Senate approves interstate handgun sales

By LARRY MARGASAK
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate, in a major victory for gun owners, dealers and the National Rifle Association, voted 79-15 Tuesday night for a bill that would allow interstate sales of handguns — currently banned under federal law.

were needed to eliminate red tape for licensed gun dealers and collectors and prevent prosecution of dealers for recent-keeping errors.

Hawaii, for the waiting period to allow police background checks was killed by a 71-23 vote, which killed the proposal.

He noted that the omnibus bill requires a face-to-face transaction between the purchaser from one state and the dealer located in another state.

and those who renounced U.S. citizenship. Dealers can be convicted for knowingly selling to someone in one of those categories; a buyer can be prosecuted for falsely stating he is eligible to buy the gun.

Folkinga tops list of GOP legislative nominees

TWIN FALLS — Cella Folkinga, a 27-year-old Buhl Republican, is the Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee's top choice to replace Rep. Lawrence Knigge of Filer, who resigned his seat in the Idaho Legislature last month.

Second and third on the list of proposed replacements for Knigge were farmer Doug Jones, who lives south of Filer, and Buhl Chevrolet dealer Dave Munroe.

meeting, Ken Arrington, passed out three separate ballots for the three spots on the list to be sent to the governor and gave each successive spot on the list to the person with a plurality of the votes.

She has been a Republican precinct committeewoman, a delegate to the Republican state and national conventions, and currently serves as the secretary of the Republican Central Committee for the state.

She told the 40 precinct committee members she would support Folkinga.

Stockman resigns as budget chief to enter career in private business

WASHINGTON — David A. Stockman, the brass architect of President Reagan's campaign to shrink the size of the federal government, resigned as director of the Office of Management and Budget on Tuesday.

Officials said Stockman, 38, would remain as budget director until August, allowing him time to tend his expertise as the president and congressional leaders try to untangle the current budget deadlock on Capitol Hill before Congress takes its annual August recess.

Regional airport board in quest of more operating money

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport Board is studying ways to come up with operating money, without resorting to the cost-cutting measures being suggested by the city of Twin Falls.

the economic benefits of the airport, and the Sun Valley resort area often depends upon the airport for its winter tourist trade, board members said at a Tuesday meeting.

would require a levy of less than one mill, if spread across the entire county, airport officials said. It would need a two-thirds majority to pass.

the airport may find itself in the position of having to divert a flight, Showtwell said. The city has proposed that the airport cut costs in four areas: if the city ends up providing the sole tax-support of the facility.

The board discussed charging fees for bulk fuel brought to the airport for distribution or raising hangar rents as alternate ways to raise revenue.

Firefighters face yet another blaze

By The Associated Press

Wary firefighters who have tackled a week and more of menacing blazes faced down another huge fire Tuesday as it roared out of the foothills and stampeded towards the homes of 4,500 people sent fleeing from the Northern California community of Los Gatos.

The blaze—consumed 14,000 acres, destroyed four homes and edged toward 2,000 others in Los Gatos, 45 miles southeast of San Francisco, in the latest chapter in the West's fiery history of the past two weeks.

Nine blazes still burn out of control in California and hundreds of other fires have scarred parts of 11 other states and three Canadian provinces.

The number of acres burned would stretch over 700 square miles, an area larger than the state of Rhode Island, 1,214 square miles.

California alone has more than a quarter of the burned acreage and damage is expected to reach 50 million. The blazes have killed three people and leveled 150 homes in the state.

California Gov. George Deukmejian late Tuesday declared Santa Clara, Santa Cruz and Monterey counties in a state of emergency, a necessary step before the state can apply for federal disaster aid for the areas.

Thunderstorms were expected in southeast California Wednesday, the National Weather Service said, but a spokeswoman was unsure if they would reach to the populated Ventura County or if they would just bring more lightning—which might touch off more blazes.

Two men were arrested after agents negotiated for and received delivery of 740 tablets of the drug, also known as MDMA, for $12.50 each, said Phil Jordan, local agent in charge of the DEA office.

Both suspects, who were arrested Tuesday afternoon, would be charged with possession and sale of MDMA.

1st 'Ecstasy' drug arrest made

DALLAS (AP) — The Drug Enforcement Administration said Tuesday that its agents and Dallas police had made the first arrest in the nation for possession and sale of the drug known as ecstasy, which was outlawed July 1.

Two men were arrested after agents negotiated for and received delivery of 740 tablets of the drug, also known as MDMA, for $12.50 each, said Phil Jordan, local agent in charge of the DEA office.

Both suspects, who were arrested Tuesday afternoon, would be charged with possession and sale of MDMA.

Unions approve GE contract

NEW YORK (AP) — A three-year contract covering 55,000 General Electric workers nationwide was approved Tuesday by more than 70 percent of the rank-and-file members, officials said.

Of the 31,724 votes cast 11 p.m. Tuesday, 22,574 were in favor, or 71 percent, said Jerry Borstel, a spokesman for the International Union of Electronic, Salaried and Machine Workers. Twenty-nine percent, or 9,150 voters, rejected the pact, he said.

Sixty-six of the 69 local union chapters voted in favor of the pact, with rejection voted by Lynn, Mass., and two other unions that Borstel declined to identify.

Creation ruling questioned

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louisiana's attorney general said Tuesday he would ask the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals to reconsider its decision that the state's creation science law is unconstitutional.

The 1981 law, which required creationism be given equal weight with the teaching of evolution in public schools, has never been enforced. A similar Arkansas law was struck down in 1982.

Attorney General William Guste said the federal appeals court ruling Monday ignored the fact of the issue, which he said included whether creation science was non-religious and whether it was as non-religious as evolution.

Guns

"Some (states) may have more respect for individual rights rather than others," he said.

The National Coalition to Ban Handguns said "the Senate action 'evictees the Gun Control Act of 1968' and said lawmakers were responding to the National Rifle Association's "big dollar contributions and high pressure lobbying tactics."

"It's a day of shame when the NRA's tainted blood money speaks louder than the victims of handgun violence," the group's president, Michael K. Beard, said in a statement Tuesday night.

"We applaud Sen. McClure's overwhelming victory for America's 80 million law abiding gun owners," John Snyder, chief lobbyist for the Citizens Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms said after the Senate vote. "We have been working and waiting for this for 17 years."

The proposed revisions to the Gun Control Act of 1968 marked the first time the Senate had a full-scale gun control debate since 1972. The gun control issue has been absent from the House floor ever longer.

Congress' new focus of attention is a bill described in its title as a measure to "protect firearms owners' constitutional rights, civil liberties and rights to privacy."

Senate sponsors, with support from the National Rifle Association and the Reagan administration, said the measure would stop prosecution of legitimate gun dealers and collectors who "traded their 'paperwork,' while allowing law enforcement authorities to pursue criminals. It would strengthen penalties for those using guns to commit crimes.

Gun control organizations and their Senate supporters said the legislation would make it easier to buy handguns and more difficult to trace them. Andrew Kenzile, a spokesman for the National Rifle Association, said the bill would "correct a lot of the over-broad provisions" of the 1968 act and "direct federal law enforcement officials toward applying the law to genuine violent criminals."

Watermelon testing begins

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — State inspectors began random tests for pesticide contamination on 20 million watermelons waiting for harvest in Central Valley fields Tuesday, while grocers and wholesalers were at work smashing an estimated 1 million suspect melons.

State Food and Agriculture Director Clare Berryhill said he hoped the field testing program would clear the way to resume the sale of certified safe California watermelons this week in more than 20,000 grocery stores statewide.

President OKs Liberty coins

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Tuesday signed legislation authorizing the minting of about 35 million commemorative coins honoring the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island.

Sale of the coins could raise about $137 million for the restoration of the statue, Liberty Island and Ellis Island, where millions of immigrants came into the United States between 1892 and 1954.

Three Liberty coins will be minted: 500,000 gold coins that will sell for about $150, 10 million silver dollars that will sell for about $20 and 25 million half-dollars priced at about $4. All will bear the image of the statue and the date 1986, the year of the statue's centennial. Included in the price is a surcharge of between $2 and $3 that will go to the restoration project.

Bolivian election on schedule

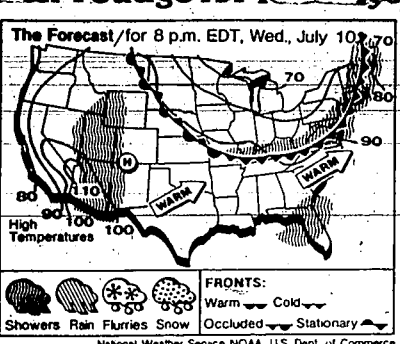

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — A spokesman for President Hernan Siles Zuzar's center-left government said late Tuesday that it would go ahead with scheduled presidential elections this Sunday.

Siles Zuzar had asked Congress Monday to approve his request to delay the balloting until Sept. 15, saying the time was needed for the Electoral Court to expand voter registration. But most of the political parties indicated they would vote against the delay.

Fires

With Idaho just one of 11 western states under a state of flames that has mobilized over 10,000 firefighters, officials at the Boise Intergovernmental Fire Center, the government's national fire control command post, said they have taken under consideration the possibility of requesting assistance from the military or state National Guard.

But while calling the current western outbreak "the largest fire mobilization ever," center spokesman Bill Bishop said requesting military assistance is still only an option.

"With the state of the situation we've got, we're looking at some pretty dire options," Bishop said. "We're stressed and we're stretched. There's no two ways about it. But we're trying to utilize those forces we have now. But we are asking the question, 'What do we do after that?'"

Idaho's Dept. of Land Management Director Delmar Vall said that while use of National Guardsmen to fight Idaho range fires has been discussed, that would take a declaration by the governor and an extended time to assemble men who are not trained in fire-fighting. "In a situation where time is of the essence—300 acres can burn within a half hour."

Stockman

Baldrige did not have any discussions with the president about taking the post. John A. Svahn, the president's top domestic policy adviser also has been mentioned as a possible successor.

From the beginning of Reagan's first term in 1981, Stockman was the administration's whiz kid. He was the youngest man to hold Cabinet rank in 150 years when he was sworn in at the age of 34, after serving from 1977 until 1981 as the Republican congressman from Michigan's Fourth District.

Stockman soon established himself as a workaholic who often worked around the clock in a single-minded quest to pare government spending. But just as important, he often functioned as the administration's lightning rod, taking the heat for the "politically-painful budget actions Reagan has urged on Congress."

Rep. Silvio O. Conte of Massachusetts, the senior Republican on the House Appropriations Committee, dubbed Stockman "the young slasher," an example of the admiration, fury and exasperation with which members of Congress viewed him.

But admiration predominated after it was announced Stockman was leaving.

at the meeting that "during these crisis years," her agriculture background would be an asset. She said her involvement as a volunteer in the Buhl school district with a program to raise non-tax funds for school projects will serve her in good stead in future.

Working as a House of Representatives intern to the Judiciary Committee has also allowed her to observe the legislative process firsthand, she said.

Folkings was the only candidate of the six nominated at the meeting who said she would favor tax breaks for farm and ranch owners.

Of the 40 precinct committee members voting at the meeting, 13 voted for Folkings as the top choice. Jones received 15 votes out of 40 in the balloting-for-second-position-on-the list.

Jones, 38, graduated from Filer High School and from the University of Idaho with a degree in agriculture in 1972. He was Donna Scott's original campaign manager and has also organized the local campaign of Lt. Gov. David Leroy. Jones has been appointed Noy Brackett's substitute for two sessions and has served on the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Board.

"My experience stands me in good stead, particularly coming in at mid-term," he said Tuesday night.

Munroe received 16 of 40 votes for the third spot on the list. A 20-year member of the Republican Party, Munroe stressed the importance of compromise in the Legislature when he spoke to the meeting—Tuesday night.

He says his experience in business and particularly in the automobile sales business has taught him the importance of compromise. Munroe is currently vice chairman of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center board and the Idaho State University Alumni Board and has served on the Buhl City Council.

"I can make decisions which affect other people without a thought to my well-being," Munroe told the group.

Nominees not placed on the list of suggested replacements for Knigge included Twin Falls dentist Lee Barnes, Murtaugh mayor Allen Cummins, and Twin Falls attorney Paul T. Smith.

The meeting was continuing at deadline time.

Court justice waits to decide if health will force retirement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell, wrestling with the possibility of retirement, is delaying a decision until he can assess his recuperation from two recent surgical operations. The Associated Press has learned.

Powell, 77, has told people at the court he wants to remain a justice at least through the 1985-86 term that will begin next October. But sources close to the justice, who spoke only on the condition they not be identified, said Powell will hinge his decision on how well his recuperation from cancer surgery and complications from that surgery progresses through the summer.

Powell's role through most of his Supreme Court tenure has been that of a "majority maker" — a key swing vote in cases that deeply divide the court along ideological lines.

The justice's position at the court's center in its just-completed term led Burt Neuborne, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union, to call Powell "the most powerful individual in America."

Powell had a cancerous prostate removed last January, and on Monday was back at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., for a hernia operation. The same day he underwent the previous surgery, Powell's doctors said: "The operation was highly successful." Virginia Eggleston, Powell's secretary, said Tuesday. "His doctors were quite pleased with everything."

LEWIS POWELL May retire in 1985

Ms. Eggleston said she did not know when Powell would return to Washington. Following his surgery in January, Powell remained at the Mayo Clinic for more than a week and then missed two months of the high court's 1984-85 term.

Sources said Powell's wife, Josephine, has urged him to retire now. They said the justice has considered the possibility of serving as a part-time judge on the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., when he does retire.

The Powells maintain a home in Richmond, and the justice has returned there each summer since joining the Supreme Court in 1972. An office has been maintained for him in the federal courthouse in the Virginia capital.

Powell was appointed by President Richard M. Nixon after initially balking at taking the job. He contended that, at age 64, he was too old.

Gorbachev statement breaks ice

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department welcomed on Tuesday a statement by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev that his government has the desire and the political will to seek arms control agreements with the United States.

The statement by department press officer Bob Smalley was in response to a message Gorbachev sent recently to the Union of Concerned Scientists, a Massachusetts-based pro-disarmament group.

Smalley said the United States welcomes Gorbachev's "reaffirmation that the Soviet Union has the desire and the political will to realize the objectives" of the U.S.-Soviet agreement in January to resume arms control talks.

"If this is indeed the Soviet intention, the Soviet Union will find us a ready partner," Smalley said. "We remain prepared to work at every level to bring these to fruition in concrete agreements."

Responding to Gorbachev's stated goal of strengthening the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, Smalley said a primary U.S. goal at the arms control talks in Geneva is to reverse the "erosion" of the treaty that has taken place in recent years.

Soldiers go incognito

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy and Marine Corps, in what are described as partial responses to the recent rash of terrorist incidents, have taken steps to make traveling servicemen and embassy guards less conspicuous overseas.

In Europe, the commander of U.S. naval forces has ordered sailors and Marines "to curtail use of official U.S. government passports." The commander of the Marine Corps Security Guard Battalion, meantime, has urged his men to forego the so-called "high and tight" haircut that makes them so conspicuous when wearing civilian clothes.

Both actions were ordered by unit commanders as interim steps while

Navy and Pentagon officials study whether there are other ways to help American servicemen avoid being singled out by terrorists, spokesmen said Tuesday.

Lt. Col. John M. Shotwell, a Marine spokesman, stressed that the security unit's directive did not sanction long hair. Rather, he said, it merely states that Marine guards should stick to standard grooming regulations rather than go further with a close-cropped cut.

Reagan: efforts to free Lebanon 7 continuing

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Tuesday his administration is doing all it can to bring seven kidnapped Americans back from Lebanon alive, not adopting an "out of sight, out of mind" approach as some of their relatives and others have suggested.

"There has been some talk here and there, and even some of them (the relatives) out of their frustration and grief have said, 'Out of sight, out of mind.' That just isn't true," the president told regional editors and broadcasters at a White House meeting.

"There has never been a minute from the first kidnapping on that we have not been doing everything we can," Reagan said.

"The situation is: how do you rescue someone if you don't know where they are? How do you rescue them? We have to have to reveal yourself to the point that you might be bringing home a body instead of a human being."

"We have had suspected targets over there, but... no knowledge that we could take an action that would not result in their death. And we are going to do everything we can to see that that doesn't happen," the president added.

Asked about reports that some of the relatives might seek a meeting with Syrian President Hafez Assad, who played a role in the recent release of 39 hijacked hostages, the president said, "I can't deny them this. If they feel they want to try this and it could be of some help, certainly we would never interfere with that."

Reagan said U.S. intelligence has had difficulty determining whether the seven are being held in a group or separately.

"We have reason to believe from some of our intelligence gathering that they are being moved around quite often," he said. "Our difficulty with taking some action is the very fact of their lives."

"We meant it when we tried our best to get them included with the 39 that came home, but evidently they are in the hands of others not having to do with the same hijackers as this last time," he said.

"We are using every effort we can to bring them back and yet we do know that there is a threat hanging over them and we must be very careful in the way we precipitate that threat being carried out."

Stockman did nation more good than ill

The resignation of Budget Director David Stockman leaves the Reagan Administration without its articulate, well-known lightning rod for both drawing criticism on budget issues and, occasionally, throwing off considerable sparks.

Stockman will not be easy to replace. Candor and honesty never are in the world of politics, where keeping one's mouth shut and rear end low to the ground are consummate skills.

Nor was tact one of his strong suits. He left military pensioners screaming for his head with his assertion that the military pension system is a disgrace which needs changing. He did the same with his remark about farm commodity support programs.

But in both cases, what he said is essentially true, and millions of Americans know it.

He refused to become mired in the day-to-day swings of opinion, nor in the in-fighting among the many special interest groups, including the military, which have paralyzed the nation on budget and deficit reform.

He understood that unless everyone sacrificed, and did so painfully, the country would ultimately face a vast economic crisis. That day of reckoning is closer.

But like Martin Feldstein before him, who chaired the President's Council of Economic Advisors until last summer, Stockman came to learn that one man, even an outspoken one beholden only to the president, can accomplish only so much. There will be little success without the backing or the political will of the president, Congress and the people.

Nonetheless, he focused attention on deficit problems which are now just as severe as when he took office.

In that, Stockman did the president and the nation more good than harm, despite his sometimes-controversial statements.

Educators need to study Constitution

In February, Heidi Webb, a ninth-grader at Montclair High School in San Bernardino County, Calif., started distributing leaflets and brochures between classes as well as outside the building before and after school.

Her sixth-period teacher told her to cease and desist. She asked why. He told her it was illegal. Heidi Webb asked what law she had broken. He said he'd get back to her.

The student had been handing out literature that subtly fits the Supreme Court's definition of the "unfettered, robust" public discourse that is the American way.

Heidi Webb is against abortion, and one of her leaflets said, "Killing the innocent is... a barbarous approach to problem-solving. Its effects on society are no less deadly than its effects on the unborn child."

The next day the principal confronted Heidi Webb in the school parking lot and ordered her to stop handing out her literature. If she did not stop, she would be expelled for "non-compliance with authority figures."

When her parents called the superintendent of the joint high-school district, it was his considered judgment that because of the pamphlets' controversial subject matter, they had no place at school. They should be distributed at a church, on a public sidewalk or at a teen-age discotheque.

If Heidi did not obey his orders, the superintendent added, the police would be called.

One day in March, during the lunch break, while Heidi was giving out pamphlets to students, who had asked for them, the vice principal grabbed the rest of the papers from her, reprimanded the student in front of her schoolmates and marched her to the principal's office. That educator, Horace

Nat Hentoff

Jackson, suspended Heidi for two days.

On the "Parent Notification of Suspension" form, the principal explained his action by saying that the young woman had already been warned by him that "the pro-life materials she wanted to distribute were inappropriate, offensive and inflammatory."

Until that day, Heidi Webb had never been disciplined in any way during her school career. However, the shade of Tom Paine might well have applauded her first suspension.

When she returned to school, Heidi Webb kept on distributing the pamphlets, because no one—aside from using such adjectives as "inappropriate" and "inflammatory"—had told her what law she was breaking.

This time she was suspended for four days, and her principal threatened to expel her for the rest of the school year if she persisted in her defiant belief that a lonely student has the right to her rights.

Her parents contacted The Rutherford Institute, a skillful and aggressive Christian Legal Defense group based in northern Virginia.

One of its attorneys, Larry Crain, filed suit in the U.S. District Court for the Central District of California. He is asking that no further disciplinary actions be taken against Heidi for exercising her First Amendment rights and that the suspensions be removed from her record. There's also a claim for $100,000 in compensatory damages and $100,000 in punitive damages.

A lawyer for the school district, Dan Haueter, told a San Bernardino County paper, The Daily Report, that he thought the suit ought to be dropped.

After all, school officials, having finally asked Haueter for legal advice, had reinstated Heidi Webb. And the principal, Horace Jackson, even wrote her an apology for having suspended her.

Heidi, however, wants more than a piece of paper from a penitent principal.

"I want to be able to set a precedent," she says. "I don't want them to be able to be sorry and forget about it. That won't do any good."

Her lawyer, Larry Crain, agrees. "A pretrial settlement is possible," he told me. "But there will have to be some sort of consent order to make sure this kind of thing doesn't happen again.

"And that consent order will be worded strongly enough so that if officials in the school district break it, they can be brought up on contempt of court."

Crain also expects that a settlement will require the school district to set up workshops on student rights as a regular part of fall orientation sessions for the students.

Included in that long-delayed education would be written material as well as study in dawn-ing wonder as they find their place in the Constitution.

I asked Crain why he was demanding Bill of Rights workshops only for students. Judging from what happened to Heidi Webb, administrators and teachers would seem to need those remedial courses at least as badly as the kids.

Crain said that seemed like a pretty logical idea.

Most of us are always searching for that land called home

The skyscrapers of New York City lean on its people.

I said something like that in a poem once. I still think it's true. When I lived in the city I considered the towers, tenements, and streets as the geography, the landscape. And in order to feel more at home in my landscape, I read about the architecture of the city. But it was never home. The geography never felt right—it burdened me.

The first time I saw the Rocky Mountains, I listened to the land. And I responded—a kind of yearning to the place. I had never been a defter more of my life. I had never lived in one locale for more than three years before New York. But, when I came to Wyoming the transient urge in me settled like burning log settles into ash. And cools. I had come home. I didn't admit it to myself for years, but I felt it, knew it without being able to speak it aloud.

That was 14 years ago. I was reminded of the feeling again when Bill Barron, a good friend of mine, an artist from Chicago, flew out for a week's visit. We traveled around the state a little while he was here. He had never been to Wyoming, although he had driven in the West before. He's a landscape artist and wanted to witness the West I had been bragging about, and spend some time with me.

One afternoon we drove up on a mountain, stopped, then walked out on an overlook, past an abandoned cabin, to look at the vista. He said it then, sweeping his hand in an arc toward the far mountain and over the valley between. "This... this could be home. I could live my life here. I can't believe it... I feel so much at home here." I know he was discerning colors and textures and the play of light and shadow, but he was visioning more, and at some other level—and he articulated what I had felt 14 years ago when I first drove through this landscape.

While Bill was here I began to perceive the panorama through his eyes. His presence and appreciation allowed me, once again, to behold Wyoming as I had first seen it; the familiar and habitual way of looking, the lazy way of not really observing, peeled from my eyes, as new vistas peel away the gauzy veil of habit. Unfortunately, our surroundings can become too familiar so that we stop seeing the richness our eyes see.

There are few places we can rightly call home. I had lived in 30 different towns and cities before I came here. Wyoming is the only one I ever called home. There is a resonance one feels for a place, as if some geographic tuning fork where pitched so that we respond.

Resonance: A Caribbean breeze swirls against windows and the ocean waves break against rocks below a cottage. On the bluff sloping up from the tiny cottage, tall grasses undulate. As if the motion of the waves had carried on to the land—had completed itself there. A resonance from ocean to land. When I first met Bill 20 years ago he lived in that cotlage on St. Croix in the Virgin Islands. As an artist he understands this kind of response between two different mediums.

Resonance: Eons ago Wyoming lay beneath an interior ocean. Each winter as I drive across miles of snowscape, I understand that the ocean has returned; the white-capped waves are frozen, their movement imperceptible, but the ocean has swept back as a resonance. That's what I felt coming to the Rockies the first time.

There are no logical reasons, as in love, there is only attraction deep and right; an emotional tectonic plate shifts and we feel the tremor somewhere inside us, and we make up a rationale afterward for why we moved toward a place or a person. Although we don't know any real reasons. It's as if we inherit a kind of tropism toward a particular landscape, a particular geography, a quality of light, of sky. Some dim echo spiraling up through the helix of our genetic structure. Something before thought. Perhaps that's how we used to exist. Whatever it is, we know it when it happens, and if we can, we give in to the calling.

Naturalists speak of habitat selection by animals and how specific it is—so specific that habitat is often used as a distinguishing feature to tell closely related species apart. Do humans, as Edward O. Wilson suggests in his book "Biophilia," also have an ingrained preference for a specific environment, that kind of environment which enhanced human survival? Some place we would unconsciously feel is home? A homing instinct, a survival strategy springing up from the past, through the helix of our genes? I don't know. I do know the message was clear, as if the land had called my name. I still hear it from time to time.

We speak of "putting down roots," of "settling in." As we become part of the landscape ourselves, biologically and emotionally, we are nurtured in such a landscape; we grow there. And sometimes I suspect that although we may move at great speeds and travel the distance around the earth many times in the span of our lives, that most of us are, in fact, desperately searching for a land called home.

Letters/ Moon trying to net bigger fish in state, federal governments

Goal is clear to this reader

On June 30, there were two of the best articles that I believe I have ever read concerning the religious fanatics that are surely trying to take over the government of the United States.

My congratulations to either Steve Hartgen or Bill Howard for the opus in the editorial page entitled, "U.S. has its share of religious fanatics."... and congratulations to Dean Miller on the excellent piece entitled, "Moon's 'Divine Principle': blueprint for messianic war."

I especially liked the last sentence of Miller's opus: Moon is currently serving a prison term for federal income tax violations. Now how about that?

And we have politicians in Idaho who are taking handouts from a self-ordained minister by his own appointment, Moon's white lie to prey on the young and innocent to do his bidding, and is now using his political arm Causa to dupe the politicians into doing the same thing for him... However, Moon is now going for bigger fish to try by getting his converts into our state and federal governments, who will most likely do his work for him.

Nat Hentoff is right in his opinion of the 4th of July for his crime against the U.S. and not being a citizen of this country, my notion is that he should be deported straight back to Korea, by the swiftest means possible.

But, our gutless politicians in this country are afraid they'll lose some votes if they would do it. So, with the help of some of Idaho's many politicians, the Moonies will continue to flourish and do business as usual. Especially under the guise of anti-communism... which is only a ploy to further the Moonie cause.

If our politicians by now don't know enough about how communism works, then they shouldn't be in those important offices making laws in this state... and should take up reading about the subject of communism in our public libraries. It's as simple as that!

Moreover, in case you may be wondering about it, I am not totally against religion, but I am against people who come into this country and try to change our form of government, with the pretext of religion. Preying on the weak, the innocent, and in particular our elected officials with the purpose of elimination of separation of church and state.

This country was guarded against that for over 200 years, and that's the way it should be. We never had a religious war in the U.S. So why should we let a convicted felon like Sun Myung Moon change that tradition?

And you better believe that is exactly what that guy is trying to do. Change the world to his way of thinking. How about the time he hand-picked wedding partners in New York, and that bunch of dummies fell for it, too?

equipment for the group all the way to Toronto, and upon their arrival, Scott drove the trailer to the different locations of the performances. Stan was most helpful working out important details for us while at convention.

For the 32 of us involved in the trip, Dr. Art Frantz has been an extraordinarily known as "Number Thirty-three."

The great number of area residents who contributed time, energy and dollars toward this unique trip may be assured the results were well worth the effort expended. One Colorado Kiwanian, traveling on the same plane as the return trip, remarked that "Now when I hear 'Idaho' I won't think of potatoes; but of the Twin Falls High School Madrigals!"

To Dick and Rita Smack: Thank you for seemingly endless effort and energy on behalf of the students in your programs and for the hours that go far beyond anything required of you. If we had not admirably resources, we still could not adequately thank you for the work and love you have given each of your music groups in your 17-year tenure in Twin Falls.

deemed by them as being neither sufficient nor complete enough to handle all the data that would be needed to properly account for the racers' times, splits, standings, team efforts, etc.

Solution: Hire R&L Data to write a program. Note: R&L sells hardware and software; they don't write programs. Therefore, they subbed out the writing of the program to a 16-year-old boy, our son, Richard.

On June 30, one week before the race, an IBM computer was placed on our dining-room table and Rich went to work. I might point out that Richard has a full-time job and has other interests besides writing programs. So after working at his job all day, it was with great determination that he finished the program and that he finally completed his assigned task. Saturday night he worked from 8 p.m. until 6 a.m. Sunday, finishing the program. He was at Dierkes Lake at 7 a.m. busily entering the data. As the different events came in, they too were entered and by 11 a.m. the results were tabulated and given out to the individual racers... and did it work? A great, big yes!

Richard's rewards were few: A free lunch, a free T-shirt and some warm drinks. No mention of his name in the print or on TV, no special prizes, no applause (except by certain individuals), no nothing. Even the Times-News gave credit to R&L, as having written the program.

But the story is not yet finished as Richard's greatest reward was the self-satisfaction he received when Dr. Jack was overheard telling some of the racers that "the impossible had been done!"

And we, Richard's parents, applauded him too.

Kiwanians attending their international convention held this past week in Toronto, Canada, were treated to several performances by the Twin Falls High School Madrigals. Their appearances were a great success with the audiences—one, 10,000, 12,000 large, gave the entire ovation which heard repeatedly, "Twin Falls, Idaho Kiwanis Club." Twin Falls, Idaho High School.

To chaperone this group was a real highlight for us. It was wonderful to see them in action, but the most gratifying part was the maturity exhibited by these twenty-eight students during the entire trip. The high standard demanded of them by their director, Richard Smack, was never more apparent. The dress and manners of these students were above reproach at all times. They were good sports and cheerful during the long days—as long as 20 hours.

It was of monumental importance to have the considerable amount of sound equipment arrive intact and Stan Snow, along with his wife, Betty, and son, Scott, helped, "make the difference" for us. The Snows pulled a large U-haul behind their van, loaded with the

On July 7, some 189 men and women swam, cycled and ran their way in and around our countryside. We applauded them. The Times-News and KMTV covered their progress in depth. A lot of sweat, tears and probably a little blood was shed by the athletes. It was termed a successful event.

Part of the success was the fact that the event was computerized for the first time. Dr. Jack McNeas and some of his buddies said it, "could not be done." After all, there was a computer program on the market that was

DES cancer warning 'buried'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A task force recommendation that women exposed to a dangerous drug during pregnancy be warned that they and their daughters may face a heightened risk of cancer has been buried at the Health and Human Services Department, a public health activist charged Tuesday.

Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe, director of the Ralph Nader-organized Health Research Group, told a news conference that recommendations by a special task force on diethylstilbestrol, or DES, were submitted to HHS Secretary Margaret M. Heckler on Feb. 8, but have never emerged.

Wolfe released a copy of the report, saying it was leaked to him by frustrated scientists on the task force.

The task force called for "early action" by the department to alert physicians to possible increased cancer risks among the estimated 2 million women who took DES to prevent miscarriages, and among their daughters, who were exposed to the drug in the womb.

Governor hits Medicare trims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The governor of Florida, the state with the nation's largest population of elderly, said Tuesday the Reagan administration's decision to trim Medicare home health care payments is fiscally and socially unwise.

The move to slash $43 million from the home care reimbursement program over five years will prove to be a "tremendously expensive and counter-productive decision," Democratic Gov. Robert Graham told the House Select Committee on Aging.

Instead of reducing reimbursements to people providing home health care, the federal government should take steps that make it easier for old people to remain in their homes so they don't have to enter expensive institutions, Graham said.

Judge denies spy trial move

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A federal judge denied a defense motion Tuesday to move the espionage trial of Arthur J. Walker but said he might agree if an impartial jury cannot be selected when the trial opens next month.

"I don't think it would be proper for me to do it at this time," said U.S. District Judge J. Calvitt Clarke Jr., in denying the motion.

Defense lawyers had asked for the trial to be moved to Richmond, arguing that extensive pretrial publicity and the large number of Navy families in the Norfolk area meant their client could not get a fair trial here.

Walker, a retired Navy lieutenant commander, is charged with passing documents from his defense contractor employer to a spy ring allegedly run by his brother, John A. Walker Jr., a Norfolk private detective and retired Navy chief warrant officer.

Another gravesite discovered

SAN ANDREAS, Calif. (AP) — Another gravesite containing at least one more victim has been unearthed near the remote cabin used by survivor Leonard Lake and his companion Charles Ng, investigators said Tuesday.

The discovery increases to at least 10 the number of bodies found on or near Lake's property and has prompted investigators to expand the search area to a five-mile radius around the cabin, said Calaveras County sheriff's spokesman Jim Stenquist.

Ng, 24, charged in Calgary, Alberta, with attempted murder, has told investigators Lake was responsible for crimes committed at the rural hillside compound where searchers have found piles of charred bone fragments and evidence of torture, police said.

House passes foreign aid budget freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted 288-2 Tuesday to freeze foreign aid spending authority at last year's levels while exempting funds earmarked for Israel and Egypt.

The action would hold total foreign aid spending for each of the next two fiscal years to $12.7 billion. That is a 2.5 percent reduction from the $13.1 billion recommended by the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The panel had already trimmed $191 million from President Reagan's original request.

"This is a true freeze, an across-the-board cut, except for Israel and Egypt," said Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., the committee chairman. "It does not allow a penny for inflation."

Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., the panel's ranking minority member, endorsed Fascell's approach while cautioning that "any further cuts would cause serious damage to our national security."

Later, the House voted 288-122 to authorize $5 million for military aid to non-communist resistance forces inside Cambodia, which has been under Vietnamese military occupation since the late 1970s.

The amendment, offered by Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., forbids funneling any of the money to the forces of the Khmer Rouge, widely accused of killing hundreds of thousands of Cambodians during the period they ran the country.

Broomfield's amendment to reduce military aid to Turkey for fiscal years 1986 and 1987 from $740 million to $711 million per year to keep it more in line with $590 million earmarked for Greece.

Then, on a 279-125 roll call, the House defeated an amendment by Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., that would have increased military aid to the Philippines by $60 million while reducing economic aid by the same amount.

Maureen Reagan calls Meese action 'absurd'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's daughter Maureen criticized Attorney General Edwin Meese III on Tuesday for withholding a $25,000 grant to a group that operates shelters for battered women because conservatives have claimed the group promotes lesbianism.

"That's just patently absurd," Ms. Reagan said of Meese's action.

"Her comment came" at a State Department briefing on an upcoming international women's conference in Nairobi, Kenya, Ms. Reagan, a feminist activist, is chairwoman of the U.S. delegation.

After Mrs. Reagan had identified family violence as one of four topics the United States wants discussed at the conference, a reporter asked what she thought of Meese's action.

"That's the same kind of problem that we've had over the years by people who refer to shelters for battered women as RAR (rest and relaxation) centers for bored housewives," she said.

"The fact of the matter is there's a very serious problem with domestic violence, not just of women but also of children, in this country," the president's daughter added.

Asked why Meese was holding up the grant, she replied tersely: "You'd have to ask him."

When a reporter suggested Ms. Reagan would be in a better position to question a member of her father's Cabinet, she answered: "I doubt it."

Victim of 'mountain man' recounts abduction events

VIRGINIA CITY, Mont. (AP) — Karl Swenson testified Tuesday that a self-styled "mountain man" accused of kidnapping her and killing a man who tried to rescue her had threatened to kill anyone who tried to intervene.

Swenson, a member of the U.S. women's biathlon team, sobbed as she recounted being told by Don Nichols that "If anyone found us, he'd shoot them." Authorities say she was abducted to be a bride for Nichols' 29-year-old son.

Nichols, 54, is on trial on charges of murder, kidnapping and assault stemming from an incident last July in the mountains of southwestern Montana, where father and son had lived for nearly a year.

In opening arguments Tuesday, State Prosecutor Marc Racicot said Nichols is on trial for the "casual and heartless killing of Alan Goldstein, the pointless kidnapping of Karl Swenson and the shameful and hateful assault on Jim Schwab," another rescuer.

Nichols' son, Dan, was convicted in May of kidnapping and wounding Swenson, but was acquitted on a charge of deliberate homicide in Goldstein's death.

The 23-year-old Bozeman woman testified Nichols made the threat to shoot on the first night of her abduction as a search plane flew overhead. She also recounted how Nichols "struck her in the face and wrestled her to the ground when she began screaming just after being abducted."

"The defendant said he wouldn't hesitate to beat me up, to give me two black eyes," she said. "Just because I was a woman wouldn't stop him."

A jury of six men and seven women was selected Monday after sparring between a judge determined to seat a jury in one day and a defense attorney who had wanted the Nichols case dismissed because of pre-trial news coverage.

Racicot recounted the sequence of events of last July 15 and 16, beginning with Swenson's kidnapping as she jogged along a mountain trail near Big Sky.

"They had complete control over her and seemed to enjoy it," said Racicot, who called the abduction "inexpressibly vile."

He said Don and Dan Nichols repeatedly threatened to kill anyone who tried to rescue Swenson — and did kill Goldstein, 38, when he discovered their mountain camp.

Racicot said Goldstein moved behind a tree, pointed his pistol at the — Nicholses and said: "Give yourself up, you're surrounded by 200 men."

But Don Nichols fired back with his rifle, Racicot said, striking Goldstein in the cheek. An autopsy showed that the bullet caused massive bleeding, and Goldstein "had drowned in his own blood."

Nichols contends he shot Goldstein in self defense.

Transsexual loses office bid

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — A transsexual Korean War veteran who lost a bid to lead her local American Legion post says the effort helped people to understand the issues and that she'll be "out there fighting" next year.

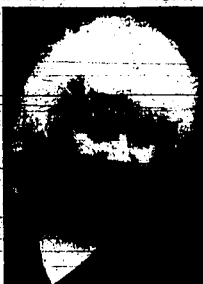

Brigitte Pol lost Monday, 23-13, to incumbent Joseph Ottaviano, who had predicted that he would win the battle of the "Legionaire of the Year vs. the transsexual" in a landslide. Another candidate, John Cable, got 10 votes.

Ms. Pol, 50, said after the results were announced, "I'm glad I've run because if nothing else it's brought out the issue of the transsexual. I hope that I've made people understand what it really means."

Ms. Pol, named Bobby before her operation at age 38, is a decorated Korean War veteran. She also is the post's senior vice president.

Many members of John Coleman Prince Post 9 said before the election that they would vote for Ms. Pol, praising her fund-raising efforts for Legion events. Others, however, said they would never support her.

A few hours after the votes were tallied and the swarm of reporters had gone home, Ms. Pol sat quietly in a meeting room as veterans crowded around the bar to toast their new commander.

"Next year, I'll be out there fighting," she said. "Anyone can run away from an issue, but I'm not going to."

Besides, Ms. Pol said, she has received 362 letters of support, including two marriage proposals, and more than 200 telephone calls.

She also said she wasn't discouraged by the election results.

"I'm going home to relax and drink wine. I'm not disappointed," Ms. Pol said. "When the membership is 325, those (vote) numbers tell me nothing."

Ottaviano said, "I won because the old-timers came out here to vote for me. I think there were so few members here because they were overconfident. They were sure they'd win. But we (the old-timers) split the vote and that almost allowed her to win."

Patrol car dies; speeder ticketed

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Policeman Gary Vencill's patrol car served him well, even after it died in a puff of smoke during a high-speed chase.

When the car's transmission and engine gave up Sunday night at 105 mph, Vencill coasted the smoking vehicle to an interstate exit near Springfield. To his surprise, the cruiser rolled up beside the car he had been pursuing. It had stopped at a traffic light.

Vencill hopped out of the patrol car, which was dripping oil and transmission fluid, stepped up to the speeder's window and wrote him a citation.

The car's engine had 108,609 miles on it, police said.

Police kill at least 7 blacks in latest S. African violence

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police killed at least seven blacks Tuesday in a township east of Johannesburg. They said they fired on mobs attacking homes of black policemen, but residents claimed six of those slain were shot while fleeing a tear gas barrage.

The residents said a crowd had filled a movie theater for a vigil hours before a funeral for four previous riot victims. They said police fired tear gas into the building and opened fire when the people ran out.

A reporter who visited the theater later said the floors were splattered with blood, and walls and steel doors were riddled by bullets. Shoes, hats and blankets were strewn about, he said.

A police spokesman said he knew nothing about tear gas being used. He said the mob fled into the theater when officers fired on rioters who threw a gasoline bomb at a policeman's home, and police arrested 36 people at the movie house.

Anglican Bishop Simon Nkomo, a resident of the township, said: "The authorities just seem to go on the rampage." He said police fired tear gas and guns throughout the night before the funeral, and added, "They have been shooting without aim, to intimidate and frighten people. . . . This is madding."

It was one of the bloodiest days in 10 months of rioting against white-minority rule. More than 400 people have been killed, many of them in Kwa-Thema — and other — black townships in the industrial belt east of

Mourners escort hearse into stadium for funeral rites

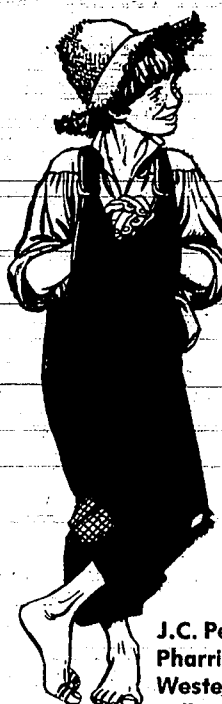

Johannesburg. Violence swept nearby Duduza over the weekend, and police confirmed four deaths during a roundup of suspected rioters. There were unconfirmed reports of riots and shootings in Duduza on Tuesday, the day before a funeral there for four more other victims.

Witnesses said at least three blacks were wounded Tuesday by gunfire outside Kwa-Thema Stadium during the funeral for four blacks killed two weeks ago in grenade explosions. More than 10,000 people attended.

The gunfire appeared to come from the adjacent home of Mayor James Mzamane after gasoline bombs were thrown at the house, said a black cameraman who was at the scene.

A witness said Nkomo, who preached at the funeral, saved the life of a black man who was beaten by the crowd outside the stadium because he was suspected of being a police informer. The man was reported hospitalized in critical condition.

Blacks at the stadium also set fire to a car owned by the pro-government South African Broadcasting Corp.

Tanker spews burning oil

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An Iraqi missile struck a supertanker loaded with Iranian crude Tuesday and gutted its stern section, sending tons of flaming oil spewing into the Persian Gulf.

Shipping sources called it the worst incident since Iraq began regular attacks on commercial shipping early last year.

The 33 crewmen escaped in lifeboats as flames swept the huge Turkish tanker, but Captain Acci Aclpi reported in a ship-to-shore interview Tuesday night that the fire was being brought under control and he had reboarded with some of his men.

Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence, a branch of the London insurance exchange, said the 322,799-ton M. Vatan was the largest vessel attacked by either side in the Iraq-Iran war "and possibly the largest marine casualty ever in tonnage."

The tanker, which Iran was using to shuttle oil past the Iraqi blockade, had just taken on nearly 2.7 million barrels of crude from the huge Persian Gulf oil export terminal at Kharg Island.

Captain Aclpi, 35, told The Associated Press in the ship-to-shore interview that oil was still leaking from the side of the vessel and winds intermittently fanned the flames. "Sometimes there is a big fire, sometimes small, depending on the wind," he said, but five fire-fighting tugboats were controlling the flames.

He estimated that 20 percent of the cargo had been lost, but because fire was burning the leaking oil "perhaps there will not be a big pollution problem."

"He said he 'saw no warplane,' but the missile exploded 'in the starboard and aft quarters. The aft quarters are all destroyed, but all the crew are well, no one dead or wounded.'"

Shipping sources said the tanker was hit by an Exocet missile, which Iraq has bought from France along with the Super Etendard fighters that carry them.

Lebanese leaders draft peace plan

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Lebanon's Muslim leaders on Tuesday announced a plan to bring peace to the ravaged streets of Beirut. Factional warfare raged on in the northern Lebanese port of Tripoli, killing at least six people.

Thirteen leaders of the Shiite, Sunni and Druze communities, including Prime Minister Rashid Karami, attended the meeting in Damascus under the guidance of the Syrian government, which is the main power broker in Lebanon and has at least 25,000 troops stationed in the eastern part of the country.

They emerged early in the day after 13 hours of talks to announce a 16-point agreement calling for a new constitution and political reforms to give Muslims equal power with the traditionally dominant Christians.

They also agreed to improve security at Beirut airport, whose shortcomings were emphasized by the hijacking of a TWA jetliner June 14, and to withdraw Muslim militias from around the facility.

In Beirut, Cardinal Roger Etchegaray, the personal envoy of Pope John Paul II, met with Christian spiritual leaders as part of the Vatican's effort to find ways it can contribute to peace in Lebanon. The cardinal arrived in Lebanon last Thursday.

Two suicide bombers detonated explosives in their cars in separate attacks in southern Lebanon, killing themselves and 15 Lebanese and wounding four Lebanese and two Israeli soldiers.

Military and civilian sources said that in the first bombing at Hasbalya, 18 miles northeast of the Israeli border, the car driver, 13 Lebanese civilians and two militiamen of the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army were killed and four Lebanese were wounded.

It was the second day of fighting in Tripoli, 50 miles north of Beirut.

Assad ready to enter case

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A senior Lebanese government source said Tuesday that "at the right moment" Syria's president will put pressure on kidnappers to release seven captive Americans in Lebanon.

He said that right now, however, Syria's main effort "is to ensure that the hostages come to no harm."

President Hafez Assad of Syria said last month he had not been able to gain the release of the seven Americans, who with four Frenchmen and a Briton, were abducted in a string of kidnappings that started in March 1984.

The victims are believed held by the Islamic Jihad organization, or Islamic Holy War, which is thought to be a group of Shiite Muslim fundamentalists based in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley of east Lebanon.

Dispute over campus erupts

Partner, owner's descendant claim rights to Albion land

By LINDA LARSON
Times-News correspondent

ALBION — George M. Kelly, Jr., of Albion, a secret partner in a land title claim to the Albion campus, stepped forward Tuesday in an attempt to claim title to the former college campus.

A court record filed Tuesday in Cassia County lists Kelly, along with Cleophas Miller and his wife Jane, address unknown, as having filed an appearance, with Dennis Byington as their attorney.

Byington is representing the three claimants in a title dispute with the City of Albion over ownership of the campus property.

Byington said it's his opinion the title to the property should revert from the city back to Cleophas Miller because a trust agreement, requiring the property to be used for educational purposes, had been broken.

The State of Idaho received a deed to the property in the 1890s as a gift from Josiah Miller, ancestor to Cleophas Miller. Byington said he is asking the court for an extension of time so that his clients can support their claim.

Kelly said his claim resulted when he bought an interest in the property from the Miller family.

Albion Mayor Kay Powell said the original deed from Josiah Miller required that the property be used for education purposes.

However, city officials say their title is valid because the educational purpose clause was not cited in the deed given to the city by the State of Idaho in 1970.

Kelly said that he wants to get the property out of the city's hands and make some use of it. He declined to say what his plans for the property are, except that they will be a benefit to the city.

Kelly was critical of the city's past attempts to find avenues to use the campus for some worthwhile venture. He is "exploring several avenues," he said.

Powell said the city of Albion was attempting to get a quiet title by publishing a claim in the paper for four consecutive weeks and then waiting 20 days for a reply.

With the deadline only days away, a chance for the city to receive the title through default has faded because of the Kelly-Miller filing.

Powell said the city planned to sell the property to private investors, but the plan will now be held up due to court proceedings over the title.

Christine Schiers, president of Total Resource Service of Burley, is spokeswoman for the investors, who want to renovate buildings on the campus and purchase the nearby Pomerelle ski area. Schiers said renovation plans are already completed and the architects hired for work on the five-campus buildings.

Schiers said that a little delay could cause investors to lose interest in the proposed $19 million project.

"If they tie up the title in court very long, then the people who are presently backing the venture and no one in Cassia County will get anything," Schiers said.

She said she hopes an out-of-court settlement can be reached that will accommodate both the city of Albion and the Kelly-Miller interest.

"Ten million dollars is a lot of money," said Schiers, "and it won't be available very long."

Kelly is being represented by John Ruffin and David LeRoy of Boise. Neither attorney could be reached Tuesday for comment.

Schiers said that her investment package is ready to go, and that if it much more time goes by without something being done with the deteriorating buildings, it could leave "a bunch of bare land in the middle of Albion."

Creek water level dropping, Hailey files for threat grant

By BARBARA NEIWERT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Due to a drop in the water levels at Indian Creek Springs the city is applying for an "imminent threat grant" from the Idaho Department of Economic and Community Affairs.

"Hailey's main source of water is from Indian Creek, and it seems to be dropping rapidly," said Bill House said Monday. "We are not getting the flow we normally have."

This prompted the Hailey City Council to declare an emergency situation in an effort to correct the problem as quickly as possible.

I-D-E Commission Bill House said Monday. "We are not getting the flow we normally have."

City officials inspected the springs two weeks ago and determined water is circumventing the pipes due to shifting ground.

Rejects sex complaint

Commission clears sheriff

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Idaho Human Rights Commission has found no violations of the state's sex discrimination law following an investigation into a complaint filed by a former employee of the Blaine County Sheriff's Office.

The commission notified Blaine County Prosecutor Sandra Shaw last month that it does not intend to pursue any further the complaint filed by Wanda Nevland.

Shaw says the commission's conclusion following its investigation was that there is no probable cause that Nevland was discriminated against by Sheriff Dennis Hayes.

The commission will not acknowledge it even has a complaint unless it files charges from the allegations made in one, and Shaw would not comment on the substance of the complaint or the findings of the commission.

Shaw said it would be improper for her to talk about the complaint because she would act as Haynes' attorney if Nevland exercises her option to file her own suit against the sheriff.

Haynes also would not comment on the action of the commission.

"I think their answer to the complaint speaks for itself," Haynes said Tuesday.

Whether Nevland will file any civil action is not known. She could not be reached Tuesday, and her attorney, Greg Fuller of Jerome, did not know if she wished to continue her case.

Nevland filed the complaint to the commission in late October 1984 just before the general election, in which Hayes faced re-election.

Her complaint followed her lay-off from the department on Sept. 1, 1984, and after her husband, Ketchum Police Chief Cal Nevland, mounted a vigorous one-man campaign against Haynes.

Cal Nevland gave his support to Haynes' Democrat opponent, Orville Drexler, and claimed Haynes ran an unprofessional department.

In her complaint, Wanda Nevland claimed she was sexually harassed by Haynes and received general harassments during the almost four years she worked in the office.

She claimed that Haynes denied her request to attend the Idaho Police Officers' Standards and Training Academy and to let her to go on patrol duty because she was a woman.

Fuller said at the time the complaint was filed.

The complaint also claimed Nevland was subjected to seductive suggestions and sexual advances from Haynes.

springs shut itself off completely about two weeks ago, and they could not get enough pressure to put it back on line right away.

The turbine is just barely running, James said.

"We are lacking for water, and we may not be able to fill the storage water levels in the reservoir," he said.

James said Indian Springs provides 100 percent of the city's water, the turbine and about 25 percent of the water during the summer months.

House told the council the water, which surfaces at Indian Springs northeast of Hailey, originates at North Fork and then takes seven years to resurface at the spring site.

During a prolonged drought, that struck the West in the late 1970s, there was no effect on the water level at the springs.

Crews start to relax as Owyhee fires die

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BRUNEAU — Fire crews that have battled Owyhee County range fires for the past four days in some of the season's hottest temperatures were beginning to demobilize for much-needed rest Tuesday evening.

Bureau of Land Management officials in the Boise District said the largest of a number of lightning fires in Owyhee County over the past few days was declared controlled at 11 p.m. Monday.

Crews were coming in from the large fire Tuesday evening and also from several others that have been controlled or declared out, Christensen said Tuesday evening, that there were no new fires demanding the services of the weekly crews and appeared they could get some needed rest.

... About 950 acres were blackened Tuesday in the Burley BLM District, west of Hollister, as a result of a lightning strike Monday evening. The fire was reported burning in grass and brush but was expected to be under control late Tuesday to allow BLM officials to pull back some of the crews.

The Sawtooth Forest has had only one small fire during the past several days, but one-tenth of an acre was involved in a fire near Stanley Monday night.

Two new, but much smaller, fires were burning in the Owyhee County area Tuesday, including one that had grown to 1,500 acres and another at about 1,200 acres in size. The 1,500-acre fire was discovered Monday and is about 30 miles north of Ruby Hot Springs, Christensen said. The other is also in the Ruby Hot Springs area. Both are lightning-caused fires, she said.

Christensen said although a small number of cattle were apparently injured, none died in the flames, as had at first been feared.

Crews were coming in from the large fire Tuesday evening and also from several others that have been controlled or declared out, Christensen said Tuesday evening, that there were no new fires

Paz arraigned after chase

BURLEY — A man who was arrested after he stole a Cassia County Sheriff's Department patrol car last week for a 25-mile chase, was arraigned Monday in Fifth District Magistrate Court on four felony and one misdemeanor charges.

Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal said the suspect has been identified as Delfino Juarez Paz, 24, of Mexico, who is in the country as an illegal alien.

He was charged with two counts of grand theft and two counts of aggravated assault and driving while intoxicated.

Paz was the object of a wild chase in Cassia County Wednesday night. He was involved in a one-car accident and arrested at the scene on a DUI charge. While handcuffed in the county car, he managed to work his hands in front of him and take off in the officer's car.

Investigation later revealed the wrecked vehicle was also stolen. Complaints charge that Paz refused to stop as Deputy Sheriff Larry Thompson pulled up beside the county patrol car, after he was picked up by a civilian motorist.

The complaints also state that Paz attempted to force the pursuing vehicle, with Thompson as a passenger, off of the roadway during the chase.

Range fires, mechanical problems stall 'hopper spraying

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — A federal standards set eight years in the Magic Valley has mechanical problems that have stalled hopper spraying in the Magic Valley for several weeks.

Most other Western states are in better shape than Idaho, grasshopper-wise, according to Hansen. New Mexico, for example had ample rains, which led to a good grass crop for both cattle and grasshoppers.

Eastern Washington had a late frost, Hansen said, which killed a substantial portion of that state's potential problem.

As for getting more money, Hansen said Block cannot really declare another state of emergency. The $18 million first made available by Block was not APHIS money, Hansen pointed out, but came from the Commodity Credit Corporation within the Department of Agriculture.

With no more money available from Congress this year, any additional funding will have to come from within the Department of Agriculture.

The House's supplemental appropriations bill, which earmarks money for spraying in 1986, has still not made it into a conference committee, according to Kelly-Gibson with Rep. Richard STUBBS' office in Washington.

The Senate's bill, which would appropriate $19 million for spraying, is also tied up in the negotiation process. Neither proposal, however, would specifically appropriate money for this year.

While Congressional relief is a long way off, Mike Field, with Sen. Alan McClure's office in Pocatello, said that both McClure and Sen. Steve Symms have had assurances from Secretary Block that funding for grasshopper spraying is a national priority.

"Right now," Hansen said, "we're pulling together

Explosion burns man, destroys 3 vehicles

SHOSHONE — A tourist, whose identity has not been released last Tuesday night, was critically burned and three vehicles destroyed in a gasoline explosion at 3:45 p.m. on the parking lot of the Shoshone Indian Caves.

Lincoln County Sheriff's officers said the man had just driven into the lot and parked his motorhome beside another motorhome and an automobile. As he and his wife walked behind the motorhome toward the cave, he heard a bubbling sound coming from the gasoline tank. He opened the tank and it exploded, igniting his clothing and the motorhome. The man ran between the vehicles, and the two others caught fire, destroying all three units, officers said.

Another motorhome, in which a family from Germany was traveling, was able to pull out of the way of the fire. The occupants ran back to offer assistance, and a woman in the family suffered a severe ankle sprain. She was treated at the Shoshone Medical Clinic and released.

Lincoln county dispatcher Marie Swain said the burn victim was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls and was to be flown to the University of Utah Hospital burn center in Salt Lake City.

MVRMC nursing personnel said he would be leaving later in the evening and was in critical condition pending transport to the Salt Lake City center.

Lincoln County Deputy Stephen Southwick who investigated reported the Bureau of Land Management assisted in putting out the fire along with men and equipment from the Wood River Fire District, north of Shoshone.

Also responding were the Richfield Quick Response Unit, Lincoln County Emergency Medical Service ambulance and the life support ambulance from St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome. He said the motorhome while the gasoline tank exploded was a new vehicle.

Owners of the other motorhome and car that were destroyed were touring the ice caves at the time. No names were released by the Lincoln County officers.

The ice caves, a favorite attraction during hot summer weather, are located on U.S. Highway 93, about 14 miles north of Shoshone.

Burley man asks for shorter sentence

Convicted of kidnapping Evans' son

By PAT MARCHANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Burley man convicted of attempting to kidnap the son of Gov. John Evans in 1981 again is asking for a reduced sentence on a second kidnap conviction, after a technically shot down his first request.

John Evans, 18, of the Fifth District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt said he had been inclined to reduce the 15-year prison sentence Bryan O. Spurgeon had received for an attempted extortion scheme May 11, 1981 in Twin Falls.

Yet, the judge said, he had to reject the request because it had been filed too late. Spurgeon filed a claim July 2 in Fifth District Court in which he asked the court to again consider reducing his sentence to 11 years on the grounds that the public defender representing him failed to file the request in a timely manner.

Spurgeon, 26, had wanted the sentence cut in order to be eligible for parole next month. A Cassia County court already had reduced a 15-year prison term he and his two accomplices had received for the attempted kidnapping of John Evans Jr., May 15, 1981. The men also received 15-year prison sentences for robberies in Mindoka and Cassia counties.

Spurgeon had appealed his original sentence to the Idaho Court of Appeals. The higher court upheld the sentences and remanded the cases back to district court in October 1984.

In an affidavit included in Spurgeon's newest claim, Twin Falls County Assistant Public Defender Tim Wilson said that Spurgeon's request for a reduced sentence should have been filed within 120 days after the case was returned to district court. Due to some oversight, the request was not filed until April.

According to a complaint filed with the court, Spurgeon was one of three men who held the wife of a Twin Falls grocery store manager at gunpoint and demanded money from her husband. She later was released unharmed.

No hearing has been scheduled on Spurgeon's second request for a reduced sentence.

Hailey council deletes portion of solar ordinance

By BARBARA NEIWEIT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — In a surprise move by the city council, a new solar ordinance was changed to delete sections which would require developers to design new subdivisions in an energy-conscious manner.

The energy ordinance was unanimously approved at the council's May 13 meeting, but the council had to voice opposition to the ordinance and delete portions of the ordinance before it was adopted.

At the council's June meeting it was decided to give further consideration to the ordinance and later to read it until their next meeting.

The ordinance is not effective until it is read three times, or the council waives the reading and reads the title only, said city attorney Michael Donovan.

This technically enabled Mayor Wordell Rainey and councilman Bill House to voice opposition to the restrictions imposed on developers.

Sections deleted from the ordinance include provisions for streets, lots and building setbacks to be designed for solar access, assuring at least 80 percent of subdivision lots have solar orientation, and a provision requiring subdivisions to be designed to make use of renewable resources and energy conservation measures, where feasible.

Rainey and House opposed the use of "shall" and "where feasible" in the ordinance, contending the added cost to developers would increase the cost of the home for the buyer.

"Not once have we (the council) considered the economic feasibility of developers in our comprehensive plan," pointed out councilwoman Maryann Mix. "It goes totally against what we've ever done."

Amy Ecclesine, director of the Energy Information Office, argued in favor of maintaining the language in the ordinance.

"I don't want this ordinance two months ago without much difficulty," Ecclesine said. "You can kill this right now and you'll be doing the city a disservice."

Ecclesine explained the methods involved in designing a subdivision to allow solar access for residents, and gave examples on defining "where feasible" in the ordinance.

"We tried to design in some flexibility for the future," Ecclesine said. She noted those people who are energy conscious will seek a choice lot, but to insure people's right to the sun, it got to start with the developer.

Jerome levy goes through

By INA HADAM
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Sixty-three percent yes votes were cast in the Tuesday election for the supplemental levy of $133,000 for Jerome School District #261.

Out of a total of 418 people voting, 267 voted yes for passage of the levy and 152 voted no. A simple majority was required for passage.

In a special board meeting to canvass the levy election, acting chairman Alvin Choffinay said the vote count "shows a definite support for our schools." The election results were accepted by the board.

Superintendent Stephenson Youngerman says the election was needed because the state funding has not kept pace with the needs within the district. The majority of the levy will go to buy consumables for the schools. $25,000 will be used to set up a contingency reserve fund in case of an emergency or unexpected enrollments.

Garbage cans raise stink in Hazelton

HAZELTON — Hazelton city council members agreed to issue one warning about the use of 50-gallon barrels for garbage collection, before they started picking them up.

The council had voted to ban trash burning within the city after June 1 and residents were also required to provide proper sized garbage barrels by the same date.

However, the city council finds some people still using the barrels, so the council voted Monday to instruct the city crew to start picking them up.

Proper size containers, of not less than 20 gallons, larger than 32-gallon nor weighing more than 22 pounds when filled, must be used. They also must have a tight fitting cover which must be on at all times.

Any containers not meeting these specifications will be picked up along with the trash if they are left in the alley.

Council members also instructed city marshal Jack Taylor to enforce Ordinance 170, which is the dog leash ordinance, to the maximum.

Dogs must be on a leash or in a fenced enclosure or they will be picked up.

In other business: Council voted to give all city employees a three percent salary increase effective Oct. 1, 1985.

Clint Watson was hired from ten applicants for the position of city marshal/working supervisor to replace John L. Taylor, who will retire on Oct. 1. Watson will begin training under Taylor in the near future.

The Valley T Gang 4-H Club, led by Shirley Schutte will landscape and fill the planter in the city park at the old water tower site.

Surgery may be way to treat arthritic spurs

DEAR DR. LAMB: Six months ago I had a lower back problem resulting in pinching a nerve that goes down the left leg. I had X-rays and the doctor found I have osteoarthritis of the lumbosacral area with spur formation. There are two spurs located on the lower spine.

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

What causes these spurs to form, and what can I do to get rid of them? What must I do to irritate them and have problems in my later years? I am 44 years old.

Is there any vitamin I can take to get rid of the spurs without upsetting the chemistry of the body?

DEAR READER: Arthritic spurs are fairly common. Often they exist without causing any symptoms. In other instances they may compress a nerve or other structures and cause pain. When normal bone degenerates and regenerates, it doesn't always do it perfectly. Osteoarthritis causes bone degeneration. As the bone regenerates it may form as a spur.

Your case is a good example why backaches cannot always be treated with "chiropractic" techniques. While the papaya enzyme helps in some cases of degenerated disks, it cannot help such problems as arthritic spurs or many other causes for backaches.

In some cases surgery is helpful in relieving compression that causes pain. You are rather young to have osteoarthritis but it can occur even at an earlier age.

I pulled it off and placed it on the table. Then I realized it was a tick. I went to a doctor to see if the head of the tick was still there. He opened the tick mark which now did not have any red circles around it. He said there was no head there, just put hot compresses on it each day. I have not had any trouble, but how long should it take for the bite mark to go away? It's been there five months.

DEAR READER: A little nodular spot may persist for years after a tick bite. Some even cause discomfort and have to be removed surgically. If it doesn't bother you I would ignore it. It is important to remove all the head. A tick can be removed by forceps. But hard ticks can also be removed with "pesticides" (Vaseline) and after about two hours the tick will open its jaws and it can be removed easily.

During the tick season it is important to protect yourself if you are near tall grass, trees or bushy areas. Wear long sleeves, tuck your pant legs inside your shoes and use a suitable insect repellent.

There are no vitamins you can take to relieve the situation. Taking calcium will not help as this is not osteoporosis (dissolving bones). The truth is we do not know what causes spurs. They are attributed to wear and tear, but it does affect the weight bearing joints, primarily.

I am sending you The Health Letter 20-2, Osteoarthritis: Degenerative Joint Disease, for more details. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 1822, Irvine, Calif. 92713.

Since wear and tear or weight bearing seems to be a factor, it is obvious that exercise is not a good treatment for osteoarthritis. You need to do enough to maintain muscle strength, and you need to do stretching exercises to maintain full mobility, but otherwise too much exercise only makes this form of arthritis worse.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I found what looked like a piece of skin the shape of a watermelon seed, with a red circle around it on my buttocks. When I

Obituaries no place for health advice

DEAR ABBY: I have great respect for your reasoning, and I especially admire your long answers, but sometimes your short ones don't measure up.

Specifically, when someone wrote to say that whenever she read in the newspaper that someone had died of lung cancer, she wondered if that person had been a smoker. Then she added, "I think that should be included in the report of death, don't you?"

Your reply: "Yes, I'm sure most people would like to know."

Why stop there? I suggest the following:

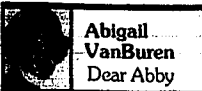

Died: John Doe, of liver disease after years of drinking like a fish. Survivors include Mary Doe and the Doe children, several of whom are drunks.

Died: Jane Doe, of a heart attack. Grossly overweight; Mrs. Doe never took care of herself. Survivors include her husband, Joe "Fats" Doe.

Died: Timothy Doe, of a drug overdose, a mixture of heroin and Drano. Survivors include his parents, who take too much Valium.

Died: Richard Roe, of injuries sustained in a traffic accident. Mr. Roe had five speeding tickets in the last three years.

I don't think you gave very much thought to your reply, Abby. Clearly, obituaries are not the place to provide health advice.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

— CHARLES L. SMITH, SEATTLE, ATTORNEY AND PIPE SMOKER

DEAR MR. SMITH: You are right, of course. I permitted my vehement anti-smoking bias to cloud my better judgment. Mea culpa.

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with this fellow for over a year, and we're planning to be married in September. My problem is I'm always getting an ex-lover or girlfriend thrown in my face. He tells me about the affairs he has had, and then wants to introduce us.

I keep finding their belongings (intimate apparel) all over his apartment. Yesterday was the last straw when I found some nude pictures of one of his girlfriends — taken at his place!

I really love him and keep forgiving him, but I don't know how much more I can take.

Please give me some helpful advice. I have already spent $800 on our wedding, and nothing can be returned.

HEARTBROKEN AND CONFUSED

DEAR H. AND C.: Call off the wedding and consider the $800 tuition in the school of experience. Marriage to this man would have cost you much more than $800 in anguish, pain, regret, headaches, sleepless nights and acid indigestion.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter was recently married in a traditional Protestant church wedding. Her mother and I sat in the front pew on the left, and the groom's parents occupied the front pew on the right.

We arranged to have a friend videotape the entire ceremony from an obscure position behind the minister.

After the honeymoon, the bride and groom — and both sets of parents viewed the tape of the ceremony. It was beautiful! We were able to see the faces of the bride and groom as they pledged their vows — not just the backs of their heads, which is the view we (and everyone else) had during the ceremony.

Abby, wouldn't it make more sense — and a more beautiful ceremony — if the bride and groom were to face the congregation during the ceremony? This might not go over so well with some ministers, but I'm sure the congregation would appreciate it. What do you think?

— SAN DIEGO PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: I think it's a great idea. But as soon as this hits print, I'll probably hear from someone saying, "That's not an original idea. WE did that!"

Albertson's executive criticizes legislature over unpaid bill

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Some private negotiations will be held here in the next week in an effort to resolve an unpaid bill which is costing the state of Idaho $71 per day in interest.

That unpaid bill, brought up Tuesday before a state Board of Examiners meeting, caused hours of negotiations among state attorneys. And it generated sharp criticism of the Legislature from both Republican and Democrat members of the board and an executive of one of the state's largest corporations, Albertson's Inc.

For the 1984-85 fiscal year, the Idaho Legislature has refused to pay a legal bill which started at $113,000 and now has reached nearly $150,000 due to interest.

The bill is due Coeur d'Alene attorneys Ray Givens and William Nixon.

They handled a lawsuit challenging the Legislature's 1982 reapportionment plan. They won, and were awarded legal fees by 1st District Judge Dar Cogswell.

The Idaho Supreme Court early in 1984 approved the judgment, but the Legislature has refused to pay the bill. In debate before the Idaho Senate, Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, told members since there was no fund or appropriation set up to pay the bill, the state didn't have to pay it.

Officials of Albertson's told the Board of Examiners the corporation doesn't appreciate being caught up in the debate over the legal fees.

Board members then tried to set up a meeting between Risch and House Majority Leader Jack Kennevik, R-Boise, and the Albertson's officials to explain the problems being caused because the Legislature refuses to pay the bill.

But at a special noontime Board of Examiners meeting, the state attorneys involved reported Risch asked for more time to negotiate a settlement privately.

That apparently must be done by Monday, when the Legislative Council meets. The council makes legislative administrative decisions.

Risch couldn't be reached for comment. Kennevik said later he wasn't contacted. But he said there were a couple of ways the bill could be paid, such as the Board of Examiners diverting funds from some other source; then asking the Legislature next session to appropriate the money.

Tom Salvino, senior vice president and senior counsel for Albertson's, said it was "irresponsible" and "unconscionable" for the Legislature to refuse to pay a legal bill.

Albertson's is involved because Givens and Nixon tried to garnish sales taxes collected by the corporation to satisfy the judgment.

Salvino said the nationwide food store chain finds itself involved in a time-consuming and costly legal battle, and wants no part of it.

The legal battles have been through two district courts. On Monday, Attorney General Jim Jones asked the Idaho Supreme Court to issue an order barring Cogswell's latest ruling from going into effect.

But late Tuesday afternoon, the Supreme Court refused the request. The court gave no explanation, in a brief order signed by Acting Chief Justice Allan Shepard.

"There is no question that it is a valid claim against the state, and it should be paid," said Jones. "But the Legislature has refused to do it."

"Something has to be done. The bill has to be paid," said Kennevik.

Gov. John Evans, specifically critical of Risch, said the time has come to end the foot-dragging. "The Board of Examiners must take a very firm stand on this. It is irresponsible for the Legislature to go along with this. They need to face reality."

"We resent being involved," said Salvino. He said the Legislature was setting a "bad example" for the rest of the state by defying judicial orders to pay the bill.

He said the supermarket chain is suffering disruption of business and legal bills but is "an innocent party" to the dispute. "We would like to see the debt paid by the state," he said.

"The reputation and integrity of the state is at stake."

Albertson's attorney Gary Rabbitt, Boise, said the company faces a 1st District Court order to pay the $142,000 to Nixon and Givens, and a Tax Commission directive not to pay it. He said the company is concerned that if it pays Nixon and Givens, the Tax Commission later will try to collect the $142,000 from Albertson's.

"We'd like to give it (the money) to somebody. We'd like to pay it. We know it isn't ours," said Salvino.

Budget crisis gone; state tally balances

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's latest budget crisis, with predictions of a deficit of up to $6 million in state revenue, suddenly has disappeared.

The Board of Examiners voted Tuesday to accept a report from Auditor Joe Williams showing the state wound up with a balanced budget when it closed the books on the last fiscal year on July 1.

For the past few weeks, state financial experts had been predicting the state would be nearly $6 million short of matching revenue with spending in the year ending June 30.

That set off political debate between Democrats and Republicans, because Idaho's Constitution requires a balanced budget.

Gov. John Evans directed state agencies to cope with the shortage by postponing paying bills where possible. That in effect would have pushed the budget shortage into the current budget.

But Williams said bills unpaid by state agencies are about normal this month, and it appears there is no deficit.

He said state agencies returned $1,475,577 as the unspent portions of their budgets, including $27,000 from his office. There was about $38,000 left over in the money appropriated to pay public school unemployment taxes, and $25,891 left over in the junior college Social Security appropriation.

The state Tax Commission originally had $9.4 million in a reserve fund to cover state tax refund claims, Williams said. That was reduced by $726,069, leaving $8,421,335 in that account which the auditor said should be enough to cover all the refund claims.

State Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon also reported that state investments earned $10.8 million, about $880,000 more than the estimate used in the state budget.

Controlled meltdown nuclear test a success

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A controlled nuclear-reactor-meltdown designed to duplicate conditions in the 1979 Three Mile Island power plant accident was successfully conducted Tuesday, officials said.

The twice-delayed, 30-minute test brought to an end the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory's Loss of Fluid Testing program at a test reactor about 50 miles northwest of here.

"The success we had today is a very good end to the LOFT program and the significance will be recognized world-wide very soon," said Douglas Croucher, EG&G Idaho's LOFT manager.

The test originally was scheduled a week ago, but was delayed when a malfunction in the reactor failed to release a control rod.

The mock reactor meltdown was designed to simulate conditions at a Pennsylvania power plant, Croucher said. The 50-megawatt reactor, smaller than a typical nuclear power plant's reactor, at first was allowed to run normally. Scientists then deprived the reactor core of coolant, allowing it to overheat.

Temperatures inside the reactor core reached 4,400 degrees Fahrenheit, Croucher said.

"The control rods and some of the fuel rods have been relocated to the lower portion of the core, forming a partially solid mass," Croucher said. "That condition is much like we've seen at Three Mile Island."

EG&G, which conducted the test, is charged with cleanup of the Three Mile Island plant.

Scientists hope to learn how many hazardous radionuclides are released in a severe accident at a nuclear power plant, and how they move through the power-generating system.

BLM officials say herbicides safe

BOISE — Federal Bureau of Land Management officials, looking for the green light to begin spraying controversial herbicides to control noxious weeds on federal range, are disputing environmentalist claims that the spraying plan is unsafe for humans.

"The worst-case analysis showed that these chemicals were not proposing to use are safe," said Steve Ellis, soil scientist with the Idaho BLM.

Ranchers and farmers, whose own land has been invaded by weeds choking out crops and beneficial range grasses, appeared at public hearings in Pocatello on Monday and again in Boise Tuesday in support of the BLM plan to cover over 24,000 acres of range in five states with the herbicides Banvel and Tordon.

Attorney requests more information

BOISE (AP) — The attorney for a LaPine, Ore., couple charged with disturbing an archeological excavation and stealing artifacts wants more information on the federal charges.

Eli Rapach, Lewiston, filed a request in U.S. District Court here Monday for more information about charges filed by the Justice Department against Patrick Dennis and Leonard Carroll Kelley.

The couple faces charges of illegal archeological excavation, theft of government property and damage to government property. The complaint alleges Kelley "excavated, damaged, altered and defaced" an archeological reserve at Cottonwood Bar on the Snake River without a permit. Kelley is charged with stealing a spear point valued at more than $100. His wife is charged with helping him.

Rapach's demand for more information demands to know what "archeological resources" was disturbed.

He also asked the government to show why it estimates damage to the archeological site at more than $5,000 and how it arrived at the value of more than $100 for the spear point.

State enlarges timber sales plan

BOISE (AP) — The state of Idaho plans to market 184,330 million board-feet of timber in the next 12 months, up about 20 million board-feet from last year's harvest.

State Lands Director Stan Hamilton received state Land Board approval Tuesday for the agency's marketing plan.

More than one-third of the sawlog harvest will be in the state's Clearwater District, 68,050 mbf. Another 40,170 mbf will be marketed in the St. Joe area and 21,500 mbf near Pend Oreille Lake.

Simple foods are best Cinnamon rolls are farm fare favorites

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — Satisfying the appetite of Jeanie Brown's family means preparing a meal of meat, potatoes and gravy. Never mind the fancy recipes.

Living on a farm, with long days and hard work, her family enjoys stick-to-the-ribs fare. Added to this, her sons, Race, 20, and Stormy, 18, are six feet, five inches and six feet, four inches tall, respectively, and seven-year-old Shasta is growing.

"There are lots of hollow legs to fill up," she says.

Brown says the boys are a little bit hesitant about eating fancy foods. And, as for casseroles, "They don't like the idea of everything being in one dish," she says. They will eat a casserole, as long as other food is served with it.

Broiled steak is a dinner-time favorite, and for breakfast they enjoy cinnamon rolls. She makes them frequently, but "not often enough, if you ask the boys," she says.

While Brown is preparing a meal, she usually has a pan of water ready for the baking pans and other cooking utensils. This way, there is never a big mess to clean up after dinner.

"You'll always have dishes, but I think if you can keep them done up as you go, that's a good idea."

"My dishwasher I usually use for the table dishes. There's not much to putting dishes in the dishwasher, but if you have all the baking things to do up, too, why then, it's a big job."

Brown is also a very busy person outside of her home. For the last seven or eight years, she has been chairman of the Kimberly Good Neighbors Day parade and is active in 4-H club and church activities.

Along with all of this, she is secretary for the Kimberly Christian Church and works as a clerk for the Twin Falls Livestock Commission Company on sale days.

The cinnamon rolls her family likes so well fit nicely into her full schedule.

"It's a cool rise dough, and I really like it because you can make it and put it in the refrigerator. Whenever you're ready to eat, you can take it out and bake them, and they're fresh baked cinnamon rolls," she says.

CINNAMON ROLLS

- 5-6 cups flour
- 2 packages yeast
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1 1/2 cups hot tap water
- 2 eggs

Combine 2 cups flour, undissolved yeast, sugar and salt in a large bowl. Stir well to blend. Add softened butter. Add hot tap water to ingredients all at once. Beat with an electric mixer at medium speed for 2 minutes. Add eggs and 1 cup flour. Beat with electric mixer at high speed for 1 minute. Gradually stir in just enough remaining flour to make a soft dough. Knead 5-10 minutes. Cover with a plastic wrap and a thin towel, and let rest 20 minutes. Punch down. Divide and shape into rolls. Dough can be refrigerated 2-24 hours, then, take rolls out and let stand for 10 minutes while pre-heating oven. Bake in greased baking pans at 375 degrees for 25 minutes.

Restaurant handbook makes eating out fun

By TERRY RICHARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — You have one hour for lunch. It took you 15 minutes to reach the restaurant, another 15 minutes to get the waitress's attention and now the chef botched your ground loin.

"Here, lady," you growl, pushing the plate into the waitress's hands. "Tell that sleazy subhuman in the kitchen that medium rare is pink, not oozing red."

The meat comes back perfect. Knowing you're going to be late for work, you stuff it ferociously. Then you catch the chef casting furtive glances in your direction. A snicker, distorts his lips.

You suddenly realize the meat distorts his right eye. The waitress is this guy just bluffing or did he actually garish your beef with something unsavory? Remember, you did call him "subhuman."

You hear the chef blow his nose just before a sinister laugh fills the air. You can't find his report in six.

After this or any bad experience in a cafe, do you just quit going out to eat? Of course not. What do you do? Get your hands on the new book, "Surviving In The Restaurant Jungle," by Claudia Carr, a restaurant manager in Sun Valley with 15 years in the business, and you'll have a tip without explaining why. To do so, she says, will cause the server to think "you're a jerk."

For servers, she gives advice on how to run up the tab using salesmanship, how to treat customers, how to defend themselves from customers and most of all, how to earn tips. In fact, the word "tip" in its varied forms appears 96 times in her short book.

Most of Carr's advice is sound, yet one point is easy to disagree with. She tells customers that when service is lousy, you should hit her with a tip without explaining why. To do so, she says, will cause the server to think "you're a jerk."

Well, when most of us don't leave a tip, we've already expressed our feelings about the server — "She's a jerk!" — and feel no further need for explanation. Also, there is one point she makes that is at odds with nature. On page 49, she tells servers to dress clean, polished and sexy. "Sex sells," she tells the server, "and there's no reason you can't cash in on it." But, then, in a subhead on page 81, she

CLAUDIA CARR
Advice for servers, eaters admonishes customers to "Never Touch A Waitress."

Come on, Claudia, that's too intriguing! Even the simplest fellow knows that sex sells, and that some people buy it — but from someone who is fully clad, vertical and untouchable all at the same time?

Enough of this harping. Mostly, her book oozes with good advice to both servers and customers.

Especially noteworthy is page 73, entitled, "Kids." Every parent who uses toy stores, shopping malls and restaurants as baby sitters should be sentenced to read this page a thousand times or until it sinks into their BB-sized brains that people hard at labor do not wish to rear strangers' children in their workplace.

Equally exciting and entertaining is her story on page 89 about how she punched out a customer who got his thrills by trying to kick her "ass," but hit her purse instead, scattering its contents hither and yon. The guy, it turns out, was a manager of another restaurant who should have known better.

Carr's book continues with self-defense lessons when the prods waitresses to dump drinks onto the crotches of groping male customers. Yet, most of the book is of the sabbler quality of ordering, serving and behaving in a civilized manner within the confines of eating establishments.

All in all, "Surviving In The Restaurant Jungle" is a good training manual for servers and customers alike.

Beat the heat with coolers

Sun tea and spritzers give heat relief

It's so hot that I really gave some thought to going out and sitting in our "hot tub." No, the tub hadn't really gotten to me, it was just that the thermometer on the tub was 10 degrees lower than the other outdoor gauge. That made it at least a "cool tub," right?

I think we are really just back to normal. After the short summers the last couple of years, we forgot just what one of our summers could be hot and dry.

And how dry it is! It really takes so much more to keep the lawns and gardens wet enough, not to even mention the farms. And, of course, the regular watering of people takes special effort.

Beside the cans and bottles and dry mixed packages of the commercial stuff, we seem to always be filling the blender or a pitcher with a cool, wet concoction.

We need another sun-tea jar, one for the purists who don't even want a hint of anything beside tea in their ice tea and one for us experimenters that think we can make a good thing better. Lemon mint added to iced tea is super. In fact, plain mint is good. I really have been pleased with some of the commercial herbal teas made the sun tea way.

In case you have not made any sun tea before, try it this way. You don't need to get one of those special jars. Just use a large canning jar with a lid. Use at least three tea bags per quart of water. Fill your jar with cold tap water, add the tea bags; put on the lid and set it out in the direct sunlight. It really doesn't take long on these hot days. You can make it much stronger by adding more bags or using the larger tea bags. If you do that, then you will want to dilute it with water when serving.

After it is brewed throw away the bags and put the jar in your refrigerator.

To serve, just pour over ice in a glass and garnish with a sprig of mint or a slice of lemon. A "spritzer" is made by adding club soda or carbonated water to almost anything. Most times, you'll see club soda added to white wine with a long twist listed as a spritzer, but you can make some really good non-alcoholic, thirst-quenching drinks using the same principle. Here's a really refreshing one.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

LIME-GRAPE SPRITZER

(This makes about 8 cups, so if you are using large glasses, you might want to double everything.)

8 lime slices (I like lime so use 1/2 lime slices, but cutting one lime into eight slices would work as well)

5 1/2 cups chilled club soda

2 1/2 cups chilled unsweetened grape juice

Place a slice of lime in each glass and add some ice cubes. Combine club soda and grape juice. Pour one cup of mixture into each glass. Easy and so cool.

You can't make spritzers ahead. They lose the fizz too fast, so put them together just before serving.

If you make watermelon balls, you know how much of the pulp goes to waste. Well, just remove all the seeds from the leftovers and use it this way.

WATERMELON COOLER

4 cups seeded watermelon, cut up

1 cup apricot juice

1/4 cup lime juice

1 1/2 tablespoons honey (optional)

Place a blender and liquefy the watermelon. Add the apricot and lime juice (and honey). Mix thoroughly, chill and serve in tall glasses over ice.

Garnish with lime slices or sprigs of mint.

Most melons make a good base for a cool thirst quenching drink. Try a cup of orange juice to 2 cups cubed cantaloupe blended together. You might try lime juice and honeydew melon, or honeydew and kiwi fruit. You can add pineapple juice and/or white grape juice.

Experiment a bit with what you might have on hand. Don't forget that yogurt blended in with most of these is really good.

This summer you'll need lots of liquids. To make the most mundane drinks special, perk them up with custom made ice cubes. Put a whole fruit (strawberry, raspberry, cherry (seeded), or even a couple of blueberries in your ice cubes. Slices of kiwi, lime, mandarin oranges or lemons are good inserted into the cubes, and even try the old standby, mint.

Iced coffee is really a good summer break. Make some ice cubes out of coffee and pour fresh brewed coffee over them. Now you can really go all out and layer ice cream in it and top with a mound of stiff whipped cream. Of course, a dollop of coffee liquor can be added.

I think strawberry daiquiris are super. They can be made with or without the liquor. They must be made in a blender. Here is a basic recipe. Try it and then make some changes to suit your palate.

STRAWBERRY DAQUIRI

2 cups fresh strawberries or 1 small frozen strawberry

1-6 ounce can frozen limeade

6 ounces white rum (maybe less)

Small ice cubes or crushed ice

Just blend everything. Serve in wine glasses or wide champagne glasses.

Well, there are a few ideas to help you cool off this summer. I'm trying to drink more water and have found I like keeping a pitcher of it ready in the refrigerator with slices of lemon floating on top. The lemon cuts the chemical taste of some water.

Enjoy!

Keep pen handy to write down refund offers

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Dear Martin — Several weeks ago, I saw an advertisement for Hery products, and I mentioned a $4 refund offer. I inquired about it at local grocery stores, and none of the employees knew anything about the offer. I then wrote to the company asking them to mail me a refund request form.

That was six weeks ago, and I have not received a response. Is this usual? Mrs. D. Kay, Mishawaka, Ind.

Dear Mrs. Kay — Readers often write to me asking whether it is wise to write to the manufacturers asking for their refund forms, especially when a high-value offer is involved.

Unfortunately, most companies do not send refund forms to consumers who request them. Some companies simply ignore requests for refund forms. Pillsbury publicizes this policy by placing the words "Any request for refund offer forms will not be acknowledged" on its refund forms.

Others respond with a rejection letter, which doesn't make much sense, since for the same 22 cents, the manufacturer could send the form and retain the customer's good will.

The exceptions to the rule are those companies that want greater exposure for their refund offers and sell special post-office boxes for consumers who would like to request these forms.

When you walk down a supermarket aisle and see a cardboard and notice that all the forms that had been attached are gone, look closely. The small print under "We're Sorry" may give you one of these special post-office boxes. Or, better yet, it may tell you that you don't really need a refund form, after all, and provide the address to which you should send the required proofs of purchase. These "cardboards," as refunders call them, and the valuable information they often contain, are another good reason why you should always have pen and paper with you when you go shopping.

Dear Martin — I read a letter in a recent column where a reader asked about "standardizing the size of coupons."

I have come up with a solution to the problem of different-size coupons. When I run across coupons that are smaller than average, I simply cut them out of the newspaper or magazine with more space around the borders. No matter how small they are, they wind up as regular-size coupons that fit nicely into my coupon wallet.

Some of the supermarket cashiers seem to mind that part of the advertisement may appear along the edge of the coupon. — Elsie Gordon, Delray Beach, Fla.

Dear Elsie — Many readers will probably react to your letter as I did. I checked a freshly clipped batch of coupons and found that I, too, perhaps unconsciously, clip the small coupons out a little larger. But coupons not only a pain, and the next time I do my clipping, I will follow your advice and make them all regular size.

College garden worth a visit

Impatiens overtake tulips as nation's No. 1 flowers

By EARL ARONSON
The Associated Press

Impatiens, those bright, cheerful flowers, are reported in No. 1 place as the most popular bedding plant in the United States, overtaking the long- and still-popular petunia.

There are new varieties of impatiens that do well in the sun as well as in the shade.

This is what Ernest F. Schaeffer, a professor emeritus of horticulture at Cornell University's New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, says:

"It seems many gardeners need a flowering plant that tolerates light as well as medium shade, and new varieties now appearing on the market are superb performers in these situations."

Some new impatiens vary in height from 4 to 18 inches; bloom may be single, semi-double or double. Blues and yellows are missing, but orange is an outstanding color.

Some companies are offering the compact "Accent" series that can provide non-stop blooms, up to 2 inches across, all summer. Colors include orange, scarlet, white, bicolor, salmon, pink and red. And there is a "mini" series in eight bright colors, offering a low carpet effect. The "Super Series" line is 8 to 10 inches tall, including "Coral" and "Bright Eyes."

The "Grande" series grows 14-15 inches tall, effective in hanging baskets and tubs.

Another firm offers F1 Hybrids: "Tara Rose," a dwarf, and "Confections," with double- and semi-double flowers, recommended for baskets, beds, containers and hanging baskets.

"Vista" is a series of 13 varieties in the New Guinea hybrid type, with big flowers, developed by Plantman Claude Hope of Linda Vista in Costa Rica for Ball Plasmant Plant Co. (not a retailer). Vista impatiens are not for heavily shaded areas. They like sun but with partial afternoon shade. They also favor a cool root zone, regular watering and a much of bark or chips.

Good In Shade
In addition to impatiens, annuals to plant in a semi-shaded spot are balsam, salvia, snapdragon, forget-me-not, lobelia and flowering tobacco.

New Items
Two new polyethylene compression sprayers ideal for house and patio plants have been introduced (by H.D. Hudson Manufacturing Co.).

One is a 2 1/2 liter Handy Sprayer, the other a half-gallon Bugwiser, the latter for small jobs, especially where accurate application is needed. They are handy for applying insecticides, fungicides and liquid fertilizers.

REXBURG — If you enjoy gardening or just looking at beautiful landscaping flowers and vegetables, the Ricks College Garden in Rexburg is one place you should visit. Rexburg is about 26 miles north of Idaho Falls on Highway 20.

The garden has a different look each year as plantings are changed and new things are added. During the past five weeks horticulture students will be constructing and landscaping a picnic shelter. Although there are presently no picnic tables, there are benches and grassy areas for informal picnicking.

The garden includes one of the most extensive vegetable variety trials in the Intermountain area. Over 300 different vegetable varieties are planted in rows for side by side comparison.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Over 100 of these are new varieties not previously shown in the garden. These include two 1984 All-America award winning vegetables and two 1985 winners.

In addition to variety testing, general growing aids are being tested for application to our climate. Included are black and clear plastic mulch, landscape fabric mulch, plastic row covers or tunnels and a translucent fabric row cover called Reemay. So far, each of the materials seems to have some benefit in speeding and improving vegetable growth. They will be discussed more in later columns.

The large landscaped beds of annual flowers are probably the most popular part of the garden. In addition to the landscaped beds, about 60 new annual flower varieties are planted in a row trials with companion varieties. All six of the 1984 and 1985 All-America Award winning flowers are included. Over 100 perennial flowers are planted on the east side of the garden.

On the south side of the garden near the greenhouses is a shaded lath structure where begonias and impatiens are planted. Added this year are hanging baskets of impatiens. Just west of the shade structure is a small rock garden with a collection of 90 alpine and rock garden plants.

On a small hill overlooking the south side of the garden are the strawberry and sweet corn plots. The garden is accessible at all times from the large parking lot on the south side of the Ricks College campus. Most of the flowers and vegetables are labeled by variety name.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College.

When resurfacing walls, it's best to use support strips

By ANDY LANG
The Associated Press

Q. — I am putting up wall panels over a wall that is already there. Can I cement the panels directly on to the old wall or do I have to build a framework first?

A. — You don't say what the old wall consists of and what kind of panels will be used, so the reply must be general rather than specific. While 4-by-8 panels can be installed directly over an old wall which is in fairly good condition, it is much better to attach furring strips to the wall and then install the new paneling. Furring strips usually are 1-by-2. Put them up horizontally, with vertical pieces where the edges of the panel will be. Use plumb lines and levels to be sure everything is perfectly straight. If not, use shims or small pieces of wood to get the furring just right. When you are sure it is, go ahead with the paneling, which then can be nailed or glued into place. Using an adhesive is fine, but place a few nails at the joints to be sure everything is kept everything in place until the adhesive is dry. Plan your job carefully. Make sure you have made provisions for electrical outlets and any other obstructions that might interfere with the installation of either the furring strips or the panels.

Q. — Our barn has an old aluminum roof that is beginning to develop cracks, apparently at the seams. They are very tiny cracks that can hardly be seen. If I solder them, will this prevent future leaks?

A. — You can't solder aluminum. Use what is called aluminum caulking material.

Undhjem, 53, leads state amateur

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

IDaho FALLS — Twin Falls' Virginia Undhjem turned back the clock 18 years on Tuesday to grab the opening-round lead in the Idaho State Women's Amateur Golf Championships here.

"Do you think the folks back home will believe this?" the beaming 53-year-old said. "You thought I was too old to play that kind of golf, didn't you?" she asked with a wider smile.

Undhjem dominated this event at one time, winning five times in 11 years after moving to Twin Falls in the late 1950s from Salt Lake City. But her last victory came on this course in 1967. Since then, she has been a consistent top-five finisher, but hasn't managed a knockout punch.

Actually, Undhjem had a very good

18 that will not show up. She carded a 35 on the backside to close Monday's pro-am round and had a 4-under-par 35 opening today's tournament play. But her 74 that she carded in Tuesday's round is still the second-best ever posted by a woman on Pinecrest. The best was established Monday at 73 by defending Idaho Amateur champion Jean Smith of Boise.

Undhjem had no problems on the front nine on Tuesday, getting one bogey but offsetting that easily with a birdie binge. She started to waiver a bit on the second nine, however, bogeying 10, 11 and 12.

"I lost it there for awhile. You know how that will happen—

But I got it back with two birdies on 13 and 14 and finished pretty well," she said.

Despite the 74, Undhjem managed just a one-stroke lead over Karen Darrington of Boise, who had rather a lackluster round until No. 16.

"I finished up with three straight birdies and that makes the score look better than probably the round was," said Darrington, who moved from Twin Falls to Boise this spring.

While that indicates that Darrington was at least satisfied with her day, Smith simply was disgusted. She buried the front nine in 1-over-par 40, but then duck-hooked her tee shot on No. 10 and finally wound up with a very respectable 2-over par 79 — respectable to most golfers.

"Nothing went really right," said Smith. "It's a good round to forget."

Those three were the only members of the field to break 80. Ginny Rasmussen, giving the home folks hopes for a local champion, carded an 81 and Susie Lund of Boise had an 82.

Leaders of the seven other flights included:

First flight — 1, Terrie Simpson, Butley, 81; Judy Johnson, Idaho Falls, 81; Jackie Abernathy, Ontario, Ore., and Carol Schmidt, Idaho Falls, both 81.
Second flight — 1, Linda Landolt, Idaho Falls, 86; 2, The Roberts, Robertson, Jerome, and Navee Moorey, Idaho Falls, both 89; 4, The Pat Frieboel, Pocatello; Elaine Schreiber, Pocatello, and Judy Jolley, Idaho Falls, all 91.

'Pokes sweep Legion pair from Minico

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE
Times-News writer

More Legion — D2

TWIN FALLS — If winning doubleheaders is a confidence-builder, the Twin Falls Cowboys should be ready to play in next week's American Legion baseball tournament at Salt Lake City.

The Cowboys, 10-1 and 9-8 winners over Minico Tuesday night, relied on the bats of Rob Ellis and Matt Harr for the victories. Ellis pulled a short hit to right field in the sixth-inning-to-lead-in-home two runners for a come-from-behind win, while Harr was 3-for-3 at the plate for the two games.

The twin killing improved the Cowboys' season record to 21-9 and its Southern Region "A1" mark to 10-1. The game was Thursday's 1 p.m. game at the University of Utah baseball complex against Rancho de Las Vegas.

Minico fell to 6-16 for the season and 2-6 in conference pending a Sunday twinbill in Rupert against Meridian.

The first game of Tuesday's twinbill was run-rule shortened after the fifth inning. The host Cowboys put five of their own across the plate in the first inning, then repeated the drubbing in the third with seven more. The Minico pitching staff helped its opponents though, with six walks in the first three innings, while Ellis and Casey Bartholomew sent the ball flying with triples.

Tom Prater held the Sage to five hits to improve his record to 7-2. Tim Vaughn absorbed the loss for Minico.

In the second game, Twin Falls went ahead 3-0 at the bottom of the first when Ellis drove in Harr and Kirk Slater. Kevin Ames hit the first pitch and sent the ball to right field, scoring Ellis.

Minico made it a 3-2 game the next inning after Scott Asson and Marty Carter scored after having gotten on base with singles. But in the Twin Falls third, Slater tripped ed, driving in Tim Crossman, then crossed home plate on a single by Nick Baumert-Ames—then—was walked, and Geoff Cooper singled, sending in Ames.

The clubs fell back on their defenses the next three innings. Of particular note was Asson's pitching performance. In the fourth and fifth innings he whiffed six of eight batters.

Minico finally came to life in the sixth. It all began when Mark Simpson was walked, and Jesse Branson singled. Asson and Carter, also singled, drove in Ames and Branson. The go-ahead run came in the form of Kevin Miller crossing the plate, and with two out, the Cowboys switched pitchers twice. In the end they found the right combination in Matt Harr, who was credited with the save.

"We just made a couple errors — a couple mental errors," said Cowboys Coach Mike Tremayne of the turnabout inning. Of Harr, he said that it had been "about three weeks" that he'd been seen on the mound, and that it was understandable that the sidewinder would take awhile to warm up. Harr walked Branson after a full count, but Asson dribbled an infield ball to the new pitcher for the easy put-out.

Twin wrapped up dark-ness-shortened game (due to an electrical short) in the sixth when Ellis hit a single, driving in Harr and Crossman. It was Ellis' second RBI of the game.

On Sunday, the Cowboys split a pair of non-conference games with Nampa at Frontier Field, forwarding their season record to 19-9.

Harr was credited with the 9-3 win in the opener, but Nampa's

Cowboys' Matt Harr deals a double play after forcing Minico's Kevin Miller

Anthony Negrette took home a 9-1 victory in the slugfest. Nampa took a 2-1 lead after two innings, but Twin Falls' break came in the fourth inning when John Mayer started it all with a walk. Phil Romans doubled, then Harr drove in Mayer. Crossman doubled, and a walk and an error came later, followed by a Kevin Sandau double. Harr and Crossman earned two RBIs each to lead the initial victory.

In the second seven-inning contest, and with most of their more experienced players in the dugout, the Cowboys watched as their defense had eight runs scored against it in the first two innings. Twin Falls' sole run came in the fifth.

Ore-Ida Women's Challenge

Thompson wins second stage of race

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

KETCHUM — The third leg of the second annual Ore-Ida Women's Challenge bicycle stage race will enter the Wood River Valley today.

The 62-mile race between the junction of Idaho Highway 21 and Idaho Highway 75 in Stanley and Old City Hall in Ketchum will begin at 11 this morning and take the racers between 2 hours, 15 minutes and 2 1/2 hours to complete.

The six-day stage race began Monday with a 86-mile Boise-to-Idaho City leg, then continued Tuesday with a 49-mile race from the Helende Campground, 10 miles east of Lowman on Highway 21, to Stanley. (See accompanying story).

Today's leg will be the longest of the race and will cover the most vertical relief, climbing from Stanley (elevation 6,260 feet) to Galena Summit (8,701 feet) in 26 miles and dropping from Galena Summit to Ketchum (elevation 5,800 feet) in the next 36 miles. The first racer to crest Galena Summit will be named Queen of the Mountain, a prize separate from that for winning the race.

Inga Thompson, who is currently in second place in the challenge, won this stage a year ago in 2:14.15 and was the Queen of the Mountain. Last year's event ended a few miles north of Ketchum on Highway 75 because unseasonably warm temperatures softened the asphalt on the city's streets and made cycling unsafe.

This year's route calls for the racers to leave Highway 75 at Saddle Road, travel east to Sun Valley Road, and then southwest on Sun Valley Road into downtown Ketchum.

The awards ceremony for today's third leg of the race will be held in front of the Old City Hall, starting about 1:30 p.m.

NL: LA stalks Padres

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers are seeking to add a five of it in the National League West.

Rick Honeycutt and Tom Niedenfuer combined to check Pittsburgh on six hits Tuesday night and Steve Sax had a two-run single as the Dodgers, getting 16 hits, pounded the Pirates.

The Dodgers, who trailed the division-leading San Diego Padres by five games only last weekend, now are behind by 2 1/2 games following the Padres' loss Tuesday to the Chicago Cubs. Los Angeles has won eight of its last 10 games, 13 of its last 19 and 17 of its last 25.

"We're for real," said reliever Niedenfuer, who worked the final 2-3 innings for his seventh save. "It's been an uphill battle for us but we're a little closer now. The big thing has been our defense. We made a lot of errors early in the season, but now we're fielding better."

Pirates' right fielder George Hendrick can't say the same thing. A pair of Hendrick errors led to three Los Angeles runs as the Dodgers' pinch-hitter starter Rick Riley, 5-9, for 12 hits over the first 5 1/2 innings.

Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner defended Hendrick, who is batting .239 and is being booed nearly every time he steps to the plate in Pittsburgh.

"He's pro. I've talked to him and he can take it," Tanner said. "If I had a better right fielder I'd play him, but he's the best right fielder I've got. He just hasn't played up to his capabilities this season."

Honeycutt, 47, allowed two Pirates runs and four hits over 5 1/2 innings until Niedenfuer worked the final

Chicago 7 San Diego 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Ryne Sandberg hit a pair of two-run home runs and scored three runs Tuesday to power the Chicago Cubs to a 7-3 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Chicago took a quick lead off Padres starter Eric Show, 7-6, when Billy Hatcher opened the game with a double and Sandberg hit a 3-1 pitch into the left field bleachers.

In the second, Chicago starter Steve Trout singled, and two outs, Sandberg hit his 12th homer of the season for a 4-0 lead.

The Cubs finished Show in the fourth with two more runs. Larry Bowa led off with a double, went to second on Trout's sacrifice bunt and scored on Hatcher's sacrifice fly.

New York 1 Cincinnati 11

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dwight Gooden won his sixth straight decision and George Foster, who had four RBIs and Keith Greene had three home runs Tuesday night as the New York Mets beat the Cincinnati Reds 11-2 for their eighth straight victory.

The Mets' winning streak is the longest this season by a National League team and equals their longest streak of 1994. The Minnesota Twins won 10 in a row for the American League's longest undefeated streak this season.

Gooden, 12-3, allowed back-to-back doubles by Tom Foley and Duane Winker and a run-scoring single to Max Venable in the eighth inning. He gave up two walks and five strikeouts in eight innings of work, raising his major-league leading total to 142.

The Mets beat Mario Soto, 6-9, who suffered a career-high sixth loss in a row. The right-hander hasn't won a game since June 4.

Montreal 5 Atlanta 1

ATLANTA (AP) — Right-hander Bryn Smith yielded only five hits and had a career-high 10 strikeouts Tuesday night, including six in a row, to lead the Montreal Expos to a 5-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

It was the fifth victory in the last six decisions for Smith, 10-3, who walked three in 8 1/2 innings. Tim Burke got the final out for his third save.

St. Louis 3 San Francisco 0

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Danny Cox beat San Francisco on five hits Tuesday night and Vinco Coleman started a first-inning rally as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Giants 3-0.

Cox, 10-4, gave up three walks and had six strikeouts as the Cardinals won their third consecutive game and maintained their 2 1/2 game lead over New York and Montreal in the National League East.

Carl Davis and Jeff Leonard had two hits each off Cox, who lost his shutout when Chris Brown singled home a run in the ninth.

St. Louis got the only runs it needed off Bill Leasky, 1-1, in the first inning when Coleman singled, stole second and scored on Tom Herr's double. Jack Clark then singled, but left fielder Leonard threw Herr out at the plate.

Dodgers deal Oliver to Jays for Matuszek

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers on Tuesday traded former National League batting champion Al Oliver to the Toronto Blue Jays for first baseman Len Matuszek.

Oliver, 38, has a .305 lifetime average in 17 seasons, the fifth-best average among active major leaguers, but has been used sparingly since the Dodgers acquired him from the Philadelphia Phillies on Feb. 4 for pitcher Pat Zachry.

Matuszek, 30, was a teammate of Oliver's last season with the Phillies and was batting .212 with two home runs and 16 RBIs as a platoon designated hitter with the Blue Jays.

He hit .248 with 12 homers and 43 RBIs last season, his first full year in the major leagues.

Clark, who took second on the throw, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Andy Van Slyke's single as the Cardinals took a 2-0 lead.

Philadelphia 5 Houston 3

HOUSTON (AP) — Juan Samuel's home run singled a five-run fourth inning Tuesday night and sparked the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-3 victory over the Houston Astros.

Kevin Gross, 8-7, went 6 1/2 innings and gave up two runs on six hits for his third consecutive victory. Houston's Bob Knepper, 8-5, went seven innings and gave up five runs on eight hits.

Twin Falls Kiwanis win another trophy

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

Twin Falls Kiwanis is celebrating the all-star of all-stars this year, as the squad captured yet another championship in the southern Idaho circuit of boys' baseball invitational tournaments.

To top a victory June 23 at home, Kiwanis called down another title July 7 in Caldwell by outlasting the Caldwell Blue Crew 1-0. The Twin Falls Softball Association grabbed consolation honors at the tournament with an easy 9-2 victory over Boise Western Trophy.

Kiwanis took the title of the round-robin, 16-team event from Caldwell in a "final" bout ended by a swirling weather — the mercury neared 110 degrees.

Nonetheless, the hurling prowess of Kiwanis' Ryan Brouter, who gave up just three hits, brought the Twin Falls team through the defensive battle.

Brouter didn't limit his efforts to the mound, though. The game was scoreless until the bottom of the third inning when he walked, took second on a passed ball and stole third. With one out, Riley Boyd peppered one down third-base line to Buster Houser.

Kiwanis clogged all Caldwell scoring after that to secure the crown. Area teams will face off in the Jerome Invitational this coming weekend.

In Twin Falls boys Babe Ruth action, Prime Cut, held on to its league lead and undefeated record by trouncing Kimberly Bank & Trust 11-0 in the first game of last week's play, which was shortened to four games in the fourth of July holiday. Bryce Armstrong took the pitching win for Prime Cut, giving up only one bit.

A hot bat in the hands of Shane Clark powered Wilson Bates/Maxie's Pizza to a 12-5 triumph over Sherwood's Clark was four of four on the day, including two triples. Buster John Hayes collected his fifth win of the season.

Barry Smith collected pitching honors of his own last week, throwing his fourth shutout and fourth no-hitter on Tuesday in a Valco/Culligan Drabbing-of-Norwest-Financial-George's 10-0.

Twin Falls Bank & Trust earned its second victory of the season against Depot Grill/Gornik Construction, 9-5. Matt Rasmussen was the winning pitcher.

AL: Guidry collects 10th straight win

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Mattingly is looking just like a batting champion — which he was last year. The New York Yankees' first baseman extended his hitting streak to 17 games Tuesday night when he drove in the lead run in the fourth inning of a 6-4 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

"I'm starting to get hits now," said Mattingly, who started the year slowly when compared to his .343 average of 1984 but is on a 35-for-89 streak on 104-200.

"I was pulling off the ball early in the year. Now, I'm just trying to hit the ball up the middle. I feel good and I'm seeing left-handers good. When I'm doing that, I'm right where I need to be. I've been hitting the ball hard now for the last week-and-a-half."

Mattingly singled in the first inning to help set up a run and his four-inning hit put the Yankees ahead to stay 3-1. He scored Ricky Henderson, who had doubled home the tying run and has scored 22 of Mattingly's American League-leading 59 RBIs.

Ron Guidry allowed nine hits but only two earned runs in 8 1/2 innings for his 10th consecutive victory. Loser Bud Black, 5-10, was touched for 10 hits and five runs, one of them unearned — in 5 1/2 innings and suffered his seventh consecutive setback.

California 5 Milwaukee 4

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Juan Benitez singled to score Rob Wilfong from second base in the 10th inning Tuesday night, giving the California Angels a comeback 5-4 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Wilfong led off the inning with a line drive to left that went for a double when Robin Yount lost the ball in the glare of the lights. Benitez hit the first pitch from Rolle Fingers, 1-4, into center field to score Wilfong with the winning run.

Donnie Moore, 7-3, quelled a 10th-inning Milwaukee threat to pick up the victory, California's eighth in nine extra-inning games.

The Angels sent the game into extra innings tied 4-4 when Bill Downing hit Moose Haas' first pitch of the ninth inning over the left center field fence for his fifth home run of the season.

Cleveland 7 Texas 2

CLEVELAND (AP) — Bert Blyleven tossed a four-hitter for his major league-leading 12th complete game and Andre Thornton had a home run, two singles and a bases-loaded walk and knocked in four runs as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Texas Rangers 7-2 Tuesday night.

In pitching the seventh straight complete game, Blyleven, 8-8, struck out five and walked five to give the Indians their first three-game winning streak since May 19-21.

Baltimore 11 Minnesota 6

BALTIMORE (AP) — John Shelby and Alm Wiggins drove in two runs alone during a six-run rally in the fourth inning and Eddie Murray clouted a grand slam homer in the sixth as the Baltimore Orioles came "behind" to defeat the Minnesota Twins 11-6 Tuesday night.

The Orioles trailed 4-0 before loading the bases in the fourth on a walk to Wayne Gross, a single by Larry Sheets, and a bad-hop single by Jim Dwyer on a potential double-play grounder to second baseman Tim Lincecum.

Boston 6 Oakland 3

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Steve Lyons chopped an infield hit to score the deciding run and highlight a three-run Boston rally in the ninth inning Tuesday night.

Oakland A's 8-3 Tuesday night. Right-hander Dennis Boyd, 10-7, scattered seven hits and pitched his 11th complete game. Steve Ontiveros, 0-1, the third of four Oakland pitchers, was the loser.

Chicago 5 Detroit 6

CHICAGO (AP) — Chet Lemon popped a bases-loaded single to right to cap a four-run Detroit ninth-inning rally and lift the Tigers to a 6-5 comeback victory over the Chicago White Sox Tuesday night.

Chicago had a 5-2 lead going into the bottom of the ninth when the Tigers made their move.

Wood River, which trailed 16-8 after 5 1/2 innings, erupted for seven runs in the sixth inning, nearly tying the game. But it could get no more in the seventh and final frame.
