Canal search

Fire crews drive hard on 2 blazes

By The Associated Press

BOISE — Crews stepped up the assault Friday on a Salmon National Forest fire that almost tripled to at least 3,500 acres in a destructive rampage, but the Forest Service said another central Idaho blaze to the southwest appeared to be stabilizing at 2,600 acres.

The Lake Mountain Fire that on Thursday had burned 1,130 acres near the Salmon forest's Williams Lake raced through more vast stands of timber as winds, searing heat and unseasonable dryness continued, Forest Service spokesman Al Wood said.

"The fire is burning very heavy today," he said Friday. "There is no control." He said the fire burned to the northeast on Friday and crossed a ridge.

The fire grew at least 600 acres Friday and unfavorable weather that contributed to the intensity was expected through the weekend, Wood said.

It estimated time of containment was pushed from Saturday to Monday as crews face an expanded job of clearing a trench around the blaze. The battle against the lightning-caused fire has been waged since Sunday.

Another 100 firefighters arrived on Friday, pushing the total crew members and support personnel to about 600. Their efforts were combined with the work of six tractors, 22 pumper-trucks and seven aircraft, including four air tankers that were to continue dropping retardant on hot spots Friday.

More aerial drops also were planned in the Challis National Forest, where officials examining infrared pictures determined a fire that began last Sunday had blackened 2,600 acres. Earlier, visual estimates put the figure at 3,000.

The fire in the Salmon River's Yankee Fork drainage stabilized on Friday, a day after it jumped a line that was cleared part-way around it, Forest Service spokesman Jim James said. The spread ended hopes of containing the fire by Saturday night. Officials said they hoped to have the fire encircled by a trench late Sunday and controlled sometime Monday.

Fire Information Officer Gordon Reid said the fire burned to the inside, but about 2,600 acres remained in the perimeter of the blaze.

Officials said fighting the man-caused fire that began on Sunday had cost $475,000 as of Friday. Suppression work has involved some 700 people and assorted heavy equipment and aircraft.

Neither fire has damaged private property, but on Thursday, smoke from the Challis fire drifted into the town of Challis 25 miles to the northeast and cut visibility to less than six miles.

The Yankee Fork Road, off limits to recreational use since Monday, was closed entirely on Thursday. The Forest Service said that was done for safety and to prevent looting of summer cabins evacuated on Tuesday.

California firefighters given aid by weather

By ROBERT JABLON

The Associated Press

The toll of brush and forest fires reached 200,000 acres over nine Western states Friday, but California crews fighting a 78,000-acre blaze that threatened communities benefited from fog, cooler temperatures and less wind.

Firefighters were close to taming the blaze near Ojai, Calif., but other fires continued burning out of control in California, Idaho, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Washington and Wyoming. Nearly 5,000 firefighters from across the nation were on fire lines.

California Gov. George Deukmejian on Friday asked President

Reagan to declare federal disaster areas in the city of Los Angeles and in San Diego County, where fires have inflicted an estimated $23.6 million damage.

A disaster declaration would allow residents to apply for federal aid. Deukmejian also offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of those responsible for a blaze in the Baldwin Hills section of Los Angeles, which killed three people Tuesday. Authorities believe the fire was set.

Many of the blazes that had been burning for up to five days were man-made.

U.S. unemployment rate on plateau for fifth month

By MERRILL HARTSON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Civilian unemployment remained stubbornly at a 7.3 percent plateau, although manufacturing suffered more job losses and service-oriented businesses registered modest gains, the government reported Friday.

But Commissioner of Labor Statistics Janet L. Norwood told the congressional Joint Economic Committee that lawmakers should not subscribe to the notion that "we are becoming a nation of hamburger-makers."

Several private analysts, however, said they were concerned about the health of the job market following the Bureau of Labor Statistics' report that the overall unemployment rate allowed no improvement for a fifth consecutive month.

On Wall Street, meanwhile, the report triggered a steep decline in interest rates and broad rallies in prices of both stocks and bonds. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 8.06 to 1,334.45, and prices of long-term bonds jumped about 11 points, or $13 for every $1,000 in face value.

Main Valley rate drops — A8

The unemployment rate in the Main Valley dropped to 6.5 percent Friday, the lowest in months, according to the Federal Reserve more than a week after the job market showed a sharp recovery.

White House spokesman Dale Petrosky said the administration had no specific comment on the figures released Friday, but added, "We really believe that the economy is poised for another spurt of growth. The interest rates are down and there are a lot of good jobs available."

The money supply already is growing more rapidly than called for by the Fed's own anti-inflation growth targets, and the latest increase could reduce the Fed's willingness to make money more available, credit analysts said.

Probe zeroes in on ex-school head

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

CASTLEFORD — Former Castleford School District superintendent Robert Hutchin and a suspected $2,000 forged check allegedly cashed by him are the subjects of an investigation by the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department.

About a week ago, school officials were closing the books on district finances when they found an unauthorized school district payroll check written to Hutchin April 24, said Chief Deputy Sheriff Harold Jensen. The check allegedly was cashed by Hutchin at the Idaho First National Bank branch in Buhl.

Castleford School Board Chairman Roger Clark said Friday that school officials did question the check and, as is usual procedure, returned it to the bank for action. The bank then notified the sheriff's office late last week.

White House orders new Medicare cuts

By WILLIAM KHONHOLM
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is lightening the vise on health care costs, announced more than $225 million in additional cuts in Medicare spending Friday.

The cuts are to be achieved through new limits on payments for medical education and home health care.

In regulations published in the Federal Register, the Department of Health and Human Services imposed a freeze on payments under Medicare for subsidizing the education of interns and residents at teaching hospitals. The change will save $125-million next year, HHS said.

Gorbachev invites U.S. to reaffirm ABM limits

By WILLIAM J. EATON
The Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev Friday invited the United States to strengthen a key limit in arms-control efforts by reaffirming the 1972 treaty limiting anti-ballistic missile defenses.

Gorbachev, in a letter to a group of American scientists, also denied U.S. charges that the Soviet Union is violating the treaty by constructing a large anti-ABM system.

The Soviet Union, he said, "unswervingly observes the spirit and letter of that document of paramount importance."

The department also established new rate structures for home health specialists in fields such as physical therapy and speech pathology, saving at least $100 million over the next three years.

HHS said about 70 percent of such specialists will be affected, either by being pressured to lower their rates or by being refused full reimbursement.

The second change brought a sharp response from the chairman of the House Aging Committee, Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., who said it will "translate into millions of denied home health visits to elderly Americans."

Roybal said the changes were particularly critical because other Medicare cost-saving measures are forcing patients out of hospitals sooner, making them more dependent on home health care.

Both regulations were listed last winter as part of President Reagan's 1986 budget plan to trim the growth in Medicare spending by $3.9 billion, holding the health insurance program for the nation's elderly and disabled to a total of $77.2 billion.

The largest proposal, freezing Medicare payments to hospitals at their 1985 levels, was formally offered as regulation last month and carried an estimated saving of $1.8 billion.

The home health regulation affects payments to specialists in six fields — skilled nursing care, physical therapy, speech pathology, occupational therapy, medical social services and home health aides.

Strategic stability and trust would, no doubt, be strengthened if the United States agreed together with the U.S.S.R. in a binding form to reaffirm commitment to the regime of the treaty on the limitation of anti-ballistic missile systems, a treaty of unlimited duration," he said.

The Kremlin leader's remarks were made in a letter to the Union of Concerned Scientists, who had written to him and to Reagan, urging that space weapons be banned.

Pesticide probe threatens watermelon sales in peak season

Watermelons were removed from L.A. store shelves Thursday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Supermarkets stopped selling watermelons Friday as an investigation into pesticide-tainted melons that sickened at least 58 people in three states focused on growers in two California counties.

Watermelon sellers complained they would lose hundreds of thousands of dollars during their most profitable time of year — the July 4 holiday weekend.

All watermelons were recalled at state order Thursday in California and Oregon, and officials in Washington warned grocers not to sell watermelons. At least 58 people had fallen ill in the three states, 34 of them in California, said Kenneth Kizer, director of California's Department of Health Services.

Kizer said Oregon health officials told him new cases were reported Friday in Tillamook. But other health officials knew of no cases in their state. Kizer said he did not know how widespread the problem was in the rest of the country.

Watermelon was the second food item recalled in recent weeks. On June 13, officials ordered grocers to stop selling Jalsco-brand soft white Mexican cheese after a bacteria found in it was linked to 55 deaths and stillbirths.

And on Friday, the Food and Drug Administration warned consumers in 16 states — including California, Oregon and Washington — that dried fruit and snack mixes sold under the "Mountain Man" label contain undisclosed sulfite preservatives that could cause an allergic reaction in some individuals.

The dried fruit packages are being recalled by Mountain Man Fruit and Nut Co. of Parker, Colo., and a subsidiary of the same name in Salem, Ore., for relabeling.

"At this time, it's only California-grown melons" that have been blamed for the illnesses, said Tom Hall, senior pesticide use specialist with California's Department of Food and Agriculture.

He said it was not immediately clear how far the melons had been dispersed by shippers.

Washington state officials said they were investigating four possible sources of watermelons sold in that state — Phoenix and Yuma, Ariz., and Bakerfield and El Centro, Calif. — Traces of the pesticide-sulfide carbonyl disulfide were found in melons on the vine at two Kern County growers, state Department of Health Services Director Kenneth Kizer said. He declined to identify the growers.

Officials are now "looking at" basically all the growers and distributors in Kern County and in Riverside County. Those are the two areas that are harvesting and distributing watermelons right now," he said.

Kizer, speaking by telephone from Sacramento, said the pesticide is not meant to be used on watermelons.

"It's still early in the investigation, but it would certainly appear that there has been an inappropriate use of the pesticide," he said. "Why that occurred is obviously going to be looked at."

Many of those stricken suffered profuse sweating and tremors, muscle cramps and twitching, as well as nausea, vomiting and blurry vision, Kizer said.

"All the people have recovered as far as we know. There haven't been any deaths," he said. "A couple of the individuals had actually serious heart rhythm disturbances."

Sellers are also on the verge of panic.

The 2,400-member Western Growers Association warned that delays in locating the source of the contamination could mean "financial disaster" for California's $25 million-a-year watermelon industry.

"The Fourth of July is the busiest watermelon holiday of the year," said Al Priestor, a salesman with Shapiro, Gilman-Shandler, a wholesale produce distributor in Los Angeles.

He predicted he would lose "a couple of hundred thousand dollars a day" since watermelon sales constitute half his business this time of year.

Heater leaking carbon monoxide leaves 2 dead, 18 injured in motel

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Carbon monoxide from a gas water heater seeped into ground floor rooms at a motel Friday, killing two people and injuring 18, authorities said.

Some of the victims were unconscious when pulled from the building, Gammon said. Assistant Las Vegas Fire Chief Richard Gammon. Five of the injured were listed in serious condition at three local hospitals.

"They were anywhere from semiconscious to unconscious when we found them," said Gammon. "Most all had to be taken out by stretcher."

The bodies were found in adjoining rooms where the highest concentration of carbon monoxide was found, on the bottom floor of the two-story Crest Motel near the malfunctioning heater, Gammon said. "Most of their identities were not immediately released."

Disturbance forces busing

FORT GRANT, Ariz. (AP) — Officials bused 39 prisoners from an overcrowded minimum-security prison to other facilities around the state Friday, a day after violence broke out during a power failure, a corrections spokesman said.

Thirty-four inmates were moved from Arizona State Prison-Fort Grant in southeastern Arizona because of Thursday's violence and five were moved for unrelated reasons, said Mike Arva, state Department of Corrections spokesman. They were sent to medium- and maximum-security prisons in Tucson, Perryville and Florence, he said in Phoenix.

Fifty law enforcement personnel from two other state prisons, the state Department of Public Safety and the Grant County Sheriff's Department were sent to the prison Thursday and remained there after the situation calmed, Arva said.

A couple staying at the motel said they were moved from room 137, where one of the dead people was found, two days earlier after becoming sick.

Enrique Gonzalez of Hawthorne, Calif., said his wife, who suffers from a heart condition, became nauseous and dizzy early Wednesday after complaining of the smell in the room. He said she was taken to a hospital emergency room and revived with oxygen.

"She couldn't sleep all night long because of the smell, which was real sweet," said Gonzalez. "She finally passed out about seven in the morning."

Gonzalez, a retiree who was on vacation with his wife, said her symptoms went away after they were moved to another building in the 99-unit complex.

Gammon said other residents also complained they suffered headaches and dizziness Thursday night. "It sounds like this had been building up for three or four days," he said.

Gammon said a vent pipe was apparently knocked off the natural gas heater. Police cordoned off the motel and evacuated its occupants, most of whom sat outside in 110-degree heat and waited for firefighters to finish blowing the fumes away with fans.

Assad tries to gain freedom for remaining U.S. hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Syrian President Hafez Assad, who helped secure the release of the hostages aboard TWA flight 847, is making an effort to win freedom for the seven remaining American captives in Lebanon, the State Department said Friday.

The statement by deputy spokesman Edward Djerejian apparently was based on a telephone conversation President Reagan had with Assad earlier this week.

Djerejian gave no details of the conversation but noted that Syria "has an important role to play" in Lebanon because of its influence with Lebanese authorities and Shiite Moslem groups.

Assad's influence was crucial in the negotiations leading up to the release last Sunday of the 59 Americans who were aboard the Trans World Airlines flight.

Djerejian said the United States is doing "everything possible" to obtain the release of the seven, who have been kidnapped in isolated incidents over the past 16 months.

Meanwhile, a delegation of three Arab diplomats, representing the Council of Arab Ambassadors here, appealed to Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy to reconsider the U.S. call for an international boycott of Beirut airport.

Clovis Maksud, permanent representative of the 22-nation Arab League, told reporters the United States should take into account new measures to enhance security at the airport.

Among other steps, he said, Lebanon has tightened security along all roads to the airport. According to reports from Beirut, army troops and airport security officers have begun stopping travelers, banning cars from the terminal area and keeping armed militiamen away.

In addition, new earthen barriers and a fence are under construction at strategic gates and on the airport's perimeter.

In response, Djerejian said those measures fall far short of what the United States believes is necessary to meet minimal security requirements. "Much, much needs to be done," he said.

U.S., Soviets agree to use "hotline"

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to use the "hotline" between Moscow and Washington if either party obtains information related to the possible use of nuclear weapons by third countries or by terrorists, it was learned Friday.

The agreement was reached last June 14 during discussions by a Soviet-American consultative group in Geneva. The announcement made at the time offered few details, partly because the deliberations of the group are not made public by mutual agreement.

Under questioning Friday, State

Department deputy spokesman Edward Djerejian said the agreement contains "mutual obligations concerning notification and sharing of information either party may have in cases when that would help preclude misunderstanding which could increase the risk of nuclear war."

Other officials, who asked not to be identified, said the agreement expands on a 1971 accord that commits the two countries to take measures aimed at reducing the risks of a Soviet-American nuclear confrontation.

The new agreement was worked out in the Soviet-American Standing Consultative Commission, which meets in Geneva to discuss implementation and compliance with arms control measures.

"It's not an enormous step forward," said one official. But, he said, the agreement shows the SCC can be a useful forum and that it is possible for the administration to move ahead on arms control issues.

He also noted that nuclear non-proliferation is one area in which the United States and the Soviet Union have indicated an ability to work together.

Celebrated fugitive Walker free until 3rd trial in November

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Twice convicted of killing a policeman, former death row inmate and celebrated fugitive James Dean Walker was freed on a $150,000 bond Friday, pending his third trial for the 22-year-old crime.

Walker, 44, whose tale is to be the subject of a made-for-television movie, was sentenced in 1964 to die in Arkansas' electric chair for the April 1963 shooting murder of North Little Rock patrolman Jerrell Vaughan.

In 1965 he won a new trial from the state Supreme Court; was convicted a second time after a five-day trial and was sentenced to life in prison.

Professing to have become a "born-again" Christian in prison, Walker ran away from a five-day furlough in March 1975 and lived as a fugitive until his capture in California in September 1979.

Transplant failure 'shocks' doctors

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Doctors were "quite shocked" Friday when a 12-year-old girl who had become the nation's youngest heart-lung transplant died after the heart she had for two days stopped functioning, a hospital official said.

Transplant surgeons, who have performed 23 such double transplants, called the death of Mary Granz "the most dramatic failure in the transplanted heart-lung (program) that they've ever seen," said Children's Hospital spokesman Dick Riebling.

The girl, from Farrell in Mercer County, died at 10 a.m. in the hospital's intensive care unit, Riebling said.

Hijacked engineer returns to rousing welcome in Cascade

CASCADE (AP) — Benjamin Christian Zimmermann has made the half-hour flight from Boise to Cascade many times. But the trip on Independence Day took on new meaning.

"I rather like being up in the air coming home," Zimmermann said after returning from 17 days of captivity at the hands of radical Shiite Moslems in Beirut, Lebanon. "Nothing has demonstrated how beautiful America is like this last leg of the trip."

The long, circuitous trip home for the flight engineer aboard hijacked TWA Flight 847 took him first through Damascus, Syria; Frankfurt, West Germany; Washington, D.C.; and finally on Wednesday to St. Louis to visit relatives. The flight hijacked on June 14 had been scheduled to travel only from Athens to Rome.

Residents of Cascade, population

945, had been preparing all week to welcome home one of their own from an experience many say brought the tight-knit mountain community even closer together.

The 45-year-old Lutheran pastor, who was freed on Sunday along with 38 other hostages, said the prayers of his neighbors and friends had helped sustain him through the ordeal, and that his becoming bore out God's will.

"I believe everything worked out the way the good Lord must have had it intended," he said during a brief stop at the Boise Municipal Airport before continuing to Cascade.

Gov. John Evans met Zimmermann and his wife, Melvia, when they landed in Boise Thursday night, and carried the couple's children with him and his wife, Lola, as they flew in the state's 14-seat, twin-engine Otter to Cascade. The Zimmermanns flew in a private Cessna furnished by Arnold Aviation of Cascade.

They landed minutes apart shortly after 8 p.m. at the tiny Cascade airstrip to the cheers of more than 300 well-wishers.

As the plane carrying Zimmermann landed, people crowded the runway, letting more than 250 balloons fly when he got off the plane. Zimmermann was led through rows of Cascade residents wearing yellow T-shirts with black letters spelling out "WELCOME HOME CHRISTIAN!"

He smiled at the crowd before being whisked away in a motorcade to the city park.

TWA Flight 847 has finally landed, Zimmermann said at the park. He thanked his well-wishers for their support, but he requested that at least one yellow ribbon of the many in front be left up for seven Americans still held by Shiite extremists in Lebanon.

At the park, Evans said he had called on Idahoans to "pray for their (the hostages) safe release" and our prayers were answered by God. "The governor said Americans should be able to travel around the world and not be placed in the serious position you've placed in."

At the airport and the park, residents held signs reading, "Welcome home, Christian" and "To God we give the glory."

Ivan Andrew, a McCall resident, said he was excited to be at the airport. "All our hopes luckily came through," he said. He said his daughter is a friend of Zimmermann's 5-year-old daughter, Elizabeth.

Roxie Wellington, Cascade, said, "He belongs to us. This is where he belongs." She added that she never doubted Zimmermann would return home.

As Zimmermann left the park, he told reporters, "The hijackers should be brought to justice," but added, "Retaliating is not a word in my vocabulary. I just don't like playing that game."

Earlier, the scene was much the same during a brief stop in Boise, where more than 100 residents greeted Zimmermann and his wife, Melvia, with hugs, kisses, flowers, handshakes and signs.

Zimmermann walked into the waiting room at Boise Municipal Airport carrying his daughter and followed by his wife and two sons, Eric, 16, and Steve, 12, and by the Evanses.

The large group of homecoming well-wishers was composed mainly of Boise-area Lutherans and officers and enlisted members of the Idaho Air National Guard. Zimmermann holds the rank of major in the Air Guard.

Before their father arrived in Cascade, his children described their perception of the incident.

"Some weirdo came and held up an airplane," Steve said. "Then they gave him some pretty good hospitality, and then they gave him roses."

He said he had gotten used to his father being away from home on flights, but the hijacking became real to him when he saw it on TV.

Elizabeth added, "I thought he was dead, but he was still alive."

Briefly

Court rules on trial publicity

BOISE (AP) — Widespread local publicity about a murder case by itself is not enough justification to move a criminal trial elsewhere, the Idaho Court of Appeals says.

The court on Friday voted 2-1 to uphold the murder and assault convictions against Thomas Daniel Sanger in a triple slaying at Orofino five years ago.

Sanger was convicted of second-degree murder in the slayings of Billie Norton, Debra Haines and Tim Schultz. He was convicted of assault with intent to murder in the shooting of a fourth person who survived.

In his appeal, Sanger claimed the trial should have been moved from Clearwater County because of pre-trial publicity. But the Court of Appeals upheld former judge Andrew Schwam's decision to allow the trial in Clearwater County.

Legal fees claim reinstated

BOISE (AP) — A Pocatello attorney's claim for legal fees against an aviation company has been reinstated by the Idaho Court of Appeals.

John B. Kugler sued Northwest Aviation, Inc., for legal services allegedly performed between 1974 and 1978.

District Judge Peter McDermott ruled against the claim. But the Court of Appeals sent the case back to district court on Friday for a determination whether an "open account" existed between the air company and Kugler.

Massey-Ferguson loses suit

BOISE (Idaho AP) — A former Nez Perce County farm implement dealer has won most of a lawsuit against Massey-Ferguson, Inc., over the value of parts returned to the manufacturer when the dealership went out of business.

MH&H Implement, Inc., doing business as Northwest Equipment, won a $150,830 judgment against Massey-Ferguson over the value of returned parts, interest and $59,747 in attorney fees.

The Court of Appeals on Friday sustained most of the judgment but said there was no provision in the contract for the interest award.

California watermelons risky

BOISE (AP) — After dozens of cases of illness in other states, an Idaho health official is recommending that California watermelons not be sold in the state.

"We wish to warn the public against consumption of California-grown melons," said Charles Brokopp, state epidemiologist, on Friday. "Don't eat one unless you can be assured it came from some place other than California."

In California, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia, dozens of cases of illness have been reported, apparently because of pesticide contamination.

Reilly to announce campaign

NAMPA (AP) — Terry Reilly, who in 1982 became the first Democrat in 44 years elected to the Idaho Senate from Canyon County, on Monday will announce his campaign for his party's lieutenant governor nomination.

"The lieutenant governor position offers a great opportunity to express public policy and work within the system to carry it out," said Reilly, 38.

Reilly, administrator of Community Health Clinics, Inc., at Nampa, will be the first candidate to formally announce for the nomination, although Democratic Party leaders have identified up to nine potential candidates.

Jones plans consumer fraud attack

POCATELLO (AP) — Since 1981, the state of Idaho has had consumer fraud laws on the books, but with no state agency to see that they are enforced.

As an economy move, the Legislature in 1981 wiped out funding for the consumer fraud division of the attorney general's office, after 10 years of operation.

Attorney General Jim Jones says he plans to start a limited effort to combat consumer fraud, and will ask the next Legislature to put up more money.

"Bunco artists and fly-by-night salesmen have become fairly commonplace in Idaho since the consumer protection division in the attorney general's office was terminated in 1981," Jones said.

In the next few months, Jones said he plans to start a low-scale program to alert consumers on prudent buying practices and potential fraudulent sales schemes.

Later, he will attempt to solicit donated services from private attorneys in the worst consumer fraud cases.

Jones said some of them might be prosecuted on a contingency fee basis, with a private attorney handling the case to be paid only from money recovered.

Academy in business despite shortfall

GREENLEAF (AP) — Patrons of the Greenleaf Christian School here didn't make their $750,000 goal in a fund-raising drive to save the 77-year-old institution, but school officials say it will remain open.

It was announced a month ago that the academy, which had 250 students last year, wouldn't open for the fall term unless $750,000 was raised for operating expense and to cut long-term debt.

Greenleaf patron Gary Morgan told a gathering Thursday the drive has raised $325,000, but the school plans to open this fall.

"There are a lot of people who are much more happy about that total than I am," said Morgan. "But maybe I was wrong in the beginning."

Morgan defended his original report that $750,000 was needed to keep the school open.

Seasonal jobs add to drop

Magic Valley jobs increase

By DOUG WRIGHT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Unemployment in the Magic Valley dropped again during June as employers in the agriculture and construction industries continued to take on additional workers.

Idaho's overall unemployment also registered a decrease, primarily because of increased seasonal job opportunities in the agriculture, construction and tourism industries.

With all regions of the state counted, Idaho's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for June was 6.1 percent, 3 percent lower than in May. Translated into people, 25,600 people were unemployed out of a total labor force of 450,700 in the state.

"We've had really good seasonal job opportunities in the state this year," explains Janell Hyer with the Employment Department. "There are lots more people in agriculture this year, the tourist industry is looking good, construction is back on track, and the loggers are now able to get back into the woods."

"All around, we saw increased activity in trade, and no major layoffs throughout the state last month," Hyer added.

For Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding Counties, the seasonally adjusted rate dropped 5 percent to 5.6 percent, which is 6 percent below the June 1984 rate, said McDonald.

Out of a labor force of 37,069, only 1,992 people were unemployed last month.

The Magic Valley employment picture was not all positive, however, as the total area labor force dropped by 400 people, which usually indicates some weakening of the local economy, said McDonald.

Labor force reductions are generally caused by people who leave the area or for some other reason quit looking for a job, he said, but he was unsure exactly what factors precipitated the drop last month. "The labor force just doesn't usually go down during June."

Elsewhere in the state, northern Idaho continues to suffer very high unemployment because of the slumping timber and mining industries, as well as a significant number of layoffs in the electronics industry there, said Hyer.

Otherwise, the employment picture in the state looks healthy and stable, especially in the Idaho Falls and Ada County areas, she said. The Canyon County area recorded the largest decrease in unemployment, with a drop of 3 percent last month, while northern Idaho reported the only increase in unemployment, from 9.4 percent to 9.5 percent.

The employment picture for Idaho should continue to remain fairly stable and healthy throughout the rest of the summer, said Hyer, although it might increase slightly in July or August as food processing plants close down for their maintenance periods.

Regional unemployment rates add the change from May are:

- Inland Empire (Coeur d'Alene) — 9.5 percent, up 1 percent.
- Lewiston-Turkston — 4.7 percent, down 3 percent.
- Canyon County — 6.8 percent, down 3 percent.
- Boise area — 4.3 percent, down 3 percent.
- Magic Valley — 5.8 percent, down 5 percent.
- Pocatello — 6.2 percent, down 3 percent.
- Idaho Falls — 3.9 percent, down 3 percent.

Rock Creek road project to begin

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A million-dollar reconstruction project on three miles of road leading into Rock Creek Canyon, south of Hansen, is expected to begin within the next two weeks.

Engineers with the state Division of Highways in Shoshone said the contract calls for replacing a narrow and badly worn section of the road that leads into the Sawtooth National Forest area with a higher standard and wider roadway. When completed, the new section of road will connect with the county road at the community of Rock Creek and with the previously improved upper portion of the canyon road.

Resident Engineer LaMar Duffin of Shoshone said the road will be 28 feet wide. Because of extensive reconstruction, there will be significant traffic delays of up to three or four hours. He said ranchers in the area and others using the road will be given adequate notice of the delay periods.

There are four cattle guards within the project that must also be rebuilt. The contract was awarded to Robert V. Burgraf Co., of Idaho Falls, in the amount of $1,068,372.95. The project is funded with 91 percent federal money and 9 percent Twin Falls Highway District money. State engineers will supervise the construction.

The road serves a popular summer and winter recreation area including, camp grounds, summer homes, the Magic Mountain Ski Resort and Diamondfield Jack Snowmobile area.

Water sinks to shallow

Water in the canal, which is used for irrigation, has sunk to a level that is not enough to keep it out alive. The water is now only a few inches deep in some places, and the plants are beginning to wither. The canal company is trying to find a way to get the water back to a normal level, but it is not clear when this will happen. ## Boy wandered for hours without water before fatal cliff fall

By The Associated Press and the Times-News

KING HILL — A 13-year-old Bellevue, Wash., boy who died Wednesday when he fell 76 feet from a canyon wall on a wilderness survival trip for troubled youths, had been without water for 9 1/2 hours before the accident, authorities say.

Gregory Owens Jones died from chest injuries suffered in the fall above King Hill Creek in the Bennett Hills, Elmore County Coroner Verl Humphreys said Thursday after conducting an autopsy.

Jones was one of six youths on a three-week trip organized by the School of Urban and Wilderness Survival, based in Redmond, Wash., said Dennis Thompson of Hagerman, director of field operations for the school. Jones' group, accompanied by two guides, had been without water for 9 1/2 hours before the accident at 4:30 p.m., Elmore County Sheriff's Department Chief Deputy Rick Layher said. Temperatures in the area reached 100 Wednesday, Layher said.

Jones was the last of the six to attempt the hike down the 300-foot canyon to the King Hill Creek, about 15 miles east of Mountain Home, where water was available, Layher said.

Layher said it was unknown what caused Jones to fall. But, he said, "I know the kids were awful tired and they were thirsty, and he may have been in a hurry to get down."

Thompson said thirst was not a factor in Jones' fall.

"All the statements indicate he was walking cautiously," he said. "He just strayed off and fell."

Thompson said the group of five boys and a girl, aged 13 to 20, was on its second day of the trip when the accident occurred. The participants, who paid $2,000 each for the trip, are "characterized as troubled and searching youths," he said.

Elmore County Sheriff Larry Olson said while he is concerned about the survival group staging their training in Elmore County, he would not like to force them into some other area, where the same thing could happen again.

Elmore County Sheriff's Detective Nick Schilz, who also visited the accident scene early Thursday, said Jones fell straight down about 75 feet and landed in some trees and rocks. He said there were loose rocks where the group was crossing a ridge that might have caused Jones to lose his footing.

Each of the six survival groups of no more than six persons carries a communications radio, he said. The individual in the group with Jones who carried the radio had to hike up to the ridge from the bottom of the canyon where Jones had fallen in order to make contact with the radio center. Schilz said each group must check in hourly with a central radio operator atop a hill. Once the accident was reported to the radio operator, he was able to make contact with a state police officer near Wendell, who initiated a helicopter rescue.

Schilz said it was believed Jones may have lived 20 minutes after the fall, but his body was not recovered until

Man burned by electricity

MURTAUGH — A 20-year-old man suffered burns to his feet when an irrigation pipe he was carrying touched a power line Thursday afternoon, south of Murtaugh Lake.

Arlon B. Eari of Route 1, Murtaugh was admitted with injuries to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, reported Chief Deputy Harold Jensen of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's office. Eari was released Friday from the hospital.

At about 1 p.m. Thursday, Eari and 21-year-old Rocky Matthews of Murtaugh were knocked to the ground when an irrigation pipe they were carrying hit the power line on the Randy Stanger farm, Jensen said.

Matthews was not injured.

The sheriff's office was notified by an ambulance crew, which had been summoned to the site.

The Idaho Power Co. reported no power outages as a result of the accident, Jensen said.

Dozen divers search canal for boy's body

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — An intensive search by about a dozen divers continued Friday for the body of a 16-year-old Kimberly boy, believed drowned Thursday in the Mainline Canal.

David Larson, the son of Lyle and Rosalynn Larson of 101 Main Ave. S., was identified as the victim Friday by the Twin Falls County Sheriff's office.

The incident occurred at about 10 a.m. on July Fourth when Larson and a group of other youths went swimming in the canal, about a mile and a half north of Murtaugh Lake after working on the Uhlig Ranch.

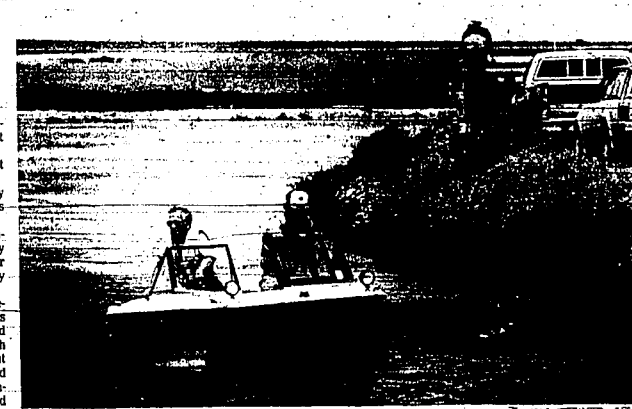

The youths had swum the width of the canal, about 100 feet, and started back when Larson called for help, reported Chief Deputy Harold Jensen.

Ethan Clinnes, 14, of Kimberly, attempted to rescue Larson, but couldn't hold him.

The water in the canal was swift and about eight to 12 feet deep. Divers were summoned Thursday night. About a mile of the canal was searched downstream.

The effort resumed at 10 a.m. Friday when 10-11 divers painstakingly searched the bottom of the canal for about four miles, Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Munn said.

Holding onto a rope stretched between two trucks on shore, divers covered the canal almost end to end while a boat followed. The search under the water continued for about five hours. On shore, deputies and volunteers from the Twin Falls County Search and Rescue Unit watched the water from three bridges downstream.

Idaho lands $75,000 grant to spur scientific funding

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Idaho has received a $75,000 grant from the National Science Foundation to improve the ability of its scientists and engineers to obtain federal research grants.

The money is being authorized under the Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research (EPSCoR) and will be divided among Idaho's universities and colleges, said H.D. Palmer, a spokesman for Sen. Jim McClure.

In a three-to-one matching agreement, industry and other private sources within the state will supply another $25,000 to the program.

The $100,000 will finance an analysis of Idaho's science and technology base. It will also be used to help develop a five-year proposal to strengthen Idaho's research capabilities which will be reviewed by the National Science Foundation (NSF) in early 1986.

"The proposal basically says, 'Here's what we want to do to strengthen our ability to compete for federal research grants and be a magnet for research,'" said Palmer.

Once the NSF has reviewed the research improvement proposal, it can authorize up to $3 million to help implement it within the state.

The EPSCoR program was established by the National Science Foundation in 1978 to help less populated states and those with a small technological base receive more research grants, because a few big states were receiving the lion's share of the money at the time.

In Phase I of the program, Arkansas, Maine, Montana, South Carolina and West Virginia received money from the NSF. Idaho, which ranks in the bottom 20 percent of states in the amount of federal research money received, was scheduled to receive the grant in Phase II of the program.

Survival

After a medical helicopter crew out of Boise attempted to find Jones on its own and failed, the craft landed at Bliss to pick up one of the group guides, who took them to the site.

Schitz said it appeared the boys were well prepared for the survival program and were learning "to live off the land." He said they carry light backpacks only and are instructed on what wild foods are edible and which are not and how to purify drinking water water by boiling.

The party said Thompson told him he planned to contact the parents of each child involved and if they wished their son or daughter to return home because of the Wednesday accident they would be released from the survival training and sent home.

Schitz said Thompson said the survival program was continuing Friday, adding it has been conducted in Elmore County for the past three years. He said Jones, who was very small for a 13-year-old, did not suffer head injuries or a broken neck in the fall, but some chest fractures and may have died of trauma from the fall. A pathologist's report has not been completed, he added.

During the survival trip, participants learn to live in the wild, eating as much as possible and snakes. The experience is designed to improve the youths' self-esteem and decision making, Thompson said. About 125 youths have participated in the program in the Bennett Hills this year.

The accident was investigated by the Idaho "Outfitters and Guides" Board, which has licensed the school for three years, board Chairman Glen R. Foster of Rigby said.

Foster said the board met with Thompson last month to review qualifications for survival guides and required that at least one licensed guide accompany each group, a practice that had not been followed.

Thompson said neither of the guides with Jones, David Weber, 25, and Matthew Houghton, 25, was licensed by the state. However, he said a license application for Weber, Twin Falls, was sent to the board Tuesday. Houghton, Bliss, also plans to apply for a license, Thompson said.

"It's just a matter of paper work," Thompson said, adding, "All our qualifications are solid."

Thompson said groups always hike through rough canyons. He said emergency water supplies had not been needed before.

Although one member of the group, not Jones, vomited during the day, Thompson said that was a result of the youth having eaten berries. "They were not dehydrated or suffering from heat stroke or heat exhaustion," Layher said the case was considered an accident.

Jones' father, John, said his son "was difficult but he never caused us any legal trouble."

But Thompson said Jones' group was delayed six hours by frequent stops on the four-mile hike through rugged canyons. He said emergency water supplies had not been needed before.

Although one member of the group, not Jones, vomited during the day, Thompson said that was a result of the youth having eaten berries. "They were not dehydrated or suffering from heat stroke or heat exhaustion," Layher said the case was considered an accident.

Jones' father, John, said his son "was difficult but he never caused us any legal trouble."

Catholic bishop of Shanghai let go after 30 years in prison

By JIM MANN
Los Angeles Times

PEKING — Ignatius Kung, 85, the Roman Catholic bishop of Shanghai, has been released after serving 30 years in prison.

Kung was arrested in 1953 and sentenced in 1960 to life in prison for high treason, for refusing to abandon his loyalty to the Vatican and refusing to accept a separate, state-controlled "patriotic" Catholic Church.

The authorities announced that he was granted parole Wednesday after he admitted his crime and showed repentance.

The release of Kung is the latest dramatic sign that the Chinese government and the Vatican are seeking reconciliation.

The Chinese church broke with the Vatican on government orders in the 1950s. Since then, China's estimated 10 million Roman Catholics have had to choose between the government-approved "patriotic" church and a clandestine church that remains loyal to Rome.

The patriotic churches are run by the Catholic Patriotic Association under the government's Bureau of Religious Affairs. The bureau is subject to the guidance of the United Front Work Department of the Communist Party Central Committee.

Over the past six months, Chinese authorities and the Vatican have made a number of overtures. On June 13, for example, China announced that the largest Roman Catholic cathedral in Peking, the Peking Cathedral, which was closed and desecrated during the Cultural Revolution, would reopen this year with the help of a government grant of $350,000.

Two weeks later, the Vatican announced that it would lend a powerful telescope from the Vatican observatory at Castel Gandolfo to a Chinese university.

Also, prominent Catholic leaders abroad have been granted special permission to visit China. Chinese authorities allowed Cardinal Jaime Sin of the Philippines to come here last October on grounds that he is partly Chinese and was visiting his ancestral home.

There have been previous efforts at a compromise between China and the Vatican over the past five years, but none has succeeded in healing the schism. China has continued to view loyalty to the Pope as a criminal offense.

Last year, Bishop Joseph Fan Xueyan of Baoding, a town 75 miles southwest of Peking, was sentenced to 10 years in prison because of his contacts with the Vatican.

Fan, 77, who earlier was imprisoned from 1958 to 1979, was found guilty of "colluding with anti-Chinese foreign forces to jeopardize the security of the motherland." The authorities said that he had secretly ordained priests for the underground church and had received financial support from the Vatican.

Bishop Kung could not be reached for comment Thursday. The official New China News Agency said that he was paroled Wednesday after a court hearing and that he had promised to "abide by the law."

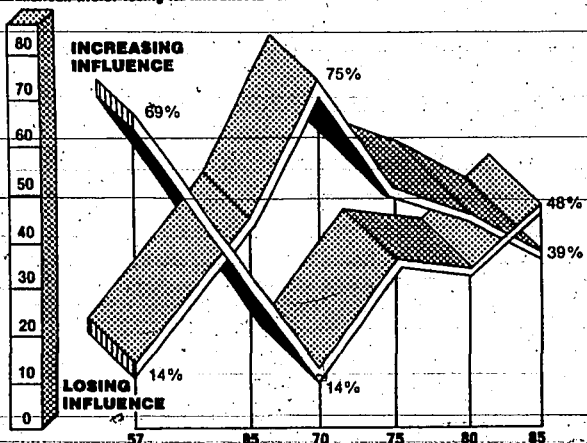

The news agency said that Kung had returned to Shanghai to visit Louis Zhang Jiashu, the bishop of the "patriotic" Catholic Church there. It said the paroled leader kissed Bishop Zhang's ring and promised to act under his guidance.

Influence of religion in the U.S.

The latest poll shows a rise in those who perceive religion to be gaining in influence on American life. Almost half of Americans now see religion as increasing its influence, compared to only 14 percent of those surveyed in 1969 and 1970. In the 1970 survey, 75 percent felt that religion was losing influence, compared to 39 percent now.

CHANGES IN PERCEIVED INFLUENCE OF RELIGION ON AMERICAN LIFE

In percent of those asked the question: At the present time, do you think religion as a whole is increasing its influence on American life or losing its influence?

Remaining percentages saw no change, or expressed no opinion.

Yugoslavians extend invitation to pope, despite government tack

By IVAN STEFANOVIC
Associated Press Writer

DIJKOVO, Yugoslavia — Roman Catholic church leaders publicly repeated their request Friday that Pope John Paul II visit Yugoslavia, which the communist government has not allowed.

The invitation came during a High Mass marking the 1,000th anniversary of the death of St. Methodius, who with his brother, St. Cyril, brought Christianity to the Slavs and developed the Cyrillic alphabet still used in the Soviet Union, Bulgaria and parts of Yugoslavia.

Six cardinals and nearly 300 priests and bishops from several nations of Eastern and Western Europe participated in the Mass at this Croatia farming town. Organizers said the service was attended by about 15,000 worshippers.

There were no official restraints on ceremonies here, with Yugoslavia being independent of the Soviet bloc. That contrasted with the situation in Czechoslovakia, which has denied foreign churchmen permission to attend similar celebrations at Velehrad this weekend.

POPE JOHN PAUL II
First Slavic pope

Cardinal Franjo Kuharic of Zagreb made the public invitation to Pope John Paul in the presence of Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the Vatican secretary of state. Kuharic asked the papal emissary to relay to the pope "our intense desire (that he) ... visit our church in Yugoslavia."

Yugoslavians Catholics have invited the Polish pope to Yugoslavia on several occasions since 1979, but a trip has not yet been arranged. The government has said the visit would take place "when conditions are ripe," but church sources have said there were problems with the agenda.

Czechoslovak authorities allowed Casaroli and two other Vatican representatives to attend the events at Velehrad, in Moravia, and they arrived in Prague later Friday.

The Mass at the Djakovo cathedral ended two days of ceremonies, which included a special bishops' conference, a meeting of church leaders and a symposium of historians.

Fewer than half of the 15,000 faithful took part in the Mass at the cathedral for the three-hour service, at which Casaroli officiated.

He delivered his sermon in Serbo-Croatian, the official Yugoslav language.

In his sermon, Casaroli recalled the evangelism of Methodius and Cyril, comparing their work to current efforts of Christian churches toward unifying and achieving "a durable peace for all nations in Europe and the world."

Humanism, too

ATLANTA (AP) — The general assembly of Unitarian Universalist Association has adopted a more in-depth statement of religious "purposes and principles," including "humanist teachings" on reason and science.

"Humanist teachings which counsel us to heed the guidance of reason and the results of science, and warn us against idolatries of the mind and spirit."

Leaders call for legalization of undocumented residents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key Roman Catholic, Protestant and Jewish leaders call for legalization, not mass deportation, of undocumented aliens in this country.

The religious representatives this week told a U.S. Senate subcommittee taking testimony on immigration reform that it is a "test of the ideals and traditions which are our country's proud foundations."

"Our attitude toward all marginalized persons within our communities can be considered on trial."

Consideration of legislation on the problem of undocumented aliens has become a matter of growing controversy.

Urging care to avoid a "backlash against the foreign-born."

"Massive deportation is not an option, either practically or morally. Nor is an option the perpetuation of an undocumented subclass subject to exploitation."

L.M. Boyd What's what

Q. Are albino tigers white all over?
A. No, the usual gray-brown stripes are still gray-brown, but instead of orange stripes, they have white.

Q. What's the epitaph on William Shakespeare's tomb?
A. "Cursed be he that moves my bones."

Q. What animals in the zoos draw the most people?
A. "Cursed be he that moves my bones."

Q. How long do you think it will take you to become immortal, young fellow? Shakespeare's career only lasted about 25 years.

Q. What's the name of the highest lake in the world?
A. Has no name. But it's in Tibet.

Q. How come people over the age of 30 don't get mononucleosis?
A. If many too many, yes, Carotene poisoning. Otherwise known as "hypercarotenis." Not dangerous, just weird.

Q. The weather, always eastbound, travels faster in the winter than in the summer.

Q. Four out of five acres in Wyoming is for grazing.

UNDERWEAR

To wash your underwear in your birdbath is specifically outlawed in Duncan, Okla.

Q: What animals in the zoos draw the most people?

CORN

To the early Scots, oats were "corn." To the early English, wheat was "corn." To the early Teutons, sand, salt and gunpowder were "corn."

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)

Long talks with partners now could interfere with production, so postpone them. Avoid one who irritates you.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a Saturday when you need to be careful that you do not go flying off on various tangents that can make it a non-productive time for you. Organize your day efficiently.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Do something constructive about any worries you may have since running away from them could worsen the situation.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Do not argue with good friends because you want your own way and you safeguard the relationships. Be objective.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Not a good day to handle civic or credit matters since others could prove very disappointing. A bigwig is not in a good mood.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Some trip you plan today could yield you nothing, so handle the work at hand and you gain much.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Put aside that worry and concentrate on whatever will flow smoothly for you and get much done. Formulate new plans.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You could find it difficult to carry through with plans to improve your surroundings today. Your partner is uncooperative today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be more willing to go along with whatever is current, also — where amusements are concerned. Don't be too forceful with others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to get home matters well handled and make the improvements at home that are needed. Steer clear of arguments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)

Be very careful with your wallet when out shopping today or tonight. Make sure your car is running smoothly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 18)

Don't do anything that can add expense where real estate and other possessions are concerned. Avoid confusion at home.

Doctors' care for black leader criticized

South African violence flares, 2 killed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A medical panel ruled Friday that two white doctors were guilty of misconduct in treating black leader Steve Biko, whose death in police custody made him a martyr in the struggle against white rule.

One of the physicians was reprimanded and the other received a suspended penalty.

Violence continued in South Africa's black townships. Witnesses said two people were killed by police gunfire in a township east of Johannesburg during a police roundup of suspected rioters.

An inquest after the September 1977 death of Biko, 36-year-old founder of the Black Consciousness Movement, found that he probably succumbed to brain injuries suffered in a scuffle while police were interrogating him in Port Elizabeth.

The panel of the South African Medical and Dental Council decided at the end of its week-long inquiry that government district surgeons Benjamin Tucker and Ivor Lang failed to provide adequate care for Biko and falsified his medical records.

Tucker was found guilty of disgraceful professional conduct in allowing the police to move the injured man 750 miles by road, and was barred from practice for three months. But the sentence was suspended.

Lang received the lesser punishment of a reprimand.

Both could have been permanently barred from practicing medicine.

Biko, a medical student, founded the Black Consciousness Movement in 1969 and gave it the motto, "Black man, you are on your own."

His movement proclaimed that only South Africa's 22 million blacks could carry the fight for their full rights against the 5 million whites who rule the country to their own advantage. It rejected white help, unlike the African National Congress, the main black liberation group.

The movement was banned soon after Biko's death, but other groups now carry its banner and Biko's ideas have had considerable impact on young blacks.

More than 400 blacks have been killed during 10 months of violence and agitation against the white government's official apartheid policy of race segregation.

A witness to Friday's violence in Duduza township east of Johannesburg, said, "We were at the scene when we saw one being shot dead."

When the police stopped us in our car, they threatened to shoot us if we came nearer to them."

"I saw police sjamboking (whipping) people," he said. The witness, who asked not to be identified out of fear for his safety, said police held young men in a local hall, around which they erected a barbed wire fence.

Dr. Frances Ames, head of the neurology department at the University of Cape Town Medical School, campaigned for years to get the case of Biko's treatment heard. She said "the lightness of the sentences rather disconcerted me. . . . In the past, the council's retribution has been swift and hard."

Biko's widow, Nontsikelelo, said in King William's Town that she was "happy the truth has at last come out," but "I expected the sentences to be heavier."

Jaruzelski plans visit to Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Piwnic and Communist Party chief Jaruzelski will make an official visit to Yugoslavia July 8-10, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported Friday.

It will be Jaruzelski's second trip to a country outside the Soviet bloc since he came to power in 1981. He paid a five-day visit to India in February of this year.

Protocols dealing with economic and scientific cooperation were expected to be signed, said Tanjug.

Zeljko Jagic, the official Foreign Ministry spokesman, said Jaruzelski would meet with Yugoslav President Radovan Vlahovic, Premier Muka

OPEC chiefs fail to reach accord

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC oil ministers failed to agree Friday on a strategy to halt a decline in oil prices, the president of the 13-nation group said after a full day of inconclusive meetings.

"We haven't come to any conclusions," Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto told reporters after a two-hour afternoon session. The ministers also met for nearly three hours in the morning and planned to resume their talks on Saturday, Subroto said.

Subroto said the group was considering two basic strategies: Stick to current policies, or try "a new treatment altogether."

Pressed to explain what new approaches had been suggested, Subroto said only: "Something different than we have done so far. What it is, we haven't arrived at a precise consensus yet."

The OPEC ministers met at a downtown hotel ringed by federal anti-terrorist troops armed with sub-machine guns. Police said security was the strictest ever for an OPEC ministerial meeting.

Some analysts have said the session is the most critical test in the 25-year history of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, confirmed that the ministers had failed to reach a consensus on what type of action should be taken.

"We haven't yet entered serious discussions. We're still exploring various areas and different choices," he said.

Oteiba said the one thing that could be agreed on was the need to defend OPEC's basic price of $28 a barrel for Arabian Light oil.

"We came here to defend the price," he said.

In the spot, or non-contract, market Friday, Arabian Light oil for July delivery was quoted at $27.10 a barrel, or 90 cents below the official price, according to Telerate Energy Services, a private market-information firm.

In a sign of how deeply they were divided, several officials said the ministers delayed the start of their first plenary session in order to consult in their hotel rooms without aides, who usually participate in the meetings from the outset.

Thunderstorms flood Swiss villages

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — The first heavy thunderstorms in western and central Switzerland this summer caused flooding, knocked out power and telephone services and washed out roads and rail links.

Hardest hit by the Thursday evening storm was the village of Schwarzenburg, where the waters pushed into basements and forced the evacuation of a shopping center. The rail link between Bern and Schwarzenburg, 13 miles away, was shut down.

Floodwaters rushed through a cemetery in Flamatt, sweeping crosses and wreaths through the village.

UN agency says crisis is over in 8 countries

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A United Nations agency dealing with Africa's famine said Friday the crisis is over in eight of the 21 nations that faced exceptional food supply problems in 1984-85. But it said the emergency is acute in five countries.

The Rome-based Food and Agriculture Organization said in its latest report on Africa's food situation, issued in Nairobi, that the countries now out of danger are Burundi, Kenya, Lesotho, Morocco, Rwanda, Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

"The drought has been broken, the weather conditions have favored 1985 main season harvests, and the food supply situation is back to normal," the FAO report said of the eight nations.

The U.N. agency said, however, that the food emergency is "most acute" in Chad, Ethiopia, Mali, Niger and Sudan, partly because of port congestion and other problems in distributing food aid throughout the countries.

In Ethiopia, for example, the FAO said that as of late June about 175,000 tons of grain had piled up at the country's Red Sea ports of Assab and Massawa and at the harbor in neighboring Djibouti, which also is used to funnel food to Ethiopia.

An additional 37,500 tons of food was at anchor—destined for Ethiopian famine victims, the agency said, while "reports continue to be received of widespread malnutrition and deaths from starvation."

While good rains have come to some countries, the FAO said, Botswana in southern Africa is in the grips of a fourth year of drought. The agency added that food production is still severely impaired in Angola and Mozambique because of civil war.

The other countries still suffering food shortages to varying degrees are Burkina Faso, Cape Verde, Mauritania, Senegal and Somalia.

Gold strike near Prague confirmed

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Exploratory probes have confirmed the existence of large gold deposits near the capital, with an estimated value of $1 billion, a state geologist said Friday.

The ore is in the Celnina Mokrsko district along the Vitava River, about 35 miles south of Prague, according to a report in the Communist Party newspaper. There have been previous gold finds in the district.

Interest rates tumble, stocks in broad rally

By CHEF CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stock prices put together a broad rally Friday as interest rates tumbled in the credit markets.

Trading set its slowest pace of the year as many market participants opted to take a long Independence Day weekend.

The Dow Jones average of 39 industrial climbed 6.06 to 1,324.83, closing out the week with a net loss of 1.91.

Volume on the New York Exchange fell to 62.5 million shares, down from 99.4 million Wednesday and the lightest total since 46.7 million changed hands last Dec. 26.

Before the market opened, the Labor Department reported that the civilian unemployment rate held steady at 7.3 percent in June.

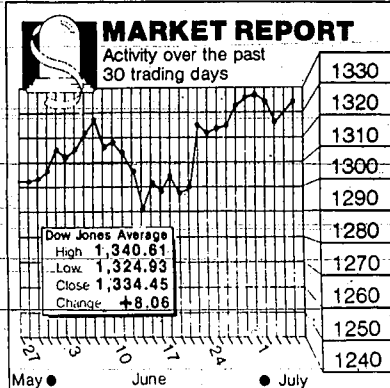

Of special interest to traders on Wall Street was accompanying data that showed slower-than-expected growth in business payrolls.

The news translated into a sharp rally in the credit markets. Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, jumped 15 to 52¢ for every $1,000 in face value.

Rates on short-term Treasury bills dropped 25 to 56 basis points, or hundredths of a percentage point.

Johnson Controls led the active list, up 3 7/8 at 44 in trading that included a 1 3/4 million share block at 45 in the over-the-counter market. The company said it bought the block of stock from companies controlled by Victor Posner.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Telephone & Telegraph rose 1/4 to 24; Exxon 7/8 to 52 1/2; and Allied Corp. 1/4 to 44.

Securities industry issues were strong. Merrill Lynch added 3/4 to 34 1/2; Fibre-Salamon 1/4 to 44 1/2; First Boston 2/8, and PaineWebber 3/4 to 35 1/2.

MCA, a sharp gainer earlier in the week on takeover rumors, fell back 3/4 to 64 1/4.

In the daily tally on the Big Board, nearly three issues rose in price for every one that declined. The exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .45 to a new high of 111.67.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and the over-the-counter market, totaled 74.45 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial gained 1.15 to 212.27, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 1.07 at 192.52.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market added 1.25 to 298.58. At the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index closed at 232.69, up 1.41.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean futures prices were sharply higher and corn and wheat were higher at the Chicago Board of Trade Friday.

At the close of trading, wheat was 11¢ cent a bushel higher with the contract for delivery in July at $2.18 1/4 a bushel, one was 1/4 cent to 3/4 cent higher with July 82 1/4 cents to 84 1/4 cents a bushel and July 82 1/4 cents to 84 1/4 cents a bushel with July 82 1/4 cents.

Eastern Idaho drilling for oil, gas slows down

POCATELLO (AP) — Petroleum company officials say even though oil and gas exploration in the Caribou and Targhee national forests has been slow, they are not giving up on the area.

Sun Oil Co., after drilling 16,600 feet at a cost of more than $6 million at the Targhee site in the northeast of Soda Springs recently wrote the site off and plugged it, said Sperm Boyce, branch chief for minerals on the Caribou National Forest.

And Boyce said this is the general picture for "exploration of" the Caribou. He said seismic work is at a standstill this year, while in past years the forest had almost 500 miles of seismic "line" run each year.

"We have not issued a seismic permit this year," he said.

But oil and gas companies fascinated with the area of the Overthrust Belt straddling Wyoming, Utah and lecho still are speculating. About 90 percent, or 900,000 acres of the forest is leased, Boyce said.

On the Targhee National Forest, Anschutz Corporation started a well July 1 in Mike Spencer Canyon, three miles below Pine Creek Pass. TNE spokeswoman Ann McEwen said the well is a "wildcat" operation. The drilling rig should be built within a month or two, she said.

Shell Oil officials say they are planning a well-drilling pad, some road construction and other improvements in the West Fork of Indian Creek, about 10 miles west of Dubois, but won't be ready to drill until near October.

Preuss said the forest has issued no seismic permits this year. Three years ago permits were issued for 300 miles of seismic line, while two years ago that figure dropped to about 30 miles, he said.

Curren blows away Connors

By JOE GERGEN
Newsday

WIMBLEDON, England — Even the eyes of Texas blink at Kevin Curren's serve. The best way to handle it is to wait until it stops rolling and pick it up. Officials at the All-England championships, it is suspected, have been calling his lines by the sound of the ball.

In reducing tennis to its simplest terms, Curren reduced two of the most accomplished players in the history of the sport to rubble in the space of three days. Having demoralized defending champion and top-seeded John McEnroe Wednesday, the South African native devastated third-seeded Jimmy Connors Friday. The scorched earth on Centre Court is testimony to his overwhelming accomplishment.

The 6-2, 6-2, 6-1 triumph by Curren, a South African native who attended the University of Texas and chose to remain in Austin, enabled him to advance to his first Wimbledon final. He will meet the winner of the match between West Germany's Boris Becker and Sweden's Anders Jarryd, which was suspended at 1-1 in the third set Friday because of rain and darkness and will be completed Saturday before the women's singles final. Jarryd won the first set 6-2. Becker took the second 7-6 (7-3). The U.S. has provided the past four men's champions here. Curren is the final hope in 1985.

He received his papers in March and is eligible for the American

Davis Cup team. Although by his own reckoning he is a citizen of convenience, he has picked up "a lot of old Texas sayings and friends." Curren also has added a nickname: the Durban cowboy.

Connors' resistance was limited to loud grunts. He had no defense against a man who blasted 17 aces and added 20 winners in 67 service points. "And," Curren noted proudly, "Jimmy Connors has the best return in the game."

Perhaps "had" is closer to the truth. Still, it's inconceivable any player would have been able to do much with Curren's guided missiles Friday. "He just throws it up there," Connors said, "and boom—boom, boom—all the time. On grass it's rough."

Like McEnroe, who said he didn't even feel as if he had played in his quarterfinal loss to Curren, Connors was never in the match. He was broken in his first service game, struggled throughout the three sets with his ground strokes and volleys, and had but one break point in the entire match. Curren closed the show in just 92 minutes with three consecutive aces and a thunderous overhead.

"He catches the ball on the way up, like a Roscoe Tanner serve," said Connors, the last of the tournament's top four seeds to fall, "and he goes for it all the time. He's got a good serve on any surface, but here the ball's jumping in my face, staying low or crawling along the ground."

It did everything Friday but whistle The Star-Spangled Banner. Curren, seeded eighth here, smashed flat serves down the middle and then yanked Connors wide with twisting deliveries into the corner. Mostly the two-time Wimbledon champ was caught helplessly in the middle.

"I'm amazed that Connors didn't move around on the baseline," said Arthur Ashe, the U.S. Davis Cup captain who stayed in the place. And other players have told Ashe that Connors is "half a step or a step slower" on the return.

But then Curren's serve habitually makes spectators of opponents on the grass. He has lost a total of four service games and one set of the tournament. He is overpowered.

Is the sun setting on the brat pack?

By BOB GREENE
The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — When Jimmy Connors first stepped onto the grass courts of the All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club in 1971, Richard Nixon was president and Watergate was still just another Washington, D.C., hotel.

Open tennis was just three years old, the same age as West Germany's Boris Becker.

Now 32 and having won Wimbledon twice and the U.S. Open five times, Connors still ranked third in the world, admits the end of his career is getting close.

"These days, my mind is alert at all times, which is pretty good after 20 years of doing this," Connors said this past week. "But my body is not ready all the time." Connors was ousted in the semifinals Friday by Kevin Curren in straight sets.

John McEnroe is the world's No. 1 player, although his bid for a third consecutive Wimbledon men's singles crown was also stopped by Curren in the quarterfinals, is even talking about his age and his predecessor, Sweden's Bjorn Borg.

"As you get older, you see too many other things that are enjoyable, and that's why I understand," says Bjorn for walking away from it," McEnroe said after his upset loss.

"I don't think 26 is an old age," said the left-hander from New York.

"I just think that I've been on the tour for eight years. I've played a lot of matches in singles and doubles, and I think that at times that you're not aware of, it catches up to you."

Borg was 25 years old when, after an astounding record of capturing four consecutive French Open and five Wimbledon titles, he walked away from competitive tennis.

It also was 1971 when Chris Evert unveiled her baseline game with a two-handed backhand at the U.S. Open, reaching the semifinals. Now, at the age of 30, she has won at least one Grand Slam women's singles title for 11 consecutive years and regained the No. 1 spot in the women's computer rankings.

Since the U.S. Open in 1981, which

Tracy Austin won, either Lloyd or Martina Navratilova has captured every Grand Slam singles title, including this year's Wimbledon when they met for the 60th time — the longest-running rivalry in tennis history.

But Navratilova is 28 and says she's much closer to the end of her career than the beginning.

"I will play this year and next year," Navratilova said this past week. "After that, I will see, which means I will probably keep playing rather than stop."

"I've been playing for 13 years, so I know I'm closer to not playing," the old guard is still around, but they are being pushed hard by yet another group of youngsters. And this time, it could be youth that is served.

Sweden's Mats Wilander is not yet 21 years old, yet has already won four Grand Slam tournaments and is ranked fourth in the world on the Hewlett-Packard ATP computer.

Last year, the right-hander, who in 1982 became the youngest player ever to capture the French Open men's singles crown, led Sweden to victory in the Davis Cup.

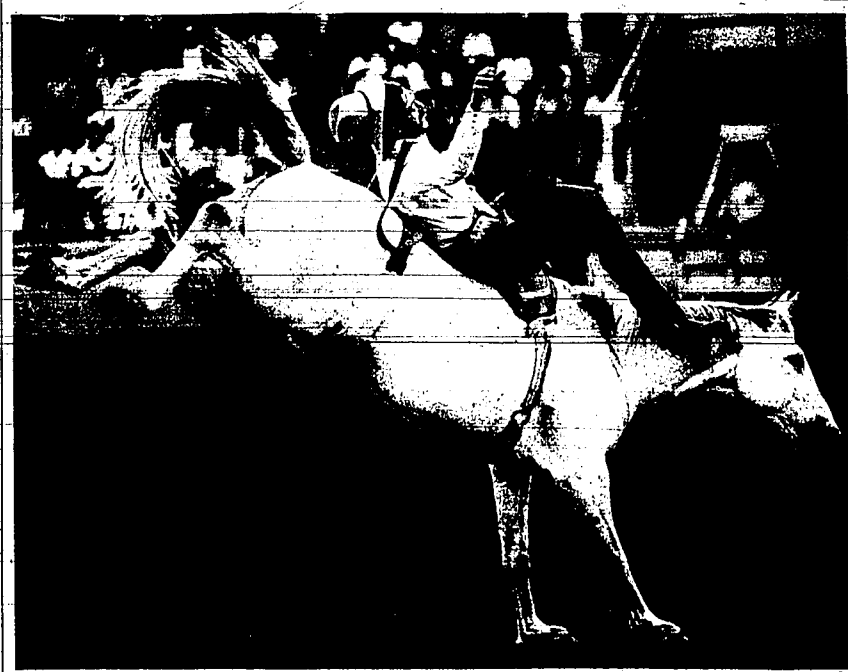

Yet Wilander is only one of a crop of Swedes who have blossomed after Borg nurtured the sport in the Scandinavian country.

In 1983, Stefan Edberg became the first man to win the Junior Grand Slam, capturing the junior boys' title.

Colleges mull idea of paying their athletes

By DOUG TUCKER
The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Pay to the order of:

Joe E. Jones
Football-Star
State University
Amount: $100

College athletes getting paid for playing?

It may never happen, certainly not anytime soon. But the idea of paying athletes in the money-making sports of football and men's basketball no longer seems so far-fetched.

"Other sports are not generating the kind of income that football and basketball do, and it's time we recognized that," says Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps.

"People are not filling up a stadium of 60,000 to watch a lacrosse game. It's time to give sports what they earn themselves. That's the way of life in this country. That's competition."

Recent scandals involving recruiting, drugs and gambling are frequently cited as reasons for overhauling the system. Giving players a monthly stipend, so the argument goes, would make them less vulnerable to advances from gamblers, drug pushers and ruthless agents.

But opponents say that setting up a player payroll would bankrupt smaller sports programs, such as golf and tennis, and dry up their scholarships.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association is one of the opponents, having repeatedly said it does not favor a monthly allowance for players.

"The people who say athletes should be paid and share in the income are flying in the face of the definition of amateur athletics," said NCAA president John Davis of Oregon State.

"It's not in the philosophy of institutions to hire a bunch of pro athletes to represent them. Institutions are providing a means for an education for those students they recruit and that's all. They are not going beyond that."

At nearly all NCAA Division I schools, athletic departments are self-sufficient, getting by on gate and television receipts and contributions from alumni.

With few exceptions, only football ships.

Utah brothers share Silver Star's honors

JACKPOT — Paul Christiansen of Salt Lake City, fresh from winning the Davis County Amateur title in suburban Salt Lake over the weekend, and brother Cliff Christiansen took the championship flight of the Cactus Pete's Silver Star Classic two-man best ball Friday.

They had a two-day total of 269 — combining the best gross and net ball per hole — to top the runner-up duo from Utah, Bill Burbridge and Joe Robles, by two strokes. Jackpot's Lynn Reiergard and Wayne Peterson of Nampa, Bob Watson and Jack Suchawa of Utah and Twin Falls' Doyle Dugger and Gary Jenkins shared third at 283.

More golf — B2

The low score of the tournament was posted by first-flight winners Gary Peery and Gary Hazelgren of Utah at 157. They won by seven shots over Frank White and Scott Welsh while a four-way tie developed for third at 206.

A Casleford team of Jim Wheeler and Dick Peters claimed the second flight title with a 267, followed by Allen Barnes and Terry Hansen at 270, Ken Nebeker and Ivan Orr at 278 and K.J. Vanderwerf and Elaine Jensen, all Utahans, at 280.

Brownsmania: Bring back Ed Gaedel

By PAUL LEBAR
The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Browns, gone since 1953, may have more fans now than they did when they were perennial American League doormats.

Thanks to Bill Borst, a transplanted New Yorker and college history professor, interest in the Browns' hapless 51-year existence has been rekindled.

"It's a love of the underdog," he said.

"You felt sorry for them. I think they (Browns) are probably the worst team" in "history." Maybe — there's something about that," said Borst, 42, founder of the St. Louis Browns Historical Society.

The fan club met for the first time last Oct. 4 at the Mid-County YMCA.

"We had 24 charter members, think. Since then we've got 32 members," said Borst, who teaches at nearby Webster University.

Baseball roundup — B3

The Browns, forerunners of the Baltimore Orioles, had one brief shining baseball moment when they won the AL pennant in 1944. That was it. They finished in the cellar nine times and in seventh place 12 times between 1902 and 1953.

The Browns did have a smattering of standout players, including Hall of Fame catcher Rick Ferrell and first basemen George Sisler and George McQuinn. And Hall of Famer Rogers Hornsby once managed the Browns.

The team's most celebrated moment, however, may have been on Aug. 19, 1951, when owner Bill Veeck sent Eddie Gaedel, a midget, to the plate for a one-time appearance as a pinch-hitter.

Veeck, who also owned the Chicago White Sox for a time, is a member of the revitalized Browns fan club, along with about 25 former players.

"The oldest is John Francis Daley. He lives in Ohio and he's 98," said Borst. "After him comes Chester 'Red' Hoff. He's 93. We send them application blanks and cross out the fees."

For $10, a member is entitled to Life, a Browns' journal and can attend quarterly meetings plus the club's Hall of Fame banquet.

The first such banquet was held in May. Enshrined were Sisler, McQuinn and Ken Williams, all posthumously, and Ned Garver, 59, now mayor of Ney, Ohio. Garver, a right-hander, is remembered in Browns' lore for the 20-12 record he posted in 1951, when the team was 52-102 overall.

Borst, who attended the 1984 Hall of Fame induction of Pee Wee Wess, 89, his beloved Brooklyn Dodgers, said part of the inspiration for forming the club came from a yearbook picture of Ferrell at Cooperstown.

"He had, on his first Browns uniform, which was in 1929. They were talking about 'Pee Wee' number, which was just retired ... I said, gee it's a shame that nobody from the Browns will be around to retire their own number," Borst recalled.

Actually, the club he helped organize can trace its roots to a more loosely knit group that existed for several years in Chicago.

"Those were a bunch of guys that liked to get together and drink a little, which is fine, but he started with very set goals and determinations for what we wanted to do," he said. "First and foremost, we're a society for the resurrection and preservation of a historical memory."

Borst said he has heard from Browns fans in 38 states and expects membership to eventually reach 500.

NL: Streaking Mets collect fifth straight win

ATLANTA (AP) — New York Mets pitcher Rick Aguilera, a rookie with the hitters, was still a little more nervous than manager Dave Johnson would have liked. The results were more satisfactory.

Aguilera, 24, pitched a five-hitter Friday night for his first complete game in five major league appearances as the Mets beat the Atlanta Braves 6-1. Johnson praised his winning streak to firefighters.

Aguilera, 2-2, retired 13 of the first 14 batters he faced. He did not surrender a hit until the sixth. Aguilera struck out four and walked three, and the run he gave up was unearned.

"I really wanted to let him finish," Johnson said. "He's a young pitcher with great promise and it should be easier for him the next time now that he has a complete game. He was a little more jittery than I wanted, but that comes from a lot of desire and wanting to do well."

The Braves threatened in the ninth inning when Terry Harper singled and Ken Oberkfell walked but Gerald Perry grounded into a double play to end the threat.

Aguilera also realized the significance of his five-hitter.

"This will help my bullpen, but I probably needed it just as much as they did," he said. "I was shaky in my last outing (allowing five hits and four runs in two innings) and I needed this for my confidence."

The Braves' first hit was Paul Zentgraf's two-run double in the fifth inning, which drove in Perry, who had reached first on shortstop Rafael Santana's error.

CHICAGO (AP) — Bob Brenly and Manny Trillo hit two-run singles in a seven-run seventh-inning and Chris Brown added a two-run homer in the eighth to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 12-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs Friday.

Brenly and Brown each had three RBI and Brown had four of the Giants' 17 hits in the game. Trillo's single in the seventh was his second of the inning.

ATLANTA (AP) — Rick Aguilera, 24, pitched a five-hitter Friday night for his first complete game in five major league appearances as the Mets beat the Atlanta Braves 6-1.

The Mets had taken an 11-10 lead in the 18th on an error by Camp that set up a sacrifice fly by Lon Dykes.

The Mets' previous record for hits was 23 in 1964. Harper, who had five of Atlanta's 16 hits, slammed his two-strike, two-run homer off the left field foul pole to score Rafael Ramirez, who had straggled to start the 18th inning.

Hernandez, who had keyed a four-run fourth-inning with a fluke two-run triple that overcame a 2-1 Atlanta lead, hit a solo home run in the eighth and gave the Mets a 7-4 lead.

"It was the most unbelievable game I have ever been a part of," Aguilera said. "I pitched the first three times up, I left the bases loaded, but I never had a runner left to give up on myself."

Harper, who had five of Atlanta's 16 hits, slammed his two-strike, two-run homer off the left field foul pole to score Rafael Ramirez, who had straggled to start the 18th inning.

Howard Johnson had hit a two-run homer in the top of the inning off Terry Forster, driving in Knight, who hit a two-out single.

Hernandez's triple was a drive to right field that appeared easily catchable, but Claude Hill Washington slipped down in a puddle of water just before reaching first.

"After leaving, my manager on the bench said to me, 'You did a great job,'" Aguilera said, "and I think I did a great job."

AL: California extends its advantage in West to four games

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Doug DeCinces knocked in four runs with a two-run homer and a double Friday night to lead the California Angels to a 13-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The victory, combined with second-place Oakland's loss to Toronto, gave the Angels a full four-game lead in the American League West.

Bobby Rice homered in the fourth, while DeCinces powered the ball over the left field wall as the Angels gave starter Ron Romanick, 9-4, some breathing room.

After Rice homered in the fourth, the Angels inched their lead to 9-2 in their half of the inning on Brian Downing's run-scoring double and an RBI groundout by Grich.

The Red Sox' other two runs came on a two-run single by Wade Boggs in the fifth.

DeCinces' double, a sacrifice fly by Daryl Scott and a single by Dick Schofield accounted for four more California runs in the eighth.

California rookie reliever Pat Clements, who has a 5-0 record this season, took over for Romanick in the sixth and notched his first major league save.

The game, which was attended by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, was interrupted in the eighth inning when Boston outfielder Rick Miller became briefly involved in a fracas in the stands near the Red Sox dugout.

Miller's wife and his small son were in that area of the stands, and after a scuffle, Miller's wife and son were taken to the hospital.

Los Angeles 4

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Pedro Guerrero and R.J. Reynolds tripled in the seventh inning as the Los Angeles Dodgers scored twice to break a 1-1 tie and beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-1 Friday night.

Jerry Reuss, Tom Niedenfuer and Ken Hill combined to hold the Cardinals to four hits and four walks. Niedenfuer, 3-2, relieved in the sixth inning but Los Angeles broke through against Danny Cox, 4-1. Howell pitched the ninth for his seventh save.

"The victory was the Dodgers' fifth in six games. Cox blanked Los Angeles on one hit through five innings but saw the Dodgers gain a tie in the sixth. Steve Sax and Reuss led off with singles and Dave Anderson's sacrifice fly led off.

In the seventh, Guerrero led off with a triple off the center-field wall and scored an out later on Reynolds' triple past Vince Coleman in left. Reynolds scored on Steve Yeager's single.

The Dodgers scored again in the ninth. Yeager's sacrifice fly drove in Guerrero, who had walked.

Philadelphia 5

CINCINNATI 2
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Glenn Wilson led the game with a double and John Russell hit a two-run homer, highlighting a four-run seventh inning that rallied the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Friday night.

The Phillies trailed 2-1 against loser Tom Browning, 7-6, who had retired 14 batters in a row, when he erupted for their game-winning rally.

Mike Schmidt, whose first-inning home run gave the Phillies a 1-0 lead, opened the seventh with a single. Wilson's double scored Schmidt and made it 2-2.

Ozzie Virgil then grounded to third baseman Kirk Essaky, who threw wildly, allowing Wilson to score the go-ahead run and Virgil to reach second.

The Biggest Store In Town

Businesses locate near one another for a very good reason: the variety of their pooled products attracts more shoppers. That same successful formula can be applied to Classified "The biggest store in town."

When you have something to sell, sell it alongside other products and services in Classified. You'll reach literally tens of thousands of reader shoppers.

Your Classified ad reaches over 64,000 daily readers. And when you compare the Times-News exposure and price to what a typical area shopper offers, you'll discover what a bargain Classified is. Your ad in Classified reaches four times as many people for just pennies more.

To place your Classified ad call 733-0931. Call anytime between 8:00 A.M. and 5:00 P.M., Monday through Friday, 8:00 A.M. and 12 Noon, Saturday.

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF
'A psychiatrist is a man who reads the Palm-Bergere and looks at the audience.'
Mervyn Stockwood.
One should take a good look at his opponents before trying to answer today's question. First cover the East-West hands, then devise your plan to make six hearts against the lead of the spade Jack.
Before you can see an intelligent answer, you must take stock of your opponents. Against players who never make imaginative leads and always cover honors, the best plan seems clear. And you will find dummy's spade ace and should win a trick. A club is not a trump and the heart queen is led. If East fails to cover, play the ace. Cash the king and queen of clubs and discard a spade from dummy. Now lead a trump. West wins and must offer a ruff and discard or break the diamond suit, giving you a good chance to pick up the suit when West has at least one honor.
Against a tricky expert who has listened to the bidding, it's not as easy. His lead of the spade Jack is just as likely to be from the K-J as from the J-10. Here one should stick to the spade finesse. If success, success will then depend upon the trump finesse, a 75 percent chance overall. (South's losing diamond goes on dummy's ace of spades.)
Moral? Don't let the tricky expert talk you out of your best chance.
