President will 'wait and see' on apartheid

By MERRILL HARTSON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, giving South Africa's government time to decide on reforms of apartheid, is taking a wait-and-see approach before suggesting ways to end racial violence, an official said Saturday.

During a series of meetings last week between National Security adviser Robert C. McFarlane and South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha, "there was a recognition on the part of South Africa that they would be making certain changes" in the policy of racial separation, the official said.

This official, agreeing to discuss the secret meetings in Vienna only on condition of anonymity, said "the important thing was that it was an exchange of views, and we're going to wait and see what they do before we have any comment."

The official said that while there was a discussion of options the South African government might choose, "we gave no list of prescriptions."

...made no threats, made no demands. That was not the nature of the discussions."

But the official noted that "the point was made that the pace of change and reform is something that we would like to see accelerated."

According to an article in Sunday editions of The Washington Post, another administration official said McFarlane warned the South Africans that President Reagan would not be able to sustain a veto of economic sanctions against the country unless apartheid is dismantled at a faster pace.

McFarlane told them Reagan's decision on the sanctions, due for final congressional action next month, will depend on whether conditions for blacks are improved, the Post said.

Soviets, U.S. set summit agendas

By LOU CANNON
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — U.S. and Soviet diplomats have agreed on a preliminary format for the Geneva summit meeting, which President Reagan intends to use partly as a forum to forcefully question Soviet military and human-rights policies, a senior administration official said Saturday.

Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev are scheduled to conduct the first summit of the Reagan presidency Nov. 19-20 in Geneva. A U.S. official who discussed preparations for the meeting said the two leaders will hold a total of nine hours of formal discussions and spend another two to three hours with each other at meals and receptions.

Under the preliminary plan, the first day would be spent in a general exchange of views. The second day of discussions would be divided into four specific areas of discussion that the official listed as regional issues, bilateral issues, human rights and arms control.

The human-rights issue could become a sticking point before the final agenda is decided, officials have acknowledged. It is considered a See SUMMIT on Page A2

High court to test religious-club law

By MAUDS. BEELMAN

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — A year-old federal law that gives religious clubs the right to sue in public schools will be tested this fall when the U.S. Supreme Court hears a case involving a high school prayer group.

Although Bender vs. Williamsport Area High School does not directly involve the Equal Access Act, which became law a year ago Sunday, attorneys for both sides agree that if the law is struck down, it will be affected since the Williamsport case was considered in writing the act.

The connection is so close that the U.S. Justice Department has requested time to argue before the high court.

Justice spokesman Mark Sheehan said the appeals decision in the Williamsport case, which barred the group from meeting in the high school, "clearly casts a cloud over the act."

N. Irish violence erupts

By MARK S. SMITH
The Associated Press

LONDON, Derry, Northern Ireland — Roman Catholic youths went on a day-long rampage Saturday and 15,000 Protestants marched through the city in the annual commemoration of a Protestant victory over Catholics 296 years ago.

Violence flared before and after the members of the Apprentice Boys organization held their parade.

Police and soldiers fired plastic bullets to chase hands of youths in the Catholic bogside district who attacked with gasoline bombs, rocks and bottles after the parade had ended without violence, officials said. They reported eight policemen were wounded and there were five arrests.

Tensions were heightened by the brief appearance Friday of Martin Galvin, an American sympathizer of the Irish Republican Army, at a funeral in Londonderry for a guerrilla killed Tuesday when his homemade grenade exploded in his face.

Galvin, publicity director of the New York-based Irish Northern Aid Committee, or Noraid, helped carry the coffin for about five minutes and then disappeared in the crowd. He defied a British exclusion order banning him from Northern Ireland, but police made no effort to seize him.

His presence at an IRA rally in Belfast last August led to a charge by police firing plastic bullets that killed one man and wounded 20 people. He also escaped from police that time.

The IRA is fighting to unite Northern Ireland. British police work with a Protestant majority, and the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic in a socialist state.

Many of the Apprentice Boys marchers wore orange sashes in memory of William of Orange, the King who brought Ulster under Protestant rule in 1690.

In thousands lined the streets to watch the parade that commemorates the actions of 13 boys who closed the city gates to stop the Catholic army of King James II from entering in 1689.

"It was an Apprentices' Boys march in 1689 led to the deployment of British troops in the province and set the stage for the sectarian and political violence that has claimed at least 2,400 lives.

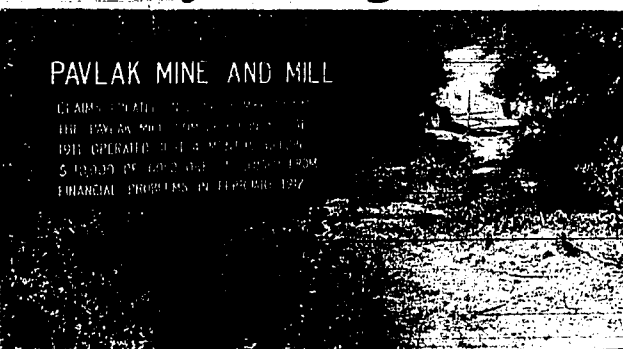

Dust must settle if Jarbidge mill is to pan out

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

JARBIDGE — After a 40-year absence, gold mining is trying to make a comeback in the Jarbidge area of Nevada. The proposal worries some sportsmen and backpackers, but town residents seem to support the pilot mill proposed for the area — as long as it doesn't get too big.

Concerned about the potential impact of the milling operation on groundwater and the adjacent Jarbidge River, however, the U.S. Forest Service is carefully evaluating the plans in an Environmental Impact Assessment.

The pilot gold mill has been proposed by the BMEX Corporation of Blanding, Utah, which wants to use the mill to process ores from the old Pavlak mine and perhaps other mines in the Jarbidge area.

Ores from the old Pavlak mine would be among those processed by the proposed mill.

The one chemical of possible concern is di-thio-phosphate, a wetting agent used in the processing. Concentrated, Van Drielen said it can be "nasty stuff," but the process planned for the mill will use a concentration of about 18 parts per million, according to Kulpers.

BMEX, according to Kulpers, is planning to run the pilot mill for about two years. If it proves successful, the company would like to develop a more permanent mill for the "Big Island" area, located on the north of Jarbidge.

That site, he said, is less suitable for a test mill because the company would have to build a road and bring water to the site.

The Pavlak mine site is less than 100 feet from the Jarbidge River and on the existing road that goes from Murphy's Hot Spring, through the town of Jarbidge, and dead ends beyond the mine. The mine is about two miles upstream from the town.

The Forest Service's main concern is not with the process itself but with the disposal site selected for the slurry wastes from the mine.

While the mill operators would like to dispose of the tailings back in the mine, the Forest Service found that the area targeted for disposal is in a fault zone. Because of the faults, waste disposed of from the mine could leach into the groundwater.

"We are concerned about seepage into the groundwater," said Marjanne Breeze of the Forest Service in Buhl. Breeze, who is writing the Forest Service's EIA, said the agency recommended that tailings from the mill be disposed of at the town dump, north of town.

BMEX, however, does not favor that alternative, according to Kulpers, because it would involve trucking the mine wastes through town — making the operation more complicated and expensive.

Originally, the Nevada Division of Environment favored disposing of the wastes in the mine. The agency is reconsidering that position since the Forest Service objects to the plans. Representatives from the agency will be in Jarbidge Tuesday and Wednesday looking at the disposal site proposed by the Forest Service.

BMEX and miners working the site are pushing the Forest Service to finish its EIA and issue permits for the mill by Thursday. "They're hunkering us," said Kulpers.

For the Forest Service, however, the problem is time. While the company filed its current operating plan on July 17, the Forest Service was not told it would be writing the Environmental Impact Assessment until last week.

Originally the company was planning to hire a private contractor to write the EIA.

When the company backed out of hiring a private contractor to write the EIA, that left Breeze with just two weeks to gather information about the proposed site and the milling operation — and write the report.

"It gets a little frustrating," said Bob Easton of the Humboldt Ranger District office in Buhl. "Legally, we have to have 30 days for the EIA and then a 45-day appeal period."

Kulpers said the mill has to start operation soon in order to show a profit. The facility can only operate seasonally — and will have to shut down when freezing temperatures hit. If the company can't get it started this year, it will have to pull out entirely, Kulpers said.

"We're just trying to make a living," said Jerry Stocks, one of the miners working the deposits the planned mill will process.

Right now both the Forest Service and the state's Division of Environment are going to review the milling proposal carefully because of the area's extreme sensitivity. Van Drielen said the site, which abuts the Jarbidge Wilderness area, is "considered to be one of the most environmentally sensitive areas in the state."

Local residents are a little less concerned than outsiders about the potential impact.

"I don't think it's going to hurt anyone," said Ellen Shegoff, 65, in between her work at the Outdoor Inn in Jarbidge. "I'd hate to see it get big, but I'd like to see these guys get something going."

Ohio abortion clinic blasted during protest

By The Associated Press
A firebomb damaged an abortion clinic in Toledo, Ohio, on Saturday, while a total of 76 anti-abortion demonstrators were arrested there in Missouri and in Philadelphia. No one was injured in the 5:15 a.m. firebombing, which caused about $1,000 in damage to the Toledo Medical Services Inc. clinic, said Toledo fire Capt. Tony Gregory. Firefighters extinguished the blaze, felled by a gasoline-filled glass container thrown through a window, before it spread through the suburban clinic, Gregory said. The clinic opened for business later in the day, and no arrests were made in connection with the firebombing, he said. Meanwhile, Toledo police arrested four people on disorderly conduct and trespassing charges after they demonstrated outside a downtown abortion clinic in Manchester, Mo. Six people were arrested after demonstrating outside a building that houses three health clinics where abortions are performed. The protesters were charged with violating a court order that prohibited them from trespassing on the property of the Regency Park Center, police said. Philadelphia police arrested 11 anti-abortion activists who had barricaded themselves inside an abortion clinic for almost three hours. The demonstrators were arrested after they blocked the door to an operating room at the Northeast Women's Center. They were to be charged with defiant trespass and criminal mischief, police said.

Reagan gives credit to Japan's 'miracle'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, noting the week's 40th anniversary of the American victory over Japan in World War II, paid tribute to the "economic miracle" from the ashes of their defeat. In his weekly radio address, Reagan called Japan "a close and reliable friend and one of our most important allies in these last 40 years, the Japanese have transformed bombed-out ruins into a great industrial nation." "The Japanese are today, in so many ways our partners in peace and enterprise," he said. "Our economic ties are a great boon to both our peoples." "As free peoples, it is unthinkable that the Japanese and Americans will ever again go to war," Reagan declared. "While there are differences, as there are in relations in any two great nations, they can be settled in the spirit of good will." The president also paid tribute to America's war veterans as the nation prepared for Wednesday's 40th anniversary of V.J. Day. Japan surrendered to U.S. forces on Aug. 14, 1945 and fighting stopped Aug. 15. Both dates are considered anniversaries of the American victory.

Gas leak forces evacuation

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Poisonous chlorine gas began leaking from an electronics plant Saturday, forcing the evacuations of about 1,000 nearby residents for about six hours, officials said. No injuries were reported, Greene County officials said. The leak at the Solid State Circuit plant near this city was reported shortly before 9 a.m., and was contained by about noon, officials said.

Tennessee inmates indicted for roles in July prison riot

CENTERVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sixty inmates at a prison near here have been indicted on charges stemming from a July 1 riot that eventually spread to three other state prisons, left one inmate dead and caused about $11 million in damage statewide. The indictments, issued Friday by the Hickman County Grand Jury, were against inmates at the medium-security Turney Center in only about 50 miles southwest of Nashville. The charges included rioting, assault, taking hostages, rape and destruction of state property. The 13-hour uprising began when prisoners set their new uniforms afire and torched prison buildings. About 1,200 inmates were involved statewide, officials said. At the other three prisons, one inmate was beaten to death and five others were injured. No one has been charged with the death of the inmate killed during the riot. Correction Department Commissioner Steve Morris has said repairs are progressing at Turney Center, the Tennessee State Prison in Nashville and regional correctional facilities in Bledsoe and Morgan counties. The costs are covered by insurance.

in Pretoria. That could be the setting for the expected changes, which U.S. officials have refused to divulge.

Congressional sources who insisted on anonymity had said last week, however, that possible steps could include lifting the current state of emergency, commencing discussions with black South African leaders, extending black township membership from homelands to regions in which the homelands are located and giving blacks some voice in regional government.

State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb had said Friday that the administration was encouraged about the prospects for reforms in the racial policies of white-ruled South Africa.

The administration official revealed Saturday that during the Vienna meetings, there were discussions of growing Soviet influence in Africa and "various steps" that South Africa is considering to deal with violence there.

During the same series of meetings, "strategic considerations" were discussed involving the Soviet threat to South Africa," the official said. "One of our officials noted that there was no Soviet influence 10 years ago, but that now 30,000 Soviets are in Angola and that this is of concern to South Africa and neighboring countries."

The Post quoted the senior administration official as saying McFarlane told the South Africans that while the Reagan administration is concerned about the Soviets, most Americans are more concerned about what they perceive as the South African government's "bloody-minded" attitude toward blacks and "legitimate black grievances" that stem from black repression.

Under a policy of "constructive engagement," the administration for four years has been trying to persuade the Pretoria government to ease its policy of racial separation, known as apartheid.

The administration official said that many members of Congress have grown restless in recent weeks as violence has worsened, and the House has passed a bill to impose sanctions on the import of Kruggerands, the South African gold coin, and new U.S. bank loans to the South African government.

The administration official said Saturday that "everyone recognizes the emotions involved" but added that if any such bills were passed, President Reagan "will look at the legislation when it arrives at his desk. No one has ever said whether 'bloody-minded' attitude toward blacks and 'legitimate black griev-agreed to discuss the agenda for a discussion of "human rights" even though they recognize that the president may raise the issue on both days of the talks.

The official who discussed summit preparations said that the arms-control discourse comes at a "pivotal moment for both sides" because of new U.S. and Soviet weapons systems that are still in the development stage. He suggested that it would be easier to agree not to deploy new nuclear missiles than to dismantle them once they are deployed.

While the U.S. official did not emphasize the matter Saturday, Reagan has made it clear that he intends to present his proposal for an anti-missile strategic defense system commonly known as "Star Wars."

While Soviet officials have repeatedly denounced this proposal, Marshal Sergei Akhromyev, chief of the Soviet general staff, indicated in an authoritative statement in June that the Soviets would accept continued research on Star Wars and might reduce the Soviet nuclear arsenal if Reagan agreed to limit testing and development of the defensive system.

The U.S. official used an eight-letter acronym expression to describe the value of secondary agreements on trade, cultural, maritime and aviation relations that are likely to come out of a summit meeting. He said "the real telling measure of the meeting" will be determined by whether Reagan and Gorbachev could agree on an agenda for solving major issues between the two superpowers.

"That is what he (Reagan) was elected to do — to set a course that can reduce tensions in the years ahead," the official said.

The official said that Reagan has emphasized in "very explicit and lengthy" instructions that he wants an "exchange-on-fundamentals" with Gorbachev.

"He wants to say that we have no hostile intentions to the Soviet Union, that you are a great power, that we don't seek to alter that, that you need not fear the United States trying to alter, overthrow or fundamentally change your system," the official said.

"That said, we have some misgivings about whether you have the same intentions and we want to talk about that. There's Afghanistan. There is generally your policy of not providing for development of developing countries, not sending them food for peace or agriculture but weapons."

they're challenged in court," he said.

The case, which is scheduled to be heard Oct. 15, has attracted little attention and is not a rallying point at the school or in this central Pennsylvania community of 47,000 people, which has about 100 churches — about one per city block.

The case centers on a group of students who wanted to meet for prayer and religious conversation during the school's morning activity period, when 25 non-religious clubs met. They were originally denied school space for meeting on the grounds that such meetings violated the clause in the Constitution that requires separation of church and state.

If the justices uphold the appeals decision prohibiting the club from meeting, "it will have very serious implications for the constitutionality of the act," said John C. Youngman, Jr., a former Williamsport school board member and the attorney who will argue against the right of the Petros Club to meet.

James M. Smart Jr., a Kansas City, Mo., attorney and member of the Christian Legal Society, will argue in favor of the Petros Club's right to meet. He said he favors keeping church and state separated, but he does not think a separation issue applies in this case.

The Petros Club, which took its name from the Latin meaning rock, began in September 1981 when Lisa Bender Parker, now 21 and married, and a few friends decided that "it'd be nice to get together in the morning and pray together during these activity periods," she said in a recent interview.

The prospective club members approached Williamsport Area High School Principal Wayne Newton. He allowed them to meet once for an organizational session at which 45 turned out. When he learned the club's name, he called in the school board attorney.

The attorney agreed, and when students could not convince the school board otherwise, they sued the board and each member individually.

A federal district judge decided that the students' First Amendment rights to free speech were being violated, and they were allowed to meet during the 1983-84 school year while the case was appealed.

On Aug. 11, 1984, the Equal Access Act became law.

Area agencies flaunt your right to know

Last week, the Twin Falls School Board went into executive session to discuss what it called a "commercial" matter. That was later changed to a "real estate" matter. The body has since declined to elaborate, despite a clear state law to provide an account of executive sessions reflecting the "general tenor" of the subject. Who knows what the district is about to buy or sell?

Earlier this year, the Twin Falls City Council negotiated a contract with a sewage management firm without disclosing the details. Who knows what it will cost or the conditions?

Last week, a public-relations person at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, a county-owned hospital, refused to release Board committee reports; despite the fact the Board had accepted them into the official record. Who knows what the committees are recommending?

Earlier this year, school board representatives from Shoshone, Richfield and Dietrich met in a secret session to discuss the consolidation in Lincoln County. Who knows where that issue stands there?

We raise these cases as illustrative of a growing problem in the Magic Valley—the conducting of the public's business in secret, often without just cause, in what amounts to flagrant disregard of the open and sometimes the letter of the state's open meetings law.

In every case we cited above, the agency in question is a public one and the issues involved are important.

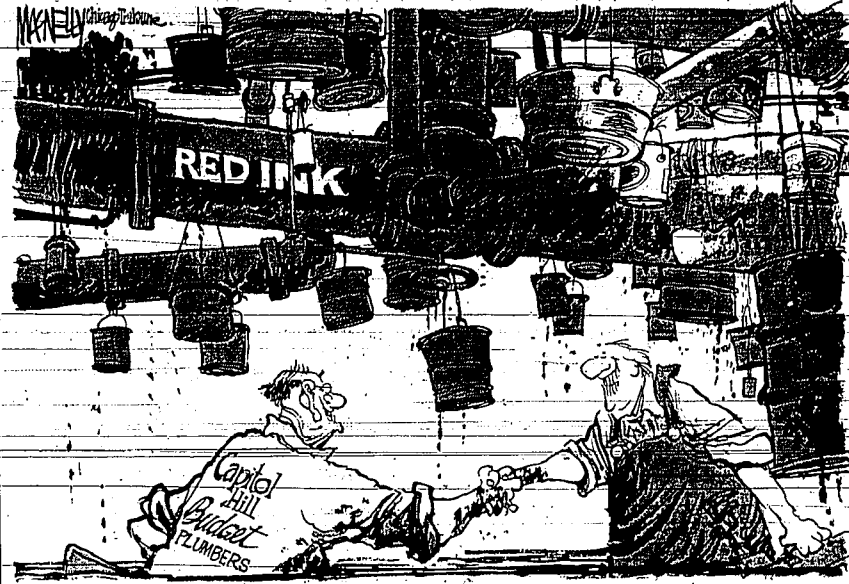

But something seems to happen when people get into public office—they develop an attitude that they have a right to make decisions for you, the people, without your input or knowledge.

Talk from a school board's perspective, it is better to just avoid sales of land or consolidation in private. Yes, a hospital would prefer not to discuss future plans. Yes, a city council can strike a better deal if it doesn't have to show a full proposal to the public.

But in every case, your right to know an important piece of information in public affairs has been denied.

The press is, of course, interested in the free flow of information from government agencies. That is both our job and our public trust.

What you're not learning is sometimes as important as what you're told. These agencies, with their public relations agents and secret agendas, are withholding information from you. Ask them why.

Prudence evident in convention plans

WASHINGTON — There is a Chinese proverb, so I am told, to this effect: A wise man digs a well before he gets thirsty. The Senate Judiciary Committee had that sound advice in mind last month when it approved a bill to provide the machinery for calling a constitutional convention.

No such convention has been held since the summer of 1787, and it seems to me unlikely that another one will be held any time soon. Even so, prudence is an admirable virtue.

By some accounts, 32 states have applied to Congress for a convention that would submit an amendment to require a balanced federal budget. The triggers of the two more states might possibly (application of the call required by Article V of the Constitution). It will do no harm, and it might avoid much confusion to get the pending bill (S. 40) onto the statute books.

The Senate has been kicking this matter around for the past 18 years. North Carolina's Sam Ervin, patron saint of the legislation, held extensive hearings in 1967. In 1971 he managed to get his bill through the Senate 84-9. Again in 1973 the Senate approved an Ervin bill and when Senator Sam retired most of the steam cooled out.

Now the campaign for a balanced budget amendment has the momentum fired up again, and the pending bill, sponsored by Utah's Orrin Hatch, will be on the calendar when Congress gets back to work after Labor Day.

Under the Hatch bill, the states would be required to apply for a constitutional convention to propose "one or more specific amendments" to the Constitution. The state resolutions would not have to spell out precise language; they need only state the substance of their request. If two-thirds of the states filed similar and valid petitions in a span of seven years, and none of them rescinded or withdrew its resolution in the meantime, Congress would issue the call.

The convention, like Congress, would consist of 535 members, chosen by the states as senators and representatives are chosen. No member of Congress could become a delegate. Members of the convention would be paid as members of Congress on a per diem. The convention would have to wind up its business in six months unless Congress extended the period.

Hatch's bill contains this key provision: "No convention called under this act may propose any amendment or amendments of a subject matter different from that stated in the concurrent resolution calling the convention."

Would that provision survive challenge in court? No one knows. The question never has arisen. A few days ago two law professors testified before a House subcommittee that any attempt to limit a constitutional convention would in itself be "profoundly unconstitutional."

Other scholars take a different view.

Without question, the states that have asked for a convention on a balanced budget amendment believe that a convention may be so limited. Most of the 32 have applied for a convention for the specific and exclusive purpose of propounding this one resolution. Eleven states have been even more emphatic.

Alaska, Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Louisiana, Nevada, North Dakota and Utah have resolved that their applications "be deemed null and void, rescinded, and of no effect," if any convention is so limited.

What all this suggests, among other things, is that a long, long road of litigation would have to be traveled before a paved road could be laid. Applications (from Maryland, Mississippi, Delaware and North Dakota) date from 1975. Eight others were approved in 1976; three in 1977. These are getting a little long in the tooth. There is a further problem with North Dakota's resolution. It was not addressed to the Congress, as the Constitution requires, but to sister states, and was not even mailed to the Senate until 1979. Is it valid? Again, who knows?

For reasons I have spelled out many times, I am opposed to a balanced budget amendment. Nevertheless, Congress has shown itself unwilling or incapable of matching income with outgo, and popular demand is rising for some disciplinary machinery that would compel fiscal sanity. A constitutional convention is not prohibited, but it is possible. Sen. Hatch is urging that we dig the well before we get thirsty. The thought makes sense.

Life is no ho hum affair where baseball, political life exist

WASHINGTON — Harry Caray, the Chicago Cubs broadcaster, recently received a letter from a glutton for punishment. The letter came from a fellow in the Soviet Union who says he picks up telecasts of Cub games on an illegal satellite dish. Condemned by wanton fate to live in the Soviet Union, he turns to the Cubs to assuage his suffering.

In light of his consternation, when even that consolation was threatened by a strike, President Reagan reveres Calvin Coolidge, but missed this moment for militant Coolidge-ism. Coolidge's career was made by snubbing a Boston police strike on the grounds that there is no right to strike against the public interest. Harry Truman solved the steel industry to keep it functioning. Sure, the Supreme Court, always picky, pointed out that he had no authority to seize industries, but baseball is special: A nation can live without steel.

The national pastime reflects the national tendency to clothe naked interest in the fine silk of philosophy. The basic truth of baseball is the basic fact of political life: Life is no ho hum affair, for the utility of

George Will

Never mind that owners and players derive much of their incomes from a highly regulated semi-monopoly—the three networks. Never mind that most teams play in stadia built by taxpayers and rented cheaply as a subsidy. Never mind that any sports league depends on cooperative, which in other industries would constitute conspiracy in restraint of trade. Exemption from laws forbidding such cooperation, constitutes yet another subsidy for this semi-socialized industry in which wealthy owners and well-paid proletariat conduct the class struggle in the language of "free enterprise."

For years the owners fought to prevent a free market in talent to deny players the right to sell their services to the highest bidder. When free agency began, owners made two false predictions. They said players would move much more often than before, and that a few teams in the big markets would buy all the top talent and dominate baseball.

But Bill James, baseball's Splnoza, says in his newsletter (You don't subscribe? 1.2 million in 1983 as the team declined. The Philistines!) that player migrations are not team with the best win-loss record in more than a few years during the last quarter-century last eight decades. Yes, only three Phillies plays in Baltimore, where intelligent en-remain from the 1980 championship team (repreneurship has compensated for that scattered unusually quickly. But five demographically disadvantages. The national pastime has some of the national failures. Its businessmen do not practice the business virtues as well as they should. Furthermore, in the last ten seasons 40 prize them. Owners and players are so lo- quacious in the language of rights, there is the 26 teams, 19 have won at least one. The only an attenuated sense of collective re- sponse. The danger the owners did not predict was the dumb owners. Irrational bidding for free na- tion better in baseball than in the Senate agencies has had a ruinous upward rat- chet. 55 mile-per-hour speed limit no longer will of the people

I bought a new car last month. During the 1,000-mile break-in period I was supposed to keep the speed below 55 mph. No problem. I'm a law-abiding citizen. I do that, or pretty close to it, anyway.

I learned a lot about myself during that 1,000 miles. It was a real struggle to stay below 55. Not because I was driving a hot little sports car — my new car is a van. Nor because I have an insatiable need to pass everything on the road. But because at 55 mph I was the slowest thing on the road. Volkswagens and pickups were passing me. Little old ladies were passing me. Something is wrong here.

I've always supported the 55 mph speed limit. I supported it when it was originally passed in 1974, and we were in the throes of the first, and what seemed a permanent, energy shortage. The purpose of the speed limit was to conserve energy.

Today, of course, no one seriously advances energy conservation as a reason for limiting speed. Energy prices have stabilized, and there is no sign of a real energy shortage looming. Average vehicle fuel efficiency has improved, and the average American drives less than in 1970. Time, limited resource that we once traded off against energy, has reasserted itself as a resource on a par with energy, and fewer people are willing to accept the trade.

Rather, the focus of the debate over the speed limit "has shifted" to safety. Motor-vehicle deaths decreased dramatically in the first year of the speed limit. Although they have fluctuated since, then, they remain lower than pre-55 levels.

But the speed limit can't take all the credit. Since 1974, shoulder straps on front seat belts, collapsible steering columns, side guard door beams, front and rear crumple zones, padded steering wheels, dashboards and visors have become standard equipment. Increased use of radial tires and disk brakes has significantly improved automotive control and hence safety. Road conditions have improved, and people are driving less.

All of which makes it difficult to say how much of the increased safety can be attributed to reduced speeds. Estimates range from a high of 75 percent to a low of 25 percent. Whichever number you believe, two things are certain: I am safer driving my '87 Toyota van at 65 than I was driving my '67 Ford Fairlane station wagon at 55. And I am safer driving my '85 Toyota van at 55 than I am driving it at 65.

So as you do so safely? A corollary argument with the speed limit are not with its effects. The problem is that the law is unenforceable: Although a majority of Americans claim to support it, a majority also, at least in this state, ignore it. The California Highway Patrol can't possibly ticket every violation. Show a near-universal disregard for the law justly reversing it? The question speed that they feel comfortable with, strikes to the heart of the meaning of government. In a government "of the people," laws are supposed to reflect the people's will. A law that nobody obeys does not reflect the people's will. It should be changed. 65 percent of drivers, in the absence of that credit, drive at or below. If 85 percent of California drivers are now driving at or below 65 mph on rural freeways, raising the speed limit to 65 mph would directly decrease accidents on those roads.

But whether a change in the speed limit would save lives or not is almost irrelevant. I used to be one of the majority who supported the 55 mph speed limit primarily for safety reasons. At least I thought I was. I see now that I didn't support it, because I didn't obey it.

Some proponents of the 55 limit argue that the people driving 65 today would drive 75 if the speed limit were raised to 65. I won't. My gut reaction is that most people won't.

Kent Milton, CHP public-affairs chief, tells me, drive at a comfortable with, strikes to the heart of the meaning of government. In a government "of the people," laws are supposed to reflect the people's will. A law that nobody obeys does not reflect the people's will. It should be changed. 65 percent of drivers, in the absence of that credit, drive at or below. If 85 percent of California drivers are now driving at or below 65 mph on rural freeways, raising the speed limit to 65 mph would directly decrease accidents on those roads.

Child support law biased, creates more 'Deadbeat Dads'

When Congress passed legislation to improve child-support collection, the vote was unanimous. To put that remarkable fact into perspective, even the declarations of war against Germany were not unanimous.

Fredric Hayward

Now, then, a few words in defense of someone less popular than Hitler: the "Deadbeat Dad." The assumption behind legislative treatment and media coverage of the issue has been that fathers are inherently unreliable; without strong enforcement of their responsibilities, they will leave as many suffering women and children in their wake as they can.

That generalization is patently false. A group that does not care about the families that it leaves behind would not have built the life-insurance industry to its trillion-dollar level.

One group of Deadbeat Dads are parents who never wanted to be parents: If a child is accidentally conceived, legalized abortion permits the mother to declare, "Nobody can force parenthood on me against my will. If I cannot afford this child, or if I cannot be the parent but simply don't want to be a child, no one can hold me accountable." When a woman does that, we say that she is controlling her reproduction. Her destiny: when a man does this, we say that he is a Deadbeat Dad. I do not understand why pro-choice women ("I refuse to take responsibility for this unborn child, so I will kill it") are placed on a higher moral and legal plane than pro-choice men ("I refuse to take responsibility for this unborn child, but I will let it live because someone else does want the child").

Another group of Deadbeat Dads are parents who have changed their minds. There are women who have borne children and then decided to put them up for adoption.

No law forces them to reimburse the adoption agency, subsidize the orphanage or send a monthly check to the adoptive parents. Once she renounces her parental rights she is free of parental responsibility, but once he renounces his rights he becomes a Deadbeat Dad.

Another group of Deadbeat Dads are parents who were denied custody of their children. Our system is modern enough to recognize the injustice of choosing one parent as the provider, but still archaic enough to choose one parent as the nurturer.

The men in this group are victims of sexist stereotypes that mothers make better parents, and they respond as if their children were kidnapped.

Child support to those fathers sounds like a kidnapper's demand: "I want money. It's not ransom, because I don't intend to return your child. But still, I'm running low on cash, so start sending me one-third of every pay check from now on." My hunch is that most parents would reply: "You have some nerve asking me to subsidize your torture of me. If you can't afford my child, return it." A father who refuses this extortion, however, is just another Deadbeat Dad.

A different group of Deadbeat Dads resent their second-class status as parents. They feel dehumanized — treated like a wallet instead of a parent with human feelings and capabilities.

Put yourself in the position of a mother who is told: "The father will make all decisions about your child's education, health, religion, appearance, rules of behavior and so on. Only the father will observe and participate in the daily development of your child.

But don't forget your parental responsibilities! You must come to the child's home every day during school hours, wash the dishes, clean the house, pick up the laundry, prepare dinner — and don't forget that you will be found in contempt of court if you are still in the home when the child returns from school. Every other week, if he is not angry with you, your ex-husband will allow you some personal contact with your child.

My hunch is that most mothers would lose their motivation to work and "default." But fathers who lose their motivation are known as Deadbeat Dads.

There are many other Deadbeat Dads who have my sympathy. A large percentage simply cannot afford their child support.

Many others are outraged by the proportion of expenses dumped on male shoulders. (Wouldn't you be less motivated to pay taxes if you were put in a special category with higher rates than everyone else?)

The list of other defensible categories goes on. The point is that no one becomes a parent simply because he or she wants an endless responsibility.

People become parents because they want the rewards of parenthood badly enough to pay the price of responsibility. Once you rob someone of the rewards of parenthood — the warmth of a family, the continuous experience of a child's growth, the contribution of one's values — you rob him of his sense of duty.

It is not surprising that fathers with joint physical custody — that is, fathers who are allowed to feel that they are supporting their own, rather than someone else's, family — have excellent records on child support.

Letter/ Wilderness plan will destroy heritage

Twin Falls and the nation will be deprived of the benefits of a splendid culture and way of life by wilderness area expansion at Jarbidge, Nev.

A false shell of Jarbidge would remain, but its vital driving force will be destroyed by strict regulations and restricted lands.

Integral vista regulations and other very expensive environmentalist concepts will stop all commerce not related to wilderness administration. Control of Jarbidge residents will extend into their homes, with regulations requiring them to burn certain fuels etc. Anything that might be seen from the wilderness area by a backpacker will be tightly controlled.

As it now stands, the wilderness boundary is on a ridge separating wilderness from civilization. This natural boundary makes it possible for both worlds to live in harmony. The new wilderness boundary will allow the wilderness area to encroach on civilization and will generate major conflicts.

All this is unreasonable because the proposed expansion takes in roads, cabins, mines, mining claims, and great mineral potential. An operating mine overlooks the proposed wilderness and can be seen from almost every point within it. In short, the proposed addition simply doesn't qualify as wilderness.

It appears that this grave mistake will be allowed to happen unless the people start objecting. The loss of this magnificent heritage of an existing culture would be tragic for America.

Tax legislators receive big bucks from PAC groups for campaigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 56 members of the two congressional committees considering tax overhaul legislation raised $10.4 million in campaign contributions during the first half of the year, Common Cause reported Saturday.

More than $3.7 million of the contributions to members of the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee came from political action committees, the fund-raising units created by any number of special-interest groups ranging from doctors to milk producers.

Total contributions and PAC donations were about triple the level for the first six months of 1985, said Common Cause, a citizens' lobbying group. The figures were compiled from reports to the Federal Election Commission. Members of the two tax committees are considering legislation to overhaul the income tax. During the first half of the year, including $691,015 from PACs. Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., a member of the panel and Senate majority leader, was second with $833,430, half of it from PACs. Both are expected to seek re-election in 1986.

Rep-Henson Moore, R-La., who is running for the Senate, was the top recipient on Ways and Means with $695,536, including $127,750 from PACs.

Republican Sen. Steve Symms, the lone member of either committee from Idaho, received $669,372, including $290,872 from PACs. Symms is expected to seek re-election next year.

Wisconsin potato farmers face lowest prices in decade

STEVENS POINT, Wis. (AP) — Central Wisconsin potato growers say the lowest prices in a decade may force some farmers out of business.

"It's a blood bath," said Ivan Neilson, sales manager for Wysocki Farms. "Nobody's ever experienced a year like this before."

Early white potatoes marketed as bulk chip stock are selling at $1 to $1.50 a hundredweight. A year ago, the market opened at $6 to $7 per hundredweight.

For improved prices as Wisconsin entered its peak potato harvest months of August and September.

"We're very, very concerned" about 20 percent of the area's growers, he said.

Prices are as low today as they were 10 years ago, Bushman said. "Our price situation is almost at the point of disaster," said broker Eugene Katz of Katz Co. of Flover.

"The price is far less than the cost of production."

Usually, Katz said, prices start high for early varieties and decline. This year, he said, "it started bad and never got good."

Katz said a high yield and increased acreage devoted to potatoes this year have combined with higher than average surplus stock from last year to cause a glut.

At that rate, growers are losing $250 to $500 an acre, he said. "There's no one in the open market that can make money in the potato business this year."

According to Neilson, the growers' strategy has been to "cut corners and live on hope."

But, he said, "there aren't too many corners that can be cut."

Some potato growers may opt to keep their potatoes, which can be stored up to 18 months, and hope for a better price later.

Democratic huddle held to debate nominations, delegate selection

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — A national Democratic Party commission Saturday debated how the party should choose its 1988 presidential candidate, with some members saying too much attention has been paid to delegate selection rules.

The second regional hearing of the Democratic National Committee's Fairness Commission also saw Wisconsin asking to regain its open primary and Iowa Democrats defending early scheduling of their state's caucuses.

Democrats have won only one presidential election since 1968, and commission members blamed the party's lack of success on intra-party politics.

"I'm interested in winning," said

Charles Nicoletou of Maine, a member of the 51-member commission. "I want to have a process that gets Democrats to concentrate less on fighting amongst themselves and more on winning."

"What's really important is not the rules revision, but the policies we espouse," added Richard Wiener of Michigan, co-chairman of the commission. "Our ultimate goal is not the writing of a perfect set of rules. It's but one important step in the ultimate process of electing a president in 1988."

Wisconsin Gov. Tony Earl led a delegation to argue for a continuation of that state's open primary to select delegates.

Earl proposed that national party rules be relaxed, allowing individual state parties to use the delegate selection system that fits best and allowing Democrats as a whole to gain "victory through diversity."

Democratic Party rules have barred open primaries, which allow crossover voting by Republicans, since the early 1970s. Wisconsin had been granted exemptions until last year.

In 1984, Wisconsin Democrats held an open primary, but used a caucus system to pick national convention delegates to satisfy party rules.

Nashville Baptist school apologizes for recent lesson

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Southern Baptist Sunday School Board, responding to more than 100 complaints, has apologized for a recent Sunday school lesson it published about Satan.

The Nashville-based denomination publishing company says it received 155 letters and telephone calls protesting the interpretation of the devil in the July 7 lesson published in the board's "Adult Bible Study" series, said Lloyd Elder, board president.

Board trustees, who met earlier this month in Glorietta, N.M., issued a statement expressing "regret and concern about errors" in the lesson, which they said presented an incorrect interpretation of Satan.

The trustees also recommended a study of the editorial processes for publishing church literature and urged better screening in selecting writers and editors.

Board officials said the lesson, on the Old Testament book of Job, gave the impression that no empire of evil opposes God and that Satan is God's servant rather than his enemy.

The lesson was inconsistent with Southern Baptist biblical teachings, officials said.

The board distributes church literature throughout the Southern Baptist denomination, which has 14.3 million members in this country.

Elder said the errors were made in the editing process and were not the fault of the writer, John I. Durham.

The lesson was edited, Elder said, during a period when the permanent editor had changed jobs, the supervisor was retiring and an interim editor was assigned the task.

Elder said the board mistakenly enlisted the interim editor later to serve as appraisal reader on the manuscript that he had edited.

Durham told the Nashville Banner that, when he read a copy of the lesson he had written, he "immediately recognized words and phrases" that he hadn't written.

Some statements he had written had been deleted and others added.

Reagan set to ask Congress for debt limit over $2 trillion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is about to ask Congress for another increase in the government's line of credit, a move that would push the national debt limit beyond $2 trillion.

That's $2,000,000,000,000.

"Unless I just misread it, I think that's going to be the donnybrook of the year," Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said last week.

Treasury Department officials are scheduled to appear before a Senate Finance subcommittee Sept. 10 — the day after the Senate returns from its summer recess — to officially request an increase in the current debt limit of $1,824 trillion.

As of last week, the debt had reached $1,810 trillion.

John Niehenke, acting assistant Treasury secretary for domestic finance, has said the administration will be seeking the increase because the government likely will hit the limit of its authority to borrow money by the end of September.

Niehenke has declined to say how much of a boost will be sought.

Asked if the request would be for a limit beyond $2 trillion, Arthur Sidoron, a Treasury Department spokesman, said: "I think that's fair enough" to assume.

The red-ink budget Congress adopted Aug. 1 estimated the government's borrowing needs would require a debt limit of $2,078 trillion for next year and up to $2.5 trillion by 1988.

Since 1975, the national debt has more than tripled. It has doubled just since 1980.

The national debt is the accumulation of all the deficits created over the years by the federal government, spending more money than it takes in. Raising the debt limit does not mandate spending more money, but simply gives the Treasury authority to borrow to pay the bills.

Although raising the debt limit has become a familiar practice for legislators — two dozen increases approved in the last decade, three of them last year — it is an increasingly difficult political task for Congress.

The government now spends more than $140 billion a year just to pay the interest on the debt.

Last year, legislators temporarily denied debt limit increases as demonstrations of anger over persistent budget deficits and as attempts to build pressure for action on other issues.

This year, growing resentment over the deficits — running at an annual rate of $200 billion — already, jeopardy," Rudman said.

S. African riots wane; death toll placed at 53

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — Rioting ebbed in Durban black and Indian townships Saturday with the official death toll placed at 53 in South Africa's worst anti-apartheid violence in nearly a year.

In Cape Town, a hand grenade exploded among police who were charging mourners at a black funeral, injuring six police officers and a South African technician for CBS, the U.S. television network. No one was seriously hurt.

The official toll from four days of bloody rioting in Durban's townships included 36 people shot fatally by police and 17 found mutilated in riot areas. All of the victims were blacks, according to the official accounts. Press reports said two Indians also were killed.

The townships were relatively quiet Saturday as black and Indian vigilante squads patrolled neighborhoods.

Police arrested a top anti-apartheid leader, the Rev. Allan Boesak, and 18 others earlier in the day who were trying to enter Cape Town's Guguletu black township for the funeral of a man shot and killed by police in a riot two weeks ago.

Boesak is a leader of the United Democratic Front, the main organization fighting South Africa's system of race segregation, or apartheid. He is of mixed race, known in South Africa as "colored." Arrested with him were nine other people of mixed race and nine whites.

All 19 were charged with attempted illegal entry into the township under laws that enable police to ban non-blacks from entering black townships in times of tension.

Most, like Boesak, were clergymen planning to officiate at the funeral. All 19 were released on bail.

Witnesses said the hand grenade was hurled over a fence at police charging a crowd of about 150 angry blacks ordered to disperse after the funeral. The police officers and CBS sound technician Anton Van der Merwe, a South African, suffered minor fragment wounds.

Police and troops sealed off Guguletu and banned political posters, marches and processions. The township is not among 36 towns and cities covered by a three-week-old state of emergency.

Boesak and his group left the city's Wynberg Magistrate's Court singing, "What Have We Done?" Witnesses said police charged into a crowd of mixed race supporters outside the court and arrested them.

"We all went (to the funeral) as a matter of conscience ... to show solidarity with the people," Boesak said as he left the court. "As ministers of the Gospel, we will not be told by the government what to do."

In Johannesburg, Foreign Minister R.F. Botha returned from talks in Vienna, Austria, with U.S. and other Western officials. The talks prompted widespread speculation the white government is about to make concessions to the 24 million voteless black majority. Whites in South Africa number about 5 million.

Botha said the Western officials "were well satisfied," adding some of the Cabinet were eager to release Nelson Mandela, the black dissident leader jailed for life in 1964 on sabotage charges.

The government offered in February to release Mandela, leader of the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla group, if he renounced violence. Mandela refused.

Two Chileans die in anti-government violence

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Clashes between police and demonstrators accusing Chile's security forces of brutality left two civilians dead and ten, including two policemen, wounded by gunfire, officials said Saturday. They reported 242 arrests.

Shots were exchanged between police and rioters Friday night after a power failure blacked out Santiago and much of central Chile, according to the officials. A communist guerrilla group asserted responsibility for the blackout, saying its members had bombed an unspecified number of utility towers.

The anti-government demonstrations began Friday morning, called in connection with the Aug. 11 ruling by a judge that there was "clear evidence" implicating 14 policemen in the murders of three communist leaders last March. The bodies of the victims were found beside the road to the Santiago airport with their throats cut.

The government arrested the 14 policemen and the commander of the Carabineros, Chile's paramilitary police force, resigned from that post and also from the ruling military junta.

President Augusto Pinochet had instructed police last week to "act with firmness but without undue excesses," and the Carabineros fired tear gas and water cannons, but refrained from using their clubs, in dispersing several hundred protesters in downtown Santiago during the day.

Police said that during the black-out, bands of protesters in Santiago's working-class districts looted stores, blocked streets with burning tires, burned four buses and shot at police vehicles, wounding two policemen.

They said Aida Morales Vilches, 48, and the wife of a retired policeman, were killed and five civilians were wounded during a battle between riot police and gunmen who fired 10 shots from automatic weapons into a police bus. Five other civilians suffered bullet wounds in sporadic fighting, the police said.

Gemayel's presidency weakening

Berri calls for ouster

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Nabih Berri, the Shiite Muslim militia leader, made his strongest demand yet for the ouster of Lebanon's Christian president Saturday, saying that "either the regime dies or all of Lebanon will."

Hours before, rockets hit the palace of President Amil Gemayel during the fiercest fighting in Lebanon's capital in two months.

No one in the palace was hurt, but police reported five people killed and 41 wounded in artillery and mortar battles that raged late Friday into Saturday on the three-mile Green Line cutting Beirut into Muslim and Christian halves.

Administration sources said the flare-up resulted from Muslim anger at what they called renewed Syrian support for the beleaguered Christian-Maronite president. The sources spoke on condition they were not identified.

An estimated 100,000 people have perished in Lebanon's civil war, now in its 11th year. Police said unidentified Muslim gunmen dragged a wounded man from the American University Hospital on Saturday and killed him. They linked the slaying to feuding between Muslim militias.

Berri, who is justice minister and initiator for ouster Gemayel in the country's "national unity" Cabinet, told reporters at his west Beirut home, "I tell whoever supports this regime that either the regime dies or all of Lebanon will."

He said Gemayel's rule is based on "inequality, oppression and creating hostility among the people."

"This is the regime that blessed Israel's occupation of our land... and received Israelis at the palace," he said.

Israel invaded its northern neighbor in June 1982, saying it wanted to oust Palestinian guerrillas who launched attacks on Israel. Most Israeli troops were pulled out last June.

Berri said Gemayel had received a letter from the former Israeli defense minister and architect of the invasion, in his palace.

Ugandan regime releases prisoners

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — The new military regime freed 1,203 political prisoners Saturday it said were jailed by the ousted civilian president, Milton Obote. A Cabinet member called it "a wind of change" in Uganda's often criticized human rights record.

The prisoners, all from a maximum security prison near Kampala, arrived by truck to a ceremony in a downtown square packed with an estimated 70,000 cheering people.

The list of prisoners included guerrillas who fought the Obote government and some top aides of former dictator Idi Amin.

Lt. Gen. Tito Okello, named head of state two days after a July 27 coup, announced at the ceremony that the new regime would hold peace talks in Tanzania on Tuesday with the main anti-Obote guerrilla faction, the National Resistance Movement.

Family jewels sold for a thin dime; left stashed and forgotten in a tin

BRIGHTON, N.Y. (AP) — A woman who hid her family jewels in a cookie tin mistakenly sold the tin for 10 cents at a garage sale in June and fears she may never see the heirlooms again.

"I'm like losing my mind," Inese Rencis of Rochester said Friday. "Stupid, stupid me."

The jewelry includes three-quarter-carat diamond earrings, an 18-karat gold and topaz necklace and an 18-karat gold bracelet that had been in her family for more than 100 years. Mrs. Rencis told Brighton police.

"We came to America with nothing," said Mrs. Rencis, who emigrated with her husband from the Soviet republic of Latvia in 1950.

"But we didn't sell the jewelry, even though we were starving during the World War II. You don't sell jewel-

Mrs. Rencis said she took the jewels out of the bank where she kept them to wear them to a wedding. When she got home, the bank was closed, so she put the jewels in a shaving case and stuffed the case in a cookie tin.

But then she forgot about the jewelry and she gave the tin to a friend collecting items for a garage sale in the Rochester suburb of Brighton.

She said she vividly recalls selling the tin herself.

"The lady picked it up and asked if it was clean. I said, 'Yes, it's clean.'

She said maybe she should open it to insure the jewels. She reported the loss to police and offered a reward for the jewels in a newspaper.

"She told us about it yesterday because she was so embarrassed about it," her daughter-in-law, Debbie Rencis, said Saturday.

Bank-job couple nailed for heists

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A couple charged with robbing more than a dozen small-town banks of more than $572,000 have been sentenced to federal prison terms.

Lawrence Edward Byrom, 56, and Alice Elizabeth-Marie Byrom, 37, were charged with robbing 14 small-town North Texas banks over 14 years.

U.S. District Judge David O. Below on Friday sentenced Byrom to four 25-year sentences structured so that he would serve 50 years. Mrs. Byrom was given two 25-year sentences to be served concurrently.

The judge agreed to send them to federal prisons in Texas so they would be near their three teen-agers.

The Haltom City couple pleaded no contest in July to robbing two banks. Byrom also pleaded no contest to robbing two others. In return, prosecutors agreed to drop charges in the other robberies.

Mayor, 12 years old, may lose job if drive for incorporation succeeds

CRABB, Texas (AP) — A campaign promise may cost this farming community's 12-year-old mayor his job Saturday if voters agree to incorporate the town and prevent annexation by neighboring cities.

When Brian Zimmerman, then 11, was elected mayor in an unofficial election at his aunt's grocery store in September 1983, he vowed to put Crabb on the map by seeking incorporation.

Incorporation, he said, would prevent adjacent cities such as Richmond and Houston and especially Houston from annexing it. Crabb is about 20 miles south of Houston.

Other communities have not expressed an interest in annexing Crabb, but Zimmerman says he wants to keep them from being able to do so.

Aside from putting Crabb on the map, Zimmerman says incorporating means the possibility better police protection, a fire department, garbage pickup and mosquito control. Above all, he said, it prevents annexation.

However, residents would also have to pay city taxes in addition to the county and school taxes they now pay.

"But if we get incorporated we could make something of it," said Zimmerman, who was elected when 23 of 30 voters chose him over two other candidates, ages 69 and 71.

"If someone else annexes us, he'd pay more taxes but not necessarily get better things."

It's he's ousted, the mayor, who will enter the eighth-grade this fall, said he's uncertain whether he'll seek public office again.

"I'll be 13 years-old Aug. 20," he said. "So I'll have to wait five more years before I can be anything but a Texas election code."

Fort Bend County is paying the $200 cost of the election.

Schroeder returns to transition home

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — William Schroeder is returning Sunday to the specially equipped apartment he occupied last April, but a hospital spokesman said he has no plan for the world's longest-living mechanical heart patient to return to his Indiana hometown.

"There are no plans for him to move back to Jasper as yet," Dr. Allan Lansing, director of Humana Institute International, said Saturday.

Schroeder, the first person to live outside a hospital with the Jarvik-7 heart, visited Jasper a week ago and rode in a parate after a 90-mile trip from Louisville.

But many changes would have to be taken into consideration before Schroeder, 53, could make the move there for good, Lansing said.

"Modifications have to be made in his house, particularly for the compressed air system. Those won't be made until he and his family are physically — and psychologically — prepared for his move back," Lansing said.

He would have to be able to pay for the $200 cost of the election.

Salt Lake conference hits most topics in genealogy

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A conference of genealogists here today said that the use of computers and modern technology is likely to probe the past more thoroughly than ever before.

During a three-day event at the Salt Palace, leaders in the field of genealogy discussed the use of computers, software and databases, and computer languages.

But history is also being written. The conference was the first of its kind in the West, and it was held in a historic building in downtown Salt Lake City.

Wyoming uranium mine will close after California firm drops contract

GLENROCK, Wyo. (AP) — A California nuclear power plant has bought its way out of its long-term contract with the Bear Creek Uranium Co., prompting a decision to close the mine and mill operation by the end of the year.

The mine and mill were to produce 6 million pounds of yellow cake to its peak in 1977 and employed 196 people at the plant in the Los Angeles area.

The mine and mill operation began in 1977 and employed 196 people at the plant in the Los Angeles area.

Ex-legislator to take federal posts

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Former Utah lawmaker C. McClain Haddow will serve as acting head of the federal Medicare and Medicaid programs, The Salt Lake Tribune reported Saturday.

Haddow, who currently is chief of staff for the Department of Health and Human Services, said HHS Secretary Margaret Heckler selected him for the post until a permanent administrator is named.

Haddow said he expects to serve as acting administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration for five or six months. The Senate must confirm the eventual nominee for the position.

Possible candidates include Sheila Smythe, former head of Blue Cross/Blue Shield of New York; Helen H. Haddow, former head of American Red Cross; and Bill Hoyer in the White House Office of Policy and Development; and Sheila Burke, an aide to Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole.

Heat patterns to be mapped by NASA jet

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A NASA jet equipped with a thermal scanner will fly over the Salt Lake Valley this week to gather data needed for a map showing the distribution of heat sources, state officials said.

Pilots and scientists from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will go up in the aircraft Tuesday and Wednesday, said State Forester Ralph A. Miles.

The purpose of the project is to create a "picture" of the heating and cooling patterns of the Salt Lake City area, which can be used to help make cities healthier, more comfortable and more economical places to live, said Miles.

The valley is one of three areas chosen for the study. The others are Dayton, Ohio, and Mexico City.

Salt Lake was chosen because of its rapid growth and its location between two different geographical environments, the Wasatch Front on the east and the Great Basin Desert on the west.

Temperatures will be checked at the warmest time of day, between 1:30 p.m. and 2 p.m., and again at the coolest time, about 6 a.m.

"We are pleased that Salt Lake City was chosen for this study because it is unique," said Miles. "We are hopeful that the things we learn will be valuable to the residents of the state. If the information proves to be as significant as we think, it will benefit many of the localities."

Sisters arrested for exam switch

DENVER (AP) — A former city policewoman and her sister have been arrested after being accused of trading places to take the police academy entrance examination, officials said.

Jeannie Cordova and her sister, Joanne Marie Shannon, were charged in an investigation of second-degree forgery, criminal impersonation and conspiracy, said Chief Deputy Denver District Attorney Chuck Lepley.

Cordova is accused of taking and passing the test on Dec. 7, 1982, in the name of her sister, who had failed it Feb. 10, 1982. Shannon worked as a police officer until Aug. 1, when she resigned.

Prosecutors said a handwriting expert determined Cordova wrote her sister's name on the exam and that the day the test was given, Shannon was in Mexico.

The 27-year-old women — Cordova is 10 months older than Shannon — surrendered Friday and were released on $5,500 personal recognizance bonds, Lepley said.

Hospital care and business are changing

Corporation plan approved

By PAULA EUBANKS
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A week after turning down an almost identical plan, the Idaho Secretary of State gave the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center the go-ahead signal last week for the formation of a non-profit corporation under which the hospital plans to offer new medical services.

The Secretary of State authorized the incorporation of the Magic Valley Regional Health Services Corporation.

The county hospital and the new corporation are not the same entity. The corporation will be able to enter business activities that are not clearly permitted to the county hospital.

For example, an outreach clinic in Jackpot, Nev., or a biomedical laboratory could be developed by the new corporation, while the hospital might not be permitted to do so.

The hospital's right to develop such services is not clear in Idaho law, said Fred D. Decker, the hospital's lawyer.

There are no firm plans of what the new corporation will do, Decker said.

The profits generated by the new services or products sold by the corporation would go into the accounts of the hospital, Decker said.

He said since the corporation is non-profit, those profits would go to the hospital without being taxed.

Under state law, a county hospital is a government entity and is not permitted to create a corporation. So, in order to enter the business areas not specified as medical services, the county hospital board decided to create a non-profit corporation that is not official-ly connected with the hospital, Decker said.

The new corporation, though, would work very closely with the hospital board, he added.

When the new corporation's articles of incorporation were submitted to the secretary of state, state lawyers had one objection to a technical point in the document. The corporation had applied last December as a non-member, non-profit corporation, a combination that is rare and usually used by churches, according to EVERETT Wohlers, a lawyer with the secretary of state.

A non-member, non-profit corporation must name another corporation that has the power to appoint the new corporation's board of directors.

Bingham stresses planning

By PAULA EUBANKS
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The new long-range planning committee of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center will be the hospital's guide through the fast-changing landscape of modern health care, says the hospital's new administrator, John W. Bingham.

"We will set our direction based on strategic planning," Bingham said in an interview last week about his plans for the hospital.

The long-range planning committee of the board is headed by newly appointed chairman, Dr. Ben Katz, who replaces former committee chairman Lee Odenwald.

The committee will develop policies and programs to keep MVRMC a step ahead of the competition while "making balanced decisions" about meeting the health needs of the community, Bingham said.

Some of the new ideas the committee is considering include expansion into Jackpot, Nev.; alternative uses for empty wings of the "overbuilt" MVRMC building; pay and job-share incentives for nurses; and closer evaluation of which doctors are granted privileges at the hospital, MVRMC has examined the Jackpot outreach potential by checking how crossing the state line would affect a doctor's malpractice insurance, licensing costs, and other factors of medical business, Bingham said.

The hospital wings that are not filled with the patients expected when the MVRMC expanded a few years ago, might be used for a rehabilitation unit, nursing home business, health promotion and education projects, and a women's health care project, he said.

The rehabilitation unit might focus on bone, heart, and physical therapy, he added.

The women's health care project might include a "less clinical" birthing center to replace the birthing center MVRMC now maintains, Bingham said.

Although he has not done formal research into patients' opinions, he believes that participation in the current birthing program has dropped because medical equipment is still a visible part of the MVRMC birthing rooms, he said.

"Ob-gyn (obstetrics and gynecology) is a rapidly changing area. That's one area we want to respond to," Bingham said.

Bingham said his philosophy behind the new birthing program is to "expose people to the hospital from the very beginning, and

At 78, she is a small but poetic soul

Guadalupe Sanchez, who was born in Mexico, carries a wellspring of Mexican oral tradition, in poem and song, in her head

Frail but active, 'Pita' Sanchez is custodian of poems, songs

By PAT MARCONATONIO
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — At fiestas and other celebrations, "Pita" Sanchez sings a bit of her homeland when she recites the poems and songs she has kept with her for more than 70 years.

Guadalupe Sanchez, or Pita, as she insists you call her, keeps the poems and songs here — she sings to her husband. The authors she has forgotten, but she knows their words.

Sanchez is an unfussing and friendly woman. Frail and small, but active and unbetraying that she is 78 years old.

She was born in Mexico in 1907 and entered the United States in 1944 as a legal resident after her father died. Sanchez has never become a citizen.

After residing in Laredo, Texas, she came to Idaho. Having never married, she took care of the children of her relatives who were working in the fields during their annual trips from Texas to Idaho.

Now the children she used to watch bring their children to her. She remains in Twin Falls for that very reason. Her family is near.

Of her five brothers and sisters, only a brother and a step-brother remain alive. Her natural brother is 83 years old and still works in the fields — but only a little because he has heart problems, she says.

"He is a strong man," Sanchez adds. Her small house in South Park seems to be the center of her life. Inside it's a blend of American and Mexican with religious art-works throughout. There are roses on the porch. A picture of a sambrero. A collection of plastic and ceramic dogs.

There is no television. Sanchez doesn't speak English.

She doesn't write her own poetry or songs. All the poems she now recites, she used to recite in school.

Her father had told her to do what the teachers wanted her to do.

"He was the boss at home and they were the boss at school," she says. "What you learned in school you never forget. I remember everything."

People ask her how she can remember all the poems and she says it's perhaps because she never married. Her mind wasn't filled with her own family. Anyway, she likes the poems and to sing and say them for others.

How many poems and songs does she know?

The woman rolls her eyes, touches her head gently and smiles "Oh, many, many."

Which ones are her favorites? Again, the smile because there are many.

"Todos." All of them. When she does recite, she straightens and her voice becomes loud and strong.

Sanchez does a poem for "the daughters who don't have mothers." "I called Mother, dear Mother. But, she was silent. Oh, mother

Stallings keeping busy during Congress recess

Israel tour backed by interest group

TWIN FALLS — Rep. Richard Stallings is touring Israel this week with four of his colleagues from the House of Representatives.

The tour, paid for by the Council for a Secure America, will take Stallings to Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, and the Golan Heights to inspect defense installations and farms.

"He is going to be visiting a drip irrigation agriculture project. They're doing some advanced studies on uses of irrigation... in some places in the desert, they're using seawater for irrigation purposes," Stallings' chief of staff Randy Furniss said Friday from Boise.

Stallings left Tuesday and will be back Monday, Furniss said. The visits to farm sites and to a high tech project will tie in with Stallings' interests on the Agriculture and Science and Technology Committees, Furniss said. Stallings also serves on the Committee on Aging.

Other congressmen on the trip are Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif.; Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C.; Rep. Joseph DiGuardia, R-N.Y.; and Rep. Wes Watkins, R-Okla.

RICHARD STALLINGS Travels in Israel

Stallings and Coelho are the only congressmen on the trip from the Agriculture Committee.

Furniss says the Council is a "novel" organization whose main purpose is to emphasize U.S. energy independence. The group's backers are Texas oilmen — U.S. Jewish leaders who do not want to see oil-producing countries exercise embargo power over the U.S. as they did in the 1970s.

1985 farm bill contains provisions to retrain farmers who lose their land, provide counseling

By DEAN MILLER
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, says the 1985 farm bill will contain provisions to help farmers retrain for new jobs if they lose their farms.

In a recent press release, Stallings said the farm bill will give the Secretary of Agriculture authority to help colleges investigate the needs of these farmers and provide counseling and training.

"The 1985 farm bill recognizes that the current plight of farmers, including an astonishing number here in Idaho, will result in many people leaving farming and seeking a livelihood in other sectors of the economy. Many of these displaced farmers, most of whom have spent a lifetime working the land, are ill-equipped to move into today's tight job market."

Congress did not finish work on the farm bill before the August recess. College of Southern Idaho Vocational Technical Dean Orval Bradley says the College is currently working with Gov. John Evans' office to find sources of funding for a program like the one Stallings is suggesting. He says the College won't know how much the program will cost until they get a head count of farmers who may need retraining.

"We have no feel on that at all, that will determine the size of the grant. What we are proposing is to try to identify those people, then get in and do some assessment and look at their goals."

"Hopefully we're going to be drawing on the skills they already have."

He said he hopes to have the program in place within a few months. "I think (if it takes) a year, we're too late."

Bradley said last year he had about 30 farmers enrolled in farm management courses to teach record-keeping and other management techniques. He says he hopes to expand that program next fall to help farmers hold onto their farms.

keeping the farmers in their rural communities.

He is looking into ways to attract high tech employers to Idaho as an alternate source of jobs for the farmers through his membership on the Science and Technology Committee. She said cheap electrical power in the Intermountain West may be a drawing card for high tech manufacturers.

The dominance of agriculture in the southern Idaho economy may pose a problem for retraining if farm failures drag down the rest of the economy, Stallings' Chief of Staff Randy Furniss said Friday.

"The economy of Idaho has never rebounded to the extent the national economy has," he said. A retraining program might have to prepare farmers to enter a new job outside the state.

A retraining program for miners in Shoshone County after the Bunker Hill operation closed down saw retrained miners moving to southern Idaho and out of state to put their new skills to work, he said.

Idaho farmers plan meetings

TWIN FALLS — The Southern Idaho Farmers Association will hold meetings Monday in Twin Falls and Burley about an adequate supply of farm field workers for the 1986 crop year.

Under discussion will be a federal program, called H-2, which allows temporary admission and employment of aliens in jobs where there is not sufficient qualified and available help from American citizens. The employment of the aliens must not adversely affect similarly employed American citizens.

A delegation of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service will discuss the program with Idaho farmers and ranchers at a breakfast at the Holiday Inn. A news conference will follow at 10 a.m.

The group then will tour several farms in the Magic Valley. They will conclude their day with a meeting in Burley at 7:30 p.m. at the Burley Inn.

The public is invited to attend.

Glass crusade was created through efforts of many

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Behind the inter-terminant Crusade in Twin Falls is the Bill Glass Evangelical Association of Dallas.

When some pastors and lay people from Twin Falls were interested in organizing a crusade in the area, it was assisted by executive president Dick Rohrer who helped them through the details after initial discussions began in February 1984. Rohrer was in Twin Falls again this week seeing to the finished product.

He has been with the Glass association for about 10 years. Rohrer said it was started in 1969 by former NFL football player, now evangelist, Bill Glass.

The association, which is non-profit, operates on donations, Rohrer said. It becomes involved in crusades, such as the one in

Twin Falls.

"We go where we are invited," Rohrer said. The organization has been involved in more than 130 crusades throughout the nation, with this being the first one in Idaho.

Rohrer said crusades help bring people together, no matter their church.

An important part of the association is its missionary work in state and federal prisons. The work is a kind of crusade behind bars, featuring testimony from athletes and entertainers. The organization began this type of ministry work in 1972 and has visited more than 300 prisons, Rohrer said.

Rohrer said that the association should take a backseat to the local committee and volunteers in Twin Falls.

Through the crusade's $54,610 budget developed by the crusade committee, he will receive an honorarium and compensation for his expenses, Rohrer said.

Glass will not receive any salary nor "love offerings" during the crusade. Only his expenses will be paid by the committee, Rohrer said.

From the budget, the local people also pay the special guests, such as former NFL football player Rosy Grier.

The association supplies expertise and their contacts to find and hire special guests. The committee will pay the association for its instructional materials or any billboards it supplies.

As per agreement with the local committee, any funds remaining after crusade expenses are paid go to the Glass Evangelical Association for its prison ministry program, Rohrer says.

"We feel local businesses benefit from the crusade," Rohrer said.

The associations business is that of presenting God's message, "a message that can change a person's life," Rohrer said.

hopfully, they'll come back.

Bingham said that MVRMC administrators have an idea to get once-practicing nurses to come back to work to ease the nurse shortage.

MVRMC is considering policies that would permit job-sharing to nurses who might want to work half-days or only a few days per week. Job-sharing means that two people split the duties, salary and benefits of one job.

MVRMC is also considering offering pay incentives to nurses who are covered under their spouse's work benefits.

He figures that this policy would be especially attractive to nurses who are out of the workforce and who are covered under their spouse's work benefits.

One way the hospital will respond to increasingly high malpractice settlements is by closely reviewing the education, experience and goals of doctors who apply for certain practice privileges at the hospital, he said.

"The hospital has to be monitoring this," he said, "and look carefully at what doctors are asking to do."

Bingham said that part of his management philosophy is to monitor the needs and desires of all hospital customers, the doctors, the patients, the business people and employees.

Hospital

Since the Magic Valley Regional Health Services Corp. articles of incorporation did not name MVRMC as a corporate officer, the corporation decided to change the articles.

The final, approved version of the articles created a member, non-profit corporation in which individuals are elected to the board by "members." The names of the people who form the first group of members are established by the articles of incorporation.

The first board of 15 people will include three county commissioners, doctors, and county-appointed hospital board members who are legally considered separate individuals who have no ties to the hospital.

Although the law does not what to recognize their relationship with the hospital, these hospital-connected people were selected because they will ensure that the new corporation will work to do top services and products that complement the hospital's operation, according to Decker.

"These are people who would develop it (the new corporation) with the hospital," he said.

"Eventually others in the community would come on (the board) as the entity develops," Decker said.

"The county commissioners on the board are considered individuals rather than public officials."

Yet, the bottom line in his business decision is the patient, he said.

"Before I make any decision, I ask what would the patient want to do," Bingham said. "The patient is a changing patient (nowadays). Competition were selected because they surmised is the main value now."

"Patients will come in and want to will work to do top services and products that complement the hospital's operation, according to Decker."

He added, "I think the community is now wondering, 'Where should we go for health care?'"

Bingham said he hopes it's to MVRMC.

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Evangelist Bill Glass told a coat-bundled audience Saturday to become strong from hurt.

Although crowds were smaller than the previous days of the week-long crusade, there was enthusiastic response to the message the former NFL football player was sending. About 2,000 people turned out despite cold wind raking through the stadium on Saturday evening, which was dedicated as Neighboring Cities Night.

"Instead of 'nursing and rehearsing hurt,'" Glass told the audience, "reverse it. Make 'hurt' our strengths. That's what Christians should do."

Ron Johnson was born with a club foot and became a track champion, Glass said.

Twin brothers whose father was a drunk told different action to the hurt, he said. One didn't drink and became successful. The other became a drunk.

"You mind the things of God," Glass added.

People became devastated with hurt when they should take constructive action, he added. When you are upset or have a problem, take action, Glass advised.

The action he recommended is bowing heads and bending on a knee to thank God for the problem or hurt, even though we don't want to thank him for problems, said Glass, bending down on his knee. God should be thanked for everything, he said.

"Overcome emotion with action. You need to take actions for Jesus tonight. I want to stop worrying and start rejoicing."

He asked those who felt that "God is speaking to you" to come forward to him and volunteer counselors. While a 200-member choir sang "God is so good, dream of people did go" to the podium as Glass shook their hand.

"So many have come and there never will be a better time," Glass said smiling.

The crusade concludes today. Before the conclusion of the Saturday crusade meeting, Glass suggested people go to church Sunday morning and invite their friends to the crusade later in the day. He said there would be "great blessings."

Harold M. Brooks

GOODING — Harold M. Brooks, 79, of Gooding, formerly of Fairfield, died Friday at his home after a long illness.

Born in Soldier on Aug. 22, 1905, he attended school in Twin Falls. He married Mae Vandiver in Hamilton, Mont., on Oct. 7, 1933. After farming on Camas Prairie, he began work in 1945 for the Camas County Road and Bridge District working for 26 years. He retired as road supervisor. He retired in December 1970 and moved into Gooding in 1971.

Surviving are: his wife of Gooding; a son, James Brooks of Edinburg; two daughters, Mrs. Clyde (Nadine) Baker of Las Vegas and Mrs. Lynn (Daria) Barkdull of Lake Stevens, Wash.; and two brothers, Walter H. Brooks of Salt Lake City and Sandy Brooks of Victor, Mont.; and seven grandchildren. He was preceded in death by three sisters and four brothers.

Council votes cancellation of insurance

By BARBARA NEIWERT
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE — Council members unanimously decided Thursday to cancel the city's umbrella liability insurance due to increased insurance costs and questions about the need for the coverage.

Under recommendation of City Attorney Keith Roark, the council asked Larry Stumpf, insurance agent for the McDonald Insurance Company, to cancel the city's $2 million umbrella liability policy mid-term.

Roark told the council at their July meeting that governing bodies are not liable for any more than the maximum limits of their insurance coverages. The only exception, Roark said, was when a governmental entity purchased more insurance coverage, such as with umbrella liability coverage.

"I can't sit here and say you don't need it (umbrella liability insurance)," Stumpf said, adding he always looks at the worst possible case when considering what coverage is necessary.

The council also decided not to build a claim against the city to their insurance carrier.

The claim from Mountain Sun Lanes was for damages to an ice maker caused when the city shut the water off when installing a new water system in the city.

Council members argued everyone in town had been given adequate warning of the water shutoff and residents should have taken any necessary precautions.

In other business, council members said they have been investigating actions in town to build a baseball field for Little League games. Mayor Dale Ewersen said a portion of BLM land which the city looked at using would require a lot of earth moving to make it usable.

City Engineer Bruce Butler had an estimate to move 20,000 cubic yards of dirt at a cost of $30,000, but council members said that expense was too great.

Butler was then asked to do a boundary survey of the old city park to determine if it was suitable for a ball field.

In other action:

Ewersen reported the Bellevue Planning and Zoning Commission has completed the first draft of the city's comprehensive plan and updated some city ordinances. The commission will hold a public hearing on Aug. 22 regarding the comprehensive plan. Another public hearing will be held after the final draft is presented to the city council.

Ewersen told the council a $204,742 budget for 1985/86 has been finalized and will be presented to the city.

When the desks are filled later this month at the Wendell schools, new superintendent George Crawford will be looking for student feedback

Radio station opens

Gooding will hear country

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Residents in the Gooding area can rise and shine next Monday morning to their country favorites on a new AM radio station 1490 on the dial.

Glucus Merrill, president of KIDI radio, says his new station will be broadcasting from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. The station's format, he says, will be golden country music.

"It's the older ones," Merrill, 80, explains. "We even go back to Gene Autry. It's the good stuff. . . . We'll have a little of the modern stuff, too."

KIDI—located in a new building a quarter-mile south of Gooding, has a program schedule Merrill says will draw a good audience.

"She'll be covering the waterfront," Merrill says with enthusiasm. At 9:05 a.m., a program called "Voice of the Valley" will feature reports by the mayor of Gooding every Monday, the chief of police every Tuesday, senior citizens on Wednesday and the county sheriff on Thursday.

At 9:30 is "Pink and Blue," announcing new births in the county.

At 1 p.m., a talk show will be hosted by Wanda Lee Anderson of Gooding. Merrill says the news, political and civic activities will be topics of the talk show, with the public calling in to express agreement or opposition.

"We'll have more programs as we go along," Merrill says.

'The purpose is to identify concerns'

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — A major goal of the new school superintendent in Wendell is to have two-way communication with the public. George Crawford says he is planning to invite the public to some meetings and community discussions. These discussions may also fill out questionnaires to help the school set goals and priorities.

"It's not a gripe session or a witch hunt for teachers," the superintendent emphasizes. "The purpose is to identify concerns parents may have."

In return, says Crawford, the school administration will work to keep the public more informed. Some ways to do this, he explains, could be to have regular press releases from school principals, to budget for a community newsletter and to be on the morning community news program of the new radio station in Gooding.

Crawford, 36, was hired to Wendell this year after working for years in Genesee as a school superintendent. He replaces Glenn Gilbertson, who retired last year.

Crawford has already worked with Wendell school board to cut unnecessary expenses. At the July School Board meeting, he advised the board on how to keep lunch prices from increasing, and he successfully recommended a more profitable investment of some school funds.

"To improve school climate," Crawford says he will send ideas and feedback from students. Questions like, "what are your general feelings about school and do you like being here," will help Crawford see how students as a whole perceive teachers, curriculum and administration.

The superintendent hopes to remove barriers in the classrooms that make teachers feel less effective. For example, he hopes to cut down on teacher non-academic work and also let the administrators deal with disruptive students. The teachers, he adds, are professionals, just as doctors and lawyers are, and need to be recognized as such.

Crawford says 50 students will understand such a discipline is equal for all and not a personal attack from teacher to student. Principals should visit classrooms on a regular basis, he believes, so teachers and students can feel comfortable with them.

These visits, he explains, are to open lines of communication. "I think if you're positive with people and expect the best of them, then that's the way they're going to perform," Crawford says.

and to be open for suggestions from the administration and from fellow teachers.

For example, he hopes to cut down on teacher non-academic work and also let the administrators deal with disruptive students. The teachers, he adds, are professionals, just as doctors and lawyers are, and need to be recognized as such.

Crawford says he agrees with the philosophy of a book he recently read, "The One Minute Reprimand." This book, he says, advises the "redirection" of a teacher to be less than one minute.

"I think if you're positive with people and expect the best of them, then that's the way they're going to perform," Crawford says.

Storekeepers to ask council for beer vote

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

BUIHL — The Buhl Middle School will again have a closed campus this school year in which students cannot leave the grounds during lunch.

With the exception of students who have written permission from their parents for a pass to walk home for lunch, all sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders must eat their lunch in the Popplewell Elementary School cafeteria.

The Buhl School Board recently voted to close the campus upon the recommendation of Superintendent

Paul Spiropoulos who had proposed in June that the middle school, whose closed campus was changed to an open campus last November, should be closed again.

At previous school board meetings several parents had also requested enforcement of a closed-campus policy.

The board members adopted the open campus policy last year because they said the district did not have enough personnel to enforce the closed campus policy adopted in May 1982.

But Spiropoulos and the middle school's new principal Dennis Osman assured the board that a staff member and aides supervised by Osman will patrol the campus to make sure students obey the new rule.

It is the responsibility of educators to maintain a safe and controlled campus, Spiropoulos said.

Besides, he said, when students stay on campus they are more likely to eat nutritious lunches instead of munching on junk food downtown.

To entice the students to stay on campus, Spiropoulos said they will have access to the gymnasium, a

Bill and Geraldine Miller, owners of the Teddy Bear Den in Paul, say if Sunday beer sales are approved, they will expand their hours to be open on Sunday.

"I think it is a better way of keeping money in our city," said Geraldine Miller. "If Rupert has passed it, I don't see why we can't. We're in the same county."

She also plans to attend Wednesday's council meeting to voice her opinion. In Cassia County, all cities except Malta allow Sunday sales since Burley changed its ordinance last spring. Declo, Oakley and Albion already have ordinances that allow for the sale of beer on Sunday.

In Minidoka County, Rupert and Timidoka allow Sunday beer sales, while city councils in Heyburn and Paul are considering allowing Sunday sales. Aqueduct currently forbids the sale of beer and wine on Sunday.

If a student is caught violating the closed campus policy, it will be classified as a truancy.

On the first truancy, the student's parent or guardian will be notified, the second time the principal and perhaps a counselor will have a conference with the student and parent, and the third time the student could possibly be suspended or expelled.

The discipline problem at the Buhl Middle School has gone from bad to worse, and I think this is going to correct it," the superintendent said.

The rodeo will be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Mickey Young, who is a local resident and a professional bareback competitor, is the stock contractor this year with his Silver-Lining Rodeo Company.

Miss Rodeo Idaho and the Twin Falls Posse will ride at the rodeo Monday, and Wednesday nights. Mickey Young, who is the crowning of the Jerome County Rodeo Queen is slated for Wednesday.

Wendell garbage request forgotten

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Garbage collection rates in Wendell will probably not be increased this year.

Ron Fager of C and R Sanitation requested a rate increase earlier this year, but the City Council forgot about it when the new budget was drawn up.

At the council meeting Thursday, Fager reminded the council of his request, saying his costs have gone up, while his rates have been the same since he started the service in Wendell about three years ago.

"I know we did tell you we would consider this on our budget time," Council President Dick Beck said. "The council . . . forgot about it. It was our fault."

The city bills each resident $2 per month for garbage collection, and then pays it to Fager as expenditure.

Fager said he would like a 35-cent increase this year.

"I would like to implore you to consider it," he said.

City Clerk June Holm said a rate increase must be in the budget. The new 1985-86 budget has already been set, is being published during the next two weeks and is scheduled to be passed after a budget hearing at the next council meeting Aug. 22.

The council had a 20-minute executive session to discuss the matter. When the meeting resumed, Councilman Lloyd Little reported the general feeling of the council that nothing can be done about Fager's request right now.

Fager asked the council to consult the city attorney to see if the rate increase can still go through.

"We'll see what we can come up with," an officer business.

Holm reported that a certified letter sent to a city resident with livestock had been unaccepted and returned. The letter demanded removal of the livestock because it violates a city ordinance.

City Police Chief James Howe said he will have a search warrant to go on the property.

Beck said those bothered by livestock within city limits must make an official complaint.

"Unless somebody signs a complaint, it's pretty hard to do."

Jerome kicks off county fair with horse judging, parade

By INA HADAM
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome Fairgrounds will become a hive of activity this weekend as events officially get under way at the Jerome County Fair and Rodeo.

Today, the first event of the day is the judging of the 4-H horse entries at 8 a.m. in the arena. Judging will continue throughout most of the day.

An Idaho State Horse-Rodeo Association open class horse show sponsored by the Canyonville Riders will begin at 8 a.m. on Sunday.

The float judged best theme entry will receive a trophy.

Hank Bekker, parade chairman, urges parade entrants to begin lining up at 4 p.m. The parade will follow the same route as last year, traveling west from the high school to Cleveland, then north to East 1st, west on East 1st to Buchanan, north on Buchanan to East 2nd, west on East 2nd to North Lincoln, south on North Lincoln to Main Street and then west to the arena.

Bekker says that everyone participating in the parade will be given a free copy of the "Mayor's Choice" award. The parade march will be the parade march.

The McCoy Carnival, from Seattle will be on the grounds throughout the week.

Two new activities are on the schedule this year. There will be an old-fashioned threshing machine on the grounds at 5 p.m. Wednesday to show farming methods in use 50 years ago. This event is sponsored by the Jerome Historical Society and is free to the public, but donations will be accepted and will be used for the new museum, which opened in Pioneer Hall on Aug. 9.

Magic Valley Dairy Goat Association is making available a "petting zoo" with admission charges set at 25 cents.

The rodeo will be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Mickey Young, who is a local resident and a professional bareback competitor, is the stock contractor this year with his Silver-Lining Rodeo Company.

Miss Rodeo Idaho and the Twin Falls Posse will ride at the rodeo Monday, and Wednesday nights. Mickey Young, who is the crowning of the Jerome County Rodeo Queen is slated for Wednesday.

Queen competition will begin Sunday with a written test about rodeo and will continue with modeling and impromptu questioning at the Queen's Barbecue to be hosted by reigning queen Amy Gunning.

The final phase of competition, the horsemanship contest, will be held Monday at the fairgrounds.

Tracy Stacy will reign as this year's junior princess, in place of Nikl Hymas, who was selected to reign. Hymas is unable to be present at the rodeo due to college requirements—and has relinquished the position to Stacy, who was the first runner-up.

Queen contestants are Laura Gummer, Sonya Huetig, Holly Lackwood and Stacie Terhese.

Judging of open class and 4-H home economics projects will begin on Monday and will continue with the livestock judging Monday through Wednesday, culminating with the fat stock sale on Thursday.

The fat stock sale will include 34 steers, 60 hogs and 67 lambs. All entries are to be removed by 7 p.m. on Thursday.

The junior rodeo will be held at 8 p.m. on Thursday and Friday. The junior rodeo, such a popular event with the kids, "black time" scheduled at 6 p.m. gives all who wish a chance to participate.

Youths may sign up for this event at the Stockman's Feed-and-Supply. Area farmers and ranchers provide the stock. A queen contest for girls aged 10 to 14 is held, while the junior princess is chosen from the 2 to 9 year age group.

Glass crusade was created through efforts of many

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Behind the Inermountain Crusade for Christ this week in Twin Falls is the Bill Glass Evangelistic Association of Dallas.

"When some pastors and lay people from Twin Falls were interested in organizing a crusade in the area, it was association executive vice president Dick Rohrer who helped them through the details after initial discussions began in February 1984. Rohrer was in Twin Falls again this week seeing to the finished product.

He has been with the Glass association for about 10 years. Rohrer said. It was started in 1969 by former NFL football player, now evangelist, Bill Glass.

The association, which is non-profit, operates on donations, Rohrer said. It becomes involved in crusades, such as the one in

Twin Falls.

"We go where we are invited," Rohrer said. The organization has been involved in more than 130 crusades throughout the nation, while this is the first one in Idaho.

Rohrer said crusades help bring church members together, no matter their church.

An important part of the association is its missionary work in state and federal prisons. The work is a kind of crusade behind bars, featuring testimony from athletes and entertainers. The organization has this type of ministry work in 1972 and has visited more than 300 prisons, Rohrer said.

Rohrer said that the association should take a backseat to the local committee and volunteers in Twin Falls.

Through the crusade's $54,610 budget developed by the crusade committee, he will receive an honorarium and compensation for his expenses, Rohrer said.

Glass will not receive any salary nor "love offerings" during the crusade. Only his expenses will be paid by the committee, Rohrer said.

From the budget, the local people also pay the special guests, such as former NFL football player, Steve Slaton.

The association supplies expertise and their contacts to find and hire special guests. The committee will pay the association for its instructional materials or any handbooks it supplies.

As per agreement with the local committee, any funds remaining after crusade expenses are paid go to the Glass Evangelistic Association for its prison ministry program, Rohrer says.

"We feel local businesses benefit from the crusade," Rohrer said.

The associations business is that of presenting God's message, "a message that can change a person's life," Rohrer said.

Glass stresses growth from pain

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Evangelist Bill Glass told a coal-bundled audience Saturday to become strong from hurt.

Although crowds were smaller than the previous days of the twin-crusade, Glass received a enthusiastic response to the message the former NFL football player was sending. About 2,000 people turned out despite cool wind raking through Bruni Stadium on Saturday evening, which was dedicated as Neighboring Cities Night.

Instead of "musing and rehearsing hurt," Glass told the audience, "reverse it. Make hurt our strengths. That's what Christians should do."

Rohrer Johnson was born with a club foot and became a track star in high school.

A graveside service for his father was a drunk told different action to the hurt, he said. One didn't drink and became successful. The other became a drunk.

"Paul said, 'You mind the things of God,'" Glass said.

People who have grieved with hurt when they should take constructive action, he added. When you are upset or have a problem, take action, Glass advised.

The action he recommended is bowing heads and bending on his knee to thank God for the problem or hurt, even though we don't want to thank him for problems, said Glass, bending down on his knee. God should be thanked for everything, he said.

"Overcome emotion with action. You need to take actions for Jesus tonight. I want you to stop worrying and start rejoicing."

He asked those who felt that "God is speaking to you" to come forward to him and volunteer counselors. While a 200-member choir sang "God is so good," dozens of people did go to the podium as Glass shook their hand.

"So many have come and there never will be a better time," Glass said smiling.

The crusade concludes today. Before the conclusion of the Saturday crusade meeting, Glass suggested people go to church Sunday morning and invite their friends to the crusade later in the day. He said, there would be "great blessings."

hopefully, they'll come back."

Bingham said that MVRMC administrators have an idea to get nursing nurses to come back to work to ease the nurse shortage.

MVRMC is considering policies that would permit job-sharing to half-days or only a few days per week. Job-sharing means that two people split the duties, salary and benefits of one job.

MVRMC is also considering offering pay incentives to nurses who might prefer money rather than benefits as their compensation, Bingham said.

He figures that this policy would be especially attractive to nurses who are out of the workforce and who are covered under their spouse's work benefits.

One way the hospital will respond to increasingly high malpractice settlements is by closely reviewing the education, experience and goals of doctors who apply for certain practice privileges at the hospital, he said.

"The hospital has to be monitoring this," he said, "and look carefully at what doctors are asking to do."

Bingham said that part of his management philosophy is to monitor the needs and desires of all hospital customers, the doctors, the patients, the business people and employees.

Yet, the bottom line in his business decision is the patient, he said.

"Before I make any decision, I ask myself 'would the patient want me to recognize their relationship with the hospital,' these hospital-connected changing patient (nowadays). Con- people were selected because they surmised it was the main value now.

Since the Magic Valley Regional Health Services Corp. articles of incorporation did not name such a corporation because MVRMC is a county hospital rather than a corporation, the hospital's lawyer decided to change the articles.

The final, approved version of the articles created a member, non-profit corporation in which individuals are elected to the board by "members." The names of the people who form the first group of members are established by the articles of incorporation.

The first board of 15 people will include three county commissioners, doctors, and county-appointed hospital board members who are legally considered separate individuals who have no ties to the hospital.

Although the law does not what would the patient want me to recognize their relationship with the hospital, these hospital-connected changing patient (nowadays). Con- people were selected because they surmised it was the main value now.

"Patients will come in and want a work to develop services and bill explained. That didn't used to happen."

He added, "I think the community is now wondering, 'Where should we go for health care?'"

Bingham said he hopes it's to MVRMC.

"Eventually others in the community would come on the board, as they develop," Decker said.

"The county commissioners on the board are considered individuals rather than public officials."

Council votes

cancellation of insurance

By BARBARA NEIWERT
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE — Council members unanimously decided Thursday to cancel the city's umbrella liability insurance due to increased insurance costs and questions about the need for the coverage.

Under recommendation of City Attorney Keith Roark, the council asked Larry Stumpf, insurance agent for the McDonald Insurance Company, to cancel the city's $2 million umbrella liability policy mid-term.

Roark told the council at their July meeting that governments are not liable for any more than the maximum limits of their insurance coverages. The only exception, Roark said, was when a governmental entity purchased more insurance coverage, such as with umbrella liability coverage.

"I can't sit here and say you don't need it (umbrella liability insurance)," Stumpf said, adding he always looks at the worst possible case when considering what coverage is necessary.

The council also decided not to submit a claim against the city to their insurance carrier.

The claim from Mountain-Sun-Lanes was for damages to an ice maker caused when the city shut the water off when installing a new water system in the city.

Council members argued everyone in town had been given adequate warning of the water shutoff and residents should have taken any necessary precautions.

In other business, council members said they have been investigating areas in town to build a baseball field for Little League games. Mayor Dale Eversen said a portion of BLM land which the city looked at using would require a lot of cash to buy to make it usable.

City Engineer Bruce Butler had an estimate to move 20,000 cubic yards of dirt at a cost of $30,000, but council members said that expense was too great.

Butler was then asked to do a boundary survey of the old city park to determine if it was suitable for a ball field.

In other action:

• Eversen reported the Bellevue Planning and Zoning Commission has completed the first draft of the city's comprehensive plan and updated some city ordinances. The commission will hold a public hearing on Aug. 22 regarding the comprehensive plan. Another public hearing will be held after the final draft is presented to the city council.

• Eversen told the council a $204,742 budget for 1985/86 has been finalized and will be presented to the county.

When the desks are filled later this month at the Wendell schools, new superintendent George Crawford will be looking for student feedback

'The purpose is to identify concerns'

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — A major goal of the new school superintendent in Wendell is to have two-way communication with the public.

George Crawford says he is planning to invite the public to some meetings and get community ideas and concerns. Those interested may also fill out questionnaires to help the school set goals and priorities.

"It's not a gripe session or a witch hunt for teachers," the superintendent emphasizes. "The purpose is to identify concerns (parents may have)."

releases from school principals, to budget for a community news letter and to be on the morning community news program of the new radio station in Gooding.

Crawford was hired in Wendell this year after working five years in Genesee as school superintendent. He replaces Glenn Gilbertson, who retired last spring.

Crawford has already worked on the Wendell school budget to cut unnecessary expenses. At the July School Board meeting, he advised the board on how to keep lunch prices from increasing, and he successfully recommended a more profitable investment of some school funds.

To improve "school climate," Crawford says he will seek ideas and feedback from students. Questions like, "what are your general feelings about school and do you like being here," will help Crawford see how students as a whole perceive teachers, curriculum and administration.

Crawford has a healthy list of short- and long-term goals, all aimed at improving student achievement. Better tests for students, teachers exchanging more ideas with each other, a staff handbook and more in-service teacher training are a few of his goals.

Discipline policies should be spelled out, Crawford says, so students will understand such "disciplinary" rules for "pulling out" a student from teacher to student.

Principals should visit classrooms on a regular basis, he believes, so teachers and students can feel comfortable with them. Crawford also expects to visit classrooms to support short-term plans.

He also expects to visit classrooms to support short-term plans. He also expects to visit classrooms to support short-term plans.

and to be open for suggestions from the administration and from fellow teachers.

The superintendent hopes to remove barriers in the classrooms that make teachers feel less effective. For example, he hopes to cut down on teacher's non-academic work and also let the administrators deal with disruptive students. The teachers, he adds, are professionals, just as doctors and lawyers are, and need to be respected as such.

Crawford says he agrees with the philosophy of a book he recently read, "The One Minute Reprimand." This book, he says, is the "redirection" of a teacher to be expected the best of them, then that's the way they're going to perform," Crawford says.

Storekeepers to ask council for beer vote

Buhl Middle School to close campus for lunch

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — The Buhl Middle School will again have a closed campus this school year in which students cannot leave the grounds during lunch.

With the exception of students who have written permission from their parents for a pass to walk home for lunch, all sixth, seventh and eighth graders must eat their lunch in the Popplewell Elementary School cafeteria.

The Buhl School Board recently voted to close the campus upon the recommendation of Superintendent

Gus Spiropoulos who had proposed June that the middle school, whose closed campus was changed to an open campus last November, should be closed again.

At previous school board meetings several parents had also requested enforcement of a closed campus policy.

The board members adopted the open campus policy last year because they said the district did not have enough personnel to enforce the closed campus policy adopted in May 1982.

But Spiropoulos and the middle school's new principal Dennis Osman assured the board that a staff game room, a quiet room and a port member and aides supervised by Osman will patrol the campus to make sure students obey the new rule.

It is the responsibility of educators to maintain discipline and not to let students be tempted by trouble off campus, the superintendent said.

Besides, he said, when students stay on campus they are more likely to eat nutritious lunches instead of munching on junk food downtown.

To entice the students to stay on campus, Spiropoulos said they will have access to the gymnasium, a

Bill and Geraldine Miller, owners of the Teddy Bear Den in Paul, say if Sunday beer sales are approved, they will expand their hours to be open on Sunday.

"I think it is a better way of keeping money in our city," said Geraldine Miller. "If Rupert has passed it, I don't see why we can't. We're in the same county."

She also plans to attend Wednesday's council meeting to voice her opinion.

In Cassia County, all cities except Malta allow Sunday sales since Burley changed its ordinance last spring. Declo, Oakley and Albion already have ordinances that allow for the sale of beer on Sunday.

In Mindoka County, Rupert and Mindoka allow Sunday beer sales, while city councils in Heyburn and Paul are considering allowing Sunday sales. Arco currently forbids the sale of beer and wine on Sunday.

Wendell garbage request forgotten

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Garbage collection rates in Wendell will probably not be increased this year.

Don Fager of C and R Sanitation requested a rate increase earlier this year, but the City Council forgot about it when the new budget was drawn up.

At the council meeting Thursday, Fager reminded the council of his request, saying his costs have gone up, while his rates have been the same since he started the service in Wendell about three years ago.

"I know we did tell you we would consider this at our budget time," Council President Dick Beck said. "The council ... forgot about it. It was our fault."

The city bills each resident $2 per month for garbage collection, records the money as revenue, and then pays it to Fager as expenditure.

Fager said he would like a 35-cent increase this year.

"I would like to implore you to consider it," he said.

City Clerk June Holm said a rate increase must be in the budget. The Radio station opens

Gooding will hear country

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Residents in the Gooding area can rise and shine next Monday morning to their country favorites on a new AM radio station — 1480 on the dial.

Glaucus Merrill, president of K101 Radio, says his new station will be broadcasting from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. The station's format, he says, will be southern country music.

"It's the older ones," Merrill, 80, explains. "We've gone back to Gene Autry. It's the good stuff ... We'll have a little of the modern stuff, too."

K101, located in a new building a quarter-mile south of Gooding, has a program schedule Merrill says will draw a good audience.

In addition to music, sports reports, national and state news, a local news program called "Update" will be presented weekdays at 7:30 a.m. Gini Johnson of Wendell will give live reports on the news from Gooding, Wendell, Hagerman and Bliss.

"She'll be covering the waterfront," Merrill says with enthusiasm.

At 9:05 a.m., a program called "Voice of the Valley" will feature reports by the mayor of Gooding every Monday, the chief of police every Tuesday, senior citizens on Wednesday and the county sheriff on Thursday.

At 9:50 is "Pink and Blue," announcing new births in the county.

At 11 a.m., a talk show will be hosted by Wanda Lee Anderson of Gooding. Merrill says news, politics, social and civic activities will be topics of the talk show, with the public calling in to express agreement or opposition.

"We'll have more programs as we get going," Merrill says.

new 1985-86 budget has already been set, is being published during the next two weeks and is scheduled to be passed after a budget hearing at the next council meeting August 22.

The council had a 20-minute executive session to discuss the matter. When the meeting resumed, Councilman Lloyd Little said it was the general feeling of the council that nothing can be done about Fager's request right now.

Fager asked the council to consult the city attorney to see if the rate increase can still go through.

Mayor Otto Lemke replied, "We'll see what we can come up with."

In other business:

Holm reported that a certified letter sent to a city resident with livestock had been unaccepted and returned. The letter demanded removal of the livestock because it violates a city ordinance.

City Police Chief James Howe said he must have a search warrant to go on the property.

Beck said the bills botched by livestock within city limits must make an official complaint.

Jerome kicks off county fair with horse judging, parade

By INA HADAM
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome Fairgrounds will become a beehive of activity this weekend as events officially get under way at the Jerome County Fair and Rodeo.

Today, the first event of the day is the judging of the 4-H horse entries at 8 a.m. in the arena. Judging will continue throughout most of the day.

An Idaho State Horse Show Association open class horse show sponsored by the Canyon-side Riders will begin at 8 a.m. on Sunday.

A parade, with the theme, "Pathway to the Future," will be held Monday beginning at 6:30 p.m. The starting time for the parade has been moved up this year in an attempt to complete the parade before the rodeo begins at 8 p.m.

The float judged best theme entry will receive a trophy.

Hank Bekker, parade chairman, urges parade entrants to begin lining up at the high school one mile east of town at 4 p.m. The parade will follow the same route as last year, traveling west from the high school to Cleveland, then north to East 1st, west on East 1st to Buchanan, north on Buchanan to East 2nd, west on East 2nd to North Lincoln, south on North Lincoln to Main Street and then west to the fairgrounds.

Bekker asks that everyone participating register with him at Countywide Feed on South Lincoln. Mayor Ralph Peters, who has been elected by the Chamber of Commerce as their "Citizen of the Year," will be the parade marshal.

The McKay Carnival from Seattle will open on Monday and be on the grounds throughout the week.

Two new activities are on the schedule this year. There will be an old-fashioned wool threshing machine on the grounds at 5 p.m. Wednesday to show farming methods in use 50 years ago. This event is sponsored by the Jerome Historical Society and is free to the public, but donations will be accepted and will be used for the new museum, which is opening in Pioneer Hall on Aug. 9.

Magic Valley Dairy Goat Association is making available a "petting zoo" with admission charges set at 25 cents.

The rodeo will be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Mickey Young, who is a local resident and a professional barrel competitor, is the stock contractor this year with his Silver Lining Rodeo Company.

Miss Rodeo Idaho and the Twin Falls Rodeo will ride at the rodeo Monday, and the crowning of the Jerome County Rodeo Queen is slated for Wednesday.

Queen competition will begin Sunday with a written test about rodeo and will continue with modeling and impromptu questioning at the Queen's Barbecue to be hosted by reigning queen Amy Gunnung. The final phase of competition, the horsemanship contest, will be held Monday at noon in the open-air barn at the fairgrounds.

Tracy Slacy will reign as this year's junior princess, in place of Nikki Hyman.

Tina Arbaugh, Wendy Botlinger, Kipp Posse will ride at the rodeo Monday, and the crowning of the Jerome County Rodeo Queen is slated for Wednesday.

Judging of open class and 4-H home economics projects will begin on Monday and will continue with the livestock judging and Monday through Wednesday, culminating with the fat stock sale to be held Thursday at noon in the open-air barn at the fairgrounds.

This year's fat stock sale will include 34 steers, 60 hogs and 65 lambs.

All entries are to be removed by 7 p.m. on Thursday.

The junior rodeo will be held at 8 p.m. on Thursday and Friday. The junior rodeo is such a popular event with the kids, "stack time" scheduled at 6 p.m. gives all who wish a chance to participate.

Youths may sign up for this event at the Stockman's Feed and Supply. Area farmers and ranchers provide the stock. A queen contest for girls aged 10 to 14 is held, while the junior princess is chosen from the 5 to 9-year age group.

Merc strikers, union aide rebuked

By BARBARA NEHWERT
Times-News correspondent

HAILLEY — Efforts by seven striking employees of the Merc Department Store and Food Center to return to work failed Saturday after a brief meeting between the strikers, a union representative and a store general manager Dick Stephens.

The grocery clerks walked off the job Thursday morning after presenting store managers with a list of grievances detailing concerns about wages, benefits and working conditions.

The strikers claim Stephens refused to discuss their complaints.

Stephens refused to comment Saturday on the store's position. Mike Stanton, union representative from Local 1316 of the United Food and Commercial Workers International Union, based in Boise, said he was in Halley Saturday to assist the striking women in their effort to negotiate a settlement.

When the employees and Stanton approached Stephens requesting that striking employees be allowed to go back to work, Stephens said they can fill out applications if they want to, but he declined to give any reasons for not placing them back to work.

Later, when Stephens was asked if Wendell would consider their applications without prejudice, Stephens said he couldn't say "no" since he was "only human."

Stanton said the Merc's actions are "clearly in violation of the National Labor Relations Act, which is very, very serious."

Violations in three areas of the NLRB involve the Merc refusing to bargain with employees or their representatives, firing or punishing employees for union activity, and refusing to put employees back to work who have been on strike, Stanton said.

The striking employees said they will continue their picket line until a settlement is reached.

Levels of radioactive gas remain unknown

Little has been done 7 years after S.E. Idaho discovery

By MARK WARBIS
The Associated Press

BOISE—It's been seven years since state officials found that hundreds of people in Soda Springs were being exposed to radon and radon gas emitted from phosphate slag used in the foundations of buildings there.

Nothing has been done to solve the problem, further testing recommended at the time has not been conducted, and state officials aren't sure what the results of the 1978 study mean in terms of health risks. But one man who faced the danger of radon exposure has a message for those still living in homes sitting above caches of naturally radioactive material.

"If they're relying on the state, they're in big trouble. They probably know less than they did before," said Carey Scouten, a health physicist who measures and controls radiation contamination levels at the Idaho National Engineering and Experiment Station. "Where I work if you have any airborne levels you've got problems," he said. "All I know is if it was me, I don't think I'd be living (there). I'd rather be safe than sorry."

Scouten, 33, learned he and his pregnant wife were exposed to radon gas in early 1980 shortly after moving into a house he'd had built in Moore, about eight miles north of Arco.

EVERY-DAY for about a week he triggered a radiation sensing device at the INEL designed to identify contamination leaving the nuclear facility. But since he was coming to work when the alarms went off, he soon realized, "I got a problem here somewhere."

Tests with equipment from the INEL found his basement saturated with radon—a colorless, tasteless, odorless gas that can cause cancer.

Radon is produced by the decay of radium, which in turn is a product of the radioactive breakdown of uranium. The gas has long been recognized as a health threat to uranium miners who suffer abnormally high rates of lung cancer.

A process of elimination led Scouten to believe that the concrete in his home's foundation was emitting the radon. Though the state Division of Environment could not confirm it as the source, he sued the Idaho Falls company that poured the foundation for $16 million.

INEL assistance was pulled when it was determined the facility was not the source of radioactivity, and the suit was dropped in 1983 after Scouten failed to prove the concrete was emitting the gas. But by that time, the contamination had dissipated, he said.

Scouten's house had been built on a foundation made from concrete that he says contained the same kind of sand or gravel. Minerals CG-1 and FMC Corp. extract in southeastern Idaho to process into fertilizer.

THE WASTE from that processing is called phosphate slag, and until the construction of roads, sidewalks and building foundations in the Soda Springs and Pocatello area.

The slag retains some of the uranium present in the phosphate ore, and so is a source of both "gamma" radiation and radon gas, said Robert Funderburg, manager of the radiation control program for the state Division of Environment.

Idaho is one of 14 states with widespread deposits of uranium in the soil. Radon gas can flow for miles underground from uranium deposits, often rising to the surface through faults and porous rock far from its source.

Outdoors, radon disperses quickly in the atmosphere. But it can build up to dangerous levels when trapped indoors. The gas also decays further into other elements, including radioactive bismuth and polonium, which can adhere to dust particles, be inhaled and lodge in the respiratory system.

Radon cancers have a 20-year latency period, so no immediate physical symptoms occur. But a federal interagency task force reported in May that indoor radon exposure may cause as many as 30,000 deaths from lung cancer in the United States every year.

The Idaho Division of Environment in 1977 issued a prohibition against the use of phosphate slag for building construction if it contained more than 5 picocuries of radon per gram. The slag, usually containing about 35 picocuries, still is used outside doors for such things as railroad ballast and road construction, Funderburg said.

BUT NO SLAG was used in the foundation of Scouten's house, and there is no state prohibition on the use of unprocessed soil that may emit radon. Funderburg said the source of contamination might also have been gas seeping up from a natural uranium deposit beneath the home.

"You never know when you're over the top of it," Funderburg said. And Scouten added, "The percentage of people who know (they're being exposed) compared to the percentage of people who don't know, it's unreal."

In Soda Springs, at least 156 buildings, including two Mormon churches, were set on foundations containing radioactive mill slag before the 1977 ban.

Funderburg said the 1978 study showed half those buildings emitted gamma radiation giving residents a dose marginally more than the 70 millirem per year dosage the state considers the maximum allowable for the general public.

The National Academy of Sciences estimates that a typical American receives a dose of about 100 millirem each year from natural sources, including cosmic rays that reach the earth from outer space.

"They're getting probably close to that (170 millirem) level. Above that we have to look at the risks versus the benefits," Funderburg said. "That's the way we play this radiation game."

Of the 707 Soda Springs homes measured for radon, the gas appeared at measurable levels in 10. None exceeded .02 "working levels" or 4 picocuries per liter of air, above which the U.S. surgeon general has recommended remedial action be taken. But the tests were conducted in the summer when windows might have provided ventilation, and with measuring equipment that since has been replaced with more accurate devices.

"I REALLY FEEL at this time that we probably won't find there's a problem," Funderburg said, noting that areas such as Maine, Pennsylvania and Butte, Mont., have reported high radon levels with no apparent cancer rates.

But he conceded that standards for "acceptable levels" of both gamma radiation and radon gas exposure are "a gray area," and that a lack of funding and manpower has kept the state from pursuing the situation.

Phil Thor, who until recently was a mechanical engineer with the Bonneville Power Administration's regional home-weatherization program, said the federal energy wholesaler has offered free radon tests, since last October in areas under BPA weatherization agreements. Of the approximately 1,000 homes tested to date throughout the Northwest with the state-of-the-art Track Etch testing device, about 3 percent have had radon measurements above the BPA's "action level" of 5 picocuries per liter of air. Thor said.

OWNERS OF CONTAMINATED houses are offered financial assistance to install heat exchangers to allow ventilation even during winter months, when doors and windows are closed and the gas is most likely to build up, he said.

Thor said while it's "very difficult to quantify the risk" from radon, the BPA considers exposure to 5 picocuries per liter roughly equivalent to smoking one cigarette a day in terms of adding to the risk of lung cancer.

"That's not a lot," he said. "But statistically, it will result in a few people contracting lung cancer." However, Funderburg said a statewide study conducted by the Department of Health and Welfare last year found no unusual incidence of cancer anywhere in Idaho, including Soda Springs and Pocatello, where the 1978 tests found about 2,000 outdoor areas where radiation was higher than normal.

Two dead in tavern shooting; police seeking five suspects

BOISE (AP) — One of the two survivors of an Ada County shooting spree that left two persons dead has improved and has been moved out of the intensive care unit of a local hospital.

Alphonse, Regional Medical Center said Ronald Slack, 27, Mills, Wyo., improved from serious to fair and was moved to a surgery recovery unit. Ada County officers said Slack suffered small-caliber bullet wounds to the leg and neck and was struck by a shotgun blast on the left side of his face and shoulder.

A dancer at the Hide Out Saloon, in rural Ada County west of Meridian, Patrice Robin Lynne Hanson, 27, of New Plymouth, apparently was shot in the lung shortly after she got off work early Thursday. She was found dead in her car about a half-mile from the tavern.

Clark Lattimer, 29, a bartender at the bar and a Boise State University student, suffered a lung wound and remained in serious condition in intensive care.

A customer, apparently sleeping in his van outside the tavern when the shooting started, also was shot to death. He was identified as Billy Dale Daniel, 28, of Nampa.

Ada County Sheriff Vaughn Killen said he has assigned a dozen detectives to the case in the search for five suspects wanted for questioning. So far there have been no arrests.

Killen has refused to release many details. "We're remaining mum because things are moving real fast," he said.

Officers say four men apparently were ejected from the tavern for rowdy behavior; then returned later with a fifth man. Ms. Hanson apparently drove off in her car but it crashed into a fence after a short distance.

Ada County Coroner Irwin Sonenborg said Daniel died of a shotgun wound to the heart.

Slack said Daniel was sleeping in his van outside the tavern when the shooting started. "Last time I saw him, he was still sleeping on the floor of his van," he said.

Lattimer said he had escorted Ms. Hanson to her car when the shooting started.

"I didn't even see a gun. I heard one shot before I got shot. It didn't hurt, but I knew what it was. It felt like getting hit with a rock."

He said he then ran inside the bar and didn't see the woman shot. "I have no idea why they did that to her," he said.

Administration may target weeds

BOISE (AP) — The Reagan administration is proposing changes to make it easier to cope with noxious weeds on federal property — a proposal that Gov. David Leroy says has caused $90 million damage to Idaho landowners.

"We have, in Idaho, very few problems of the one-half billion dollar magnitude," said Leroy. "That is, extremely close to the entire state budget."

Leroy, who may run for governor, released a statement Friday blaming the Democratic administration of Jimmy Carter for rules that, practically eliminate spraying of noxious weeds on federal lands. That in turn causes weeds to spread to adjoining farms and ranches.

A Carter administration rule requires almost endless study on weeds, Leroy said.

"This never-ever land approach basically... caused any contested controls... programs on procedural grounds," he said.

The Reagan administration is proposing new rules that will disclose any relevant information missing from the environmental impact statement, an assessment of its relevance, a summary of existing evidence of the environmental impact and an evaluation of that evidence.

"I would urge all interested Idahoans to make their comments known, and once and for all rid ourselves of this leftover tool of harassment from a previous administration," Leroy said.

Magic Valley economy stoked by consumers

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As spring turned into summer, the brightest news for the Magic Valley economy was coming from consumers.

They climbed into new cars at an accelerated pace, and sought credit both to pay for the new wheels and for improvements at home.

They benefited from a vicious war of price cutting and couponing among area grocery stores.

Indicators compiled by The Times-News for the second quarter ending June 30 show some momentum in the Magic Valley economy, but also some significant drags.

Despite lower mortgage rates and a national surge in homebuying, the biggest consumer of all, the home buyer, still is not pounding down the doors at Magic Valley real estate agencies.

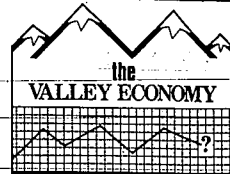

Agriculture, the underlying financial pump for the valley economy, remains grounded by low commodity prices.

Of course, the Magic Valley is not alone in these problems. Idaho's economy generally is weak, and with trade imbalances pressing more and more on manufacturing, the U.S. is wavering in a twilight zone between recession and growth.

Nationally, economists are calling the situation a growth recession. The economy is growing, but it is not gaining enough strength to cut unemployment substantially.

Basically, there are conflicting signals in the economy.

The same is true in the Magic Valley. Take, for instance, unemployment. For the past few months, the jobless rate has Signs of economic change are apparent throughout the Magic Valley. In the past several months, one major Twin Falls employer, GemTec, has gone out of business and a number of smaller firms have failed.

A combination of factors are involved in putting pressure on the valley's basic industry, agriculture.

This is the second of a series of reports on the Magic Valley economy, examining its effects on people, the businesses, their present conditions and future prospects.

Analysis

been hovering a bit above 6 percent, although it did tumble to 5.5 percent in June.

All this is happening with agriculture on the ropes. Gains in employment generally have been coming in the service and retail industries. That trend normally shows up in late spring and early summer, and it also reflects a megatrend towards service occupations in the U.S. economy.

The one firm spot seems to be in consumer activity. During the second quarter, farmers pump their planting money into the Magic Valley. There are also signs that other consumers have been buying delayed purchases.

One is the auto market. Car and truck sales in Twin Falls County zoomed up almost 20 percent, the second double-digit gain in as many quarters.

Much of the consumer activity may be coming in credit or time purchases.

Wayne Schneider, vice president and assistant manager of First Security Bank of Idaho in Twin Falls, said consumer lending was brisk in April and May, particularly from automobile sales and home improvement loans. Activity dropped a little in June, he said.

Although more active than in previous years, the Magic Valley still has lagged behind Idaho in the start in consumer lending, Schneider says. In March, American consumer debt rose to 19.3 percent of disposable personal income, according to national reports.

Ken Colner, chief financial officer for Twin Falls Bank & Trust Co., said he also has detected a lull in lending.

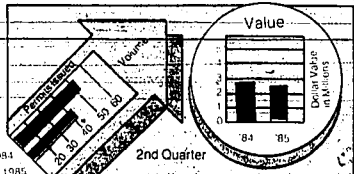

Meanwhile, bank deposits at institutions throughout the city rose slightly from the first quarter, and they were up significantly from the previous year. Consumers may be replacing some of their cash purchases with credit.

In the meantime, retailers have been enticing purchases with promotions. Sales have been plentiful in clothing outlets and department stores. But perhaps the most noticeable promotions have been at supermarkets, where

Magic Valley retailers say they are cautiously happy about their current economic fortunes

Retailers say agriculture slump not a big factor on sales this year

By DOUG WRIGHT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Although the retail industry in the Magic Valley is heavily dependent on the agricultural market, most retailers in the area say that slumping agriculture has not had a big effect on business this year.

No sector of the retail industry is booming, but no one seems to be really suffering this summer either, according to many of the retailers and chamber of commerce directors in the valley.

Mike Dolton, the executive director of the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, summarized the opinion of many major retailers in the valley. "This year isn't an outstanding year, but it's not a really low year either. It's about an average year," he said.

"Everything I've heard is not doom and gloom," Dolton added. "The retailers say that they're either maintaining or they're up a little bit or down a little bit. No one seems to have had a tremendous fall in business."

John Roper, chairman of the board of the Roper's clothing store chain in the Magic Valley and a member of the board of directors of the Idaho Retailers Association, agrees with Dolton's assessment.

"People are very close to last year's sales. Maybe they're up a little, maybe down a little, depending on the products they sell," he said.

Figures for gross retail sales reported by businesses to the Idaho Sales Tax Commission also show a stable retail economy.

For the major retail areas in the Magic Valley, total reported sales revenues were about $21 million from $20 million in fiscal year 1984 to over $1 billion in fiscal year 1985, which just ended June 30.

The state totals also showed a minor increase in sales activity for the year, from $13.9 billion in 1984 to $14.3 billion in 1985.

These totals are probably the best indicators of how Idaho and Magic Valley retailers are doing, according to Tim Brennan, president of the Idaho Retailers Association.

"Retail sales seem to be fairly stable. We're not in a boom by any means, but we're not in a recession either," Brennan said.

"The Magic Valley is almost completely dependent on agriculture," he added. "But although agriculture is down, it's not having as big an effect as people are talking about."

Cassia County was the only one to suffer a significant drop in gross sales dollars, from $192 million in fiscal year 1984 to $180 million in 1985.

"It's been kind of a tough row this year for Retailers," said Nick Cozakov, executive director of the Burley Chamber of Commerce. "We're a little bit below par this year, but we're still holding our own."

Cassia County's retail woes are reflected by the anticipated close of The Merc, a major department store in the Burley area, because the store wasn't doing well according to management.

While Gooding and Twin Falls Counties registered nearly the same figures for 1984 and 1985, Jerome County registered a 25 percent increase and Blaine County registered a 12.5 percent increase in their reported gross retail sales over last year.

Given the low inflation rate this year, these figures for the Magic Valley generally reflect an average year.

"The signs don't portray money flowing everywhere, but they do portray an average year where people aren't really hurting," said Dolton.

But area retailers are doing alright now, they are concerned about the economic situation in the Magic Valley, because agriculture is the lynchpin of the area economy.

"Everyone's concerned with the economic situation on the state, national and local level. We're especially concerned about the agricultural situation," he said.

Save the Children Federation up to name

Q—I received a letter from Save the Children Federation asking for a donation. Does this company meet your standards?

A: According to the Council of Better Business Bureaus, Inc., Save the Children Federation (SCF) is a non-sectarian organization founded in 1925 to assist victims of the great depression in Appalachia. In 1984, Save the Children Federation expanded its operations to provide assistance to war refugees in Europe. SCF now helps communities help themselves in 42 countries on five continents.

The purpose of SCF is the "improvement of the quality of life" for children world-wide through the process of community development and protection of the "right" of children. SCF projects focus on "social development, health and nutrition, community development and education."

The major source of support for SCF comes from the public through the agency's child sponsorship program. Sponsors are asked to contribute $192 annually. The donations are pooled and used to "improve nutrition, increase food production, build schools, renovate housing, and provide "health care" to the whole community. SCF reports that it also receives support in the form of grants from international agencies and governmental bodies, including United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF), U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the Department of State.

SCF reports that it supports children and their communities in American Indian Nations, Domestic Areas—Africa, Middle East, Latin America, the Caribbean and Asia/Pacific.

Save the Children Federation meets the BBB Standards for Charitable solicitations.

If you are interested in donating to a charitable organization, first call our office for information. We also have pamphlets on "Charitable Solicitations." Send a self-addressed envelope to 409 W. Jefferson, Boise, ID 83702.

Q: I just received a postcard in the mail from Trans-American Incentives of Mesa, Ariz. Not only am I definitely entitled to receive a holiday vacation for two in Las Vegas, Disneyland or one of over 30 different major resort areas, but I will also receive an official entry form to Classic Car Sweepstakes. The prizes include a classic 1928 Mercedes SSK replica, $3,000 stock portfolio, 7-day cruise to San Juan, or $2,000 cash. Is this like all the other postcards I've heard about?

A: Unfortunately it is. This vacation package along with all of the others do not meet Better Business Bureau standards of business practice due to their misleading and deceptive advertising and selling practices. This one requires a $19.95 fee to cover processing and handling, and that will not be the end of the endless "fees" in order to finally receive your vacation package.

"Consumer Watch" is a reader's service column. Queries only should be addressed to: "Consumer Watch," Better Business Bureau, 409 W. Jefferson, Boise, ID 83702. Questions of general interest will be answered here, while others will be answered by mail.

Indicators

The Times-News quarterly survey of supermarket prices showed a 7 percent drop from the previous year, and there was almost a $9 range in the basket of goods among the three chain stores surveyed.

"It's also a buyers' market for real estate in the area, but prospective home owners still apparently aren't ready to let their cash loose. A large supply of existing homes is for sale and interest rates on mortgages fell anywhere from 3 to 1.5 percent during the quarter, most less and are

Where are the buyers? That's what real estate agents are wondering.

Ken Roy, president of the Twin Falls Board of Realtors, says the Magic Valley industry has no good explanation, particularly since it has been easier to qualify to buy a home than in past years.

During the second quarter, 104 homes were sold at a value of $6.4 million. In 1984, the total sales for the quarter were 102 homes for $5.5 million, according to Roy's statistics.

The answer may be that, although prices and mortgage rates have fallen, they haven't fallen far enough.

Officials at Twin Falls County report that they continue to issue many building permits for mobile homes, but most are easier to locate than conventional building. The county office issued 13 mobile home permits and only eight permits for new houses during the three-month period.

Twin Falls city officials issued 16 permits for homes and four for mobile homes.

Farm prices remain the most important single factor in the Magic Valley economy, and they have remained about the same as last year. At the same time, cattle prices have weakened, and the main thrust up in both years has been higher potato prices. There is currently some doubt whether the potato market will continue to provide a lift.

The second quarter's economic performance may prove more of a lagging ground for events that will happen in the fall, when the harvest arrives.

Retailing

way it is right now," said Ethel Nelson, the executive director of the Jerome Chamber of Commerce.

"We've definitely seen the impact of poor agricultural prices, because we're not making the increases we have in years past," said Dan Fischer, general manager of The Merc in Twin Falls.

Roper and Jim Mastanlak, the manager at Woolworth's in Twin Falls, see the effect of slumping agriculture as mostly a change in people's attitudes towards shopping. "People are buying the necessities and ad merchandise much more, and they're looking for the better sales around town," said Mastanlak.

"Generally the fashions are picking up, but our hard lines, like electronics and major appliances, are softening," he added.

And Dolton warned that retailers may not have really seen the effect of the poor agricultural market yet. "Agricultural problems always seem to hit retailers later," he said.

"Most of the market here is agricultural in nature. Some of the agricultural forecasts are strong, so I don't see any big increases in sales in the near future," added Topper.

So how can the retail market in the Magic Valley improve?

"Better agriculture prices and a change in the national economy," says Roper. "We need to see the price of the dollar go down, more Idaho products sold overseas, foreign imports become less valuable, and continual work to decrease the budget deficit."

Dolton agrees. "Just so much hinges on what the feds are doing. We need a wide open market with Canada and Japan, so we can't let these foreign governments push us around."

"Also, we need to slice into that deficit which concerns all of us," he added.

Topper emphasized increased diversification of the Magic Valley economy as a way to improve retail sales.

"For things to improve significantly, we have to have some industry, some diversification of income in the Magic Valley. We can't be so totally dependent on agriculture," said Fischer of the Twin Falls Merc.

Consumers have continued buying at a fairly steady pace

"If we expand the effort on the development of new industries, promotion of existing businesses, and tourism, we should be able to improve retailing in the Burley area," added Cozakov.

Dolton, however, is somewhat pessimistic at this point about drawing new industry to the Twin Falls area at least. "Although are industrial inquiries are up, the companies interested are not all that solid."

"The companies that are interested in coming in are mostly borderline companies. They're in trouble and are looking for us to bail them out. We can't do anything we just can't do," he said.

In light of this, tourism is being viewed more and more as an important means of diversification for Idaho and the Magic Valley by many retailers and chamber directors.

"The Chamber is taking large steps to improve tourism in the area," said Dolton. "About one-third of what the Chamber does now is tourist-related."

Breath of the Idaho Retailers Association feels the same way. "Our tourist industry is going to be a big boom. I don't feel it's going to be immediate, but it will come."

For the time being, however, most experts are predicting a fairly stable, slow-growing retail economy. "Retailing should be stable in the future. We're not going to have any booms and high inflation, but we're also not going to have a recession either," concluded Brennan.

To some buyers, Fannie Mae now becomes Fannie Won't

WASHINGTON (AP)—Potential homebuyers unable to come up with at least 10 percent for a down payment will have a harder time qualifying for a conventional mortgage under guidelines announced Monday by the nation's major supplier of money for home loans.

However, housing finance officials said new standards imposed by the Federal National Mortgage Association are pretty much in line with what individual lending institutions are already doing.

The organization—better known as Fannie Mae—is basically a wholesaler of mortgage money, buying individual home loans from lenders and packaging them for resale in the nation's money markets.

The major change in the standard that Fannie Mae will require before it will purchase a mortgage increases the minimum income a borrower needs to qualify for mortgage loans—both those with fixed and adjustable interest rates—with down payments of less than 10 percent.

James Christian, chief economist for the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, acknowledged the new Fannie Mae standards will cut some people off from mortgage money who otherwise would have qualified.

"I don't think the impact is going to be enormous by any stretch of the imagination," said Christian. "This easing of standards is a trend that's been going on for months now."

Christian agreed with Fannie Mae Chairman David O. Maxwell that stricter qualifying standards for low down payment mortgages are necessary because inflation is not the factor it was in the 60-80 real estate market of the late 1970s and early 1980s.

In that era, a lender might not think twice about making a loan to a buyer with marginal financial standing because the home was almost certain to appreciate enough in value within a year or so to enable even a strapped owner to sell out at a profit.

"What Fannie Mae's new standards suggest is that we are sort of going back to the way we were doing things before we had double-digit inflation," said Christian.

Under the new standard, which takes effect Oct. 1, a borrower's monthly housing expenses will not be allowed to exceed 25 percent of gross monthly income, and housing expenses plus installment debt cannot exceed 33 percent.

The old standard was 28 percent and 36 percent, with provisions for exceptions in certain cases. There will be no exceptions under the new rules.

For a $70,500 home with a 5 percent down payment, a borrower would have to earn $1,232 to qualify for a 12.2 percent fixed-rate conventional mortgage compared to $36,814 under the old standard.

The change does not apply to loans where the down payment is 10 percent or more. Nor does it affect FHA and VA loans guaranteed by the federal government.

Warren Lasko, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, said: "Most of the measures they have taken are reasonable. New guidelines for tighter underwriting standards are in step with lenders' own concerns that today's environment of low house value appreciation makes further study a necessity."

But Lasko, too, acknowledged that the changes "will make it more difficult for homebuyers, especially first-time home buyers without much cash equity, to qualify for a low-down payment loan."

Fannie Mae also outlined a series of other changes in the way various seller incentives, such as temporary interest-rate buydowns, will be calculated in determining loan ratios.

"We will discontinue purchase of any adjustable-rate mortgages that do not include a cap on how the interest rate can rise. As a practical matter, few mortgages with open-ended interest rates have been written in the past couple of years because of consumer resistance."

Meanwhile, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported that fixed-rate mortgages for new homes slipped to an average of 12.52 percent in early July, down from 12.95 percent in early June.

Adjustable-rate mortgages also continued to decline, with the most popular variable-rate mortgage dropping to an average of 10.72 percent, down from 10.88 percent the month before.

Farm financial pressures likely to continue

By DON KENDALL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The farm economy is still suffering, and little relief is in sight from federal tax reform, Agriculture Department economists say.

"Tax reform can make the burdens borne in the entire economy more equitable, but can do little to relieve the short-term agricultural problems," the August issue of Agricultural Outlook says. "The financial pressures many farmers have faced since 1981 are likely to continue through the end of the year."

The report, prepared each month by the department's Economic Research Service, included a summary by economist Herb Moses.

"The agricultural economy is weak, and estimates for farm income are low for this year's.

"Commodity prices have been low, and exports sluggish. Export value for the first eight months of fiscal year 1985 was 13 percent below the same period last year.

"Total cash receipts from crop and livestock marketings are expected to decline about 1 percent from 1984."

The administration has proposed reforms aimed at equalizing the tax treatment of income earned by different sources in the economy.

Some of the recommendations, such as the elimination of the investment tax credit, lengthening of capital depreciation periods and reducing write-offs for certain kinds of development costs, would increase tax rates marginally and probably lead to a slight decline in overall farm investment.

"However, incentives for investment in farming would be based more on prospective economic returns and less on tax benefits under the administration's proposal," the report said.

"The current tax system has had a significant impact on expanding farm production capacity by favoring deductible capital purchases (such as buildings) and tax financing."

Congress will not get around to tax reform until this fall or next year, so nothing is on tap to benefit farmers quickly, even if lawmakers went along with the administration's plan.

But, as it stands, most farmers under the administration's proposal would pay either less or about the same in taxes as they do now, the report said.

"Orchards, vineyards and livestock farms would have increased tax liabilities. Cow-calf and dairy operations would be affected more than other livestock producers," it said.

"Individuals who have made extensive use of preferential provisions would bear the largest tax increases. Self-employment and Social Security taxes would likely increase in the short-run, but would decrease as provisions for indexing take effect."

In its "Tuesday Letter" to members this week, the association said the House vote on July 23 on full funding for conservation programs represented "a new victory for conservation districts" across the country.

The vote was based on strong recommendations by the House Appropriations Committee headed by Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss. The measure included $365.6 million for conservation in 1985-86, a slight increase from $364.5 million this year.

In the committee report accompanying the bill approved by the House, it was asked that the employee level of the Soil Conservation Service be kept at a minimum of its current level of 14,177.

The Reagan administration's original budget recommendation last winter called for a drastic scaling back of the Agriculture Department agency.

Clarence Durban, president of the association, said the House action on conservation money for 1985-86 is in contrast to Senate budget signals which call for cuts of up to 15 percent.

"The coming weeks will see the final stages of this debate played out," Durban said. "Conservation district officials and all other friends of soil conservation need to let their elected officials know what is the desired course of action. I think the logic of the committee report and the House action makes that course into effect.

Just in case, however, the mechanism calls for milk supports on Oct. 1 to be raised to 75 percent of parity — the formula that links prices and costs. If that happens, the basic price support for milk will be raised to around $16.22 per 100 pounds from the current level of $11.50.

Public comments on the standby proposal can be sent by Sept. 16 to Director, Commodity Analysis Division, ASCS, USDA, 3741 South Law. If Congress finishes work on new farm legislation as expected, D.C. 20013.

Milk support an option

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is going through the motions that could lead to a hefty boost in federal milk price supports if Congress fails to come up with a new program by Oct. 1.

Officials said Thursday the rule-making procedure is required by law. If Congress finishes work on new farm legislation as expected, D.C. 20013.

Idaho Falls council awards contracts for hydro project

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Contracts for a new hydroelectric plant on the Snake River have been awarded by the City Council, which scheduled an Aug. 21 groundbreaking for the project.

Hatachi America Ltd., a Japanese firm with offices in San Bruno, Calif., was the low bidder on the generation system. Bannock Paving Co. of Pocatello won the contract to excavate the site.

The council accepted the proposals Thursday at the recommendation of its consultant.

Hatachi bid $4 million to provide the turbine-generator that will produce hydroelectric power. The company supplied the bulb turbines for the city's three-power plants completed in 1980.

When the new plant is completed, the four plants located along the Snake River from Tower Road to the Bonneville-Bingham county line will make Idaho Falls about 50 percent energy self-sufficient, city officials said.

Mayor Tom Campbell and Councilman Paul Hovey said the city's past experience with Hatachi has been excellent.

A second portion of the project will require excavation for a spillway and powerhouse, construction of a 1.5-mile access road and demolition of the concrete remnants from an earlier dam project at the site.

Bannock Paving Co. bid $974,000 to do the excavation work, under the engineer's estimate of $1 million.

"We're pleased to see a local firm be the successful bidder," Hovey said.

McClure says he shares farmers' frustration over politics

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Sen. James McClure says it's obvious that farmers need help — now. But he doesn't have the answers. "We've got to find something that works better than the policies we're trying," he told a news conference here Friday. "But I have no answers."

McClure, in Idaho for the summer congressional recess, expressed frustration over the federal budget stalemate. He blamed the House, and particularly the majority Democrats, for refusing to go along with the Senate's carefully crafted legislation to eventually balance federal spending with income. McClure said farmers can't wait for Congress to come up with solutions to the cost-price squeeze that has forced many out of business in recent months. "Some of them can't wait at all," he said. But Congress has to balance farm needs with taxpayer resistance to paying for expensive farm support programs. McClure said "high politics" is to blame for Congress' inability to do anything about its budget and deficit problems. He said many members simply will not vote against the built-in cost-of-living and wage-escalation formulas that automatically increase federal spending.

They keep saying, "You go first, or Medicare," he said. He said the compromise budget resolution adopted by Congress just before it adjourned for the summer was "an absolute fraud" because it claims Congress is doing something about the deficit. "To pass a resolution that doesn't deal with the basic causes of the deficit is a fraud," he said, because it will do nothing to curb deficits that could hit $600 billion over the next three years. In another area, McClure said he has introduced legislation limiting Canadian timber to no more than 25 percent of the U.S. market. Increasing Canadian imports is cited as a major factor in the recent decline of the U.S. timber industry.

Selling of Pet division won't affect Buhl plant

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

CHICAGO — Pet Inc. is selling off its fresh dairy division to a Florida company, but it will retain its evaporated milk operations at Buhl and three other U.S. locations. IC Industries of Chicago, which owns Pet, last week announced an agreement to sell the division to Southern Dairies Inc., a newly formed company owned by KMC Group of Miami, Fla. The dairy division operates in eight Southeastern States.

The pact also licenses Southern Dairies to market milk under the Pet name for an unspecified period. Financial terms were not revealed. The divestment is part of a move by Pet out of basic, fresh commodities, allowing the company to concentrate its assets in specialty foods.

"We're really into what we're calling value-added specialty foods, which, of course, translates to just higher margins on good, branded products," said Les Landes, director of communications for Pet. The sale does not affect the company's four evaporated milk plants, and Pet said Friday.

The Buhl plant produces evaporated milk and evaporated skim milk. "Last year we produced 5.5 million (12-ounce) cans," said plant manager James Ferguson. The factory employs 50 workers.

Pet operates other evaporated milk plants at Neesho, Mo., Col. dwater, Ohio, and Greeneville, Tenn. Based in St. Louis, Pet sells $1.1 billion worth of foods and printing services yearly in the U.S. and overseas. Its major brands include Underwood meat spreads, Sego diet products, Old El Paso Mexican foods, Whitman chocolates, Pet-Ritz frozen pies and an array of others.

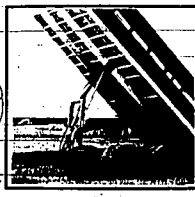

Pet recently acquired the E. B. Evans Co. of Philadelphia, which makes ice cream and toppings. Pet is one of seven major subsidiaries of IC Industries, which posted $4.2 billion in revenues last year.

Twin Falls routs CDA 21-7 at state

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

POCATELLO — "Batting practice took a little longer than usual for the Twin Falls Cowboys on Saturday. About three hours longer. "I threw my four best pitchers at them, and they all threw batting practice," said Couer d'Alene Coach Jim Headley after a 21-7 loss to the Cowboys in the opening game of the Idaho State American Legion Baseball Tournament. "They hit everything today. Everything."

Twin Falls' 22-hit performance was a season-best, propelling the Cowboys into a second-round contest here this afternoon against Moscow, a 16-4 upset victor over Meridian in another first-round game on Saturday. That game will be played at either 1 p.m. or 5 p.m., depending upon the outcome of Saturday's late Pocatello-Lewiston game, which was still in progress at press time.

Under tournament rules, the host team has the right to play the late game during the first two days of the tournament. A Rebel loss Saturday night would mean that today's of Saturday's Pocatello-Lewiston game today at either 8 or 8 a.m. Couer d'Alene will face Meridian in a loser-out contest at 10 this morning, while the Russells must play the loser of the Pocatello-Lewiston contest in another consolation bracket game at either 1 or 3, depending upon who won Saturday night. "Didn't I tell you if we ever got lucky we'd be good?" crowed a happy Twin Falls Coach Mike Tremayne after the rout. "I think the important thing about today was that the kids relaxed and just went out and played. We've been working hard to get here, and now they've seen what they can do."

"We're a good ballclub," Tremayne continued. "We talked about it before the game. Last year I think we peaked at the wrong time, at the (mid-season) Couer d'Alene tournament. This year I think we're about right."

Cowboy catcher Casey Bartholomew, a 211 hitter during the regular season, certainly peaked at the right time. The 17-year-old Twin Falls receiver, the No. 8 batter in the lineup, went 5-for-6 with three doubles, a triple, a grand slam home run and eight RBIs on Saturday. One of those doubles, a one-out shot to the base of the left-center field wall in the fifth inning, scored Nick Baumert with what proved to be the winning run.

tholomew's first home run of the season.

Kevin Sandau, Tremayne's 18-year-old rookie right-fielder, was elevated from ninth to second in the batting order Saturday and responded with a 3-for-5 day, while cleanup hitter Kirk Slater — who missed most of the Southern Region tournament with intestinal flu — was 4-for-5 with his fifth home run of the season, which cleared the wall a few yards shy of Bartholomew's blast.

"Casey had a great game, but he's been hitting the ball at the end of the season," said Tremayne. "I (right-hander) Kevin (Ames)," talked with Feds (assistant coach Mike Federico) last night about moving Sandau up. With his speed, he should be a leadoff hitter, but he's uncomfortable in that position so we decided to put him No. 2. I took him aside before the ballgame and told him if he got a couple of bunt singles, he would help us. And look what he did."

"It was good to see Slater swing the bat," Tremayne continued. "He didn't take batting practice this week until before today's game." Baumert aided the Cowboys' cause with a 3-for-5 day and Kevin Ames went 2-for-3. The bottom third of Twin Falls' batting order — Ames, Bartholomew and first baseman Eric Ochsner — accounted for eight of the Cowboys' 22 hits and 11 of the team's 20 RBIs.

The victory went to right-hander Matt Harr, who pitched three innings in relief of Tom Prater before giving way to James Schroeder in the seventh.

"We were going to use Harr (Sunday), but we went into the game on Friday today, so we'll probably go with Tremayne said."

Twin Falls scored once in the first inning and three times in the second before the lumbermen got out of the blocks in the third, pushing three runs across — two of them unearned. The Cowboys made it 6-3 in the bottom of the frame, but Couer d'Alene tied the game in the top of the fourth with three runs of its own.

Scott Alexander hit a leadoff single and went to second on a wild pitch. James Anderson followed by a Texas Leaguer to right field that Baumert aided the Cowboys' cause

'Pokes Harr at his best in a pinch

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Pressure. That's the kind of baseball that Matt Harr likes to play. "It's like the pressure situation," said Harr, who is playing with his teammates in the American Legion tournament in Pocatello this weekend. "I like to be in control of the game, whether it be hitting or pitching."

Harr hasn't had much of a problem with either this year. He's hitting a hefty .320 and has a pitching record of 10-1. Even when Harr doesn't hit, he always seems to be on base.

"He's got a great leadoff percentage," said Cowboy Coach Mike Tremayne, noting that Harr can walk, bunt or hit when he's up to bat. As for Harr, the change has come from the spot in the batting order.

In high school, he was the second batter in the lineup. This summer, Harr's name is linked into the No. 1 spot. "In high school, I was hitting behind (leadoff batter Alan) Valdez and either bunted or hit and run," said Harr. "I like being leadoff. I can steal more."

Tremayne has recently given Harr the green light when he's on base. Something he didn't do at the start of the season.

"He's quicker than he was in high school," said Tremayne. "He's getting the green light quite bit and he uses that to his advantage."

Harr proved his speed at last weekend's Southern Region American Legion tournament, when he stole six bases and hit his first inside-the-park home run. "I thought I was," he said, recalling the ball hit in the gap between the center-fielder and right-fielder. "I looked up and the coach was waving me on so I said 'OK.'"

Harr's inside-the-park homer was his third home run of the season. The other two have cleared the fences. Many coaches have noticed Harr's offensive abilities, as well as his defensive capabilities.

"He's a good, all-around athlete," said Twin Falls High School Coach Bill Ingram. "He's just a good kid with the ball. Matt's got the strength."

College of Southern Idaho Coach Jim Walker calls Harr "a gamer." "He'll work to make himself better," Walker said. "He wants to play, and that's his best asset."

Harr will attend CSI on a scholarship this year along with his teammate of 12 years, Kirk Slater. Harr knows he'll have to work hard to earn a spot at second base for the Golden Eagles. "I'll get bigger," said Harr, who now stands 5-foot-10 and weighs 135 pounds. "I'll be lifting (weights) after (Legion) baseball is over and I'll also be lifting at CSI."

Pitching has been a surprising strongpoint for Harr this year. He went into last weekend's district tournament with a 9-0 record, with most of those wins coming in relief appearances.

Many times this season, Harr has come into a game after Slater tossed five innings and once again Harr faced a pressure situation.

"I came into games with men on third or on first and second. I like that pressure," he said.

Both Tremayne and Ingram don't like to put pitch Harr, because it takes away from his fielding capabilities.

"I have the arm for Legion, but not the arm for college," said Harr.

As for idols, there's no doubt what team Harr likes as he points to his Kansas City Royals jersey. His favorite player is George Brett, but apparently Harr doesn't think he'll step into Brett's place at third base. "I'll play second and he can play third."

Green leads by 3 At PGA

By BOB GREEN
The Associated Press

DENVER — There were 19 different players out there Saturday, 10 of them on the Cherry Hills Country Club course and one named Hubert.

The 18 on the golf course took care of most of the contenders in the 67th PGA national championship and Hubert Green took care of himself, shooting a one-under-par 70 that was good enough to give him a 3-shot lead going into Sunday's final round.

"If Hubert plays tomorrow the way he did today, there's no denying him," said Lee Trevino, the defending champion of this, the last of the year's Grand Slam events.

Trevino, the leader going into third round play, said "I knew it was going to be one of those days when I hit it below the pin on the first and it bounced over the green."

"I bounced it over the green six times. No. 10 was hard enough to land a 747 on it."

"I heard they rolled the greens and didn't water them."

Trevino shot a 75 that left him at 209 for 54 holes, three back of Green's leading 206, seven shots under par.

Tom Watson, three strokes back at the start of the day and five behind at the end, also had difficulties with the putting surfaces. Watson, however, blamed himself and his putting stroke.

"I've seen better strokes in a hospital emergency ward," he said. "I had a lot of short birdie putts and I just didn't make them."

Watson, who needs this title to complete a career sweep of all the game's Big Four events, insists that a stroke deficit could be overcome.

"It's not that much to make," he said. "It's a hard course to make birdie on, an easy course to make bogey on," he said, a clear implication that the pressure is Green.

And Hubert acknowledged that.

Commercial chinook outlook good

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Columbia River treaty fishermen say they expect their best fall commercial catch of chinook salmon in nearly a decade.

The Columbia Compact has set a 23-day season for the Indian gillnetters that will begin Aug. 23 and continue with intermittent closures through Sept. 24.

The Warm Springs, Yakima, Umatilla and Nez Perce fishermen were guaranteed at least 23 days of commercial fishing earlier, but the compact on Friday set the specific days.

The minimum number of days was included in an out-of-court agreement reached for 1985 by the tribes and the states of Oregon and Washington last spring.

'Skins pledge Riggins $850,000 for year

By IRA ROSENFIELD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Washington Redskins, coming to terms with John Riggins, will sign the 36-year-old veteran on Monday to the richest one-year contract ever afforded a running back in the history of the National Football League.

"We're talking about a one-year deal for close to $850,000," according to team sources.

Riggins, a 13-year NFL veteran, is the fifth-leading rusher in league history. Only two players, Franco Harris and Walter Payton have carried the ball more in a career, and only one, Jim Brown, has rushed for more touchdowns.

Team owner Jack Kent Cooke, who is personally handling the negotiations with his star running back, said Friday night he forsores "no obstacles" in signing Riggins.

Neither Riggins nor his attorney, Doug Woloshin, was available for comment.

The previous highest salary paid a running back for a single season was the $737,000 O.J. Simpson received from the San Francisco 49ers in the late '70s.

After paying Riggins $695,000 last year, of which all but $100,000 was in deferred payments, the Redskins tendered Riggins a qualifying offer of $770,000 this spring.

Published reports said Riggins originally sought $1.5 million. "Cooke doesn't mind paying for quality but nobody holds him up for that kind of money," said the source, a long-time associate of the Washington owner.

The fifth-leading rusher in league history with 10,695 yards, Riggins has seemingly improved with age. In the last two years, Riggins has carried 72 times for 2,586 yards and scored 38 touchdowns.

Riggins met with Cooke on Thursday at the latter's estate in Middleburg, Va. The two were in telephone contact on Friday.

Despite a nagging back injury that forced him out of two games and three-quarters of a third, Riggins rushed for 1,239 yards and scored 14 touchdowns last year.

Riggins' holdout this summer marks the third time in his career he has held out for more money.

Twelve years ago, the then New York Jet came to terms one week before the regular season opener after holding out for a $10,000 raise which brought his salary up to $63,000.

In 1980, after going over the 1,000-yard mark for the second straight year, Riggins and the Redskins failed to come to terms. Placed on the voluntary retired list by the Redskins, Riggins sat out the entire season before returning.

Since his return, which coincided with the arrival of Coach Joe Gibbs and the team's on-back offense, the Redskins have posted a 47-18 record, including three Eastern Division titles, two Super Bowl appearances and one NFL championship.

AL: K.C. beats Toronto again

KANSAS CITY (AP) — After making a winner out of the Kansas City Royals, Jim Sundberg said the Royals have made a winner out of him.

Sundberg blasted a two-run home run deep into the left-field seats Saturday night with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning to lift the Royals to a 4-3 triumph over the Toronto Blue Jays.

"There's definitely a bunch of winners on this team," Sundberg said. "They know how to win. It's been a long time since I've played for a team that's been a winner. It's fun."

Sundberg said he was trying to hit a home run.

"I've been feeling good and feeling strong," he said. "I got a pitch I was looking for and was able to handle it. It was up a little bit and he (Bill Caudill) usually gets me out on that pitch."

The homer allowed Kansas City to stay within 2½ games of California in the American League West. The Angels' defeat of Minnesota 9-1 earlier Saturday.

"It's that time of year when I start watching the other teams," Sundberg said. "When a team plays in the afternoon, it kind of gives you an idea of what you have to do to play up a game or stay where you are."

Sundberg's ninth homer came after Caullif, 45, took over for starter Jimmy Key at the start of the 10th.

Dan Quisenberry, 6-6, got the victory. He pitched 3½ scoreless innings in helping the Royals to their fourth straight victory.

Baseball

Kansas City starter Charlie Leibrandt's wildness allowed Toronto to score a run in the seventh that tied the game at 3-3. With two outs, Tony Fernandez walked and took third on a single by Damaso Garcia, who extended his hitting streak to 16 games. Leibrandt hit Lloyd Moseby with a pitch, loading the bases, and then forced home the tying run by walking Jeff Burroughs.

Kansas City had gone ahead 3-2 in the sixth. Willie Wilson opened with a double off the glove of third baseman Garth Rho, ending a streak of 14 straight batters retired, by Key, took third on a groundout and scored on George Brett's sacrifice fly.

A walk to Lonnie Smith, a double by Brett and Frank White's two-run single put the Royals ahead in the first inning. An error by White at second base helped the Blue Jays tie it in the fourth as Jesse Barfield hit an RBI single and Willie Upshaw had a run-scoring groundout.

Minnesota 1
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Doug DeCinces hit a three-run double to cap a five-run sixth-inning Ruppert

Jones drove in four runs and Kirk McCaskill fired a three-hitter as the California Angels beat the Minnesota Twins 9-1 Saturday.

McCaskill, 37, pitched his fourth complete game, striking out five and walking three.

New York 7
Boston 3
BOSTON (AP) — Dave Winfield keyed a three-run first inning with a two-run double and the New York Yankees charged to their fifth consecutive victory Saturday in a 7-3 decision over the Boston Red Sox.

Joe Cowley, a 6-foot-5 right-hander, teased the Red Sox with slow breaking pitches for six innings allowing only four hits before losing a shutout bid in the seventh.

Cowley, 10-5, gave up eight hits, including Jim Rice's 19th home run in the eighth, before Dave Righetti came on with one out in the eighth to register his 21st save.

Detroit 5
Cleveland 4
CLEVELAND (AP) — Lance Parrish, who had homered earlier, singled home Lou Whitaker with two outs in the 11th inning Saturday night to give the Detroit Tigers a 5-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Whitaker doubled with one out off Vern Riffe, 2-8, and Alan Trammell struck out. After Kirk Gibson was intentionally walked, Parrish singled sharply past shortstop Julio Franco.

The victory broke Detroit's three-game losing streak.

Reliever Willie Hernandez, who was tagged for a loss by the Indians on Friday night, gave up a game-tying, two-run triple to Carmen Castillo in the ninth inning. But Hernandez retired the last seven batters to raise his record to 7-5.

Milwaukee 5
Chicago 2
CHICAGO (AP) — Randy Ready, recalled from the minors on Friday, hit a two-run homer in the 11th inning Saturday night to lead the Milwaukee Brewers over the Chicago White Sox 5-2.

With one out in the 11th, Juan Agosto hit Eddie Rousek with a pitch and Ready followed with his home run into the left field seats that broke a 2-2 tie. It was the first homer of the season for Ready, who was promoted from Class AAA Vancouver the day before, and the fifth home run of his career.

Ed Romero led off the 11th with a homer in the 11th as the Brewers won their fifth straight game.

Teddy Higuera, 9-6, got the victory and Bob Gibson pitched the 11th for his ninth save. Agosto, 3-3, took the loss.

Greg Brock and Mike Marshall. The Reds got their only run in the fifth when Esasky got an infield single and Bo Diaz walked. Ron Lester reached on an error by Duncan at shortstop, which loaded the bases with none out, and Esasky scored on a wild pitch.

But Valenzuela kept the tying run from scoring by getting Tibbs and Gary Redus on grounders and by striking out Dave Concepcion.

Montreal 7
Pittsburgh 5
MONTREAL (AP) — Andre Dawson hit home runs in consecutive innings and reliever Randy St. Claire pitched four shutout innings Saturday night, helping the Montreal Expos reach an error by Duncan at shortstop, which loaded the bases with none out, and Esasky scored on a wild pitch.

But Valenzuela kept the tying run from scoring by getting Tibbs and Gary Redus on grounders and by striking out Dave Concepcion.

Dawson hit his 12th homer of the season in the fifth inning, sparking a three-run rally against Rick Rhoden, 6-13, that put Montreal ahead 5-4. Dawson connected in the sixth off Pat Clements for a two-run homer. It was the 16th time in his career that Dawson has hit two home runs in a game.

St. Claire, 4-2, allowed only one hit after taking over for starter Bill Gullickson with two on and nobody out in the third. Gullickson was shut out for eight hits and four runs in his two-plus innings. Bert Roberge retired the last nine Pittsburgh batters for his second save.

NL: Cards sweep, negate Gooden skein

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals' quiet man continues to hit his bat on the talking center fielder Willie McGee.

The National League's leading hitter with a .351 average, pounded out seven hits in 10 at-bats during as St. Louis swept the Philadelphia Phillies, 5-4 and 13-4.

In the second game, McGee had four hits, including a three-run homer. The sweep lifted St. Louis into a first-place tie in the NL East with New York, each with 65-42 records. The Cardinals have won four straight games.

"I'm not interested in being a media star or anything else," said McGee. "I just want to play baseball and help my team to win games. We're all working hard, and I don't want to let anybody down."

"If you work hard and have pride, you can do a lot," he said.

St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog is one of McGee's biggest boosters. "We've played good all year," Herzog said. "He's a heck of a player and a real good kid with it. He just goes out and hustles all the time."

Phillies Manager John Felske made no excuses. "We just didn't play well," he said.

St. Louis rapped out 19 hits in the nightcap to help reliever Rick Horton, 1-2, get the victory. Horton gave up five hits after taking over for starter Kurt Kephre in the second inning. Kevin Gross, 11-9, took the loss.

Tom Hayes homered in the first inning to give the Phillies a 1-0 lead before St. Louis scored four times in the second, three on McGee's homer. Horton drove in the other run with a forceout.

The Phillies made it 4-2 in the second on an RBI single by Davey Daulton, but the Cardinals added a run in the third when Andy Van Slyke tripped and Mike Jorgensen doubled.

The Cardinals added three runs in the fourth. Vince Coleman singled, stole his 77th base and scored on McGee's single. Tom Herr's groundout drove in McGee.

Coleman and Darrell Porter hit two-run singles in the fifth for the Cardinals, and Jorgensen's second double and a single by Ozzie Smith made it 12-4 in the sixth. A double by Herr and a single by Van Slyke capped the scoring in the ninth.

In the first game, Danny Cox, 13-7, gave up four hits before leaving in the eighth. Jerry Kosman, 6-3, was the loser.

The only run off Cox was unearned and came in the second inning. Mike Schmidt doubled, moved to third on a passed ball and scored on Glenn Wright's sacrifice fly to give the Phillies a 1-0 lead.

Chicago 3
NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden, the New York Mets right-hander, ran his winning streak to 12 in a row, the most in the National League this year, with an 8-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs Saturday.

"The victory, which kept the Mets on top in the NL East, was New York's sixth straight, while the Cubs have lost six straight."

Gooden, 18-3, scattered nine hits and allowed two of his runs in the first inning, although he did not walk a batter and struck out nine.

George Foster hit a two-run homer, his 17th, for the Mets, and Darrel Strawberry broke a 2-2 tie in the third inning with a single. The Mets added five runs in the seventh.

Gooden's winning streak, a club record, is one game longer than the winning streaks put together this season by LaMar Hoyt and Andy Hawkins of San Diego, and it equaled the longest string in the majors this year, by Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees.

San Francisco 6
Atlanta 5
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Brad Wellman's run-scoring single with one out in the ninth inning broke a tie and lifted the San Francisco Giants to a 6-5 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

The Giants, snapping a four-game losing streak, overcame two home runs and four RBI by Dale Murphy, who now leads the National League with 29 home runs and six RBIs.

The winning rally began when loser Jeff Dedmon, 5-2, walked leadoff batter Bob Brenly on four pitches. After Dan Gladden sacrificed, Wellman lined the game-winning hit to left. Scott Garrett, 6-3, was the winner.

Los Angeles 2
Cincinnati 1
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela pitched a four-inning night as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Cincinnati Reds 2-1.

Valenzuela, 13-8, struck out eight and walked three. He raised his National League-leading complete game total to 13 and lowered his earned run average to 2.15. Valenzuela allowed three infield singles by Nick Esasky and a single to Buddy Bell.

The victory helped the Dodgers open a six-game lead over Cincinnati, which entered the game in second place in the National League West, five games behind Los Angeles.

The Dodgers scored their two runs in the first inning off Jay Tibbs, 5-12. Mariano Duncan led off with a double to right, took third on a groundout and scored on a sacrifice fly by Ken Landreaux.

Oakland's Kingman joins exclusive 400-HR company

SEATTLE (AP) — Oakland's Dave Kingman became the 21st player in major league baseball history to hit 400 career home runs when he belted a two-run shot Saturday night in the first inning of the A's game with the Seattle Mariners.

Kingman connected in his first at-bat of the game on a 1-2 pitch by Seattle left-hander Matt Young. He drove the ball five rows deep into the left-center field seats at the Kingdome.

Kingman, who had not homered since July 24, passed Al Kaline on the career home run list with the hit. He now takes aim on Hall-of-Famer Duke Snider, who hit 407.

The veteran designated hitter went into a power slump after reaching 399. He went 5L at bats before hitting No. 400.

Kingman started his career with the San Francisco Giants in 1971. His highest season came in 1978 when he hit 48 while playing for the Chicago Cubs.

He has 23 home runs this year.

Baltimore 9
Texas 8
ARLINGTON, TEXAS (AP) — Eddie Murray, Lee Lacy and Floyd Rayford hit home runs during a seven-run outburst in the third inning Saturday night that helped the Baltimore Orioles beat the Texas Rangers 9-8.

Fred Lynn's double chased Chris Welsh, 2-1, and Gary Roenicke delivered an RBI double off Dickie Noles. Dempsey's second hit of the inning, a single, drove in Roenicke.

Starn Davis, 6-7, raised his career record against Texas to 6-0. Davis pitched 6½ innings, giving up 10 hits.

Colts pick Seahawks late to win exhibition

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A pair of fourth-quarter interceptions set up touchdowns by Robbie Martin and rookie Mark Brooks Saturday night, rallying the Indianapolis Colts to a 19-7 victory over the Seattle Seahawks in an exhibition National Football League game.

Reserve quarterback Steve Benson threw scoring passes of 20 yards to rookie Eddie Brown and 11 yards to Clay Pickering to spark Cincinnati's 17-point second quarter as the Bengals overcame early deficits of 7-0 and 14-7.

Cincinnati's first points came in the first quarter, while starting quarterback Ken Anderson threw a three-yard scoring pass to Rodney Holman. The six-play, 72-yard drive was highlighted when receiver Cris Collinsworth swapped roles on a reverse and tossed a 61-yard pass to David Verser, tackled at the Kansas City 11.

The Redskins took a 17-0 lead on Schroeder's 8-yard pass to rookie Vincent Hall only five seconds into the final quarter before the Falcons rallied behind quarterback Bob Holy to make it close.

Holly connected on a 58-yard scoring pass to tight end Steve Johnson 1:55 later and then marched the Falcons 82 yards in 10 plays with Cliff Austin scoring from 2 yards out to get Atlanta within 17-14 with 3:47 left.

The Falcons, held to only 61 yards and 5 first downs before intermission, had a shot at winning when they stopped Washington and had the ball back for their own 40 with just under 3 minutes remaining.

Philadelphia 37 N.Y. Jets 17

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Herman Hunter's 57-yard return of the second-half kickoff and a 60-yard scoring run with a fumble by Wes Hopkins helped the Philadelphia Eagles rout the New York Jets 37-17 Saturday night in the National Football League preseason opener for both teams.

The Eagles also used the big play to set up another score as Evan Cooper raced 51 yards with a punt in the second period. Cooper was tackled by punter Bob Grupp at the New York 49, and Philadelphia took a 20-0 lead two plays later when Hopkins called to his left and shuffled a two-handed pass to tight end Lawrence Sampleton.

Safety Hopkins gave Philadelphia a 6-0 lead when he stripped the ball from Jet tight end Mickey Shuler and rambled 60 yards down the sideline. The extra point was botched on a high snap.

N.Y. Giants 30 Denver 20

DENVER (AP) — Jeff Rutledge tossed a pair of TD touchdowns, passes, and All-Hajj-Shelch booted three field goals as the New York Giants downed the Denver Broncos 30-20 in NFL pre-season action Saturday night.

With the victory, the Giants upped their pre-season record to 2-0 while the Broncos fell to 0-1 before a crowd of 39,374 at Mile High Stadium.

The Giants also got a touchdown when Jeff Hostetler and tight end Mark Bavaro teamed up on a 30-yard scoring play late in the second quarter that staked the Giants to a 17-7 halftime lead.

Dallas 27 Green Bay 3

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Rookie linebacker Jesse Penn returned an intercepted pass 78 yards for a touchdown Saturday night to ignite the Dallas Cowboys to a 27-3 National Football League exhibition victory over the Green Bay Packers.

Penn, a second-round draft choice from Virginia Tech, picked off Scott Brunner's sideline pass and dashed untouched for the touchdown early in the fourth period to end any Packers comeback hopes.

Dallas held a 13-3 lead at the time on a Danny White touchdown pass and two field goals by Rafael Septien.

Rookie running back Robert Lavette, a fourth-round pick from Georgia Tech, dashed seven yards late in the game for the Cowboys' final score.

The Cowboys led 10-3 at halftime after scoring all their points in the final two minutes of the second period.

White winged a 21-yard scoring pass to Tony Hill with 1:55 to go to cap a 70-yard drive.

Rafael Septien drilled a 44-yard field goal as time ran out in the first half. He added a 31-yarder in the third period.

The Packers took a 3-0 lead in the first period on Al Del Greco's 27-yard field goal.

gave San Diego the lead, at the end of a charge drive guided by reserve quarterback Tim Mathison. San Diego had stalled at the Browns' 49-yard line, two yards short of a first down, to set up the winning kick.

Benirschke added a 49-yard field goal with 1:22 remaining in the game after the Browns' second fumble of the closing minutes.

Cleveland then drove to the San Diego 19-yard line, but with 20 seconds remaining on a fourth down play, reserve tight end Harry Holt of the Browns failed to hold a pass into the end zone from Gary Danielson.

But field goals by Raul Allegre in the second quarter and Dean Blasiac in the third period put the Colts within one point going into the decisive final period.

Steve Parker battled a pass by Seattle rookie Frank Seurer into the air. But the Colts' Chris Scott made the interception to give Indianapolis the ball at the Seahawks' 17.

Quarterback Mike Pagel, playing only the second half for Indianapolis, hit three straight passes, the final one to Martin for six yards out for the go-ahead touchdown with eight minutes remaining.

On the Seahawks' next possession, the Colts' Ricky Smith made the second interception at the Seattle 32 and Indianapolis drove in for the insurance touchdown. Brooks, a rookie fullback out of Notre Dame, ran in the 3rd and 4th scores, plus just under four minutes to go.

New Orleans 32 New England 20

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Morten Andersen boomed four field goals of at least 40 yards, and the New Orleans Saints capitalized on five New England turnovers for a 32-20 National Football League preseason victory over the Patriots Saturday.

The Saints scored 26 of their points after recovering three fumbles and intercepting two passes in the opening game for both teams.

Andersen, who made eight of 19 field goal attempts from between 40 and 49 yards in his career, had six NFL seasons, connected from 40, 42, 43 and 48 yards Saturday. His 42-yarder on the last play of the first half gave the Saints a 26-10 lead.

After Tony Franklin's 22-yard field goal put the Patriots ahead 3-0 with 2:29 gone in the first quarter, New Orleans got the lead 23-3. They came on a 17-yard interception return by defensive end Bruce Clark, an 8-yard pass from Dave Wilson to Eric Martin, a 2-yard drive by Wayne Wilson and Andersen's 43-yard field goal.

New England broke the streak when Tony Eason lobbed a 34-yard touchdown pass to Stanley Morgan with 1:54 left in the first half.

Andersen added field goals of 40 and 48 yards in the third quarter to build the lead to 32-10. New England tied the game, 32-32, with Eason's 13-yard pass to Derwin Williams and Jess Atkinson's 42-yard field goal.

Smith's six-yard touchdown run with 9:31 remaining capped a six-play, 66-yard drive to put Kansas City ahead for good. Gunter provided insurance points by scoring on a one-yard run with 5:38 left.

Byron Aspinwall's five-yard touchdown dash in the third quarter started Kansas City's comeback from a 27-14 deficit.

Agent Orange vestige of war in Vietnam

Rotting nails, skin problems passed on to veteran's child

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Arne Adame has had all his fingernails and toenails removed at his own expense because they were rotting. And his 18-month old child has developed the same problem.

The Twin Falls Vietnam veteran believes the loss of nails and his recurring skin problem, which he has been told is incurable, and his child's condition all result from his exposure to Agent Orange during the Vietnam war.

He is one of 161 Idaho veterans who have filed claims on disabilities allegedly related to Agent Orange with the Veterans Administration as of this spring, according to Bob Blankholm, agency spokesman at the Boise office.

But no claims can be paid on disabilities from this cause, he says, until the VA has conclusive evidence of cause and effect relationship with the herbicide, whose name derives from the color of the barrels in which it was transported.

Studies already done on the problem have been termed both inconclusive and controversial. Veterans generally feel they are biased.

The VA is not authorized to pay compensation for defects of veterans' children, Blankholm says, and veterans can be paid only when their physical problems can be established as having "showed up during active duty."

The whole Agent Orange problem, Blankholm says, is "open ended," admitting veterans' efforts to prove cause and effect is "struggling."

Disabilities which long outlast the fighting have been the sad aftermath of wars for centuries, but "some Vietnam veterans face the added problem of — birth defects in their children which they see as clearly related to their exposure to the herbicide."

"Even if our children presently are OK, we worry about adverse health effects in the future," says Dan Hart, leader of the Twin Falls Idaho chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America, which is currently being organized.

Although his children have no apparent problems, Hart feels he has good cause to worry because of his close contact with the herbicide.

"No one ever warned us," he says. "We'd wipe the oily scum off the water with a handkerchief or scarf."

Like most problems, Agent Orange did not affect everyone. But all local veterans contacted by the Times-News, whether they currently have children with problems or not, express fear of future problems developing with their children.

But Blankholm believes the worst emotional dust has settled on the problem.

At first, it (Agent Orange) was 95 percent emotion and 5 percent science," the VA official says; "but now that ratio is about reversed and emotion has died down within the veterans community."

Local veterans believe research done by the military tends to be self-serving, and they express bitterness they must bear the burden of proving their disabilities and those of their offspring come from the herbicide exposure.

A report issued last August by the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta shows no evidence of a higher birth defect risk for children of Vietnam veterans, does not convince local veterans and their wives whose children were born with physical problems.

And for those so far unaffected, the specter of future problems is another dark cloud in their already difficult adjustment from a war, which the American public denied for nearly a decade.

For Dean Kendrick, who says his daughter's retardation results from his exposure to Agent Orange, it is another dark cloud in their already difficult adjustment from a war, which the American public denied for nearly a decade.

And for Ethor Fl, another Twin Falls veteran, whose two daughters were born with physical problems, it has "taken thousands of dollars" and years to correct them. He says his wife has had three miscarriages, which he believes is connected with his exposure to the herbicide, although again, studies have denied there is any higher Falls Vietnam Veterans organization, said Friday he has received in-

Vets say you must be totally disabled, dead to get money from 'Orange' suit

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Talk with any Vietnam veteran and the $180 million settlement made last year by Dow and six other chemical firms which manufactured Agent Orange is sure to surface.

The irony of the class action suit, which was handled in U.S. District Court in May 1984 in New York, "local veterans" say, "is that the money is being held in a court-administered fund, drawing interest, but no veteran so far has received any of it."

Dan Hart, president of the Twin Falls Vietnam Veterans organization, said Friday he has received information — from the Vietnam Veterans of America Legal Services — indicating the "only ones who will get any money from the suit must be "either totally — disabled or dead."

"That in effect means local veterans won't get a dime," Hart says, since no one here is totally disabled from the effects of Agent Orange. The maximum cash payment for a totally disabled veteran is expected to be $12,800; to be paid out over 10 years.

Only veterans totally disabled or families of veterans who died will receive cash payments, according to a recent communication Hart received from the veterans group's national headquarters in

"It's just one more example of everyone but the veterans being helped." — Dan Hart

Washington, D.C.

"It's just one more example of everyone but the veterans being helped," Hart says of the federal court order.

Deadline for filing claims under the class action suit first was Oct. 26, 1984, then extended to Jan. 15 and then May 28, 1985. Veterans who missed the deadline for a good reason still can send in claims for Agent Orange-connected disabilities.

To date, local veterans who have filed have received a form acknowledging receipt, listing an 800 number.

A recorded message reached at that number last week said payments are expected to begin to "qualified applicants" in May 1986 and that notices of decisions on individual claims would start being mailed in October.

One-quarter of the fund will be set aside for future payment to class members who may "manifest adverse health effects" in the future, according to a copy of the settlement agreement. Hart reflects local veterans' optimism that the settlement will be successful. See SETTLEMENT on Page D6.

Alumni of old Rupert High School attend annual reunion

High school reunions usually aren't family affairs, but the Rupert High School Alumni Association's second annual event recently proved they can be.

Since the Rupert school was replaced in the mid-1950s by Minico, the county consolidated high school, all alumni from the old Rupert High School were invited to the event.

Dora Moncur Chamberlain, Rupert, class of 1917, not only was honored as the earliest graduate in attendance, but was accompanied by five of her eight children, all of whom graduated from the same school. Her children and their class are Jack Chamberlain, Twin Falls, 1937; Lola Whitaker, Kaysville, Utah, 1939; Doris Hunsaker, Rupert, 1949; Marie Trebloeck, Meridian, 1951; and Rex Chamberlain, Grand Coulee, Wash., 1953.

The reunion also attracted a large number of early-day graduates, including Ruby Irving Gilmore, who graduated in 1918; Mildred Toyer Craven, 1919; Raymond Craven, 1920, and Louise Goff Roe, 1921.

During the dinner meeting conducted by Arthur Gordon, president, a humorous reading was given by Sherman Black-Bend, Ore., speech and drama teacher at RHHS during 1951-56. A memorial service was conducted by Rev. David Smith, assisted by Lena Steele Hirling and concluded with a vocal solo by Robert Newman.

Members voted to hold annual reunions the second Saturday in July and elected Lena Steele Saffell Hirling president for next year, with Walter Stark, vice president, and Ruth Norby DeThomas, secretary-treasurer.

Forrest Fonesbeck, Kimberly, one of 24 Masters of Instruction in Economics candidates at the University of Delaware, was selected to attend a leadership training workshop in Lewes, Del. A social studies teacher at Valley High School, he was nominated for the honor by the director of the master instruction program.

Eleven Magic Valley graduates were among those receiving degrees at Idaho State University summer commencement exercises Aug. 8. Awarded master's degrees were Clovis N. Johnson III, Twin Falls, education administration; James E. Anderson, Buhl, physical education; Lynne Larson, Burley, and Steven B. Rumsey, Rupert, both English.

Bachelor degrees were earned by Terrie Ann Wallace, Kimberly, sociology; Michele Ann Harris, Twin Falls, medical technology; Anita M. Hoebel, Burley, and Ann Monasmith Stearns, Paul, elementary education; Teresa M. Busby, Twin Falls, and Sarah Ellen Jensen, Heyburn, both accounting information systems, and David R. Pearson, Kimberly, associate of applied science in Vo-Tech, in electro-mechanical drafting.

Idaho Pe-zon Foods Corp. has given five scholarships of $785 each to Twin Falls County students to attend CSI this fall. Recipients are Chad Fuller, son of Beverly Fuller, and Roger Higgenbotham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Higgenbotham, all Twin Falls; Jennifer Horst, daughter of Ronna Horst and Shanna Jaynes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jaynes, Buhl, and Michelle Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Moore, Kimberly.

Flynn McRoberts, a 1985 Twin Falls High School graduate, has received the Elks Lodge National Foundation most valuable student award which includes a $600 check and a $1,200 scholarship.

Heather Stopperan, Kimberly, and Adam Fritz, Twin Falls, also received awards from the Elks Lodge through its Youth Activities money contest on theme "What America Means to Me."

Cousins' friendship isn't all in the name Valerie DePew comes in two

By TERRRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Valerie DePew and Valerie DePew have a lot in common.

The two Wendell women are first cousins, born four months apart in 1949 as Valerie Kay Boss and Valerie Lynn McClure.

"Our grandma called us Valerie One and Valerie Two," says Val Lynn. "She always got us confused."

But the real confusion began when blonde Val Kay began dating Gary DePew. She introduced her brunette cousin to Gary's cousin, Glen DePew, and everyone fell in love.

In July 1966, Val Kay and Gary were married, and less than a year later, Val Lynn and Glen were married.

The fact that they would both have the same name "didn't even dawn on us," recalls Val Lynn.

In 1967, each couple had a baby daughter, and a year later, each couple had their second child. Val Kay and Val Lynn both ended up with three children apiece.

Val Kay decided to become a beautician. She studied a Juan's College of Hair Design and then worked at Juan's in Jerome. About 10 years later, Val Lynn decided to become a beautician. She studied with the same instructors at Juan's College and also worked at Juan's in Jerome.

Val Kay now has a beauty shop, The Vault, in Wendell, and it isn't too hard to guess who her partner has been for the last year and a half.

"We do enjoy working together," blonde Val Kay began dating Gary DePew. She introduced her brunette cousin to Gary's cousin, Glen DePew, and everyone fell in love.

In 1967, each couple had a baby daughter, and a year later, each couple had their second child. Val Kay and Val Lynn both ended up with three children apiece.

Two, or refer to them as the one with the long hair or the one with the short hair. But they are not the only ones who get their Valerics mixed up.

Val Kay and Val Lynn used to bank at the same place, causing the tellers undue psychological stress. "They would deposit (Gary and Val Kay's) checks in our account," laughs Val Kay. "Their checks would bounce and ours never did. We'd call the bank and say, 'hey, you did it again. They never could get it straight, so we had to change banks.'"

"Our mail is always mixed up, too," says Val Kay, relating how her hospital bill was mistakenly sent to her cousin, who was on the verge of being taken to court for non-payment of the bill.

Like identical twins having fun with the confusion they cause, the DePew women find their similarities very entertaining.

"We even think alike," says Val Lynn. "I can answer questions for her, and she does the same for me."

Oakley's Dayley went full circle with elementary school

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — Kendall Dayley, whose family roots are in Oakley, lived and worked in several Twin Falls area communities before changing careers in his middle to become an educator.

He taught and served as principal in Cassia County schools before returning to his home town.

Now 79 and enjoying retirement, Dayley likes to point out that he ended his career as a teacher in the same school — even the same room — where he attended first grade — at the Oakley Elementary School.

In 1970 he and his wife, Blanche, purchased the stone house in Oakley built in 1898 by his grandfather, Jacob Newell Dayley, where he had lived several winters as a boy. It is one of the oldest houses in town, as evidenced by the use of the 14-inch-thick-stone-blocks. Bricks which were used for some of the other historic Oakley homes indicate construction a few years earlier, says Dayley.

The Dayleys have carpeted the house throughout, built a J.D. bathroom in the closets and storage space on the second floor, which still has three ample bedrooms. His parents, who also lived in the house, had installed new kitchen cupboards and enclosed the room, front porch.

The house, which has both its building date and the initials J.D. inscribed on its front, still has the old transom windows above the doors. It originally had two chimneys, and openings were arranged so every room in the house could have a stove. The Dayleys now heat with propane gas.

Dayley's great-grandfather, James Dayley, one of the original Mormon pioneers, came here in 1877, settling in Basin, east of Oakley. His grandfather purchased 160 acres in the Oakley townsite in 1879, eventually selling all but two acres where the ancestral home stands.

Dayley was born on the place in 1913 and his father, also named Jacob Newell, was born at the same site, but in a different house — Young Dayley started school at Church Hill, a country school northwest of Oakley, then went to the first through fourth grades at Oakley.

His parents moved to Twin Falls in May 1924 and to the Maroa district north of Flayer in July 1925.

He completed eighth grade at the old Maroa country school, graduating from Flayer High School in 1932. A year later, he entered the University of Idaho on a scholarship, majoring in agriculture.

After two and a half years of college he joined his father and brothers in a large ranch operation at Milner in 1936. They raised sugar beets and later invested in farms in the Burley area.

In January 1937 he married Blanche Peck and continued in the family farming operation in the Peila and Starr's Ferry district near Burley. The latter area is named for the operator of a pioneer ferry crossing of the Snake River, Dayley says. He recalls an early day trail once led north by east from the ferry to Kimama.

In 1936 when the family farms were sold, Dayley started teaching at Burley High School on a provisional certificate, taking night classes to become certified. He had earned a degree in animal husbandry from Utah State University, Logan, in 1941 and had taken five credit hours in education at the University of Idaho.

But he continued doing custom combining while teaching American history at Burley. In the fall of 1961, Ezra Moore, then Cassia County school superintendent, asked him if he was interested in being principal at Declo schools. Moore handed him the keys, and Dayley served as principal for 12 years.

"My last kindergarten class just graduated from high school last spring," he says.

In the fall of 1973 he came to Oakley, where he also was elementary school principal until retiring in 1976.

The Dayleys have seven children: Newell Dayley, Provo, Utah; Maclin Dayley, Gilroy, Calif.; Lorna Dufur and Ruth Ann Brown, both Boise; Kathleen Bevins, Cardston, Canada; Earl Dayley, Pocatello, and James Dayley, San Jose, Calif.

While farming, Dayley was president of the Cassia County Farm Bureau and his father once headed the Idaho State Farm Bureau.

The retired educator served as president of Region IV of the Principals Association and also headed the Cassia County chapter of the Idaho Education Association.

"I'm a firm supporter of the NEA and the IEA," Dayley says.

KIMBERLY — Edward and Wanda Say will be honored at an open house Aug. 17 in observance of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 4 to 7 p.m. at their home, 501 Lincoln, Kimberly.

Say and Wanda Astelt were married Sept. 25, 1935, in Twin Falls. They lived in Pocatello where he worked for the Union Pacific Railroad, farmed on Mink Creek and worked in the naval ordnance plant. They lived in Orem several years where he worked at Hill Field Airbase; they retired and moved to Kimberly in 1959.

The event will be hosted by their four children, Kenneth Say, San Clemente, Calif.; Russell Say, Great

Wanda and Edward Say
Falls, Mont.; Douglas Say, Ogden, and Kathleen Montgomery, Park City, Utah, and spouses. The couple has nine grandchildren.

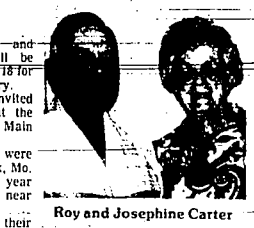

The Carters

FILER — Roy "Shorty" and Josephine Carter, Filer, will be honored at an open house Aug. 18 for their golden wedding anniversary.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 1 to 3 p.m. at the American Legion Hall on Main Street in Filer.

Carter and Josephine Calvin were married Aug. 19, 1935, in Ozark, Mo. They came to Idaho the next year and since 1945 have resided near Filer, where he farmed.

The event is being hosted by their four sons, Bill Carter, Canyon, Texas; Jim Carter and Tom Carter, both Twin Falls, and Don Carter,

Roy and Josephine Carter
Filer, and their wives. The couple has eight grandchildren and one great-grandson.

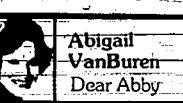

Father sends money but withholds his love

DEAR ABBY: I have an adorable 2 1/2-year-old daughter who has seen her father only once when she was 6 months old. In the blood test, we determined this man as her father. (I'll call him John.)

Since then we have been to court to determine child support, which John pays faithfully. At the time of our hearing, he requested that I accept any and all inquiries regarding our daughter to his attorney. The judge left visiting rights open in hopes that he would one day wish to see her again.

It has been two years and I am the sickier for my daughter. I know she is suffering emotionally from the absence of a father. Someday she will want to know who he is, and I had hoped he would come around before this happens. However, any effort by me to make contact is thwarted by John's attorney, who threatens me with court action if I harass him.

I believe all children have a right to know their father. I am fighting for this right for my child. How can I reach this man before it is too late? Emotionally I am drained. Is my daughter destined to be forever fatherless? I cannot accept this.

MOTHER OF FATHERLESS CHILD

— DEAR MOTHER: I understand your pain and disappointment, but there's no way you can force John to see his daughter if he chooses not to.

You say you can't "accept" it. I say: you had better get counseling and learn to accept it because your bitterness is not only affecting you, it's bound to affect your daughter. In the absence of a father, she needs a mother who is at peace with herself. Good luck and God bless.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.)

than average rate of miscarriages for wives of men exposed to Agent Orange.

The veteran says some $16,000 has been spent mostly by the Crippled Children's Hospital, on cosmetic surgery for his oldest daughter who was born with a cleft palate and required special schooling.

Phil, who grew up in Declo and earned a B.A. degree from Idaho State University after returning from his service in Vietnam, says their youngest daughter, now 12, was underweight at birth.

"Her digestive tract was messed up," he says, "and it took three or four years to get it straightened out."

He tried to "bury himself in his work" to forget the war trauma and succeeded for a time. For six and a half years he worked at

Magic Valley Regional Medical Center as assistant comptroller.

But 10 years after he left the service his personal time bomb exploded and for the past four and half years he's been unable to work because of severe manic depression. A former member of the 39th signal battalion, Phil believes Agent Orange "definitely contributed" to his debilitating mental illness.

But, as he says, "the burden of proof" is on him and any likelihood of "proving" a scientific connection between the widespread "post traumatic stress syndrome" so many Vietnam veterans suffer and Agent Orange seems highly unlikely.

"It seems unfair," Phil says. But, unless future research provides unexpected new evidence, that's how it remains for veterans of America's most unpopular war.

Settlement

man when he says the only result of the much publicized court case was to benefit lawyers, clear the chemical companies from further lawsuits and to absolve them of any blame in providing the Agent Orange herbicide at the military's request.

The class action suit with the chemical companies has nothing to do with the Veterans Administration, the government agency for handling veterans' claims.

"They're two separate ball games," says Bill Blankenship, Boise, VA chief for veterans assistance.

But, he points out, the problem of disbursing compensation from that court case is the same one facing the VA: "Trying to decide who's to get the money and how much."

And now, with the court ruling that only totally disabled veterans or families of deceased ones will benefit, local veterans who face chronic ailments have lost one more hope of what they see as adequate compensation.

Arce Adame, Twin Falls, whose skin on his hands dries, flakes, bleeds, then reheels to start the cycle again every few weeks, exemplifies the problem.

"I've been told, perhaps medication would help," he says. But the pills, costing $3 each, should be taken three times daily. After the large amount of money he's already spent on his physical and mental service-related problems, this is unrealistic, he says.

So veterans say they are left to deal with their fears, pain and medical bills unaided.
