Reagan's recovery progresses well

Interest rates falling, but farmers pay more

WASHINGTON — The nation's largest farm lending system, suffering from its highest loan losses ever as a result of agriculture's financial crisis, is turning for help not to the government, but to its farmer-borrowers.

Bolivian voters suffer delays

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivians voted Sunday in a presidential election called one year early to replace a leftist government embattled by the world's highest inflation.

Voting ran into delays of up to three hours in many of the 1,823 polling stations in this landlocked Andean nation because of election judges showing up late, and in some cases unprepared for the ballot-counting.

Ballooting was halted at 21 polling stations in El Alto, a suburb of the capital of La Paz, after voters protested that ballot boxes lacked padlocks. Judges then shut voters outside to wait for locks. But at one school, people pushed and banged on doors, demanding to get inside to guard against cheating.

Peace plan set to take effect

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A peace plan to end rule by militia in the capital's mostly Moslem western sector is due to take effect Monday following the arrival of five military observers from Syria to supervise it.

Syria dispatched the observers Sunday to sit on a coordination committee of Moslem political leaders, army officers and militia commanders charged with enforcing peace in west-Beirut and at the hijack-plagued international airport.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami presided when the committee held its first meeting Friday at his west Beirut office and agreed on an outline for a new security plan for the capital.

Tax protest chief arrested

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The head of a tax protest group has been arrested on a charge of attempting the murder-for-hire of an Internal Revenue Service agent, following several weeks of investigation.

IRS spokesman Eric Roberts in Nashville identified the man arrested Saturday as Richard Frank Arnold, head of the Augusta, Ga.-based Patriot Network. He said he did not know the name of the targeted agent.

The group believes that IRS forms endanger constitutional rights and that "federal reserve notes are not backed by gold and silver and, therefore, are not valid currency," he said.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police on Sunday arrested more than 100 people who had gathered in the Black township of Soweto to protest rent increases for government housing.

In other areas also near Johannesburg, two blacks were killed in weekend violence, a spokesman from national police headquarters in Pretoria said.

Protests against the white-minority government's policy of racial separation have grown increasingly violent over the past 10 months and some 450 blacks have been killed.

In Soweto, a township with a population of nearly 1.5 million, police said they arrested 107 people for gathering in front of Mayor Edward Kunene's house and at a Methodist youth center. Most were Soweto Civic Association members protesting proposed rent increases for government-owned houses, according to the police.

Endangered eagles moved

DIVIDING CREEK, N.J. (AP) — Ten fledgling bald eagles have arrived from Canada to join four other birds as part of the state's restoration project of the endangered species.

The eagles, between six and eight weeks old, arrived late Friday in the Bear Swamp area and were placed in hacking towers, where they will be observed for several days before being freed, said Michael Valenti, a zoologist for the state Division of Fish, Game and Wildlife.

They were flown 1,600 miles from Manitoba, Canada, where they are not an endangered species.

Reagan moves on abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — After years of outspoken criticism of Supreme Court doctrine on abortions, the Reagan administration will ask the court to overturn its landmark 1973 decision legalizing such operations.

Justice Department sources said Sunday.

Moving to intervene in a case involving Pennsylvania law, department lawyers have prepared an anti-abortion brief embodying the administration's arguments and will file it with the high court on Monday, said the sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified.

Since the 1973 Roe v. Wade ruling that legalized abortions, Ronald Reagan as private citizen, candidate and president, has complained that the Supreme Court has infringed on states' rights to limit abortions.

In its brief, the government argues that the justices did not intend to make their decision so broad that it would block even modest attempts by the states to control abortions.

Two years ago, the Supreme Court voted to strike down several local legislative restrictions, upholding the constitutional right to obtain an abortion and the membership of the court has not changed since then.

Nevertheless, the court agreed in April to review the Pennsylvania case, Thornburgh v. American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

Carter criticizes Reagan's tough talk

CORFU, Greece (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter criticized as "ill advised" and "a mistake" on Sunday President Reagan's denunciation of international terrorism.

Carter, on vacation, told a news conference, "Terrorism can be dealt with calmly and effectively rather than with threats addressed to a world audience. That's a mistake for the leader of a great nation like ours."

In a speech to the American Bar Association last week, Reagan spoke of "a pattern of terrorism" and "a confederation of criminal governments united by hatred of the United States."

Carter said he disagreed with Reagan's "basic premises of an international conspiracy, of collusion in terrorism between nations and whole people."

JIMMY CARTER
Denunciation 'ill-advised'

Carter was speaking at the end of a weekend visit to this Greek resort

Island, where he met for two hours over lunch Saturday with Premier Andreas Papandreu of Greece, who is vacationing here.

Carter said he and Papandreu discussed the U.S. travel advisory warning Americans to avoid Athens Airport because of inadequate security. He said the advisory should be rescinded "in a short time" and that Papandreu assured him that security at the airport was now "adequate."

The advisory was issued June 18, four days after a TWA jetliner was seized by two hijackers who boarded in Athens on a flight to Rome.

Carter also said he thought that increased contacts between Papandreu and senior U.S. officials would benefit troubled Greek-U.S. relations. The only senior Reagan administration officials to meet with Papandreu since he came to power in 1981 were Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and his assistant, Richard Perle.

"It's not my role to be a messenger. But Mr. Papandreu was strongly returned for another four-year term. It would be beneficial to have direct communications and talk between the leaders of our two countries," Carter said.

Papandreu's Panhellenic Socialist Movement last month captured 161 seats in the 263-member parliament.

Carter, with his wife Rosalynn, arranged to fly to Athens on Sunday for a two-day visit as guest of the Greek government.

The Carters' travel plans called for a visit to Turkey this week where the former president will meet Turkish leaders.

Analyst predicts gas prices will continue to rise

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite falling crude oil prices, motorists keep paying more for gasoline because dealers have widened their profit margin to cover earlier losses and because of costs necessary to remove lead, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday.

Gasoline prices across the nation rose an average of 0.82 of a cent a gallon for all grades of gasoline since June 21, said Lundberg, who surveys 17,000 gasoline stations in 50 states every two weeks for his Lundberg Letter.

"This will continue right straight through to next January," he said. "The public is going to have to pick up this increasing tab for the luxury of getting poisonous lead out of our bloodstreams."

Lead has been added to gasoline as a relatively inexpensive way to boost octane. But as the trend is increasing to unleaded gasolines because of exhaust emissions from leaded gas, the leaded variety becomes more expensive.

Lundberg foresees a narrowing of the gap between the cost of leaded and unleaded regular as the nation moves to reduce the amount of deadly lead entering the air.

He said the largest increase shown in his most recent survey was for self-serve, leaded regular, which rose 0.77 of a cent to an average price of $1.12.53 a gallon. Regular unleaded was at $1.20.31, up 0.48 of a cent, and premium unleaded hit $1.31.91, an increase of 0.38 of a cent per gallon.

"People driving the older fleet (using regular gasoline) are shouldering the price for getting the lead out," Lundberg said.

Crude oil prices continued falling, as they have for the past three months, as Mexico cut its export prices last week and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Nations was still in disarray, he said.

The price of crude oil on the international spot market dropped approximately $1 a barrel since April.

Domestic crude prices have not dropped in accordance, but exact figures were not available, Lundberg said.

The lower crude oil prices were reflected in a 0.12-of-a-cent drop in wholesale gasoline prices nationwide during the survey period, Lundberg said. Despite that, gasoline prices at the pump have risen by more than 10 cents a gallon since February, he said.

"And unless domestic crude should fall still more, retail gasoline prices will continue to march up to a different drum beat," Lundberg said.

Afghans demand return of choppers

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Islamabad demanded Sunday that Pakistan return two Afghan helicopter gunships and their crews at once, claiming the aircraft had gotten lost and strayed over the border.

Pakistan was not contacted.

According to Pakistani officials and an Afghan guerrilla commander, two Afghan air force Mi-24 helicopter gunships with seven crew landed Saturday at the Pakistani border town of Miran Shah and asked for political asylum.

The Soviet-made helicopters, codenamed "Hind" by Western military forces, are the most formidable gunships in the Soviet arsenal.

Radio Kabul, the official Afghan government radio, said in a broadcast Sunday night the helicopters were on an internal flight when they became lost, strayed across the border and mistakenly landed at Miran Shah.

Bishop's example can save S. Africa

It was an extraordinary scene, even for South Africa: an angry black crowd sensing betrayal, a car turned upside down and set afire, and Bishop Desmond M. Tutu, in purple clerical robes, moving through the people to wave them off a gasoline-doused man — a black man — who, were it not for the bishop's intervention, would surely now be dead.

The crowd in Durban accused its victim of being a police informant. For this he would be dealt with as have been the many township councillors, deputy mayors and the like: hacked to death or set afire — deeds seen as fit punishment for turning against one's own.

In the televised film you could see Bishop Tutu and Bishop Simeon Nkomo moving in the crowd, gesturing urgently without laying on a hand. "This undermines the struggle," Bishop Tutu cried, acting out his philosophy of nonviolent resistance at extraordinary personal risk.

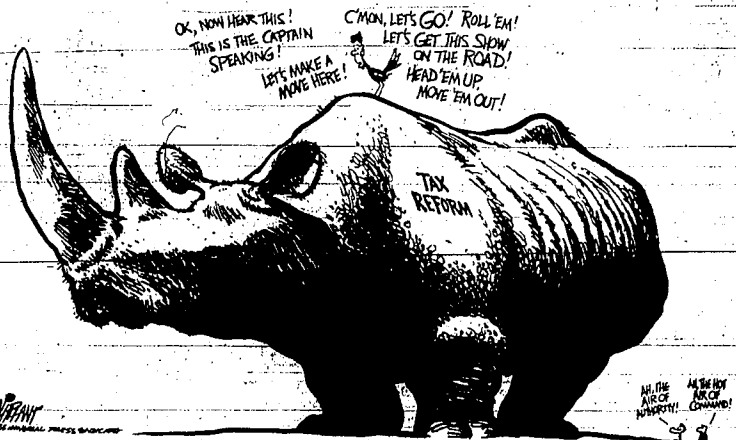

This is the same Bishop Tutu who, three years ago, confronted a large, white policeman beating an elderly black man with a stick and held a cross aloft until the beating stopped. In late 1981, a black crowd at a funeral attacked another suspected police informant, and Bishop Tutu flung himself across the victim, persuaded the attackers to back off and then gave a service wearing clerical robes soaked with the man's blood.

More than 400 blacks have been killed in political violence in South Africa in the past 10 months. Just days ago, it was the police who committed the violence, in Kwa Zema. Witnesses said the police fired tear gas and rubber bullets indiscriminately into a movie house, where frightened mourners had fled from police after an all-night service for still other black youths killed in a hand-grenade explosion weeks before. Seven died. Violence against blacks — whoever commits it — is the infection of apartheid. "Many in the black community, incensed at the injustice of apartheid, believe that anyone who collaborates in the apartheid system is a co-oppressor," Bishop Tutu said after the Durban attack. "And you will recall that collaborators were dealt with very, very harshly, with summary justice, during World War II in the resistance movement."

This is not to condone what is done to them, but it is to say that it is a phenomenon that is universal. And our own effort, as the church, is to try and say any form of violence is unacceptable and will not in the end solve the problems of our country amicably.

What will "solve the problems of our country amicably" is, of course, the example of Bishop Tutu's nobility of spirit and a decision by the current white rulers to reach out to people such as him who have the capacity to save South Africa.

Too-high dollar is key to trade deficit

Lester Thurow

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — "The dollar is too high. American firms — high tech, low tech, goods, services — cannot compete. But what is to be driven out of business, they not surprisingly ask for protection from foreign competition. But protection simply makes them dependent upon government largesse for their survival. They may not call it socialism, but it is: Private firms are not owned by government, but they are dependent upon regulations of government for survival. They are not socialized. Free enterprise does not exist unless foreigners are not free to compete in the American market."

The current political pressures for general protection damage more than the U.S. economy. They damage the foreign alliances upon which the United States depends. It is difficult to see an economic war on one's allies and still have allies. This is why the United States government is so ambivalent about getting tough with the Japanese. To get tough economically and drive the Japanese into independent international positions would not be smart politically. On many issues, such as the Middle East, they would not come down on our side. The Japanese have lots of interest in Arab oil and not much interest in Israel.

In 1984, America's consumption of foreign merchandise exceeded sales of merchandise to foreigners by $107 billion. Some talk loosely about trading foreign manufactured goods for American services, but they simply don't understand U.S. balance of payments statistics. In the summary balance of payments statistics, interest payments on American-owned foreign assets are counted as services. If they are excluded, as they should be, the United States had a $1 billion deficit in services trade in 1984. It was buying more services from foreigners than it was selling services to foreigners. It wasn't competitive in services any more than it was competitive in merchandise.

To finance its international deficit the United States has to borrow money abroad. In 1984, the United States was still a net creditor and could pay for some of its imports with its earnings — $18 billion — on its foreign assets. But as of April 1985, it became a net debtor and from now on will have to borrow money to finance both its net imports and to pay interest in its rapidly growing foreign debts.

At some point the party will end and those debts will have to be paid. The larger debts become the more painful the repayment period will be.

The answer is neither to grant protectionism nor to stochastically end the present situation. The answer is to lower the value of the dollar.

Why don't we do so? Part of the answer is found in a Washington administration that has a deep belief that one should not intervene in free markets. No one doubts that the foreign currency market is a free market. What this religious belief forgets, however, is that the stock market crash of 1929 was also produced by a free market. Free markets can and do produce unacceptable results.

Many analysts have convinced themselves that private speculators have so many funds that they could and would overwhelm and offset any government intervention. There are three responses to this.

First, put it to the test. Intervene and see if speculators are stronger than the U.S. government in international currency markets. If they are, nothing will be lost that hasn't already been lost.

Second, it is very unlikely to be true. If one is betting on whether the dollar will go up or down, no one very smart systematically bets that the dollar will go up when the seller of dollars has an unlimited supply. Foreign currency speculators are very smart, and the U.S. government can print dollars.

Third, many who argue that foreign currency interventions would not work currently gain from the high-valued dollar. While farming and industry are being hurt, U.S. financial institutions are being helped. They get hundreds of billions of dollars of foreign money to manage. If the dollar were to go down, foreign money would go home. One should always be suspicious of self-serving advice. And nothing is more self-serving than a bank economist testifying that foreign currency intervention won't work.

Simple teacher tests mock profession

Thomas Toth

Even though Arkansas has now pronounced 2,803, or 10 percent, of its educators unfit to continue working in the state's public schools unless they improve their academic skills, the Arkansas teacher test is no insurance that schoolchildren in the state will be taught by fully literate teachers.

The test is too easy. It is in three parts: reading, math and writing. But Arkansas officials claim that the test will require math to compute students' grades, only enough reading skills to understand teachers' guides and only enough writing ability to send a comprehensible note home to parents.

Any well educated 9th-grader could handle these tasks.

In this "information age," the identification of those teachers who lack these simple skills should offer little reassurance.

On the contrary, the Arkansas results should cause the public to ask how many of that state's teachers would fail a serious test of literacy skills.

Understandably, Arkansas legislators also felt the state's teachers should show they know the subjects they teach.

But the testing law they passed allows teachers to demonstrate that knowledge by earning six hours of college credit putting in six foot down with those who failed the literacy section of the test last spring.

They may take and retake the section(s) of the exam they failed as many times as they wish during the next two school years. To help them, the state will produce a refresher course to be broadcast on educational television and will distribute study guides. Those who still cannot manage a passing grade by June 1987 will not have their licenses renewed. But since the state issues teaching licenses on a six-year cycle, teachers who are relicensed in 1986 but are unable to pass the test by 1987 won't be dismissed until 1992, seven years from now.

Gov. Bill Clinton was in an awkward position in the fall of 1984. A task force, chaired by his wife, Hillary, had presented him with a bleak portrait of the state's schools, and a series of recommendations to improve them.

Action on the recommendations necessitated a special session of the legislature and a tax increase. The public, through opinion polls, was demanding accountability from the state's schools.

On Sept. 19, on the eve of the special session, the governor launched his campaign for a teacher test on statewide television.

There is little doubt that the passage of the teacher-testing law during the session made it much easier for skeptical legislators to pass the first increase in Arkansas' sales tax in 25 years — and to earmark all of the proceeds to education.

The circumstances were even more clear-cut in Texas, where the legislature, also meeting in special session on education, last summer passed a massive $4.8 billion, three-year tax package, primarily to fund initiatives in education.

Influential legislators simply refused to back the tax package without some sort of visible method of holding the education establishment accountable for its performance.

"No test, no tax," became the well-known slogan of House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schuler.

Even though at least 50 percent of the $160 million in new revenue produced in the first 12 months of the sales-tax increase in Arkansas went to teacher salaries, the Arkansas Education Association has battled the testing law in state court (unsuccessfully), sent lobbyists across the country to Little Rock to work for its repeal, called in a parent organization, the National Education Association, to "investigate" the test publicly and vowed to take the test to federal court.

Once political allies of Clinton, a Democrat, AEA members now adorn their cars with "No More Clinton's Tax" bumper stickers.

Nonetheless, if testing teachers is to make a real contribution to the improvement of the profession, test standards must be set high enough to convince talented potential applicants that they are entering a serious profession, one that can offer them a modicum of prestige.

The Law School Admission Test and the Medical College Admission Test certainly assess the sort of influence over prospective lawyers and doctors. Unfortunately, a test such as Arkansas', which aspires only to reassure the public that teachers can even read and write, probably does not.

Reapportionment battle boils down to case of personalities

BOISE — If the Idaho Legislature and political leaders ever get through bickering over reapportionment, the bills could hit $250,000.

That's because taxpayers are footing the legal costs for both sides — and could wind up paying attorney fees for an Idaho corporation that describes itself as an "innocent victim."

For 18 months, Republican leaders of the Legislature have refused to pay legal fees awarded Coeur d'Alene attorneys Ray Givens and William Nixon.

Although they don't like it, the Republican leaders don't dispute the state owes the bill, but claim there's no money to pay it.

The argument is flimsy. Givens and Nixon submitted a bill for $56,713.52 — and the Legislature promptly found money to give Eugene Thomas his fees. The Senate paid 40 percent of the bill, $22,685, and the House the rest.

Meanwhile, the original $113,000 awarded to Givens and Nixon has grown to about $142,000. Interest is piling up at 18 percent, $71 per day or about $500 per week.

Givens and Nixon haven't pressed as hard as they might for payment, because an investment paying 18 percent isn't bad. But, as Givens put it last week:

Quane Kenyon

"I haven't seen any money yet. And one of the first things they teach you in school is that 18 percent of nothing is still nothing."

It's apparently boiled down to personalities, with the Republicans who control the Legislature — House Speaker Tom Silvers and Senate President Pro Tem James Risch — holding out against payment, and virtually everyone else agreeing it's a valid bill and should be paid.

In March, Givens and Nixon tried a novel ploy. They attempted to garnish sales taxes collected by Albertson's, Inc., one of the state's largest corporations, an effort that continues. That has caused the corporation to be forced to attend a series of court hearings.

And at the recent Board of Examiners meeting, Albertson's executives, saying the company was an "innocent victim" in the dispute, scolded the Legislature for its "irresponsible" action in refusing to pay the bill.

Silvers responded in an interview that he didn't need Albertson's good will because he's not running for major office. He blunted that officials supporting Albertson's plans to get out of the case were doing so possibly in return for future political donations.

Silvers, in a later interview, said he hoped private negotiations in Boise today could end the dispute.

Risch has led legislative opposition to paying the legal fees.

He and other Republican leaders weren't happy in the first place when 1st District Judge Dar Cogswell of Sandpoint ruled that the Legislature's 1982 legislative redistricting plan was unfair.

And even that plan wasn't drawn up until a special session in 1982, which itself added $50,000 or so to the cost of the plan.

He and the others were even less happy when Cogswell used the "private attorney general" theory to award Nixon and Givens legal fees.

The theory holds that if private citizens successfully challenge state laws, they can be awarded legal fees. If it can be shown that the decision is of statewide importance.

The Idaho Supreme Court sustained the ruling. It was the first time the theory had been used in Idaho, and may be the last. The 1985

House passed a bill repealing the practice in Idaho. But Sen. Roger Fairchild, R-Fruitland, killed it in his Senate Judiciary Committee.

Attorney General Jim Jones again will ask the next session to repeal the practice.

Attorneys attending a conference with Albertson's executives over the garnished sales taxes reported the company is less than happy over being involved and may file a claim for legal fees against the state.

The whole process nearly got settled in the last legislative session. House leaders agreed to appropriate $115,000, the original legal bill without interest. Givens says he agreed to accept one-third less interest, but wanted the rest.

There was no compromise and the bill died. Nixon and Givens last year filed notice they might try to attach other state property, or block all state land sales and other transactions, in an effort to force collection of the bill.

They haven't done that, but Givens said he soon may have to do something to break the deadlock.

Meanwhile, several top state legal officials say Idaho's approaching a constitutional crisis. The legal system may break down if a state agency or arm of state government feels it doesn't have to obey a court order it doesn't like, they say. Jones warned it may be "an extremely bad precedent" if private citizens feel they have to garnish or attach state revenue to satisfy a legal court order.

Silvers, who held the House in firm control last session, may be gaining yet more strength. Moderate representative Larry Knigge resigned to accept a state job, opening up both his seat and Knigge's spot on the powerful Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee.

Knigge and other GOP moderates, voting with Democrats, produced many close votes on key budget bills in recent sessions.

Two Silvers supporters came out on top in a Twin Falls Republican Central Committee vote to nominate replacements. Favored were Cella Polkinga, 27, Buhl, who has worked closely with Silvers on GOP activities. Next was Doug Jones, 38, Filer, who was campaign manager for Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls, a strong Silvers supporter.

Also nominated was Buhl auto dealer Dave Monroe. Gov. John Evans, who will appoint the replacement, may favor Jones, who is considered a bill more moderate than the others.

What causes the urge to shoplift?

It might be a cry for help

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — On the surface, shoplifting appears totally mercenary. It's something for nothing, after all. Scratch the surface, however, and there may be other, more elusive reasons.

Why, for instance, would a middle-aged housewife who has money steal a pair of pantyhose? Or how about the senior citizen never in trouble before who is arrested for concealing a comb?

Shoplifting may be a sign of varied emotional troubles or mental disorders. Some of the ailments may be physical in nature.

In an elderly person on medication, for instance, may "space out" and forget to pay for an item, says psychologist Scott Williams, with the Mental Health Services of the State Department of Health and Welfare.

People suffering from physical brain dysfunctions may steal because of a failure to realize the consequences of stealing or forget to pay for an item, says Ron Bennett, a private psychologist in Twin Falls.

A more well-known, but rarer cause is kleptomania, a psychological disorder in which a person can't resist the impulse to steal. It's theft without gain because the objects are either given away, returned or not used.

Unlike ordinary stealing, klep-tomania is impulsive theft. Yet, kleptomaniacs usually don't steal when there's the potential for an immediate arrest.

Stealing is not at issue with kleptomania, Williams says. "You look at the compulsion, rather than the way it's acted out."

Bennett says he's treated people with kleptomania, and it's tough going. He says there is no information on patterns, prevalence and predisposing factors about the disorder or even what maintains it.

The increased tension the kleptomaniac experiences before stealing and risk of apprehension should be enough to outweigh the gratification or release of tension associated with the act, Bennett says. Yet, it doesn't.

Kleptomania tends to be a long-term affliction, sometimes "burning itself out."

People suffering from another mental problem, schizophrenia, may steal in connection with delusions or hallucinations typical of the disorder, Bennett says. Sociopaths may steal out of lack of conscience or as an aggressive act to cause pain to someone without confrontation.

In some cases, stealing may be a cry for help, Williams adds.

A woman having trouble with her marriage or man unhappy with his job may shoplift as a roundabout way of calling attention to their problems.

Then there are those who just are selfish, say the psychologists.

Times-News illustration by GREG HARRIS

They take what they want and "the heck with other people," Williams says. Yet, this attitude is not a mental illness in the traditional sense.

Bennett says the "normal people" who shoplift may justify their actions by saying the store will never miss the item or that they already have spent $50 there and are entitled to something.

The more they steal, the more their guilt dissipates.

Bennett agrees these type of people don't have mental problems.

"They just are breaking a social rule. They are getting something for nothing."

If they continue stealing after they are caught, however, they should be evaluated to determine "what keeps bringing them in conflict with society," Bennett says.

In other cases, a shoplifter may be out for revenge. Someone may steal because their house was burglarized, Bennett says. They are angry and want to "get even." That is.

Council set to consider election plan

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It is too late to change the City Council election system for the November 1985 contests, but the council will discuss the plan today anyway.

The plan would assign numbers to the council positions. Each candidate would then file for one position, instead of running at large.

Council member Doug Vollmer, who proposed the plan, says it will "make elections spicier" and allow candidates to target an incumbent or other prospective council member whose policies they dislike.

Council member Mary McClusky says the change would pave the way for special interest groups to gain control of seats.

Two weeks ago Mayor Emery Petersen, Vollmer and council member Jack Miller wanted to bring the matter to a vote, but other council members blocked the motion, which came less than a month after the matter was first discussed.

Since state law requires that seats be assigned 120 days before the election, it is too late for the proposed change to affect this year's race.

Also on the agenda for the 7 p.m. council meeting is consideration of an agreement with CH2M Hill to evaluate ways to rehabilitate the city sewer treatment plant's activated biofilter tower.

The city was criticized by the state in December for the deterioration of the tower.

The tower was constructed as part of the 1974 wastewater treatment plant modification project. It consists of a series of steel encased cells supported by a steel structure. Inside the cells are redwood lath pallets.

Wastewater is sprayed over the top of the tower, trickling down through the redwood. Bacteria on the redwood remove organic material from the wastewater.

"The environmental conditions within the tower are very harsh," according to a staff report. "This results in potential deterioration of both the redwood media and steel structure."

Since the state report was released in December, the city has hired Operations Management International to run the plant.

Operations Management International has reviewed the evaluation project of the tower with its parent company, CH2M Hill, staff members say. CH2M Hill is willing to conduct the study for $4,140.

The council will also set a hearing date to consider the cost of demolition of a building at 510 Jefferson St.

The building was demolished last winter after repeated requests made to Salt Lake City and Boise relatives of the deceased owner of the building were ignored. The council must now determine who is liable for the $4,791 spent demolishing the building.

A code amendment that would allow persons other than sworn police officers to issue parking tickets is also on the agenda.

At the 4 p.m. work session before the meeting, the council will review an industrial pretreatment program required by the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Also expected to be discussed are the budget for the coming year and city residents' dog problems.

Oakley sets Pioneer plans

By LINDA LARSON
Times-News correspondent

OAKLEY — Pioneer Days, which begins Thursday in Oakley, will feature an outdoor barbecue, a chuckwagon breakfast, rodeo, a parade and a pony express race.

Beginning on Thursday with a kids' rodeo at 7 p.m., Oakley residents and visitors will commemorate the coming of the pioneers led by Brigham Young to the Salt Lake Valley on July 24, 1847.

The kids' rodeo will include horserack contests and calf riding for youths aged 6 to 18. Contestants must bring a parent to sign up an hour prior to the starting time.

Rodeos on Friday and Saturday also will begin at 7 p.m. and will feature stock from Crystal Brothers

In Island Park. A rodeo queen will be crowned on Saturday by the reigning queen, Terri Elquist.

A pony express-style, horserack marathon will begin Friday's rodeo. Several teams are set to compete in an 11-mile race. One rider must bring his horse around the track and back to the starting point, then remove the saddle to a fresh mount and a new rider takes to the track. A winner is named after five horses and riders have completed trips around the track.

Saturday's events will begin with a chuckwagon breakfast hosted by the Oakley Booster Club to begin at 6:30 a.m. Children's races will be held at the high school at 10 a.m. A barbecue is scheduled for the park from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., followed by a guest speaker at the LDS Church.

The old-time barbecue is a highlight of the festivities. Five hundred pounds of beef, some donated by Frank and Buddy Bedke, will be lowered into a pit with an 18-inch base of hardwood coals and allowed to cook overnight.

During the barbecue there will be continuous entertainment by local performers on a portable bandstand at the park site.

Guest speaker, Dr. Kimball Harper, is a botanist employed by Brigham Young University, who has traveled extensively to teach agricultural techniques in many countries.

A parade at 6 p.m. Saturday will include floats entered by the LDS wards from the area and will represent the theme, "Our Moment in Time."

BLM says Box Canyon 'area of critical concern'

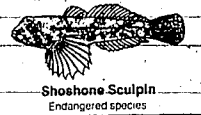

By JAENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The Box Canyon, Blueheart Springs area along the Snake River in Gooding County has been identified by the Bureau of Land Management as an "area of critical environmental concern."

A management plan for the 128-acre area was presented by Robert Cordell, BLM Blueheart Hills Resource Area manager, at a public hearing in Gooding Wednesday.

The plan centers around maintaining the habitat of the Shoshone Sculpin, a threatened fish species. Other concerns in the plan include protecting and preserving the scenic value and the special water quality in the area.

The water in Box Canyon Creek originates at Box Canyon Springs, the 11 largest natural spring in the United States.

The spring is located on private property, but the water flows through BLM-administered land and supports the second largest population of the tiny, one-to-three-inch Shoshone Sculpin in the world, BLM biologists say.

The plan calls Box Canyon "one of the few remaining, relatively undisturbed alvove ecosystems in the Snake River system," and describes Blueheart Springs as a "large, aqua blue, cold water spring."

Both formations have "high visual quality" and support both the Shoshone Sculpin as well as the Bliss Rapids Snail.

Cordell said the entire area is surrounded by private property, and there is no legal access to the area by land, which probably accounts for the relatively pristine nature of the canyon and the spring.

Both can be reached by boat from the Snake River, and the Blueheart Springs is a popular scuba diving location because of the color, clarity and purity of the water.

There was little adverse comment from the dozen people at the hearing, although one area resident wanted to know "what value are the Sculpin to humanity?"

BLM biologist Steve Langenstein said it was difficult to establish a monetary value for any specific pristine area or species. "Beauty is often in the eye of the beholder," he said. "What is merely fish bait to one is an endangered species to another."

Cordell told the group that as long as the Shoshone Sculpin is on the federal threatened list, it was the responsibility of the BLM, a federal agency, to work to protect the fish.

Langenstein also explained that there are 12 species of sculpin in Idaho streams and springs, but the Shoshone species is found only at Box Canyon and Blueheart Springs.

Cordell said there are three water use permits pending on Box Canyon Creek water for developmental use, and those applications will be deferred until the critical environmental area plan is finished.

The plan permits "non-impact" recreational use of the area such as hiking, sightseeing, fishing and water (low) hunting, but prohibits development within the critical area.

Cordell said protection of the lava rock-walled canyon and aqua blue spring from "irreparable damage to fish and wildlife resources, scenic quality and other natural systems or processes," is considered the "highest and best use" of the unique site.

Public comment on the Box Canyon management plan will be accepted at the BLM district office, P.O. Box 2-B, Shoshone, until July 25. Cordell said all public comment will be evaluated before a final plan is adopted.

Forest officials shelve fire plan

LEWISTON (AP) — With forest fire danger continuing to increase throughout the region, the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness area fire management plan has been placed on the back burner, Tom Kovalicky, Nezperce National Forest supervisor, said Friday.

This is the first year since the plan's inception, Kovalicky said, that fires within the 1.5 million-acre wilderness area are not allowed to burn within prescribed guidelines.

"Right now we have a lot of fires within the wilderness we are putting out," Kovalicky said. "We would love to have these fires burn within prescription. This is the first year in 100 when Mother Nature might be able to do it's trick."

But, the potential for catastrophic fires both within and outside the classified wilderness area is too great this year to allow the fires to burn, Kovalicky said.

"We have never done this before (suppress all fires in the wilderness)," Kovalicky said. Not only is the risk of wild fire to great, Kovalicky said, but funds presently won't be available to even monitor wilderness fires toward the end of the fire season.

"We have 60 more days to go (until the fire season traditionally is over). That's what is nerve-racking."

Fires within the wilderness area this year have been widely scattered, but none has burned more than 50 acres, officials said.

To date, Kovalicky said, a record 17,000 firefighters are working throughout the western United States, fighting fires at a time when crews are normally just getting ready for the fire season to begin.

Up until the early 1970s, the Forest Service and other land managers agreed to suppress fires, or less dedicated to snuffing all fires. Out of that philosophy, Smokey Bear soon became a national symbol of fire suppression.

But in places like the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness, one of the first areas classified under the 1964 National Wilderness Preservation Act, land managers began studying the natural role of fire in ecosystems.

Kovalicky said fire management experts eventually developed plans, which included "prescriptions" for when and where fires would be allowed to burn in wilderness areas. One of the first such "management fires" was ignited by lightning in 1973, Kovalicky said, in the White Cap area of the Selway-Bitterroot.

Although some of that blaze was eventually controlled by fire fighters, it received national publicity because of the new "let burn" strategy.

Since that time, the entire Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness Area has been placed under a fire management plan. In normal fire years, Kovalicky said, fires within the wilderness have received less attention, both from firefighters and the news media. But to let those fires burn this year, Kovalicky said, would be a "mini summit" Tuesday at a ranger station in the heart of the wilderness and decided to suppress most, if not all the wilderness fires.

Weary firefighters in Ojai, Calif., rest near a sign showing residents' appreciation

Cooler weather aids battles against stubborn West fires

The battle to control a week-old forest fire devouring part of California's scenic Big Sur was eased by cooler temperatures Sunday, and crews elsewhere were finally pent home after containing fires that have charred well over 1 million acres across the West.

However, lightning set off a few new fires elsewhere in the West, and some residents of a threatened Canadian town returned home in spite of warnings.

The list of states with out-of-control blazes dwindled Sunday after several days of favorable weather, but flames still flashed across parts of Arizona, California, New Mexico, Idaho and South Dakota. Since June 27 firefighters have battled about 3,500 fires.

Some crews have been working two weeks straight and are quite concerned about safety because of the fatigue factor, fire information officer Dave Olson said in Idaho, where 50 firefighters from nine states fought a wind-whipped 2,500-acre blaze in the Payette National Forest.

"At the peak of the fires last week, nearly 17,000 people were on fire lines in the West, but that dropped to just over 10,000 Sunday, said Pauline McGinty of the federal Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho.

The fire in the Big Sur had consumed 27,555 acres.

"It's still out of control and only 22 percent contained," said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Marin Jensen, noting that the blaze south of San Francisco was being held to brushland. Temperatures near the fire were around 55 to 60 degrees at midday, down from the mid 90s last week.

About 15 miles to the south, the 7,100-acre Gorda fire was 74 percent contained.

In southern California, the Wheeler fire that nearly destroyed the town of Ojai and charred more than 115,000 acres of brush was declared contained by 115 miles of fire lines at 6 a.m. Sunday, with some 1,700 firefighters remaining on duty, down from about 3,000, said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Chuck Shipp. It started June 2.

Several homes were destroyed but firefighters kept the fire out of the town of about 7,000 people 60 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

Signs in Ojai thank the firefighters, mounds of food have been donated and many people offered out-duty crews the use of swimming pools.

"When you're this far from home, it's nice when people try to make you feel welcome," said Larry Schmitt of Blue River, Wis. "It makes you feel like you've done something worthwhile — like you've just stayed the dragon."

A fire near Los Gatos, which burned 18,900 acres in the Santa Cruz Mountains near San Francisco last week and sent 4,500 people fleeing, was contained Saturday after gutting at least 20 homes in five days, said Dick Mauldin of the California Department of Forestry.

In Canada, about 250 people returned home to Canal Flats, B.C., on Saturday, one week after fleeing in advance of a threatening forest fire.

But regional Fire Commissioner John Vokes warned that the evacuation for the Columbia Valley town had not been lifted and that the situation remained dangerous.

Seven major fires covering 84,000 acres were burning in southeastern British Columbia, but temperatures that had been up to 100 degrees during the week dropped to the mid 60s Saturday and wind abated.

Hot, dry weather with gusty wind hampered efforts to contain the Idaho fire, about 30 miles northeast of Ojai. It has jumped fire lines Sunday, Olson said.

Two lightning fires that had burned an estimated 10,100 acres in the southern Black Hills of South Dakota remained out of control Sunday, Forest Service spokesman Mary Sue Warner said Sunday.

She said fire crews from Colorado, Oregon and Washington arrived Saturday and more were expected as fires across the West are brought under control.

Firefighters in Nevada worked Sunday to mop up the remains of 40 lightning-set range fires that burned more than 400,000 acres before being contained Saturday.

Governor tells farmers budget keyed to them

MOSCOW (AP) — The fate of Idaho's farmers in the next year will be a big factor in what happens to the state budget, says Gov. John Evans.

"I will take agricultural research and extension work to make farmers more competitive, the governor said, in a speech last week to nearly 300 farmers and farm experts. And the state's crop and farm income for this year's crop may be reflected in state tax collections.

Last week, state officials were projecting the current state budget, which started July 1, to fall about $1.1 million short of balancing revenue with spending.

The governor said the shortage could be greater if a long drought continues in southern Idaho, and grasshopper infestations continue. Farmers who lose their crops won't be contributing as much sales tax, and may have difficulty paying property taxes, Evans said.

"We'll hold on to the income projection we have and be hopeful that things turn around," Evans said.

But some are projecting this might be one of the most serious droughts we've had in the history of the state, and when agriculture suffers, the state suffers," he said.

In a Boise interview last week House Speaker Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls, adopted a wait-and-see attitude toward the possible budget shortage. Silvers said to be off a few million dollars in a $600 million budget is not much, and it's just as likely now that the state will have a surplus at the end of the current budget as it is that there will be a deficit.

Evans said about 11 percent of Idaho's farmers, or 2,700, have very high debts, high enough to put them in the "critical" financial position.

"Another 25 percent are under serious stress with debts of 40 to 70 percent of assets," he said.

He blamed industry problems on several things, including the strong dollar, highest interest rates and the federal budget deficit.

"The United States Congress must reduce the federal budget deficit, and we must have both lower interest rates and lower exchange rates.

Miss Teen of Idaho crowned

BOISE (AP) — Jerilyn Hengeler, 17, Fruiland, is the new Miss Teen of Idaho for 1985.

She was crowned before a crowd of about 600 people in Boise Saturday.

Hengeler, who just graduated from Fruiland High School, beat 30 other contestants. She was crowned by Janet Bornewman of Arco, who won last year.

First runner-up in the pageant was Jeannine Bortz, 17, who will be a senior this fall at Decio High School.

Second runner-up was Shelley Watson, 17, who will be a senior at Twin Falls High School, and third runner-up was Lara Place, 16, who graduated in the spring from West Jefferson High School in Hamer.

Laura Grim, state pageant director, said the competition recognizes young women for their achievements, scholarship contributions and is not a beauty pageant.

As this year's winner, Ms. Hengeler receives a $1,000 scholarship to the college of her choice and an expense-paid trip to compete in the Miss Teen of America Pageant in Duluth, Minn., in October.

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — While Live Aid concerts in London and Philadelphia raised funds for world's hungry, a Saturday night concert in Logan was staged to help provide housing for the poor.

Morning Star song, a Christian folk music band from Salt Lake City, performed the benefit concert for Habitat for Humanity, a non-profit Christian housing organization.

Local coordinator Merv Coover said Habitat, which has had a chapter here for about a year, began eight years ago in America. Coover said its efforts now extend to 89 locations in the U.S. and 21 locations in 13 foreign countries.

Habitat has constructed more than 7,000 homes and is building more at the rate of nearly one per day, Coover said.

He said former President Jimmy Carter, a member of the organization's international board of directors, is helping to rehabilitate a tenement project in lower Manhattan.

In Logan, acquiring suitable land is the group's top priority.

Habitat recovers the money it spends on land purchases and remodeling from families, who buy the homes on a no-profit, no-interest basis. The funds then are used for new projects, Coover said.

Oregon fires under control; 'business as usual' returns

PORTLAND (AP) — Dozens of fires which blackened thousands of acres of Oregon range and forest lands were either under control or extinguished by Sunday, fire officials said.

"Everything's calming down, crews are returning home," said Dave Lentz, a U.S. Bureau of Land Management dispatcher in Portland.

"Basically, we're returning to business as usual."

"Business was anything-but-usual during the past week, when the series of mostly lightning-sparked fires spread firefighters thin across the state. Although no exact estimate of the total acreage burned was available Sunday, firefighters said it probably was more than 350,000 acres.

Lentz said all fires on BLM land in Oregon were either controlled or out Sunday. All fires in sparsely populated southeastern Oregon, where some of the largest range fires raged, were under control last week, were extinguished, he added.

The young season already has been declared the worst for range fires in recent Oregon history, officials said. The previous record was 1983's total of 194,000 acres.

'Hopper war set to slow

BOISE (AP) — One front in the war on Idaho's destructive grasshopper may become quiet by the end of this week as a projected end to the human counterattack draws near.

Two-thirds of the acreage to be sprayed by the U.S. Air Force Reserve's 907th Tactical Airlift Group, Aerial Spray Branch were completed last Sunday, said Tech. Sgt. John Meekins.

Another of Idaho's problems, range fires, took care of 11,500 hopper-infested acres which were to have been sprayed with pesticides from the air, Meekins said.

He said 106,236 acres remained to be sprayed, and estimated the job would be completed this week barring mechanical problems with the spray aircraft.

An Adam of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, which is overseeing the spray program, said more than 100,000 acres in Idaho were bombarded with the pesticide malathion Sunday morning.

Roger Pollock, APHIS state director, said sticking to the current hopper extermination program continued to depend on supplies of malathion. Factory shortages of the chemical have threatened to leave the effort without the ammunition it needs to spray the remaining targeted acres.

Nehemiah barred from track

RENALDO NEHEMIAH
Pro contract

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The International Amateur Athletic Federation on Sunday rejected applications by National Football League players Renaldo Nehemiah and Willie Gault to have their amateur status reinstated.

IAAF President Primo Nebiolo said the council decided that Nehemiah and Gault would remain "ineligible because we want to maintain the amateur status." He said Nehemiah, the world record-holder in the 110-meter hurdles and a wide receiver for the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League for the past three years, "knew very well what the repercussions would be when he signed a professional contract."

Nebiolo added that the same applied to Gault, a Chicago Bears' wide receiver.

Nehemiah has expressed the desire to compete again in international track events. His 1981 record of 12.83 seconds still stands and he is the only hurdler to break 13 seconds in the event.

Nebiolo told a press conference that Nehemiah's application would not be reconsidered when the IAAF meets again in Canberra, Australia, later this year.

Nehemiah was on his honeymoon and could not be reached for comment.

"That's too bad," said 49ers spokesman Jerry Walker. "I'm sure that's not the end of it. Renaldo has been fighting for three years to get his amateur status back to run the hurdles. He doesn't think he should be considered a pro when he is not (in that sport).

"It's good news for pro football but there is a lot of us who think they could do both. Many of us were pulling for Renaldo to win this case. It won't be the last we will hear of it. Those guys will keep fighting it. It's a shame; a week ago, we thought he could get his amateur status back."

The decision to reject the former track stars' applications came in the final session of the three-day long meeting held at a luxury resort in an Athens suburb. Asked if there was a threat to boycott the 1988 Seoul Olympics, Nebiolo replied there were "no rumors of a boycott."

Yong Kim, vice president of the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee, said "we are not afraid of a boycott."

Kim told journalists that all the necessary preparations have been made and added "there is no indication the socialist countries will boycott the Seoul Olympics."

The IAAF also ruled that the track and field events at the Seoul Olympics would be held daily between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. local time, and not be broken up during the day as they were in Los Angeles, where there were five-hour breaks between morning and afternoon sessions. Nebiolo said this timetable was "constructed in such a way that no finals will be held in the morning, with the exception of the women's marathon and the men's 50-kilometer walk."

He said the schedules were based on the climatic conditions which will prevail at the time of the 1988 Games, the patterns of daily life in South Korea, hours of daylight and the Korean public's interest in track and field.

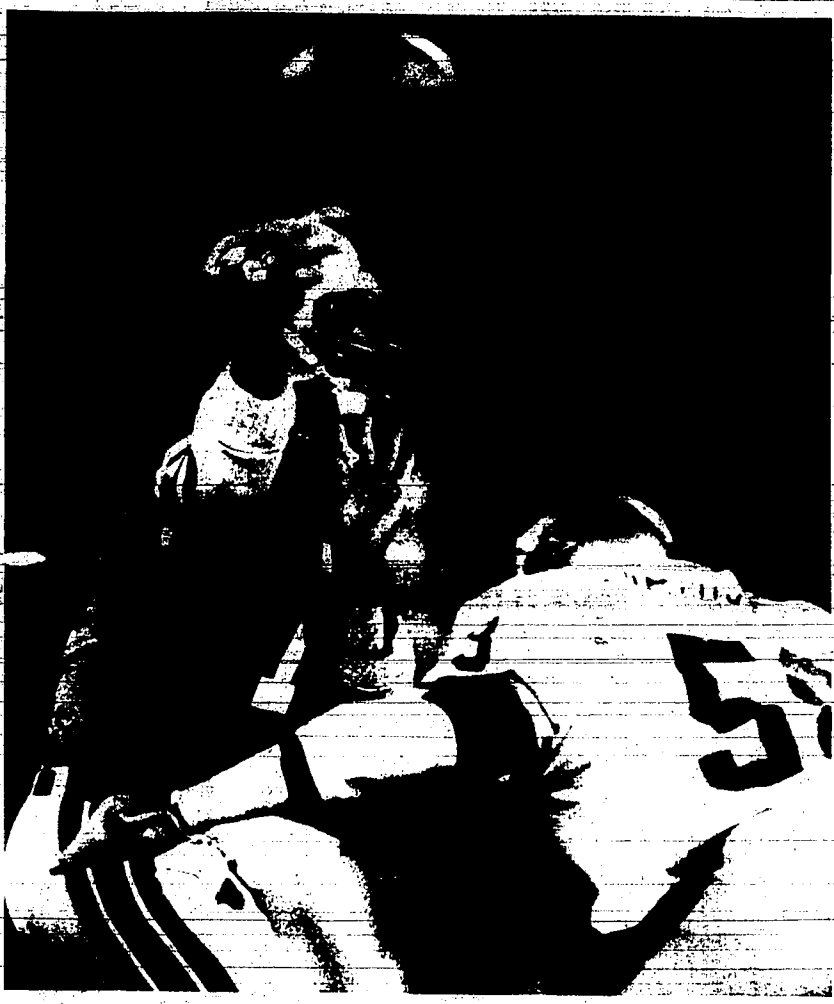

The scheduling could have a profound effect on negotiations for important television coverage of the Olympics.

Oakland quarterback Bobby Hebert is hit by Baltimore's George Jamison after Hebert released the ball in first quarter

Stars rally for second straight title

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — It was a fitting farewell to spring for the United States Football League. Its final title under the vernal equinox went to the Baltimore Stars, who have dominated the league on the field but have suffered off it.

The Stars, who have been in all three USFL championships, won their second straight title Sunday night with a 26-24 win over the Oakland Invaders as Kelvin Bryant rushed for 103 yards and three touchdowns, including the game-winner with 8:16 left.

That gave them a three-year record of 47-13-1, including a 5-6-1 start this year that forced them to struggle to make the playoffs.

Coach Jim Mora and some of those players attributed the problems to the move to Baltimore forced by the league's switch to a fall for the season. The team practiced in Philadelphia, then traveled to College Park, Md., nearly three hours away, for its games.

"I don't know what this is going to do to Baltimore. I haven't been there much," Mora said after the game.

"I didn't think the move would be as distracting as it was. We loosened up after we clinched a playoff spot and played our best football in our last fall games and tonight we played our best game."

But for one quarter, that is. Baltimore led 21-14 at the half, but stumbled through a third quarter in which their offense gained just eight yards.

A 19-yard field goal by Oakland's Novo Bojovic made it 21-17, then Baltimore finally surrendered the lead 24-21 with 46 seconds left in the period. Bobby Hebert hit Anthony Carter with a seven-yard touchdown pass at the end of a 24-yard drive set up by Al Harvin's fumble.

Then, after taking the lead, the Stars allowed Oakland to drive from their own four to the Baltimore five.

But Sam Miljs stuffed John Williams on a third and two to the five, and Oakland made a key mistake on the play — fullback Tom Newton was called for unnecessary roughness on the play and the ball went back to the 20.

But Hebert's third-down pass went out of bounds, Jonathan Sutton broke up a fourth-down effort and that did it.

"We lost our concentration in the third quarter, but I knew we had enough time to get back in the game," said Bryant, who was named the game's most valuable player.

"It's just an amazing comeback that we made and I couldn't be happier."

Oakland Coach Charlie Sumner, whose team was helped in its first touchdown drive by a questionable roughing the passer call on Baltimore's Mike Johnson, was upset about the call on Newton.

"It's a sad thing that a game of this caliber and magnitude had to end on a call like that," said Sumner, who noted that throughout the game officials had called double penalties during the numerous pushing and shoving incidents.

Sumner also said that the rain that fell throughout the first quarter hampered Oakland's passing game. Hebert said: "A couple of balls didn't leave my hand right."

The win was a semblance of revenge for the Stars, who played in all three USFL spring championship games and lost only the first — a 24-22 to Michigan in the first game play.

Boise's Huff tops Molitor for state am crow

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Forget what you were watching on TV Sunday afternoon.

For four holes, the best golf extant was being exhibited by Boisean Rob Huff, carving his way to the 1985 Idaho Men's Amateur Golf Championship.

A junior-to-be at University of Oregon, Huff didn't bring long, flat Warm Springs Golf Course, where, perhaps not coincidentally his mother is the manager, to its knees. But he surely didn't do defending champion Dave Molitor of Pocatello and last year's runner-up John Schoonover of Boise any good.

Exactly what Huff did was this: He knocked a seven-iron to within three feet on the par-5, 490-yard sixth hole and drained the putt. On the 483-yard seventh hole, his second-slammed to within two feet of the cup for a gimme birdie. Then it was basically the same, although a little longer putt, for a bird on the eighth. And then he curled in a 25-foot uphill putt for a birdie on No. 9.

Huff started for the moment, when Huff started his streak, he was three strokes down to Molitor, who entered the day with a one-shot advantage and increased that to three when he chipped in from just off the back edge of the green for an eagle on the par-5 fifth hole. Huff's eagle reduced that by just one as Molitor replied with a two-putt birdie. But both of Molitor's approach shots on the next two holes ricocheted over the greens and his usual faithful wedge didn't let him get up and down. Those two holes cost him four strokes and he lost another to Huff's closing birdie on the par-3 ninth hole.

Huff then saw a birdie putt lip out on the 10th and he birdied the 11th — leaving little time or room for Molitor to make a comeback. The Pocatello did reduce the margin to two once, but then bogied the par three 10th hole to wipe away any remaining moments of suspense for the following gallery.

"I've had six birdies in a row," said Huff, whose father is a golf pro in Arizona and whose uncle is head pro at Boise's Hillcrest Country Club.

"But that's never been five under in four holes before so, yes, maybe this is as good as a streak as I've ever had."

"I was a little stiff the first three holes, a little nervous, I guess," he said of the period when he was falling behind three strokes. Huff said he was hoping to get past the early holes in a little better shape but hadn't considered panic because "I like the closing holes on the front side, six, seven and eight. I thought if I could get to those holes things would improve."

He added he felt perhaps the turning point of the day for him came on the par-5 fifth hole.

"I had a pretty good drive and I said to myself 'just get a good-shot this time.' It was a good shot but the

Cowboys face Legion showdown vs. Russets

By TOM CANAVAN
The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS — The Twin Falls Cowboys, slumping at the bat of late, will need all the hitting and pitching they can muster tonight when they invade Idaho Falls for a Southern Region "A" Legion baseball doubleheader.

The Russets are currently leading the district with an 8-1 record, with Twin Falls percentage points behind at 10-2 (12-11 overall).

"We'll need to get four of five solid innings out (Tom) Erater (7-3) and (Kevin) Ames (9-2), and we'll need to get some hitting that we didn't get last weekend," said Twin Falls Coach Mike Tremayne, referring to his team's two losses in three games at the Firecracker Wendy's Legion tournament in Salt Lake City. "Idaho Falls is a good ball club."

The Russets, 27-14, are hitting almost .400 as a team and have

Unheralded Baker takes U.S. Open

By TOM CANAVAN
The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. — Once Kathy Baker arrived at the seventh hole and saw that Nancy Lopez and others had faltered, she realized the battle for the 40th U.S. Women's Open title had come down to her and Judy Clark and that's when her golf game got in swing.

Baker combined brilliant iron play with a sure putter on Sunday, firing a final-round 70 to capture the Open by three strokes over Clark for her first professional victory.

"It was funny, I looked up at the scoreboard on No. 7 and saw it was two and I and everybody else was at two and one under."

"It wasn't that way for long as Baker birdied the seventh and eighth holes to take the lead for good from Clark on a hot and humid afternoon of play on the 6,274-yard upper course of the Baltusorg Golf Course."

The 24-year-old Baker finished with

AL: Yanks move to within 2 1/2 games of Jays

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Guidry, having his best season since he was 25 in 1976, may not throw as hard as he did seven years ago, but is having almost as much success.

Guidry won his 11th straight decision, "tying him with Andy Hawkins for the most consecutive wins by a pitcher this season, and lowered his earned run average to 2.59 with a ground ball, no walks, 7-1 victory over the Rangers Sunday.

The victory brought the Yankees to within 2 1/2 games of the front-running Toronto Blue Jays in the American League East.

"I can see when guys shake their heads that some of them got pitches they didn't expect," added the Yankee left-hander.

In 1978, Guidry was 14-1 after his first 15 decisions. This year he's 12-3 but has gone from a fastball, half-spiral pitcher to a pitcher who uses a gamut of offerings that he gets over the plate for an eight-inning, only 19 batters in 146 innings and Sunday was his sixth without issuing a free pass.

"You can see the confidence that Ronnie has," shortstop Booby Meacham said. "Every time he goes to the mound, Ron has always needed a good defensive team behind him and this year he has one."

Dave Winfield cracked a solo homer to ignite a five-run second inning for the Yankees, who completed a four-game sweep of the Rangers.

"When you give Ron Guidry a five-run lead," Texas Manager Bobby Valentine said, "he's virtually unbeatable. He's tough even in a one-run game."

"When the team gives me a lead like that, it takes some of the fireworks away" from the other team," Guidry said. "They know they'll have a tough time getting back into the game against a guy who's pitching well. I don't throw with great velocity but batters know my reputation. They might expect a fastball but instead I'll throw them the 'dead fish' fastball."

Guidry, whose last loss was to the Rangers on April 23, retired 16 straight batters between the third and eighth innings. Toby Harrah doubled, went to third on a grounder and scored on Buddy Bell's sacrifice fly for Texas' only run in the ninth.

Guidry, who declined an opportunity to be the American League team for Tuesday's All-Star Game because he was pitching Sunday, allowed only one runner past first base in the first eight innings. He extended his record to 12-3, tying him with Dwight Gooden for the best winning percentage in the majors.

California 5 Toronto 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Brian Downing's disputed two-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning gave the California Angels a 5-3 victory Sunday over the Toronto Blue Jays.

The Angels, who kept a six-game lead in the American League West going into the All-Star game, trailed 3-2 going into the ninth.

Beggie Jackson walked to open the inning off Toronto reliever Gary Lavelle, 3-4. Ruppert Jones sacrificed pinch-runner Craig Gerber to second and Bobby Grich singled one out later to score Gerber with the tying run.

Downing then hit a 1-1 pitch deep to the left field seats. Left fielder George Bell made a leap for the ball and landed in the first row of seats, and when he came out without the ball, third base umpire John Shulock signaled home run.

The Toronto outfielder slammed his glove and cap to the ground and ran at Shulock to plead his case, arguing that he had caught the ball while going into the stands, but that a fan in the first row had grabbed the ball out of his glove.

Manager Bobby Cox and several of the Blue Jays players argued for some five minutes to no avail.

Downing's seventh homer of the season made a winner out of Stu Cilburn, 4-2.

Detroit 8 Minnesota 0

DETROIT (AP) — Walt Terrell pitched a no-hitter for 6 2/3 innings and Detroit got home runs from Larry Herndon, Darrell Evans and Alan Trammell as the Tigers beat Minnesota 8-0 Sunday; their first victory over the Twins in eight games this season.

Terrell, a 27-year-old right-hander, extended his hitless innings string to 14 2/3 innings before Tom Brunansky broke it up with a double off the left-center field wall with two outs in the seventh.

It was the first hit off Terrell since the first inning of his previous start July 9, when the Chicago White Sox Mark Ryal singled with two outs in the first inning.

Terrell, 10-4, who was obtained by the Tigers in a winter trade with the New York Mets, had a perfect game through 3 1/3 innings before walking Roy Smalley.

Terrell also walked Tim Teufel and Greg Gagne in the eighth and was replaced by Willie Hernandez, who got the last five outs for his 19th save.

Other than Brunansky's double, the Twins managed just one other ball to the outfield off Terrell — a soft fly to left field by Randy Bush in the fourth.

Frank Viola, 10-7, allowed eight hits and six runs in seven innings for the loss.

Oakland 11 Milwaukee 2

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Mike Davis slammed a three-run homer, his first round-tripper in 32 games, in the first inning to lift the Oakland A's to an 11-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Sunday.

Davis' homer, his 15th, came off loser Moose Haas, 7-5, and followed a single by Dave Kingman and a walk to Dusty Baker. Earlier in the inning, Carney Lansford jammed a solo

NL: Cardinals go 3-for-4 against Padres

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tito Landrum, after delivering his third game-winning hit of the year for the St. Louis Cardinals, wasn't quite certain what he hit.

"I'm going to be honest with you. It looked like a fast ball," said Landrum, following an eight-inning, 3-1 victory over the San Diego Padres a 2-1 defeat Sunday and gave the Cardinals the third victory over the Padres in the four-game series. "I thought I might not swing, but it was a pitch I could drive. It was a little bit up inside."

Dave Dravecky, the victim of what Landrum labeled a "qual" into shallow right field, saluted the St. Louis pinch-hitter.

"The Cardinals have got an outstanding 'Babe Ruth' hit situation," with Tito at the plate, he did his job," said Dravecky, 8-4. "You want to just put the ball in play and hopefully it will go in. He's an outstanding ballplayer."

Lamented by San Diego Manager Dick Williams was the fact that Dravecky was even in a contest the Padres led 1-0 after 7 1/3 innings.

"We had a 1-0 lead, but he didn't hold it, so we pinch-hit for him," Williams said of San Diego starter Eric Show. "It's a hot day, and it's tied in the top of the eighth."

Landrum, who was batting for Andy Van Slyke, picked on Dravecky's first pitch following Vince Coleman's leadoff double and a two-out intentional walk to Jack Clark.

It awarded the victory to Kurt Kepshire, 7-6, who earlier had been balked out by Terry Pendleton's leadoff home run in the St. Louis seventh. Ken Dayley and Jeff Lahti pitched the ninth for the Cards; with Lahti earning his ninth save.

Kepshire, who started the day with a 4.77 earned run average and 40 walks in 88 2/3 innings, blanked the Padres on two hits through six innings.

But in the seventh, after Steve Garvey and Graig Nettles fled out, San Diego strung together three straight singles. The final was by Kevin McReynolds, giving them a 1-0 edge.

Pendleton's blast leading off the bottom of the seventh, snapped a 0-for-22 slump for the St. Louis third baseman.

"It was the first time that I've hit a home run where I knew the ball was going to leave the ballpark," said Pendleton. "As soon as I hit it, I knew that it was going out."

Landrum, despite the .404 batting average he has assembled since going 0-for-6 at the start of the season, carried a 3-for-17 mark as a pinch-hitter to the plate in the eighth.

"I hadn't been swinging that well. My body and my swing weren't together."

I did swing the bat well in batting practice," he said. "It was one of those 'qual's we call it, a Texas Leaguer. It didn't look pretty, but it drove in the winning run."

The Cards, by winning, wrapped up an 8-3 home stand with their seventh victory in their last eight games.

"This club is better day in and day out. That team never lost more than three games in a row," said second baseman Tommy Herr, in comparing St. Louis, 52-33, to the Cards' worst champions of 1982. "This team has played better over longer periods of time. That's not to say we're going to win it. The division is tougher than it was in '82."

San Diego will go into the All-Star break one-half game behind Los Angeles in the National League West. The Cardinals lead the New York Mets by 2 1/2 games in the East.

Cincinnati 5 Montreal 4

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dave Parker's 10th-inning single scored Cesar Cedeno from second base Sunday and sent the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-4 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The Reds tied it against Bert Roberge in the ninth when Wayne Krenchicki singled, pinch-runner

Gary Redus stole second and Dave Concepcion singled him home.

Montreal had taken a 4-3 lead in the sixth when Hule Brooks singled and baced home as Tim Wallach's double bounced off the wall and eluded Venable, the Reds' left fielder.

San Francisco 7 Pittsburgh 3

PITTSBURGH (AP) — David Green and Chile Davis hit home runs and Bill Laskey ended a personal eight-game losing streak Sunday as the San Francisco Giants defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3 in a tight-marred game.

In the seventh inning, the Giants'

Dan Gladden charged the mound and tackled Pittsburgh pitcher Rick Rhoden after being hit with a pitch. Players streamed out of both dugouts but only Rhoden and Gladden were ejected and play resumed within five minutes.

Green broke a 2-2 tie in the fifth inning with his second homer of the season and Davis hit his eighth of the year in the sixth inning. Both solo shots came off Rhoden, 5-10.

Laskey, 2-11, won for the first time since May 6 when San Francisco beat the Pirates 7-5. He allowed a pair of first-inning runs, then retired 15 consecutive batters but left Sunday's

Wilander to meet Argentinian in today's U.S. Pro net finale

By DAVE O'HARA
The Associated Press

BROOKLINE, Mass. — Top-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden denied age and Argentina's Martin Jalle ended a schoolboy's fantasy Sunday in the semifinals of the $287,000 U.S. Pro Tennis Championships.

In the afternoon, Jalle, who calls Vilas his hero, advanced to Monday night's championship round with a 7-6 (7-3), 6-1 over young Bruno Oresar of Yugoslavia.

Vilas, who will be 33 next month, had flashed a little of the old form in winning four consecutive matches.

Wilander broke Vilas in the first game of the second set. Then, with the Swede leading 3-2 and 30-0 on his serve, the match was delayed for 2 hours, 32 minutes by rain.

When play resumed, Wilander ran out a love set, but then was broken in the eighth game as his love set was cut to 5-3. Then he broke through Vilas again to end the match, 13 minutes after his long delay.

The 20-year-old Jalle, seeded 11th as the world's 40th ranked player, took command late in the first set, saving two break and set points in the 12th game, and breezed into the finals

Gullikson takes his first Grand Prix clinician 11 years

ATLANTA (AP) — Former U.S. Open champion Tom Gullikson won his first Grand Prix title Sunday in the final of the $100,000 Volvo Tennis Hall of Fame Championships.

Gullikson was the first American to win a Grand Prix title since 1974. He defeated the 27-year-old German Joakim Nystrom 6-4, 5-7, 6-3 in a heat-plugged final of the $150,000 Swiss Open Tennis Championships.

The 22-year-old Nystrom, visibly suffering from the 86-degree temperature, was not at his best, however, against the 27-year-old unseeded West German.

In the third set, Maurer was leading 5-4 before the top-seeded Swede regained control of the 2-hour and 16-minute match, watched by a crowd of 3,500.

Nystrom became the first player to win the Gstaad tournament twice in a row since Roy Emerson of Australia won it in 1967 and 1968. Last year's Swiss Open victory was the first time he had won a Grand Prix event.

Nystrom now ranks ninth in the world. Maurer, back in excellent shape after an impressive season last year, has boosted his chances of joining Wimbledon winner Boris Becker to play the singles on the West German Davis Cup team facing the United States in Hamburg next month.

McCrorry keeps his WBC title

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Milton McCrorry of Detroit successfully defended his World Boxing Council lightweight title with a third-round knockout of Panama's Carlos Trujillo in their scheduled 12-round fight Sunday.

McCrorry dropped the Panamanian once in each round, knocking him senseless in the third with a flurry of rights and lefts to the head while Trujillo hung helplessly on the ropes.

It was no contest. The 6-foot-1-inch World Boxing Council lightweight was never in trouble.

The bout was widely seen as McCrorry's last tuncup before a scheduled meeting with Donald "The Cobra" Curry, the World Boxing Association welterweight champion, in a title unification bout this fall.

McCrorry and Curry are friends; both are being handled by Bob Arum, the American promoter.

Meanwhile in Tampa, Fla., Cornelius Boza-Edwards scored a unanimous decision over John Montes Jr. Sunday in a nationally televised 10-round matchup of lightweight contenders.

Boza-Edwards, who briefly held the World Boxing Council junior lightweight title in 1981, improved his record to 44-5, while Montes fell to 25-3. Boza-Edwards entered the fight ranked No. 5 by the WBC, and Montes was No. 6.

The bout was fought at a crisp pace throughout; Montes was quicker and appeared to deliver more punches, but Boza-Edwards was landing more effectively.

Wiebe wins AB playoff for his first PGA crown

By JOE MAKENKA
The Associated Press

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Mark Wiebe got his first career win Sunday in the sudden-death playoff at the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic, but said the real victory came at the end of regulation play.

Wiebe, who by his count has been to qualifying school "seven or eight times," said his thoughts as he and John Mahaffey started their playoff were "If I lose, the worst that could happen is I'm not going to have to go to school next year. I either win or win more."

Wiebe, 27, of Escondido, Calif., birdied the first playoff hole and collected $90,000 for his first victory since joining the Professional Golfers' Association Tour on a full-time basis last year.

"I really don't know what to say," added Wiebe, whose previous best finish was a fourth at Westchester. "It's been a great day."

Mahaffey, of Woodlands, Texas, received $50,000 of the $500,000 total purse.

Wiebe and Mahaffey finished regulation play with the under-par 273 over the 6,746-yard, par-71 Kingsmill Golf Club course.

Wiebe, who entered the 72nd hole leading Mahaffey by one stroke, pushed his drive on the 408-yard, par-4 18th into the right rough.

"That drive probably the farthest I've hit a drive in five years," said Wiebe, who boosted his season earnings to $122,332.

Wiebe's approach landed on the green from the hole, which was 60 feet from the hole, while his putt came up 16 feet short, and his par-saving effort just past the hole, forcing the playoff.

"I was real happy with the way I hit that second putt," said Wiebe. "I didn't dog it. I didn't leave it short."

The two golfers moved to the 427-yard, par-4 16th for the playoff.

"My first thought was I hit a good putt on 16," said Wiebe, "and you missed it. So hit another good one here and you can make up for it."

Wiebe and Mahaffey began their playoff on the 427-yard, par-4 16th hole.

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

"Any idiot can face a crisis — it's this day-to-day living that wears you out."

— Anton Chekhov

— East's crisis arrived at trick one. Should he hop up with his ace and return the suit or should he play West for more than one club?

— South called for a deceptive club king from dummy at trick one and East wasn't sure how he should defend. If West had led a singleton, it was now or never to give him a ruff. If not, it would be better to refuse the first trick.

— The problem proved beyond doubt. West's ace and returned the suit; he couldn't bear thinking of the post-mortem if West's four had been a singleton.

— South won in dummy and lost the trump finesse, but all was well for him. There was no way for West to reach East's hand for the club ruff and the defenders scored only three tricks.

— Had East considered the bidding game carefully, he would have known that West couldn't hold a singleton club. South showed both honors and had opened one no-trump. If West's club four had been a singleton, South would have also had four clubs. This would leave for only one diamond (4-4-1 distribution), hardly the ideal pattern for a one-no-trump opening.

— Often the answers are there. If only we could see them all.

So see Dick DeY Isuzu soon. Because with exciting trucks like these, he can't show a lack of interest forever.
