Grain crops huge

By DON KENDALL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Farmers this fall are expected to harvest a record corn crop of nearly 3.27 billion bushels.
That is 8 percent more than last year's output and slightly more than the old market set three years ago, the Agriculture Department said Monday.
Bumper crops of soybeans, sorghum, wheat and cotton also were indicated by the department's Crop Reporting Board, based on surveys taken Aug. 1. The overall production estimates were the first of the season by the department and will be updated during the rest of the growing season.
"It's not going to change things, to speak of, in terms of food prices," said Ralph Parlett, a USDA food economist. "There are too many other things going on."

Parlett referred to the beleaguered livestock industry, particularly cattle producers, which two years ago saw feed prices soar because of the short 1993 harvest. Last year's return to good yields triggered declines in corn and soybeans, but cattle and hog producers had other financial problems. And they have cut back on breeding herds.
"There have been a lot of liquidations, even with lower feed prices," Parlett told The Associated Press. "It's almost walk-and-see now ... we've seen low (feed) prices, but we're not seeing any expansion in herds, we're still seeing liquidations."
As a result of livestock herd liquidations by hard-pressed farmers and ranchers to raise money for debts, consumers have benefited from ample supplies of red meat. That has helped cool food prices.
Meanwhile, he said, retail food prices are estimated to rise an average of 2 percent to 4 percent this year. "Frankly, we're looking at the low end of that" range, he said. Last year, food prices rose an average of 3.8 percent.
Parlett declined to estimate what food prices might do next year as

Japan Air Lines 747 hits mountain; 2 Americans among 520 victims

By EUGENE MOOSA
The Associated Press

KITA-AKAMURA, Japan — A Japanese jumbo jet packed with 521 people crashed in rugged mountains of central Japan on Monday.
Unconfirmed reports said there were seven survivors of what was believed to be the worst single-plane crash ever.

Nagano prefectural (state) police were quoted as saying at least four people — two women, an eight-year-old girl and a boy — were found alive in the wreckage.

Japan Broadcasting Corp. and Kyodo News Service reported Tuesday that three more survivors had been found, but gave no further details about them. The Nagano police, the National Police Agency and a JAL spokesman said they had no information to confirm that report.
"Television networks showed pictures of a young girl and an older woman on stretchers, battered and bandaged. Police identified them as Mrs. Hiroko Yoshizaki, 35, and her daughter, Michiko Yoshizaki, 8, and said they and the other woman survivor, Keko Kawakami, were flown by military helicopter to a hospital in Fushikawa city, 25 miles west of the crash scene.
The boy was reported still trapped in the wreckage.
Three dozen helicopter-borne troops made a rope descent into steep, thickly forested mountain country Tuesday morning to reach the wreckage of the Japan Air Lines Boeing 747.
The jettliner crashed on a domestic flight from Tokyo to Osaka. The pilot, Masami Takahama, 49, had reported a door was broken, that he was fighting for control and would try an emergency landing.
Hiroko Ochiai, a Self Defense Force spokesman, earlier said inter reports from the crash site, at about 5,000 feet. Included are survivors among the 529 passengers and 15 crew members aboard.

MICHIKO YOSHIKAZI Among few survivors

JAL spokesman Geoffrey Tudor said two Americans were on the passenger list. They were identified as Edward Anderson, believed to be 46, and Michael Hanson, 60, both employees of Stearns Catalytic Co. of Denver, Colo. Neil McLagan, a Stearns vice president, confirmed Anderson and Hanson were on the airplane.
The jettliner crashed at about 6:54 p.m. (3:54 a.m. MDT) on the north side of Mount Ogura, a 6,929-foot peak about 50 miles from Yokota and 70 miles northwest of Tokyo.
The site is in a remote area in a range known as the Japan Alps. The only roads in the region follow river valleys that cut through steep, densely forested mountainsides.
In Seattle, Wash., Boeing spokesman Bill Mellon said a five-member team of company investigators would leave Tuesday for Japan. In Washington, D.C., Edward Tudor, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman, said FAA investigators might be sent if Japanese officials requested them.

Tudor said JAL flight 123 left Tokyo's Haneda Airport bound for Osaka carrying 529 passengers, including 12 infants, and a crew of 15.
It left Haneda at 6:12 p.m. It had been scheduled to leave at 6 p.m. and to arrive at Osaka, less than 50 miles away, at 7 p.m.
Tudor said that at 6:34 p.m. the plane reported: "Rear 5 door broken, making emergency descent."

Judging from the communication, he said: "It appears the aircraft crew had difficulty controlling the aircraft."
Selchiro Kondo, a spokesman for Nagano state police, said 1,000 police, firefighters and Self-Defense personnel were searching for the missing plane.
A live Japan Broadcasting Corp. telecast from a helicopter over the site showed pieces of still smoldering, widely scattered wreckage. Japan Air Lines markings were clear on some of the debris, but no survivors or bodies could be seen.

Keizo Shimizu of the Transport Ministry said Takahama, a 40-year-old pilot with more than 12,000 hours flying, requested radar guidance from Tokyo air control at 6:25 p.m. while descending to 22,000 feet. Air control officials told the plane to proceed 90 degrees east.
Takahama declared an emergency two minutes later, he said. At 6:28 p.m., traffic control told the pilot again to fly 90 degrees east, instead of northwest, but Takahama only responded, "Unreliable control."
Shimizu said traffic control asked Takahama if he could land in Nagoya, about 165 miles west of Tokyo, and he said he wanted to head back to Haneda.

Sawtooth National Forest, 5 others stop use of herbicides

By BOB FREUND
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Forest Service Monday stopped using herbicides to control noxious weeds in the Sawtooth National Forest and five other southern Idaho forests, acting at the request of an environmental group.
Sawtooth officials said Monday they may have to close a popular stretch of forest along the South Fork of the Boise River to prevent spread of one damaging weed, leafy spurge, said Ron Stoleson, Sawtooth National Forest supervisor.
"One of the options we will be considering is if we cannot control the weeds through this program is closing the area off to use," said Stoleson.

A second fenced zone along Goose Creek in the South Hills also could be placed off limits to visitors, Sawtooth Forest spokesman Ed Waldapfel said.
Stan Tixler, chief forester for the service's Intermountain Region, Monday suspended noxious weed programs in the Sawtooth, Boise, Payette, Caribou, Salmon and Targhee forests Monday.
His order stops chemical control programs "to assure that the Forest Service conforms with the provisions of the National Environmental Protection Act, as well as with microorganisms in the soil, he said.

The Sawtooth National Forest is most at risk of the ban, containing 1,157 acres of the 1,429 acres targeted for treatment in southern Idaho forests this year, said Waldapfel. About 40 percent of the Sawtooth Inc. of Boise had sought a ban on herbicide use on July 26, after completing a survey of weed programs in the southern Idaho forests.
"What we asked was compliance with a federal court order, which requires a worst case analysis of the use of the chemicals," said Bill Melners, chairman of the Boise-based Foundation. The herbicides could be dangerous or lethal to people, wildlife, fish, spurge centers on private land along the South Fork near Baumgartner Campground east of Featherhite. The Forest Service and the private landowner have spent more than $600,000 over the past 15 years in an effort to eradicate the weed, Stoleson said Monday.

Fairfield District Ranger John Madden estimated that Sawtooth officials may have to place as many as 12 miles alongside the river off limits to all visitors, including campers, hunters and fishermen.
The area, which is easily accessible over a gravel road, is a popular recreation spot in the summer and a popular elk hunting ground in the fall, Madden said.
Another critical area is in the South Hills.

Defendants to be added in special education case

By PAULA EUBANKS
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Individual defendants will be added within the next two weeks to the special education case against the Idaho Department of Education and the Twin Falls School District, said a counsel for the plaintiffs Troy Goodrich and his partners.
The case was filed last week in U.S. District Court by the Goodriches through their lawyers, Michael R. Crabtree, of Twin Falls, and the Coalition of Advocates for the Disabled based in Boise.
The complaint against the school system charges it for an alleged failure to give Troy, who the suit claims is developmentally disabled, the testing, evaluation, education, due process of law and information to his parents that is required by federal and state law.

By law, all school systems must provide education to disabled children until such time that education must suit the needs of each individual child, the law says.
As of Monday night, only the Idaho Department of Education had been named as a defendant in the Twin Falls School District bid not received legal notice of the charges, said Dr. Kent Boston, Twin Falls superintendent.
Also, the public schools, Twin Falls School District, had not read the complaint, Goodrich said. The district attorney will get a summons to appear in court, Goodrich said.
The coalition, formed by the Coalition of Advocates for the Disabled, seeks for the Disabled.

Warrant names ex-superintendent

CASTLEFORD — A warrant has been issued for the arrest of former Castleford School Superintendent Robert Hutchin on a grand theft charge.

In a separate incident, meanwhile, the Twin Falls County Sheriff's office is ready to have the prosecutor's office file forgery charges against Hutchin, who's whereabouts is unknown.
Hutchin, no age available, allegedly failed to return June 13-14, four video movies from Shows to Go, a Buhl video rental business, according to a complaint filed in 5th District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls Aug. 2. The movies were worth about $50 each, the complaint stated.
In a separate case, Chief Deputy Sheriff Harold Jensen said Monday that a forgery charge probably will be filed this week against Hutchin.

ROBERT HUTCHIN More charges coming

Castleford School District payroll check written to Hutchin April 26. The check allegedly was cashed by Hutchin at a Buhl bank.
The unauthorized check was discovered last month when district officials were closing the books on district finances, Jensen reported earlier. The school district notified the sheriff about the check, which in turn notified the sheriff's office.
Hutchin was hired by the school district last July and resigned in April because he said he didn't have the total board support for his programs.
The first order of business was filing the forgery charge, then the sheriff's office will begin the work of finding Hutchin, Jensen said Monday.
School officials didn't have a forwarding address for Hutchin, who came to Castleford from a position in Thompson Falls, Mont.

Weeds

leaves spurge has infested land along Goose Creek. "Already it's being spread downstream by Goose Creek," said Waldrop.

"If spread more widely, it could affect agriculture. Some hay in Cassia County may be at least one farm in Camas County already are under quarantine because of the weed, he said.

Sawtooth officials also use chemicals to treat other weeds, such as knapweed, yellow foxtail, tall larkspur and musk thistle.

Melners said the Idaho Natural Resources Legal Foundation does not oppose killing of the noxious weeds. "But what we need to know is the effects of the chemicals that are going to be used and that the chemicals are not going to be used in a broadcast situation," he said.

Tixler said Monday, "We believe our noxious weed program was being done in an environmentally safe manner and with no hazard to wildlife or people," he said.

Crops

The effect of reduced livestock herds takes farmer hold. Those projections will be forthcoming in a month or two, he said.

Department economists say farm income is expected to decline this year, reflecting lower prices for crops and livestock.

Michael Hail, executive vice president of the National Corn-Growers Association, said the huge crop could be the real spark in the hay market when Congress returns to work next month and tries to complete a new farm bill.

The big crop and lower prices will mean rising surpluses. That will make it even more urgent for Congress to adopt legislation to protect farm income, Hail said in a telephone interview from his Washington office.

The report said the department's "all crops" production index as of Aug. 1 averaged 112 percent of the base year of 1977, up from 110 percent last year and a nine-year low of 88 percent in 1983, when drought and government acreage curbs sharply reduced production. The record up was 118 percent in 1982.

If the August estimate holds, the 1985 corn harvest would eclipse the 1982 record of 8.24 billion bushels.

Last year's crop was 7.66 billion bushels. Soybean production was estimated at 1.96 billion bushels, up 5 percent from last year. And cotton production, at 13.8 million bales, was up 6 percent from 12.9 million bales in 1984. The soybean record was 2.26 billion bushels in 1979, and the top cotton harvest was nearly 19 million bales in 1978.

Total wheat production was estimated for the first time this season at 2.36 billion bushels, down 1 percent from the 1984 harvest. The record was 2.79 billion bushels in 1981.

A reason for the reduction in wheat — which already was a surplus — is a smaller acreage for harvest. That was estimated at 64.5 million acres, down from 68.9 million acres in 1984.

were in effect on this year's wheat and feed grains crops, forcing farmers to cut back in return for federal price supports.

The new production report said corn yields are expected to average 83 bushels per acre, the second highest on record and four bushels more than last year.

Soybean yields, at 31.5 bushels per harvested acre, would be up from 28.2 in 1984.

The average wheat yield was estimated at 36.8 bushels per acre, down from 38.8 bushels last year.

Other crops included:

- Oats, 519 million bushels and a yield of 59.3 bushels per acre, compared with 49.1 million and 58.1 in 1984.
- Barley, 599.3 million bushels and 51 bushels per acre, compared with 596.5 million and 53.4 last year.
- Sorghum, 1.05 billion bushels and 64.9 bushels per acre, compared with 955.9 million and 56.4 last year.
- Rice, 123.6 million hundredweight and 5,047 pounds per acre, compared with 137 million and 4,926 last year.
- Peanuts, 4.26 billion pounds and a yield of 2,878 pounds per acre, compared with 4.4 billion pounds and also 2,878 pounds last year.
- Tobacco, 1.55 billion pounds and a yield of 2,161 pounds per acre, compared with 1.73 billion and 2,182 last year.

Briefly

Apartheid foes stage march

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of anti-apartheid demonstrators, led by mayors, actors and union and civil rights leaders, marched to the State Department on Monday and called on the Reagan administration to renounce its policy of "constructive engagement" and impose sanctions on South Africa.

The protesters carried 50 coffins symbolizing South Africans killed in growing violence since the white-minority government in Pretoria ordered a state of emergency more than three weeks ago.

Among those leading the march were Mayors Ed Koch of New York City, Marlon Barry of Washington and Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., the Rev. Jesse Jackson; Coretta Scott King; NAACP Director Benjamin Hooks; Walter Fauntleroy, the District of Columbia's congressional delegate; and actors Paul Newman and Tony Randall, and singer Harry Belafonte.

Jazz singer condition 'good'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jazz singer Ella Fitzgerald was reported in good condition Monday after being hospitalized complaining of shortness of breath, officials at George Washington University Hospital said.

Spokeswoman Christine Torre said Ms. Fitzgerald, 67, had been taken to the hospital late Sunday night by ambulance.

"The breathing problem was apparently due to fluid in the lungs," Ms. Torre said. "She's in good condition. It's too soon to tell when she'll be released."

Pope attacks Africa race bias

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — Pope John Paul II made clear Monday that the church will speak forcefully for human rights in Africa, and attacked race discrimination in white-ruled South Africa for the second day in a row.

He also said birth control programs are introducing a "powerful anti-life mentality" into developing countries.

Vatican officials said the pope wants Africans to take an ethical and moral road to development rather than a purely material one.

Private planes collide, kill 3

QUINLAN, Texas (AP) — Two private planes collided Monday, killing three people in one plane, while both people aboard the other craft escaped injury after it crash landed, authorities said.

A twin-engine Super King Air Beech 200 turboprop and a smaller Cessna 200 collided near Lake Tawakoni in northeast Texas shortly after 10 a.m., strewn wreckage over four miles, Hunt County sheriff's officials said.

The survivors, experienced commercial pilots, landed near Wills Point in Van Zandt County, said Sheriff Travis Shafer.

Police drive pupils to class

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police drove school children from house-to-house in Kwa-Thema township Monday, forcing black students to go to class.

A black consumer boycott spread through the nation's industrial heartland.

Police and other sources reported 11 more black deaths. That brings the unofficial toll in a year of riots to 600 dead, surpassing the violence that began in Soweto in 1976 as South Africa's bloodiest black uprising against white rule.

In Johannesburg, 32 white students from the University of the Witwatersrand were injured and eight were arrested when police dispersed protesters at the start of a three-day boycott. White students in Cape Town also have boycotted classes in solidarity with blacks.

Thousands of black workers in Pretoria heeded a three-day general strike call from Saturday to Monday, and a consumer boycott that is to last until Aug. 28, news reports said.

Case

Baugh was asked by Crabtree to join the case because of his expertise on the rights of the disabled, Baugh said. ADO is a private, non-profit group assigned by the governor to protect and advocate those rights in Idaho.

The complaint charges that Troy's civil rights were violated when the school district allegedly failed to provide the very structured environment that Troy's parents and independent evaluators said he needed.

It claims that as a toddler, Troy was medically diagnosed "as being hyperkinetic and exhibiting attention deficit disorder, and as having emotional problems."

While Troy was "extremely disruptive in the general classroom setting" during first grade, his academic progress "proceeded at an acceptable rate" when he transferred into a private school for second through fifth grades, the complaint claims.

The progress at the private school was due to the smaller class sizes and "greatly increased one-to-one teacher-to-pupil attention" as well as "very closely supervised behavior modification and highly structured educational and behavioral settings," it said.

When Troy enrolled in the public school sixth grade, the "lack of the type of structure and behavior modification" made his behavioral and academic progress suffer greatly, the suit claims.

Since sixth grade, which he attended in the early 1980s, Troy has been mistreated by the special education system in the Twin Falls Public Schools, it alleges.

"It's a simple refusal to deal with it (Troy's disability). The school just decided it was not going to deal with it," Baugh said of the public school system's alleged mishandling of Troy's case.

Specifically, the Goodriches charges against the defendants include:

- Failure to have a means of identifying Troy as a handicapped student;
- Failure to create and use an appropriate educational and related services program for Troy.

Carbide concedes Institute plant leak first believed minor

By KELLY P. KISSEL
The Associated Press

INSTITUTE, W.Va. — Union Carbide defended itself Monday against criticism of its emergency notification procedures during a poison gas leak that injured 13 people.

But company officials conceded that workers at first thought the leak was not a problem, and delayed notifying authorities.

The chemical involved in Sunday's leak, aldicarb oxime, is rated on a toxicity scale in the same class as methyl isocyanate, which killed more than 2,000 people after it leaked at a Carbide plant in Bhopal, India, according to a company memo-disclosed by an aide to Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif.

The company said the rating includes chemicals of varying toxicity, and that it does not consider aldicarb oxime as toxic as MIC. Doctors said those exposed at Institute were expected to recover fully because of low concentrations.

Carbide said it would investigate the cause of Sunday's leak, while county officials said they would investigate the company's emergency response.

"The system didn't work," said Charleston Mayor Mike Roark, who joined mayors from St. Albans, N.H., Nitro, Dunbar and other communities in criticizing the warning-procedures.

But Carbide officials disputed the charges, with plant manager Hank Karawan saying the plant's alarm was activated within 60 seconds of the leak's being discovered at 9:24 a.m.

Kanawha County emergency officials were not notified for 20 minutes — until 9:44 a.m. — because "at that time we did not believe the emergency would affect the community because the cloud was hovering over the plant," said Karawan.

He said the community warning whistle at the Institute fire station was sounded shortly before 10 a.m. But Emergency Broadcast System's first report wasn't broadcast until 10:09, said Kanawha Valley emergency services coordinator Bill White.

By that time, the stinging white gas cloud already was settling on Institute, forcing the community's 3,100 residents to flee or seal themselves inside their homes.

Thousands stayed indoors for two hours, and more than 300 were checked at an emergency medical center set up two miles away. More than 130 were treated at hospitals for burning eyes, noses, throats and lungs, and 13 remained hospitalized Monday.

Doctors predicted quick recovery, but Stanley Miller, 30, one of six Carbide workers injured — was in-serious condition Monday with eye injuries. The rest were in satisfactory condition.

Many of the injured residents said their homes were engulfed by fumes before they heard any warning.

Teresa McGee, 21, said she began feeling dizzy 15 minutes before she heard a siren.

"People were outside covering their mouths," she said. "They didn't know what was going on."

Steve Seals said he could see the gas cloud long before he heard any warning siren. "If there had been something out there strong enough to kill me, I'd have been dead," he said.

son said plant workers promptly notified the emergency services office and recommended a first stage alert — in which sirens warn people to shut windows and doors and turn off air conditioners.

Gov. Arnh Moore, a strong supporter of the chemical industry, said he is certain Carbide will be a good "corporate citizen" and offer a full explanation.

Company officials believe the leak occurred when steam was somehow introduced into a storage tank containing 500 gallons of the pesticide ingredient, but the source of the steam has not been determined, Karawan said.

Steam would have set off a chemical reaction capable of blowing out communications radio" which was set up this spring as part of a revamped emergency system, White said. "It Karawan said, "was used fine in an earlier (June 27) leak, but this shift didn't tug."

He said federal and state officials were at the plant Monday, conducting investigations.

250 flee smoke from Arizona train fire

VALENTINE, Ariz. (AP) — A freight train carrying hazardous materials derailed and caught fire Monday, spewing clouds of toxic smoke and forcing the evacuations of the 250 residents of three small towns, officials said.

No injuries were reported, but authorities said one cow and several birds in the area died due to the fumes after the 70-car Santa Fe train, bound for San Francisco from Chicago, derailed at 4:15 a.m.

The intense heat melted the rails and the wheels of some of the cars, Mohave County Sheriff's Lt. Clark Morrell said.

"It really felt like an earthquake had happened," said Carole Yellowhawk, of Valentine. "There was a series of four explosions to begin with and the fifth one just totally rocked the home."

"We went to the front door and looked out and here is this whole string of tankers on fire," she said.

Valentine, Hackberry and Truxton, within 10 miles of each other, were evacuated and U.S. 66 was closed after the derailment.

Twenty-seven cars came off the tracks, said Eric Buckley, a spokesman for the railroad in Los Angeles. Twenty-five cars burned, said Doug Bradley, a spokesman for the fire department in Kingman, about 30 miles away.

"At this time, we have no idea why it happened," Buckley said.

Morrell said Santa Fe officials had told him that the train was hauling 46 containers filled with about 30 different hazardous chemicals, including cyanide, formaldehyde, alcohol, ammonia and sulphuric acid.

But Buckley said later there was no cyanide.

"There were some formaldehyde and sulphuric acid aboard, but they were in small amounts," he said.

The cargo was mostly hydrochloric acid, benzene, methanol, butyl, and a wide variety of alcohol derivatives.

The benzene, a paint thinner, probably caused the fire, Buckley said.

The area around the accident site would be sealed off until the fire burned itself out, and the evacuees would not be allowed to return home until then, probably by Monday night, Morrell said.

Valentine residents were taken to Truxton, about 10 miles northeast of the derailment. But when winds shifted, those in Truxton later were evacuated to Peach Springs, another seven miles away. Hackberry residents were taken to Kingman.

The Red Cross set up centers in Kingman and Peach Springs to aid the evacuees.

Train traffic was being rerouted. The train left Chicago Saturday, and was to arrive in San Francisco this morning, Buckley said.

Zenger case effects felt 250 years later

Two hundred and fifty years ago this month, a New York printer named John Peter Zenger went on trial for publishing in his New York Weekly Journal, criticisms of the royal government which "tended to raise factions and tumults among the people."

That Zenger's accounts were substantially true was irrelevant. Under prevailing law, there was libel merely in publication. Truth or falsity was not an issue.

But Zenger's attorney, Andrew Hamilton, argued differently. "The question before you," he told the jury "is the cause of liberty." Zenger, he said, had courageously taken up the "liberty of opposing arbitrary power by speaking and writing truth."

Zenger was acquitted and the case was frequently cited as justification for the colonists' right as free citizens to criticize the crown.

From that argument flowed resistance to the Stamp Act, the tea duties and the British Army at Concord, indeed the Revolutionary War itself.

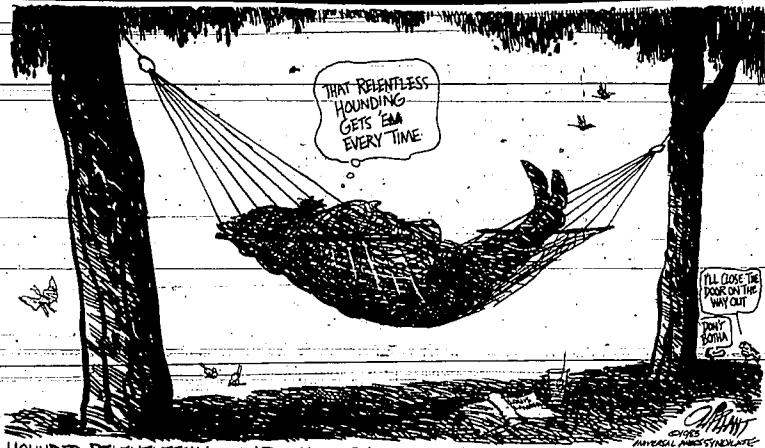

The case, said patriot Gouverneur Morris at the time, was the "germ of America's freedom."

By the time of the Constitution, what was meant by freedom of the press was widely understood to mean the right to get and distribute information, to print without prior restraint, and the right to print the truth.

Despite many cases and subsequent laws, those principles still guide the interpretation in American law to the right to a free press. No other nation has so broad a principle to foster the free flow of information in the society.

As one would expect, of course, Zenger is best known to journalists, editors, and media attorneys, the modern-day equivalents of Hamilton.

But what the courageous printer, his wife who published the newspaper for 10 months while he languished in jail, and Hamilton accomplished has an effect on all of us today who write, edit and read the news.

HOUNDING RELENTLESSLY ON APARTHEID BY THE REAGAN ADMINISTRATION, SOUTH AFRICA HAS WITHDRAWN ITS AMBASSADOR TO THE U.S.

Nation shares in Lehman's bargains

WASHINGTON — When it becomes operational in 1989, the battleship Wisconsin will make its home port in Corpus Christi, Texas.

That announcement a few days ago from Navy Secretary John Lehman was good news from Galveston to Brownsville, but the pleasant thing about Lehman's remark of the battleship is that the program is good news all around.

The Wisconsin will be the fourth and last of the big ships to be taken from mothballs and returned to duty at sea. The New Jersey, based in Long Beach, Calif., came on line two years ago. The Iowa, which temporarily is in Norfolk, Va., came next. The Missouri will join the Pacific fleet toward the end of this year and will work out of its home port at Treasure Island, San Francisco.

The taxpayers have become so fixated to the astronomical costs of defense that they should welcome the story of Lehman's broad-beamed bargains. The four battleships will average $400 million each, something in the neighborhood of $400 million each. That is less per ship than the cost of a new frigate. It is less getting a low-mileage used car with no wear on the tires.

In return for its $400 million, the Navy gets a mighty platform for the kind of sustained bombardment that only a big ship can deliver. Each of the ships is fitted with the latest state of the art in missiles and electronic equipment. Despite the weight of their 19-inch armor, the battleships can show their sterns to any companion vessel. They are formidable weapons of war.

Lehman, to put the matter mildly, is a battleship buff. He recalls with vivid satisfaction the New Jersey's role off Beirut at the peak of the fighting there. Parts of the city were being systematically destroyed by artillery from the hills to the east. The New Jersey opened fire with her 16-inch guns. Though it was impossible to correct aim through spotters (ground coordinates had to be used), the ship delivered 301 rounds before retiring. Each round weighed 2,250 pounds, says Lehman. "The artillery stopped."

For such a purpose, nothing beats a battleship. During World War II, our carrier aircraft repeatedly bombed the Japanese base on Truk. Great damage was done, but the base stayed operable. By contrast, when seven battleships went to work on Kwajalein on Jan. 31, 1944, their effectiveness could not be doubted: By the evening, according to historian Samuel Eliot Morison, the bombardment had killed possibly half the Japanese defenders. Hardly a tree was left standing on what had been a pretty wooded island. Only 372 of 41,990 U.S. troops committed to the Kwajalein operation were killed. The Japanese lost 7,870 men out of 8,675.

Lessons of the more recent war of the Falkland Islands confirmed the Pacific experience. British carrier aircraft repeatedly hit the airfield at Port Stanley, but they could not stay over the target long enough to knock out the field. This is not to denigrate the awesome power and versatility of today's manned aircraft, fit with their "smart bombs," but an A-6 Intruder carries a normal bomb load that is equivalent to only five rounds from a battleship — and it costs $1 million to train a pilot to fly it.

When the Wisconsin joins the Atlantic fleet four years hence, it will just about complete the restoration of our naval presence in the Gulf of Mexico. The city of Corpus Christi will get the Wisconsin, with its crew of 1,500, along with the training carrier Lexington and several other ships. Other Gulf ports — Pensacola, Mobile, Pascagoula, Galveston, New Orleans and Lake Charles — will also have a piece of the home port action.

The benefits are substantial. Lehman's advisers estimate that the Corpus Christi area will see an economic impact of $500 million a year once the plan is fully developed. Twenty-nine ships, all told, will be engaged in surface operations out of the Gulf area. They represent a bona fide manufacturing and building. The Navy investigated 16 ports for the Wisconsin's home port and narrowed the list to six, but it was no contest. The state of Texas put up $25 million and the taxpayers of Corpus Christi committed themselves to an additional $25 million in bonds. It was "by far the most attractive choice," says Lehman. "We got a bargain." The whole nation will share it.

Washington Times editor criticizes Times-News editorial

This is a marvelous, if inelegant word, that describes your editorial on The Unification Church.

The word is, "hogwash."

You identify The Washington Times in your editorial as a newspaper to "promote lies (The Unification Church's) influence in Washington."

Apparently, you have never read the newspaper, because your assertion has no relation to fact.

Fact: Articles on The Washington Times by two papers you would know (and who have no reason to be our fans) dismissed the contention that The Washington Times is in any way a vehicle for The Unification Church's religious views. The two papers printing the articles: The New York Times and The Los Angeles Times.

Fact: The Washington Times did give the first grant of $100,000 for a fund to provide Nicaraguan freedom fighters $14 million in humanitarian aid — since approved by Congress. We don't hide our opinions; indeed, unlike many newspapers, we honestly let what we believe (which allows our readers to catch any bias), and we put our money where our mouth is.

And lest you get too highly vexed about that contribution, you might note the praise for Ethiopian humanitarian aid by most media — a country just like Nicaragua with starvation, with a freedom movement, with Marxist/Leninist regime.

Fact: Churches and religious organizations regularly participate in the public arena, such as in upcoming statement by the Catholic bishops on our economic system, annual meetings by various denominations.

So what is so shameful about The Unification Church? What is different about The Unification Church from other denominations (and please, provide proven statistics and numbers and claims)? Remember, not long ago, many people attacked Catholics and Jews.

The Washington Times, by the way, is not owned by The Unification Church; The Washington Times is owned by a New York registered corporation: News World Communications Inc.

The business people in that company are members of The Unification Church; however, they operate the newspaper with written guarantees of editorial independence.

And since you are making judgements, do you plan to tell your readers what the religion is of your ownership? And do you plan to print what the religion's doctrine is so your readers can judge your paper on that religion's doctrine? I trust you won't because that is irrelevant for you — just as it is for us.

The Times-News is what it prints. So are we. Next time, try reading our award-winning paper (which has been quoted by network TV, other dailies. . .).

We're proud of our professional staff and what they are contributing to democratic debate in this country. As a professional journalist, we would expect you to judge us by what we print.

Arnaud de Borchgrave is editor in chief of The Washington Times.

The Times-News stands by its editorial of 16 criticizing the Unification Church and its sponsors for anti-communism seminars attended by at least 25 Idaho legislators.

The president of New World Communications, which de Borchgrave says owns The Washington Times, is Bo Hl Pak, the top deputy in the United States of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon. Pak is also chairman of Causa, the church's political action arm which has put on the seminars.

De Borchgrave's predecessor, James Whelan, resigned last year as editor and publisher of The Times with a public statement challenging the paper's integrity and saying that Pak and the Unification Church had taken control of the newspaper.

Letters/ Proposed plan would make parking more expensive, restrictive

Opposes any cost increases

I have rented office space in the BID area for almost two years. During that time my only complaint for the BID has been the two-hour hassle of finding change and feeding the meters.

This is unavoidable, as there is very limited non-metered parking within a two block radius of my office. I like the downtown area and would stay in my current place as long as the BID is reasonable, unless parking became as restrictive and prohibitively expensive as it will be under Mr. Faulkner's proposed validated parking plan.

As a tenant in the BID area I oppose any increase in the cost of parking downtown. The proposed validated parking will not only drive more customers out of the BID area, it will also tend to influence those with offices in the area to seriously consider alternative locations.

The ideal solution for downtown parking would provide convenient free parking for customers, reasonably close parking for the people who work in the area and not increase the cost of doing business.

In other downtown business areas, the merchants and the city have worked together to provide for just such a solution.

The parking adjacent to the retail businesses are signed as loading zones or as two-hour free parking. Areas of free parking in "prime" retail parking areas are posted for four-hour free parking, and those spaces on the edges of the parking area are available for 24-hour parking.

tentials he can cite those over-parking (usually employees) with a flat five dollar ticket. This plan provides for the desired result without expensive equipment or increased personnel.

I am certain that a solution to the parking problem can be found that really improves the business climate for all of the BID members.

Taxpayers are real victims

Your Aug. 8 paper featured a front page picture and story of a 50-year-old woman who was a victim of city government because the city let "her house" burn down since it was outside the city limits.

While it is regrettable that the house burned down, I think the real victim is the taxpayers. Here is a 50-year-old woman with a live-in boy friend, collecting food stamps and welfare checks, and obviously supported by the government that refused to "save her house."

If you want to do the rest of the story, why not find out how many years the woman has been receiving welfare and when she last contributed to the society that supports her?

It's about time we realize that government cannot give to the people anything unless it first takes it from the people, and when someone receives something without working, someone else must work without receiving.

It's a rather cheap shot to try to make a mythical solution to effort to sensationalize a story to sell newspapers.

Twin Falls is positive place

Twin Falls is an extremely positive place to live. It has so many good things going for it that we just take for granted that we tend to pick out minor things to gripe about and forget to be proud of all the good.

The climate is good. The air is clean. The natives are friendly and the shopping is rewarding.

One small irritation is the parking. Finding a place to park near the store you want to visit is no problem but finding a ticket on the windshield is. It isn't the amount of the ticket charge, but the time it takes from your busy schedule that irritates.

greatly to the enjoyment of shopping "downtown."

If the value of the parking space for each car is analyzed, it would prove to be the best advertising bargain the merchant could ever spend.

I can live any place I choose in this great country since I am retired and have no absolute ties here, but thanks, I will take our city!

Dogs cost family its flock

I have a complaint about some of the pet owners of Twin Falls County. My husband has worked hard the past fifteen years raising, breeding and increasing his small flock of sheep.

Last year he has had over a two thousand dollar death loss of ewes and lambs due to dogs. We have most of the trouble on weekends and at night. I feel this is partly due to the fact this is the off hours of the dog catcher and people turn their pets loose.

I think it is a shame that we have our flock for sale due to the loss of all our profits plus because other people will not be responsible for their pets.

Reagan's advisers to confer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan's top advisers plan to hold a transcontinental telephone conference today to plot a detailed outline of the administration's program through the second term.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes announced plans for the meeting Monday, and invited reporters and photographers to attend the first few minutes of the session — a development normally reserved for meetings at the White House.

Reagan, who is relaxing in the seclusion of his 688-acre mountaintop ranch near here, will not attend but will be presented with a report from the session by the end of the week, Speakes said.

The meeting comes as the administration faces organizing a large agenda, in particular its self-proclaimed plans for a "fall offensive" designed to plug Reagan's tax reform package and budget priorities, as well as the November summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

President looks over land

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, back at his mountain ranch Monday for some rest and recuperation, began his August vacation by doing some paperwork and then went walking on his property.

Camera crews, using long lenses, spotted Reagan as he strolled across the grounds of his ranch.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan also planned to survey his wooded property by Jeep to identify projects he will work on.

Reagan awoke to a cloudy, chilly morning, had breakfast with the first lady, and "spent the morning on paperwork," said Speakes.

NRC staff proposes TMI fine

KING OF PRUSSIA, Pa. (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Monday its staff has proposed a $64,000 fine against Three Mile Island's operator, alleging that a contractor discriminated against an employee who raised safety concerns.

The NRC staff claims Bechtel Corp., lead contractor in the cleanup of the nuclear power plant's damaged Unit 2 reactor, discriminated against employee Richard D. Parks, who accused the company in 1983 of shortcutting procedures to speed cleanup work.

Parks claimed he was harassed and intimidated after he raised safety concerns about equipment to be used in the cleanup, according to the NRC.

The fine was proposed against GPU Nuclear, operator of the plant near Harrisburg. Under NRC regulations, a nuclear power plant license is held responsible for acts of discrimination committed by its contractors. The company has 30 days to pay the proposed fine or protest its imposition.

Judge orders families paid

BOSTON (AP) — A judge ordered the federal government Monday to pay $1.25 million to the families of three lobstermen who were lost at sea during a fierce storm that the National Weather Service failed to predict.

The award by U.S. District Judge Joseph Tauro came eight months after he ruled the weather service and its parent agency, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, were liable for the deaths for failing to repair a weather buoy for three months.

He said that if the buoy's instruments had been working it might have helped the NWS predict the 1980 storm that, according to trial testimony, produced 60-foot waves and 100 mph winds and caught the fishermen by surprise.

Tape shows Delta pilot not concerned

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The pilot of Delta Flight 191 voiced little concern about a thunderstorm just before the jumbo jet crashed, killing 134 people, according to conversations between air traffic controllers and the crew that were released Monday.

The Federal Aviation Administration released a transcript and tape of conversations that took place before the Delta Air Lines, 1-1011 crashed Aug. 2 in heavy rain during its final approach to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

At one point, controllers directed all pilots to begin using flight instruments to approach the runway instead of relying on visual approaches, a common procedure when visibility is impaired by poor weather.

At 6:05 p.m., 24 minutes before the crash, controllers announced some "variable winds" at the north end of the airport, where the Delta flight was trying to land.

Controllers then told the pilot of Flight 191 to reduce speed.

"Tower Delta 191 heavy out here 50 to 100 feet altitude," the pilot responded.

Weather is being examined as a possible cause of the crash, with special attention to wind shear, a sudden phenomenon in which a strong flow of air rushes toward the ground, then shoots violently outward in all directions.

After telling the pilot of a Learjet to make room for the Delta flight, an air traffic controller said, "Delta go around."

Officials earlier said that order was issued when a controller spotted the plane coming out of the clouds at 50 to 100 feet altitude, and speculated the jet already had hit the ground and bounced once by then.

The controller who issued the command made a "spontaneous judgment," said Earl Wolfe, assistant manager for the air traffic division of the FAA's southwest region.

FAA Southwest Region Director Tex Melagrini said the controllers' experience ranged from a minimum of eight years to more than 20 years.

Norm Scoggins, manager for the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport tower, said the jet was avoiding a storm cell separate from the weather cell that Flight 191 encountered.

The regional FAA will continue working with the National Transportation Safety Board during the investigation that should continue for at least two more months, Melagrini said.

Shuttle engine cutoff traced to bad sensors

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The engine shutdown that almost aborted space shuttle Challenger's launch last month was caused, as suspected, by sensors that broke and falsely reported a fuel pump was overheating, an official reported Monday.

AVC found exactly what we expected," said Dominic Sanchini, executive vice president for production at the Rocketdyne Division of Rockwell International. Rocketdyne is the prime contractor on the shuttle main engines.

All three thermal sensors removed after the shuttle launch were defective, Sanchini said. He said the failures were associated with the manner in which the sensors were heat-treated during production so they could more uniformly measure changes in electrical resistance.

Sanchini said a new production process has greatly improved subsequent sensors and that Rocketdyne has recommended the new ones fly on Discovery when it is launched Aug. 24. He said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is completing its own testing of the improved devices.

Five minutes, 45 seconds after Challenger was launched on July 29, one of its three main engines, No. 1, suddenly quit, nearly three minutes early.

Supremacist pleads guilty

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — The founder of a white supremacist group pleaded guilty Monday to charges of conspiracy and illegal possession of an automatic weapon.

James Ellison of the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord entered the plea before U.S. District Judge Owen Harris. Also pleading guilty to one count of conspiracy was Kerry Noble, a CSA elder, and Gary Richard Stone. Sentencing was scheduled for Sept. 4.

Timothy Wayne Russell, Rudy Loewen and David Giles, all CSA members, also pleaded guilty to the conspiracy charge and were placed on two years' probation.

The conspiracy charge, part of a federal grand jury indictment May 30, said the six conspired to violate federal weapons statutes.

Envoy returns to his office

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Africa's designated ambassador, Herbert Beukes, was back in his office here Monday, two weeks after being recalled to Pretoria in what was seen as a sign of displeasure with the Reagan administration.

The award by U.S. District Judge Joseph Tauro came eight months after he ruled the weather service and its parent agency, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, were liable for the deaths for failing to repair a weather buoy for three months.

He said that if the buoy's instruments had been working it might have helped the NWS predict the 1980 storm that, according to trial testimony, produced 60-foot waves and 100 mph winds and caught the fishermen by surprise.

Meanwhile, in a statement in Santa Barbara, Calif., White House spokesman Larry Speakes called the situation in South Africa "very serious" and said it is "time for bold decisions" as the white-ruled government ponders taking steps away from apartheid.

The Reagan administration recalled the American ambassador to South Africa, Herman W. Nickel, in June in what was also seen as a protest against South African policies.

Nickel also attended the meeting in Vienna, but there apparently is no plan yet for him to return to Pretoria.

Sixteen killed in Beirut border fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Militiamen battled across Beirut's dividing line Monday and gunners on both sides sprayed residential areas with artillery fire.

At least 16 people were reported killed and 75 wounded.

Among the wounded in the duel between Christian and Muslim fighters was Souha Chahin, this year's Miss Lebanon. It was the fiercest combat in weeks in the capital, where Syria has been trying to impose a decade of civil war.

The latest casualties raised the known toll in the fighting since last Saturday to at least 24 dead and 133 wounded — the highest count since June, when 28 people were killed in an overnight battle.

Police said militiamen fired more than 3,500 shells in 24 hours into residential districts on both sides of the Green Line frontier between Christian east Beirut and the Muslim districts in the city's western and southern sectors.

Each side accused the other of shooting first and no one appeared to know what set off the latest round of sectarian bloodletting.

It came at a time of political maneuvering on both sides and demands from Muslim leaders that Lebanon's Christian president, Amin Gemayel, resign because of his failure to institute reforms that would give Moslems an equal share of power.

Moslems formed an alliance late last month at a meeting in Damascus sponsored by Syria, which has become the real source of power in Lebanon. One of the key Moslem demands was equal power with the Christians, who have dominated politics, the army and the judiciary

Kuwait Airways gives up plane

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait Airways has abandoned hope of recovering the jetliner that was hijacked to Iran last December, a newspaper reported Monday.

"All efforts to regain the airliner have fallen short of achieving any positive results," the airline's chairman, Ahmed al-Mishari, was quoted telling the newspaper al-Qabas.

The Airbus was hijacked to Tehran by four Islamic fundamentalists who demanded that Kuwait free 17 terrorists convicted of bombing the U.S. and French embassies in December 1983.

After Kuwait rejected their demand, the hijackers killed 20 American passengers and tortured Kuwaiti passengers.

Councilor gets porridge abuse

OXFORD, England (AP) — A city councilor who suggested that unemployed people eat more porridge said Monday she found abusive slogans painted on her house and porridge smeared on her doorstep.

Nanny Tiffany, who represents Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party on the Oxford city council, said that among the scrawlings was P.L.D. which she said probably stood for Porridge Liberation Organization in this case.

"She called the protests were 'stupid and sad,'" and attributed them to people who misunderstood her remark to a local radio interviewer, which she characterized as a suggestion that the unemployed stretch their benefits by eating cheap, energy-producing food.

Strong quake shakes Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A strong earthquake shook two provinces in northeastern Turkey on Monday, destroying 13 houses and panicking residents, state radio reported.

The quake, which the radio said measured 5 on the Richter scale, struck at 6 a.m. in the provinces of Erzurum and Gumushane. Thirteen houses were reported destroyed and 20 were damaged in the two provinces, the radio said.

There were no reports of injuries, according to the radio.

The Richter scale is a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph. A quake measuring 5 can cause considerable damage.

Heavy gales lash English coast

LONDON (AP) — Heavy gales lashed the eastern coast of England overnight. Two people drowned in boating accidents and five Boy Scouts were trapped in a Yorkshire cave by rising water.

One man drowned when his fishing boat was driven against the harbor wall by waves at Bridlington, near Hull on England's northeast coast. Twelve people on board were rescued, coast-guard officials said. Four were hospitalized.

Another man drowned when he fell from a yacht in the River Crouch in Essex county northeast of London.

Birth control issue splits state, church

By DAVID CHARY
The Associated Press

NAIROBI, Kenya — A church-state debate on the use of birth control to curb Kenya's population growth rate — the highest in the world — takes on added significance this week when Pope John Paul II arrives for a congress devoted to the theme of family.

Kenya's one-party government has become the most active in Africa in promoting family planning. President Daniel Arap Moi, tackling a subject avoided by most of the continent's leaders, has pledged a fight to reduce the 4.1 percent growth rate before overpopulation swamps the economy.

If that growth is unchecked, Kenya's population of almost 20 million would triple in 25 years, Moi says. The growth rate is "the most crucial challenge for us in this decade," and wants it lowered to 3.3 percent within three years.

Opposing the president is Kenya's Roman Catholic Church, backed by Pope John Paul. Kenyan bishops say they stress "natural" birth control such as the rhythm method, but they condemn artificial contraception and say improved production and distribution of food could sustain increasing population.

Should the pope choose to denounce artificial birth control during his visit to Kenya starting Friday, he will have a receptive audience at the 43rd International Eucharistic Congress.

The congress is attracting thousands of Catholics from around the world to Nairobi this week for seminars based on the theme, "The Eucharist and the Christian Family."

Kenya's Catholic church, which claims 4 million followers, finds nationwide support for some of its beliefs. Abortion is illegal and sex education in schools is an unpopular concept.

Moreover, many non-Catholics want large families, which traditionally have signified wealth and prestige in Africa. In 1980, the average Kenyan mother had 8.1 children, and surveys indicated they wanted even more.

Hoping to change such attitudes, the government formed the National Council for Population and Development in December 1982.

Leonard E. Ngugi, council director and a former government economist, said his top priority is to educate Kenyans about birth control.

Because the council has few field workers, it is reuniting other government agencies to help spread information. It also has received cooperation from private family planning and religious groups, including the Catholic church.

"They accept the need to do some family planning," Ngugi said. "We don't mind if the Catholics try something else (natural birth control). If they can make their followers use the method they want. All methods are acceptable to us."

Moi said Aug. 2 that Kenyan women should have no more than four children. He said women with government jobs would not be entitled to maternity leave for their fifth and subsequent children and would be required to pay for those children to attend public schools.

Chinese general, party official dies

PEKING (AP) — Gen. Xiao Hua, a Committee member of the Central Committee Political Consultative Conference, died in Peking on Monday, the official Xinhua News Agency reported.

Xiao became a general in 1955 and served as political commissar of the air forces of the People's Liberation Army and director of the army's general political department.

Solidarity activists file conviction appeal

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Three Solidarity activists convicted of supporting a 15-minute strike that later was canceled have filed appeals with the Polish provincial court, the official Polish news agency PAP reported Monday.

PAP, in a one-sentence story, said lawyers for Adam Michnik, Bogdan Lis and Wladyslaw Frasyniuk filed the appeals "within the proper time."

They did not say when the appeals were filed or where the provincial court in Warsaw would convene to consider them.

On June 14 the Gdansk provincial court sentenced Frasyniuk to 3½ years in prison, Michnik to 3 years and Lis to 2½ years on charges of inciting public unrest and illegal union activity.

Frasyniuk and Lis were senior leaders of the banned Solidarity free trade union movement, and Michnik was a leading Solidarity adviser.

They were charged for issuing an appeal for a 15-minute strike in February to protest government plans to raise food prices. The strike was abandoned when the government altered its food-price increase.

Palestinian negotiator predicts talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — A proposed member of a Palestinian negotiating team said Monday he expected preliminary peace talks with the United States may be held by the end of August.

In Washington, the U.S. State Department announced that Undersecretary of State Richard Murphy would leave soon for the Middle East to promote Arab-Israeli peace talks. The department spokesman did not say when Murphy would leave or what countries he would visit.

Hanna Siniora, editor of the Arabic language newspaper Al-Fajr, told the Foreign Press Association in Israel he believed a solution had been found to overcome U.S. objections to a list of seven Palestinians nominated by King Hussein for the talks.

He said the United States had accepted four of the Palestinians and the other three could serve as advisers.

Siniora, 47, of Jerusalem and Fayed Abu Rahme of the occupied Gaza Strip, were accepted by Israel and the United States because they hold no official positions in the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Siniora said two other Palestinians living in Cairo also were "acceptable to the Americans."

What's what

You can't take a pig to the island of Skye off Scotland. No pigs allowed there.

Sunglasses as we know them — I don't mean those slitted ivory frames the Eskimos carve — have been around for exactly 100 years now.

Paris police say they can spot the American in a streetcorner conversation with a Frenchman. The American's upper body seems a little more relaxed than the Frenchman's. His feet are farther apart usually. He sways from side to side instead of back and forth. His hand movements are more casual, less crisp. And he doesn't stick his lower lip out when he talks the way a Frenchman does.

MATERNITY LEAVE

Q. What's the standard maternity leave for payrollled wives in the Soviet Union?

A. 112 days at full pay plus a year without pay.

Q. What's the oldest team sport?

A. Polo, research reveals. I'd have guessed tug-of-war.

Q. A small boy beside a railroad track asks, "Ain't the little red house makes by, the train is all?" Where is this youngster?

A. In Pennsylvania, no doubt. That's Pennsylvania-Dutch for—the caboose the end of the train?

Perfect temperature for fleas — they come out in swarms then — is said to be 75 degrees F.

Many maybe even most of Canada's lakes still haven't been named.

A weed is any plant that's unwanted, that's all.

Actress confident in wake of surgery to treat breast cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite losing both breasts to cancer four months ago, actress Ann-Jillian says she thinks she still can play nearly any role in show business.

"I want to play a sexy role, I'll play any role," Miss-Jillian, 35, told People magazine in an interview in its Aug. 19 edition.

Miss Jillian, a star of the 1979 Broadway production of "Sugar Babies" and television's "Jennifer Slept Here," said that after she became concerned about her health she got opinions from two doctors, both of whom recommended immediate removal of both breasts.

Before the April 11 surgery, she said, "I would stand in front of the mirror, look at myself and cry."

DUSTIN HOFFMAN
Becoming more spiritual

But after the surgery, she awakened the next morning and saw the Hollywood sign atop the nearby Hollywood Hills. "And since I wasn't flying over it, I knew that I really was alive. I looked down at my chest, and though it was a little flat — but before, I heaved a sigh of relief."

"I cannot understand why someone would not choose life over the loss of a breast... Life is worth it."

Dustin Hoffman worries that he's too content

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Dustin Hoffman should be, a consummately happy man, with a wife he loves, healthy children, a burgeoning career and plenty of money. But, he says, he lives behind a thin layer of fear.

"It's the old too-good-to-be-true business that never leaves me," he said in the September issue of Ladies Home Journal. "A big wave of happiness surges over me, like a shaft of light from heaven, and I hear a voice behind it saying, 'Are you sure there isn't an earthquake coming!'"

Hoffman, 48, says he's becoming more spiritual, although he has always prayed.

FRANK CAPRA
Has undetermined illness

"One of my first memories is lying on top of a pingpong table when I was about 5 years old, looking up at the moon and talking to my friend God," he said. "I still have little dialogues with God, which are kind of game-like and not too reverential. I had one the other day, walking down the street."

Veteran director Capra hospitalized for ailment

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) —

Film director Frank Capra, 88, a three-time Academy Award winner, has been hospitalized at Eisenhower Medical Center for treatment of an undetermined ailment.

"He's being worked up to find out exactly what's going on," nursing supervisor Gert Chaney said Monday. "Right now his condition is fair."

She said Capra was taken to the hospital in his town east of Palm Springs by ambulance Sunday afternoon. "He showed some signs of weakness," Ms. Chaney said, but declined to give any more details.

Capra wrote 26 Mack Sennett comedies before directing or producing more than two dozen films and documentaries. He earned Best Picture Oscars for "It Happened One Night" in 1934 and "The Best Years of Our Lives" in 1946. "A Director's Oscar" for "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" in 1936.

Sting hopes for peace for sake of four children

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock star Sting says he does not think it matters that he has not married the mother of his two oldest children.

"I don't think bastardy is an issue anymore," the singer said in an interview in "Glamour" magazine's September issue. "Maybe I think the world is more liberal than it is. Maybe I'm kidding myself."

Sting has four children — Joe, 9, and Kate, 4, by his former wife Frances Tomelny, and Brigitte Michael, 2, and Jake, 4 months, by the woman with whom he now lives, Trude Styler.

He said his children have given him "a sense of responsibility about what the world's going to be like in 10, 20, 30, 40 years' time."

"I'd like my children to live in a safe and happy world," he said. "I'd like them to fulfill their potential. America's richest single lottery situation in the world that suggests they won't be allowed to — in terms of environment and world peace — I'm very concerned that we have a world, that's all."

Lottery millionaire has old habits that won't die

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Wittkowski still dresses casually, drinks the same brand of beer, plans to travel around with his old buddies, and pals along with his old buddies.

But he has had to take on financial advisers, one of the few things about him that has changed in the year since he won $40 million in the Illinois Lotto Game — North America's richest single lottery.

"I don't need a lot to make me happy," Wittkowski, 39, said in a recent interview.

The jackpot is being doled out in $2 million annual installments over 20 years, split four ways with his brother, sister and their father.

"Most of the money is in safe, insured investments. We're not out to make a killing," Wittkowski told the Chicago Sun-Times.

The money has threatened his privacy, but Wittkowski said he's unflinching by the sudden wealth and is still the same old Mike to friends.

"Nobody treats me any differently," he said.

Writer inspired at truck stop

CORINTH, Miss. (AP) — Farmers and truckers gather at the Phillips Brothers Truck Stop on U.S. 72 to share gossip and eat lunch.

For screenwriter Thomas Hal Phillips, in his customary booth, the truck cafe is a mine for fiction material.

"I feel like this is kind of my place," said Phillips, whose screen credits include "Nashville," during an interview at the truck stop that he and his brother built and where he lives in a motel room. "You have to see this kind of place has atmosphere."

"The people in their overalls, the working people, the truck drivers... that's my background," the 62-year-old writer said. Most of his writing — also including the screenplays "Ode to Billy Joe" and "Thieves Like Us" — have Southern settings and characters.

In the truck stop cafe, animated conversations are spiced with jukebox tunes by country stars whose black-and-white photographs hang on the wall.

Phillips was born near Kossuth in western Alcona County. He owns the old family home there, which some friends have maintained for the past 20 years while he traveled and lived at the truck stop that he built with his brother in 1960.

France. In 1952, he was one of a handful of Southern writers picked by Time magazine as a possible heir to the writing throne of William Faulkner.

He says he has no regrets about leaving the publishing world for the silver screen. "What I've done on TV is 10 times better known than what I've done in novel form," he said.

"Movie rights for 'The Loved and the Unloved,' Phillips' own favorite of his books, were purchased in the late 1950s, and the writer was off to Hollywood.

The deal for that novel fell through, but he soon found work in 1959 wrote the screenplay for "Tanzan's Flight for Life."

Guard at Newton's ranch found dead

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A security guard at entertainer Wayne Newton's ranch was found dead following a truck accident 50 miles northeast of here.

Vegas Metro Police say the body of 29-year-old Stan Zadravsky of Modesto, Nev., was found in his wrecked pickup truck at the bottom of a cliff in Overton, a few miles from Newton's Aramias Arabian Ranch.

Metropolitan Officer Gary Marshall said Zadravsky had been negotiating a turn on a dirt road before his truck plummeted 120 feet to the bottom of the ravine. A coroner's inquest is planned.

He cherishes his reclusive lifestyle there "now and then" interviews. "People rarely ever disturb me," he said. "I'm sure I'm more isolated here than I would be at my own house."

After graduating from Hinds Junior College in 1941 and Mississippi State University two years later, Phillips served in World War II before beginning a writing career. His first novel was "The Bitterweed Path," published in 1950.

Phillips' early career also included stints as a teacher at Southern Methodist University and as a Fulbright Fellowship scholar in Other movies followed, and within a few years Phillips was being sought by Hollywood's bigger names.

"In those days, I had to work out there," he said. "Today, I tell them where I want to work and they say, 'OK.'"

Phillips travels for research or filming but he always returns to the truck stop motel, where his typewriter and library are set up in his room.

"I can look out my room window and almost see the cotton and corn growing. You just get a feel here that you won't get in a writing bungalow on some studio lot," he said.

Woman dies when hit by automobile

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A hit-and-run driver struck and killed a 45-year-old woman riding in a grocery shopping cart, police said Monday.

Mary Jane Toelle was being pushed in the cart by 34-year-old Felix Gomez when the accident occurred at 11:15 p.m. Saturday, police said.

Gerald Cantwell, 68, told police he was riding his motorcycle and narrowly escaped being hit by the driver of a car who ran a traffic light, struck Ms. Toelle and fled.

Authorities said the woman, who had no known address, was killed immediately.

Taxes expected to rise

City looks for items to cut

By ANNETTE GARV
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council heard only one comment — a statement of support for higher taxes — at the annual budget hearing Monday night. "I'm willing to pay more to have services not cut back," said Emerson Sears, a Twin Falls resident who is retired. "It doesn't hurt us to pay more. I'm not a millionaire, but I don't think taxes are that high."

He values good police and fire protection and "a city to live in that looks nice," he said. The proposed budget for 1985-86 includes a property tax increase of about 7.5 percent. That includes the 5 percent general tax increase allowed by the state, and an additional increase to cover the city's rising cost of liability insurance. Tax increases for liability insurance are exempt from the 5 percent ceiling.

Even with the tax increase, the city may see some services cut back.

State sales tax revenues, which have been a traditional source of increased revenue, have decreased instead in recent years, City Manager Tom Courtney said.

City revenue projections show sales tax revenues remaining about the same as this year in the coming year. Liquor taxes are also expected to be about the same as this year — a drop of 35 percent from 1984. Highway user and gas tax revenues are expected to fall by about $21,000.

Overall, the city is still in a good financial position, and will be — barring any drastic downturn in the economy, Courtney said. City revenue estimates are conservative, he said at a work session before the budget hearing.

In the past, conservative local estimates of state revenues have helped the city weather shortfalls late in the budget year. However, he is concerned about changes in the economy since 1986 revenue projections were made a few months ago, he said. He mentioned the closing of Potlatch Corp. in rising cost of liability insurance.

There are a few other potential problem areas in the proposed budget, he said. The city will have to find enough money to keep streets repaired and stretch the budget to cover unusual and unexpected situations, he said.

Finding enough money for streets is always a problem, Courtney said. The proposed budget includes a 2 percent increase. See CITY on Page B2

County expects hike of 2%

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — County taxes will have to increase by 2 percent to support the proposed 1985 Twin Falls County budget of $5.3 million, Commissioner Judy Felton says.

"Because of cuts within the budget and funding resources other than taxes, however, the tax increase was kept at a minimum," Felton said. She blamed increased responsibilities placed on the counties by the Idaho Legislature and no funds to carry them out.

All we could do is to make cuts within the budget, and we did that," she says. Under the law known as the One Percent Initiative, the county can't increase tax levies by more than five percent annually to support county government. The law does exclude levies for the poor and premiums for tort insurance to protect counties against lawsuits.

The projected 2 percent increase includes the unrestricted levies, Felton says. In the case of the indigent fund, the commissioners proposed an $8,000 cut in the size of the fund compared to 1984. The result will be less money for the poor fund, although the levy still will be higher than those restricted by the One Percent Initiative. The poor fund was one of several line items such as the fair, district court and assessor's budgets — to be cut.

There were other casualties. For instance, the wages for county employees were frozen for the upcoming budget year. A second law clerk requested by district judges will not be hired.

There were large increases elsewhere in the budget. One of the largest increases is in the cost of tort insurance. The county anticipates a $110,000 hike over the costs in the current budget. The higher insurance rates offset increased lawsuits against public agencies nationwide, Felton says.

The commissioners also propose a $121,000 increase in a line item that includes "non-controllable" expenses such as utilities and other insurance costs, Felton says. With federal revenues sharing money in danger, the commissioners have no choice.

When Hurlbutt asked Pratt if she wanted to make any statement, she replied, "I think I would like to say that I worked four long hard years" to see the realization of a proper museum and thanked all who had helped make it a reality.

McCard and Clair Ricketts, vice president of the Historical Society, lifted the museum's new sign into place. Peters, McCard and Montgomery then cut the ribbon, and more than 150 people filed through the museum for the first time.

Included in the displays are many pictures of the development of the canal system and the part Shepherd played in its development.

Other plans for the further development of Shepherd's Civic Center is the expansion of the Jerome Memorial Library, which received a matching $51,000 grant this year.

Fire danger may increase as heat does

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Although the potential for additional serious fires remains strong, Sawtooth National Forest officials plan to lift the strict burning restrictions imposed on July 12.

Forest information officer Ed Waldapfel said this does not mean the high danger period is ended, but he explained cooler weather and the fact that fire crews have returned from duty on crucial fires in neighboring districts will allow the highly restrictive measures to be relaxed. Plans are to remove restrictions starting at 1 a.m. Wednesday for this time of year runs at 102,518 acres in that district.

Fire Dispatcher Pat Shanafelt in Boise says the number of fires this year — 123 — is about average, but the fires have been larger and required more time to control.

Lack of moisture and extremely high temperatures for long periods of time and winds have combined to make this an unusually severe fire season, he said.

Among the district's largest fires were three in Twin Falls County. The Clover Crossing fire covered 10,000 acres while several others, including the Shoshone Buhl restrictions are being lifted, Waldapfel said. Public cooperation is still needed because the danger of fire remains at a high level.

The long-range prediction, forests in that we have had only 25 days of date and 116 acres of forest lands involved," Waldapfel said. "We don't want people to know we are not in a position where there is a lot of very dry fuel and more hot weather expected."

He explained that of the total fires in the forest, 13 were caused by lightning and the rest were caused by people. Because fire problems are still in the Sawtooth region, crews totaling about 60 men were sent to other areas to help control critical, persistent fires.

The Shoshone District of the BLM also has had a high fire season so far, but both the Boise and Burley districts, which handle public land areas in Magic Valley areas, have been plagued by about double the average number of fires so far this season.

Dale Chatterton of Shoshone said the BLM fires in the district this season started just after summer number 30 and cover only the storm.

1,700 acres. He said usually about 30,000 acres have been blackened by this time of year. A year ago there were 40 fires-involving at least 5,000 acres.

Chatterton said the storms this summer have come in from Nevada and Oregon, sweeping over the Boise area from the southwest, then turning near Bliss and heading to Burley. He said the local district's good fortune allowed men and equipment from Shoshone to assist in critical situations in other BLM and forest areas.

The Boise BLM District, which includes parts of Twin Falls County, reports 240,000 acres of fire burned public land this season. The five-year average for this time of year runs at 102,518 acres in that district.

Four Merc strikers file for benefits

Manager refuses to rehire employees

By BARBARA NEIWEIT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Four of the seven remaining striking employees of the Merc Department Store and Food Center filed for unemployment compensation Monday after store manager Dick Stephens refused to allow them to return to their jobs Saturday.

Eight grocery clerks and one box-boy walked off their jobs Thursday morning after presenting a list to store management detailing grievances regarding wages, benefits and working conditions. Two of the strikers, both of them under age 18, left the picket line during the weekend.

Striker Sally Brown said Monday three of the picketers have accepted "provisional" work at the Tyrolean Lodge in Ketchum but will continue to picket around their work areas for employees.

Susan Deemer, manager of the Job Service Office in Hailey, confirmed the women had filed for unemployment, but added it could take at least two weeks before a decision will be reached on their eligibility.

"We need to find out whether they quit or were fired," Deemer said. Once Deemer receives a separation statement from the Merc, the Job Service office will apply its findings to the labor dispute.

Chuck Johnson, of the Idaho Employers Council in Boise, said the Merc is a "dus paying member" of their organization. The employers' group is "acquainted with the situation" in Hailey, he said. Johnson declined further comment, saying only that the Idaho Employers Council is the industrial relations department that handles such matters. He said he was not sure if the Merc's decision to rehire the strikers would be a good idea.

Shepherd's civic dream a step closer

By INA HADAM
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Ann Colner, of Twin Falls, helped with the unveiling of a plaque on Saturday dedicating the Shepherd Park to her great grandfather, whose dream of creating a civic center is closer to reality.

In dedicating the park to Shepherd, Chamber of Commerce President Emmett Broilner said the Jerome Civic Center was originally intended to include not only the present park site but the courthouse as well.

Mayor Ralph Peters said the park "has already been dedicated by the thousands who have used it in the past, but didn't know who to thank."

Shepherd came to Idaho in 1913 with a mission — to make the North Side Irrigation Project a profitable venture, Peters said. As the project grew and prospered, Shepherd developed the "dream" of a civic center, he added.

With this thought in mind, the two-block section of land between 1st and 2nd Ave. from North Lincoln to Buchanan St. became city property for the purpose of a civic center.

Shepherd also founded the Rotary Club in Jerome and served as its president the first two years.

One of the Rotary's first projects was to build a city swimming pool in the spot now occupied by the post office parking lot, as one of the first steps in building a civic center for the city.

A similar Rotary project resulted in the construction of Pioneer Hall, which was originally used as a meeting place for the Boy Scouts and was known for many years as "Scout Hall." Pioneer Hall held its grand opening Aug. 9 as the new home for the Jerome Historical Society Museum.

County Commission Chairman Carl Montgomery said the museum represents what "inspiration can mean to a community." To help the Historical Society carry on its work, the commissioners have set aside $150 in next year's budget for this purpose.

Former bankruptcy trustee receives three-year sentence

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Former bankruptcy trustee Teresa Kloos Pratt received the maximum sentence of three years in prison Monday for writing a $5,007 check to a Twin Falls business last fall without funds in her account.

Fifth District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt ordered the sentence to run concurrently with a five-year federal prison sentence Pratt received in February for embezzling $200,000 while she was a trustee for U.S. Bankruptcy Court.

Pratt, who smiled and waved to relatives following the hearing, was whisked away by Twin Falls County Sheriff's deputies for transportation back to Pleasanton Prison, a federal institution, near Dublin, Calif.

While Pratt was in prison, her attorney Bob

Rayburn, Twin Falls, had attempted to submit a guilty plea June 10 on her behalf. She was charged with writing a check Oct. 25 to Gateway Home and RV Center without sufficient funds in her account.

Hurlbutt rejected the proxy plea by Rayburn and ordered Pratt to appear in person after completing some complicated paperwork. The Twin Falls County Prosecutor's office obtained Pratt's temporary release from federal prison authorities.

At the sentencing hearing Monday, Hurlbutt said he had reviewed the presentence report prepared for the federal court and a copy of Pratt's unsuccessful motion for a reduced sentence in the federal case.

Rayburn said the defense position on sentencing already had been stated. He asked that any sentence run simultaneously with the federal sentence. Deputy Prosecutor Beth

Smith made no sentencing recommendation. When Hurlbutt asked Pratt if she wanted to make any statement, she replied, "I think I would like to say that I worked four long hard years" to see the realization of a proper museum and thanked all who had helped make it a reality. McCard and Clair Ricketts, vice president of the Historical Society, lifted the museum's new sign into place. summer, Pratt said a long sentence on the check might impede her progress at the federal institution where she would be to the maximum sentence for the conviction.

Hurlbutt also retained jurisdiction in the case for four months. Pratt was making progress at the federal institution, of which there was no equivalent in the state, the judge said. In the case, he was feeling I will be able to handle, whatever happened, an opportunity to adjust Pratt's sentence if problems arise in the federal program. "It's best she stay where she is," he added.

No restitution was ordered because the "business had been compensated and didn't suffer unduly," Hurlbutt said. Although he could have levied up to a $5,000 fine, Hurlbutt said that would be "harsh under the circumstances."

In letters to Hurlbutt over the course of the

The federal embezzlement charge stemmed from her illegal use of funds earmarked to pay creditors from bankrupt individuals' and businesses in the Magic Valley.

Pratt claimed her criminal activities were the result of a personality change following a head injury in 1981, she claimed. Pratt sent Hurlbutt a copy of a report from a Twin Falls psychiatrist who supported her claim.

Police arrest 2 in bombing

TWIN FALLS — Two additional arrests were reported Monday in connection with the restroom bombing July 19 in Harmon Park in Twin Falls. Police said an adult suspect will appear in court today on a felony charge of accessory to malicious destruction.

The other, a 17-year-old Twin Falls girl, was arrested late Monday and charged with obstructing officers in connection with the investigation of the case.

Cmdr. Gary Corder of the detective division, Twin Falls Department of Public Safety, said William L. Arneson, 21, of Twin Falls, was arrested last week in connection with the case. He is charged with being an accessory in the crime.

A charge of explosives, fashioned into a home-made bomb, went off the night of July 19 in the women's restroom at the park, causing $8,500 in damages. There were no injuries.

Police said Arneson was arrested at his home on Aug. 7, and released on his own recognizance pending arraignment this afternoon in Fifth District magistrate court.

Corder said two original suspects, James Jeffrey Kent and Edgar Robert both of Twin Falls, were arrested earlier last week without bond pending further court action.

The young woman, who had been questioned earlier in the investigation, will be turned over to juvenile authorities for disposition of her case. She may be petitioned into court under the juvenile act, Corder said.

Youth dies in woodcutting accident

BUHL — A woodcutting accident in the remote Pole Creek area, across the Nevada state line in Elko County, claimed the life of a 16-year-old Buhl youth Sunday afternoon.

Lon Hunt Jaynes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jaynes of Buhl, died at about 4:15 p.m. Sunday, according to Elko County Under Sheriff Neil Harris of Elko. Harris said the youth and three of his younger brothers had gone into the Pole Creek area with their grandfather, Mark Jaynes, also of Buhl, Sunday morning to cut firewood.

Harris said the party had felled a tree and Lon Jaynes was cutting it up and trimming branches. The grandfather was cutting down a second tree about 30 feet away. When the second tree fell, it dropped on the boy, causing serious head injury.

Forest personnel from the Pole Creek Station of the Humboldt National Forest administered first aid and called for a helicopter to transport the youth to a hospital in Elko. The youth was pronounced dead at the hospital.

budget allotments $1,085,478 for streets. That is about $40,000 less than last year. However, in some years, the council has allotted extra money as needed for street repairs following harsh winters.

Unexpected situations may be a problem because of a stricter interpretation of labor laws and city plans to employ fewer workers.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled earlier this year that cities must pay employees time and a half for overtime hours rather than giving them time off during less hectic periods.

Now, most employees work only a 40-hour week. In the future there will be even fewer exceptions to that rule, city officials say.

Employees will have to delay or leave undone non-emergency work rather than working extra hours. Courtney said. That could result in less service, he said.

Fire fighters are limited to 53 hours of work per week before qualifying for overtime under federal law, but now work 56 hours, Courtney said.

That would cost the city $45,000 next year, he said. The city is now using a computer to analyze the times when most fires occur and may cut the hours fire fighters work to correspond. More cross-trained officers may also be used for fire duty, Courtney said.

About 10 positions would be eliminated under the proposed budget, Courtney said. Those include four positions in the public safety department. The city has already been using cross-trained police and fire officers to fill those positions.

Most of the other positions would be filled by contracting with private firms.

Monday's public hearing was attended by five other people, besides Sears, city officials and the press.

Librarian Arlan Call, head of the Twin Falls Public Library attended, but did not speak.

At the work session, councilmember Erik Anderson said the budget as proposed would mean cutbacks at the library. The library would be open fewer hours, have fewer new materials and purchase fewer new materials, he said.

Mayor Emery Petersen said "all departments had to make sacrifices." The library would receive a 1.5-percent increase and $35,000 for proposed "improvements" under the proposed budget.

and nearby judicial building. Not all county departments will be cut. The sheriff's budget will grow by $36,000 compared to the 1984 budget. The funds will be used to hire three more jailers.

"We consider the jail our greatest liability and have authorized more personnel there even though wages have been frozen for all county employees," stated the commissioners in a release on the 1985 budget.

The county officials say the additional staff is needed because the jail is inadequately staffed and overcrowded.

The commissioners have not budgeted any money to study the feasibility of building a new jail in light of an unsuccessful bond election last March to raise money for a larger computer and a large-scale insulation project at the courthouse.

the budget for an adult and juvenile probation program in the county. Although the adult program will pay for itself with supervision fees, it must be reflected in the budget, Felton says.

If the new probation program reduces the population in the 78-year-old jail, another anticipated increase in jail staff may be delayed, Felton says.

Similarly, the commissioners officially have removed the budget of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center from the total county budget. The hospital is county-owned, but not tax-supported.

The commissioners have not budgeted any money to study the feasibility of building a new jail in light of an unsuccessful bond election last March to raise money for a larger computer and a large-scale insulation project at the courthouse.

Aryan group member arrested in plot

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — An Aryan Nations member accused of plotting to have a federal witness killed was arrested at a Coeur d'Alene motel on Monday, the FBI said.

Eldon "Bud" Cutler, 59, was arrested on charges relating to obstruction of justice and murder for hire.

Cutler, who has been the security chief at the Aryan Nations' Hayden Lake compound, is accused of contracting for the death of federal witness Thomas Martinez.

William Fallon refused to elaborate, saying only that "we have no evidence Martinez is dead." Investigation of Aryan Nations' activities, said Maurice Ellsworth, U.S. attorney for Idaho.

Martinez, 29, also known as Allen Martinez, led authorities to a Portland, Ore., motel where two members of the Aryan Nations splinter group, The Order, had secluded themselves last Nov. 24, the Rocky Mountain News of Denver and The Spokesman-Review of the Spokane-Wash., have reported. One of the two was arrested after a shootout and the other escaped, only to die in a Whidbey Island, Wash., house fire ignited by FBI flares.

Cutler was scheduled to appear before a federal magistrate in Boise today on charges of retaliation against a witness, tampering with a witness and using interstate commerce facilities in the commission of a murder for hire. The charges carry combined penalties of up to 25 years in prison.

Cutler joined the Aryan Nations, also known as the Church of Jesus Christ Christian, shortly after the white separatist group's inception in 1973. He has been a close associate of Aryan Nations founder Richard Butler.

The arrest of Cutler is the latest in a string of arrests and indictments involving militant white separatists in the West. A massive racketeering indictment files a number of the Order's members to murders and other crimes, including armored-car holdups the FBI says were intended to finance an overthrow of the government.

Murder suspect agrees to return

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — A murder suspect in Idaho and Washington captured here last week after a three-hour siege at a trailer house agreed Monday to return to Washington state to face charges there.

In a brief appearance before District Judge John McCarvel, Gerald R. Pizzuto, 29, signed documents waiving formal extradition proceedings to Washington state.

Authorities in Idaho County have charged Pizzuto and three other people with killing Alberta Herndon, of Marsing, Idaho, and her nephew, Delbert Herndon, of Moorefield, Neb., on July 26 in Idaho.

The victims were found buried 26 miles north of McCall, Idaho, and had been killed by blows to the head, authorities said. Delbert Herndon also had a gunshot wound in his head, they said.

Federal interior council to meet

BOISE (AP) — A council formed to advise the nation's interior secretary will meet in Idaho this month.

The National Public Lands Advisory Council will be in the state Aug. 22-24 to look at desert farming, wilderness study areas and programs to monitor rangeland.

The 21-member board also will discuss the controversy over grazing fees and will tour the Boise Interagency Fire Center, the national hub for the coordination of efforts to fight wildfires.

Public comment concerning the management of public lands will be accepted during the council's formal session the afternoon of Aug. 24 at the Owyhee Plaza hotel in Boise.

Nampa pair's tax sentences reduced

BOISE (AP) — A federal judge has removed the jail terms of a Nampa pair accused of falling to file federal tax returns.

Karen Greenwade's 30-day jail sentence was lifted under the condition she pay her taxes plus fines and court costs. U.S. District Judge Marion Callister also removed Gerald Greenwade's 179-day sentence under the same conditions.

Both have been given probation that will be "served" concurrently with probation imposed earlier.

Panel considers liquor proposal

BOISE (AP) — A proposal to put state liquor stores in private hands is certain to become a major issue, an Idaho State Liquor Dispensary administrator told another panel of legislators on Monday.

"I don't think we can regulate morals. I don't think we should in an era of fear over alcohol consumption, and were a Legislative Council Committee on Alcoholic Beverages. But he said there is no way the proposed switch can be decided purely as a matter of dollars and cents.

"The thing will turn into a moral issue, and all of us sitting here know it," Baugh said.

The committee is examining whether to revamp the state liquor dispensary system. A major aspect of that overhaul could involve turning sales over to private merchants, although a such a proposal presented during this legislative session went nowhere.

Tim Brenner, executive director of the Idaho Retailers' Association, told the committee the free-enterprise system has succeeded in marketing liquor through grocery stores.

Government controls were imposed in an era of fear over alcohol consumption, and were a Legislative Council Committee on Alcoholic Beverages. But he said there is no way the proposed switch can be decided purely as a matter of dollars and cents.

Brennan said he is concerned about problems of excessive alcohol consumption, but he doesn't envision a significant increase in usage if state stores are made private. People whose obsessive in drinking is to become intoxicated already can buy beer and wine at grocery stores throughout the state, he said.

Rep. Pete Black, D-Pocatello, said some of his constituents advocate private liquor sales handled through free-standing liquor stores, but oppose marketing it through grocery stores.

Donations to sick boy stir debate over his family's use of the money

CALDWELL (AP) — The Caldwell mayor and Canyon County commissioners are disturbed about the use of funds donated to a boy who underwent heart transplant surgery six months ago.

After reviewing the use of money donated to Tony Shepard, 16, Mayor Al McCluskey and the commissioner are calling for the donation of such funds. Shepard underwent a heart transplant operation at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center six months ago.

The Shepard family said no medical bills have been paid for the $10,000 that people donated. Instead the money has paid for trips to Utah, where Tony undergoes follow-up medical examinations, and for living expenses incurred during the last six months.

"People who donated believed the money would be used only for medical bills," said Canyon County Commissioner Joyce Chase.

The Shepards also bought a 1977 model car so their son could be driven to the doctor, and spent $36 to buy the boy a bracelet describing his medical condition. Donated money was used to buy Tony a membership in a record club, and the family plans to use more of the fund to fly to Utah this winter. James and Glory Shepard say that financially, they've reached their limit.

"We appreciate every penny that was given," Shepard said. But he added that compared to the cost of dealing with his son's illness, the donated funds were "a spit in the face."

"People don't understand the ongoing costs to keep (Tony) alive," Mrs. Shepard said.

She said the trips to Utah have been nothing like vacations. The family leaves home late on Thursday nights and returns to Caldwell late on Friday nights to avoid motel costs, she said.

After evaluating the Shepards' use of donated money, the Canyon County commissioners and McCluskey have agreed some guidelines are needed for the control of future medical expenses.

"I don't think there should be any funds raised for anyone unless they are placed in a trust to be administered by a trustee and not the family," Commission Chairman Carlos Blodgett said.

Blodgett also has questioned whether county indigency funds should pay for what they call "experimental" surgeries, such as Shepard's transplant operation.

The University of Utah Health Sciences Center filed a claim against the county for an unpaid portion of Shepard's $65,000 hospital bill, but the claim was withdrawn. Blodgett said hospital officials apparently decided to seek the money from insurers.

Meanwhile, young Shepard, who has the heart of a 17-year-old suicide victim, has been trying to lead as normal a life as possible. Doctors told him that without the new heart, the cardiomyopathy which he suffered would kill him within six months.

Tony works takes correspondence courses to make up for missed school work, devotes several hours a week to his job at a fast-food restaurant and assists a pit crew at the Meridian Speedway.

"Next year, I'd like to race cars at Meridian Speedway," he said.

He takes medicine six times a day, and his blood pressure must be monitored closely to help determine whether his body is rejecting the heart. For the rest of his life, Tony must take an anti-rejection drug that presently costs $164 for a 10-day supply, his mother said.

Heat help project will be revived

BOISE (AP) — For the third straight winter, the Salvation Army has agreed to administer Project Share, an energy assistance program that has resulted in nearly 8,500 grants in the last three years.

Idaho Power Co. and the Salvation Army set up the program in October, 1982. It is funded by Idaho Power customers who add $1 to their power-bill payments each month and from contributions by shareholders and employees.

Idaho Power said customers have contributed more than $30,000 since the project started.

School boards agree to talk consolidation

LINROSE (AP) — A leader of a drive to consolidate Franklin County's two school districts has agreed to meet and discuss a consolidation study.

Roxanne Nielsen and her husband Arne Nielsen turned in separate petitions last month to the Preston School District and the West Side School District.

The petition presented to Preston trustees was signed by 182 people and the petition to West Side trustees had 241 signatures.

"We decided to put the petition drive on hold when the chairman of both boards announced they would call a joint meeting to discuss the study within the next two weeks," Mrs. Nielsen said Monday.

She said the petition drive will resume if the board decides against a study or if board members "stall for too long."

Mrs. Nielsen said an election would have to be held before the end of the 1985-86 school year for consolidation to begin by September, 1986.

"My first child starts school next year and I'm concerned about him getting a quality education in the West Side District, which is now facing a $225,000 deficit," she said.

Many high school seniors have been dropped and the elementary school building is in poor shape, she said. Preston School District has about 2,500 students and Mrs. Nielsen said it could easily absorb West Side's 500 students.

One consolidation vote was rejected 15 years ago, but Mrs. Nielsen said the issue never has gone away.

"I think it would eventually help bring the community together because right now everyone knows consolidation is a subject too touchy to bring up in a conversation," she said.

Water researcher gives residents warning on Spirit Lake's condition

SPIRIT LAKE (AP) — A researcher gave Spirit Lake landowners a stern warning that they must act now to save the Northern Idaho lake.

"I'm pointing the finger at you," Raymond Soltiero said Sunday. "Don't use that lake like a trash can."

Soltiero, a water quality expert from Eastern Washington University, gave the landowners a briefing on the results of a year-long study of Spirit Lake which they financed.

The lake is a bathtub, collecting the results of every single one of man's activities from the top of Mount Spokane to the lakeshore, Soltiero said.

And the lake feeds into the aquifer that waters Spokane.

The actions of homeowners and the Spokane-based Inland Empire Paper Co. will have a crucial effect on the lake's life span, he warned.

Logging and septic systems add nutrients like phosphorus and nitrogen to the lake. These nutrients are pure fertilizer to algae and minute plankton that flourish, die and sink to the lake bottom. As they decompose, they use oxygen.

A 1979 study found the oxygen depletion level was at a 100-foot depth. Soltiero found oxygen depletion at 50 feet, a sign that the dying process has accelerated.

Worse yet, he said, the lake has a slow "flushing time." The water volume was totally exchanged only four times a year, Soltiero found. In contrast, Washington's Long Lake, once heavily polluted, turned over six times a month.

Most of the nutrients come from activities on Mount Spokane ranching and logging.

The paper company, which owns about 80 percent of the land that watershed will be increasing its harvesting over the next 20 to 30 years, Soltiero said.

Soltiero urged residents to attempt to get more state money for anti-pollution efforts. He also said the density of homeowners is too high.

He told residents they should not wash pets, boats or themselves in the lake. The soap in mostly nutrients, and it's nearly as bad as flushing the toilet straight into the lake.

Aide claims judge verbally abusive

LEWISTON (AP) — Second District Court Administrative Judge John H. Maynard has denied charges he has been insulting and verbally abusive to an assistant in the Nez Perce County Auditor-Clerk's Office.

Brenda Holmes quit as an aide to Auditor-Clerk Crooks last week, charging that she had been subjected to "threats and insults" from Maynard.

"I have never said one unkind word to Holmes," Maynard said. The judge, who was accused by Mrs. Crooks and Mrs. Holmes of keeping them from doing their jobs by getting the county off the University of Idaho computer system and onto its own, said he was getting a "little tired" of the negative statements.

Mrs. Crooks said Thursday that she and Mrs. Holmes went to the district court office the previous week to get files that are needed to make the computer conversion. They were not given the files, however, and were escorted out of the office by a sheriff's deputy after Mrs. Crooks refused to make her assistant leave.

Maynard said he stopped Mrs. Crooks from making a clerk drop everything she was doing on a busy day to get the files. She is making demands the clerks cannot possibly meet, the judge said.

"We are two people short up here," Maynard said Friday. "Getting those files would not have solved (the computer) problem."

Mrs. Crooks said those files would have allowed her to balance the fund for those items, which she said needs to be done before the changeover.

The confrontation is the latest in a series when Mrs. Crooks hired Mrs. Holmes without the knowledge of the judges. Both women served a day-in-jail for contempt of court for disobeying Maynard's order to stay off the court floor.

Husband hurt by his wife's absurd ideas

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for nearly three years to a very beautiful 24-year-old woman. I am 30.

Our marriage hasn't been perfect, but I considered it better than average, with one exception — Betty has no interest in sex. Once every two or three months is enough for her; then she acts like she's doing me a favor.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

When I try to discuss it with her, she gets angry. Despite our differences, I have given her all my devotion and a very comfortable life with all the material things a woman could want — a lovely home, clothes, jewelry and a car of her own.

Two weeks ago I discovered that Betty had been seeing a married man. I was shocked and hurt. When I confronted her, she admitted it, and told me she'd never been physically attracted to me. She married me because I had money and she wanted to get out of her parents' home. She says she "loves me" — but not in a physical way.

Betty doesn't want a divorce. She says she's strongly attracted to the married man and will not give him up. She insists that she wants to save our marriage, but needs to see her lover twice a week. I find this totally absurd and unacceptable.

Abby, is this marriage worth saving?

— HURTING HUSBAND

DEAR HURTING: You didn't have much of a marriage in the first place. By Betty's own admission, she used you. You may qualify for an annulment.

DEAR ABBY: Everybody writes to you to get something off their chest; well, now it's my turn.

Does anyone realize how difficult it is for a woman with a child to get a date? Once a man finds out a woman has a child, he assumes she wants to get married and stick him with a ready-made family, then boom! it's all over!

Abby, that's not true. There are some women, like myself, who would just like to go out with a member of the opposite sex once in a while. If marriage is in the cards, then it will work out. If not, well, it was fun while it lasted.

So where does a decent woman meet a decent man? Don't suggest church; I don't belong to one.

— LONELY IN LEHIGH, PA.

DEAR LONELY: Here we go again. Decent women meet men where decent people go to entertain themselves, do volunteer work, improve their minds and bodies, enjoy sports, music and theater, and even to worship the Lord, whether you belong to a church or not. They also meet through the thoughtfulness of friends.

DEAR ABBY: Am I touchy, out of line or overly sensitive to resent it when someone asks, "Is that dress new?"

I enjoy being complimented on my clothes, but I bristle when I am asked, "How much did it cost?"

I never know what to say, so I foolishly respond as though I were on the witness stand, having sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

Am I an oddball to feel that these are impudent questions? And how should such questions be handled?

— KICKING MYSELF

DEAR KICKING: You are no oddball. Quit kicking yourself and have the answer ready. To any question that strikes you as being impudent or out of line, haul out the standard response: "Why do you want to know?"

Lewiston blasts Cowboys in state semifinal

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editorState Tournament

POCATELLO — The Twin Falls Cowboys were trailing Lewiston 15-0 after six and one-half innings in the semifinial game of the Idaho State American Legion Baseball Tournament at press time Monday night.

Unless the Cowboys were to rally to win the game, they will face their nemesis — Pocatello — in a loser-out contest tonight that will precede the tournament championship game. The host Rebels, who lost to Lewiston 26-12 in the first round of the tournament, rallied to beat Idaho Falls 8-7 late Sunday night, out-slugged Moscow on Monday and then beat the Boise Gems 11-3 to complete the consolation-bracket and stay alive for a shot at the tournament title.

The issue in the Twin Falls-Lewiston game Monday night was "munch-in doubt" as the Twins jumped on Cowboy starter Kirk Slater for five runs in the first one-third inning. Twin Falls Coach Mike Tremayne brought in Matt Harr to get the Cowboys out of the first but then relieved him to preserve the right-hander's remaining eligibility for today's game with Pocatello.

Through six and one-half innings, Lewiston hit pretty much everything Twin Falls' thin pitching staff served up. The Twins had 14 hits through the first six innings, including a 390-foot homer by Jim Collins in the third inning that staked Lewiston to a 9-0 lead.

In the first seven innings, the Cowboys managed just three hits off Lewiston sighthander Kelly Steiger and got just two runners as far as fourth inning, aided by a couple of second base. Steiger fanned 10 Twin Falls batters in the first seven innings and through one stretch, retired eight Cowboys in a row.

Lewiston started things off against Slater, who has seen limited play this summer, with a single, a walk, a triple, another single and a base on balls. By the time of John Ney's booming double to leftfield, which scored two runs, the Twins were leading 5-0.

Harr struck out two of the three batters he faced to get out of the inning.

Harr pitched the second-inning as well, limiting the Twins to a single run and leaving them with the bases loaded. He was relieved by Tom Crossman, who has pitched very little this year. He gave up three runs in two-thirds of an inning before being lifted for 16-year-old Danny Hite who got the Cowboys out of the inning with a strike out.

The Twins got four runs in the fourth inning, aided by a couple of Twin Falls errors, and then scored twice more in the sixth on two singles and a double.

Collins, Lewiston's cleanup hitter, had four hits in his first five trips to the plate, including a triple to go with his homerun.

The only two Cowboy base runners to reach second were Slater, who singled to start the second and advanced on a bunt, and Hite, who hit a ground-rule double to open the sixth.

Tremayne still has seven innings of pitching eligibility for Harr, who was the victor in Saturday's 21-7 opening-round decision over Coeur d'Alene, and he still has nine innings left for Tommy Prater, who was the starter in Saturday's game.

The winner of today's Pocatello-Twin Falls game, slated for 5 p.m., will have to beat Lewiston twice to win the state tournament — once in the 8 p.m. championship game tonight and again in a second title game that will be played, if necessary, at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

The Cowboys have lost five of their six meetings with Pocatello this season, but three of those — including two in last weekend's southern region A tournament — were by one run.

The Rebels, who played three games in less than 24 hours Sunday and Monday, have gone through all of their starting pitchers and will have to make use of several different hurlers to get through the nine-inning contest against Twin Falls.

The three-hit performance on Monday snapped a strong hitting streak by the Cowboys who had 35 hits in their first two games of the tournament.

CSI signs 6-4 leaping guard

TWIN FALLS — If you like aerial displays, you'll want to check in at the College of Southern Idaho this week. Coach Fred Trenkle announced Tuesday that Joey Johnson, a transfer from Boston Celtic guard Dennis Johnson, has committed to attend CSI.

"It is documented that he has the highest vertical leap ever recorded by a high school player," said Trenkle. "No one else in the country has that statement. CBS had a special on him last winter during halftime of one of the NBA games."

Johnson is 6-4 and a two-year starter at Wilmington-Banning High School in Los Angeles. As a junior he averaged 23 points and 10 rebounds per game and last year had 19 points and 12 rebounds.

"I had talked to Joey and visited the family home last spring," Trenkle said. "At that time his mother told me if they decided to send Joey to junior college, he'd come to CSI. But I hadn't heard from them for the past month and figured he had decided to go to New Mexico. I was sitting in the office and the phone rang and it was Johnson telling me they had decided he would be best for Joey to go to the junior college route to stabilize his grades."

"Joey is a major recruit for us because every major college coach in the country knows about him," Trenkle said.

One thing Trenkle is confident of seeing — and that's an impromptu slam dunk contest early this fall.

Trenkle said "as a senior he had 68 dunks — playing guard — and he hasn't lost a dunk contest ever. He won three BCI dunk contests (in Arizona against the supposed best from across America) — and this year's senior BCI dunk contest. He would that one up by dunking five straight on 10 passes over two 6-10 players."

Blocker (Chris Blocker, transfer from Idaho State) said he wanted to be around if Johnson ever visited because he said "I've never lost a dunk contest, either." Trenkle said with a smile.

Breakers waiting for angel

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Time is another year by the meeting, running out of the financially strapped Portland Breakers as new investors remain elusive to officials of the United States Football League team.

"My shirt's getting lighter around my neck every day," said Vice President Jack Galimiche, who will represent the team at a USFL meeting Aug. 23 in Atlanta.

Galimiche said "Buy we need to be farther along than we are now. We need to show them some tangible source of capital we haven't had."

The league wants the Breakers to put up their offer of credit, to be about $1.1 million, by Sept. 1.

"The Breakers' inability to raise $5 million locally, have been chasing leads throughout the world," President John Raiston has made two trips to Hong Kong. An information packet was mailed Friday to a potential investor in Australia.

"We've also contacted people in mainland China, Japan, Seattle, Los Angeles, the San Francisco Bay Area, Denver and Phoenix," Galimiche said.

Galimiche said one of the Breakers' biggest problems remains the uncertainty of the league.

"It's really a chicken and egg thing," he said. "A lot of people want to see what form the league will take to next season, and we won't know that until after Sept. 1."

If the team doesn't find investors since June, Galimiche said the USFL franchise could be revoked by the league.

"I would imagine that eventually they would do that, yes," Galimiche said. "But I don't know at what point that would happen, and money to operate the team for they've given us no indication, so I doubt that it's imminent."

The Breakers' franchise, valued at $5 million, has been chasing leads throughout the world.

Veterans fall as NFL teams pare toward league roster limit

By The Associated Press

Guard Joe DeLamielleure, a member of the Electric Company team in the NFL during the Atlanta Falcons' second season with the Buffalo Bills, was cut Monday by the National Football League's Cleveland Browns, jeopardizing his streak of 175 consecutive games.

Among the other notables cut Monday were veteran wide receiver Alfred Jackson of the Atlanta Falcons; safety Jeff Nixon of the Bills; and quarterback Wayne Peace, a castoff from the United States Football League who had signed as a free agent with the Cincinnati Bengals.

NFL teams, whose rosters generally number in the 70s and 80s these days, have to be pared to 50 players on Aug. 27 and the 45-man limit on Sept. 7.

DeLamielleure's streak, which he shares with punter Ray Guy of the Los Angeles Raiders, is second among active players only to Dave Dalrymple's 189 in a row for the Raiders. DeLamielleure teamed with linemen Reggie McKenzie, Mike Monter, Dave Foley and Donnie Green and tight end Paul Seymour in 1973 to open the holes for Simpson when he rushed for 2,003 yards, a record since set by Eric Decker, who gained 2,105 for the Los Angeles Rams.

DeLamielleure, 34, a 12-year veteran out of Michigan State, was Buffalo's first-round draft pick in 1973, played seven seasons with the Bills, then was traded to Cleveland for the Browns' second-round pick in 1981 and third-round pick in 1982. He was a six-time Pro Bowl selection (1975-80) and was named by the Hall of Fame as a member of its All-NFL squad of the 1970s.

The Browns also cut free-agent defensive back Terry Minor from Knoxville College, and punter John Vrnsaco from Evansville. And quarterback Paul McDonald was nudged a bit closer to the cut list when Schottenheimer said rookie Bernie Kosar and veteran Gary Danielson, the latter acquired from Detroit, will play in the Browns' exhibition against a visiting Philadelphia.

Jackson was Atlanta's fifth all-time leading receiver and the Falcons' No. 2 receiver last season. He caught 52 passes for 731 yards, second to Stacy Bates' 847 catches for 1,138 yards. Jackson's 193-yard game last year against San Francisco set a club single-game receiving record.

The Falcons also cut wide receiver Tony Tuttle, a four-year veteran who came to Atlanta last season on waivers from Tampa Bay, and free-agent rookie punter Mike Miller. Tuttle the Bills' No. 1 draft choice in 1982, was traded to Tampa Bay before the 1984 season; then was claimed on waivers by Atlanta six weeks later. He had only one reception for 7 yards for the Falcons. "Nixon was one of six players cut by the Browns who picked up free-agent and cut tight end David Mills, linebacker Keith Biggers and running backs Greg Jones and Ron Jackson. The Redskins also formally announced that 36-year-old running back Johniggins had agreed to a contract for 1985 season. Terms of the contract were not officially announced, but The Associated Press learned last week that it is worth $550,000, the highest sum ever paid an NFL running back for a single season.

The Green Bay Packers cut guard Dave Drescher, who failed his physical after undergoing back surgery in the off-season, guard Leotis Harris, tackle Gary Hoffman, linebacker Cliff Lewis, nose tackle George Small, safety Mark Allen, tight end Curt Cole and guard Morris Johnson, the Packers' ninth-round draft pick, and placed halfback Del Rodgers and linebacker Rich Wingo on injured reserve.

The Denver Broncos cut kicker Steve Schroner, quarterback Buddy Faneck, offensive linemen Dan Lynch, Russell Gallion and Mao Mao Niko, wide receiver Steve Price, defensive lineman Jim Joyce, linebacker Tommy Thurston and defensive back Nat Cessar.

The San Francisco 49ers released running back Garrett Moore, defensive back Gardner Williams and defensive end Lloyd Humphrey.

The New England Patriots cut defensive end George Crump, who spent the last two seasons on injured reserve, and five rookie free agents — defensive backs Dave Pereira and Arnold Garron, place-kickers Eric Schubert and Chris Perkins and linebacker Bill Bonitati.

The San Diego Chargers cut defensive backs Bill Kay and Larry Crawford, the latter a star with British Columbia of the CFL, and wide receiver Derek Graham, linebacker Kevin Will and safety Jeff Davis.

The Indianapolis Colts let go defensive end Steve Parker, a starter in 15 games two years ago but sidelined much of last season with an injury, and cornerbacks Carlton Peoples and Gene Underwood and linebacker Jeff Toole.

light end Eason Ransom, a six-year veteran with San Francisco and Houston, Nixon had a knee operation two years ago and sat out the 1983 and 1984 seasons. Among the five free agents dropped by Buffalo was guard Rudy Phillips of North Texas State, who played four seasons with Ottawa of the Canadian Football League and twice was named the CFL's premier lineman.

Peace, a former University of Florida star, was listed as Cincinnati's Ban quarterback behind Ken Anderson and reserves Turk Schonert and Boomer Esiason. He was the only QB who didn't play in Cincinnati's 35-7 loss to Kansas City on Saturday night. He was signed by Cincinnati after vetoing a trade from the Bandits to the Portland Breakers in the USFL.

Also cut by the Bengals were wide receivers Gary Williams and Darrell Smith, linebacker Bernard King and guard Louis Garza.

Twins take two from A's

By The Associated Press

The first two players Ray Miller talked about acquiring when he became manager of the Minnesota Twins were Bert Blyleven and Steve Howe. "I'd like to have had them three weeks ago," Miller said. "They were the first two people I talked to (Twins owner) Howard Fox about."

"You can't pinch a better game than he did," Miller said of Blyleven, who first pitched a complete game for the Twins on Monday night. Home runs by Roy Smalley and Mark Salas supported Blyleven.

And Miller said he also had confidence in Howe, who earned the seal in his 20th game in the eighth inning to break a 4-4 tie. "When I saw him (Howe) in July, he threw so well that I didn't want to say anything for fear people would find out. He proved himself to me," Miller said.

"I know a few people booed when I took him (Howe) out tonight," Miller said of his decision to bring in Ron Davis for the final out. "It was a two-fold thing. I want both of those guys to pick each other up."

Royals 3, Boston 2

Mark Gubicza and Dan Quisenberry combined on a seven-inning shutout as the Kansas City Royals handed Boston a fourth consecutive victory in their 3-2 victory over the Red Sox.

He struck out Jim Rice and went on to earn his 26th save, tops in the American League, despite giving up Rich Gedman's run-scoring double in the eighth.

The Royals' improving their record to 16-7 since the All-Star break, picked up single runs off Al Nipper, 7-8, in the second, fifth and eighth innings.

Rams feel Brock can make transition from Canadian ball to NFL with ease

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — It's still too early to be sure, yet Coach John Robinson of the Los Angeles Rams believes that his team's new-old quarterback is going to work out just fine.

Just about a month ago, Robinson said the Rams made the daring decision to sign Dieter Brock, the all-star quarterback from the Canadian Football League.

Although the strong-armed Brock threw for 34,830 yards and 210 touchdowns during his 11-year CFL career, questions abound as to whether Brock, at age 34, drop habits he picked up during more than a decade on Canada's larger fields? Could he adjust to the smaller end zones and one less defender?

"Could he adjust to the National Football League's various pass defenses, manned by bigger and faster athletes? Could he ignore the rush of bigger and taller men?"

"Most important, could Brock duplicate his success in a vastly superior football league?"

After several months of hard off-season work, four weeks of training camp and one exhibition game,

Robinson is sure the answers can be found.

"He's made progress in every area," Robinson said. "I think he understands what we're doing."

"Every once in a while, the vocabulary still messes him up a little bit, but what we're doing doesn't mess him up at all."

"His years of playing against 12 guys in Canada give him a real ability to see the secondary and send the coverage."

During drills at camp, the 6-foot-1, 185-pound Brock has not been troubled by the Rams' big defensive linemen.

"He's a courageous guy," Robinson said. "He has an ability, it seems to me, to stand in the pocket and even when he's about to be hit, look downfield and find a receiver."

"Dieter's no scumbler, but his ability to escape, to shuffle from trouble, is quite good. He does a very good job of staying alive."

"At various times during the past few weeks, the players have made it clear they're impressed by Brock's strong, accurate arm."

"I think our players know he's good," Robinson said. "Anybody who can't see him throw a pass goes 'ooh.'"

In Brock's first exhibition game Saturday night against the Houston Oilers, he completed just five of 12 passes for 49 yards, but both coaches were impressed.

"I thought he did a good job," said Robinson. "He did a couple of things I really liked."

"His statistics were not outstanding, but they'll get better when our passing attack gets a little more efficient. It's still early and we have a long way to go."

"I think he did an effective job," said Houston Coach Hugh Campbell, who saw Brock while he was a coach for Edmonton in the CFL. "He'll have no problem adjusting to the NFL."

Although he didn't do anything extra exciting, Brock was encouraged by his NFL debut.

"Overall, I knew what was going on," he said. "I made a couple of good passes. I just have to be more consistent."

Brock, who has bought a home in nearby Villa Park for his wife and three children, is enjoying his first NFL camp.

"It's exciting, sure," said the soft-spoken native of Gadsden, Alabama. "It's new. I'm working with new people and a new offense."

"I think it's coming along really well. We've put in a lot of things and I'm catching on."

The toughest adjustment, Brock said, is just getting used to a new offense.

"We've got more situation offenses than we did in Canada," he said, "but as far as our passing game goes, I feel pretty comfortable."

"So far, I feel pretty comfortable reading defenses. It's not much different."

Of course, the hard part remains: producing on the field in a regular season game with millions of potentially ultra-critical fans watching.

"I'm aware of the situation," Brock said. "I know that at my age I don't have a lot of years to develop. I have to produce now."

"I've been so busy learning, I haven't had time to worry about those things."

Nets appear ready to announce coach

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Nets announced Monday they have once again ended a search for a successor to Stan Albeck, and apparently will name Dave Wohl as head coach of the team where he ended his playing career eight years ago.

Sportsman Jim Lamparello said the new coach would be announced at a Tuesday news conference, but "I can't tell you who it is."

Sources close to the National Basketball Association teams who have spent the last three seasons as an assistant coach with the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Nets once before called a news conference to name a replacement for Albeck, who left the team after last season to become the head coach of the Chicago Bulls.

Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino was offered the head coaching job in June, but he turned down the Nets' lucrative offer just hours before a news conference at which he was to be introduced.

Lewis Schaffel, the Nets' executive vice president, was in a meeting and did not return a telephone call to comment on the selection of the coach.

Wohl, 47, coached the Nets in all phases of the game during the 1979-80 season. He coached the Philadelphia Fox of the Women's Basketball League in the fall of 1979. The club folded a few months later.

Wohl spent the next three seasons as an assistant coach with the Milwaukee Bucks before moving on to Los Angeles, where he was in charge of scouting and video work for the Lakers.

Wohl made it past the first round of postseason action only once. That was in the 1982-83 season when Albeck guided the club to a stunning first-round playoff victory over the defending NBA champion Philadelphia 76ers.

The team posted a disappointing 42-40 record last season as injuries constantly forced Albeck to juggle his lineups. He left after the season, saying Chicago offered him a chance to be closer to his parents, who live in a suburb of that city.

Wohl, a New York City native who grew up in East Brunswick in central New Jersey, was an All-Ivy League selection during his last two seasons at the University of Pennsylvania. The guard led the Quakers to a combined 53-3 record over his last three seasons. Two NCAA tournament appearances during his junior and senior seasons.

A third-round draft choice of the 76ers in 1971, Wohl also played for Portland, Buffalo and Houston just hours before a news conference at which he was to be introduced.

The Nets gave Wohl a job as an assistant coach under Kevin Loughery during the 1978-79 season and he became the head coach and general manager of the Philadelphia Fox of the Women's Basketball League in the fall of 1979. The club folded a few months later.

Wohl spent the next three seasons as an assistant coach with the Milwaukee Bucks before moving on to Los Angeles, where he was in charge of scouting and video work for the Lakers.

USC ready to reclaim national esteem

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Coach Tom Tolner believes some important points were made when his struggling University of Southern California football team turned itself around last season.

"We reestablished our credibility in 1984 and proved we were capable of winning football games," Tolner said. "We were able to accomplish some things that hadn't been accomplished in a while."

"We want to continue to improve, be one notch better. We haven't arrived yet, but we're going in the right direction."

Tolner is preparing for his third year as Trojan coach. His first year was a disaster — the school's 4-6-1 record was its worst in 22 years. His second year was much better.

Not only did the Trojans rebound to capture the Pac-10 Conference championship last fall, they stunned favored Ohio State 20-17 in the Rose Bowl Game on New Year's Day to finish 9-3.

"I'm anticipating being better because we have a lot of returning players."

Among those returning is quarterback Sean Salisbury, a fifth-year senior who tore cartilage in his right knee in the second game of 1984 and missed the rest of the season.

"At this point, he is the starter," Tolner said of Salisbury. "A final decision will be made somewhere prior to the start of the season."

"The reason for the lack of an official statement that Sean will start is that when a young man comes off a season injury and really hasn't had the opportunity to perform at 100 percent, we have to observe where he is."

Although Salisbury needs only 52 completions to become Southern Cal's all-time passing leader, he's had a rather frustrating career.

"He's had some outstanding games, he's had games where he's been very inconsistent," Tolner said. "The biggest hardship has been for him to overcome two fairly serious knee operations."

Sophomore Kevin McLean, who played briefly last season, and red-shirt freshman Rodney Peete are Salisbury's backups.

The Trojans are rich in running backs and offensive linemen. Led by senior Fred Crutcher, who gained 1,153 yards last year, the team's top five rushers from 1984 return. In addition, incoming freshman Aaron Emanuel was considered one of the best prep running backs in the country last year.

Four of five starters in the offensive line are also back — center Tom Cox, guards Jeff Bregel and Tom Fallock and tackle James J. Fitzpatrick. Tolner called the offensive line the team's main strength.

The top two pass receivers from last year — split end Hank Norman and tight end Bob Cormier, are also on hand.

The Trojans will also have a new place-kicker — Don Shafer is the top candidate to succeed Steve Jordan, who was graduated.

Jackson climbs to eighth on HR list

SEATTLE (AP) — Reggie Jackson moved into a tie with Ted Williams and Willie McCovey for the number eight spot on the all-time home run list when he hit his 521st career homer Monday night.

Jackson's 18th home run of this season came in the first inning of the first game of a doubleheader between Jackson's California Angels and the Seattle Mariners.

Jackson went to left field on a 1-0 pitch from Seattle's Frank Willis for his 18th homer of the season, a two-run blow. He had not homered since July 30 and last had an RBI on July 31.

Jackson, 39 years old, has played in 18 major-league seasons.

His 521st was Jackson's 96th homer with the Angels. He hit 254 with the Kansas City and Oakland A's, 27 with the Baltimore Orioles and 144 with the New York Yankees. Jimmy Fox, with 534 home runs, and Mickey Mantle, with 536, are the next targets for Jackson.

Jackson's 521st home run came on his 8,957th career at-bat. Williams hit 521 in 7,706 at-bats, and McCovey in 8,197.

The only players in baseball history with more home runs than Jackson are Hank Aaron, Babe Ruth, Willie Mays, Frank Robinson, Harmon Killebrew, Mantle and Fox.

Jackson has led the American League in home runs or tied for the lead four times, in 1973, 1975, 1980 and 1982.

His highest season total came in 1969, when he hit 47 home runs and finished third to Harmon Killebrew and Frank Howard, who hit 49 and 48 respectively.

Aerial punch is back

BYU must replace offensive linemen

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Brigham Young's defending national champion football team this season will still pack the one-two punch of quarterback Robbie Bosco and wide receiver Glen Kozlowski, but the offensive line has been gutted by graduation.

Last year, the coaching staff had to find replacements for the departed players, like quarterback Steve Young, who were lost to graduation.

This year, the big names are returning, and Coach LaVell Edwards has to find replacements for the relatively little-known players who were among the squad's mainstays last season.

"At this point, we're not as good now as at the end of last year," said Edwards, whose team won its first national title with a 13-0 record last season. "We're at about the same point as we were at the end of last year."

The Cougars, the only undefeated major college football team last year, were ranked 25th in the Associated Press preseason poll, but catapulted to 13th after a 20-14 win over Pittsburgh.

From there, BYU edged upward in the weekly polls and finally achieved the No. 1 ranking in the Nov. 17 vote of sports writers and broadcasters.

Only senior offensive tackle Dave Wright returns to this year's offensive line.

The line kept Bosco away from defenders' grasps. He led the Western Athletic Conference in passing, throwing for 3,875 yards and 37 touchdowns, and also rushed for 53 yards to lead the WAC and the nation in total offense with 3,922 yards.

His favorite receiver was Kozlowski, who had 67 catches for 878 yards and 11 touchdowns last year.

Both Bosco and Kozlowski are seniors, and Edwards is confident they will have time to maintain their aerial attack. He said the new starters will be ready Aug. 29 when the Cougars open the college football season against Boston College in the Kickoff Classic at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

Bosco also said he is confident the line will give him time to throw.

"I kind of feel it may take a couple of games to really get a lot of confidence," he said. "Just from the beginning of the season, I think they'll do a great job for us."

That line will be tested early. After BC, the Cougars return home to play UCLA and Washington.

The Huskies had one loss in 12 games last year, and finished second in the AP poll. Critics said the Cougars played an easier schedule than Washington and, therefore, the Huskies should have won the nationally.

Edwards, however, isn't dwelling on last season's goal-to-go-to-repeat-as-national-champion this season.

"We take them one at a time," Edwards said. "Hopefully, we can continue to make the program get better each week and stay healthy. The important thing is to improve as a football team."

The Cougars, who hold the nation's longest college football winning streak at 24 games, do have their eye on one title this season: the WAC championship, a crown BYU has either won or tied for nine straight years.

BYU has been the WAC representative in all seven post-season Holiday Bowl games, but the Cougars will be absent this year.

One reason is that the game will be played on a Sunday and BYU, operated by the Mormon Church, doesn't play on Sundays.

Also, Edwards said, the WAC champion won't win an automatic berth in this year's Holiday Bowl, freeing BYU to consider other bowls.

Edwards admits a Jan. 1 bowl invitation is in the back of his mind.

This season, the team has to improve its play, healthy. With a preconference schedule against some of the nation's more physical teams, Edwards said injuries are a concern.

BYU also has the longest schedule in major college football. The game in New Jersey and a conference game in Hawaii don't count toward the NCAA's 11-game regular-season limit. That lengthy schedule could make for a long season, especially if the team has a lot of injuries, Edwards said.

He said the pressure on the players is no different this year than last, despite the winning streak and a national title to defend. Bosco agrees.

"It's kind of good in a couple of ways," Bosco said. "It gives us something to shoot for every week. It's not a big deal. If we lose a game, it's not going to ruin our season."

German race driver dies

TORONTO (AP) — Auto racer Manfred Winkelhock of West Germany died Monday of injuries suffered Sunday when the car he was driving in the Budweiser GT endurance race at Mosport Park, Ontario, slammed into a concrete barrier, a spokesman for Sunnybrook Medical Center announced.

Winkelhock, 30, suffered "massive head injuries" from the accident and died at 2:30 p.m. EDT, the spokesman said, adding his wife and parents were at the hospital at the time he was freed.

Winkelhock was injured when the Canadian Fire-sponsored Kremer Porsche 96C he was driving in the 1,000-kilometer World Endurance Championship race slammed into a concrete barrier about two hours into the six-hour race.

He was trapped, unconscious, in the car for 40 minutes before he could be freed and flown to the hospital where he underwent emergency surgery.

Heat killed young cager

ELBERTON, Ga. (AP) — An autopsy Monday showed that heat stroke apparently caused the death of Eric Chambers, a Mercer University basketball player, who collapsed while playing a pickup game at a picnic Sunday.

Elbert County Coroner Danny Bessinger said that, pending the completion of laboratory tests, he had ruled heat stroke the cause of death for Chambers, a junior forward for Mercer.

"Everybody needs to be careful now, especially basketball players," Bessinger said, noting Sunday's high temperature of 95 degrees in Elberton "doesn't seem that hot."

Chambers collapsed while playing basketball with friends on a picnic outing in Elberton. "The players who were with him said they were shooting, and he just sat down like he was weak and then fell over backwards," Bessinger said.

Chambers was on the outdoor basketball court probably were close to 100 degrees, the coroner said.

Bengal safety sentenced

CINCINNATI (AP) — Strong safety Bobby Kemp of the Cincinnati Bengals of the National Football League was sentenced Monday to three days in the Hamilton County Jailhouse and fined $1,000 for driving under the influence of alcohol and resisting arrest.

Kemp, 26, also was placed on probation for a year and ordered to perform 40 hours of community service — coaching a football team at a juvenile detention center.

Judge Sylvia Hendon of Hamilton County Municipal Court ordered Kemp to begin serving his workhouse sentence Monday.

Police charged Kemp after he led police officers on a July 24 nighttime car chase, then allegedly resisted arrest and scuffled with officers in Cincinnati, driving one policeman. Officers said Kemp had been kicking while his headlights on his leased Pontiac were off.

Xavier hires Irish aide

CINCINNATI (AP) — Xavier University officials announced Monday they have hired Pete Gillen, an assistant basketball coach for five years at Notre Dame, as Xavier's head basketball coach.

Gillen succeeds Bob Staak, who resigned Aug. 3 after six seasons as Xavier coach to become head basketball coach at Wake Forest. Gillen had been at Notre Dame since 1980.

Details of Gillen's contract with Xavier, a Jesuit university, weren't immediately disclosed. He was one of at least four candidates reportedly interviewed by the Xavier search committee which had examined the coaching candidates.

Moore rejoins Dolphins

MIAMI (AP) — Wide receiver Nat Moore, who had announced last year that 1984 would be his final season, has changed his mind and agreed to terms with the Miami Dolphins to return for 1985, the National Football League team announced Monday.

Dolphins spokesman Chip Namias said Moore hadn't signed the contract yet or taken part in practice, but he was expected to join the team soon.

Mattingly honored

NEW YORK (AP) — First baseman Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees, the defending American League batting champion, was named the AL Player of the Week Monday after posting a .542 batting average and 1,042 slugging average during Aug. 5-11.

Mattingly had 13 hits in 24 at-bats for 25 total bases. His six games included three doubles, three home runs, five runs batted in and 11 runs scored. His on-base percentage was .621.

NL cites Strawberry

NEW YORK (AP) — Outfielder Darryl Strawberry of the New York Mets, who batted .529 with four home runs, has been named National League Player of the Week for the one-week period ending Sunday, the league said.

Strawberry was 9-for-17, scored seven runs and drove in eight during the week. Also nominated were pitcher Jerry Reuss of Los Angeles, outfielder Willie McGee of St. Louis and catcher Ozzie Virgil of Philadelphia.

Filer grid drills begin

FILER — The Filer Wildcat varsity football squad will start practice Wednesday, Aug. 14, running from 7 to 9 p.m. at the high school field, coach Wade Quessel has announced.

Juniors and seniors may pick up equipment from 5 to 7 p.m. before practice Wednesday, while freshmen and sophomores may do the same Thursday.

Bruins issue harrier call

TWIN FALLS — High school boys and girls interested in trying out for the Twin Falls cross country team should report to the gymnasium at 9 a.m. Monday, announces Coach Jerry Kleinkopf.

Kleinkopf said boys and girls in grades nine through 12 are eligible for varsity competition.

49ers embarrassed

ROCKLIN, Calif. (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers' 1985 media guide, just off the presses, refers to Coach Bill Walsh's "vastly futile mind."

A second, revised edition is planned. "It read 'fertile mind' when it went to the printers," the 49ers' public relations director, Jerry Walker, said Monday.

Walsh has coached the National Football League team to two Super Bowl titles, last season and in 1981.

Bowa given release

CHICAGO (AP) — Larry Bowa, who has the career highest fielding percentage for a shortstop in major-league history, was put on waivers by the Chicago Cubs on Monday for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

The Cubs made the move shortly after breaking a seven-game losing streak with an 8-7 victory over Montreal. Bowa entered the game as a pinch runner in the eighth inning and played the ninth at shortstop.

Williams claims frame as Tulane cage trial begins

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Former Tulane University basketball player John "Hot Rod" Williams was a victim of a frameup by fellow team members jealous of his ability and desperate for money to pay for their drug habits, Chicago attorney Michael Green said Monday.

Green is representing Williams, who is accused of two counts of fixing Tulane games against Memphis State and Southern Mississippi and three counts of conspiring to fix basketball games.

Among those scheduled to testify against Williams are three former teammates, Clyde Eads and Jon Johnson, testifying under grants of immunity, and Bobby Thompson, testifying as part of plea bargain.

Part of the prosecution's evidence against Williams is a videotaped statement taken on the night he was arrested.

Green said, "You will hear him say without a lawyer, just a kid from Sorrento, 'I didn't do nothing wrong.'"

When Williams mentions taking money, he's talking about money given to him in violation of NCAA regulations and not bribes from fixers, Green said.

In addition, videotapes of the Memphis State and Southern Mississippi games are expected to be introduced in evidence.

"We have three basketball coaches who have looked at every frame of these films with a very good mind and they all agree on something wrong," Green said.

"You will hear they viewed the films, how they looked at the films, how they're going to say, 'This kid didn't do anything wrong.'"

In the state's opening arguments, Assistant District Attorney Bruce Whittaker said every step of the conspiracy and bribery scheme was carried out with Williams' full knowledge "not because they had to, but because they wanted to."

"You listen to all the evidence and you think you're going to see something wrong," Whittaker said.

As its first witness, the prosecution called FBI agent William L. Williams, 23, who served up at the Holmes, assigned for the past 10 years to the gambling unit in Washington, D.C.

In earlier testimony Monday on winning by fewer points than book the opening day of the trial, Thompson outlined the plans he and others made to fix three 1985 college basketball games.

Thompson told the six-member jury in the packed courtroom that he was contacted by Williams, David Domingue, Clyde Eads and John Johnson about fixing the Southern Mississippi game, the Virginia Tech game, and the Memphis State game during what proved to be the final season for Tulane's men's basketball program.

The plot to fix the Virginia Tech game was never carried out, he said. But he and the other four did work to shave points against Southern Mississippi and Memphis State.

It was all the idea of Tulane student Gary Kranz. Thompson said, Thompson said he gathered the four other players and they all met at Kranz's off-campus apartment.

"He told the five players there that he could get us $3,500 by just staying under the certain number of the spread," Thompson testified.

Thompson said Williams agreed that it could be done.

At a later meeting in Williams' dormitory room, Thompson said, "We discussed what needed to be done to stay within that number. I told him (Williams) that we had to be 100 percent — that we couldn't have mess ups."

"He said something to the effect that it would be no problem."

Thompson's testimony came after the state called him to show that they had enough evidence to go forward with a case against Williams for conspiracy, Williams faces three counts of conspiracy and two counts of sports bribery — five offenses that could net him a total of 17 years in jail and thousands of dollars in fines.

In the other trial action, state Judge Alvin Green turned down a motion for a mistrial on the basis that potential black jurors were excluded from the six-member jury panel selected earlier in the day.

Williams' lawyer, Michael Green of Chicago, pointed out that the state used all six of its pre-employment challenges to dismiss six prospective black jurors.

Assistant District Attorney Bruce Whittaker pointed out, "There is an equal racial ratio on the jury. The state is satisfied with the jury."

The three blacks and three whites were chosen quickly Monday during the first four hours of the trial. A black man was chosen as the alternate.

Williams, 23, showed up at the courthouse with his mother. They spoke to the gambling unit in Washington, D.C.

Shaving points involves either winning by fewer points than book or losing by more.

"How many of you all have either made to fix three 1985 college basketball games, television about this case?" Assistant District Attorney Jim Williams asked the jury.

Williams said he was contacted by Williams, David Domingue, Clyde Eads and John Johnson about fixing the Southern Mississippi game, the Virginia Tech game, and the Memphis State game during what proved to be the final season for Tulane's men's basketball program.

JOHN WILLIAMS — Done nothing wrong means you're going to have to forget about everything you have read about this case," he said.

About the only drama came when the city's civil service director, John A. Belsom, was seated as the final member of the jury.

Williams' three lawyers asked twice for his dismissal, saying that attorney Alan Tusa is now handling two cases before the board and Joel P. Loeffelholz has appeared before Belsom several times in the past.

Questioned by lead defense lawyer Mike Green of Chicago, Belsom said he had not always seen Williams with Loeffelholz and that the lawyer had at times raised his voice at him.

But he said his dealings with the two defense lawyers would have no bearing on his ability to consider the case impartially.

Both sides were out of peremptory challenges so Green had no choice but to accept him.

"Keep a fair mind. Give us a fair trial," he implored Belsom.

Assistant District Attorney Jim Williams asked throughout if the potential jurors understood the process of plea bargaining and granting of immunity and if they were comfortable with the idea of so-called victimless crimes.

He also asked if they would be able to give a verdict despite sympathy for the defendant and whether they were not always seen gambling.

Defense attorneys asked members of the jury pool if they'd be able to take the word of an admitted drug dealer, whether they knew the difference between NCAA violations and criminal acts, and whether they would be inclined to take the word of somebody from Atlanta, Boca Raton, Fla., over the word of someone from Little Sorrento, La.

Cedeno says he wants to be traded

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cincinnati Reds' outfielder Cesar Cedeno, benched after a slump earlier this season, says he wants to be traded because he is tired of not being played.

Reds' General Manager Bill Bergesch said Cedeno hasn't told Bergesch of his desire to be traded.

"He hasn't said a word to me, and neither has anyone else — no one," Bergesch said.

Cedeno, 34, who began the season as the Reds' starting left fielder, said he asked Cincinnati's player-manager Pete Rose to trade him.

"I've never been buried like this in my life," Cedeno said before the Reds departed Los Angeles for a four-game series beginning Monday in San Diego. "I asked him to go somewhere else. He told me I could help the team win. How, by sitting?"

I admit, I went down in May, but I haven't played two games since." Cedeno ended the month of May batting .238. He has had 17 starts since June 1.

Cedeno played all or parts of 12 seasons with the Houston Astros before the Reds acquired him in a December 1981 trade for third baseman Ray Knight, now with the New York Mets.

Chance at Super Bowl keeps Payton's enthusiasm rolling

PLATTEVILLE, Wis. (AP) — He is the leading rusher in National Football League history, an automatic Hall of Famer and one of the most versatile and exciting football players of all time.

What's left for Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears?

"The Super Bowl, that's what we're here for," said Payton, 31, who has played on three playoff teams but never reached the NFL's championship game in his 10 seasons.

Not that it's Payton's fault: "Payton is the leading rusher in NFL history, with 13,309 yards, 997 ahead of second-place Jim Brown. He also holds the NFL record of 3,047 rushing attempts.

—He set the single-game record of 275 yards in 1977.

—His 17,304 career combined yards also are a record, leading Brown by 1,845.

—His 63 100-yard games, including nine last year, broke Brown's record of 58. He is also tied for a record with Franco Harris for eight 1,000-yard seasons.

The durable Payton has started 124 straight games, and says he doesn't feel his ability slipping. He still is one of the most ferociously fit of the Bears, bench-pressing 390 pounds, although he carries just 202 pounds on his 5-foot-11 frame.

"I go by performance and it's too early to tell," he said in training camp.

Although Payton has been working out only once a day, and did not play in the first pre-season game, Coach Mike Ditka snorted and said, "I doubt it," when asked in Payton would play less this season.

Who can blame him. Payton, who joined the Bears out of Jackson State as a first-round draft choice in 1975, also led the team last season with 11 rushing touchdowns, 45 pass completions for 368 yards, and he completed 3 of 8 passes for 47 yards and two touchdowns.

He even played a bit of quarterback, because of injuries to others, and was selected to his seventh Pro Bowl.

Payton was clearly among the most devastated Bears when the team was routed in the National Football Conference championship game by San Francisco, but he said he bounced back quickly.

"If I base my whole career on that, I should have gotten out of this game a long time ago," Payton said.

"I have to focus on things ahead of me. That game is in the past. We've got a new year and a new schedule ahead of us."

"My goal is to do better than last year. It doesn't matter in yardage, but in not making as many mistakes, not fumbling as much, catching and blocking better."

The Bears hope quarterback Jim McMahon will be healthy all season, so they can pass more and take some possibility of that happening this year.

"That will probably make it easier on me," Payton said. "Mike Ditka is people, you put your foot in your receivers and tight ends into the passing game more."

The Bears made the playoffs as a wild card team in 1977 and 1979, and then followed with poor seasons.

"When you get into a situation where you compare years and years, you compare years and years," Payton said. "This is a new year with new people, new attitudes and a new outlook. What we have done in the past is just that."

Selmon to try time as cure for back

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Tampa Bay Buccaneers defensive end Lee Roy Selmon said Monday that he will follow a non-surgical rehabilitation program to try to correct a back injury that has cast a shadow over his future in the National Football League.

Selmon, who was placed on injured reserve last month, will miss the entire 1985 season while pursuing treatment that will likely include chiropractic manipulation, traction and exercise.

"I'm not able to say exactly what I plan to do," the 29-year-old, six-time Pro Bowl selection said, adding that he has considered "all types of procedures" to treat the herniated disc in his back.

"I still realize surgery is an alternative," Selmon added. "But it is a last alternative."

The Bucs, who had recommended microsurgery, released a statement saying Selmon had decided to pursue a "conservative approach" toward rehabilitation.

Microsurgery is similar to arthroscopic knee surgery, and has an optimal recovery time of eight to 10 weeks.

"With the decision against surgery, the Buccaneers will plan the 1985 season without Lee Roy," the statement said. "Should he return, it would be an unexpected bonus."

Bucs owner Hugh Culverhouse accompanied Selmon to a news conference and said the club's first-ever draft choice in 1976 "has earned the right to take his time... and decide what treatment is best for him."

"I want Lee Roy to have the comfort and peace of mind to pursue every alternative without pressure to do anything," Culverhouse said, adding that Selmon will draw his full salary in 1985. "I've encouraged him to take this extra time."

Selmon said he's optimistic about the prospect of continuing his career after rehabilitation — hopefully next season. He added, however, that he will not return if he doesn't feel 100 percent.

"They (Bucs) understand and I understand that you have to be healthy to play professional football," he said.

"I would like to thank the Buccaneers and Mr. Culverhouse for their understanding of the situation and the way I feel about it," Selmon added.

He later explained that one reason he is reluctant to undergo surgery was an unpleasant experience he had during a knee operation in 1978.

The loss of Selmon, the NFL's Defensive Player of the Year in 1979, creates a void in a Tampa Bay defense that ranked 20th in the league in 1984.

TWIN FALLS — High school boys and girls interested in trying out for the Twin Falls cross country team should report to the gymnasium at 9 a.m. today, announces Coach Jerry Kleinkopf. Kleinkopf said boys and girls in grades nine through 12 are eligible for varsity competition.

49ers embarrassed

ROCKLIN, Calif. (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers' Bill Walsh, just off the presses, refers to Coach Bill Walsh's "vastly futile mind." "I read 'fertile mind' when it went to the printers," the 49ers' public relations director, Jerry Walker, said Monday. Walsh has coached the National Football League team to two Super Bowl titles, last season and in 1981. A second, revised edition is planned.

Bowa given release

CHICAGO (AP) — Larry Bowa, who has the career highest fielding percentage for a shortstop in major-league history, was put on waivers by the Chicago Cubs on Monday for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release. The Cubs made the move shortly after breaking a seven-game losing streak with an 8-7 victory over Montreal. Bowa entered the game as a pinch runner in the eighth inning and played the ninth at shortstop.

Williams claims frame as Tulane cage trial begins

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Former Tulane University basketball player John "Hot Rod" Williams was the victim of a frameup by fellow team members jealous of his ability and desperate for money to pay for their drug habits, Chicago attorney Michael Green said Monday. Green is representing Williams, who is accused of two counts of fixing Tulane games against Mississippi State and Southern Mississippi and three counts of conspiring to fix basketball games. Those games scheduled to testify against Williams are three former teammates, Clyde Eads and Jon Johnson, testifying under grants of immunity, and Bobby Thompson, testifying as part of plea bargain. Part of the prosecution's evidence against Williams is a videotaped statement taken on the night he was arrested. Green said, "You will hear him say within an hour of his arrest and without a lawyer, just a kid from Sorrento, 'I didn't do nothing wrong.'"

When Williams mentions taking money, he's talking about money given to him in violation of NCAA regulations and not bribes from fixing games, Green said. In addition, videotapes of the Mississippi games are expected to be introduced in evidence. "We have three basketball coaches who have looked at every fine mind that John Williams did something wrong," Green said. "You will hear they viewed the films, how they looked at the films, how they're going to say, 'This kid didn't do anything wrong.'"

In the state's opening arguments, of Chicago, pointed out that the Assistant District Attorney Bruce Whittaker said every step of the conspiracy and bribery scheme was carried out with Williams' full knowledge "not because they had to, but because they wanted to." "You listen to all the evidence and what the judge has to tell you, then the only just conclusion is that John Williams is guilty on all five counts," Whittaker said. As it's first witness, the prosecution called FBI agent William L. Holmes, assigned for the past 10 years to the gambling unit in Washington, D.C.

In earlier testimony Monday on the opening day of the trial, Thompson outlined the plans he and others made to fix three 1985 college basketball games. Thompson told the six-member jury in the packed courtroom that he contacted Williams, Dominque, Clyde Eads and John Johnson about fixing the Southern Mississippi game, the Virginia Tech game, and the Memphis State game during what proved to be the final season for Tulane's men's basketball program. The plot to fix the Virginia Tech game was never carried out, he said. Michael Green said Monday he wanted to have points against Southern Mississippi and Memphis State. It was all the idea of Tulane student Gary Kranz, Thompson said. Thompson said he gathered the four other players and they met at Kranz's apartment. "He told the five players there that he could get us $3,500 by just staying under the certain number of the spread," Thompson testified. Thompson said Williams agreed that it could be done. Williams said he later meeting in Williams' dormitory room, Thompson said, "we discussed what needed to be done to stay within that number. I told him (Williams) that we needed to be 100 percent — that we couldn't have mess ups."

Thompson's testimony came after the state called him to show that they had enough evidence to go forward with a case against Williams for the conspiracy. Williams faces three counts of conspiracy and two counts of sports bribery, five offenses that could net him a total of 17 years in jail and thousands of dollars in fines. In other trial action, state Judge Marvin Gser turned down a motion for a mistrial on the basis that potential black jurors were excluded from the six-member jury panel selected earlier in the day. Williams' lawyer, Michael Green, pointed out that all of his pre-emptory challenges to dismiss his prospective jurors were used. Assistant District Attorney Bruce Whittaker pointed out, "there is an equal racial ratio on the jury. The state is satisfied with the jury." The three blacks and three whites were chosen quickly and three during a mistrial on the basis that potential black jurors were excluded from the six-member jury panel selected earlier in the day. Defense attorneys asked members of the jury pool if they'd be able to take the word of an admitted drug dealer, whether they knew the difference between NCAA violations and criminal acts, and whether they would be inclined to take the word of somebody from affluent Boca Raton, Fla., over the word of someone from little Sorrento, La.

JOHN WILLIAMS Done nothing wrong

means you're going to have to forget about everything you have read about this case," he said. About the only drama came when the city's chief service director, John A. Belsom, was seated as the final member of the jury. Williams' three lawyers asked twice for his dismissal, saying that attorney Alan Tusa is now handling two cases before the board and Joel P. Loeffelholz has appeared before Belsom several times in the past. Oser rejected both arguments. Questioned by lead defense lawyer Mike Green of Chicago, Belsom said he had not always seen eye-to-eye with Loeffelholz and that the lawyer had at times raised his voice at him. But he said his dealings with the two defense lawyers would have no bearing on his ability to consider the case impartially. Both sides were out of peremptory challenges so Green had no choice but to accept him. "Keep a fair mind. Give us a fair trial," he implored Belsom.

Assistant District Attorney Jim Williams asked throughout if the potential jurors understood the process of plea bargaining and granting of immunity and if they were comfortable with the idea of so-called victimless crimes. He also asked if they would be able to give a verdict despite sympathy for the defendant and whether they were knowledgeable about gambling. Chance at Super Bowl keeps Payton's enthusiasm rolling

PLATTEVILLE, Wis. (AP) — He is the leading rusher in National Football League history, an automatic Hall of Famer and one of the most versatile and exciting football players of all time.

What's left for Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears?

"The Super Bowl, that's what we're here for," said Payton, 31, who has played on three playoff teams but never reached the NFL's championship game in his 10 seasons.

"Not that it's Payton's fault."

—Payton is the leading rusher in NFL history, with 13,369 yards, 997 ahead of second-place Jim Brown. He also holds the NFL record of 3,047 rushing attempts.

—He set the single-game record of 275 yards in 1977.

—His 17,304 career combined yards also are a record, leading Brown by 1,845.

—His 63 100-yard games, including nine last year, broke Brown's record of 58. He is also tied for a record with Franco Harris for eight 1,000-yard seasons.

The durable Payton has started 124 straight games, and says he doubts it," when asked in Payton would play less this season.

Who can blame him, Payton, who joined the Bears out of Jackson State as a first-round draft choice in 1975, also led the team last season with 11 rushing touchdowns, 45 pass receptions for 368 yards, and he completed 3 of 8 passes for 47 yards and two touchdowns.

He even played a bit of quarterback because of injuries to others.

and was selected to his seventh Pro Bowl.

Payton was clearly among the most devastated Bears when the team was routed in the National Football Conference championship game by San Francisco, but he said he bounced back quickly.

"If I base my whole career on that, I should have gotten out of this game a long time ago," Payton said. "I have to focus on things ahead of me. That game is in the past. We've got a new year and a new schedule ahead of us."

"My goal is to do better than last year. It doesn't matter in yardage, but in not making as many mistakes, not fumbling as much, catching and blocking better."

The Bears hope quarterback Jim McMahon will be healthy all season, so they can pass more and take some of the pressure off Payton.

"That will probably make it easier on me," Payton said. "Mike Ditka is giving priority to getting the wide receivers and tight ends into the passing game more."

The Bears made the playoffs as a wild card team in 1977 and 1979, and then followed with poor seasons. Payton does not want to discuss the possibility of that happening this year.

"When you get into a situation where you compare years and people, you put your foot in your mouth," he said. "This is a new year with new people, new attitudes and a new outlook. What we have done in the past is just that."

Selmon to try time as cure for back

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Tampa Bay Buccaneers defensive end Lee Roy Selmon said Monday that he will follow a non-surgical rehabilitation program to try to correct a back injury that has cast a shadow over his future in the National Football League.

Selmon, who was placed on injured reserve last month, will miss the entire 1985 season while pursuing treatment that will likely include chiropractic manipulation, traction and exercise.

"I'm not able to say exactly what I plan to do," the 30-year-old, six-time Pro Bowl selection said, adding that he has considered "all types of procedures" to treat the herniated disc in his back.

"I still realize surgery is an alternative," Selmon added. "But it is a last alternative."

The Bucs, who had recommended microsurgery, released a statement saying Selmon had decided to pursue a "conservative approach" toward rehabilitation.

Microsurgery is similar to arthroscopic knee surgery, and has an optimal recovery time of eight to 10 weeks.

"With the decision against surgery, the Buccaneers will plan the 1985 season without Lee Roy," the statement said. "Should he return, it would be an unexpected bonus."

Bucs owner Hugh Culverhouse accompanied Selmon to a news conference and said the club's first-ever draft choice in 1976 "has earned the right to take his time," and decide what treatment is best for him.

"I want Lee Roy to have the comfort and peace of mind to pursue every alternative without pressure to do anything," Culverhouse said, adding that Selmon will draw his full salary in 1985. "I've encouraged him to take this extra time."

Selmon said he's optimistic about the prospect of continuing his career after rehabilitation — hopefully next season. He added, however, that he will not return if he doesn't feel 100 percent.

"They (Bucs) understand and I understand that you have to be healthy to play professional football," he said.

"I would like to thank the Buccaneers and Mr. Culverhouse for their understanding of the situation and the way I feel about it," Selmon added.

He later explained that one reason he is reluctant to undergo surgery was an unpleasant experience he had during a knee operation in 1976.

The loss of Selmon, the NFL's Defensive Player of the Year in 1979, creates a void in a Tampa Bay defense that ranked 20th in the league in 1984.

"Riches have made more covetous than covetousness hath made rich men."
- Thomas Fuller.

"The greedy player will set his sights on overruns in the play of today's game. The practical player makes sure he scores the game."

South was one of our greedy players. He happily captured East's queen of spades and led a heart to dummy to try the diamond finesse. (East dropped the heart queen, to show a solid holding in that suit.)

The diamond queen went west to West's king and West returned a heart to knock out dummy's last entry. Success now rested with picking up the diamond jack, but hopes were dashed early. East discarded on the second diamond lead and South was left with only eight tricks.

"With any luck in diamonds, I would have made 11 tricks," lamented South.

"With no luck at all, you could have assured 10," was North's counterclaim.

After the comforting spade lead, South should forget about diamond fineses and should start the suit by leading his ace and another. Assuming he leads the queen, West wins and punches another spade (no need matters now). South wins and leads his last diamond to establish dummy's suit and South claims three spades, two hearts, three diamonds and two clubs.

Food costs send wholesale prices surging

By JERRY ESTILL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP)—The sharpest rise in food costs in a year's wholesale prices up 0.3 percent in July, the government said Monday.

The 1.3 percent surge in overall food costs—due largely to a 2.2 percent rise in fresh vegetable prices—offset the second straight decline in energy costs.

Food and energy are the major components of the Labor Department's Producer-Price-Index and their movement typically sets the tone for the wholesale inflation figure.

Energy costs rose sharply in the early part of 1985 while food costs had declined five of the first six months of the year. The 1.3 percent July increase was the most severe since a 1.5 percent gain in July 1984.

Gasoline prices were off 1.4 percent last month, fuel oil costs down 5.4 percent and natural gas prices slipped 0.7 percent.

Despite July's overall increase—which would translate to a 3.7 percent annual rate if extended for 12 straight months—analysts don't see inflation as a major economic problem for at least the remainder of this year.

Energy costs are expected to remain in check because of a general decline in world crude oil prices, and while subject to month-to-month swings because of weather and other temporary factors—are not being driven by any sustained upward pressures.

Wholesale prices are up 0.9 percent from July 1984 and have risen at a 1.4 percent annual rate for the first seven months of this year.

Revised Labor Department figures issued Monday showed wholesale prices fell 0.2 percent in June, after having been reported originally as holding steady. The July increase of 0.3 percent was the sharpest since a revised 0.4 percent jump in April, a figure originally reported as a 0.3 percent increase.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., with the vacationing President Reagan, spokesman Larry Spokes said the White House views the drops in gasoline and fuel oil prices as "very good news."

He called the jump in food prices "temporary" and said, "There is no sign of a pickup in inflation." The bottom-line is that the recovery continues well in '85.

Also contributing to the third quarter decline were softer sales in the California market than expected, he said.

JB's also had higher costs in transforming the newly acquired Motor City Big Boy units to JB's menu and operation systems than first expected, he said.

At the end of the quarter, JB's owned and operated 134 family restaurants in 11 western states.

The July PPI report marked the first time that the government postponed the survey techniques to end of July meaning that goods costing $11 products. The figures reflect price changes in July, just as for the other items in the index.

The report was to have been released Friday, but officials postponed the announcement hours before it was due. The department blamed a series of "processing errors" having to do with changes in the way the report is compiled, including the change in energy price calculations.

New car prices showed no change at a 7.6-month low after back-to-back monthly increases of 0.4 percent. Light truck prices rose 0.6 percent after a 0.3 percent drop in June.

In all, the Producer Price Index for finished goods stood at 294.8 in July meaning that goods costing $11 in 1967 would have cost $294.8 last month.

Price changes that show up in the producer price measure are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level. The Consumer Price Index, though, checks for a broader range of items, including housing and medical care, than does the wholesale index.

Consumer prices so far this year have risen at an annual rate of 3.7 percent, down from last year's 4.5 percent increase.

Profits show decline for restaurant chain

SALT LAKE CITY—JB's Restaurants Inc.'s third quarter profits fell 15 percent from a year ago, the company announced today.

JB's net income dropped to $946,000 or $2.4 a share for the quarter ending July 7, 1985, compared to $1,063,000 or $2.8 a share for the same quarter last year.

Yet revenues were up 48 percent to $52.4 million from $32.2 million in 1984.

Earnings declined because of delays in converting newly acquired VIP's units to Big Boy and heavy training and conversion expenses incurred with the transition, said Clark D. Jones, JB's president and chief executive officer.

JB's also had higher costs in transforming the newly acquired Motor City Big Boy units to JB's menu and operation systems than first expected, he said.

At the end of the quarter, JB's owned and operated 134 family restaurants in 11 western states.

JB's completed a public stock offering of 2,050,000 shares of common stock in July which netted the company $15.8 million. Total shares outstanding is now 4,783,000 at this offering.

Firm chosen building dealer

TWIN FALLS—Del Milam & Sons Inc. of Twin Falls has been authorized as a dealer for Behlen Industries Ltd., a manufacturer of metal buildings.

The Twin Falls construction contractor will sell agricultural buildings, grain systems and commercial buildings produced by Behlen, a Canadian company based in Brandon, Manitoba. Del Milam & Sons holds the Behlen dealership for the Magic Valley.

Save money when buying a used car

If you're in the market for a used car, look for a sticker on a window telling you whether the car is being sold "as is" or whether the dealer is offering a warranty.

That's part of a rule the Federal Trade Commission put into effect in early May to help you, a first-time buyer of a used car, cope with the problems involved in this area.

If you're joining the huge numbers buying used instead of new cars at this peak season for buying cars and with prices at all-time highs, note, too, whether the sticker suggests you get your own mechanic to inspect the car before you buy. The sticker will tell you little more, but even so, the rule offers the first-time buyer in the used-car market some valuable guidance—and more important, flashes warnings in itself.

Where are the best places to buy used cars?

The major car-rental companies—few of whom you would think of exploring. Yet, most of these companies sell off a high percentage of their fleets each year, either directly to consumers or to dealers.

You may get a surprisingly good price on a used car via this route. And you can select from a broad range of cars, since agencies generally rent cars in all sizes.

That's more, the common assumption that used cars have been driven into the ground is not a valid assumption. Good car-rental companies service their cars frequently—far more often than the average owner of a private auto. They must—or risk losing customers who refuse to rent junky cars.

"Cars that are sold are generally in excellent condition," explains Robert Norton, director of fleet in the car-rental division of National Car Rental.

"They have to be," Norton continues, "because the company doesn't want to have to rescue a driver stranded when his car breaks down."

Norton emphasizes, too, that although you can't escape the fact that many drivers already have used the car, the number of drivers, doesn't really matter. Frequent servicing uncovers key problems.

Another selling point: Some local rental offices will let you rent the car you want and if then you decide to buy it, will subtract the rental charge from the sale price. It's a nifty way to get a real test drive and suggests an honest rental office.

Rental agencies often provide a copy of the car's maintenance history—a good way to eliminate much of the mystery surrounding the purchase of a used car.

Show the history to your own mechanic. Get his opinion about the kinds of work to be done.

One more feature makes looking at used rentals worthwhile: Most companies offer warranties. That's not always the case where dealers are concerned and certainly not the case when you buy a car from a private owner—unless the car still has a valid new-car warranty that can be transferred.

Whether you explore the used rental market directly through the agencies, or turn to your local dealer—you will be looking for the same qualities in the used car: fuel efficiency, good condition, excellent maintenance history, better price.

If the used rental market appeals to you, consider that companies usually make available the best cars directly to private buyers. National's Norton estimates that about 75 percent of its cars are sold to individuals. The remainder go to dealers.

But do not expect to haggle. "Our prices are firm and we really don't get into bargaining," Norton says. "We think our prices are already very low, and we're not bargaining down."

Of course, shop around—a no matter where you're told. Know what you're buying.

For additional tips, National offers a booklet, "Used Cars: Where to Shop. How to Buy." It's free. Send a postcard to National Car Rental Systems Inc., 7000 France Ave. S., Dept. SP, Minneapolis, Minn. 55435.

Handshake opens talks with Chrysler

By TIM BOVVEE
The Associated Press

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich.—The United Auto Workers and Chrysler Corp. opened contract talks with a handshake on Monday as the union demanded equality with workers at Ford and General Motors and the automaker called for restraint.

The talks covering 69,000 workers at 50 U.S. locations began after a year of record profits for the automaker, whose payoffs and benefits package lags behind those of General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co.

"This is the year that Chrysler moves back to pattern with GM and Ford," said UAW President Owen Bieber after stretching across a 7-foot-wide table to shake hands with the automaker's chief negotiator, Vice President Tom Miner, at a ceremony opening the talks.

Miner, in a written statement, said Chrysler must remain competitive with other U.S.

automakers and foreign companies. "We are certain the union is aware of Chrysler's plans and needs in these areas and will temper their demands as these negotiations proceed during the next few weeks," he said.

The UAW traditionally has sought to negotiate a contract with one automaker that would serve as a pattern for contracts with the others. In the 1979 agreement with Chrysler, however, the UAW made concessions to help the No. 3 carmaker avoid bankruptcy.

Chrysler workers won back some of the concessions in their December 1983 agreement, which remains in force until Oct. 15, but typically assembly workers earn $12.79 an hour, 39 cents less than their counterparts at GM and Ford.

Chrysler has since returned to profitability, earning a record $2.4 billion in 1984, although higher taxes have hurt its showing this year.

Things are looking brighter for young Sean Halloran as his immune system strengthens

As immune system grows, boy closes in on normal life

CARVER, Mass. (AP) — Sean Halloran will get to have his birthday cake and eat it, too, when he turns 2 years old Friday — a slice of life that not long ago seemed only a remote possibility.

Sean was born with severe combined immune deficiency, making even the slightest exposure to germs potentially "life-threatening." His condition was similar to the Houston "Bubble Boy," known only as David, who died last year after living 12 years in a sealed plastic bubble.

Sean's brother, Jason, had died at 4½ months as a result of the deficiency.

Sean's mother, June, spent the first year of Sean's life cleaning the house with "heavy-duty" antiseptic, following Sean around with cotton and alcohol to rid things he might touch of germs. His hands were constantly washed in the "bath" against infection.

"Last year, we let him stick his fingers in the (birthday) cake but he couldn't eat it," Mrs. Halloran said Thursday. "This year, he can eat it."

"Just the fact that he's here, he's normal and that he can do everything a normal kid can do is a (cause for) celebration. It's been a long haul but he's doing really well now."

Sean was born by Caesarean section to ensure sterile conditions. A healthy 7 pounds, 6 ounces, he was kept in a special "clean" room at Boston's Children's Hospital where tests disclosed he had the deficiency.

When he was 2 weeks old, Sean received a bone marrow transplant from his father, making the infant one of the nation's youngest successful recipients of a bone marrow transplant. A similar transplant in the Houston case, and the new marrow apparently was tainted by a virus that caused fatal blood cancer.

Sean spent five months in isolation at the hospital, seeing only nurses and his mother, a former nurse who had to scrub with antiseptic and dress in a sterile gown to see her baby.

Slowly, his own immune system began to work.

"Our life is very normal now," Mrs. Halloran said. "We're maybe a little more cautious than we would be but that's probably out of habit."

Now, Sean pets a Great Dane named Mandi that he received just before Christmas. He can play with other children, and he eats fruits which were once forbidden because of their bacteria count.

His family once had to buy and keep separate jars of food for Sean for fear that germs in the family's containers or portions could make him ill.

"Last year, we had family over but had to keep him in the playpen. This year, he can play with his cousins," Mrs. Halloran said.

But Sean still requires treatment for his deficiency.

Every four weeks, he goes to Children's Hospital to receive an intravenous solution of gamma globulin, a "booster" to one side of his immunity system, his mother said.

The procedure takes two to three hours, and Sean does not always cooperate, she said.

"It takes a few doctors and a few nurses," she said. "He's a strong bugger."

His long-term prognosis also looks strong.

"The worst that could happen is that he would have to continue taking the gamma globulin for the rest of his life," said Mrs. Halloran, adding that he may outgrow the need for it in a few years.

The most important thing people can do to ease tensions between the two countries, Molander said, is to try to understand each other on a personal level, to get a feel for everyday life on the opposite side.

Ground Zero Pairing Project tries to aid strained relations

PORTLAND — The 10th anniversary of the Helsinki agreements has passed and prospects are uncertain for the proposed U.S.-Soviet summit meeting, but a Portland professor is making steady progress with "grass-roots" diplomacy aimed at pairing U.S. and Soviet cities.

Earl Molander began the Ground Zero Pairing Project nearly three years ago with his twin brother, Roger, the former chief U.S. technical adviser on the SALT II negotiations.

The brothers divided their responsibilities shortly after the pairing project was started. Earl Molander is executive director of the pairing project and his brother headed the Ground Zero group in Washington, D.C. until 1982.

Earl Molander got involved in U.S.-Soviet relations when he took a one-year leave from teaching business at Portland State University to become the national campaign manager of his brother's April 1982 "Ground Zero Week," a week of educational activities designed to educate people about nuclear war.

Molander said it's important to steer clear of the central government on both sides.

"The prejudices and values held by the National Security Council level are held by a large segment of the population," he said. "That doesn't mean the values are wrong — but there are a lot of misconceptions that are magnified on their way to the top."

Ms. Meisner said the project has been embraced enthusiastically by local Soviet officials, but the central government has kept its role to a minimum.

"It's up to Soviet cities to respond," she said. "It's like Oregon and Washington, D.C. — we know Washington is there, but it doesn't play that much of a role in local affairs."

Molander encourages visits to the Soviet Union.

Eastern Oregonians break, establish own 'pseudo state'

BAKER, Ore. (AP) — Eastern Oregon residents, frustrated by what they say is a lack of attention and appreciation by Western Oregonians, have proclaimed their own state.

Officials of chambers of commerce and civic groups in eight counties have put together their own Legislature, elected their own governor and created their own flag.

"Basically, it's kind of a promotional spoof — to establish a pseudo state of Eastern Oregon, an Eastern Oregon state of mind," Jim Birdsall, director of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, said Friday.

The goal is to boost tourism in the region, which suffers from double-digit unemployment rates in some counties.

Plans call for signs to be placed on the main highways leading into the new state, said Michael Wooters, a member of the Baker Chamber of Commerce and owner of a Baker tire store.

Visitors entering the region from Idaho, Nevada and Washington will be greeted with: "Welcome to the state of Eastern Oregon — Gateway to Western Oregon." Those heading from Western Oregon will see:

"Leaving Rain Zone. Welcome to Eastern Oregon."

"We've embarked on an effort to create an identity for this part of the state, to make people aware we are here," Wooters said. "It came about because for years we on the east side of the state have felt we're kind of forgotten or left out."

The move traces its beginnings back three years, when there was serious talk of splitting the Beaver State in two, Wooters said. Once backers realized how difficult that would be, they began looking at other ideas.

"We're not speeding from the state, but we're for damned sure making sure we get some attention," Wooters said. "We are serious about it."

The group plans to print tourist brochures and coordinate activities across the vast region, Birdsall said. Funding will come through the sale of "citizenship cards."

Each of the counties has two representatives in the Legislature. Most of the pseudo lawmakers have nicknames.

"My name is 'Slick,'" Wooters said. "I'm speaker of the House."
