Israel to free 300 more prisoners today

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Military sources said Tuesday that Israel will release 300 of its 735 Lebanese prisoners this morning, three days after the American hostages were freed in Beirut.

The prisoners — whose release was demanded by hijackers of a TWA jetliner — will be taken from the Afula military prison, 30 miles south of the Lebanese border, and set free north of Israel's security zone in south Lebanon, Israeli radio said.

The remaining prisoners will be released soon, depending on the security situation in south Lebanon, the radio said.

Israel has released in stages more than 500 prisoners from among 1,167 brought from Lebanon April 2 as the Israeli army was withdrawing from Lebanon. "We made it clear then that they were brought on a temporary basis to Israel, that we intend to release them, that we would release them in accordance with the development of the security situation in southern Lebanon," Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Monday.

The Shiite Moslem extremists who hijacked the jet June 14 and the more moderate Shiite Amal militia that held 39 American passengers and crew hostage in Beirut demanded the release of all the prisoners.

Government and military sources insisted there was no link between the release of the 39 Americans and release of the prisoners held by Israel.

Rabin said the prisoners had been scheduled for release June 5, but their release was delayed by attacks in south Lebanon and by the hijack. The hijackers had demanded release of the prisoners held by Israel, but Israel would not set them free while the hijackers held hostages.

More than 500 of the prisoners currently held are Shiite Moslems, about 160 are Palestinians and the rest are Sunni Moslems, Druse and Christians.

The radio said U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz sent a message to Prime Minister Shimon Peres thanking Israel for help during 17-day hostage crisis.

Peres, speaking Tuesday night to the American-Israel Chamber of Commerce, praised President Reagan for a "brilliant political operation" in obtaining the release of the American hostages.

Anglicans to ordain women

LONDON (AP) — The Church of England's policy-making General Synod voted Tuesday to allow ordination of women as deacons, the lowest rank of the Anglican clergy. But it stopped short of allowing them to become priests.

A deacon is in the third rank of holy orders, behind priests and bishops. A priest's assistant, a deacon usually becomes a priest after one year.

He is not allowed to perform ceremonies exclusively reserved for priests, such as Holy Communion.

Pope calls for solidarity among Slavs

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Tuesday extended his hopes for solidarity to fellow Slavs in the East bloc, appealing for religious freedom and for efforts to overcome divisions in Europe.

In the fourth encyclical of his papacy, the Polish-born pontiff lauded two ninth century saints who brought Christianity to the Slavs and set down his vision of a Europe spiritually united by a common culture and religion.

John Paul said he hopes that "when ideological conflicts have been conquered" Europe "may be for the whole world an example of just and peaceful coexistence in mutual respect and in-violate liberty."

The pope's 47-page letter was phrased in milder terms than he has sometimes used to denounce human rights violations in Poland and elsewhere in the Soviet bloc.

At a news conference, Vatican-based Czechoslovak Cardinal Jozef Tomko conceded the pope's language was guarded, saying this was due in part to the "delicate situation" the church faced in the East. He did not elaborate.

"Tough words would only have been counter-productive," said a Vatican source who spoke on condition that his name not be used.

The encyclical was issued just before a visit to Czechoslovakia by the Vatican secretary of state, Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, for a commemoration ceremony July 7 marking the work of the saints. Casaroli flew to Yugoslavia on Tuesday en route to Czechoslovakia.

The encyclical, entitled "Slavorum Apostoli" (Apostles of the Slavs), was issued in commemoration of the ninth-century evangelizing work of Saints Cyril and Methodius. An encyclical is a papal letter informing the church and its members of matters of importance.

John Paul, noting he is the first Slavic pope, traced the evangelization of the Slavs in regions that are now Poland, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union.

Agca says Bulgarian issued shooting word

ROME (AP) — Papal assessor Mehmet Ali Agca testified Tuesday that a Bulgarian diplomat gave him and other Turkish gunmen instructions on when and where to kill Pope John Paul II and how to leave misleading clues for police.

Agca, convicted of shooting and seriously wounding the pope during a general audience in St. Peter's Square May 13, 1981, is serving a life prison term.

It is largely due to his statements to investigators — after turning state's evidence that charges were brought against the three Bulgarians and four Turks being tried for complicity in the assassination attempt.

Judge Severino Santipichi, who has questioned Agca for 13 court sessions, turned the interrogation over to Prosecutor Antonio Marini to begin the prosecution's case.

Marini asked Agca to explain why he was carrying a note when he was captured stating he wanted to kill the pope because of Soviet and U.S. imperialism. Marini said it made no sense for Agca to carry the letter unless he expected to be caught.

The prosecutor also wanted to know why Agca had left his false passport, a pistol clip containing 12 bullets and clothing in his hotel room the day he shot the pope.

Agca said it was all planned by Lt. Col. Zheley Kolev Vassilev, a former aide to the military attache at the Bulgarian Embassy in Rome.

"He suggested that I write (the letter) because in the event of capture it would be useful to give the impression of a lone killer," he said in Italian, adding that Vassilev "was an expert on misdirection (investigators)."

The 27-year-old Agca said it was considered likely that he or one of the other three alleged Turkish accomplices in St. Peter's Square would be caught, so he left clues to lead investigators to conclude there was a lone gunman.

He said Vassilev and another Bulgarian defendant, Todor Alvazov, took him and the other Turks to the square twice to scout the shooting site.

Vassilev and Alvazov are now in Bulgaria, claiming diplomatic immunity.

Marini asked Agca to explain why he had written a note to himself containing the dates May 13, 17 and 20, all days when the pope would be appearing in public.

Agca said they were the possible dates for the shooting.

The prosecutor wondered if Agca had planned the attack himself.

"No, I didn't even know 10 words in Italian. I couldn't have known that on the 17th or 20th (that) the pope would have pastoral visits, leaving from the right gate, and so on," Agca said.

"Who told you?" Santipichi interrupted.

"All the information was collected by Vassilev Kolev," replied Agca, reversing the Bulgarian's names as he has throughout his testimony.

Marini told reporters during a recess that he was trying to establish that Agca's seemingly irrational actions actually were planned.

Graham's crusade attracts 250,000

SHEFFIELD, England (AP) — More than 250,000 people ended an eight-day crusade by U.S. evangelist the Rev. Billy Graham at a soccer stadium in the northern England, organizers said Tuesday.

Graham returned to Britain after a marathon 10-week crusade called last year comprising 40 rallies in six English regional cities.

Statement from the crusade organizers said 257,700 people attended the crusade that ended last Friday in Sheffield's Bramall Lane soccer stadium.

Five of the rallies were beamed by satellite to 51 other sites around the British Isles, as well as to Paris and to the central African nation of Zambia.

Coalition to push for controls on materials

By The Associated Press and Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Neighbors Network will be lobbying with a newly-formed, statewide coalition to fight for stronger federal, state and local laws to protect Idaho residents from the dangers of hazardous materials.

Members of the coalition held press conferences in Twin Falls and Boise Tuesday to announce the formation of Citizens Alliance for Progressive Action and to discuss the need for legislation to lobby as aggressively as industry does.

"We know about the difficulties of getting government and industry to respond to a problem," said Edna Rains of the neighbors network. "They simply are not accountable to the public. It is time for a change."

Last week the state declared a warehouse storing agricultural chemicals to be a fire hazard to Rains and others in the Buena Vista neighborhood. The group had tried unsuccessfully for 2½ years to persuade the city to use existing laws to take action against businesses storing hazardous materials in the Buena Vista neighborhood.

Yet, members say they will continue working with the city, pressing for stricter laws.

In Twin Falls, the group will be working through a committee, which also includes representatives from industry and city government, to lighten laws governing the storage of large amounts of hazardous materials. The committee was formed after the network's last unsuccessful attempt to strengthen Twin Falls' laws concerning the storage of hazardous waste.

The group would like new zoning laws to restrict the storage of pesticides and other hazardous materials to areas zoned for heavy industry, such as the Chamber of Commerce Industrial Park southeast of Twin Falls, members said.

On the state level, members will also be working for passage of a "right to know" law, such as the one defeated in the House Environmental Affairs Committee in the last legislative session.

Bob Chase, head of Professional Fire Fighters of Idaho, said the bill would assure that fire fighters and others who might come in contact with toxic materials or hazardous waste know what they are handling and how to do it properly.

Chase said the use of new chemicals and substances "poses an extraordinary threat to those of us who have chosen this profession. By knowing what and where toxic materials may be, a professional fire fighter can do the job better and more safely."

Several speakers in Boise criticized a pending bill in the U.S. House of Representatives. They contend it would cut funding for Superfund cleanup in Idaho and will make sure that people who live around the Enviroserve Services Inc. disposal site in Owyhee County never can collect for loss of value of their property.

"Idaho is being taken advantage of by other states who don't want to be responsible for their own PCBs," said Wendy Wilson of the Idaho Conservation League.

"We are outraged by the milktoast legislation currently being crafted in the halls of Congress that will leave Idaho and the rest of the country holding the 'toxic bag,'" said John Stocks of Idaho Fair Share.

The new Citizens Alliance for Progressive Action is comprised of representatives from the Idaho Migration Council, Snake River Alliance, Idaho Conservation League, League of Women Voters, Idaho Fair Share, Idaho Neighbors Network and labor organizations for fire fighters and service employees.

Educating the public to the dangers of hazardous materials will be stressed by the coalition, members of the neighbors network said.

"People are ignorant to it until it affects them personally," said Pam Shropshire of the network. "There needs to be a strong educational push."

Contenders line up for Knigge's seat

By DEAN S. MILLER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Republicans will meet July 9 to select their list of candidates to replace former state Rep. Lawrence Knigge.

Six candidates have already stepped forward to seek one of the three slots on a list of candidates to be sent to Gov. Mike Evans, according to Twin Falls County Republican party Chairman Mark Stubbs.

Knigge, who stepped down to accept a post in the state Department of Agriculture, was a five-term representative and one of the more moderate members of the local delegation. Stubbs says Knigge's resignation became effective Sunday.

Stubbs, Tuesday announced the names of six local Republicans who have called him to say they are interested in replacing Knigge:

- Lee Barnes of Buhl has been an active Republican and recently pushed an initiative concerning denturists in Idaho, Stubbs said.
- Allen Cummins is the mayor of Murtaugh and chairman of the Murtaugh School Board.
- Cella Folklinga of Buhl is secretary of the State Republican Central Committee and has been involved in the campaigns of Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, and Lt. Gov. David Leroy, Stubbs said.
- Douglas R. Jones, who lives south of Filer, is a farmer with Leslie R. Jones and Sons and an active Republican, Stubbs said.

Dave Monroe is the chairman of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Board—and operates a Chevrolet dealership in Buhl.

• Paul T. Smith is a Twin Falls attorney who ran unsuccessfully against Rep. Roy Brackbill, R-Twin Falls, in the last primary.

Stubbs says candidates have to be nominated at the July 9 meeting by a qualified precinct committee person. The precinct committee, composed of 42 members in Twin Falls County, will vote on a list of three candidates to be sent to the governor and will rank the candidates according to preference, Stubbs said.

Stubbs said any Republican who has been a registered voter in the district for at least one year, is a United States and Idaho citizen, and is nominated by a qualified precinct committee member, can be selected.

The meeting will be held in Courtroom Two of the Theron Ward Judicial building (the Twin Falls County courthouse) at 8 p.m.

Idaho Republican Party rules require that the meeting be held within 10 days of the representative's resignation date, and state law requires the local party to submit the list of three candidates to the governor within 15 days of the resignation.

Stubborn blaze closes forest area for holiday

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

CHALLIS — Hopes for containing a man-caused forest fire burning out of control southeast of Challis by tonight were shattered late Tuesday by high winds that whipped flames across a fireline.

The fire had prompted a closure order for the Yankee Fork area of the Challis National Forest on Monday, and it will remain in force through the Fourth of July holiday.

Challis Forest information officer Jim James said Tuesday evening the fire had spread to 1,045 acres and was "tickling up" again as winds began increasing. By 10 p.m. it was believed to have spread well beyond that acreage estimate.

Earl LaOrange, a spokesman for the Forest Service's eastern Idaho district, said the fire undoubtedly had grown much larger and was advancing toward Rankin Creek.

"It started running wild with erratic winds and hot spots. Now it's going over the hill," LaOrange said.

James said five helicopters were in the air, dropping fire retardant from giant-sized buckets in an effort to settle the hot spots. The fire was "crowning" in the timber in some sections of the burn area, he said.

About 600 firefighters and support personnel battled the fire throughout Monday night and Tuesday. Early Tuesday afternoon, crews had contained about half the fire by trenching around it, but James said, there were another two to three miles of trenching need at that time.

After the Tuesday evening flare-up, there were no predictions for a containment time on the fire.

The fire began Sunday evening and is burning in Douglas and Alpine fir and lodgepole pine, much of which is downed and dried timber.

Meanwhile, another blaze about 20 miles southwest of Salmon in the Williams Lake area of the Salmon National Forest had consumed about 600 acres of heavy timber by Tuesday night.

Al Wood, the Forest Service spokesman on the scene, said about 350 firefighters from surrounding states were battling flames that had advanced steadily to the northeast since being sparked by lightning on Sunday.

"They can't get in front of the fire at all. It's just too hot," Wood said. "They're just working the flanks and trying to hold what lines they've got."

James said forest officials are concerned about the upcoming holiday weekend because of the extremely dry conditions in the forests and the high temperatures.

"We are pleading with people to be extremely careful with smoking material, campfires, wood-cutting equipment and other fire hazards," he said.

All fireworks are prohibited on forests or other federal lands, he said, and persons going into the forests and on other public lands cannot take children.

Ricardo Fuentes gets a measles shot from Maggie Machala Tuesday

Measles shots

Parents act quickly in response to outbreak

By PAULA EUBANKS Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The South Central District Health Department vaccinated almost twice as many children in an immunization clinic Tuesday than it did last week.

Most of those children were 3- and 4-year-olds being vaccinated against measles for the first time, said Cheryl Becker, a nurse and epidemiologist with the department.

Many parents who brought their children to the clinic were responding to a recent outbreak of measles in Twin Falls, Becker said.

Becker said that she expected to vaccinate about 80 children Tuesday, almost double the 44 vacinated last week during the weekly clinic. The majority of Tuesday's group were vaccinated against measles.

Measles appeared in this area after an infected child from Burley was treated in Twin Falls.

The Burley area experienced a measles epidemic this spring, but fewer cases were reported last month, Becker said. She added that the few cases that remain are clustered around a day care center in Burley and that about 20 exposed children were immunized.

The department expects to discover the scope of the continuing problem in Burley by Friday, the end of the time in which a person exposed to the measles virus first would show symptoms of the disease.

The Twin Falls cases, affecting two sisters, were reported on June 10 and 22. One of the girls has recovered while the other has developed an ear infection as a result of the disease.

Although she expects no more cases to be reported in Twin Falls, Becker said that parents should watch for measles symptoms — such as runny nose, slight cough, sore throat and a temperature of 102 Fahrenheit. Also, a rash will develop on the face and move downwards. Measles can lead to complications such as pneumonia, Becker said.

Measles tends to be uncommon during the summer and affects children more severely than adults. The department can be reached at 734-5900.

Accident won't halt spraying

By DEAN S. MILLER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The grasshopper spraying program will be slightly slowed by the Monday crash of a DC-9 crop sprayer in Kinama, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official said Tuesday.

"It's bound to cause some kind of delay, but a serious one, no," said Anita McGrady, a public information officer for the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

The plane, owned by Biegert Aviation of Chandler, Ariz., caught the tip of its right wing on a lava outcrop during a bank turn and then touched down and skidded across land owned by Gail Van Tassell and into an alfalfa field leased to Reed Jensen and Sons. The plane was about seven minutes from emptying its on-board pesticide tank when the crash occurred.

"At first, I thought it was going to be a real blow to the block, which is one of the biggest blocks we have," McGrady said. "Fortunately, they've done a goodly portion of that area already," she said.

McGrady said Biegert will complete its contract for spraying with its remaining three planes, all of which were in the air Tuesday morning.

"They may have to work overtime. This is a contractor that has worked with USDA and they have always come through," she said.

By Monday afternoon, Biegert had sprayed 697,680 of the 750,000 acres they had contracted with APHIS to spray, McGrady said.

Subdivision wins approval

By ANNETTE CARY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Neighbors of the proposed Natasha Ann Subdivision finally ran out of reasons the Twin Falls City Council would accept to prohibit the development.

The council voted 6-1 Monday to allow construction to begin, after listening to debate on the matter since January. Council member Mary McCusky said the single vote opposing the subdivision.

McCusky said she opposed the subdivision because "it's too congested" and there "is no exit at the end of the lot."

City engineer Gary Young said the final plat for the development meets all city codes.

"If you turn this down, we feel you will have denied our civil rights to do what we want with our property as long as it meets city code," said Kim Nilsen, a partner in the project and general contractor. "The neighbors don't have a right to say what I can't do on my property."

Neighbors of the proposed development have argued that the Several burglaries reported

TWIN FALLS — Several burglaries were reported in Twin Falls Tuesday, including the theft of $250 in cash from the ITEX Business Machines, six Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

Officials at ITEX reported someone entered the business sometime prior to 8 a.m. Monday by breaking through a rear door. A locked cabinet was then forced open and the money, including coins and currency, was taken.

A $400 sun roof was taken from a vehicle belonging to Tracy Dean Gutierrez at 538 Second Ave. N. on Monday. The owner reported the sun roof was on the seat of his unlocked pickup truck, which was parked at his home between noon and 1:50 p.m. Monday.

An Oregon resident, Steven Hohn told police someone entered his model room Monday night and took a cassette deck and cassettes valued at $200. He said the room was locked at the time and there was no evidence of a forced entry.

4 arrested after TF gun theft

TWIN FALLS — Two men and two male juveniles were arrested in Boise over the weekend as suspects in a Twin Falls burglary involving about $3,200 in guns.

Public Safety Director Tim Qualls said the adults were arrested by Idaho State Police near Boise following a chase Monday morning. The two, Howard Gurule, 23, and Anthony Garcia, 31, both of Burley, were arraigned on first degree burglary charges Tuesday and returned to the Twin Falls County Jail in lieu of $1,000 bond each. The public defender was appointed to represent the pair.

Jack's Pawn Shop at 103 Addison Ave. W., was entered between 10 p.m. Thursday and 4 a.m. Friday. Jack Clough, owner of the pawn shop, said entry was gained by breaking a glass in the front door. A glass display case inside the building was then broken and a total of 14 guns removed from the display. Damage was estimated at an additional $500.

Qualls said state officers notified Twin Falls police after finding more than a dozen guns in their car. They were arrested when the vehicle lost a wheel and overturned.

Money OK'd for street repair

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council has made an additional $25,000 of city money available to help repair streets damaged by this year's severe winter.

City streets were damaged by frost heaves in 95 places, said City Engineer Gary Young.

The money includes $4,000 to pay for two temporary employees to help with repairs, if needed, and $21,000 for additional asphalt to use for patching and overlaying streets.

Crash

A Biegert staffer in Arizona said by phone Tuesday the plane is not salvageable and will be carted away by Biegert staff in rented equipment or by someone hired by Biegert.

She said the pilot, Bob Wofford, has a "tremendous amount of flying experience."

APHIS is sure the 150 gallons of Malathion remaining on board the plane were burned in the fire that followed the crash, so there is no residual environmental danger.

McGinnis said the plane crashed in Reed's alfalfa field, according to Afton Van Tassel, in whose field the plane first hit.

She said there have been no flurries of the fire in the plane's fuselage since Monday, and the Lincoln County Search and Rescue team is on the scene to keep on-lookers from getting too close to the downed plane.

Van Tassel said the plane destroyed some hay in her field, but the damage was limited because a first cut of hay had recently been taken off.

Federal Aviation Administration officials said an investigation of the crash would be conducted if the Agriculture Department, to whom the plane was contracted, requested it.

two four-plexes and a single-family dwelling planned for three-quarters of an acre would not suit the character of the neighborhood.

Most residences near the 1900 block of Heyburn Avenue East — where the development is planned — now sit on a full acre of land, even though the area is zoned for four-plexes, neighbors have said.

They were unaware that zoning changes allowing apartment houses in their area had taken place following the adoption of a comprehensive land use plan in 1980, they said. Notification was through legal advertisements only.

The neighbors had earlier delayed construction of the apartments by pointing out a discrepancy in the code regarding short, private driveways on undeveloped land, and then by arguing that the changed plans exceeded the density allowed by the code. One of the three proposed apartment buildings was then changed to a single-family dwelling.

fireworks of any kind with them. James said that while the fire has not spread into Yankee Fork, Bonanza or Custer, the area must remain closed until further notice because of the potential danger. Should the fire begin crawling or winds shift, it could move into the area at a high rate of speed, trapping persons who might be camping, fishing or hiking in the area, James explained.

Increasing winds, made firefighting difficult for helicopter and ground crews, the firefighting force from Idaho, Wyoming, Utah and Montana also included three tanker planes that continued dropping retardant.

James said temperatures were in the upper 80s in the East Basin area, where the fire is centered, and 95 degrees in Challis. This, along with

Robbery suspect remains at large

SHOSHONE — Authorities were still looking for a suspect Tuesday in what officers say was an attempted armed robbery at the Amoco Service in Shoshone Monday evening.

Lincoln County Prosecutor Doug Rose said the suspect entered the business about 6 p.m. Monday, armed with a pistol. He forced the lone woman attendant in the store and service station to go into a freezer after demanding money.

However, Rose said, apparently the would-be robber left without taking the small amount of money that was in the cash register or merchandise.

He said the reason for this is not known.

The woman who was on duty was not harmed and was not locked in the freezer. Rose said roadblocks were set up briefly and called off without locating any traces of the suspect. It was not known if he had a vehicle or was on foot.

The suspect was apparently a white male, about six-feet, three-inches tall and of slender build, Rose added. He wore a ski mask, dark shirt and corduroy trousers. Rose said the investigation and an inventory of the Amoco Service merchandise were continuing.

Shoshone voters pass levy

By JANE BUCKWAY Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — A $70,000 supplemental maintenance levy to repair school roofs was approved in Shoshone Tuesday.

A simple majority vote was required to pass the one year tax override. 255 patrons voted for the measure, while 155 voted no.

This is the second time this year Shoshone voters have considered a maintenance levy. A $500,000, five-year facility levy, requiring a two-thirds majority vote, was defeated by 30 votes in May.

District officials say the money from Tuesday's successful levy will be used to replace the flat roof section of Lincoln Elementary School in Shoshone, re-roof the primary building and do patch repair at the high school.

Some funds will also be used to replace unsafe and unsightly doors at the elementary school.

Jerome man wins $82,500 judgment

TWIN FALLS — After a three-day trial, a Jerome man was awarded $82,500 late last week in a claim against Gateway Trailer Center of Twin Falls over a stove that exploded.

Lloyd Archie Bonawitz filed a $500,000 claim in Fifth District Court Aug. 23, 1984. Gateway Trailer Center and its employees, Bill Crumbliss, Brent Fenstermaker and Dan Lamers were named as defendants.

Bonawitz claimed the business had repaired a water leak in his camping trailer April 17, 1984. During the time the trailer was in the business' possession, a propane fuel line near the stove had become disconnected, creating a hazardous condition, he alleged.

When he attempted to light the burner of the stove a few days later, there was an explosion, he claimed. Bonawitz sought damages for property and physical injuries, which included burns to his faces, arms and hands. The court later dismissed a request by Bonawitz for $250,000 in punitive damages.

A trial began June 25. A jury returned with a verdict three days later at 11 p.m. The jury found negligence on the part of Gateway Trailer Center, Crumbliss and Fenstermaker and awarded Bonawitz $82,500.

At 26, astronaut candidate mixes astrophysics, athletics

By JOHN DREYFUSS
Los Angeles Times

BERKELEY, Calif. — Tamara Elizabeth Jernigan lives here in a typically Spartan graduate student apartment, one flight up and five blocks south of the University of California, Berkeley.

Humphrey Bogart's picture, taped to the wall, casts a macho eye over her living room. A stereo behind glass doors stands in high-tech contrast to the furnished apartment's tired-looking chairs and couch where Jernigan curls up to study astrophysics or to run mental replays of her latest volleyball game.

A softball glove and a volleyball occupy one of the room's three chairs. Nothing else seems out of place. Indeed, there isn't a lot to be out of place. Jernigan does not surround herself with creature comforts.

"I live very simply — like a graduate student. Most of my time is spent studying or doing something athletic," said the doctoral candidate from Santa Fe Springs, 13 miles southeast of Los Angeles, who excels at volleyball, racquetball and softball and is hearing tennis.

Physicist and pilot, athlete and accomplished astrophysicist, scholar and accomplished chef — Jernigan this month became the nation's youngest astronaut candidate. She is 26.

The word candidate, in this case, doesn't mean much. Essentially, Jernigan is in the club. She must undergo a year of training in Houston before the National Aeronautics and Space Administration drops "candidate" from her title, but, as Jernigan said, "Nobody has bombed out of the program yet."

Tammy Jernigan appears vaguely uncomfortable in her new role as astronaut candidate. "I feel so pretentious," she said out of the blue, in the middle of an interview.

Yet competing and succeeding is nothing new to the 5-foot-6-inch, 130-pound, blue-eyed woman who lets her straight brunette hair hang below her waist and eschews makeup except for a little mascara.

Jernigan has been a successful student and athlete as far back as she can remember. As a sixth-grader in 1971, her name was engraved on a trophy awarded the best female athlete in the Santa Fe Springs' Lakeway School. She was a valedictorian in 1977 at Santa Fe High School, and volleyball "Player of the Year" in the California Interscholastic Federation's southern section, 3A division.

College acceptance letters arrived from Princeton, the Air Force Academy, Stanford and UC Berkeley. After a semester at Princeton, she felt the Ivy League university offered an excellent physics program, but the weather and the volleyball programs "left something to be desired." She transferred to Whittier College.

"She had excellent physics and athletic programs, especially volleyball," Jernigan said, so she transferred again. At Stanford she played varsity volleyball and graduated with honors in physics. She stayed at the Palo Alto university to get a master's degree in aeronautics.

Then, two years ago, she came to Berkeley in the where she earned a master's degree in astronomy and is working on her doctorate in the same subject while simultaneously serving as a research scientist at NASA's Ames

Research Center in Mountain View.

In her spare time — what there is of it — Jernigan plays second base on both the astronomy department and Ames Research Center softball teams.

Debbie Meche Anderson, who has been close to Jernigan since seventh grade, describes her friend as giving and loyal. "My mom died about five years ago," Anderson said. "She was in a coma for five months, and Tammy was around all the time she could be. She was very busy, but she found time to be here with me. She just let me know it would work out."

When Jernigan learned this month that she had been selected from among 782 women and 4,142 men who applied two years ago for the astronaut program, she changed careers.

Patriotism is a lot like sex: it's hard to discuss in public

Editor's note: Erma Bombeck is on vacation for two weeks and presents some of her most popular columns of the recent past.

By ERMA BOMBECK

Erma Bombeck
At wit's end

The American people do something better than anyone in the world. They love their country.

A whopping 89 percent admitted this in a recent Gallup Poll. That's pretty amazing when you realize that patriotism is a lot like sex to people. It's too personal to talk about in public or to flaunt on a bumper sticker.

Patriotism is also hard to diagnose. Most people don't realize they've got it.

Some people look at the Statue of Liberty and cannot speak. Others look at the flag on the side of a space shuttle and tears begin to well in their eyes. Occasionally, people will find themselves sitting a little taller when an Olympic medal is received on an athletic bond and the massive United States flag unfurls behind him. Or the throat may hurt when a postage from Tran puts his hand over his heart and salutes a flag he has not seen for 14 months.

These may seem like flu symptoms. It's patriotism.

Sometimes you travel with patriotism and don't know it. Like the Russian who said to me, "I've never been to the United States. What are the borders like?"

I told her there were no border patrols or checkpoints or walls to go through between the states. All she wanted was to see the Statue of Liberty and eat some ice cream. She was an amused California trooper who watches you eat three oranges and four bananas that you can't bring into California.

Or the Australian woman who cornered me on a book tour and said, "Tell me how far the American women are now in their struggle for liberation so that we will know where we'll be 25 years from now."

I thought the flush was menapausal. It was patriotism. We take for granted that we elect peanut farmers to the Presidency, have a Bill of Rights for children, give hurricanes human names, have a bell that is a symbol of freedom with a crack in it, are a nation of immigrants from every pocket of the world, and have more people watch "Dallas" on television than voted in the last election.

You have to love a nation that celebrates its independence every July 4, not with a parade of guns, tanks and soldiers who file by the White House in a show of strength and muscle, but with family picnics where kids throw Frisbees, the potato salad gets lily, and the flies die from happiness.

You may think you've overreacted, but it's patriotism.

— JOY-FULL

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with a wonderful man. I have known for a little less than a year. Ours is a very loving relationship and we communicate well, but he is very vague about his past. This makes me wonder if maybe he is married.

How can I find out (without his knowing) if he was ever married in Tennessee, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Alabama, Missouri, Kansas or Kentucky? Our wedding date is getting closer, and I am becoming more and more nervous.

— NERVOUS IN ILLINOIS

DEAR NERVOUS: Marriages are a matter of public record, but I will take you some time to gather the information from each state unless you engage a private investigator. (They don't come cheap.)

If yours is really a "loving relationship" and you communicate well, a direct "Are you married?" is not an unreasonable question to ask your fiancé. And if his response still leaves you with doubts, I urge you to postpone your marriage until you have this "wonderful" man checked out thoroughly.

Dr. Spock says shy children need parental help to get going socially

By REDBOOK

Shy children usually grow up to become sociable adults but they need parental help in getting started.

Some children are naturally sociable and some are not, according to a column on parenting by Dr. Benjamin Spock in the July issue of Redbook, and it is the more sociable child who tends to be more popular with other youngsters.

"As a parent," Spock said, "you can modify these types somewhat, but you can't turn one into the other."

First children tend to be less sociable than their younger brothers and sisters because they have no older siblings to copy and so model themselves — exclusively — on their parents. Sociability does not come easy for them, but there are compensations.

"Oldest children are more likely to be good students," said Spock. "They are more likely to go into the 'helping professions' — teaching, nursing, social work or medicine. And the accomplished, successful people who are listed in 'Who's Who' are disproportionately first children."

Spock advised parents of first children to encourage sociability by not always putting the child in the center of the family stage. First children, he said, often get five times as much attention as necessary. They learn to expect fuss and admiration and resent not getting it from other children.

A second child, "left more to his own devices, takes the initiative when feeling sociable and learns to lay on the charm."

"With some help a first child can learn this, too," Spock said, "not through your ignoring him but through your allowing him to take the initiative half the time."

Spock said all children, once they can walk, should be taken to playgrounds and other places where kids congregate. When they reach three years of age, a nursery school or day care center can be a good place for children to get used to rough-and-tumble play. Parents also can demonstrate how to play, take turns, share.

Spock said that when children reach elementary school age, parents can invite other children, one at a time, to share treats such as picnics and zoos, and to meals where the food is "super" — hamburgers, hot dogs or pizza.

The pediatrician admitted that in a sense this is buying popularity for your child, and bought popularity doesn't last.

"However," he said, "you are operating on the assumption your child has appealing qualities but hasn't had a chance to show them because he or she is shy and defensive, or because the neighborhood kids are cliquish."

Sometimes a child is not shy but is selfish with toys and therefore not much fun to play with.

Police get calls on salesmen

TWIN FALLS — A number of calls have been received by Twin Falls city and county law enforcement agencies this week about "pushy" sales personnel who have called at homes and caused problems.

Twin Falls city detective Mick Turner said the summer season is the time when many persons are traveling from area to area, selling items that appear to be bargain and using high-pressure tactics.

He said several calls have been received regarding storm window salesmen, but he pointed out the department needs additional information in order to identify the individuals and to check out their tactics.

Anyone who is contacted by sales persons who they feel may not be legitimate should contact their police or sheriff's office, he said.

Turner said if persons wish to contact him personally at the police department he will put the information into the computer system to find out the experiences with the individuals in other areas of the state.

Council gives fireworks cash

WENDELL — The Wendell City Council donated $100 for the American Legion July 4 fireworks display in Wendell.

Legion member Dick Collins said the Wendell display is getting bigger and better every year, drawing many people into town. He asked for a donation and the council unanimously agreed this week to provide the funds.

Collins said the display this year will be at the track behind the high school gymnasium instead of at McGinnis Park.

"We can control the crowd a little better there," he said.

In other business, Councilman Olsen asked for a variance to allow her restaurant, Molina's, to have a beer and wine license.

Councilman Loyd Little said state law prohibits such a license for a business located within 300 feet of a school, and Molina's is across the street from the elementary school.

Wendell Police Chief James Howe said Olsen must get permission from a state liquor agent before the city can give her a license.

Court affirms suit dismissal

BOISE (AP) — A district judge acted correctly in dismissing a Blaine County woman's malpractice suit against an attorney, the Idaho Court of Appeals has ruled.

The court issued its decision recently in the case of Mary Pichon, who charged attorney Willis Benjamin didn't serve her interests after she hired him for a real estate transaction.

Fifth District Judge George Granata was correct in dismissing the suit after finding the two-year limit on malpractice claims had expired, the appeals court said.

In a separate case, the appeals court found Mrs. Pichon was improperly denied attorney fees for a dispute over the sale of her Ketchum property.

The court sent the matter of fees back to Granata for reconsideration, but left unchanged other aspects of the case, including a finding against an investment company and the dismissal of Mrs. Pichon's claim against title insurers.

Burley police offer free films

BURLEY — The Burley Police Department has added audio-visual capabilities in its continuing battle against drugs and child abuse.

Four award-winning audio-visual films have been purchased by the department for public information and education on the two serious offenses.

Police Department officials say the programs are available free to churches, schools, civic groups and parent organizations and may be borrowed by calling Crime Prevention Officer Dennis Dexter of the Burley Police Department.

Dexter said the film "Drugs of Abuse" provides an overview of America's drug problem. It explains the five classes of abused drugs and examines the symptoms of each, the paraphernalia associated with each and offers other helpful information.

It will be easier for parents and school personnel to determine if a child has been smoking marijuana after viewing another film, "Marijuana in the Classroom," the officer said. This film offers a look at the marijuana problem among today's youth.

Burley water misusers will be ticketed

BURLEY — City water users will be cited for infractions of the low pressure usage ordinance.

Police Chief Leman Messley told the Burley City Council Monday he will help the city curb misuse of the water system by asking his patrolmen to issue citations to offenders.

Users of the low pressure irrigation system will be liable for citations resulting in fines if they irrigate on days other than those prescribed by city ordinance. Schedules that list use-days are available at the city office.

"It looks like the schools are the biggest offenders," said Councilwoman Frances McDonald, after hearing a report from City Water Superintendent Don Hill that cited examples of misuse of the city schools.

Hill contended that water at the Dworshak school was left running 24 hours a day and, in at least one instance, was not moved for 48 hours.

Hill said his department has received complaints because some residences do not have enough pressure to water their yards.

City Attorney Bill Parsons agreed to send a warning letter to Superintendent Norman Hurst advising that the schools will be cited if the alleged misuse continues.

Hurst said Tuesday he had not been notified of the problem. He said the schools have a lot of lawn to be watered and that a decision would be made concerning the problem after any complaint is filed.

Hill said he had contacted the school maintenance department about its watering practices. Maintenance supervisor Bill Ruffel could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Councilman Kenneth Fronk said consideration should be given to cutting the schools off from the low pressure system if necessary.

In other action:
• The council voted to issue a renewal of a liquor license to Larry Boyd of Boyd's Lounge and Cafe.

Magic Valley history offered to area youth

JEROME — A new class, entitled Magic Valley Story, will be offered as a "Kiddie course" at the College of Southern Idaho beginning July 8.

The class is open to students in fourth to eighth grades and will be held from 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday for two weeks.

The size of the class will be limited. Students are asked to call 733-9554, extension 363, to register.

The class will deal with the history of the area, geared to the level of the students, according to instructor Virginia Ricketts, a local historian who teaches a similar class for the adult continuing education program.

Ricketts says it will be an informal class to encourage interest in local history, and she plans to have all students make something to take home.

Pictures of many early schools will be available for each of the students.

Ricketts says she plans to take the students on two tours. One tour will include one of the ferry sites for crossing the Snake River, and another tour will be along a portion of the Oregon Trail.

In addition, Ricketts says she is planning to have the students make rubbings of early gravestones and sidewalks. Another possible project is research into the oldest building either in the students' own block or town.

Since this is the first time the class is being offered, Ricketts says she is really excited about teaching it and hopes it will promote more awareness among young people of the history and pioneer aspects of this area.

The class will be particularly helpful to newcomers to the Magic Valley and will give them a boost toward the required Idaho History class, as well as being a fun way to get acquainted with the area, she says.

Budget chief, Leroy at odds on state deficit

BOISE (AP) — The governor's budget chief and the state official who may run for governor next year disagree on whose fault it is that Idaho apparently has a deficit of nearly $7 million in the budget which ended last weekend.

Martin Peterson, director of the Division of Financial Management, said Tuesday the budget process "is and always will be, a joint function of the legislative and executive branches of government."

The Legislature has a number of options available to reduce spending or increase taxes to balance the budget, Peterson contended.

Lt. Gov. David Leroy said Idaho laws and the state Constitution require the governor to balance the budget.

Peterson said the facts are that the Legislature overspent the state, budget by $2 million, and compounded the problem by spending a $3.8 million reserve fund.

Evans ordered a $14.3 million cut in state spending nearly a year ago, then in January restored $3.8 million in spending. Peterson contended that the governor had to restore spending authority.

"Based on the revenue situation in January, both the Legislature and the governor agreed that there would be sufficient revenues available to fully fund the fiscal year 1985 budget," Peterson said.

Scientists hope to proceed today with reactor meltdown experiment

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Scientists hope to proceed today with a staged experimental nuclear reactor meltdown paralleling conditions that led to the 1979 Three Mile Island accident, a spokeswoman for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory says.

The test had been scheduled tentatively for Tuesday. But that plan was scrapped because scientists needed more time than expected to prepare some instruments, said Penny Phelps, a public affairs specialist at INEL.

She said the Fission Product Measuring System had been isolated from other parts of the reactor during preliminary tests to protect components from heat, and workers were unable to ready the equipment in time today.

"But everything looks fine now. It looks like a good go for it (Wednesday)," she said.

The test will be the first of its kind, said Douglas Croucher, EG&G Idaho manager. However, he said the time period for the test, 30 minutes, would be much shorter than the accident at Three Mile Island.

Scientists want to find out how many hazardous radionuclides are released in a severe accident, and how they move through the power-generating system. Information learned would be used to review licensing criteria for commercial nuclear power plants and to assess the accuracy of methods used to predict fission product release and transport. During the test, valves in the emergency core cooling system will be opened and coolant from the primary cooling system will be released.

As the reactor core gradually is uncovered, it is expected to reach temperatures of 3,600 to 4,400 degrees Fahrenheit, said EG&G and federal Department of Energy officials.

As the heat melts fuel rods and their protective covering, fission products and aerosols, which help transport the hazardous radionuclides, will be released. Scientists plan to track the radionuclides through the primary coolant system and the containment building to other areas where some possibly could reach the environment, said Croucher.

Court says parents may sue over death

BOISE (AP) — Even if a parent abandons a child, the parent later may sue for damages over that child's death, the Idaho Supreme Court says.

The court on Tuesday voted 4-1 to award a $275,000 verdict awarded to Paul Black, a Cheyenne Indian, in the death of his 18-year-old daughter, Leona Black. The girl was struck by a vehicle operated by Brian Dale Reynolds in 1979 as she walked along Idaho 57 in Bonner County.

Reynolds' attorney argued that Black had no right to sue over his daughter's death because he had abandoned the girl years earlier and had little or no contact with her.

A key portion of the ruling, the court said unless there is formal termination of parental rights, a surviving parent has the right to sue for that child's death.

Idaho laws say that if two parents survive, the parent who abandoned the child has no right to sue over the child's death, the court said. It also noted that the jury apparently did not accept Reynolds' argument that Black had completely abandoned his daughter — as it would not have awarded $275,000 damages.

The majority also upheld the damage award and rejected Reynolds' request for a new trial based on newly discovered testimony.

First District Judge Dar Cogswell said he found no reason to substitute his judgment for that of the jury on the amount of the damages.

In the only dissent, Justice Robert Bakes said in such cases, Cogswell should have considered what damages he would have awarded if he had heard the case without a jury, then compared that to the actual judgment to determine if it were excessive.

Judge refuses to dismiss kidnap case

VIRGINIA CITY, Mont. (AP) — State District Judge Frank Davis refused Tuesday to dismiss the charges of deliberate homicide, kidnapping and aggravated assault against "mountain man" Don Nichols.

Defense attorneys had argued Nichols couldn't receive a fair trial in Montana because of intensive news coverage of his son's trial in the same case.

Davis also rejected another defense request that news cameras be barred from the courtroom when the elder Nichols' trial starts here Monday.

The Dillon judge made his rulings without reviewing an extensive collection of news articles and television videotapes that had been gathered by defense attorney Donald White.

"I concede there has been massive publicity," Davis said. "But it has not been prejudicial publicity. It's been more of an irritating type of publicity" composed of "repetitious, monotonous non-stories."

Nichols, 54, is charged with kidnapping Kari Swenson, 23, of Bozeman last summer as she jogged on a mountain trail near Big Sky. His is also charged with fatally shooting Alan Goldstein, one of two searchers who discovered where Swenson was being held the next day.

The assault charge alleges Nichols threatened the second searcher with a rifle.

Rupert man, 2 others, on spud panel

BOISE (AP) — Two Idaho Falls men, Leroy Reed and John Stanger, have been appointed to the Idaho Potato Commission.

The appointments were announced by Gov. John Evans on Tuesday.

Roger E. Rupert was reappointed to the industry promotion board. All three will serve three-year terms.

Lyle Smith, Felt, was re-appointed to the Idaho Wheat Commission and a Malad man, Ren Thompson, was appointed to a new six-year term on the Idaho Parks and Recreation Board.

Jerry Wolf of Idaho Falls will serve as regional chairman of the Children and Youth Council until Oct. 1.

Grabbing gun from officer leads to jail

SANDPOINT (AP) — A magistrate has set bond at $10,000 for a 19-year-old Ketchum man who allegedly held Sandpoint police officer at bay with the officer's own weapon.

John M. Dzwak, 19, also known as John Gewock, faces charges of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, driving with a suspended license and failure to appear in court on a misdemeanor charge.

He made his first appearance Monday before Judge Debra Helse and is being held in the Bonner County Jail. A preliminary hearing has not been set.

Dzwak allegedly held policeman Steve Feldhausen at gunpoint for several minutes after the officer served him with a warrant for failure to appear in court on a misdemeanor charge. Police Chief Bill Kice said.

Kice said the officer was taking Dzwak to his patrol car when the man allegedly ducked, spun around and grabbed Feldhausen's .357 magnum.

Feldhausen backed away from the man, Kice said. "He reacted perfectly to lessen the threat," Kice said.

A friend of the suspect was able to defuse the situation by talking Dzwak out of "doing something stupid," Kice said. The weapon was turned over to Feldhausen, who completed the arrest, Kice said.

Judge considers Change of venue

BLACKFOOT (AP) — A district judge is considering whether a change of venue should be granted in the murder case of Rick Leavitt, 26.

The Blackfoot man is accused in the stabbing death of 21-year-old Danette Ely, also of Blackfoot, last summer.

Leavitt says his trial should be held outside of the Blackfoot area because publicity surrounding his case could prevent him from getting a fair proceeding.

Seventh District Court Judge H. Reynolds George took the matter under advisement after a hearing on Tuesday.

What to know about apartment leases before signing them

Do you feel queasy whenever you have to sign a lease because you fear that, more often than not, the landlord has language in the lease that lets him walk all over your rights?

Do you realize that one of the toughest clauses in the standard lease agreement provides that you, a tenant, may be evicted with five days' notice if your landlord deems your conduct objectionable or improper?

As a reasonably intelligent individual who has been and is a tenant in New York City as well as a homeowner in exurbia, I am acutely aware that my understanding of leases, subleases, rental applications, lease renewals, parking space leases, storage space leases, all the rest, is inadequate. So, probably, is your understanding. For instance, there is a provision common to New York leases (and those of other areas) which allows the landlord under certain circumstances, after having signed a lease with a tenant and having received the required money, to postpone indefinitely the delivery of the apartment. Under these circumstances, reports Don Biggs in a new book, "How To Avoid Lawyers: A Step-by-Step Guide to Being Your Own Lawyer in Almost Every Situation," the tenant has no cause for legal action and can lose the required up-front money. Bates suggests that this clause be omitted or changed to ensure delivery of the apartment.

Another common clause provides that the residence must be used as a private residence. If you plan to use the apartment for professional purposes, this must be put in writing to the landlord, or the landlord may abrogate the lease.

Still another common clause, says Bates, "is like a sneak rider on a piece of legislation." You, the tenant, agree that the storerooms are provided and maintained gratuitously by the landlord; you, in turn, agree that if you or your family use the storerooms, it shall be at your own proper risk; the landlord is not to be or become liable thereby for any loss or damage to persons or property because of such use. But then the paragraph goes on, "whether such property be contained in the storerooms, in the demised premises or in any portion of said building."

Note: The paragraph starts by talking about storerooms and concludes by absolving the landlord of responsibility for damage to the tenant's property "in the demised premises or in any portion of said building." (Long ago, I rented a tiny apartment in lower Fifth Avenue and used the storerooms for my extra furniture. When I was ready to move, I went down to the storage space: no furniture. I hunted; nothing. No one cared; no one could be accused. I left the apartment with the little I had in the apartment. I learned this lesson the really hard way.)

Of course, everything written above refers to what is known in the trade as a landlord's lease. And a landlord can no more absolve himself of liability for negligence than can the owner of a parking lot. But if you are desperate for a place to live, at least find out what you are getting into.

In addition to prohibitions against children and pets, you might be handed a lease that restricts what you can do with and on a balcony (no hibachi cooking, for instance); prohibits you from placing radios or TV antennas outside your windows; forbids flowerpots on window sills; bans the installation of shades not supplied by the landlord.

Prior to signing a lease, make a list of all defects and get the landlord's agreement in writing to make repairs by a specific date. Photograph each room, especially cracked walls, nail holes, broken fixtures, stained or burned carpets.

Of course, there are good landlords! But most leases are drawn up by landlord's lawyers and real estate boards. Scrutinize the lease, if you must rent, you may not be able to change the provisions, but you'll know what you face.

Oil well completions up for region

DENVER (AP) — Oil and gas well completions in the Rocky Mountain region rose during the first half of 1985, but completions nationwide declined slightly from last year, Petroleum Information Corp. reports.

Nationwide, 41,318 completions were reported in the first half of this year, 15% fewer than during the same period in 1984.

While the number of completions nationwide was regarded as a lackluster pace, industry analysts were encouraged by a 5 percent gain in exploratory or wildcat drilling. New-field wildcat completions numbered 4,177, resulting in 416 oil and 254 natural gas discoveries.

In the Rocky Mountain region, there were 3,164 oil and gas well completions between January and June of this year, compared with 2,560 for the first six months of last year, Petroleum Information reported Monday.

Wyoming reported 967 completions, including 461 oil wells, 71 gas wells and 425 dry holes, compared with 800 completions during the first six months of 1984.

The interesting thing to me is 5 percent, and that is probably a harbinger or indicator of what the industry thinks," said Jack Eckstrom, a Petroleum Information spokesman.

Petroleum Information, which is based in Denver, monitors the activities of the U.S. oil and natural gas industries. The company defines a completion as a well with its final status determined: oil, gas, or dry hole.

Petroleum Information reported that Utah had 326 completions during the first six months of 1985, compared with 229 a year ago. Montana had 380 completions, compared with 312 at this time last year, and North Dakota reported 279 completions, down from 356 during the first six months of 1984.

Nutritious foods can be fast, easy

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

HANSEN — Nadine Froehlich does her share of from-scratch cooking but she is not at all opposed to more convenient processed foods. She says they can be time savers and still be nutritious.

To this end, she frequently uses her microwave oven to make quick dishes. "You can be doing something else while it's cooking, and you don't have to stir it all the time," she says.

When preparing tacos or taco salads, she makes the filling and browns the meat in the microwave. "That's two savers, because you can use the dish that you cook it in, and you don't have to stand there and stir it and have it spatter all over," she says.

She uses this appliance for candy making, because it saves electricity, prevents mess and eliminates the possibility of scorching. "I've just found you can do a lot of that type of thing," she says.

Froehlich's food processor allows her to cut up a large quantity of vegetables in just a few minutes in order to make a pot of soup. At other times, she utilizes her conventional oven to make care-free steaks.

The habit of saving time began in the early years of her marriage, when she and her husband, Blake, milked cows, butchered, dressed chickens and charmed butter. Along with raising three daughters, she worked part time for the Hansen Post Office for 28 years.

Now that she is no longer working, Froehlich is busy with music club and church activities. She has been the secretary for the Kimberly Christian Church Sunday School this year and has been on various committees.

When her daughters, sons-in-law and grandchildren come for a visit, it is usually a potluck affair. Who will bring what, is usually decided upon in advance, so there will be a balanced meal.

For these get-togethers, and the various other potlucks she and Blake attend, Froehlich often makes a chicken dish that requires no browning.

CHICKEN SUPREME

About 9 chicken thighs

- 1 1/2 cups rice
 - 1 package dry onion soup mix
 - 2 cans mushroom soup
 - 3 cups water
- Put rice in a large, buttered baking dish. Add onion soup, then lay chicken parts on top. Combine mushroom soup and water. Pour over entire dish. Bake at 325 degrees uncovered for 2 hours.

"I make this quite a bit, because if I want to I can put it in the oven if I'm going to be gone, and it's ready when I come home," she says.

Chocolate sheet cake is another favorite take-along. "It's real moist and it's really a good cake. It keeps well — or it could keep well if it had a chance, but it usually doesn't have the chance," she says.

CHOCOLATE SHEET CAKE

- 2 cups sugar
- 2 cups flour
- 2 sticks margarine
- 1/4 cup cocoa
- 1 cup cold water
- 1/2 cup buttermilk
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 2 eggs beaten
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

In a saucepan (Froehlich uses her microwave) combine margarine, cocoa and water. Bring to a boil. Stir in sugar and flour mixture. Blend in buttermilk and soda. Stir in eggs and vanilla. When thoroughly blended, pour into a greased 11x16 inch sheet pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 20-25 minutes (usually 20 minutes is enough).

ICING

- 1/2 cup evaporated milk or cream
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon margarine
- 1 cup chocolate chips
- 20 miniature marshmallows
- 1 cup nuts, chopped (optional)

When cake is almost done, prepare the icing. Bring evaporated milk, sugar and margarine to a boil, cooking 2 minutes. Add chips, marshmallows and nuts. Blend and spread on warm cake.

"That one cup of sugar will give it a thick coating, and I think that's pretty economical frosting — only one cup of sugar and there's no butter — just the 1/2 cup of evaporated milk or cream," she says.

Freezing formula fashions frosty fun for festive Fourth

What is more American than ice cream? And no Fourth of July picnic is complete without it. Although many adults hold fond memories of homemade ice cream, these recipes give you a head start — eliminating tedious work, yet providing exciting new flavors with an individual touch.

This repertoire of ice cream recipes is based on the tangy flavor of cranberries and grapefruit, to eat in a cone or serve as desserts. Enjoy a touch of the Caribbean with pina colada or banana daiquiri ice cream.

Prepare cranberry pear ice, a version of the sorbets featured in the finest restaurants, as an elegant finale to a holiday dinner.

CRANBERRY ORANGE ICE CREAM

- 2 naval oranges
 - 1 (16-ounce) can Ocean Spray Whole Berry Cranberry Sauce
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 - 1 pint vanilla ice cream, softened
- With a vegetable peeler, remove outer rind on oranges (being careful to avoid white pithy part). Cut flesh from remaining rind and remove seeds. In an electric blender container or food processor, place rind, orange pulp and whole berry cranberry sauce; cover. Whirl until coarsely chopped. Transfer mixture to a large bowl; stir in sugar and lemon juice. Fold softened ice cream into cranberry mixture until well blended. Spoon ice cream into freezer container; cover and freeze until firm.

PINA COLADA ICE CREAM

- (Makes 1 1/2 quarts)
- 2 tablespoons light rum
- 1 quart vanilla ice cream, softened
- 1 cup Ocean Spray Whole Berry Cranberry Sauce

To toast coconut, spread on cookie sheet in 400-degree oven for about 5 minutes or until lightly browned. Whirl cream of coconut, softened ice cream and rum in blender. Transfer to large bowl and fold in whole berry cranberry sauce and toasted coconut until thoroughly combined. Spoon ice cream into freezer container; cover and freeze until firm (4 or more hours).

CRANBERRY PEAR ICE

- (Makes 1 1/2 quarts)
- 2 (1 pound) cans pear halves in light syrup, drained

1 quart cranberry juice cocktail
Juice of one orange
1 cup white wine
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
2 cups granulated sugar
In a blender, puree the pears and set aside. In a saucepan, bring cranberry juice cocktail, orange juice, wine, cinnamon and sugar to a boil over medium heat, stirring to dissolve the sugar. Remove from heat and stir in pear puree. Cool. Process in an ice cream maker, according to manufacturers' directions. Freeze until serving time. The ice will stay an excellent, soft texture.

GRAPEFRUIT BANANA DAIQUIRI ICE CREAM

- (Makes 1 1/2 quarts)
- 1 teaspoon grated lime rind
- 2 small ripe bananas, peeled and pureed
- 1 tablespoon lime juice
- 1/4 cup grapefruit juice
- 1/4 cup light rum
- 1 pint vanilla ice cream, softened

In a large bowl, combine lime rind, bananas, lime juice, grapefruit juice, rum and softened ice cream; stir until well blended. Spoon ice cream into freezer container; cover and freeze until firm.

Celebrate this holiday a la Thomas Jefferson

CAMDEN, N.J. — Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence that we honor on the Fourth of July, also was a dedicated farmer and gourmet.

Celebrate Independence Day with foods that had a place in his life, but bring them up-to-date with contemporary flourishes.

Start with ham, a meat our founding fathers enjoyed frequently. During that period, pork was the most available and widely eaten meat. Jefferson took his pork so seriously that he imported special hogs to breeding stock for himself and his neighbors.

American hams were gaining a good reputation worldwide. Many connoisseurs who looked down their noses at other American foods enjoyed the succulent flavor of our hams. The distinctly American hams were made from the legs of pigs fattened on acorns and other forest gleanings, then smoked with a hickory fire.

Glaze your ham with a fruity sauce of plums (a fruit Jefferson grew), marjoram, mustard and Campbell's condensed beef broth. The balanced sauce adds a light accent that Americans favor today.

Accompany the Independence Day ham with Savory Rice Salad, based on the grain that was so successfully grown in the South that it quickly became an important export for the American colonies.

Jefferson was instrumental in improving the American rice industry when he smuggled superior seed out of Italy during a diplomatic mission. For 1985 picnics, cook the rice

Marching to an Independence Day tradition

Calories forgotten when it comes to pre-parade brunch

I'm dreading my 5th birthday and getting ready to watch the annual Fourth of July parade.

For 5 years, I've watched the Rupert parade (only missed 1 once, staying home with sick child) and in all those years, only once did it threaten to rain. So, I will get out the sunglasses and go for it.

It's really not watching the parade. It's a super show of small boys showing off their paper airplanes and one fine day together (this every year) and the boys get to be in the parade. The best way to fit in the younger set was to have a dress and get to ride one of the shiny fire trucks.

Then, if you were a boy, you decorated your bike and rode it almost at the very end of the parade. The very end was reserved for the kids lucky enough to have had a parent who thought horses should be a part of every child's life. Yes, you were dressed with the young set and you were asked to ride on a "hot" but, mainly, you just got to work on one.

It's a complete circle. Now when the children are home they are content to just watch the parade. In fact, they are so disappointed they can't even grab the hot candy that is thrown into the crowd.

Well, almost. Last year I was a bit surprised to see a few girls who had been dressed like my little sister and they were all at the parade.

It gave me a little bit of a thrill at the big parade. The girls were all dressed like my little sister and they were all at the parade. It's always fun to see it together. This year it's going to be rather small, but some of the girls were all dressed like my little sister and they were all at the parade.

"I've already planned up — we're going to have, and most of it can be done ahead, even the day before. I'm going to get fancy and use those jammed tools to make a really interesting trip down. I may make traditional recipes — like mandarin halves and fill them with mixed fruit balls. Or, I may decide to use a ball of watermelon slices. I'll serve a yogurt honey dressing on the side. Just mix 1/2 cup honey to 1 cup yogurt. Sometimes I add a squeeze of lemon, too."

The Fourth of July meal is one for which I must admit, I really don't count calories. In fact, I firmly state my eyes are glued and use all the "hot candy." One of my favorite treats is the hot candy for a couple of days.

This year I'm looking to go to the Sugarland, the recipe came from the "Sugared Parties" cookbook put out by the Junior League of Kansas City, Mo. Be sure to have a little over 1/2 cup of sugar for each serving.

1/2 cups oil for frying
1 1/2 tablespoons paprika

Mix the butter by stirring together the flour, baking powder and 1 teaspoon of the salt. Make a well in the center and add the eggs. Stirry pour in the beer while stirring with a fork, mix thoroughly. Let the batter stand, covered, at room temperature for at least 2 hours.

Meanwhile, melt the butter in a small skillet over moderate heat. Add onion and sausage and saute until onion is soft. Drain brown and crisp. Drain on paper towels.

In a medium bowl put the cream cheese, the rest of the salt and the pepper. Add the onion and the sausage and mix well. Crumble the bacon and blend it in also. This step could be done the day before and refrigerated, covered, overnight.

Cut the loaf of bread into 1/2 inch slices but only cut clear through every other cut. So each piece has two slices joined at the bottom. Stuff each of these pairs with 2-3 tablespoons of the cream cheese-sausage mixture. Crumble the onion in a large skillet. Dip the bread slices into the paprika, making sure all surfaces are covered. Lay across the back into bowl of batter.

When a brown crust is just turning back, until golden brown, remove to a paper towel. Add the onion and sausage and saute until onion is soft. Drain brown and crisp. Drain on paper towels.

Refund cheat brings friend into illegal fraud scheme

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Dear Martin — I have a neighbor who is a refund cheat. She doesn't need the money, but because of her greed she sends for the same refund offers (most that are limited to "one refund per family") dozens of times. She reads your column, and I hope she gets this message:

Each Saturday when you come to my house to collect the refunds you have sent for in my name, you involve me in your scheme, and it makes me feel terrible.

You think you are honest and have told me you would never cheat a person out of a dollar, but your refund cheating is taking hundreds of dollars from the manufacturers.

Actually, you are taking money from me, too, because when I see a product with a refund offer I would like to send for, I hesitate to buy it because I don't know whether you have already sent for the refund in my name.

I bet all the other neighbors and relatives you use for your refunding schemes feel the same way.

You are a cheat and a pest, and I wish you wouldn't bother me anymore. I'm sorry I don't have the strength to tell you this personally. Sign me — "From Small Town, West."

Dear Friend from Worcester County — I often receive letters from readers who ask whether it is all right to send for refunds in the names of others, and then "collect" the refunds from them. They say, "If I have the proofs of purchase, why should the manufacturer limit me to one refund?"

The answer is "no." Since the manufacturer has made the offer, the manufacturer has the right to limit the users. Break the rules, and you break the law.

I'm sure there are readers who have been placed in the same position. They should know that they are being involved in a fraud, and they have a right to be involved in a fraud, and they have a right to be involved in a fraud.

But don't count on this column to rid you of this pest or clear your conscience. Your anonymous letter probably will be ignored. You have to summon your courage and tell her yourself. You were able to put it into writing. Now put it into words, and tell her off. I guarantee you will feel a lot better afterward.

Dear Martin — Could you recommend a way to file refund forms? I am new to refunding and have not figured out a way to keep track of the forms. — Rachel Lanche, Houston

Dear Rachel — Take the refund offers you are interested in and put each refund form in the envelope you will use to send it to the company. Address the envelope, and in the upper right-hand corner, stamp would go, pencil in the proofs required and the expiration date.

Then file these envelopes in a shoe box with the latest dates at the front. Each time you work with the advertised specials in this newspaper and prepare a money-saving shopping list, check the envelopes in the box, and try to match your buys with the refund offers you are working on.

Great salad depends on the lettuce

By TOM HOGE
The Associated Press

Green salads are served at almost any point of lunch and dinner, depending on your preference. They are at their best this time of year and, if you are a greens buff, can be the feature of a hot day meal.

The ingredients used in green salads are virtually endless, ranging from watercress to Chinese cabbage, but a major role is played by lettuce.

At most supermarkets, the lettuce section is dominated by iceberg — big, round, compact heads. This type should be clean, crisp and free of leaves that have ragged, brown areas.

Other favorites are Boston, whose soft, loose head has tender leaves ranging from green to light yellow; romaine, known for its crisp, green leaves with heavy ribs, and field lettuce, which comes in small clumps. This variety does not ship or keep well and is usually sold only near the areas where it is grown.

All types of lettuce should be kept cool, preferably in a plastic bag. Even then, lettuce rarely keeps more than a week. Iceberg is in the market all year long, but the other types are usually available only in seasons.

Lettuce can be cooked and served in soups and even stews, but it is usually the centerpiece for a green salad. Success of such a dish depends to a large degree on the dressing used.

French dressing is good with mixed greens, and a mayonnaise dressing is often used for dressings on fruit or vegetable salad. Sour cream or yogurt is also popular on greens.

Here is a sprightly salad featuring cucumbers.

- 3 medium-size cucumbers
- 3 cucumbers salt
- 6 ounces sour cream
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1/2 cup diced celery
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 medium head iceberg lettuce, broken into bite-size pieces

Pare cucumbers, slice thin and mix with 2 teaspoons salt in medium bowl. Cover bowl and let stand 45 minutes. Pour into strainer and let drain. Mix sour cream, olive oil, celery and remaining salt and pepper in bowl. Stir in well drained cucumbers and chill until serving time. Fill a large bowl with lettuce. Pour cucumber mixture over it and toss to coat greens. Serves 6 to 8.

- 1 medium clove garlic, minced
- 2 cans (17 ounces each) whole kernel corn, drained or 2 1/2 cups cooked fresh corn

- 1 cup diced green pepper
- 4 to 5 tablespoons vinegar
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon white pepper

In 10-inch skillet cook apples and onion with garlic in hot oil, over medium heat, until tender. Add remaining ingredients except lettuce; heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low; simmer 20 minutes until slightly thickened, stirring occasionally. Pour into medium bowl; cover. Refrigerate at least 4 hours to blend flavors, stirring occasionally. Serve in lettuce-lined bowl. Makes 5 cups or 10 servings.

Wide world of breads varies greatly

MOSCOW (AP) — You may not realize it, but a University of Idaho researcher says all people of the world eat bread in some form, and all use flour from grains as key ingredients.

Karen Davis, assistant professor of home economics research, has published a report on Egyptian village breads. She traveled to Egypt last winter to observe and document the preparation of village breads from sifting to final baking in earth ovens.

Bread is the mainstay of the Egyptian diet, she said, with some estimates holding that 70 to 90 percent of the country's diet is bread. Much of it is the pocketbread and cracker variety. During her trip to Egypt, she observed the production of 19 different types of bread.

Egypt imports up to half of its wheat and flour. Ms. Davis said, "Even though the soft wheat used such as is grown in the Palouse area of northern Idaho and eastern Washington better than their locally grown varieties.

The U.S. Agency for International Development is helping finance projects to boost Egyptian wheat production.

Cottage Crepes

- 3/4 cup milk
- 2 large eggs
- 1-3rd cup cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 3/4 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- Cottage Filling, see recipe
- Unsalted butter
- Sour cream and sliced fresh strawberries

In an electric blender whirl together milk, eggs, cornstarch, oil, baking powder and salt until smooth. Pour about 2 tablespoons batter into a hot oiled non-stick 6 or 7-inch skillet (bottom measurement); oil heated whirl so batter covers bottom. Over medium heat cook until top dries around edges — about 30 seconds. Turn and cook other side for a few minutes. Turn out. Repeat with remaining batter. Makes 12. Add Cottage Filling to center of each crepe. Fold 2 opposite sides over; fold other side to make an "envelope," and seal in filling. Chill. At serving time, quickly brown stuffed pancakes on both sides in a little unsalted butter in a non-stick skillet. Serve topped with sour cream and strawberries. Makes 6 servings.

Cottage Filling: Slightly beat 1 large egg; thoroughly stir in 1 pint small-curd cream-style cottage cheese, 1 tablespoon sugar and grated orange rind to taste.

Brunch Punch

- 1/2 cup sliced fresh fruit (strawberries, nectarine, kiwi fruit or melon)
- 2 teaspoons superfine sugar
- 4 ice cubes
- 1/4 cup brandy
- Chilled champagne
- Gently stir together fruit and sugar; cover and chill. Divide among four 8- to 10-ounce glasses. Add ice cubes and 3 tablespoons brandy to each glass; stir gently. Add 1/4 cup champagne to each glass. Makes 4 servings.

A third picnic dish that conjures thoughts of Jefferson is Apple Corn Relish. Not only did Jefferson cultivate apple trees at his Virginia plantation, he enjoyed sweet corn so much that he planted it in his Paris garden during his diplomatic tenure there.

Bring these two ingredients together in a vibrant, healthful salad dressed with V-8 vegetable juice, vinegar and a touch of brown sugar.

Groups look to lift fast-food secrecy

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A coalition of consumer and health groups petitioned the government Monday to require ingredient labeling on millions of burgers, fries, shakes and other fast-food items consumed daily by Americans.

"We believe it's time to lift the veil of secrecy from fast foods. We believe consumers have a right to know what they're eating," said Michael Jacobson, director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest.

Jacobson and other consumer and health experts announced the filing of petitions with the Food and Drug Administration and the Department of Agriculture, seeking the label requirement.

"Consumers rely on ingredient disclosure to avoid substances to which they are allergic, or that are linked to diet-related diseases," said Jacobson. "Unfortunately, without informative labeling, the composition of fast foods remains a mystery. This leaves health-conscious consumers completely in the dark."

"The government can insist on the labels," Jacobson said, but to date has deferred to the states, which have failed to act.

Knowing the ingredients in a fast food product is important to many people, especially those with allergies and those seeking to avoid saturated fat, salt or other ingredients which have questionable health effects, Jacobson said.

Many thousands of people are allergic to certain ingredients such as dyes, artificial flavorings and even corn sugar, milk solids, monosodium glutamate and sulfites, said Dr. Joseph A. Bellanti, an allergist at Georgetown University.

"My patients should not be forced to play roulette with their food," said Bellanti, who serves on the food allergy committee of the American College of Allergists.

"Whether or not some consumers must avoid certain ingredients for health reasons, all consumers are entitled to know whether a food product is worth the price," added Richard M. Kessel, executive director of the New York State Consumer Protection Board.

Kessel commented that he believes ingredient labeling would be a boon for fast-food sellers, allowing many of them to point to the nutritious ingredients they use as a means of defraying the "junk food" criticism often leveled at them.

Since most fast foods are sold in wrappers or plastic packages, with an effort being made to have them of consistent quality nationwide, adding ingredient labels should be simple and inexpensive, Jacobson said.

And, he noted, the petition would exempt chains with fewer than 10 outlets, so as not to place a burden on small, neighborhood businesses.

Currently, labels listing ingredients are required of package foods in markets, but not of restaurant foods.

In addition to the label lists, the consumer groups also asked that the chains voluntarily display posters listing the ingredients of their products, so that buyers could look for problem ingredients before ordering.

Jacobson noted that before filing the petitions his private, non-profit consumer nutrition group asked several major fast-food chains to provide it lists of their product ingredients for publication.

Only Arby's, based in Atlanta, provided a full list of food ingredients, according to a report in the center's newsletter, "Nutrition Action."

Most other chains either failed to reply or declined to provide the lists, contending that ingredients are confidential information.

Burger King, based in Miami, and McDonald's, headquartered in Oak Brook, Ill., did suggest that consumers concerned about allergies contact them for information on which products might contain certain specific ingredients.

Sunflower seeds no longer for the birds

By SPORTS AFIELD

Americans used to think sunflower seeds were for the birds — literally, bird food — but today, the sunflower is used for everything from margarine to acoustical tile.

Sunflower oil, high in polyunsaturates, has displaced peanuts to become the second largest oil crop in the world, according to an article in the July issue of Sports Afield, topped only by soybean oil.

The sunflower has its roots on the American prairie, but it was Europeans who popularized its use as a vegetable oil and in margarine.

"Europeans have recognized the value of sunflower oil much faster than Americans," said Dr. James Loggren, a plant breeder and agronomist with Dahlgren and Co., of Crookston, Minn. "They use it almost to the exclusion of all other vegetable oil."

Roasted sunflower seeds have become popular as a healthy high energy snack.

The sunflower is more than just a snack. The pit of the seed, known as the hull, is used in the pulp and paper industry and has been used in flotation devices. Dried stalks are used as fuel and to make acoustical ceiling tile. In China, the stems have been used as fiber in making fabric. Dried leaves have been used as a substitute for tobacco and roasted seeds as a coffee and substitute.

Steps to preparing Cantaloupe Melba

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
The Associated Press

CANTALOUPE MELBA
10-ounce package frozen raspberries

- 4 cantaloupe rings (cut from center of melon, rind removed)
- 1 pint vanilla ice cream
- 1 cup raspberries; press through a fine-mesh strainer to eliminate seeds.
- In a small saucepan bring raspberry syrup to a boil; simmer, stirring constantly, until just thickened — about 5 minutes; there should be 2-3rds cup. Chill. At serving time place a scoop of ice cream in the center of each cantaloupe ring; spoon raspberry syrup over ice cream. Makes 4 servings.

The hulls of sunflower seeds are pressed into logs and sold by a Canadian company for use in fireplaces and cook stoves.

In the Soviet Union, the hulls are used in making ethyl alcohol and fuel, in lining plywood and in growing yeast.

It was the Russians who developed the native American wildflower into the modern domestic or "Russian sunflower" that grows 12 feet tall and has been named the national floral symbol of the Soviet Union.

By the early 1970s, sunflower had become an important world crop. Soviet plant breeder V.S. Pustovoi led a team of 40 years developing the oil content of the seed from 28 to 50 percent.

The Soviet Union grows two-thirds of the world's sunflower supply on 7 to 7.5 million acres.

The European demand for the sunflower encouraged American farmers to grow it as a cash crop. U.S. sunflower production hit a peak in 1979 when more than 5 million acres were planted. The figure now has leveled off at about 3.6 million acres. Last year, American farmers received about $10 for 100 pounds of Soviet plant breeder V.S. Pustovoi led a team of 40 years developing the oil

The sunflower actually is a composite. Look into its face and you see hundreds of tiny flowers surrounded by long yellow rays like daisy petals. Each tiny flower develops a seed.

The sunflower is phototropic and young plants face the sun for maximum absorption, turning east in the morning and west in the evening. Once the heads are open they stop turning and usually face east.

The importance of the sunflower in world markets was demonstrated last March. George Harrison wrote in Sports Afield, when representatives of more than 20 countries met in Argentina for the 11th International Sunflower Conference.

Some of America's favorite foods qualify for group's 'new worst' list

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bacon cheeseburgers, ham-biscuits, fried chicken and stuffed potatoes, once dished up by some of America's most popular restaurant chains — are cited by a consumer group as the "new worst" fast-foods on the market because of high fat and salt content.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest, a private, non-profit, consumer-oriented health research group, listed its choices as the nutritionally best and worst of the latest fast foods in the June edition of its newsletter, "Nutrition Action."

The center said seafood and salads are healthy choices to eat, but many new items on fast-food menus may appear nutritious, many are not.

When it compiled its original best and worst list two years ago, the center hailed baked potatoes as a welcome addition to fast foods. Today, one brand of stuffed potato is on the list of the five worst fast foods, thanks to toppings that add more salt and fat than many popular cheeseburgers.

"For every new truly 'light' entree introduced, two other fatty, fried or salt-laden companions appear," a spokesman said in the new report by Bonnie Liebman, a center nutritionist.

Nonetheless, her top choices for "best new" fast foods were Long John Silver's baked fish, Jack in the Box's shrimp salad and Wendy's low-calorie salad dressings.

Honorable mentions went to Arby's roasted chicken breast and Wendy's multi-grain bun.

Cited as the five "worst" fast foods of 1985 were McDonald's Chicken McNuggets and breakfast sausage biscuit, Wendy's cheese-stuffed potato, Hardee's bacon cheeseburger and Roy Rogers' crescent sandwich with ham.

Mary Maguire, a spokeswoman for Marriott Corp., which operates the Roy Rogers chain, said, "Roy Rogers offers one of the most varied and healthful menus in the industry." She said salad dressings with low-calorie dressing are popular at the chain's restaurants.

Hardee's spokesman John Merritt, commenting on criticism of his firm's bacon cheeseburger for high fat and sodium content, said Hardee's simply tries to provide the foods that consumers want.

The bacon cheeseburger is one of our biggest sellers because it is responding to our customers' desire for quick, hot food," he said. "If they tell us they want baked chicken and celery sticks, we'll have baked chicken and celery sticks."

who are taking youngsters out for hamburgers.

McDonald's spokesman Bob Kayser had no comment on the center's criticism of Chicken McNuggets and breakfast sausage biscuit.

The center gave Long John Silver's baked fish a "bravo" for its low 151 calories and 361 milligrams of sodium.

Liebman wrote that Long John Silver's customers can choose mixed vegetables and corn on the cob along with the baked fish to obtain "the first all-around, low-fat, hot, fast food meal."

Jack in the Box's shrimp salad contains just 115 calories and 460 milligrams of salt, if consumers pass up salad dressings, the center said.

"The demise of many a dieter comes at the end of the counter where the salad dressings wait," the group said. "Wendy's reduced calorie dressings... chop the calories and fat roughly in half. That means both your health and waistline win."

The new listing covers fast foods that have been added to menus in recent years and is in addition to the consumer group's original 1983 designations of best-and-worst-fast-foods, spokesman Greg Moyer said.

In its original 1983 report on fast food nutrition, the center said the best generally were salad bars, baked potatoes, corn on the cob and fruit juices.

Listed as worst that year were Wendy's Triple Cheeseburger, Fried Extra Crispy Dark Kentucky Fried Chicken Dinner, Burger King's Am'z'n Whopper, Pizza Hut's Super Supreme Pizza and McDonald's Filet-O-Fish.

Water root systems well for healthy plants

The most efficient and effective watering method is to apply enough water to wet the entire plant root system. This creates a stronger plant with a deeper root system and uses water more efficiently.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

If the soil is allowed to dry out on top between waterings, fewer weed seeds germinate. When soil is constantly saturated from daily watering, some plants cannot get enough oxygen. Roots begin to die and then disease gets started.

In this day of automatic sprinkler systems, it is often easiest to water every day. However, time clocks are available which will water at longer intervals.

The amount of water to apply and the interval between irrigations is dependent upon the soil type, weather, and depth of the plant's root system. One inch of water will wet sandy soils about eight to 10 inches deep. In heavier clay soils, one inch of water will penetrate about four to six inches. Loam soils are somewhere in between. If you are not sure what type of soil you have, take a sample to a county agent or nurseryman.

During the hot, dry weather of mid-summer, two inches or more water per week can be evaporated by the plants and soil. Lawns, flowers and vegetables have roots about 6 inches deep. In a clay soil about an inch of water per application would be appropriate. In a sandy soil a little over a half-inch would be enough. Deeper rooted plants such as trees and shrubs would need two to three times as much water to wet the entire root system. However, they do not need to be watered as often.

The next step is to calculate how long to leave your sprinkler or sprinkler system on to apply the appropriate amount of water. This can be done by timing a few straight-sided cans at intervals from the sprinkler. Measure the amount of water which accumulates in a timed interval such as one hour. Different types of sprinklers apply water at greatly different rates. This test also exposes sprinklers which have poor distribution patterns.

Watering frequency can be determined by observing the weather, the plants and the soil. Dry plants will show signs of wilting or drooping leaves. Dry grass becomes dull in color and does not spring back after walking across it. A shovel, trowel or knife can reveal how wet the soil is several inches down.

During midsummer, shallow rooted plants may need to be watered two or more times per week. Trees may go two weeks to a month between deep waterings, especially if they get some water from shallower lawn irrigation.

THE PRODUCT — A surface electrical wiring system.

Manufacturer's claim — That this system simplifies the installation of track lighting, additional outlets, ceiling fans, computer centers and various other fixtures. . . that the components of the system "snap together to make it easy to take power from an existing outlet and extend it via a plastic channel to a new location. . . that it is made of rigid, durable ivory colored wood grain plastic that requires virtually no maintenance. . . that it mounts on just about any surface. . . and that it can be painted to match any decor with latex-based paint.

at night lit the headlights on. . . that the headlights will shine on the product's sensors, sending a message to a control box to put on the lights. . . that the lights will turn on automatically in between 5 and 9 minutes, depending on how the control is set. . . that many other lights can be powered by the control box, including the garage, porch, entranceway and even indoor lights. . . and that there are no remote control units buttons or switches.

THE PRODUCT — A lawn and garden sprayer with special attributes.

Manufacturer's claim — That this sprayer eliminates the need to premix or measure concentrates. . . that you pour the liquid into the spray bottle and set a metering dial on the cap for the required dilution of the chemical concentrate. . . that the sprayer will automatically blend the

Historically, 'keeping room' was the kitchen

By ANDY LANG
The Associated Press

Q. — Sometimes, in reading about architecture or seeing floor plans for houses, I come across the term "keeping room." Just what is a keeping room and what does it keep?

A. — In Colonial days, a keeping room was simply a kitchen. Now it also is a kitchen, but sometimes the term is used in connection with a combination kitchen and family room. I asked several architects where the name originated and nobody seemed to know for sure, although two said it had something to do with where the provisions were kept. In any case, when you see the two words in an architect's floor plan, you can be sure it is a kitchen or includes a kitchen.

Q. — Soon I will be putting down a brick patio at the rear of our house. Is there any kind of brick that should be used?

A. — A brick called the "paver" is excellent for patio floors, since it withstands the weather better than common bricks and is more suitable for setting into different patterns.

Q. — There always seems to be a soap covering on our ceramic bathroom floor. It is hardly noticeable, but it seems to keep the tile from shining the way it used to. What can I do about it?

A. — Use a scrubbing brush and keep dipping into a pan of vinegar as you scrub vigorously. Be sure the floor is thoroughly rinsed.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743.)

Early weeding saves later gardening pains

By EARL ARONSON
The Associated Press

Weeds — not diseases, weather or bugs — usually are the gardener's major problem. The best time to deal with weeds is while they're small — in short, early.

If you start at least the summer before to prepare a garden area for crops, you'll eliminate a lot of weeds before you sow your seeds.

In this way, you can take up the sod or smother it with plastic, sheets of cardboard or old carpet to eliminate unwanted grasses. Occasional tilling eliminates weeds that have sprouted and uncovers weeds buried in the soil. Till again after such seeds germinate and you will have cut the number of weeds.

If you plant seeds or transplants in freshly prepared soil the seeds will have an even chance to combat weeds and you'll delay the need to weed for a while.

Usually the first crop of annual weeds shows in June. Get after them while they're still seedlings. Scrape them off at soil level. Do it on a hot sunny day: the sun will help you kill the plants.

Scrape the weeds rather than chop them off because the latter often brings weed seeds to the surface where they can germinate. If you let them grow you may have to pull them by hand. If you have to hand weed, do it on a hot, sunny day after rain or watering has softened the soil. Not on ly will weeds be easier to yank out but the sun will kill those you pulled. If you pull on a cool day, in the evening, or before a rain, weeds may re-root.

There also are mechanical weeders, such as rotary hoes, wheel hoes and powered garden tillers, but use hands or hand tools in working close to crops. A lawnmower also is useful in fighting weeds. Mowing closely between rows on a hot, sunny day will retard or even kill weeds, especially if you mulch afterwards.

If you use such organic mulches as straw, hay, lawn clippings (which may have many weed seeds), shredded leaves, bark, sawdust, pine needles or ground corncobs, you should fertilize two or three times during the summer to replenish tied-up soil nitrogen.

To me, using chemical herbicides to control weeds is less satisfactory if you have a wide variety of crops. There also is danger of the chemicals drifting and damaging valuable plants nearby.

Green manure, which means a grain or grass crop planted in the fall and plowed under in the spring, is a good way to add nutrients and organic material to the soil. Rye is a good grain for this purpose. Planted in September, it will grow and help prevent winter erosion in the garden as well.

In spring, it will grow quickly and help draw moisture from the soil so you can begin working the garden earlier.

Ore-Ida challenge open sweep across Southern Idaho

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BOISE — The Blaine County hamlet of Picabo has seen the likes of Ernest Hemingway and Gary Cooper pass by in search of the wise and wily rainbow trout that inhabit Silver Creek, but odds are pretty good it hasn't seen anything like what's coming next week.

The town will be the focus of the Picabo Team Time Trial, the fourth leg of the second annual Ore-Ida Women's Challenge bicycle race. It will see the Chinese National Team, among others, streak east along U.S. Highway 20 toward Queen's Crown and back again in search of some $16,000 in prize money.

The Challenge, conceived as a pre-Olympic bike race last year to highlight the new status of women in the sport, has blossomed into a major event in the arcane world of international cycling.

The seven-day event will begin here Sunday with time trials, progress Monday from Boise to Idaho City via Idaho Highway 21; move Tuesday from Idaho City to Stanley on Highway 21 and on Wednesday from Stanley to Ketchum via Idaho Highway 75. On Thursday, the race will cover a 40-kilometer (25-mile) course between the Timberman Stage Stop near the intersection of highways 75 and 20, to Carey, east along U.S. 20 — and back again.

Friday, the Challenge will move to Elkhorn Village at Sun Valley for a circuit (lap) race, and conclude here Saturday with the Boise Parkcenter Critérium.

"The format is changed from last year, and we made the changes basically from what we learned last year," says Susan Gerhart, public relations manager for Ore-Ida. "The Picabo Team Time Trial is new this year, and this year we're concluding the race in Boise. Last year, it ended at Elkhorn."

Olympic silver medalist Rebecca Twigg of Seattle, last year's Ore-Ida Challenge winner, will participate again, along with most of the big names in the newly minted world of women's cycle racing. The first-ever Olympic women's gold medalist in cycling, Connie Carpenter-Phinney, will be in Sun Valley to give clinics and do television commentary for the race.

The Challenge is now part of the Eleven Cup Series, a competitive circuit for women's cycle racing. In addition to the Chinese, who first competed seriously in women's cycling in last year's Los Angeles Olympics, the field will include a former Tour de France winner — Marianne Martin, an American — and ex-Olympians from Great Britain and Sweden.

The race will enter the Wood River Valley over Galena Summit about noon next Wednesday from Stanley, with the Stanley-to-Ketchum leg ending in front of the Elephant's Perch in Ketchum. Last year, the Stanley-to-Ketchum leg came to an abrupt end some three miles north of Ketchum on Highway 75 when unseasonably hot weather turned the asphalt on the city's streets to glue, making bicycling hazardous.

The following morning, July 11, the Challenge will move south to Timberman for the team time trial. Unlike the previous three legs of the race, Thursday's event will be timed on a team basis, with the performance of the third-best finisher from each four-woman team going to determine which team wins the points for this particular stage.

"This is the first time this sort of event has been part of a women's road race," says Gerhart. "It's designed to make the team work together. The performances have to be more well-balanced, because it isn't the best individual time that counts."

The following morning, on Friday, July 12, the Challenge will shift to Elkhorn for a race over a hilly course in an around the resort. Last year's circuit race, the final event of the Challenge, was reduced for the scheduled 15 to 12 laps because of the condition of the riders.

"We really won't know how long that race will be until Thursday," says Gerhart. "It will depend on the competitors are doing."

The Challenge will conclude on Saturday with a criterium — a hour-long race over a 15-kilometer (11-mile) track — on Boise's Parkcenter Blvd., in front of the Ore-Ida corporate headquarters.

"We've added one stage to the race this year," says Gerhart. "And last year we held the criterium at the beginning of the race. This year, we wanted it to end here."

Elapsed distance pedal-to-instep: In excess of 225 miles. "We're excited," says Gerhart. "It's a race where the endurance of each cyclist is as important as speed. High altitudes and rapid climbs will push each cyclist to her physical limit. The variety of events is really a test of each cyclist's all-around ability."

At least seven Idaho cyclist will participate in the event, including Ruthe Heaths of Ketchum, who turned in a surprisingly strong performance in last year's race.

Spectators are welcome at each stage of race, say the event's organizers, as long as they don't get in the cyclists' way, particularly in vehicles.

Lendl succumbs to Leconte jinx again

WIMBLEDON, England. (AP) — He is ranked No. 2 in the world and holds the men's record for making the most money in a single year. Yet, Ivan Lendl has this nasty little habit in Grand Slam tournaments.

Henri Leconte of France also has a nasty little habit.

Tuesday, the two met on Centre Court in the Wimbledon tennis championships, and those two nasty habits merged just perfectly.

A strong-serving — right-hander from Czechoslovakia — Lendl has reached the final of six Grand Slam tournaments — two U.S. Opens, three French Opens — and one Australian Open. He has only one title to show for it, the 1984 French Open crown.

Leconte never has reached the semifinals of a Grand Slam event, let alone a championship match. But at the French Open last month, he upset Yannick Noah, his doubles partner and Davis Cup teammate.

Now he has scored another upset, jumping all over Lendl's thunderous serves and hitting rocket returns for a 3-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-1 victory.

It marked another failure in a "big" tournament for Lendl.

"When I see him play other people, he seems to miss a lot," Lendl said of Leconte. "When he plays me, he just forgets to miss."

Lendl will be missing when the quarterfinals of the All England Club are staged Wednesday. And for the second straight Grand Slam tournament, Leconte is there in the final eight.

"I definitely would like to win," Lendl said of the famed grass court tournament. "But that's the way it is... I've got to go back to work."

"I give Lendl so much trouble because I play so well," Leconte joked.

Also gaining quarterfinal berths Tuesday were defending men's singles champion John McEnroe and No. 2 seed Jimmy Connors, while Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd, the co-top seeds in the women's singles, were joined by surprising American Molly Van Nostrand, a qualifier.

The victory sends Leconte against 17-year-old Boris Becker, the hard-serving West German, in a quarterfinal match Wednesday. Becker shrugged off a sprained ankle to oust American Tim Mayotte, the No. 16 seed, 6-3, 4-6, 6-7, 7-6, 6-2.

Others reaching the men's quarterfinals Tuesday were No. 5 Anders Jarryd of Sweden, No. 8 Kevin Curren of the United States, Heinz Günthard of Switzerland and Chile's Ricardo Acuña, a qualifier.

Joining Navratilova, Lloyd and Van Nostrand in the women's quarterfinals were seventh-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia and four-other-Americans — Pam Shriver, No. 8 Zina Garrison, No. 16 Kathy Rinaldi and unseeded Barbara Potter.

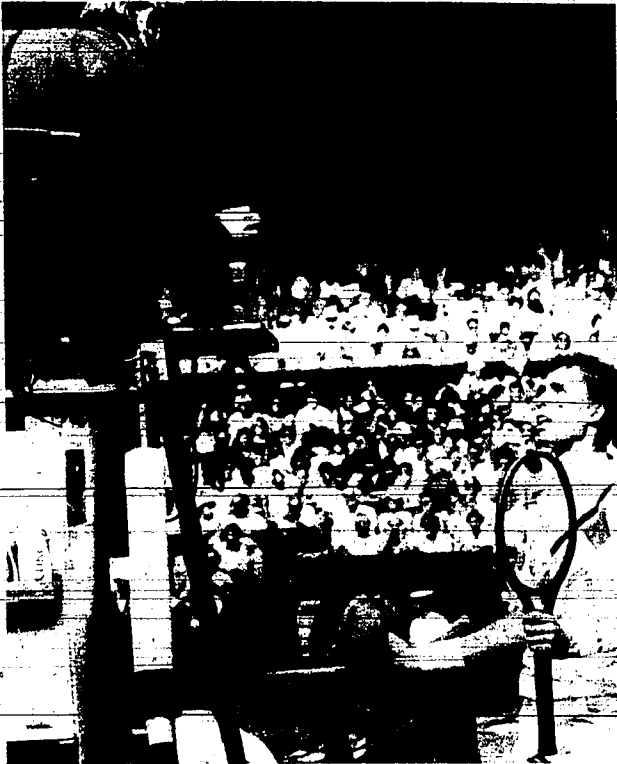

But if Leconte's victory over Lendl was an upset, Van Nostrand's 7-5, 6-2 triumph over Bulgaria's Manuela Maleeva, the No. 4 seed, was a shocker.

"I feel great, but I am not satisfied," Van Nostrand said. "If you're playing a top seed, you've just got to forget who you're playing. If you think about it, that can get in the way of your play."

"I was playing the ball, not the person."

Van Nostrand, 20, said that she almost didn't come to Wimbledon after undergoing a major foot operation — the second of her career — four months ago.

"There was always a question in my mind, but I thought that I had to start somewhere and this was the best place," said Van Nostrand, who had won only one match in the seven previous Virginia Slims tournaments since had entered this year.

Ivan Lendl lost this set to the umpire just before losing to Henri Leconte

Van Nostrand's only previous experience on the Wimbledon grass courts was last year, when she was beaten in the first qualifying round.

She is surprised by her success this time.

"I really think it's like a dream come true," she said. "I never thought I could get this far."

McEnroe ousted West Germany's Andreas Maurer 6-0, 6-4, 6-2; Curren defeated No. 14 Stefan Edberg of Sweden 7-6, 6-3, 7-6; Connors eliminated fellow American Sammy Glamalva 6-3, 6-4, 6-3; Acuna downed American Robert Seguso, another qualifier, 6-4, 7-6, 6-2; Jarryd clobbered South Africa's Danie Visser 6-1, 6-4, 6-1, and Günthard ousted India's Vijay Amritraj 6-4, 6-4, 6-1.

Among the women, it was Lloyd over fellow American Anne Smith 6-0, 6-4; Potter over Britain's Jo Durie 7-6, 6-7, 6-4; Rinaldi over Australia's Elizabeth Smylie 6-2, 6-1; Sukova over France's Pascale Paradis 6-4, 7-6; Garrison over Catherine Tanvier of France 6-1, 6-3; Shriver over No. 11 Steffi Graf of West Germany 3-6, 6-2, 6-4, and Navratilova over South Africa's Rene Lys 6-2, 6-2.

Cleveland Browns owner Art Modell welcomes Bernie Kosar to the millionaire's club

Browns pay Kosar $6 million

CLEVELAND (AP) — Former University of Miami quarterback Bernie Kosar, owner of a huge contract to play in 1985 with the Cleveland Browns of the National Football League, said Tuesday he is glad to be able to get his lugging back to football.

The Browns followed through on their game plan and selected Kosar as the first pick in the NFL's supplemental draft.

Shortly after the special draft Tuesday, Browns majority owner Art Modell introduced Kosar at a news conference and also revealed that Kosar was signed shortly after the draft was completed.

Kosar, who grew up in the northeastern Ohio community of Boardman, had said he wanted to play for the Browns and wound up with a signing bonus and five, one-year contracts believed to be worth about $6 million. Modell and other officials of the team refused to detail terms. Modell said only that the deal is either the largest or among the largest contracts in the history of the Cleveland team.

Dr. John Geletka, a Youngstown-area dentist and Kosar's agent; lawyer Dan Thomas and and Kosar's father, Bernie Kosar Sr., began meeting with Browns' officials last Thursday regarding a multi-year contract. Monday night in Cleveland, the Geletka camp huddled with Modell, his top aide Ernie Accardi and Jim Balley, Browns' chief legal counsel.

"All I can say is that we recommended to Bernie. It's very comfortable," Geletka said. Although he would not reveal the dollar value of Kosar's contract, Geletka did say: "I've been on public record that we might think about a contract similar to Elway's."

John Elway, the Denver Broncos' quarterback drafted out of Stanford two years ago, signed with the Broncos for a $5 million package over five years, according to the NFL Players' Association.

Kosar confirmed that there also was a signing bonus.

"I haven't had time to think about the money yet," Kosar said.

Kosar, 21, said playing for the Browns is "what I always wanted."

His goal now is to get back to football. "It's a real pleasure to be here and to finally put an end to this whole ordeal, and I'm looking forward to a long career here," Kosar said. "I'm not looking at this upcoming season in terms of what string I will be on.

Two casualties predicted USFL grapples with future

TEANECK, N.J. (AP) — The United States Football League will probably have two fewer teams when it switches to a fall schedule in 1986, Commissioner Harry Usher said Tuesday.

Usher and league owners met for more than eight hours at a local hotel to plan possible mergers, club transfers, team rosters, television contracts and the possible reduction of the 14-team league to a dozen clubs.

Usher mentioned San Antonio, Tampa Bay, Denver and Houston as teams that might be involved in a transfer or merger.

A gag order concerning the talks was placed on the owners and their representatives who attended the meeting, said Jerry Sklar, the president of the Birmingham Stallions.

"This is the first of a series of at least three meetings we are going to have over the summer, the purpose of which is to make sure our understandings are clear among all the owners as to how many teams, exactly where we are playing, what our schedule is going to be, and other issues relevant to the league, specifically the issue of the 35-man roster cutdown," Usher said.

Teams will be allowed to protect 35 players during the 14-month hiatus between the current spring season and the fall campaign in 1986.

Usher refused to discuss details of what happened in the meeting, but talked about having fewer teams next season.

"I have expressed, as I have expressed in there, that 12 teams are the optimum number for 1986," he said. "That's part of the game plan and business plan I am going to try to effect over the next several months."

The commissioner refused to say whether the Los Angeles Express would be one of the teams that would be eliminated in a reshuffling of the three-year-old league. The financially ailing Express was taken over by the league this season.

"It is my feeling that Los Angeles is an important market to have a USFL team," said Usher. He also spoke about Tampa Bay, San Antonio, Houston and Denver, all teams that are struggling.

The issue of where Houston is going to play was certainly in the forefront. "Whether it's going to go here, there or elsewhere is one of the topics of discussion," said Usher. He answered, "No," when asked if Shea Stadium in New York was a possible new home for the club.

Usher said San Antonio is a good market for the league, and noted that officials in Tampa are "looking at the situation and as possible merger or whether it continues to exist in Tampa Bay."

Tampa Bay General Manager Ralph Campbell had acknowledged in recent weeks that the club has a cash-flow problem and that players haven't been paid for the final regular season game. Team employees were notified about a month ago that they should begin exploring other job opportunities because of the uncertain future of the franchise.

"Dave Jovanovic, the club's director of public relations, said he would 'fade into the sunset like an old western hero... It's kind of like a family breaking up.'"

Denver officials have been holding periodic talks about moving the franchise to Honolulu, said Usher, who added that the Denver or Houston situation was a possible merger candidate. "He did not, however, say which existing clubs might absorb those franchises."

Twin Falls team shuns pitching machine blues

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

One never would have known it was their initial trip atop the mound. Competing without the pitching machine — used as a transition between t-ball and traditional baseball — for the first time the Hill-N-Run crew of the Twin Falls Pony League swept an invitational tournament in Hansen Saturday.

Help from hurlers Mike Hodge, Terrence McGriff and Chris Adams lifted Hill-N-Run over a 3-3 tie at the end of regular innings and gave the team a 1-0 championship victory over a Hansen squad.

"The Hansen program doesn't have pitching machines. After no scoring in the first two extra innings, Hill-N-Run's Mike Hodge singled to break the tie and then stole second base. Eric Gracida followed with another single, bringing home Hodge. To set the score at 5-3, Ben Ogden pelted yet another single that drove Gracida in for a run.

The bottom of the inning saw the Twin Falls team hold Hansen scoreless to take the lead.

In Twin Falls Babe Ruth action, Prime Cut slashed the long victory streak of Wilson Bates/Maxie's Pizza with a resounding 10-1 triumph. Both teams entered the showdown, in front of the year's largest crowd, with 6-0 records on the season.

Aside from triples by Prime Cut's Shane Newton and another by Shamy Wallace of Wilson Bates, the game was a pitcher's duel. James Schroeder took the win for Prime Cut's bullpen, while John Hayes of Wilson Bates weathered his first loss in over a year.

A split, for competitive purposes and not due to irreconcilable differences, has occurred in the Jerome Men's Softball League.

Loop members voted last month to break into upper and lower B divisions after June 14 in order to "better prepare" teams for the league tournament July 28-29, says head scorerkeeper Sandy Kaiser. Regular season play ends July 18 and the teams will then combine again for league tournament play, she adds.

Consolidation rather than division was predominant in Twin Falls Co-Ed action where the small, four-team B league meshed with the group's C teams. In addition, several C and D teams flip-flopped divisions, presumably to increase competitiveness.

The changeover period started June 26 and should run through July 12, according to league officials.

In Buhl women's softball play last week, Rangen Inc./Northside Farms broke an eight-inning squeaker with Pet Milk, 14-12, and moved into a second-place league tie with Winn Co./Kelly Oil.

After a 12-12 impasse following seven innings, Pet Milk put one run on the board in the top of the eighth. Then Rangen's Cindy Baughman doubled in the bottom of the inning before teammate Christy Arrigo singled to drive her home. Heidi Smith followed with another double that scored Arrigo and gave Rangen the victory.

Tonight at 6:30, Rangen and Winn face off to break the league's second-place snag, while top-leading Farmer's National Bank/White Electric goes to bat with Pet Milk.
