Thousands flee vast California fire

By SUE MANNING
The Associated Press

A savage 60,000-acre California brush fire destroyed three homes and sent about 10,000 people fleeing flames and choking smoke for several hours Monday, challenging fire forces weary from hundreds of blazes across the western United States and Canada.

Firefighters beat back a 30-foot wall of flame that licked at the northeastern flank of San Luis Obispo, Calif., but wind-gusts sprayed embers over rooftops, streets and yards.

The advancing fire, which started 130 miles northwest of Los Angeles on July 1, was among the latest and largest of a series of fires which have killed three, leveled more than 10 homes and chewed through more than half a million acres since late June. Many fires still burned out of control Monday.

Firefighters battled brush, forest and range blazes, large and small and many lightning-caused, in California, Idaho, Oregon, Utah, Montana, Washington, Nevada, Arizona and Oregon on Monday. Other fires in Nebraska, South Dakota, New Mexico and Wyoming were either contained or controlled over the weekend, firefighters said.

Across the border in British Columbia, 528 fires burned out of control in an outbreak that has cost Canadians 368,000 acres of forest land since June 1. No breakdown was available on acreage in the most recent fires.

More than 10,000 firefighters battled flames in the Western states Monday, said Bill Kelly, a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management in Portland, Ore.

The San Luis Obispo fire started near Santa Margarita Lake, gutting seven homes and 14 other buildings in its early stages, said California Division of Forestry spokeswoman Rhonda Lazaroff.

Erratic winds fanned the blaze into a firestorm that advanced on the city of 35,000 and up to 10,000 people fled their hillside homes ahead of the wall of flame early Monday, but they were allowed to return later in the day. Police said three homes were destroyed and five were damaged before the fire retreated.

Classes were canceled at California State Polytechnic University, San Luis Obispo High School sent summer students home because of the thick smoke and approaching flames and youth camps in the hills were evacuated and closed.

Highways and the airport were closed, telephone lines jammed and municipal water pressure dropped as people sprayed their homes. Smoke looming over the city kept aerial firefighting equipment on the ground.

Temperatures under the orange-tinged sky in San Luis Obispo, about 40 miles down the coast from the famous Hearst mansion at San Simeon, climbed toward the 100-degree mark around the fire front.

Heat also hampered firefighters battling the biggest California blaze, which had grown to 83,000 acres Monday in the Los Padres National Forest near Ojai, 65 miles northwest of Los Angeles. The blaze no longer threatened the cities of Ojai and Carpinteria, but weather

Hot time on Idaho fire lines

By-The Associated Press

BOISE — Forecasts calling for more lightning and up to 110-degree heat offered firefighters no encouragement on Monday as they continued battling dozens of Idaho forest and range fires.

Thousands of acres have been blackened in the desert of southwestern Idaho and in the dense timberlands of the state's central mountains. The fires range from a pair eight days old to dozens ignited on Monday when yet another lightning storm danced over under-dry lands.

"We really don't have any prediction for relief," said John Hays, information officer for the Bureau of Land Management's Boise District.

There, 19 fires still burning Monday night had blistered 120,000 to 130,000 acres and left an undetermined number of grazing cattle dead.

"We don't know yet what the losses to the cattlemen are," Hays said.

Although Boise District BLM fire crews managed to contain the big fire blaze near Three Creek Monday evening, their work was far from over.

After bringing a fire which scorched about 60,000 acres under control about 6 p.m., those crews were enroute to another fire about 12 miles away with the hope of one to begin work on it this morning.

The second fire, which has burned about 12,000 acres of hot, dry rangeland, was ignited sometime Sunday or Monday by lightning, say BLM officials. They do not expect it to threaten any livestock or buildings.

About 70 firefighters will work on controlling the blaze.

In the central Idaho mountains, more than 2,000 firefighters battled two forest fires that began on June 30 and had raged through about 11,000 acres by Monday, when officials said the blazes appeared stable.

Lightning triggered the Salmon National Forest's 850-acre fire that the Forest Service predicts will be contained late Wednesday. Investigators determined a 3,350-acre Challis National Forest fire, expected to be contained by Monday.

Federal court ruling may send Piler suit to trial

By PAULA EUBANKS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A U.S. District Court judge has declined to dismiss a counter motion by the Twin Falls School District seeking dismissal of a court action against it by former Supt. Gary Piler.

The ruling raises the likelihood that Piler's suit against the district will go to trial.

Judge Ray McNichols ruled Monday that he could not make a summary judgment without a trial on whether former Twin Falls schools superintendent Gary Piler's constitutional rights were violated when the school board fired him last fall.

Piler has claimed that the school board denied his constitutional right to a public hearing and reasons for his dismissal, as well as breaching his contract, when the board fired him last October. Piler is suing the board for $1.5 million and contractual remedies.

McNichols ruled that facts are not clear enough to know if Piler was denied his "property right" to his former job. A jury trial would establish what the facts are.

A conference between the judge and the two parties' lawyers to set a trial date will probably be the next step, said Piler's lawyer, Greg J. Fuller.

"Apparently, the judge feels that there are too many triable issues," Fuller said. He added that an out-of-court settlement is always possible, but declined to say if one were being considered in this case.

"Bad feelings with the board" and "Piler's peremptory negotiations," Fuller said.

Daniel L. Mink, a lawyer and Fuller's assistant, said last week that he hoped to settle out of court because "nobody wants to go to trial," but he believed that both parties were "not close enough, yet," to settle.

Both sides have submitted much of the testimony and disputed facts needed for a trial, Fuller said.

Phillip S. Oberrecht, the board's lawyer, declined to comment on the case until he had read McNichols' ruling and talked with the board.

McNichols previously had denied a motion by Piler against the board for a summary judgment.

The board's cross-motion was based on a different legal argument than was Piler's motion.

"We're arguing that he (Piler) has no property interest (in his former job)," Oberrecht said last week.

In his motion, Piler charged that he was denied due process rights rather than property interest rights.

Proposed total for next year $11.5 million

Taxes may not cover Twin Falls budget

By ANNETTE GARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls is not expected to take in enough money in the next year to cover services as they are now being provided, according to a preliminary budget released late Monday.

The total proposed budget for the next year is $11.5 million, a 9.4 percent decrease from the current budget. It is the first budget in four years to show a significant deficit in tax-supported funds, says City Manager Tom Courtney.

The total operating budget — the budget less capital, debt service and transfers — will increase by $5,000, or 0.6 percent.

Despite the tight budget, city residents will see slight decreases in their sewer and water bills. State law prohibits surpluses in those areas to be used to balance the budget elsewhere.

To make ends meet in other areas, Courtney is suggesting employee positions continue to be cut, that the city contract out more services, and that a new user fee be started.

Those changes, along with interest from investments, transfers, and savings from consolidation of police and fire services, would allow a flat $600 raise for each employee. That would mean a one-time raise of about 3 percent for the employee at the center of the pay scale.

The preliminary budget calls it a "non-recurring" increase to "reward employees for their work effort while minimizing the long-term liability of the city."

The city will have 27 fewer full-time employees, if the council adopts the preliminary budget as it stands. The total employee cuts would leave the city with 157 full-time workers. In 1979, the city employed 225 people.

However, the proposed cuts are not as drastic as they appear for the coming year, since 18 positions were eliminated in May when the council hired Operations Management International to run the wastewater treatment plant. The company hired most of the former city employees to operate the plant.

Three more positions have been eliminated through consolidation of police and fire services. A fourth position in the Public Safety Department, that of a fire inspector, was budgeted for but not filled this year. The net savings for the four positions proposed to be permanently cut would be $71,000.

The remaining five positions are proposed to be cut through layoffs, although the city will try to shift employees to other positions as openings occur, Courtney said.

Three of those workers will be cut from the engineering department. Engineering survey work and project inspection work would then be contracted to a private firm, resulting in an estimated savings of $42,000, according to preliminary budget figures.

Another of the positions would be cut from the Streets Department. Street sweeping would also be contracted to a private company. Residents would pick up the cost of the service with a new user fee.

The fifth position would be cut from the airport. The airport would be given occasional help from other city employees, but other money-saving measures would be taken. They include an increase in fuel fees of 5 cents a gallon and the elimination of some security, maintenance and janitorial services.

In other areas, monthly utility bills to residents are projected to drop 27 cents.

That takes into account the proposed street-sweeping fee and a 7-percent hike in garbage collection costs. Those increases should be offset by a 30-cent decrease in sewer-treatment fees, resulting from savings from contracting services to OMI. The expiration of the 1965 water bond will save residents 75 cents per month.

Taxes, under the proposed budget, would increase the 5 percent allowed by Idaho law. The city will also be allowed to collect additional money to cover insurance costs and firefighter retirement costs.

Police take pot shots at McClure's gun bill

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Law enforcement officials from across the nation took aim Monday at a measure they say would hamper their efforts to fight illegal handgun sales.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, would authorize gun dealers to make face-to-face firearms sales to out-of-state customers if the sale would be otherwise legal under the state and local laws of both the seller and the buyer.

John Norton, first vice president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, said the legislation scheduled for a vote this week in the Senate, would undercut the federal law barring the interstate sale of handguns.

Norton urged the Senate to repeal the current ban on interstate sales and enact a waiting period for the purchase of handguns so gun records can be checked and prospective buyers screened.

"We're trying to put some common sense into the selling and transportation of handguns in this country," added Neil J. Behan, president of the Police Executive Research Form of Baltimore County, Md.

An aide to McClure, H.D. Palmer, said the legislation would permit inspection of dealer records for reasonable cause and require mandatory penalties for the use of a firearm during a violent federal crime.

The bill would not allow mail-order sales of firearms or gun sales from unlicensed pawn shops, Palmer added.

Sen. H. Matisoff, D-Ohio, called the measure "an anti-law-and-order bill." Under it, a person living in a state with a tough gun control law could simply go to another state with no controls and purchase a gun, he said.

Broken rail derailed train
 ELMIRA (AP) — A preliminary investigation shows a broken rail joint caused the derailment of Amtrak's Empire Builder, which injured 81 people, a railroad official said Monday.
 The broken piece of steel, 18 to 24 inches long, is used to bolt two rail segments together, according to Burlington Northern Railroad spokesman Howard Kallu in Seattle.
 "We looked up at the scene that was completely broken in two," he said, adding that "We have ruled out human error and other factors."
 The 12-car, two-engine eastbound train with 248 passengers and a crew of 19 derailed early Sunday near the northern Idaho hamlet. The train was running on Burlington Northern tracks.

Illness claims 2 more infants
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — An outbreak of illness linked to germ-laden cheese made by Jalisco Mexican Products Inc. has caused two more deaths of newborn infants, the county Department of Health Services said Monday.
 Myrtha Woolley, a spokeswoman for the health agency, said mothers of the infants both were Hispanics from East Los Angeles. In addition, Ms. Woolley said, two other cases of listeriosis illness were reported.
 The latest figures bring the number of listeriosis illnesses to 108 and deaths to 34 in Los Angeles County. In eight states including California, the number of illnesses exceeds 170 and deaths from listeriosis 57.

Nevada prison unrest quelled
 INDIAN SPRINGS, Nev. (AP) — Prisoners in two wings were locked in their cells Monday after an uprising forced guards to fire warning shots and use tear gas at the Southern Desert Correctional Center, officials said.
 A riot and three prisoners suffered minor injuries during a rock-throwing disturbance that lasted about an hour Sunday night, acting Warden George Deeds said.
 It was the second disturbance this year at the facility, which was built for about 650 inmates but now holds 923 prisoners.

Moslem leaders seeking truce
 BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem leaders met Monday in Syria, the power broker in this war-ravaged nation, seeking ways to halt the bloodshed and to counter U.S. sanctions imposed on Lebanon in retaliation for the TWA hijacking.
 The sounds of combat filled the air in west Beirut and the northern port of Tripoli, where they have become as common as traffic noise in other cities. Two buildings used as sniper roosts were blown up in Tripoli, killing eight people, police said.

Today's weather
Hot, humid, downright uncomfortable
 Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding: Continued hot. Fair to partly cloudy with a few thunderstorms mainly afternoon and evening. Highs 90 to 100 both days. Lows tonight 60 to 65.
 Camas Prairie, Halley, Lower Wood River Valley: Today and Wednesday, partly cloudy with a few thunderstorms mainly afternoons and evenings. Continued hot. Highs 90s. Lows tonight 60 to 65.
 Northern Utah and Nevada: Utah: Today through Wednesday, continued hot days and warm nights with widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Gusty winds near the thunderstorms. Lows in the 60s and lower 70s. Highs north 95 to 100.
 Nevada: Continued hot with scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms today and Wednesday. Highs 90s to low 100s both days. Lows tonight, low 50s to low 60s.
 Synopses: The National Weather Service says an extremely warm region of high pressure aloft remains over the intermountain area.
 Weak low pressure at the surface, centered in the desert southwest, extends north as far as eastern Washington. This combination will continue the extremely hot temperatures over Idaho at least through Friday.
 Areas of moisture from south of the U.S. border are circulating up through the intermountain states, resulting in increasing humidity and scattered thunderstorms in Idaho.

Reagan blasts terror combine
 The Washington Post
 WASHINGTON — President Reagan Monday accused Iran, Libya, North Korea, Cuba and Nicaragua of forming an international terrorist network that he compared to "Murder Inc."
 He vowed that the United States would act "unilaterally, if necessary, to ensure that terrorists have no sanctuary anywhere."
 "These terrorist states are now engaged in acts of war against the government and people of the United States," Reagan said in a speech to the American Bar Association. "And under international law, any state which is the victim of acts of war has the right to defend itself."
 The president did not specify action he intends to take against such nations or terrorism.

Bolivia may delay elections
 LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — President Hernan Siles Zúñiga said Monday he might postpone the July 14 presidential elections, and supporters of a general who was considered to be the front runner called for protest demonstrations.
 Siles Zúñiga asked for a special session of Congress to meet Thursday to vote on his request.
 Hours earlier, two large union federations called on all leftist parties to boycott the election. The national Peasants' Union and the Bolivian Labor Confederation claimed that retired Gen. Hugo Banzer Suarez' Democratic Action Party was violating election registration procedures.

S. Africa riots take 2 lives
 JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said two blacks were killed in riots Monday and four were slain late last week during a security sweep through Duzuza township.
 The deaths raised the number of blacks killed in 10 months of violent protests against apartheid, South Africa's official policy of racial segregation, next 400.
 Gen. P. J. Coetzee, the national police commissioner, denied charges of police brutality.

Fraud charges in Mexico vote
 HERMOSILLO, Mexico (AP) — The opposition National Action Party on Monday charged fraud and the government party claimed victory in national elections.
 Official results from Sunday's voting are not expected for a week, but the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, said returns from around the country showed the party scored a sweeping triumph.
 The balloting was for all 400 deputies in the lower house of Congress, governors in seven of the nation's 31 states, and some municipal officials.

 made fire crews uneasy.
 "The weather is not really all that favorable. It's hot and dry back there. It's 100 degrees-plus in the back country," said Gerry Little, spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service.
 The blaze was 50 percent contained, but no containment or control time was estimated as flames crept toward valuable watershed in the area, said Forest Service spokeswoman Joanna Guttman.
 Fires started by lightning also charred thousands of acres in California's Inyo and Fresno counties.
 In Nevada, more than 40 range fires have consumed nearly 150,000 acres since Saturday, but there have been no reports of injuries or structural damage. Paul Colbert, fire control officer of the Bureau of Land Management's Elko district, said there were more than 2,000 lightning strikes in primarily northeastern Nevada on Sunday and flames were fanned by 70 mph wind.

 In Montana, firefighters grappled with a 10,600-acre fire in the state's central Little Belt Mountains that tripled in size Saturday. Firefighters said it would probably be a week before "it was controlled." Lightning caused dozens of new fires in the state Sunday, but all were small.
 Fires—blacked-out an estimated 27,500 acres of Oregon range land by early Monday, an crews battling more than 40 blazes were stretched thin.
 Containment of a northwestern Utah fire that torched 2,000 acres near Faust was close Monday, a fire official said. The fire was lightning-caused Sunday, along with a dozen smaller grass fires.

 In eastern Washington, an 1,800-acre fire on the Colville Indian Reservation burned out of control. Another fire at Colville started Sunday and grew to 100 acres, but by Monday morning it had been stoked to 600 acres.
 Nebraska lost about 7,500 acres of timber and grassland and Wyoming lost 850 acres. New Mexico firefighters let 22 small fires in the Gila National Forest burn themselves out because they posed no major threat. An acreage count was unavailable.
 In Arizona, more than 2,500 acres of desert grass and underbrush were burning in the Coronado National Forest.
 A fire that burned about 13,000 acres of drought-stricken timber land was contained. Authorities believe the blaze may have been caused by fireworks. More than a dozen small grass fires, started by lightning, were extinguished in Todd and Tripp counties.

 blazed Monday night, was man-caused.
 To the north, about 60 crew members fought some of 21 small fires that broke out on Monday when lightning moved over the Nez Perce National Forest. Four were in the forest's Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness Area and were left unattended, as prescribed by a wilderness management plan. The largest of the nearly two dozen fires burned 20 acres near a Salmon River ranch about 25 miles east of Higgins.
 Forest agencies said their resources were being stretched to the limit as demand for crews in the fire-ravaged West surged still higher.
 Fears of the potential accidents attendant with exhaustion prompted the BLM in southwestern Idaho to cancel its usual overnight shift on front lines so that firefighters could rest.
 "Because we're overextended, we're pulling them off" until morning, Hays said.
 Monday's outbreak of fires followed a weekend that saw lightning touch off 27 range fires in the state's southwest area. The weekend fires alone burned about 120,000 acres in the Boise District, destroying two mobile homes and a haystack.

 In the Challis and Salmon forests, meanwhile, the Forest Service reported progress in the battle against the two fires that have been fought by more people than populate many Idaho towns.
 Firefighters and other personnel assigned to the Salmon fire swelled to 1,249 on Monday, and in the Challis forest, the 950 men and women on the fire lines included 280 sent in to relieve the weary.
 Forest Service spokesman Jim James said mop-up work was under way on Monday in some areas of the Challis fire, which is in the Salmon River's Yankee Fork drainage, just south of the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness Area.

 Yet, the city will be seeing less money from other tax sources. Liquor tax revenues may fall by as much as 35 percent, Courtney says. Sales tax revenues are not expected to increase much, if at all, and gas taxes are expected to decrease, he says.
 The city is also expecting $50,000 to support the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport next year. The county is cutting back now in preparation for the proposed elimination of Federal Revenue Sharing funds in the budget year after next.
 The city expects labor costs to increase, or the amount of service provided to decrease, because of the Fair Labor Standards Act. The federal wage law is being extended to local government, requiring that cities such as Twin Falls compensate employees with overtime pay instead of time off for extra hours worked.
 The preliminary budget also addresses the Twin Falls Public Library's request for an 8-percent increase. An increase of 1.5 percent is included in the budget.
 The budget as released Monday is by no means final. Mayor Emory Petersen emphasized at a City Council work session. The council will begin discussion of the budget at its next weekly work session. A public hearing on the budget is tentatively scheduled for Aug. 12.

 The agricultural outlook for Southern Idaho the next five days indicates conditions for field work and hay cutting will be excellent through the period. No significant rainfall is expected. Irrigation demands will remain high. Hot temperatures will keep stress on crops and livestock. Winds for spraying through Wednesday will be light and variable except near thunderstorms, where strong gusts are likely.
 The extended forecast for Southern Idaho: Thursday through Saturday, dry with moderating temperatures. Highs upper 80s to mid-90s. Lows in the 50s to low 60s.

Administration plans to sell surplus materials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charging that a Carter administration study grossly overestimated the nation's need to stockpile critical materials in case of war, the Reagan administration announced Monday it is slashing its reserve goals and plans to sell off $2.5 billion in surplus materials.

A White House announcement said the stocks being declared as surplus would be sold over a five-year period to minimize the impact on commodity markets. It said an interagency group also would try to "ensure that the stockpile sales do not cause undue market disruptions."

The report did not specify how much of which materials are to be sold. But an administration official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the plan would include the sale of nearly 50 million troy ounces of silver now held in reserve.

The source said the administration plans to retain all its present copper stocks, valued at $16 million, but would drop platinum, bismuth, cadmium, fluor spar and silicon carbide from the stockpile.

The politically sensitive plan, which is subject to congressional approval, would keep 62.5 percent of the government's existing stocks of chromium, now valued at $30.9 million.

Proceeds from the sale will finance the purchase of goods still needed for what is called the National Defense Stockpile of strategic materials, including new, high-technology materials that weren't considered necessary six years ago, the White House said. Any money not spent for such purchases is to be used to reduce the federal budget deficit.

The remaining stockpile is designed to be sufficient to meet military, industrial and essential civilian needs for a conventional world war lasting three years.

Materials in that category include beryllium, chromium, cobalt, germanium, graphite, mica, natural quartz crystal, tantalum and titanium.

In addition, the report said, various materials already owned by the government, including some not needed for the strategic stockpile, will be held in a "supplemental reserve." This will contain aluminum oxide, bauxite, chrome, columbium, copper, industrial diamonds, iodine, lead, manganese, nickel, rubber, silver, tin, tungsten, vanadium and zinc.

Ng fit to stand trial in Canadian court

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Charles Ng was declared fit to stand trial in Canada on Monday after a psychiatric examination, and U.S. officials said they would begin proceedings to extradite him to California where he is linked to the discovery of nine bodies at a remote cabin.

Before his arrest here Saturday, Ng, 24, had been the subject of a world-wide manhunt because of his connection to survivalist Leonard Lake, who committed suicide in police custody last month.

Lake lived in the Calaveras County cabin where investigators have unearthed nine bodies, 40 pounds of bones, videotapes of sexual torture and bloody tools. Police say Ng appears on some of the videotapes — including one in which he threatens a terrified woman with a knife — although his fingerprints have not been found at the house.

Ng, a former U.S. Marine, appeared briefly in a packed courtroom before Judge Hubert G. Oliver granted a prosecution request for a preliminary psychiatric examination.

Several hours later, prosecutors said government psychologists had declared him able to stand trial.

Ng faces Canadian charges of attempted murder, robbery of less than $200 and illegal use of firearms. He was arrested at a Calgary department store during an alleged shopping spree in which a security guard was shot in the hand.

Oliver scheduled a July 15 hearing when Ng will be asked to choose among a judge-only trial in Provincial court, a judge-only trial in a higher court or a jury trial in a higher court.

Ng's attorneys, who have promised to fight extradition, said they would recommend a jury trial.

In San Francisco, Clarylann Balazs, Lake's ex-wife, has been subpoenaed to appear Wednesday before a grand jury, said Stan Rozanski, one of her attorneys. Rozanski said Monday the subpoena asked for a 1985 personal calendar and some letters from Lake.

At a news conference with California and Canadian authorities, Calgary police Inspector Ron Tarrant said Ng, who has a sister in Calgary, might have been camping in a city park for three or four days before his arrest.

Six California investigators arrived Sunday to question Ng.

Calaveras County Sheriff's Sgt. Ron McFall and San Francisco police Inspector Edward Erdelatz questioned Ng for about five hours Sunday.

Groups protest Contra assistance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Relief organizations say a congressional move to label aid to Nicaragua rebels as "humanitarian assistance" threatens the traditionally non-partisan character of such help.

Congress has voted to renew aid to Nicaragua rebels fighting to overthrow the leftist Sandinista government, but limited it to what was called humanitarian aid.

"It is a real perversion of language and meaning, with something that has been of important value in American life — of giving to people in need," said Dick Erstadt, in charge of Latin American programs for the American Friends Service Committee.

HOUSEPLANT HAZARDS

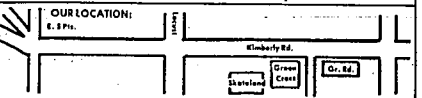

QUESTION: What can I do about a cat that chews up my houseplants?

ANSWER: Cats love to nibble on plants. An indoor cat is no exception. Since your indoor cat does not have access to the foliage outside, he has obviously turned to your houseplants... to satisfy his natural instinct.

Besides causing aesthetic damage to your plants, such a practice can be dangerous to your cat. The reason is that some common houseplants are highly toxic and may cause illness. You can probably get a list of these at the library or from your veterinarian. In place of these poisonous plants, you might provide greenery specifically for your cat, such as a pot of catnip or grass.

Broken rail derailed train
ELMIRA (AP) — A preliminary investigation shows a broken rail caused the derailment of Amtrak's Empire Builder, which injured 11 people, a railroad official said Monday.
 The broken piece of steel, 18 to 24 inches long, is used to bolt two rail segments together, according to Burlington Northern Railroad spokesman Howard Kull in Seattle.
 "We found one at the scene that was completely broken in two," he said, adding that "We have ruled out human error and other factors."
 The 12-car, two-engine eastbound train with 248 passengers and a crew of 19 derailed early Sunday near this northern Idaho hamlet. The train was running on Burlington Northern tracks.

Illness claims 2 more infants
LOS ANGELES (AP) — An outbreak of illness linked to farm-fresh cheese made by Jalisco Mexican Products Inc. has caused two more deaths of newborn infants, the county Department of Health Services said Monday.
 Myrtha Woolley, a spokeswoman for the health agency, said mothers of the infants both were Hispanics from East Los Angeles. In addition, Ms. Woolley said, two other cases of listeriosis illness were reported.
 The latest figures bring the number of listeriosis illnesses to 108 and deaths to 34 in Los Angeles County. In eight states including California, the number of illnesses exceeds 170 and deaths from listeriosis 57.

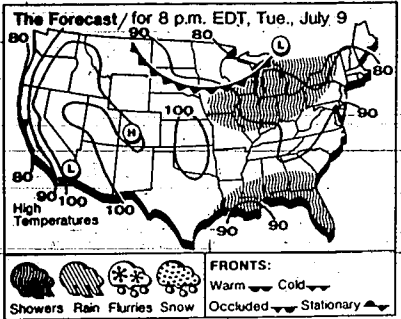

Nevada prison unrest quelled
INDIAN SPRINGS, Nev. (AP) — Prisoners in two wings were locked in their cells Monday after an uprising forced guards to fire warning shots and use tear gas at the Southern Desert Correctional Center, officials said.
 A guard and three prisoners suffered minor injuries during a rock-throwing disturbance that lasted about an hour Sunday night, acting Warden George Deeds said.
 It was the second disturbance this year at the facility, which was built for about 650 inmates but now holds 923 prisoners.

Moslem leaders seeking truce
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem leaders met Monday in Syria, the power broker in this war-ravaged nation, seeking ways to halt the bloodshed and to counter U.S. sanctions imposed on Lebanon in retaliation for the TWA hijacking.
 The sounds of combat filled the air in west Beirut as the northern part of Tripoli, where they have become as common as traffic noise in other cities. Two buildings used as sniper roosts were blown up in Tripoli, killing eight people, police said.

Reagan blasts terror combine

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — President Reagan Monday accused Iran, Libya, North Korea, Cuba and Nicaragua of forming an international terrorist network that he compared to "Murder Inc."
 He vowed that the United States would act "unilaterally, if necessary, to ensure that terrorists have no sanctuary anywhere."
 "These terrorist states are now engaged in acts of war against the government and people of the United States," Reagan said in a speech to the American Bar Association. "And under international law, any state which is the victim of acts of war has the right to defend itself!"
 The president did not specify action he intends to take against such nations or terrorism.

Bolivia may delay elections

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — President Hernan Siles Zuazo asked Congress Monday to postpone the July 14 presidential elections, and supporters of a general who was considered to be the front runner called for protest demonstrations.
 Siles Zuazo asked for a special session of Congress to meet Thursday to vote on his request.
 Hours earlier, two large union federations called on all leftist parties to boycott the election. The national Peasants' Union and the Bolivian Labor Confederation claimed that retired Gen. Hugo Banzer Suarez' Democratic Action Party was violating election registration procedures.

S. Africa riots take 2 lives

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said two blacks were killed in riots Monday and four were slain late last week during a security sweep, through Duza townships.
 The deaths raised the number of blacks killed in 10 months of violent protests against apartheid, South Africa's official policy of racial segregation, past 400.
 Gen. P.J. Coetzee, the national police commissioner, denied charges of police brutality.

Fraud charges in Mexico vote

HERMOSILLO, Mexico (AP) — The opposition National Action Party on Monday charged fraud and the government party claimed victory in national elections.
 Official results from Sunday's voting are not expected for a week, but the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, said returns from around the country showed the party scored a sweeping triumph.
 The balloting was for all 400 deputies in the lower house of Congress, governors in seven of the nation's 31 states, and some municipal officials.

 made fire crews uneasy.
 "Today's weather is not really all that favorable. It's hot and dry but there. It's 100 degrees plus in the back country," said Gerry Little, spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service.
 The blaze was 50 percent contained, but no containment-or-control-line was estimated as flames crept toward valuable watershed in the area, said Forest Service spokeswoman Joanna Gultman.
 Fires started by lightning also charred thousands of acres in California's Inyo and Fresno counties.
 In Nevada, more than 40 range fires have consumed nearly 150,000 acres since Saturday, but there have been no reports of injuries or structural damage. Paul Colbert, fire control officer for the Bureau of Land Management's Elko district, said there were more than 2,600 lightning strikes in primarily northeastern Nevada on Sunday and flames were fanned by 70 mph wind.

 In Montana, firefighters grappled with a 10,600-acre fire in the state's central Little Belt Mountains that tripled in size Saturday. Firefighters said it would probably be a week before it was controlled. Lightning caused dozens of new fires in the state Sunday, but they were small.
 Fires had blackened an estimated 27,500 acres of Oregon range land by early Monday, an crews battling more than 40 blazes were stretched thin.
 Containment of a northwestern Utah fire that torched 2,000 acres near Faust was close Monday, a fire official said. The fire was lightning-caused Sunday, along with a dozen smaller grass fires.

 In eastern Washington, a 1,800-acre fire on the Colville Indian Reservation burned out of control. Another fire at Colville started Sunday and grew to 100 acres, but by Monday morning it had been stoked to 600 acres.
 Nebraska lost about 7,500 acres of timber and grassland and Wyoming lost 850 acres. New Mexico firefighters let 23 small fires in the Gila National Forest burn themselves out because they posed no major threat. An acreage count was unavailable.
 In Arizona, more than 2,500 acres of desert grass and underbrush were burning in the Coronado National Forest.
 A fire that burned about 13,000 acres of drought-stricken southwestern South Dakota range and timber land was contained. Authorities believe the blaze may have been caused by fireworks. More than a dozen small grass fires, started by lightning, were extinguished in Todd and Tripp counties.

 tained Monday night, was man-caused.
 To the north, about 60 crew members fought some of 21 small fires that broke out on Monday when lightning moved over the Nez-Perce National Forest. Four were in the forest's Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness Area and were left unattended, as prescribed by a wilderness management plan. The largest of the nearly two dozen fires burned 20 acres near a Salmon River ranch about 25 miles east of Riggsville.
 Federal agencies said their firefighters were being stretched to the limit as demand for crews in the fire-ravaged West surged still higher.
 Fears of the potential accidents attendant with exhaustion prompted the BLM in southwestern Idaho to cancel its usual overnight shift on front lines so that firefighters could rest.
 "Because we're overextended, we're pulling them off" until morning, Hays said.
 Monday's outbreak of fires followed a weekend that saw lightning touch off 27 range fires in the state's southwest area. The weekend fires alone burned about 120,000 acres in the Boise District, destroying two mobile homes and a haystack.

 In the Challis and Salmon forests, meanwhile, the Forest Service reported progress in the battle against the two fires that have been fought by more people than populate many Idaho towns.
 Firefighters and other personnel assigned to the Salmon fire swelled to 1,249 on Monday, and in the Challis forest, the 550 men and women on the fire lines included 280 sent in to relieve the weary.
 Forest Service spokesman Jim James said mop-up work was under way on Monday in some areas of the Challis fire, which is in the Salmon River's Yankee Fork drainage, just south of the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness Area.

 Yet, the city will be seeing less money from other tax sources. Liquor tax revenues may fall by as much as 35 percent, Courtney says. Sales tax revenues are not expected to increase much, if at all, and gas taxes are expected to decrease, he says.
 The city is also expecting $50,000 less from Twin Falls County to be used to support the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport next year. The county is cutting back now in preparation for the proposed elimination of Federal Revenue Sharing funds in the budget year after next.
 The city expects labor costs to increase, or the amount of service provided to decrease, because of the Fair Labor Standards Act. The federal wage law is being extended to local government, requiring that cities such as Twin Falls compensate employees with overtime pay instead of time off for extra hours worked.
 The preliminary budget also addresses the Twin Falls Public Library's request for an 8 percent increase. An increase of 1.5 percent is included in the budget.
 The budget as released Monday is by no means final, Mayor Emory Petersen emphasized at a City Council work session. The council will begin discussion of the budget at its next weekly work session. A public hearing on the budget is tentatively scheduled for Aug. 12.

Administration plans to sell surplus materials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charging that a Carter administration study grossly overestimated the nation's need to stockpile critical materials in case of war, the Reagan administration announced Monday it is slashing its reserve goals and plans to sell off $2.5 billion in surplus materials.

A White House announcement said the stocks being declared as surplus would be sold over a five-year period to minimize the impact on commodity markets. It said an interagency group also would try to "ensure that the stockpile sales do not cause undue market disruptions."

The report did not specify how much of which materials are to be sold.

But an administration official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the plan would include the eventual sale of nearly 50 million Troy ounces of silver now held in reserve.

The source said the administration plans to retain all its present copper stocks, valued at $46 million, but would drop platinum, bismuth, cadmium, fluorapatite and silicon carbide from the present stockpile.

The politically sensitive plan, which is subject to congressional approval, would keep 62.5 percent of the government's existing stocks of chromium, now valued at $240.9 million.

Proceeds from the sale will finance the purchase of goods still needed for what is called the National Defense Stockpile of strategic materials, including new, high-technology materials that weren't considered necessary six years ago, the White House said.

Any money not spent for such purchases is to be used to reduce the federal budget deficit.

The remaining stockpile is designed to be sufficient to meet military, industrial and essential civilian needs for a conventional world war lasting three years.

Materials in that category include beryllium, chromium, cobalt, germanium, graphite, mica, natural quartz crystal, tantalum and titanium.

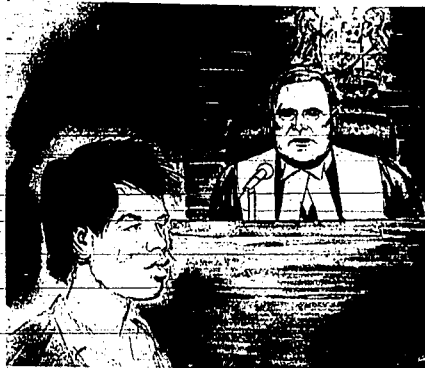

In addition, the report said, various materials already owned by the government, including some not needed for the strategic stockpile, will be held in a "supplemental reserve."

This will contain aluminum oxide, bauxite, chromite, columbium, copper, industrial diamonds, iodine, lead, manganese, nickel, rubber, silver, tin, tungsten, vanadium and zinc.

Artist's rendering of Charles Ng during a hearing in Calgary

Ng fit to stand trial in Canadian court

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Charles Ng was declared fit to stand trial in Canada on Monday after a psychiatric examination, and U.S. officials said they began proceedings to extradite him to California where he is linked to the discovery of nine bodies at a remote cabin.

Before his arrest here Saturday, Ng, 24, had been the subject of a world-wide manhunt because of his connection to survivalist Leonard Lake, who committed suicide in police custody last month.

Lake lived in the Calaveras County cabin where investigators have unearthed nine bodies, 40 pounds of bones, videotapes of sexual torture and bloody tools. Police say Ng appears on some of the videotapes — including one in which he threatens a terrified woman with a knife — although his fingerprints have not been found at the house.

"Ng, a former U.S. Marine, appeared briefly in a packed courtroom before Judge Hubert G. Calverly granted a prosecution request for a preliminary psychiatric examination.

Several hours later, prosecutors said government psychologists had declared him able to stand trial.

Ng faces Canadian charges of attempted murder, robbery of less than $200 and illegal use of firearms. He was arrested at a Calgary department store during an alleged shopping attempt in which a security guard was shot in the hand.

Ng's scheduled July 15 hearing when Ng will be asked to choose among a judge-only trial in Provincial court, a judge-only trial in a higher court or a jury trial in a higher court.

Ng's attorneys, who have promised to fight extradition, said they would recommend a jury trial.

In San Francisco, Claralyn Balazs, Lake's ex-wife, has been subpoenaed to appear Wednesday before a grand jury, said Stan Rozanski, one of her attorneys. Rozanski said Monday the subpoena asked for a 1983 personal calendar and some letters from Lake.

At a news conference with California and Canadian authorities, Calgary police Inspector Ron Tarrant said Ng, who has a sister in Calgary, might have been camping in a city park for three or four days before his arrest.

Six California investigators arrived Sunday to question Ng.

Calaveras County Sheriff's Sgt. Ron McFall and San Francisco police Inspector Edward Erdelate questioned him for about five hours Sunday.

Groups protest Contra assistance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Relief organizations say a congressional move to label aid to Nicaraguan rebels as "humanitarian assistance" threatens the traditionally non-partisan character of such help.

Congress has voted to renew aid to Nicaraguan rebels fighting to overthrow the leftist Sandinista government, but limited it to what was called humanitarian aid.

"It is a real perversion of language and meaning, with something that has been of important value in American life — of giving to people in need," said Dick Erstad, in charge of Latin American programs for the American Friends Service Committee.

HOUSEPLANT HAZARDS

QUESTION: What can I do about a cat that chews up my houseplants?

ANSWER: Cats love to nibble on plants. An indoor cat is no exception. Since your indoor cat does not have access to the foliage outside, he has obviously turned to your houseplants — to satisfy this natural instinct.

Besides causing aesthetic damage to your plants, such a practice can be dangerous to your cat. The reason is that some common houseplants are highly toxic and may cause illness. You can probably get a list of these at the library or from your veterinarian. In place of these poisonous plants, you might provide greenery specifically for your cat, such as a pot of catnip or grass.

OPEC squabbling helps the consumer

After another round of meetings, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) has broken up with yet another decision to do, well, nothing about the declining price of oil and the growing glut on the world market.

That is good news for Americans, whose memory of the oil crisis of more than a decade ago is dimming. Big car sales, if not exactly booming, have made a modest comeback, and the price of gasoline at the pump has stabilized. (Come on now, you didn't expect it to go back, did you?)

The latest series of meetings left the oil producing nations about where they were before: divided over whether to cut back on production to support prices, or increase sales to bring in badly-needed revenue.

Nations like Saudi Arabia favor the first approach; producers like Nigeria, with large populations, want the second. The result has left each country free to sell oil individually, and has led to cutthroat competition among them and widespread cheating on production quotas.

Still cheaper production in non-OPEC countries has depressed the price of oil further and weakened OPEC's overall standing as customers have sought cheaper oil elsewhere.

A number of factors could turn this situation around. A series of cold heating seasons, or a return to the profligate days of the 1960s and 1970s could reduce supplies and drive up prices. But these seem unlikely in the current environment.

After being on top for much of a decade, OPEC is struggling just to maintain its position. Watching free market forces at work in this circumstance warms the heart.

She's just a 'material girl'

And in the Everyone-Has-His-or-Her-Price category, we considered rock star Madonna, who, it seems, has posed in the nude in her not-too-distant past, the pictures of which sessions are now about to appear in (you guessed it) Penthouse magazine.

Ah, well, what price fame? This award was a tough one. Our first impulse was to give it to Bob Guccione, Penthouse's publisher, who has considerable prior experience with Vanessa Williams pictures.

Then we considered Madonna herself, but rejected the choice on the grounds that she is, well, just a 'material girl' and there's no surprise in that.

So we settled, in the end, on the hordes of people who take pictures like this and who apparently keep them on file until the persons involved make it big, thereby allowing them to parasitize the dirty photos to a magazine.

Where there's money to be made passing around such trash, someone will try to make it. Ah, entrepreneurship. Isn't it wonderful?

'Get-acquainted summit' may end up being more than that

I first met Andrei A. Gromyko at a reception in Moscow in 1962 after President John F. Kennedy, at the suggestion of Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., asked me to visit the Soviet Union to try to improve trade relations following the U-2 incident.

The first time we really had a chance to talk was when we sat next to each other at the Soviet mission in New York discussing the reasons for the low state of relations between our two countries. To make his point, then-Foreign Minister Gromyko put his large foot on mine and began to press, rather forcefully, in his unsmiling way, he said, "You see, you press on my foot, and I will press on yours harder." Having been schooled in the Stalinist era through the darkest days of World War II, Gromyko's views of how to negotiate successfully have never changed.

I recall that when Nikita S. Khrushchev succeeded Stalin, he criticized Gromyko's lack of flexibility, saying that if he was in charge, Gromyko would sit on a block of ice until his superiors told him to get off. While this may be admirable in some political systems, it is clear that the new Soviet leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, wants more flexibility. He wants a new foreign minister dependent upon him rather than vice versa — the appointment of a Georgian and one of his closest followers, Eduard A. Shevardnadze, a man with no experience in foreign affairs.

Within the last two weeks, I have met personally with both General Secretary Gorbachev and President Ronald Reagan to discuss what history will know as the Geneva summit. Their comments to me give every indication that the leaders of the two great world powers are ready to discuss possible relief from the greater horror now facing mankind — the threat of nuclear war.

The developments are long overdue and indicate that we may be nearing the end of what I consider the worst period in U.S.-Soviet relations in the more than 60 years that I have known the Soviets.

The most important of these developments, of course, is the agreement by Reagan and Gorbachev to meet in Geneva on Nov. 19-20. While the meeting has been characterized as a "get-acquainted summit," my discussions with both leaders indicate that it will be much more than that. In fact, it is entirely possible that agreement could be reached on some very substantial issues that have brought the Geneva peace talks to a virtual stalemate.

To show his flexibility, Gorbachev said, as I was leaving his office in Moscow, "I know America can live without Russia. And I know Russia can live without America. But this is not good for either country or for the rest of the world who look to us for stability and world peace."

A point too often overlooked is that Gorbachev's assumption of the reins of Soviet foreign policy from Gromyko paves the way for a global shift in relations between East and West. In meetings last week with the three top Chinese leaders — Central Advisory Committee Chairman Deng Xiaoping, General Secretary Yu Yaobang and President Li Xiaonan — each expressed new hope that the Gorbachev era could make way for peace between the United States and the Soviet Union. And what do the changes in Moscow mean for likely success at the Geneva summit in November? The test, in my view, is whether each leader can see in the other a measure of sincerity and flexibility to resolve the problems at hand. One of the largest, obviously, is the controversy over the Strategic Defense Initiative ("Star Wars") which, even if all other problems were solved, would still be a barrier to any success in Geneva. I suggest that Reagan and Gorbachev agree to share information on "Star Wars" from the very beginning. Reagan has already made the gesture to share the "Star Wars" system, if successful, and this would simply go one step further to address the Soviet fear that "Star Wars" will allow America to protect itself from attack while being free to launch a first strike against the Soviet Union.

I further suggest that each side agree not to be the first to attack the other or its allies by either conventional or nuclear forces. The United States has never agreed to sign the Soviet Union's formal proposal that neither side should be the first to make a nuclear strike, but the question of a first strike with conventional forces is new. This, of course, would be in America's interest since the Warsaw Pact nations have a preponderance of conventional forces in Europe.

All of these issues, as well as the question of continued adherence to SALT II, can now be laid upon the table in Geneva to form the long-awaited summit agenda. With Gorbachev's control of Soviet foreign policy and with a Republican-controlled U.S. Senate, this could be the greatest opportunity for U.S.-Soviet friendship and cooperation since we shook hands at the Elbe 40 years ago.

The most important summit result would be that these two men could begin to trust each other, not have one side suspect the other of trying to achieve military superiority; then let deeds, not words, determine their sincerity.

Book tells how to defuse a time-bomb

WASHINGTON — Now and then a book comes along, so rich in some ideas well presented, that one wants to shout its merits from the housetops. Such a book is "Social Security: Prospects for Real Reform," edited by Peter J. Ferrara.

If a hundred key people in the capital would read these 11 chapters, and take appropriate action, we could avoid the time-bomb disaster that threatens to overtake Social Security.

At the moment the system is solvent. Income comfortably exceeds outgo. Retirees who are now getting benefits are getting a good return on the taxes they paid in.

But Ferrara sounds this warning: "For those entering the work force today, even if they receive all the Social Security benefits they are promised, the program will still be a miserable deal." Chickens come home to roost; it is said; and by the end of this century — just 15 years hence — Social Security will have a barnyard full of them.

The problems are familiar to every observer of the passing scene. Social Security benefits, unlike annuities in the private market, are not tied to a trust fund; the system operates on a basis of cash in, cash out.

As medical technology has improved, life spans have dramatically lengthened. Too many oldersters now are living too long for the system to support them, and too few workers are in prospect.

Over the long term, under the Social Security Administration's own "pessimistic" assumptions, a payroll tax rate of 37.5 percent would have to be imposed. Ferrara properly terms this "absurd." So crushing a burden "would never be accepted by America's workers."

One poll after another has turned up a pervasive cynicism among young people just entering the work force. They simply do not believe that adequate Social Security benefits will await them on retirement. Their intuition is sound. Young people may not be able to find their way through a maze of tax laws, actuarial probabilities and tables of compound interest, but they know this much: Under the present system they will pay and pay and pay — and their employers will pay and pay and pay — and at age 70 they will get a pittance in return.

What to do? Ferrara's recommendations make great good sense. For both social and political reasons, he would begin by guaranteeing those now receiving benefits that their benefits would never be reduced.

He would accomplish this by giving every retiree a U.S. government bond embodying an enforceable promise: The retiree will receive his monthly benefits, plus cost-of-living adjustments, calculated under the law in effect at the time of retirement, every month for the rest of his life.

With that guarantee in place, Ferrara would move to the next step. At his option, every worker entering the labor force would be permitted to deposit 20 percent of his Social Security taxes in a "Super Individual Retirement Account." Employers would match these deposits. In time, the 20 percent would be raised to 30 or 40 percent, ultimately to 100 percent. Retirement benefits, of course, would be reduced accordingly.

No one would be compelled to opt for the Super-IRA, but a worker would be crazy not to exercise the option.

Suppose for a moment, to be supposing, that it were possible for a married couple (average income, two children) to pay into a Super-IRA over the next 45 years what they now must pay into Social Security.

At 67, assuming both spouses were alive, Social Security would pay a life annuity of $19,064. The Super-IRA would pay a life annuity of $97,824. But suppose these retired workers wanted to leave something to their children at death.

Under Social Security, they could leave the kids zero; for they would have zero equity. Under Ferrara's Super-IRA system, they would have accumulated assets at retirement of $84,000, to be drawn down or conserved as they directed.

Ferrara's book, published by the Cato Institute at $20, spells out the Super-IRA proposal in many alternatives. In the short term, as the plan was phased in, it would add to the federal deficit, but these revenue losses would be offset in some degree by the economic activity generated by new pools of private savings.

The principle is sound and the machinery to adapt the principle is not complex. I am too old to help from the plan, but if Congress acts boldly, perhaps my grandchildren will have a better deal than Social Security holds out for them now.

James Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View," from Washington.

He can't hear them laughing

Channel 11 is currently playing a new Donahue promotion, in which jokes are being made by asking questions, or making statements about a person's past. David Letterman was a "hall monitor."

Cher answers the question, "Do you still believe in the institution of marriage?" Answer, "Yes, but who wants to live in an institution."

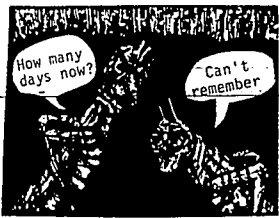

I keep hearing about "secular humanism," and the effect of that view point. It makes me wonder if the children of divorced parents find Cher's answer funny.

If the "second husband syndrome" produces incest with a step-daughter, I wonder if that little girl finds Cher's answer funny.

The teacher who finds her or his day made harder by dealing with emotionally damaged children of divorce: I wonder if they find Cher's answer funny.

The police officer working under the monstrous case load of run away children: I wonder if the officer thinks Cher's answer is very funny.

The dictionary defines institution as a principle or custom that forms a part of society or civilization.

Court ousts Louisiana creationist law

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louisiana's law requiring creation science to be given equal weight with the teaching of evolution in public schools was ruled unconstitutional Monday by a federal appeals court.

"The act's intended effect is to discredit evolution by counterbalancing its teaching at every turn with the teaching of 'creationism' — a religious belief," the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said in its ruling.

The court upheld U.S. District Judge Adrian

Duplantier's ruling against the 1981 law, which has never been enforced. It was the only such law still on the books in the nation, and differed only slightly from one struck down in Arkansas in 1982.

Creation science is the theory that the Earth and everything on it was created all at once some thousands of years ago. It is in accordance with the Bible's version of creation in the Book of Genesis.

The theory of evolution holds that life began billions of years ago and was gradually developed from simpler forms.

Martha Kegel, New Orleans director of the American Civil Liberties Union which fought the law in court, was jubilant.

"With the decision today, the federal appeals court made it very clear, abundantly clear, that creationism is religion, that it is not science, and that the courts will not tolerate government promotion of religion in the science classroom."

She said, "Obviously we hope this is the end of it and that there won't be any attempt to appeal."

Carter plane lands in emergency

GALLUP, N.M. (AP) — A plane carrying Billy Carter and members of his family on a cross-country flight made an emergency landing after pressure inside the aircraft's cabin dropped, authorities reported.

Carter, brother of former President Jimmy Carter, said the Gulfstream twin-engine plane was forced to land at Gallup on Sunday night. He said the airplane's air conditioning system also was affected.

There were no serious injuries reported, although Billy Carter's 17-year-old daughter, Mandy, was taken by ambulance to Rehoboth McKinley Christian Hospital.

Senate sanction of apartheid faces opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate legislation to impose limited sanctions against the white minority government in South Africa ran into conservative opposition on Monday, and a leading liberal charged that a "dirty undercurrent of racism" was partially the cause.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the leading opponent of the measure, disputed the allegation as nonsense.

Helms and Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., swapped charges off the floor after Helms launched a filibuster designed to block swift passage of the measure. A test vote is expected on Wednesday on a motion by Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole to end the filibuster, although Helms left open the possibility he would end his delaying tactics.

The legislation, approved on a 164-vote in the Foreign Relations Committee, would ban the export of computer equipment that the South African government could use for military or defense purposes, or to enforce the racial system of apartheid that discriminates against blacks.

The measure also would require a halt in nuclear cooperation with the South African government until the South Africans agree to abide by a non-proliferation treaty, and recommends the banning of bank loans to the government.

The measure is expected to clear the Republican-controlled Senate easily. While it recommends less severe steps than a House bill, Cranston and other liberals hope to amend it to prohibit the sale in the United States of Krugers, the gold coins made in South Africa.

There was virtually no debate on the measure on the Senate floor during the day, except for Cranston's charge that "there seems to be, at the heart of the American ultra-right wing movement, an undercurrent of racism that rises to the surface every now and then."

Helms told reporters that the measure was "nonsense," and added that imposing restrictions on trade with South Africa could cast blacks in that country their-

Jury selection begins in 'mountain man' kidnapping trial

VIRGINIA CITY, Mont. (AP) — Jury selection began Monday in the trial of a self-styled mountain man charged with kidnapping a woman and killing her rescuer, and a judge said jurors would have to set aside any "impressions or opinions" about the highly publicized case.

A pool of 27 potential jurors was assembled in sweltering Madison County Courthouse for the trial of Don Nichols, 54, who is charged with kidnapping, deliberate homicide and aggravated assault.

Nichols, whose 20-year-old son Dan was convicted of abduction in the case in May, is accused of kidnapping Karl Swenson of Bozeman last July, in an effort to obtain a "mountain woman" for companionship for himself and his son. The two men had been living in a mountain wilderness in southwestern Montana for nearly a year before the incident.

Swenson, a member of the U.S. women's team in the biathlon, a sport that combines cross-country skiing and target shooting, was abducted in the mountains near Big Sky while on a training run.

The elder Nichols allegedly shot and killed Alan Goldstein, 36, of Big Sky, when Goldstein and another searcher discovered the mountain camp where Swenson was being held. Nichols is also accused of threatening the second rescuer, Jim Schwalbe, with a rifle. Nichols is expected to claim self-defense in the death of Goldstein.

Prosecutor Marc Racicot asked potential jurors Monday whether they could apply a state law which says any person involved in a felony is guilty of deliberate homicide if a person is killed during the crime. Each answered yes.

Dan Nichols was charged under the same law and acquitted. He was convicted of helping kidnap the 23-year-old Swenson July 15 and with wounding her when Goldstein found the camp the following day. He is scheduled to be sentenced after his father's trial.

As Monday's proceedings got under way in a courtroom heated by 90-degree outdoor temperatures, Racicot and presiding state District Judge Frank Davis said they did not expect any jurors to be totally ignorant of the widely publicized case.

However, they said, the final jury must have the ability to set aside any "impressions or opinions" members may have formed from seeing news accounts.

The prosecutor said the charges deal with "the most serious crimes known to man." Murder, he said, is "not easy to talk about."

It stirs our blood to even think about it," he said, adding that jurors will have to be able to sit in judgment of another human being.

Addressing the homicide charge, Racicot said the jury will have a choice. It can find Nichols guilty of innocent of deliberate homicide or of "felony murder" because Goldstein's death occurred during a kidnapping.

If convicted of all charges, Nichols faces a maximum sentence of 140 years in prison. Racicot told the potential jurors they will "hear things you have not heard before" in news coverage of the case.

Dr. Kenneth Kizer displays a watermelon stamped as edible by California health inspectors

Farm official charges melons result of illegal pesticide use

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California's top agriculture official said Monday he believes watermelon poisonings in California and surrounding states were caused by deliberate misuse of farm chemicals, not by pesticide residue from previous crops.

"I'm not assuming it was a carryover. I'm assuming it was an illegal application," state Food and Agriculture Director Clare Berryhill said, adding that his department had received information from informants to that effect.

The pesticide involved in the poisonings, aldicarb, sold by the Union Carbide Co. under the trade name of Temik, is banned for use on watermelon crops. But its use has been approved for other crops, including cotton, which is produced in the same area as watermelons, in many cases by the same growers. Aldicarb-contaminated melons have been linked to illnesses of more than 200 people in four Western states and Canada.

While some growers blamed Union Carbide for not doing more to stop the pesticide did not decompose in the soil as fast as they had been led to believe, Berryhill said at a news conference: "I'm not going to blame Union Carbide at this juncture."

"We believe there were violations of restricted materials laws, and we think there are some growers out there who violated that. I'm here to tell you right now that I will not sleep until I find those growers, and I'm going to use all the police power I have in my power to put them away. We cannot allow a few growers in this state to jeopardize our industry. We're out to find those people," Berryhill said.

His deputy, Rex Magee, said violations of pesticide laws are misdemeanors with maximum criminal penalties of a $1,000 fine and up to six months in jail. But he said civil penalties could be $150 per plant, which he said could total "in the millions of dollars."

Berryhill added that other growers who have lost their crops because of orders to destroy suspect fruit might also have claims against growers who violated the pesticide laws.

As a result of the melon contamination, the Environmental Protection Agency plans to reopen the question of dietary exposure to aldicarb, an EPA official said in Washington. It is made from methyl isocyanate, the chemical that killed more than 2,000 people in India last December.

Official says state education board overwhelmed by workload in Idaho

LEWISTON (AP) — It isn't surprising the Idaho Board of Education feels overwhelmed by the work it faces, says an administrator for the Education Commission for the States in Denver.

Ames McGuinness says he doesn't know of another state that has one board overseeing all facets of education.

"The general problem with such an arrangement is that the span of control, the range of agenda items is very broad," said McGuinness, the commission's assistant executive director. "The Idaho board has a real challenge."

McGuinness described other education systems recently at a meeting with an ad hoc committee organized by Idaho House Speaker Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls. The committee's tasks include examining whether Idaho should have a board that oversees elementary, secondary and vocational education, and another that oversees higher education.

The current board governs all segments of the system and has indirect control over community colleges, as well.

Both the Northwest Accreditation Association and the Idaho Task Force on Higher Education have supported dividing the board. But recent board members have denounced the proposal, saying it would pit different parts of the education system against each other for funding.

Many states have a central coordinating or governing body over the boards for higher education, public education and vocational education, McGuinness said.

He said higher education should be governed separately because, in terms of policy, it is different than the other components.

"When you have busy people trying to do everything, their agendas are long, complicated and uncoordinated by very detailed matters," McGuinness said.

Trailer home fire kills infant

HAYDEN (AP) — A 10-month-old girl was killed and both her 2-year-old brother and mother were injured Monday when fire swept their trailer home, officials said.

The family's identity and the survivors' conditions were not immediately available.

Neighbors at the Frontier Village Trailer Park reported the fire authorities said. The origin of the fire is under investigation by an arson team, although Kootenai County sheriff's Lt. John Smith said there is "no reason to believe" the fire was set.

Witness Dave Hobbs, who attacked the blaze with a garden hose, said the trailer was a total loss even before firefighters arrived.

Neighbors pulled the mother from the home before Hayden Lake fire district crews arrived, said Assistant Chief Anson Gable.

Firefighters raced through flames and smoke to rescue the boy, who was trapped in a back bedroom. He was revived by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and oxygen, Gable said.

The infant girl, who occupied a center bedroom, couldn't be reached until the fire was contained, officials said.

Man charged in bank job

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — FBI authorities have arrested an Idaho man on bank robbery charges in connection with the Wednesday afternoon holdup of a Salt Lake City bank.

FBI Agent Lou Bertram said Monday authorities were holding Dennis Lee Baker, 33, Lewiston, in Boise. Authorities said a holdup man escaped from the Continental Bank branch at 1575 S. Main with nearly $1,000.

Bertram said Baker was arrested in Lewiston Saturday. He said an "alert citizen" saw the holdup man run from the bank and jump into a pickup truck with Idaho license plates.

Foreclosure may stop campaign

POCATELLO (AP) — If former Idaho Congressman George Hansen's Pocatello home is foreclosed as scheduled in September, he could lose his chance to run for the 2nd Congressional District seat, state officials say.

If the Hansens lose their house, their only Idaho address would be a post office box, and that is no longer adequate for voting registration, said Ben Yursa of the secretary of state's office.

"He should have some place of habitation — a place where he has intent to return," Yursa said. Hansen's problems with his Pocatello home could turn out to be a factor in next year's GOP race, Yursa added.

"But he may have everything straightened out. I don't know," Yursa said.

The former seven-term representative faces foreclosure on his home Sept. 6, a newspaper notice on the matter was published last week in the Idaho State Journal by American Land Title Co. of Pocatello.

Hansen labeled the matter "a legal misunderstanding" which his attorneys are working to correct. But Terry White, an attorney representing a partnership seeking the foreclosure, said the only issue concerning him "is that the note has not been paid."

White represents Western Capital Associates, a partnership of investors involving J.R. Simplot Co. officials. Hansen secured the deed of trust from the firm on May 23, 1984.

American Land Title, which is carrying out Western Capital's request, says the home will be sold because the Hansens owe $40,000 on a deed to trust and 20 percent interest for each day the loan was not repaid after July 1,

As a result of Hansen's complaints over alleged voting irregularities during the last election, the secretary of state's office issued a directive to Idaho's 44 county clerks saying the listing of a post office box is not in itself adequate for voter registration. Information must be updated to show where the voter lives.

Hansen was convicted in federal court in 1984 of four felony counts of failure to file correct financial disclosure forms. He has appealed the decision and a ruling on that appeal is expected soon.

OPEC meeting disbands

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — World oil markets appeared calm Monday after an OPEC meeting broke up without agreement on a defense of prices and as analysts said there was little the exporting nations could do to prevent a continued price drop.

Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the oil minister of Saudi Arabia, said his country would not immediately boost its production, despite inability of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to agree on a strategy for limiting output at a three-day meeting that ended Sunday in Vienna.

When reporters asked Nigeria's oil minister, Tam David-West, if he thought a price-cutting war was about to break out among oil-exporting nations, he replied: "No, at least not in the immediate future."

At the inconclusive OPEC talks, oil ministers agreed only on a public pledge to stop cheating on pricing rules and to meet again July 22 in Geneva, Switzerland.

"The market will interpret this as meaning OPEC is really behind the eight ball," said Dillard Spriggs, president of Petroleum Analysis Ltd., a New York consulting service.

"This time next year they'll still be faced with the same situation," Spriggs said. "They've got no way to go."

But pending the resumption of the talks, there was little activity in oil markets.

"The market reaction has been non-committal," said Joseph Slavovick, director of international economics at the Paris office of Cambridge Energy Research Associates, a private consulting service.

Oil prices in the spot, or non-contract market, were barely changed from Friday's levels. Arabian Light oil for August delivery was quoted at $27.05 a barrel compared with the official price of $28, according to Telerate Energy Service, a private market-information firm.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, prices of contracts for future delivery of oil and refined petroleum products slumped sharply at the opening, but then quickly regained the lost ground in lackluster trading.

Contracts for August delivery of unleaded gasoline dropped to 80.75 cents a gallon at the opening from 81.19 cents at the close Wednesday before the long holiday weekend. But by the close of Monday's session, prices had recovered to 82.40 cents a gallon on the Mercantile Exchange. Contracts for August delivery of West Texas Intermediate crude, the major U.S. oil, wound up Monday's session at $26.99 a barrel, up from an early low of $26.71 and Wednesday's close of $26.91.

Express train, trailer smash at crossing

SAINT-PIERRE-DU-VAUVRAY, France (AP) — An express train going 100 mph smashed into a Paris train-trailer trapped on the track between automatic crossing gates Monday. Police said eight people were killed and 67 were injured.

Police and fire officials said the locomotive and four front passenger cars of the Le Havre-Paris train jumped the track and one car plowed through part of a nearby house. The train carried about 600 passengers.

Witnesses said the frantic driver tried to raise the gate manually moments before the impact and was back in his cab, trying to crash his rig through the barrier when the train hit him.

The U.S. Embassy in Paris said preliminary reports indicated five Americans were among the injured.

The embassy said four of the five Americans suffered minor injuries and the fifth was hospitalized in satisfactory condition. Identification of the injured Americans was withheld pending notification of their families.

Police said 10 of the injured were in "grave condition."

The accident occurred at about 9:15 a.m. in the community 62 miles miles west of Paris, on a regular run from the port of Le Havre.

National police and firefighters, called in from a 60-mile radius, struggled to free passengers from the tangled mass of metal, said officials of the department, or state, of Eure. There was no immediate official explanation of the accident's cause.

Firefighters back on duty at airport

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Sydney International Airport was back to normal Monday at the end of a week-long firefighters' strike that stranded more than 20,000 people and nearly paralyzed the facility.

Striking firemen returned to work after the aviation department agreed late Sunday to their demands for a shorter, 38-hour week and increased manning levels.

Hamburg court convicts 3 in Hitler hoax

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — A Hamburg court convicted three people Monday of arranging the sale of the forged "Hitler Diaries," but the judge also accused Stern magazine of being too easily duped in the $3.1 million swindle.

The prosecution called it the literary hoax of the century. Chief Judge Holger Schroeder told a packed court room that the Hamburg-based, mass circulation magazine "stood naked," without any proof that the journals were real, as it went to press with them in April 1983.

Convicted of fraud were former Stern reporter Gerd Heidemann, 53, who procured the fake diaries for the magazine, and confessed forger Konrad Kujau, 47, a dealer in Nazi memorabilia and a handwriting expert.

Jaruzelski begins visit to Yugoslavia

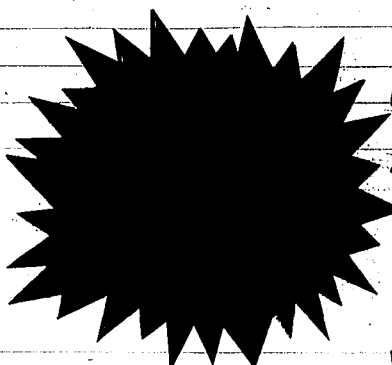

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski arrived in Yugoslavia Monday for a state visit, his second to a country outside the Soviet bloc since he took power in 1981.

Zarkovic. Informed sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said protocols dealing with economic and scientific cooperation would be signed during the visit.

He was expected to meet with President Radovan Vukobratovic, Prime Minister Milka Planinc and Communist Party President Vidvoje February.

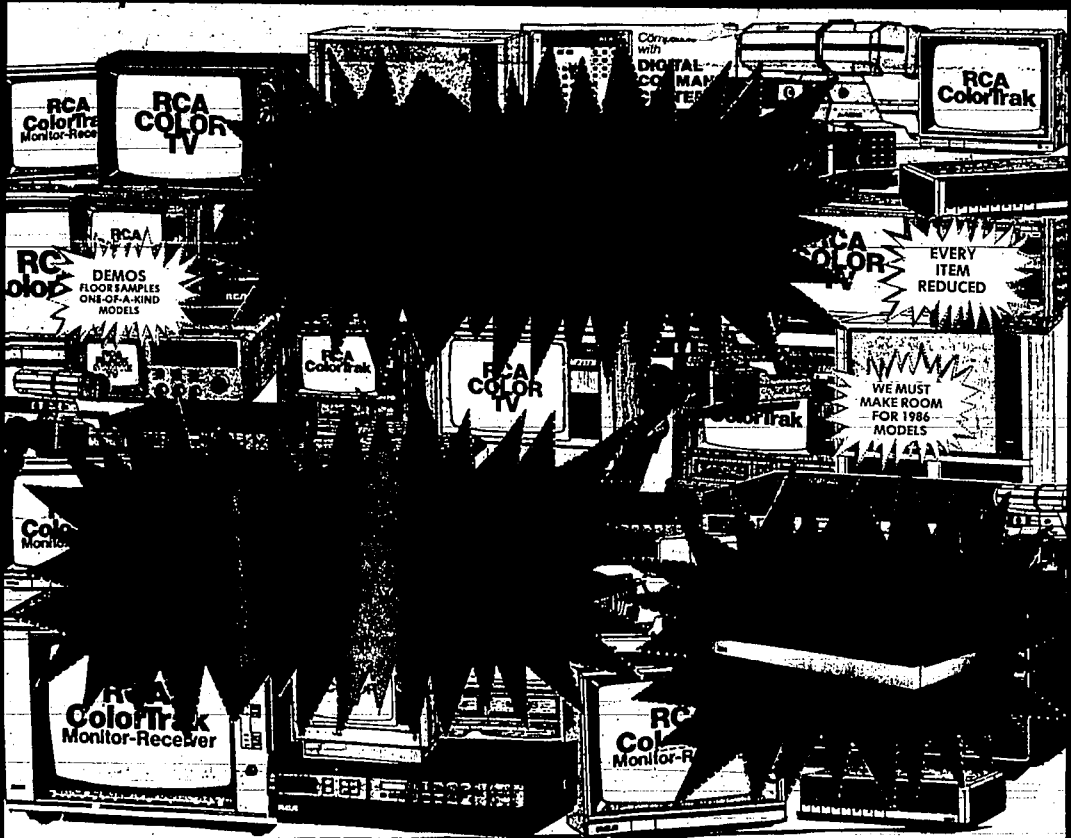

Poland is among Yugoslavia's 10 leading trade partners. The Polish leader visited India last February.

Project will carry sewage to Snake River

Hagerman targets sewers

By TERRILL WILSON
Times-News Staff Writer

HAGERMAN — A $4 million bond must be posted for the Fleming property, to insure that the property and fences are returned to original or better condition. Construction traffic must be kept to a minimum, only the 75-foot concrete strip for right-of-way may be used, and the land owners must be treated publicly. Special precautions must be taken to protect the landowners from blasted rock.

The bids will include repair of some 1,500 sinkholes that must be covered with 12-inch concrete, covered with a 6-inch dirt layer, and filled back with a compacted, silty clay material. The chlorination station will be a small building west of the lagoons where waste water will be chlorinated.

Bids from state-licensed contractors and their licensed sub-contractors are due at the Hagerman City Hall on July 10 at 2 p.m. The bids then will be opened that day by the City Council, and a contractor will be selected.

Construction will begin as soon as possible after bids are opened and will last no longer than 180 days.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission, in a decision signed July 3 and announced Monday, ordered Mountain Bell to offer a new calling plan designed to cut costs for many customers who make phone calls from one Magic Valley area to another.

The improved METROPAC plan will replace an existing package that goes by the same name. Both are options offered in addition to basic phone service.

The new METROPAC will allow customers in 13 Magic Valley exchanges to phone other towns within a 40-mile radius at rates cheaper than long-distance charges. For the first time, the package also will incorporate the same discounts for evening and night calls that long-distance users enjoy, said PUC spokeswoman Dana Howard.

The new service will go into effect by Aug. 21, said Jim Wozniak, director of regulatory affairs for Mountain Bell in Idaho.

It will be offered in exchanges serving: Eden-Hazelton, Twin Falls, Bliss, Buhl, Castelford, Dietrich, Gooding, Hagerman, Jerome, Kimberly, Murtagh, Shoshone and Wendell, PUC officials said.

The current METROPAC has high usage in areas where it is offered. In the Eden-Hazelton exchange area, close to 70 percent of the customers are signed up for the package, said Wozniak of Mountain Bell.

The new package will not benefit all customers equally because of differences in their calling patterns.

For instance, businesses that must place most phone calls during standard-priced daytime hours actually could wind up paying higher monthly bills for the improved METROPAC.

On the other hand, "People who make a lot of social calls on evenings or weekends are going to benefit the lowest," said Howard.

The existing METROPAC gives customers either two hours of phone time for $5.55 or three hours of phone time for $8.08. Those rates come to about 4.5 cents a minute. The rates for additional calling then climb to 8 cents a minute.

The new METROPAC package has three main features:

- It has a $5 minimum charge per month.

Experts disagree

Coroner will make dehydration tests

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — While the reason 13-year-old Greg Jones fell to his death during a survival training hike near King Hill Wednesday remains unclear, the Elmore County coroner Monday asked for testing to see if Jones was suffering from dehydration at the time of his fall.

Elmore County Coroner Verli Humphreys said Monday he has asked the Boise pathologist, Dr. Robert Maier, who performed the original autopsy on Jones to run tests to determine if Jones was suffering from dehydration when he fell.

Humphreys said the test for dehydration is the only additional information he has requested. Maier declined comment Monday.

Police said Friday they had been told Jones had been expected to last only two to three hours.

Elmore County Detective Nick Schliz said Monday he had been told Jones was "lagging behind" during the hike and one of the two guides accompanying the group had been with Jones until minutes before his fall. The guide had pressed ahead to retrieve water for Jones, leaving him to wait at a hilltop above King Hill Creek, in the Bennett Hills near King Hill, Schliz said.

Heat prostration and dehydration are related conditions that develop when sweat, urine, and other bodily fluids are not replaced. Doctors said Monday that heat stroke and dehydration can cause dizziness and physical and mental lethargy, but they differed over the conditions that bring on dehydration and, would not judge whether or not Jones was dehydrated when he fell to his death.

Dr. Paul Miles, a Twin Falls pediatrician, said Monday it would be difficult to bring a 13-year-old to the state of dehydration.

"Take a normal 13-year-old boy and hike him through the desert, he's probably not going to get heat prostration unless there is some underlying medical problem," Dr. Miles said. "You'd really have to be working hard and sweating constantly to become dehydrated."

But Dr. Pat Desmond, a bicycle racer who practices internal medicine in Twin Falls, says it is easy to reach dehydration. "Given heat and a dry climate and exertion, it's not hard at all," to become dehydrated, he said, adding that by the time a person feels thirst, dehydration has already begun.

Billy Vanderbilt of Ketchum, who has worked in outdoors education for 13 years, says there is no hard and fast rule for predicting or preventing dehydration, and declined to comment on Jones's specific case.

Vanderbilt said Monday variables that effect how fast a person becomes dehydrated include the level of physical activity, whether there is a breeze blowing, whether the person is in the shade, diet, and relative level of hydration or dehydration before setting out on a hike.

He said 94 hours in 100-degree temperatures without water would not be terribly risky; but if a person were out and moving and in the sun, there might be a greater risk, depending upon the level of exertion.

Fair board risks good attendance

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Board gambled on a good fair year Monday by adopting a $37,500 budget for 1985-86 instead of remaining with a previously approved budget that cut fair finances to the bone by almost $70,000.

The board also voted Monday to reserve the right to revise the budget in November to more accurately reflect income from the 1985 fair.

Two months ago the board voted to submit to the Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners a $279,000 fair budget for the 1985-86 fiscal year. Compared to the current budget of $347,500, the board trimmed almost 20 percent because of an anticipated drop in revenue.

The commissioners will consider the fair budget as part of an overall county budget it will approve in September. The fair budget includes a $19,833 subsidy from the county.

At a meeting Monday, however, J.P. Chubbard, R-Idaho Falls, expressed optimism about good attendance at the 1985 fair rodeo.

If attendance is healthy, the board would have to pay more to the rodeo producer under the terms of a contract splitting the gate between the board and the producer. In the $279,000 budget, the board allowed about $34,000 for the rodeo producer contract. That amount wouldn't be enough if attendance at the rodeo were good, Board member Carl Grinstaff said.

Board Chairman Don Kramer suggested keeping this year's budget of $347,500 intact, adding $5,000 to help pay the rodeo contract if necessary. His suggestion, however, died for lack of a motion.

The previous budget of $279,000 had cut services the board might want to reinstate later when revenue increases, Kramer says.

"What happens when you cut something is that something won't get done down the line," Kramer said. "Somewhere down the line, someone has to spend money on the fair grounds."

Commissioner Judy Felton said the board couldn't budget on hope. There was no indication the county would be receiving any more money.

"We're already paying bills with next year's money," she said.

All county departments were in the same boat when preparing budgets, Chubbard says. Marvin Humpleman said they all had to guess how much money they would receive.

Kramer disagreed. The fair was different because the amount of income depended upon attendance, while the amount of county taxes re-

Eden-Hazelton wins discount on long-distance

By BOB FREUND

Vernon Brander and 345 other telephone customers from the Eden-Hazelton area had been seeking an extended local calling area that would include many Magic Valley communities.

They didn't get it in a state commission's decision late last week.

But the Magic Valley customers did win a discount, a long-distance calling package that could save them valuable dollars — and is likely to become the standard for the state.

"They (state regulators) look my phone bill in February and showed me where it would save me 45 percent," said Brander, who lives near Hazelton.

J.R. Simplot will cooperate in Heyburn odor problem

By LINDA LARSON
Times-News correspondent

HEYBURN — Plans were laid Monday in Boise for correcting at least part of the odor problem that has plagued Heyburn area residents in recent months.

Representatives from the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency met with three representatives from the J.R. Simplot company to discuss odor problems at the Heyburn plant's waste treatment lagoon, EPA official Wally Scarborough said Monday.

Scarborough said that a Simplot representative outlined a course of action that will be taken to correct the problem.

"There was a commitment that corrective action will be taken by the Simplot plant," he said.

Others attending the meeting in Boise included Mike Mc Masters, of Health and Welfare's Division of Environment, and J. Young, plant manager of the Simplot plant in Heyburn, Scarborough said.

He said both Mc Masters and Young will attend a citizens' meeting Thursday at the Heyburn Elementary School at 7 p.m. where possible solutions to the odor problem will be discussed.

Scarborough said that when he was in Heyburn about two weeks ago the weather was cool. After visits to the Burley waste treatment plant and the Simplot lagoon, he said the Simplot site had an odor problem while the Burley lagoons did not.

"I have not been to every potential site," he said. Robbins said he and his wife and two sons will travel the district, towing a trailer, to campaign door to door this summer and that he hopes to raise funds that way. So far, he says, he has no campaign contributions.

Robbins will take on Stallings for Congress

TWIN FALLS — Republican State Rep. Gary Robbins of Dietrich announced Monday he will put his dairy farm in the hands of a hired manager this summer and take to the highways of the Second Congressional District to run for election to the U.S. Congress.

"At 100, it's a wide-open race, and I think they're looking for a more moderate candidate," the freshman legislator from Dietrich said in an interview at the Times-News Monday.

"We're just going to go out and go to work," he said. Robbins said he and his wife and two sons will travel the district, towing a trailer, to campaign door to door this summer and that he hopes to raise funds that way. So far, he says, he has no campaign contributions.

from seven-term incumbent and convicted felon George Hansen in a close race last fall.

"The longer Stallings is there, the harder he is to get out," he says. "I'm a fiscal conservative ... but, I'm a lot more moderate than my friends on people things, things that affect people," he said. "I'll be tougher to beat than Chad (Rep. J.P. Chubbard, R-Idaho Falls), or W. Watkins (Sen. Dan Watkins, R-Idaho Falls) for Stallings," Robbins says.

Robbins said he decided to run when he came home from Boise to find his constituents asking him to work on problems better addressed in Congress. "I'm not needed as much as the state of Idaho as I am there (in Congress) ... we need someone that can push and do," he said. "The state of Idaho runs pretty good; federal-wise, there are a lot of problems," says Robbins.

Robbins says he does not plan to leave his legislative seat until he has to. "I think it's good exposure for me; I don't have to file (to run for Congress) until March," he said.

Robbins says his shift from van LDS background to the Episcopal Church in 1983, his liability in the strongly Mormon eastern end of the district, as well as his personal bankruptcy.

He said he went into a Chubbard Watkins campaign in 1984 and lost an Idaho Falls) for Stallings," Robbins says.

Robbins said he now understands agricultural financing and problems better.

Robbins is also a certified accountant.

There's no Robbin's Advisory Committee because the state would limit him not to run, he says. In the Legislature, he says he works with the more conservative candidates from the eastern end of the district.

TWIN FALLS — The grasshopper spraying program in Idaho is running out of both cash and pesticide. In less than two and one-half weeks, the additional $15 million appropriated by Secretary of Agriculture John Block's emergency declaration has been almost exhausted. Nationally, a total of $25 million has been spent in the spraying program — most of it in Idaho. Originally, the Department of Agriculture had allotted only $10 million for spraying in all western states. But the pesticide shortage is the biggest problem facing the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. While American Cyanamid, the New Jersey firm which manufactures malathion, can produce 12,000 gallons a day, spraying in Idaho has been using 16,000 gallons a day, according to APHIS spokesman Anita McGrady in Twin Falls. With serious problems beginning to develop in other western states, the already insufficient supply is likely to get even smaller for Idaho. So far, Idaho has gotten the bulk of both the money and the spray. While a total of just over 7 million acres has been sprayed nationwide, almost 4.6 million acres of that have been in Idaho. Now, however, malathion shortages are forcing the program to slow down. According to McGrady, APHIS is trying to treat the most critical areas first. "How do you distribute a limited supply of pesticide to the right place?" McGrady asked. "Obviously everyone will not be happy." The most severe problems, McGrady said, seem to be in crop areas bordering rangeland, where surveyors are reporting infestations as high as 100 per square yard. While APHIS has been forced to drop any areas, McGrady said, they have not been accepting new contracts for a week or two. In its more recent contracts APHIS is also not spraying private cropland unless it falls within the perimeter of federal land, McGrady said. They will, McGrady said, finish spraying on the more than 1 million acres of unsprayed lands currently under contract in the state. That will bring state spraying totals to over 5 million acres. Last week, aerial spraying was covering an average of almost 300,000 acres a day. Over the past few days, however, that figure has been severely cut back. Sunday a shortage of malathion and poor weather conditions pushed the spray total down to 5,723 acres. Monday, planes covered a statewide total of 30,800 acres — 116 better than one-tenth of last week's daily totals.

maintained constant for the most part, he said. Kramer then suggested keeping the 1985-86 budget at this year's level and later revising the line items within the budget after the fair is over. That way, the board could pay more on the rodeo contract, if necessary, by reducing spending in another area of the budget. —Hemphreman said the board should remember that under the law it could spend less but not any more than the $347,500, once the commissioners adopted the county budget in September. If the board adopted a lower budget and received more income than expected for 1986-87, the money couldn't be spent until it was budgeted the following year. Kramer recommended revising the budget at their November meeting. The board would know then how much money the fair generated and change the line items to reflect the income. "We can always go down," Kramer said. He hoped they would have to change the budget, because it would mean good attendance and more money for the fair as well as the producer.

The board members voted unanimously for the $347,500 budget. In other business, the annual public banquet for the fair has been tentatively scheduled for Aug. 12. The board briefly discussed discontinuing the annual event, which officially kicks off fair activities and honors the superintendents who manage the different departments, such as home arts and livestock competition. Kramer suggested keeping the banquet because it was one of the few benefits for the superintendents. Fair Manager Tom Shouse announced the 1985 fair premium books would be distributed and mailed soon.

counts during off-peak hours. Brander sought "extended area service" when he asked state regulators for action in February 1983. The service would have classified calls to nearby phone exchanges as local calls. The PUC rejected extended area service, but it agreed with Brander that the Magic Valley exchanges deserved less costly treatment than long-distance calling or the current METROPAC would give.

On July 3, the state ordered Mountain Bell to provide the new service. The PUC also is likely to put the new plan into effect in the Emmet area near Boise and for a handful of small communities near Pocatello, Howard said. —Wozniak said Monday that the improved METROPAC will cost Mountain Bell $20,934 in lost charges. Mountain Bell hopes to recoup that money in a future general rate increase, he said.

Public defender deadline extended

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners has extended the deadline for public defender applications to Aug. 15. After the original deadline of June 28, the board had received only two applications for a replacement for Mike Powers. Powers resigned June 23, after six years on the job, to re-enter private practice. The commissioners decided last week to extend the deadline, hoping to solicit more applications. It will publish an advertisement in the magazine published by the Idaho State Bar Association, Commissioner Judy Felton said. The county previously had published advertisements for the job in newspapers and wrote to the University of Idaho Law School. Last week, the commissioners did receive another application for the job from David Koudy, who works with the Idaho Legal Aide office in Twin Falls. Koudy was not available for comment Monday.

New fire chief picked by Filer City Council

FILER — Buddy Compher has been approved as the new Filer Fire Chief by the Filer City Council. The 36-year-old Compher, who has served on the city's volunteer fire department for seven years, replaces Larry Ainsworth. Ainsworth resigned July 1 after 15 years with the fire department to devote more time to his growing pallet manufacturing business in Buhl. Compher's appointment was met with some resistance by councilwoman Wanda Shaffer at a recent council meeting. "Although Shaffer said she had nothing against the new fire chief personally, she voted against the appointment because his job as the assistant supervisor of the city's maintenance department could be a conflict of interest."

As a member of the maintenance crew, "he's a good employee," Shaffer said, but his position as fire chief could cut into that job. If Compher is working on a maintenance project and is called away for a fire, "then who does the job?" she asked. Compher said he thought it would be an advantage to have a fire chief who is always right in town, but he could understand Shaffer's concern because he will probably be attending classes for additional training as fire chief. The new fire chief was the "unanimous choice" of the city's 15 volunteer firefighters, councilman Bob Fort said. Mayor Perry Dyke welcomed Compher to the job with a simple, "Hi, Chief."

New hospital gets Medicare

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho State Department of Health and Welfare gave Canyon View Hospital a clean bill of health last month when it approved the new hospital to treat patients who qualify for Medicare. The department reviewed the psychiatric hospital's facilities and reported that its social work, recreational and occupational therapy programs were more than adequate. The hospital said in a news release. They also examined the hospital's medical records.

Readers mail in letters of defense for the profession of male nursing

DEAR ABBY: I read your column about male nurses, and having been one for the last 13 years, I must comment.

Did you know that male nursing dates back to 1190 when the Teutonic Knights were founded to care for the wounded during the Crusades? Also, during Biblical times, the Knights of St. Lazarus were founded to tend the lepers.

I have had to face a great deal of prejudice while practicing my chosen profession. (No, I didn't ever want to be a doctor. And yes, I care for female patients just as a female nurse would.)

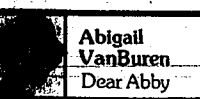

I feel that I am rendering a humanitarian service regardless of whether the patient is man or woman, rich or poor, black, white or yellow. My wife, who is also a registered nurse, has been very supportive. I realize that I am not alone and must do my part to bring the male nurse to an equal footing.

Until recently, the armed forces did not grant equal rank or pay to male registered nurses although our training was identical. (Female nurses enjoyed officer status automatically. Male nurses did not.)

So here I stand, heterosexual and proud to be a nurse and a man. Physicians, God bless them, spend a relatively short period of time with their patients, but nurses are there around the clock, faithful advocates of the patients' rights and needs.

Thank you, Abby, for an opportunity to air my thoughts.

— RAYMOND E. STANFORD, R.N., SAVANNAH, GA.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR NURSE STANFORD: Well said. My mail these last few weeks has been filled to overflowing with kudos for the male nurse.

Read on for a letter that says it all: DEAR ABBY: What's all this static about whether or not a male nurse should care for women patients in "intimate situations"?

I am a taxi driver, and on two separate occasions I assisted in delivering a baby. And how about all those policemen who have done the same? When a woman needs help, false modesty goes out the window.

— DOC (MY NICKNAME NOW)

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe the prejudice of some women: toward male nurses.

Women are fighting for equal rights and want to be accepted in a man's world, but they don't want men in theirs. How about equality for men? I am a young woman, but I am personally more comfortable with a male doctor than a female doctor who knows. The female doctor could be a lesbian, right?

And as for "Lols," who said, "Child molesters, perverts, wife beaters, etc. were men" — women can also be child molesters, perverts, husband beaters, etc., right? So, in conclusion, it doesn't really matter who takes care of you when you're sick as long as you receive proper medical attention.

— NURSE'S DAUGHTER IN JAPAN

DEAR ABBY: A word of advice to your readers: Should you find yourself as a patient with a nurse who is a male, please judge him on his professional skills.

In all probability he has chosen his career with a great deal of thought. After all, how many mothers tell their little boys that they hope they will grow up to be a nurse?

— NORMAN GREGORY, R.N.

DEAR ABBY: I couldn't believe the letter from "Lols in New York," who wrote, "If I had to go to a hospital, I'd give strict orders not to send me a male nurse to even give me a bedpan. (I would sooner be looked after by the cleaning woman.)"

The gall of that woman! If Lols should go into cardiac arrest when the cleaning woman and a male nurse are the only people around, I hope the cleaning woman knows whether to administer epinephrine, lidocaine or atropine, since she'd rather have the cleaning woman look after her than a male nurse.

— L.B. IN S.C.

Elderly populations growing quickly in Oregon, Nevada

WASHINGTON (AP) — Florida has far more elderly people among its residents than any other state, but over the last four years the largest increases in the proportion of over-65 residents have come in Oregon, Michigan and Nevada.

New Census Bureau statistics show that 17.5 percent of Florida's population was aged 65 and over as of July 1, 1984. That was the largest share of any state in the nation, up from 17.3 percent in the 1980 census.

But Oregon, where overall population growth was slight, saw its share of elderly people grow more than in any other state during the four-year period — up by 1.4 percentage points. Oregon had 12.9 percent elderly residents in 1984, up from 11.5 percent in 1980, the bureau said.

That represented an increase of 41,000 elderly people in Oregon, to a total of 344,000. During the same period, Florida added 245,000 elderly residents to bring its total to 1,931,000.

Close behind Oregon were Michigan and Nevada, each with 1.3 percentage points more elderly residents in 1984. Michigan's elderly population rose from 9.8 to 11.1 percent of the state total.

Poor eyes not factor in climb

DENVER (AP) — Robin Whitley's longtime dream had been to climb Mount McKinley, and in April and May he achieved it — even though the Denver lawyer has a genetic vision defect that has severely reduced his sight. The views he saw — with his remaining vision, now reduced to the point where Whitley is legally blind — were so striking "I was literally moved to tears," said Whitley, 34, a trial lawyer. "We didn't even think we'd get there because of the bad-weather, but we made it," he said.

Whitley said he has known since last October that his eye condition, which is hereditary, will someday leave him entirely without sight. He won a leave of absence from his job with the Denver District Attorney's office, and spent 22 days on the Alaskan mountain with a team making the 20,320-foot climb. "What he saw amazed him, even though his vision at the time was much like an overexposed photograph. "We'd climb over a rise, and new views would open up, or I'd clearly see for the first time what the other guys had seen earlier," Whitley said. "I mean it is just beautiful stuff, and different from anything I've ever seen." Whitley noted that a blizzard six nights and five days in duration caused his five-man team — to stop climbing temporarily. They thought they might not reach the peak, he said. "I knew that this was my only shot because I wouldn't be back on the mountain again. The other guys would be back. I just knew that wasn't the situation for me," he said.

Whitley has led an active life, visiting 30 states by motorcycle, mountaineering and participating in sporting events with his fiancée, Liz Marshall. Whitley said he weighed the risks of his participation in the climb with Michael Covington, a guide with Fantasy Ridge Mountain Guides, who taught Whitley to climb eight years ago. "I guess everybody is a little apprehensive about the challenge of such a mountain, anyway," Whitley said, "we always need each other's help."

Players: Strike in September

By DICK BRINSTER
The Associated Press

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

NEW YORK — While major league baseball players are split on the issue of staging a strike this season, they also are divided over when to walk out should they fail to reach a settlement with club owners.

In an Associated Press survey of 516 players, opinions ran the gamut from a call for an almost-immediate job action—including a boycott of the All-Star Game on July 16—to waiting until after the season to make a stand. But the most common sentiment expressed in the survey of all 28 teams, conducted in the last two weeks, was for a late-season strike.

"August 16 seems like a good time because it would give the parties time to wait until an impasse develops," said pitcher Dave Smith of the Houston Astros. The overriding theme among the players, who already have given union leaders approval for a strike, was to use the threat of a walkout as leverage in negotiations with the owners. The Major League Baseball Players Association has accused the owners of dragging their feet.

"Set a date for a midseason strike," said Charlie Moore of the Milwaukee Brewers. "That will show the owners that we mean business and maybe things will get done."

Only seven players interviewed favored a boycott of the All-Star Game, but the reasoning was consistent with the desire of players to bring the owners to the bargaining table with serious proposals.

"Get something done and get it done quick," Joe Nolan of the Baltimore Orioles said in casting his vote for an All-Star Game boycott.

Some players said they were not want to see an encore of 1981, when the "only-in-season" strike in history shut down the game for seven weeks. The owners declared half-season winners and subsequent divisional playoffs—an action some of the players vehemently oppose.

"I don't want a half season," Butch Wynegar of the New York Yankees said in proposing an Aug. 15 walkout that would preclude such an arrangement. "July 15 is a hair too early and Sept. 15 is much too late."

"I'd favor a strike date sometime in late August when the pennant races are interesting and TV revenues are starting to cover more crucial games," said John Franco of the Cincinnati Reds.

Most players, regardless of when they felt a strike would be in their best interest, said setting a firm date for a walkout would be beneficial to their cause.

"Strike now if that's what you have to do," said George Frazier of the Chicago Cubs. "You could play for 10 years without an agreement."

"If we don't set a date we'll be playing until 1990 before we get this thing settled," said Terry Kennedy of the San Diego Padres.

Ortiz, Virgil of the Philadelphia Phillies said, "I think mid-August would be a good time."

Some would like to see an earlier walkout.

"I would favor a midsummer strike to force the owners' hand and make them settle," said Dave LaPointe of the San Francisco Giants. "Otherwise, it could go on forever."

A late-season strike could work for the players, some insist, reasoning that they will have been paid for virtually the entire season, while the owners would lose valuable television revenue should postseason play be curtailed.

"We'd be foolish to strike during the season because then we wouldn't get paid," said Graig Nettles of the San Diego Padres. "A postseason strike might only hurt 100 players instead of 50."

'Understand we're not greedy'

NEW YORK (AP) — Quotes from players about whether to strike in contract negotiations with baseball club owners:

ATLANTA BRAVES — Gene Garber: "I don't want to strike, but if that's the only alternative the owners give that I want we'll have to do it."

BALTIMORE ORIOLES — Rick Dempsey: "I'm not continuing the season as long as I have hope. I don't generate into another year. Could it be the owners don't want to negotiate? Are they trying to rush us in the hopes that we'll panic and make a deal?"

Twigg leads pack

In Ore-Ida

BOISE (AP) — Olympic silver medalist—Rebecca Twigg—took the overall lead in the first leg of the Ore-Ida Women's Challenge bicycle race Monday.

The 22-year-old Seattle native won the mountainous, 39-mile Mores Creek race from Boise to Idaho City in 1 hour, 45 minutes and 47 seconds.

Sue Golder, 39, of Auckland, New Zealand, was second with 1:45:57 and Rebecca Daughton, 27, of Carmel, New York, was third with 1:46:07.

Ruthie Matthes of Ketchum finished 12th in the first leg with a time of 1:46:17, while Carol Braun of Ketchum finished 30th in 1:51:22.

The seven-day women's race runs through the rugged Sawtooth Mountains of central Idaho. The international field of 72 riders includes the first U.S. appearance by the Chinese National Team.

On Wednesday, the race will cover a route from Stanley to Ketchum, while on Thursday there will be 12th time trials in the lower Wood River Valley area around Pico. Friday's event is a circuit race at Elkhorn at Sun Valley.

Today's competition is a 48-mile race from Lowman to Stanley.

Pinecrest links favored in state women's am

By LARRY HOVEY

IDAHO FALLS — If history truly repeats, then Karen Darrington may be the one to win the Idaho Women's Amateur this year. She has won the title three times in the past—1978, 1980 and 1981. Darrington, 34, of Boise, is the defending champion and will be in the field at the Pinecrest Municipal Golf Course in Idaho Falls today.

Darrington recently, when she won the title, was in the lead at the end of the tournament. She was in the lead at the end of the tournament. She was in the lead at the end of the tournament.

Another women's tournament is Gooding. "I understand it is a long course with a lot of tree trouble." The latter is an old statement. Pinecrest is exactly what the name implies—a succession of large, colorful, pine trees along the fairway edges. And being spruce, the trees radiate branches out from ground level. Adding to those problems is the length of the par-77 course, and there is considerable up-and-down in the links' topography than you would expect by looking at the surrounding area.

There are two premiums on the course, usually being the main attraction. Darrington has been considered by many as the premier approach to the course. Both Smith and Darrington are considered for the title. Darrington has been in the lead for the past few years. She has been in the lead for the past few years. play by winning the USGA seniors' title. "She was entered but then had to withdraw," reported host Professional Tim Reinke. A couple of former champions, Virginia Jundheim of Twin Falls and Bev Mullins of Boise, will be on hand if the co-favorites falter. Another consistent top five player the past few years has been Lynn Tiger of Boise. Burley will be represented by Sergej Sorenson and Terrie Simpson.

The sponsoring Idaho State Women's Golf Association also will conduct its annual meeting, at which time setting for the 1986 and 1987 tournaments probably will be finalized.

Muni's Hamblin, Boise's Smith forge new course records

IDAHO FALLS — Muni's (male) record book is cluttered with names of winners of the Idaho Women's Amateur. The best record is held by the Pinecrest Municipal Golf Course in Idaho Falls today.

Smith, the defending champion, set a new record for the course today. She was in the lead at the end of the tournament. She was in the lead at the end of the tournament.

Some NFL veterans threatening to boycott training camps

CHICAGO (AP) — Some top National Football League veterans in the option year of their contracts might not report to training camp to protest the club owners' attempt to "turn back the economic hands of time," a group of player agents said Monday.

"We're finding a lot of resistance (to negotiating contracts) for both rookies and veterans and we're considering having those veteran players not report to their clubs until they are signed," said Frank Murtha, one of about 30 agents or their representatives attending the unique meeting.

He said there are 127 NFL veterans among the 23 clubs who are entering the final year of their contracts, and they might be encouraged to stay away from training camp en masse.

Most clubs open training camps in mid-July. Murtha, the group's spokesman, said all of the agents representing the NFL's first-round picks as well as many veterans, gathered "to plan strategy . . . and what we as a group need to do to negotiate better contracts. . . . There is a widespread attempt (by management) to roll back salaries, on the average, to 1983 levels."

He said the salary offers to both top draft choices and veterans are 40 percent below similar offers a year ago. Murtha said the NFL owners were trying to "hold the line on salaries for all 336 newcomers (and) they are trying to reduce salary escalations for all the veterans whose contracts are coming up."

cornerback Richard Johnson, chosen by Houston in the first round. Also at the meeting were: Jim Steiner, whose clients include Chicago's No. 1 pick, William Perry of Clemson, and Bears' veteran defensive lineman Dan Hampton and Steve McMichael; Leigh Steinberg, who represents Atlanta Falcons quarterback Steve Bartkowski; and representatives of Mark McCor-nick's Cleveland-based International Marketing Group, whose clients include Lomas Brown, picked by Detroit, and Kevin Allen, selected by the Philadelphia Eagles. Murtha said average first-round salary offers are down to $125,000 from $175,000 last year, and bonus offers have dropped to $300,000-$350,000 from $850,000 in 1984.

mistake? I'm quite sure we won't make and make that mistake. Don't people realize how much it cost both sides — and the fans — in the last strike?"

Wayne Gross — "A strike date would make matters go quicker. In 1981 they should have learned we're serious. If they realize that, then the situation might possibly be resolved without a strike."

Gary Roenicke — "You have to set a date. You cannot keep playing with a strike date being set. When you set the date, an agreement will — or should be — made."

Rich Dancy — "1981 might have taught everybody something, or at least should have. I don't want a strike, but I'll support one."

Mike Boddicker — "Everyone wants to be optimistic, but that is such a naive word. If both sides can't come to an agreement very soon, I'd support a strike, but I don't want one."

Lenn Sakata — "When you set a strike date, everybody knows your mean business."

Tippy Martinez — "Nobody wants a strike, naturally. We all saw what happened in '81 and it seems as though we have almost the same proposals on the table. If the owners are serious about opening their books then we should take a look at them. I don't even know how many sets of books they have, however. All I know is that no one benefits from a strike — not the players, not the owners and certainly not the fans."

Lee Lacy — "I have the utmost faith in the commissioner of baseball. He has solved so many problems in the world of sports that I don't think he can't solve this one also. If anybody can pull the two groups together, he can — I can't believe he would go from Man of the Year to Strike Man of the Year."

Cal Ripken Jr. — "In labor negotiations, such as they are, a strike date has to be set. Most negotiations seem to go down to the last minute anyway, so a strike date may have more of an effect on getting things done. I really don't believe anyone wants to think of a strike."

Jim Dwyer — "We can't keep going on like we are. It's almost like 1981. Setting a strike date is the logical solution."

CALIFORNIA ANGELS
 Jim Slaton — "I don't think anyone really wants a strike that bad. But the situation seems to reach a point where you've got to do something to get things done."

Geoff Zahn — "It seems unless there is deadline, there's no progress. We're involved in one of the greatest industries and to have to even talk of a strike is ridiculous."

CHICAGO CUBS
 Chris Speller — "From all indications, the owners are not willing to negotiate. It would be ideal to have both sides go into a room and not come out until they have reached an agreement."

Larry Bowa — "If there are no ramifications, keep playing until an agreement is reached. But problems could come up and we'd have to take another step rather than put it off."

Ron Cey — "Nobody wants to go out, but the only way to negotiate is to set a date."

Covey Lopes — "I'd say keep playing if they had an interest in getting an agreement signed. If not, there's only one thing to do."

George Frazier — "Strike now if that's what you have to do; You could play for 10 years without an agreement."

Warren Brusstar — "It seems the only way to get them to negotiate is to threaten a strike."

Larry Sorensen — "To keep playing makes no sense. If we keep playing and they ride it out, we have no hammer. Strike now."

Rick Sutcliffe — "I'm not in favor of anything that keeps us from playing. I was not surprised by the strike last time. I would be surprised if there is one this time."

Ryne Sandberg — "Keep playing, but we have to reach an agreement this season. We can't let it drag on."

Richie Hebner — "Keep playing. I don't want a strike. I've been in two other ones and it's no fun. I don't mind digging graves for the old man in the winter but not during the summer time."

CHICAGO WHITE SOX
 Ron Kille — "Reach an agreement or strike."

Carlton Fisk — "I would rather not strike. I would hope things would be intelligently resolved."

Ozzie Guillen — "I don't want a strike, but if we go to go, we go to go. If they don't go, I don't go."

Juan Agosto — "Play until August or late September, and if it is not settled, then strike."

Amundson, mates two-time Minico

Legion baseball

JEROME — Todd Amundson pitched a four-hitter and had four hits in five trips to the plate Monday night to spark Jerome to a non-conference American Legion doubleheader sweep of Minico.

The Tigers took the first game 2-0 and the nightcap 9-5, improving their season record to 16-7.

Amundson went 2-for-2 in the plate in the opener, with a run and a run batted in, but it was a bases-loaded walk by Minico reliever Mark Sams in the bottom of the seventh that gave the Tigers what proved to be the winning margin, a 3-1 lead. The Sage scored a single run in the top of the seventh, but stranded two runners when he game ended.

Shane Jund was also 2-for-2 at the plate in the opener.

In the nightcap, Amundson allowed just one hard-hit ball — Scott Asson's first-inning double that ignited a three-run rally — in handcutting Minico. Jerome's big inning came in the third, with a six-run outburst keyed by four extra-base hits.

Amundson was 2-for-3 in the second game, while Tracy Black had two hits in three tries and three RBIs.

AL: California takes five-game lead in West

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — California's Doug DeCinces was anxious to make a contribution Monday night but for nine innings he didn't get a chance.

However, the game with the Milwaukee Brewers lasted 11 innings and DeCinces' RBI single gave the Angels a 5-2 victory.

"I would much rather have done it earlier, but there just wasn't the opportunity," said DeCinces, who didn't come to bat with anyone on base until he faced reliever Bob Gibson with two on and one out in the 11th.

"I was just looking to hit the ball hard and get an off-speed breaking pitch," added DeCinces, whose fifth, game-winning RBI improved California's record in extra-inning games to 7-1.

"We're in first place even though we're just starting to get the ball. You can feel the consistency throughout the lineup," DeCinces said.

The victory gave the Angels a 5-game lead over second-place Oakland in the American League West.

Brian Downing led off the Angels' 11th, with a walk off Gibson, 6-5, who took over after Danny Darwin went hitless after three tied the score with three hits in the sixth.

The victory was Sabers' seventh in his last eight decisions and gave the Royals their first triumph in New York since the conclusion of the famous pine-tar game on Aug. 18, 1983.

Relief ace Donnie Moore, 6-3, retired the final two batters in the top of the 11th to pick up the victory.

It took 5 hours, 12 minutes, 19 innings for Expos to top Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Following Sunday's 19-inning, 6-3 loss to the Montreal Expos, Houston pitcher Dave Smith could remember a more pleasant extra-inning game and Frank DiPino had trouble remembering the start of the game.

"Who started this 'game anyway'?" asked DiPino, who pitched three hitless innings. "It was mind-boggling."

The Astros dueted the San Diego Padres for 20 innings in 1980 with Smith emerging as the winner.

"But that was different because we won," Smith said. "I had to pitch three innings that night but I got the victory. This one was really frustrating."

Baseball

Fred Youmans, the last of five Montreal pitchers, got the victory and in a bittersweet quirk, was on his way back to the minors after his first major league victory.

"I feel good about my first major league victory but it's disappointing to have to go back to the minors now," said Youmans, whose departure will make room for pitcher Bill

Gullickson to come off the disabled list.

Houston starter Joe Niekro singled to centerfield in the sixth inning, scoring Jerry Mumphrey for a 2-0 lead. Each team added runs in the 18th. Astros first baseman Enos Cabell's fielding error in the 19th finally allowed the winning run to score.

The game lasted five hours, 12 minutes and was the fourth longest in Astros history. Houston's longest game went 21 innings April 15, 1968 and ended in a 1-0 Astros victory over the New York Mets.

Houston Manager Bob Lillis utilized every non-pitcher in the game and even started pitcher Bob Knepper as a pinch hitter in the 18th inning with the potential tying run on second base. Knepper struck out.

"This was my longest game," Houston second baseman Bill Doran said. "I'm beat. But I feel sorry for the umpires because at least we got to go off the field every half-inning. They got no break."

Fewer than 2,000 of the paid crowd of 14,493 fans remained for the finish.

Boston 2 Oakland 1

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Bruce Hurst, who brought a 5.56 earned run average into the game, scattered seven hits in 7½ shutout innings and right fielder Dwight Evans threw out the potential tying run at the plate to end the game as the Boston Red Sox nipped the Oakland Athletics 2-1 Monday night.

Hurst, 57, walked one and struck out six before Steve Crawford came on and earned his second save thanks to Evans' throw.

The A's trailed 2-0 when Donnie Hill opened the bottom of the ninth with a single and scored on Carney Lansford's double. Pinch hitter Bruce Bochte singled but Evans gunned Lansford trying to score.

Boston got its first run in the fifth inning when Glenn Hoffman singled, went to third on an errant pickoff attempt by A's starter Chris Codrillo, 8-5, and scored on Evans' infield out. Third baseman Lansford fielded Evans' high chopper but had no play on Hoffman at the plate.

Codrillo's wild pickoff throw snapped a 90-inning errorless streak by the A's, a team record.

The Red Sox made it 2-0 in the top of the ninth. With one out, Marty Barrett's single chased Codrillo and Evans greeted Jay Howell with a single that sent Barrett to third. He scored on Wade Boggs' single.

Kansas City Royals defeated New York 5-2 Monday night and snapped a nine-game losing streak at Yankee Stadium.

Bret Saberhagen, 9-4, pitched a five-hitter to end the Yankees' four-game winning streak and held them hitless after they tied the score with three hits in the sixth.

The victory was Saberhagen's seventh in his last eight decisions and gave the Royals their first triumph in New York since the conclusion of the famous pine-tar game on Aug. 18, 1983.

Chicago 9 Detroit 3

DETROIT (AP) — Carlton Fisk slammed a pair of home runs, including his fourth career grand slam, and drove in five runs Monday night to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 9-4

Flak, who entered the game with 19 homers, two behind American League leader Dave Kingman, belted his first of the night and 250th of his career with two out in the second inning to give the White Sox a 1-0 lead against Dan Petry, 10-7. Then, he capped a six-run sixth inning rally with a bases-loaded shot.

Aurelio Lopez as Chicago took a commanding 8-3 lead.

Toronto 4 Seattle 0

SEATTLE (AP) — Dave Stieb, the American League earned run leader, pitched seven shutout innings and Ernie Whit broke up a scoreless game with a seventh-inning triple to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a 4-0 victory over the Seattle Mariners on Monday night.

Stieb, 9-5, walked one, struck out five and lowered his American League leading earned run average to 1.84. In his last 11 starts, the right-hander has allowed just 10 earned runs for an ERA of 1.04. Jim Acker pitched the last two innings for Toronto, allowing two hits.

Minnesota 7 Baltimore 4

BALTIMORE (AP) — Mark Salas singled home the lead run in the 10th inning with his third hit and the Minnesota Twins went on to defeat the Baltimore Orioles 7-4 Monday night.

Salas, who snapped a four-game losing streak, scored three times after Baltimore reliever Don Aase, 5-4, retired the first two batters.

Gary Gastell, who hit a two-run homer in the second inning, beat out an infield single, pinch hitter Mike Stenhouse walked and Salas followed with his second RBI of the game.

Cleveland 4 Texas 0

CLEVELAND (AP) — Neal Heaton fired a six-hitter for his first shutout in more than a year and Carmen Castillo hit a solo home run Monday night to help the Cleveland Indians defeat the Texas Rangers 4-0.

Heaton, 5-10, snapped a personal six-game losing streak, striking out five and walking two for his second complete game of the year. His last shutout was June 21, 1984, against Minnesota.

After Sammy Stewart replaced Aase, Kirby Puckett walked to load the bases and Mickey Hatcher blooped a two-run single.

NL: Mets get their seventh straight win

CINCINNATI (AP) — New York Mets Manager Dave Johnson isn't surprised that first baseman Keith Hernandez is starting to get hot. He can't explain why it's taken so long, however.

Hernandez had four hits, including a two-run homer and a tie-breaking single, to lead the Mets to their seventh consecutive victory Monday night with a 7-5 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Hernandez, a lifetime .300 hitter, came in the game batting .100. But his performance in the last half-dozen games indicates he might be in a reversal.

"He's been hitting the ball well—the last couple of nights," Johnson said. "He's needed that to get his average up. You know he's going to hit .300. He just hasn't had his hot streak. He usually has it before now."

Hernandez can't explain his weak hitting this season, either, and he's cautious about pronouncing himself on the right track.

"It's only been five games," he said. "You just take it one day at a time. I'm hitting third in the lineup. I've got to hit; the third hitter has got to be productive."

The entire Mets lineup produced Monday night, repping 13 hits and four homers. The game was won by Howard Johnson and George Foster, who also homered to sustain the Mets' longest winning streak of the season. "It's been a long time coming," Dave Johnson said. "But when everybody is healthy and swinging the bat well, that's what happens."

Chicago 6 San Diego 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Keith Moreland gave Chicago a 4-2 lead last May 5 with a two-run homer in a suspended game and the Cubs got another two-run homer from Leon Durham on Monday for a 6-3 victory over the San Diego Padres.

The resumption of the suspended game preceded the regularly scheduled game between the two teams.

Play was resumed in the top of the seventh inning of the game that had been suspended last spring because of darkness.

Durham connected with his 11th homer in the eighth inning off loser Luis DeLeon, 0-3.

San Diego 8 Chicago 4

CHICAGO (AP) — Kevin McReynolds drove in four runs with a home run, triple and double Monday to lead the San Diego Padres to an 8-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

McReynolds hit a two-run homer in the second inning, tripled and scored on a sacrifice fly by Garry Templeton in the sixth and doubled in two more runs in the seventh.

The Padres also scored three runs in the fourth when they took the lead for good. Steve Garvey doubled, went to third on a single by Grag Nettles, and scored on a single by Terry Kennedy. Carmelo Martinez singled home Nettles and Templeton singled to drive in Kennedy and extend his hitting streak to 12 games.

Atlanta 7 Montreal 1

ATLANTA (AP) — Dale Murphy hit his 21st home run of the season and Rick Mahler scattered seven hits for his 12th victory Monday night as the Atlanta Braves broke a five-game losing streak with a 7-1 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The Braves, who had not scored in their last 27 innings against the Expos, scored four times in the first inning, two on Murphy's homer.

MILT Thompson led off with a single, stole second and scored when Murphy sent a 1-1 offering over the right-field fence. Murphy entered the game tied with Los Angeles' Pedro Guerrero for the National League home run lead.

Chris Chambliss and Ken Oberkell then hit consecutive singles and scored on Glenn Hubbard's double off Bill Gullickson, 7-6, who was making his first appearance since coming off the disabled list.

Los Angeles 4 Pittsburgh 3

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela allowed eight hits, but only two after the third inning, and Dave Anderson hit a key two-run single Monday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers fended off the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3.

Valenzuela, 9-8, won for the fourth time in his last five decisions, blanking Pittsburgh over the final six innings after the Pirates had taken a 3-2 lead in the third.

Mike Sciosola walked and Steve Sax singled with one out in the Los Angeles fifth. The runners moved up on a wild pitch by Jose DeLeon, 2-12, and after Valenzuela flew out, Anderson struck his single into left field to tie the Dodgers ahead 4-3.

St. Louis 6 San Francisco 1

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Joaquín Andujar scattered 12 hits for his major league-leading 15th victory Monday night to lead the St. Louis Cardinals over the San Francisco Giants 6-1.

Andujar, 15-3, test his shutout bid in the club which has led the National League bases with two out on singles by Chris Brown, Scot Thompson and Rick Adams, and pinch-hitter Rob Deer drew a walk to force home a run.

Andujar then struck out Tom Rostenke to end the inning. Andujar, who pitched his ninth complete game, also chipped in with an RBI single in the sixth.

The Cardinals rapped 14 hits off Dave LaPoint, 3-8, and three relievers.

Philadelphia 7 Houston 4

HOUSTON (AP) — Glenn Wilson drove in three runs with three singles, keying a 20-hit attack Monday night that powered the Philadelphia Phillies over the Houston Astros 7-4.

Way Hayes, Ozzie Virgil and Rick Schu also contributed three hits apiece as the Phillies roughed up Mark Knudson and reliever Mike Madden. Knudson, who was making his major league debut, gave up all seven runs on 14 hits in seven innings as Philadelphia took a 7-0 lead.

Charles Hudson, 4-7, gave up seven hits in 7½ innings for the victory. The Astros scored three times in the ninth before Kent Tekulovic got the final three outs for his seventh save.

Historian Gervase Jackson inspects a bust of the goddess Aphrodite bound for America

Families lend out heirlooms

British art to visit America

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
The Associated Press

LONDON (AP) — More than 200 Britons have been persuaded to part with heirlooms for a major Washington exhibit, relinquishing briefly treasures that the noble families of Britain have held onto for centuries despite wars, depressions and the inheritance tax.

The 4th Baron St. Oswald, Rowland-Denys-Guy Winn, had turned down a request to lend the Norfolk Priory doll's house. But it will, after all, be leaving his Yorkshire mansion for the "Treasures of Britain" exhibition, opening at the National Gallery of Art on Nov. 3.

Lord St. Oswald died in December and exhibition curator Gervase Jackson-Stops said, "We tried again and his brother Derek, who inherited the title, said of course we could have the doll's house. We were all delighted."

"The doll's house is a complete representation of an early 18th-century house. Its decoration and furniture is complete and unaltered since it was made over 200 years ago."

It had been just about the only refusal that the organizers encountered in cajoling the nobility to lend from their great country houses to the 19-week free show.

Jackson-Stops, 38, an art historian and architectural adviser to the National Trust, Britain's main conservation society, got two years' leave to search out the finest things for Washington and to help design the exhibition.

"There has never been one so ambitious, covering such a wide timespan and in such detail," he said.

The 220 lenders are parting with precious paintings, tapestries, arms and armor, furniture, jewels, porcelain and silver on condition that everything is back in place for the start of the 1986 visiting season.

Not all the lenders are as wealthy as their ancestors.

Most cannot bear to sell off their heirlooms, although some are so strapped for cash that they can't repair the roof without help from the government. Others may plead for the National Trust to take over completely.

Jackson-Stops, with Galliard F.

Ravenel and Mark Lelthauer of the National Gallery, designed the rooms in the exhibition to suit the objects, so that visitors will have some idea of what it's like to live with the treasures in a country house.

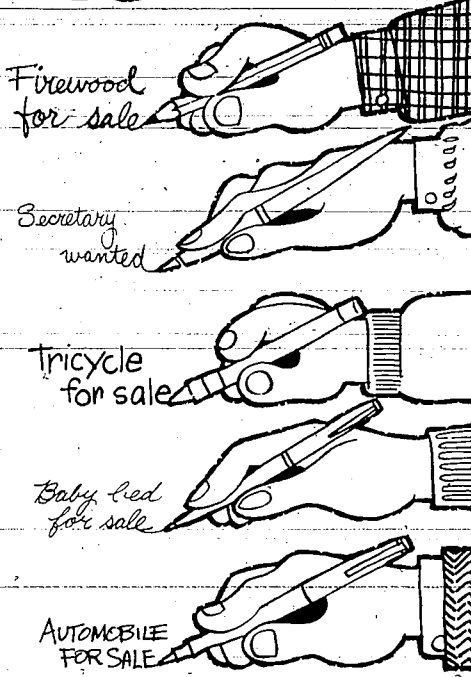

Among Jackson-Stops' discoveries was the great bed of Calke (pronounced cork), a mansion in Derbyshire which had just come into the possession of the National Trust because the family trustees couldn't find 8 million pounds ($10.4 million) in taxes.

The bed dates from the early 18th century and can be taken apart.

It was in several boxes and had apparently never been assembled. A daughter of King George II gave it to a bridesmaid, Lady Frances Harpur of Calke, in the early 18th century. With it were the original embroidered silk bed hangings made in China, their colors fresh as new.

"No home is complete without a bed and I was because an exhibition about homes wouldn't be complete without one," said J. Carter Brown, director of the National Gallery of Art.

Comet belt may be closer to Earth

By LEE SIGGEL
AP Science Writer

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — The swirling cloud of comets thought to surround the solar system may extend much farther eastward than scientists suspected and contain 10 to 100 times as many comets as previously believed, a NASA astronomer said Tuesday.

"We're reexamining now there are far more comets in the cloud surrounding the solar system than we thought previously, an area that extends out just in a very distant shell-like cloud but actually extend (in a belt-like cloud) from just beyond the orbit of Neptune," Paul Weissman said.

Based on analysis of the orbits of many comets, most astronomers believe the distance from the solar system, the nearly spherical cloud of roughly 10 trillion comets — named the Oort cloud after the astronomer who first proposed it — located between 4 1/2 trillion and 8 trillion or more miles from the sun.

While the cloud has never been seen, astronomers believe it occasionally is disrupted by passing stars, sending comets hurtling into our solar system.

Weissman said accumulating evidence suggests the cloud is much bigger and denser, containing 10 trillion to 100 trillion comets and extending outward from a point beyond Neptune, or about 4 billion miles from the sun.

Weissman, an astronomer at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., outlined evidence supporting the existence of a so-called "inner Oort cloud" during the annual meeting of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific.

He described the inner cloud as a flat belt of comets. With increasing distance from the solar system, it gradually spreads out to join with the outer, more spherical cloud, he added.

The existence of an inner cloud of comets is consistent with the accepted theory that our solar system was created when a massive cloud of dust and gas condensed to form our sun and the planets 4 1/2 billion years ago, Weissman said. It is possible the distant parts of the dust cloud congealed into a cloud of comets, each about 5 miles across.

The existence of the inner Oort cloud also resolves two outstanding problems: unexplained variations in the orbit of Neptune and an excess of craters on the moons of Jupiter and Saturn, Weissman said.

Support for the inner comet cloud theory came from observations of the Infrared Astronomical Satellite, which detected huge discs of dust surrounding several distant stars. Astronomers believe these discs may be early solar systems in the process of formation.

Photographs of the dust disc around the star Beta Pictoris show it has about the same mass and extends roughly the same distance from that star as the inner "disc of comets" we've been describing around our own solar system but can't see," Weissman said.

Seal's bad eyesight won't affect his showmanship

By FRANCIS X. QUINN
The Associated Press

ROCKPORT, Maine (AP) — Andre the Seal, whose harbor tricks and coastal migrations have entertained tourists for two decades, is virtually blind with cataracts but is otherwise healthy and the show should go on, says his trainer and his veterinarian.

"Obviously, the sight had been deteriorating for a while," said veterinarian Victor J. Stenglass, who believes the seal made his annual swim up the New England coast from Cape Cod this spring in almost total darkness.

"He obviously made it almost blind this year," he said. "He's made it with really minimal eyesight."

Though impaired, the 24-year-old seal continues to put on a daily afternoon exhibition at Rockport Harbor with trainer Harry Goodridge.

"He can see shadows. He probably sees a little bit better under water than above water," Ste-inglass said.

Treatment is untried, he said, because seals continue to navigate ably, "still catching fish, still mating, still having live pups."

"He can do very well with them," Stenglass said.

Andre winters in Connecticut at the Mystic Marine Life Aquarium, where his sight problems "became more noticeable this spring before he left," said spokeswoman Laura Kezer.

"Where it became really obvious was when Harry got him home," after the seal's six-day swim from Provincetown on Cape Cod to Rockport, she said.

"Once in a while, he catches a flash of something," Goodridge said after Wednesday's show, which drew more than 100 spectators and packed the tiny municipal parking lot with cars from as far away as Washington.

But for the most part, Goodridge said Andre "won't follow a fish in front of his face."

"If I throw something out and it just lays there, he can't find it."

Girl, 13, awarded an Oxford degree in mathematics

OXFORD, England (AP) — A 13-year-old girl was awarded a mathematics degree at Oxford University on Thursday after two years of study. Before that, she had never gone to school.

Ruth Lawrence learned the good news when exam results were posted at the 800-year-old university in central England. She was one of two math students who received special commendation from the examiners.

Ruth finished college in two years instead of the normal three, but she cannot pick up her degree until next year because the university has a three-year residency requirement.

She said she would be staying in Oxford for at least another three years to do research toward a doctorate.

In an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp., Ruth said: "I don't think I am a genius. I think I've got out of a lot of hard work. It's not sort of born in you. I think you just have to work hard and have good teachers."

Before college, her father, Harry Lawrence, taught Ruth at home.

Her tutor at Oxford, Mary Lunn, told the BBC that Ruth was now a better mathematician than she.
