Reagan approves anti-satellite test

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — President Reagan gave the go-ahead Tuesday for the first tests of an anti-satellite weapon in space.

"We have to test, and test now, to restore the military balance," said presidential spokesman Larry Speakes.

The announcement was made as Reagan flew here by helicopter from his ranch near Santa Barbara, where he is vacationing. When he arrived for a three-day visit, the president looked ill and rested and waved at reporters and photographers.

Reagan made the weapon testing decision Monday, Speakes said, and notified Congress on Tuesday by issuing a requirement certification.

So far, Congress has approved research and development funds for the weapon, but it has balked at supporting unlimited tests against objects in space in the hope of achieving limits on such weapons at the arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland.

Some Reagan critics contend there should be no testing at all before the November summit meeting between Reagan and Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the new Soviet leader.

Speakes told reporters that, to the contrary, the tests would provide "more incentive" for the Soviets to negotiate seriously about space-based weapons.

John R. Rinkens, a former U.S. arms control negotiator, said in Washington that the tests would not violate the 1972 anti-ballistic missile treaty, but he saw a danger that a successful test would demonstrate to the Soviet Union that the United States had achieved technological superiority in the field and would set off a new round of Soviet-American competition to develop anti-satellite weapons. "The Soviets have such a member of the Armed Services Committee, said Reagan "would be well-advised to prove to the Soviet Union that the United States has an anti-satellite system that can function." "The Soviets have such a system, he said, and "if it's a war in space, they took the leadership in rocket motors. It then released and homes in on a low-orbit satellite, destroying it by impact without explosives.

Speakes said the first test would be conducted against "an old satellite that no longer has any use." He gave no further details.

The Air Force has conducted two live firings of the missile, but neither involved actual tests against an object in space. Last November, when the last experiment was conducted, the Air Force tested, the system's telescopes and guidance equipment by instructing the missile to lock onto the infrared light emitted by a star.

Initially, the Air Force had hoped to conduct its first live-fire test against an object in space this spring, but has been plagued by a series of technical problems.

Injured Snow returns

Health assists rapid recovery

TWIN FALLS — When Ryan Snow left his neighborhood the afternoon of Aug. 9, some of his neighbors thought it would be the last time they would see him alive.

With a yard sale going on nearby, there were plenty of witnesses to the accident that left him near death on the pavement in front of his home with a broken skull, internal head bleeding, four broken bones in his left foot, a broken collarbone, and large scrapes on his knees, hands, arms, shoulders, back and buttocks.

But when Snow, 20, returned home Monday afternoon, he was very much alive, if a little worse for the wear.

With his bruised head shaved and revealing a horseshoe-shaped scar big enough for a Shetland pony, Snow was able to hobble outside Tuesday on crutches to flash a black-eyed smile for the camera and for the group of neighborhood children who had made a 12-foot banner to welcome him home.

His speech was a trifle indistinct and his memory not up to snuff, but his mother, Teddy, said doctors are not expecting any permanent neurological damage. Snow cannot remember the accident, though he and his mother have been able to piece the story together by talking to witnesses.

"He's known for not being a daredevil and not doing stupid things," she said.

On the afternoon of the accident, Snow caught a ride down the block to his home on the hood of a friend's car and got off in front of the car as the driver, Mark McNish, turned the corner.

As he slipped off the hood, Snow's leg caught under the front tire, his body whipped forward and his head struck the pavement hard enough to mash a hole in his skull on the left side and start the internal bleeding that would threaten his life and build up enough pressure to cause hemorrhaging in his left eye.

Neighbors called the police and an ambulance and Ryan was rushed to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where he was given a brain scan and a doctor spotted the growing clot that could have caused a stroke, permanent brain damage, death, or paralysis if not treated quickly.

Snow was rushed to St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center by ambulance, where neurosurgeon Patrick Cindrich operated on him for over two hours, removing a cup of blood and a clot the size of a man's fist from Snow's battered brain cavity.

Because of the danger of increased pressure to the brain caused by rapid altitude changes when flying, Snow was driven, instead of flown, to Boise.

Cindrich said in a Tuesday evening telephone conversation that by the time Snow reached Boise he was within minutes of death, due

Nation's GNP barely grows

By TOM RAUM
The Associated Press

Stocks up — D3

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy expanded at a lackluster 2.0 percent annual rate in the spring, amid signs that the strong rebound forecast by the Reagan administration for the rest of 1985 will fail to materialize, government figures showed Tuesday.

The growth in the Gross National Product, the value of the nation's output of goods and services, was up slightly from the 1.7 percent estimated by the Commerce Department last month for the April-June period.

But while the administration took some heart in the upward revision, private economists generally characterized it as insignificant. And both government and private analysts said they saw little in the new figures to point to an economic pickup.

In a separate report, the Commerce Department said after-tax corporate profits dropped 0.4 percent in the second quarter, following a decrease of 2.8 percent in January through March. It was the fifth successive quarter in which business profits have fallen and yet GNP, together with the further decline in corporate profits, reflects a stagnant economy.

The revised GNP figures, together with the paltry 2.3 percent growth of the first quarter, meant that the economy grew just 1.1 percent for the first half of 1985.

When the year began, the administration and many private economists had predicted a healthy 4 percent growth in the economy for the year. Earlier this month, the administration revised its estimates downward to 3 percent.

But even that lowered target would require a second-half growth of 4.9 percent to meet. Analysts said Tuesday they now doubt such a rapid expansion is possible.

Commerce Undersecretary Sidney L. Jones said a strong economic turnaround remains feasible but now looks unlikely.

"A more likely outcome is that you will have moderate growth in the 3 percent zone for the second half. That would give us about 2 percent to 2.5 percent growth for the year," he said.

Jones said the small growth of the GNP, together with the further decline in corporate profits, reflects a stagnant economy.

Nicaraguan rights official defects to U.S.

By GEORGE GEDDA
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An official of Nicaragua's government-operated human rights commission has secretly defected to the United States, accusing Sandinista authorities of refusing to allow his office to investigate most abuses in that country, according to U.S. government documents.

Mateo Guerrero, former executive director of Nicaragua's National Commission for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights, told U.S. interrogators after his defection that Sandinista officials, increasingly view the panel as a tool to improve Nicaragua's image abroad.

The commission was established five years ago as an autonomous government agency.

Guerrero went to Miami four months ago, telling Nicaraguans he wanted to go there for English lessons, U.S. sources said Tuesday. Once in Miami, he requested and was granted political asylum.

A four-page U.S. government summary of the story he told U.S. officials, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, included the following allegations:

• The commission, established in 1980 for the purpose of investigating human rights abuses, has come gradually under the control of the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry, which has tried to convert the office into a government propaganda arm.

• The ministry's secretary general, Algodro Bendana, has monitored the commission's activities since the commission's activities since government agency.

Soft drink wars escalate anew

ATLANTA (AP) — The Coca-Cola Co., smarting from the uproar over its change of formula, charged Tuesday that its chief competitor in the cola wars, Pepsi-Cola, is selling "New Pepsi," a less-sweet version of Pepsi-Cola, in some overseas markets. Pepsi officials immediately denied it. The latest skirmish between the cola giants comes three months after Pepsi-tainted Coca-Cola for changing the Coke formula after 99 years of success.

Reveal formula, judge says

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal judge on Tuesday ordered Coca-Cola Co. to divulge its secret formula for Coke, but the soft-drink company vowed it would not disclose the 99-year-old recipe.

The order came in a suit filed by a group of 40 small Coca-Cola bottlers over the company's pricing policies, particularly the price of Diet Coke syrup. U.S. District Judge Murray Schwartz of Wilmington, Del., agreed with the bottlers that Coca-Cola should divulge the formulas for Coke and other products.

Carbide target of lawsuits

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Lawsuits seeking a total of $92.6 million were filed Tuesday against Union Carbide Corp. on behalf of people exposed to polonium after it leaked Aug. 11. The two suits, filed in U.S. District Court in New York City and Kanawha County Circuit Court, accuse Carbide of negligence and "willful and wanton" conduct in the leak of aldicarb oxime and methylene chloride at the company's industrial plant.

Honduras sets priest free

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — An American Roman Catholic priest who was arrested for alleged crimes against the security of Honduras was freed late Tuesday, a church leader said. The Rev. John Donald, 46, a native of Albuquerque, N.M., was arrested by the military Sunday in Tocoa, a town 140 miles north of Tegucigalpa. He was brought to the capital. His arrest was not immediately clear if Donald would be forced to leave the country.

Planes bomb Pakistan village

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan warplanes bombed a Pakistani border village, killing 11 people, a senior official said Tuesday. Western diplomats said Soviet troops in Afghanistan are preparing for a major military operation near the Pakistan border. Zain Noorani, minister of state for foreign affairs, told Parliament that Afghan airplanes dropped eight bombs Monday on the village of Kenja, near Parschinar, 175 miles west of Islamabad. He said 19 people were injured, several homes were destroyed and many cattle were killed in the attack.

Lottery officials raise pot

NEW YORK (AP) — With tickets selling at a rate of 19,000 a minute, New York state lottery officials raised the jackpot Tuesday for the next drawing to $41 million, the largest ever in North America. Ticket lines ran out the door, around the corner and down the block Tuesday as New Yorkers waited for up to two hours in hopes of drawing 6 million-to-one odds in Wednesday night's drawing and winning the jackpot, which was raised after sales exceeded expectations.

Diablo Canyon reactor started

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — The Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant's Unit 2 reactor was fired Tuesday for the first time as engineers began a testing program intended to lead to commercial operation by year's end. "We have achieved nuclear reaction, and that happened at 2:18 a.m.," Pacific Gas & Electric spokesman Richard Davin said.

The plant's reactor is operating at "zero power" and would remain at that level for nine days, he said. Testing will continue as the reactor is gradually brought to 100 percent of its rated capacity of 1.1 million kilowatts. The reactor does not produce electricity until it is operating at about 15 percent of its capacity, PG&E spokesman Ron Weinberg said. "By the end of the year, commercial operation" is expected, Davin said.

Reforms need to be clarified

WASHINGTON (AP) — The white minority government of South Africa needs to make clearer what reforms it has in mind to end the apartheid racial separation system, the Reagan administration said Tuesday. State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said the Pretoria government needed to clarify to the black majority "what the reforms portend; how they can be translated into a political dialogue which will permit the government and the leaders of South Africa's communities to negotiate South Africa's future."

to the building pressure from internal bleeding around the brain and the pressure of the clot against the brain.

EMVRC emergency room physicians did an excellent job of diagnosing the clot and getting Snow for the ambulance trip to Boise, said Cindrich. Snow's parents, Twin Falls Schools Superintendent Carl Snow and elementary school music teacher, Teddy, were 900 miles from Boise, Mo., at her college choir reunion when they heard the news of the accident.

Carl says they drove 808 miles straight through, nearly hitting a white-faced cow somewhere in Colorado around midnight and pulling over in time for Teddy to faint at the sight of Ryan covered with tubes, scars, and stitches as he was placed in critical care. Ryan was stayed in the critical care unit for two days as he slipped in and out of consciousness and then improved to the point that he could be moved to the main neurological surgery floor of the hospital and released Monday. Cindrich said Snow's case is interesting in light of a recent medical conference in Sun Valley where experts said rural emergency patients may not get quick care to save their lives. "This is a great example of how well things can work," Cindrich said.

Ryan said he has a few headaches and will not be able to put pressure on his broken foot for six weeks. And although the fall semester at the College of Southern Idaho is out of the question for now, he says, he hopes to re-enroll in the spring. Ryan recovered rapidly because he is healthy and in good physical condition, Cindrich said. Teddy says prayer helped. "We had a lot of friends praying for us, and we think that's a major factor."

late 1983. Early this year, he told the commission he had not investigated allegations of abuses concerning the forced relocation of several communities in northern Nicaragua. If the leaders did otherwise, "they would only get themselves into trouble," the summary said.

Bendana told two commission officials last January the panel was going to help the Nicaraguan government, establish liaison with foreign human rights groups. The purpose would be to draw international attention to abuses committed by anti-government rebels. "The commission leaders were told to stop investigating any abuse committed by the government of Nicaragua and to concentrate their efforts on the anti-Sandinistas," the summary said.

When two 36 lawyers visited Nicaragua last year to investigate abuses by anti-communist rebels, the commission paid their three-month hotel bill, totaling $2,777, and provided them with office space and transportation. Since 1982, commission members have not been permitted to investigate abuses in Nicaragua's prison system. The Interior Ministry's chief of prisons, Raul Cordon, "has delayed or refused to meet with commission officials and has torn up commission letters in front of the officials without reading them." Cordon has rejected all of the commission's requests for the release of prisoners.

FED considers tighter control

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board would seek to tighten its controls on monetary growth should the economy and the money supply grow faster than current expectations, Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker said in a letter released Tuesday.

Volcker, in a response to written questions from the Senate Banking Committee, said the central bank's decision to broaden its 1985 target range for the basic money supply, known as M1, was not a signal of complacency about inflation.

He said the actions taken last month "do not imply any lessening of concern about inflation or any weakening in the resolve of the Federal Reserve to pursue a monetary policy consistent with moving to price stability."

Rail union rejects arbitration

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Transportation Union has rejected arbitration as a means of reaching a new contract with the rail industry, the National Mediation Board said Tuesday, triggering a countdown that ultimately could result in a strike against most of the nation's major railroads.

Talks between the union and the National Railway Labor Conference, the bargaining arm for the carriers, broke off last Wednesday and no new negotiations were scheduled, said board spokesman Meredith S. Buel.

A strike is "very, very probable," UTU President Fred A. Hardin said.

Firm will build orbital factory

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Houston firm, using no government money for its multimillion-dollar venture, won the space agency's approval Tuesday to build and operate the first commercial factory in space.

This agreement initiates the most ambitious space effort undertaken thus far by the United States private sector," said Isaac Gilliam, head of the commercial projects office of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Max Paget, a space pioneer who is president of Space Industries Inc., said the space platform — to be called an "Industrial Space Facility" — is expected to be ready to be carried into orbit by a shuttle in 1989.

Big Apple pipe bomb target

NEW YORK (AP) — Pipe bombs were found Tuesday in front of two banks, and police accompanied by bomb-sniffing dogs and a robot sealed off part of Manhattan's financial district for six hours while they removed the devices.

The bombs, discovered by security guards in front of the Chase Manhattan and Morgan Guaranty banks, were taken to a police firing range in the Bronx, where they were defused and analyzed, said Police Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell.

Each device was eight inches long and four to five inches in diameter.

"Both were set to go off one hour after they were placed. Both of the bombs malfunctioned," said O'Donnell. "Had they gone off, they would have caused extensive damage and personal injury."

The devices, put together with clocks, pipes and wires and wrapped in green plastic bags, looked real enough but were "poorly constructed" and likely the work of amateurs, said Ken Wallin, assistant director of the FBI's in the New York City office.

Block wants spending limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said Tuesday the Reagan administration is determined to hold down farm program costs and called on Congress to bring its new farm bill into line with budget goals.

Before Congress recesses for its August vacation, the House and Senate Agriculture committees approved programs that administration officials said would cost $51 billion to $85 billion in the next three years, far in excess of the $34 billion budget limit.

In a telephone interview with farm broadcasters, Block reiterated the administration's goal for market-oriented farm programs, lower price supports and a phase-down of direct subsidies.

Moon out of jail; full pardon urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Sun Myung-Moon, head of the Unification Church, was released Tuesday from a halfway house in New York City after serving 13 months of an 18-month federal prison term for tax evasion, and an inter-religious group urged President Reagan to grant him a full pardon.

Moon headed to Washington for a dinner in his honor sponsored by the Coalition for Religious Freedom, whose members include Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell and other religious leaders. Moon's prosecution was an assault on religious freedom.

"I think the president should pardon Rev. Moon," Falwell said at a news conference. "I think he was the victim of a railroad job, and I think we all in the religious community are losers because of it."

The Korean-born evangelist was convicted in May 1982 for failing to report $162,000 in income on his personal income tax returns. The U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear his appeal and he began his sentence July 19, 1984.

Moon maintained his innocence in the tax case, arguing that the money belonged to the church. He claimed that he was a victim of religious persecution.

He served more than 11 months at the maximum-security Federal Correctional Facility at Danbury, Conn., then was sent to the Oxford Project halfway house in Brooklyn, N.Y., on July 4 after winning early release with time off for good behavior.

Moon was allowed to conduct church business during the day while in the halfway house, but had to report back every evening.

Claudia Alcorn, a spokeswoman for Phoenix House, the drug rehabilitation agency which operates Oxford House, said Moon was released early Tuesday.

"Rev. Moon is innocent of any wrongdoing. He is innocent in the eyes of God and will be vindicated in the eyes of history," Dr. Mose Durst, president of the Unification Church of America, said in a statement.

The Unification Church claims between 2 million and 3 million members in 127 nations, with 45,000 American followers.

At the Washington news conference, Falwell and more than a dozen other ministers denounced what they said was government intrusion into religious affairs.

"I personally do not think he was guilty of tax evasion, or I wouldn't be standing here," Falwell said.

The Rev. Joseph Lowery, a Methodist clergyman and head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said racial discrimination was a factor in the decision to prosecute Moon. He said churches "are accountable to our people and our God," rather than to the government.

Falwell: Tutu 'phony'; wants re-investment

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell, returning Tuesday from a five-day trip to South Africa, called black Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu a "phony" and proposed an American campaign of re-investment in the white-run country.

In Harrisburg, Pa., U.S. Rep. William Gray, chairman of the House Budget Committee and a black Baptist, said of Falwell's comments: "As a minister, I'm ashamed and embarrassed."

Falwell, head of the fundamentalist Christian group Moral Majority, told reporters at Kennedy International Airport that Americans are getting a slanted version of events in South Africa.

He said he was assured by South African President P.W. Botha that his government is sincerely interested in reforming apartheid, the system by which South Africa's white minority retains power over the black majority.

Falwell called on Christian Americans to buy Krugerrands, the South African gold coins, and to invest in companies doing business in South Africa. He also urged them to remove investments from those companies that have pulled out of South Africa.

"We will not throw this country into the Soviet orbit (and) create another Mozambique or Ethiopia," Falwell said.

He said he tried to meet with Tutu, bishop of Johannesburg and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, but that Tutu refused his invitation.

"I think he's a phony, period, as far as representing the black people of South Africa. And if anyone here doubts that, go out to the black public in South Africa and ask them. We did. We have it on videotape."

Whites have guns; blacks the numbers

Anyone who wonders what the future likely holds for South Africa should consider the Kafkaesque remarks coming from various public officials and private citizens this week about the state of affairs in that country.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, the Moral Majority leader who apparently considers himself a qualified expert on the country, says South Africa has received a bum rap from the world. The nation, he says after a brief visit, is "making progress." That's like saying, after a visit to a Soviet Gulag labor camp, that the workers appear well fed and rested.

Sure, South Africa is "making progress" if you consider puppet legislatures an improvement from virtual slavery, restrictions on travel a legitimate form of control, and denial of voting rights a condition of republican government.

Those are the key elements of apartheid, a government-supported suppression of South Africa's majority citizens by its minority government, the underlying basis of which is racism.

That is something which Falwell, who doesn't spend much time on such "folk," apparently fails to see. His view is "totally inaccurate, superficial and a disservice to the cause of justice," says the Rev. Peter Storey, a white, who heads the Methodist Church in South Africa.

If Falwell's remarks don't seem detached enough for you, consider the comments of South Africa's ambassador to the United States, Herbert Beukers, who this week said equal voting rights for blacks was not possible because blacks have a "different value system" than whites.

What is at stake here is political power, now enjoyed by the country's whites and denied its blacks, who outnumber the whites four to one. The whites have the guns and the government; the blacks have the numbers.

The history of revolutions in this century is broad enough to suggest the second may, in the end, be more important.

Signs of heresy show in ranks of ACLU

The American Civil Liberties Union is resolutely against capital punishment. It is also resolutely pro-choice in another matter concerning the death penalty.

Is there a contradiction? Not according to the publications and legal briefs of the national ACLU and its state affiliates. For the ACLU, the right to an abortion is as firmly guaranteed by the Constitution as the right to freedom of speech.

But there are signs of heresy within the ACLU concerning Roe v. Wade. The conscientious objectors are still very few in number, but they are beginning to be heard. This spring, for instance, Barry Nakell spoke on "The Right to Life" before the annual meeting in Chapel Hill of the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union. Nakell, a board member of that affiliate, is a professor of law at the University of North Carolina.

Nat Hentoff

He felt impelled to speak up publicly against the ACLU position because, Nakell told me, "I was feeling more and more uneasy about not being on the record with my friends concerning my belief that the basic civil liberty, essential to all the others and presumed by each of them, is respect for the dignity of life."

Nakell reminded the annual meeting that the principle of the dignity of life is the basis for the paramount issue and more urgent than the civil liberties Union agenda since our founding: our unshrinking opposition to the death penalty. "And he pointed out that the NCCLU legal counsel, N. B. Smith, had published an article last year in the Boston College Law Review in which Smith emphasized that "life itself is plainly a basic and essential right, and the Supreme Court would have difficulty in plausibly declaring life to be less than fundamental."

The heretic also prodded his audience to reconsider its attitude toward Roev. Wade by reminding them that in 1975, West Germany's highest court had interpreted the "right to life" guaranteed by the Basic Law of the Bonn Constitution as giving constitutional protection to unborn children. That "right to life" was in reaction to the Nazi regime's pervasive destruction of "life unworthy to live."

Yet, Nakell said in his talk, "I have reviewed the ACLU policy guide in a search for a strong statement of the principle of respect for the dignity of life and found none. This is an oversight that we need to correct."

As for abortion, the law professor made the reasonable point (in some circles) that reasonable people can "responsibly disagree about when life begins." Some say it begins at birth. Others, Nakell among them, believe life starts at conception.

With regard to the ACLU's position, Nakell emphasizes that in all other matters, the ACLU "stands for expansive interpretation of constitutional liberties." But not in terms of the rights of the fetus. Yet he would think it odd "if there is any doubt as to whether a fetus is a human life," the ACLU, by tradition and principle, would be the advocate of the most powerful of all and urge constitutional protection for this developing life.

Most tellingly — before an audience that has been identified as Justice William Brennan in denouncing the state as executioner — Nakell observed that the ACLU, in supporting Roe v. Wade, agrees that the Constitution protects the right to life.

"The situation is a little backward here," he noted. "In the classical posture, the Constitution would be interpreted to protect the right to life, and pro-abortion advocates would be pressing to relax that constitutional guarantee." The Supreme Court turned it all around, however, and the ACLU agrees with the court that some lives are less worthy protecting than others. Nakell has not been put in Coventry by his fellow North Carolina civil libertarians. He expects the dialogue will continue, and when he went to the ACLU biennial meeting in Boulder, Colo., in June, Nakell had a sense that some other ACLU members around the country were also ready for dialogue. At one meeting, when a delegate said firmly that "a woman has the constitutional right to a dead fetus," most of those in attendance disagreed. Nakell felt that was encouraging.

And one ACLU member in California has said, in a letter to me, that "no one can say with authority when life begins, but since we know that identity begins at conception, we're obliged to give the benefit of the doubt."

Barry Nakell tells of a bumper sticker he saw recently: "Equal Rights for Unborn Women."

Groceries, check were of lasting value

In the midst of back-to-school mania, I have run across a statistic that astounds me. A recent survey by Campus Voice magazine indicates college students have an average discretionary income of $234 per month.

When I was attending the University of Oklahoma in the 1960s, I had little discretion and less income. I survived on scholarships and government loans.

I got all my loot at the beginning of a semester. I would stick it in a bank, pay tuition, buy a few books, pay a little rent, eat a few meals, drink a few beers, watch the bank balance dwindle. Some semesters it dwindled more quickly than others, but I always ran out before I had anything else to do.

I learned many things at college, but my most important lesson was: invest in your friends and you will eventually be repaid.

I picked up a lot of tabs early in each semester. My cohorts and I spent most of our time lounging around pizza parlors, trying to drink all the beer in existence. Most of my friends received monthly stipends from their parents, which disappeared quickly.

So I would buy them beer and gasoline and other necessities until my money ran out. That usually took two months, leaving me another couple of months to survive without money. Although I was broke, I had built up a lot of goodwill. So each time one of my friends scored some cash, I could count on a pizza and a beer.

I suppose the whole process smacked of socialism, but we didn't mind. That was too theoretical for us to worry about. Nobody kept score, but I suspect we all broke about even in our borrowed time.

For some reason, one particular semester was financially disastrous for everyone. I forgot what happened, but I ran out of money immediately and my friends never got any. That was the semester I couldn't afford books, the semester that reinforced forever "the lesson about investing in friends."

The faculty member who was aware of my situation was an English teacher named French, who taught a course on the 18th-century novel.

French learned of my financial plight when I went to his office one day, quite embarrassed, and admitted I could not afford to buy copies of the novels we were allegedly studying, nor could I find them in the library. He was sympathetic, which surprised me because I was at the stage where I considered no one over 30 capable of human understanding.

Without sneering, French lent me his personal copies of such tedious tomes as "Clarissa." The novels were allegedly studying, which were as fascinating as they were distracting.

The semester continued. I was subsisting on cheap and filling food: beans, popcorn and more beans. No pizza and beer that semester. Gradually, months without meat began to take their toll. I began feeling rather listless. And, I found, I was beginning to look as bad as I felt.

One night came a knock at my door. There was the twice French, wearing, as usual, ailly Ben Hogan cap. In one hand he had a sack of groceries. In the other hand, a check for $25.

He proffered his gifts, saying that my appearance proved I was not eating properly. He uttered some homily about feeding the body as well as the mind. When I protested feebly, he told me a story.

During his undergraduate days, said French, he too was always short of money. One winter his situation was desperate, one of his teachers took him aside and forced $25 on him. Not a loan, but a gift, part of a continuing tradition. The teacher told French not to worry about paying him back. Someday, he promised, French would repay the $25 by passing it along to another needy student.

So it became my turn to carry on the tradition. I don't know if the story French told me was true, but it made it easier to accept his charity. I have always believed the story because it is the sort of story I like to believe.

I suppose life would have been easier back then if I had had a discretionary income of $234 per month. But I won't trade that sack of groceries and that $25 check for it.

Advice for a Kimberly councilman

An open letter to Ted Wasko: Mr. Wasko, who do you think you are? When I ask you a question about the police department in Kimberly, and you answer, "That's the reason I'm up here and you're down there!"

Let me tell you something that you seem to have forgotten over the years. Wasko, you work for me and every other citizen of the city of Kimberly. We, sir, pay your wages; and I for one expect more in a councilman than what you have given.

If you are so concerned about our streets all of a sudden, that you want to reduce our police department, then why did you vote "no" for the business licenses? That will be extra revenue for the city. Is $15 going to break you?

Mr. Wasko, you have an attitude problem. You think that you are above the average citizen. If Jim Campbell didn't tell you to do it, you won't.

We, the citizens of Kimberly, put you in office, and we can take you out of office just as easy. You are up for re-election this November and, as far as I can see, your services are no longer required. It's time that the citizens of Kimberly put someone in office that cares about the people wishes. Not what you and Jim Campbell want as being first priority.

As a citizen of Kimberly, I think it's time that Ted Wasko was voted out of office. He's there for Ted Wasko and Jim Campbell and that's it. He doesn't care about our youth, the elderly, or the citizens in general. If it doesn't benefit Ted Wasko, then he's against it.

Directions to finding the path for sanity in banking system

Bank crises in Pennsylvania, Illinois and California have now been followed by the dissolution of entire systems of state-chartered, privately insured thrifts in Ohio and Maryland. Where did things go wrong? The bad news started in 1980, when deregulation put banks and thrifts in competition with money-market funds. Thrifts lost millions in deposits.

Government deregulation of the lending side was seen as the good news — now thrifts are the victims saddled with long-term, low-interest-rate mortgages could take higher risks to get higher returns.

This was unfamiliar territory, but banks and banks alike needed more money to bring solvency back to their loan portfolios, and the case of stock companies, wanted to be perceived by investment analysts as "high flyers."

Savings and loans soon became real-estate developers, stockbrokers, trust advisers, travel and insurance agents.

Whenever these new powers were exercised in a negligent or fraudulent manner, losses occurred. People became aware that their money was at risk, and the system came tumbling down.

It was only then that the public asked, "Where were the regulators?" The answer is that the regulators have been where they always were: in the middle. This is as it should be.

Between the chaos of total deregulation

Henry Berliner

and an equally unlikely return to government-directed interest rates lies a path to restore sanity. Herewith are 10 suggestions to find it:

1. Disclosure. The government grades meat for the public, informs us of the amount of fat and nicotine in various brands of cigarettes; the credit-worthiness of corporate, municipal and state bonds is rated before they come to the market. Make financial institutions subject to the same disclosure.

Those financial institutions that, by choice, adopt a high-profit, high-risk strategy concentrating, for example, on real-estate development, might be assigned a different credit-worthiness rating by the regulator than their more conservative, traditional home-lending competitors.

2. The business of banking is banking. Usury and federal insurance, borrowing for liquidity and check-clearing through the Federal Reserve are privileges that have financial institutions in a partnership with the government.

This suggests some responsibility on the part of those institutions to support their partner's interest in maintaining a sound and efficient banking system.

Brokerage services, real-estate development, travel services and insurance are not the business of banking. Yet, 46 federally regulated savings institutions, principally in California and Texas, had more than 5.3 percent of their total assets invested in real estate held for development, with the top three in excess of 20 percent of assets. Reasonable limitations on non-banking activities would reduce the closest scrutiny.

3. State and federal regulatory authorities should have cease-and-desist power to halt activities and remove officers who endanger the safety of funds on deposit. Subpoena and contempt-of-court powers for failure to obey lawful orders of regulatory authorities should be coupled with civil and criminal penalties.

All too often, however, state auditors and examiners are undermanned, underpaid and outgunned. And their superiors in the executive and legislative branches of government are sometimes associated professionally and politically with the principals of the institutions that require the closest scrutiny.

4. Cut needless interference. For example, too much energy is wasted on branch approvals. Institutions can do this by themselves.

Also, we should look at regulations such as the Real Estate Settlement Practices Act to see if their cost is greater than their worth for consumers. Social programs designed to promote affirmative action in lending and hiring should be applied, if at all, to the whole financial-services industry, not selectively to banks and thrift institutions.

5. Eliminate intra-corporate self-dealing. Just when we thought it was safe to go in the water, we found there were sharks in the sand. ABL (After Bert Lance) it was decided that transactions with related parties must be at market rates and not involve preferential treatment. But we didn't regulate the conduct of an institution dealing with itself.

By joining with an apparently unrelated party, a financial institution can get a piece of the action, along with fat consulting fees for insiders, by providing the financing for the joint venture. But who's minding the store, underwriting the credit of the project?

It's a middle-level loan officer reporting to a superior who wants approval at the next loan-committee meeting. Is it any wonder the favorable vote is unanimous?

6. Investments in corporate and governmental securities can make more money than loans. Federal insurance should be written with the same underwriting standards that are applied to investments as loans, covering collateral, capital adequacy and the financial health of the securities firms the banks and thrifts deal with.

7. Risk insurance. If we let the market set interest rates for savings, why not let it set prices for federal and state depositor insurance programs? Letting high-risk insurance pay high premiums will also give a boost to institutions that have adopted a low-risk gain policy.

8. Changes in control of institutions should be examined like applications to start new ones. We should check the business plan, expertise and character of the applicants.

9. Interlocking directorates should be permitted. In many smaller cities and towns, the talent pool for directors of financial institutions is not big enough to ensure high-quality policy directions. Elimination of self-dealing and conflict of interest combined with disclosure could make this possible.

10. Send violators to jail. A burglar commits a crime against one family. But the crooked bank official harms thousands of families and destroys public confidence, which is what the system is based on.

And let's send the regulators to "C.A.M.P.," which they should remember as: Capital adequacy; Asset quality; Management; and Profitability.

Dedication to these principles will restore sanity to our banking system. There is still time.

Henry Berliner is president of Second National Building & Loan in Maryland, which recently was approved for coverage by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

California firm wants Idaho to pay legal fees in lawsuit

BOISE (AP) — A California legal organization that filed a lawsuit against the state of Idaho over conditions at the Youth Services Center, St. Anthony, wants the state to pay $234,997.15 in legal fees and expenses in the case.

Attorney General Jim Jones said Tuesday the state will fight the claim on grounds it is unreasonable. But he said the state also faces $100,000 in legal expenses if the private attorney it hired to defend the case.

That means if federal court rulings go against Idaho, the state will have to pay $337,000 in legal bills for a lawsuit which Jones says never should have gone to trial in the first place.

The Youth Law Center, San Francisco, is an advocate for youth legal rights. It filed a U.S. District Court suit claiming residents at the St. Anthony juvenile detention center were treated improperly. Among other things, it alleged residents were ordered to stand against a wall for hours at a time.

State officials acknowledged some of the practices, but said they were stopped long before the Youth Law Center entered the picture.

After a long trial earlier this year, U.S. District Judge Ray McNichols ruled that resident civil rights were violated by some of the practices. —

But he refused to issue an injunction or order to state officials to stop the practices, since they already had testified the practices were discontinued earlier.

Jones said he strongly urged the Department of Health and Welfare to negotiate a settlement, because it appeared a "foregone conclusion" the state would lose at least part of the case.

He said the department hired Ray Givens, Coeur d'Alene, as a private attorney, and informed him of that fact later.

Jones said he was advised that Givens charged the state $102,000 for his legal services. Health and Welfare Director Rose Bowman was out of the office Tuesday afternoon, a spokeswoman said.

John Morgan, administrator of the Division of Community Rehabilitation, said Givens worked for about a year, first attempting to negotiate a settlement with the Youth Law Center, then heading the state's defense at trial.

He said Givens submitted bills on a regular basis, and without adding them all, he couldn't say whether Givens' claims were $102,000.

Dole, senators to deliver Taiwan trade message

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — The delegation of seven U.S. Senators led by Senate Republican leader Dole and Kansas Sen. Frank Lautenberg reached Taiwan on Tuesday to discuss trade problems, particularly the U.S. trade deficit with Taiwan.

Dole, of Kansas, told reporters upon arrival that "we will deliver a frank, clear message: our rapidly growing trade deficit with Taiwan, estimated this year at $12 billion, has become economically and politically intolerable."

"Without some cooperative solution soon, I believe Congress will act with restrictive trade legislation," Dole said.

Among the members of the delegation is Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.

Taiwan's trade surplus with the United States totaled $5,688 billion dollars in the first seven-month this year on total two-way trade of $11.456 billion.

Last year, Taiwan registered a record trade surplus with the United States of $5.2 billion, up 47 percent from 1983.

"We will be seeking concrete action on the part of the leadership here, especially the reduction of tariffs, improved intellectual property protection, fair customs practices and removal of barriers on trade service."

Woman gets library post

BOISE (AP) — Harriet Reece of Kendrick was elected chairwoman of the Idaho State Library Board for fiscal 1986, which began July 1, during the panel's recent meeting in Boise.

Mrs. Reece is in her sixth year of service on the Library Board. She previously served as chairwoman during fiscal 1983.

Gaylin Fuller, Moreland, was elected vice-chairman of the board after being reappointed by the state Board of Education to a second term lasting through June 30, 1988.

Other members of the Library Board include Donald Steltz, Coeur d'Alene, and Rudy Leverett, Boise, who represents state Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans.

Drug center wins permit

NAMPA (AP) — An organization for the treatment of drug and alcohol dependency has won a permit to open a facility in a Nampa neighborhood after the city zoning board denied the request.

The Nampa City Council on Monday granted Port of Hope the conditional use permit it needs to operate a treatment center in a renovated apartment complex.

The city Planning and Zoning Board refused Port of Hope's request after residents who live near the complex said opening a treatment center there would cut property values.

The City Council reversed the decision "because we couldn't come up with a reason to deny the permit," Nampa Mayor Winston Goering said.

Bell: no free rides for computer bulletin profits

BOISE (AP) — Mountain Bell has decided to more than double its rates for Idaho computer bulletin boards that charge for advertising. Computer operators use the bulletin boards to exchange information about computers and activities. Users tap their computers into the bulletin boards through telephone lines. Most of the approximately half-dozen bulletin boards in Idaho are non-profit.

Mountain Bell spokesman Steve Guerber said he knew of only one bulletin board in Boise that would be charged the extra rate — Gem State Data.

Mountain Bell officials said last week that they were considering charging business rates for all computer bulletin boards regardless of whether the boards charged for advertising, but the company changed its mind, Guerber said.

"We will allow bulletin-board operators (to have residential rates) as long as they are not making any money," Guerber said. "Once a bulletin board starts making money, then it goes beyond being a hobby."

He said bulletin boards that charge for advertisements will have to pay $29.40 a month if they are in Boise city limits. The normal rate for city residents is $11.62 per month. Rates for boards outside the city would be slightly higher, he said.

The new rate would pay for using a telephone line for a bulletin-board-and-for-conversation, Guerber said.

Lois Keyes, system operator for Gem State Data, said she did not agree with Mountain Bell's decision, but she does not plan to shut down because of it.

"We really can't afford to shut down. It wouldn't be fair to the people who are using the board," Keyes said.

Gem State, with 371 registered users, has sold only one $40 advertisement in the eight months it has been in operation, she said.

McMurren funeral scheduled

BOISE (AP) — A funeral is scheduled in Boise Thursday for William McMurren, Morrison-Knudsen Corp. chairman and chief executive officer who died of lung cancer at his Boise home on Monday. He was 57.

His funeral will be conducted at 10 a.m. MDT Thursday at First Methodist Cathedral of the Rockies in Boise.

McMurren became head of the worldwide construction, engineering and shipbuilding company in 1972 and last year relinquished the role of president to William Densy, who also holds the title of chief operating officer. He continued as chairman and chief executive officer after his illness was revealed in May 1984.

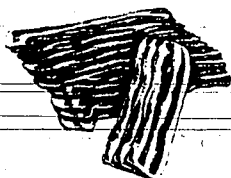

Under company bylaws, Densy is empowered to take over McMurren's roles.

Former 'Pet' goes to court to recover car, her other prizes

NEW YORK (AP) — Cheryl Rixon, Penthouse magazine's 1979-80 "Pet of the Year," says she was "hurt and disappointed" that she didn't receive a $75,000 handmade car and other prizes she was promised for winning the title.

State Supreme Court Justice Alvin Klein, in a trial-level judge, on Monday ordered Penthouse to pay Miss Rixon on a 3-year-old Australian, who describes herself as a model and actress, about $86,000. The judge said the magazine breached its contract with her by failing to deliver a Diamante auto, a whirlpool, a wind-surfing board, a cruise for two, lingerie, beauty treatments, Goulva chocolates, a health club membership and other items.

Penthouse spokesman Roy Grulman said, "The judge must have been animated by chivalric sentiments for this young damsel who he thought he was going to help. There is no merit to the girl's case, and we will certainly appeal."

NEW YORK (AP) — Shirley Maebline, Kirk Douglas, Alan King, Bernadette Peters, Rita Moreno, Nell Carter, Peter Allen and other stars will appear in the seventh edition of the state's "I Love New York" commercials.

The two 30-second ads, which will debut in February in 16 major markets in the northeastern United States and Canada, will also feature the members of the Rockettes and the casts of the Broadway hits "Cats" and "La Cage Aux Folles."

The commercials will include a fireworks display featuring the "I Love New York" logo superimposed over footage of a New York Philharmonic Orchestra concert in Central Park on Monday night, where Mayor Edward I. Koch asked the audience to sing the familiar state jingle.

The blue suede, boots actually, were taken Friday night from Perkins' tour bus, which was parked behind a Memphis theater for the singer's concert there.

"They were a real powdery blue. Under a black stage light, it made them kind of fluorescent," Perkins said Monday from his home in Jackson.

Perkins said he switched to a pair of lizard boots for his concert Friday.

Missing was his bride, Kim Kutza of Farmington, Mich.

"It's not the way a wedding day is supposed to be," said Garbey.

When the couple planned the wedding, it was to have been an open date on the team's schedule, but the recent strike by players required the Tigers to play a makeup game with the Kansas City Royals.

In Kansas City, Garbey's role wasn't exactly crucial: The utility player warmed the bench all game as his teammates lost to the Royals, 2-1.

Submarine explorers end season deep below Lake Superior's surface

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — A submarine expedition that was the first to take humans to the floor of Lake Superior ended Monday night after what a researcher called four successful weeks.

The research vessel Seward Johnson came into port, carrying the 22-foot submarine Johnson Sea-Link II, which led scientists reach the lake bottom more than 1,300 feet below the surface.

Until the expedition, study of the world's largest freshwater lake has been restricted to the upper 200 feet of the lake — the range reachable by scuba divers.

"It was an absolute ball," Michigan State University zoologist William Cooper said Monday night. "There was much more life in the deep water portion of the lake than we expected to be there."

He said researchers hope to win funding to conduct a similar expedition next year.

Cooper, speaking Sunday by ship-to-shore radio, said many crew members were eager to return home, but participating scientists felt differently.

"If you ask anyone of them they'd like to go down a lot more," he said.

The expedition has opened new areas of research for biologists, geologists, chemists and marine historians and has generated a wealth of information that will take months to digest, Cooper said.

The expedition, which began July 23, was financed by a $500,000 grant from the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration, Michigan State University and the University of Connecticut are jointly managing the project.

The Sea-Link II made two dives Sunday, one to study a lake trout spawning area and another to photograph and take samples in a deep trench, Cooper said.

The morning dive took the submarine over an underwater shoal between 140 and 200 feet below the surface that turned out to be a fertile trout spawning area, he said.

"The guys probably saw a couple hundred lake trout in about an hour and a half," Cooper said.

In the afternoon, researchers used the submarine's robot arm to deploy a special camera designed to take pictures inside the sediment at the bottom of a 900-foot-trench-off-Grand-Maraix, he said.

"This is a very unique and new piece of machinery," Cooper said. "You can actually photograph the deep structure."

The expedition was to mark the beginning of five years of submarine research in the Great Lakes, Cooper said.

"We're already planning to submit grant applications for next summer," Cooper said. "Everybody wants to come back."

Police quiet 50 roosters

FOLIGNO, Italy (AP) — Fifty roosters belonging to a 70-year-old woman were put to death Monday after city officials responded to neighbors' complaints about early-morning crowing.

Police in this central Italian city said they intervened seven months after advising Angela-Cesarini that city ordinances governing sanitation and the keeping of animals outlawed such a large brood.

But Cesarini ignored the warning and police arrived Monday take the birds to the slaughterhouse, leaving four behind in her small courtyard.

Money from the sale of the roosters was to go to Cesarini, although police noted she would have to foot the bill for their capture and slaughter.

Car bombers strike; Tripoli blast kills 44

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's car bombers struck in Tripoli on Tuesday, apparently turning people into a main square and then detonating a bomb that killed 44 people and wounded 90, police reported.

Beirut was rocked by the fiercest artillery and rocket barrages in six months. Police in the capital said 40 people were killed and 143 wounded in 24 hours of heavy fighting between Christians and Moslems in a resurgence of Lebanon's decade-old civil war.

The car bomb in the northern city of Tripoli was the fifth in Lebanon's major cities in a week. A total of 143 people have been killed and more than 300 wounded in what is being called "the war of the car bombs."

Police said the bombers in Tripoli apparently drew people into an ambush by tossing a small stick of dynamite from a speeding car into Saddam Square. As people rushed to the scene of the explosion, police said, the car bomb exploded.

An anonymous caller who claimed to speak on behalf of the Revolutionary Christians of the Cedars, a hitherto unknown group, telephoned a Western news agency in Beirut to say it planted the bomb.

The caller, speaking in heavily accented French, declared: "We want to assure the whole world that no Moslem fundamentalists will continue to live on Lebanese soil."

Police sweep black district

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Security forces riddled a riot-prone black district with about 80 armored personnel carriers on Tuesday and searched the houses, using dogs.

A black policeman in another town shot his way out of an angry mob, killing one man. Police fired rubber bullets at demonstrators near Cape Town and Johannesburg, wounding several. Officers at Witbank, 57 miles east of Johannesburg, arrested scores of school-age youngsters in pre-dawn raids on their homes, said Maj. C. Bloem, chief of the Witbank police.

Bloem said the youths were arrested in connection with rioting, arson and looting, part of the tide of anger against white rule that has swept South Africa for a year and cost more than 600 black lives.

Sikh militants gun down Sikh leader in Punjab

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Sikh terrorists assassinated top Sikh political leader Harchand Singh Longowal on Tuesday, authorities said, less than a month after he signed an accord with the government to settle the three-year Punjab crisis.

The killing, which prompted a nationwide security alert, occurred hours after Sikh gunmen killed a Hindu leader of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's governing Congress Party and wounded two other Congress members in Punjab's Jullundur city.

Police said an unidentified man died and three others were critically wounded in the hail of gunfire that killed Longowal, president of the main faction of the Akali Dal political party, as he addressed a gathering at village temple meeting in his home district of Sangrur in Punjab state.

The prime minister said Longowal's killing "at this critical juncture is a tragedy not just for Punjab but for the whole country. He worked courageously... to remove hatred from the hearts of men, and to bring peace after so much strife and pain."

Israeli diplomat murdered

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Gunmen firing from a speeding car killed a junior Israeli diplomat on Tuesday and wounded two other embassy employees — his wife and his secretary, Egyptian authorities said.

The other victims were his wife Tiana, 24, and Mazal Menashe, 22, his secretary, who is also the wife of another Israeli diplomat. The ministry did not describe Mrs. Atrakchi's post in the embassy. They were reported in reassuring condition after surgery.

Authorities said they arrested two men they suspected in the killing and were searching for two others.

Longowal, 57, died after undergoing emergency surgery by senior doctors flown in by the government.

Commissioners propose jail staff increase

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the proposed 1985-86 Twin Falls County budget, the board of commissioners addressed one problem facing the county's 76-year-old jail by funding additional jail staff.

Yet, there is nothing in the budget that tackles a solution the commissioners had desired — a new county jail.

Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said the new jail project probably will be on hold for awhile. The county had no money for a private leasing company to build one and didn't have public support for a bond to finance a new jail.

Nothing probably will happen unless the old jail is shut down because of its shortcomings, he added. Until then, "we'll do the best we can."

One step includes adding more jailers despite frozen wages for other county employees.

While others stayed the same or were cut, the budget of the sheriff was one of the few county departments to be increased in the total 1985-86 budget of $5.3 million.

The commissioners allowed an increase of $36,000 over the 1984-85 appropriation, bringing the total sheriff's budget to $757,236. The increase will buy the services of two additional jailers to supervise the jail population, Jail Administrator Lt. Jim Hopkins said. The night shift at the jail particularly needs to be beefed up, he added.

It is the second year in a row the county has approved funds for additional jail staff. In the current budget year, four part-time jailers became full-time.

Besides taking care of present needs, the added jailers would be a foothold on the future. Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said if a new jail is built, the county already will have the staff to man it.

Yet, there is nothing in the proposed 1985-86 budget dedicated towards the construction of a new jail.

During the upcoming budget year, the county probably will not hold another election for county residents to vote on a bond to finance a new jail, Hempleman said.

A $6.2 million bond that would have financed a 53,000-square-foot jail and law enforcement building failed miserably in a March election. Commission Chairman Ann Cover said it cost the county $12,000 to pay for the last bond election. As for another one, it was just too soon to see any changes in attitude toward a jail bond, she added.

Hempleman said the county wouldn't even conduct another poll to measure public opinion on a jail bond as a follow-up to a telephone survey conducted in June by volunteers. Although incomplete, the survey told county officials and the volunteer jail committee nothing they didn't already know about the public's attitude about a jail bond. That was, that the public didn't want their taxes raised to pay for one. The commissioners are hoping that a new magistrate probation program will buy them time when it comes to the old, sometimes overcrowded and inadequate jail.

The probation program, initiated by a county magistrate judge and now used by another judge, diverts eligible DUI offenders into a probation program instead of jail.

In the past, jailers would do a jugling act each Thursday to house the several people — many DUI offenders — sentenced by the magistrates. Without the probation program, *See JAIL on Page B2

Congressional aides taste farm life

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — One dug his first potatoes by hand. Others shifted gears in combines or roamed the southern Idaho range.

"We moved salt licks into the foothills," said Joanne Legg, aide to Sen. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island.

Their hands are used to paperwork, not farm and ranch chores.

But, for the past eight days, Legs and seven other Washington government staff members have been plowing in with the chores in the corrals and farm fields of south central Idaho.

Every year Food Producers of Idaho, a coalition of 30 agri-business organizations, pays to bring a contingent of aides to legislators. Congressional committees or federal agencies out into the country to live like farmers and ranchers for a few days.

It's a mix of aides. This year's contingent included assistants to the agriculture and interior committees in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives and to individual senators, including Idaho Sen. Steve Symms.

They come to exercise their muscles and their brains. The visitors help out farmers with the work and they talk issues with their hosts over home-cooked meals.

"It's a matter of people," says Anita Brown, legislative assistant to the House of Representatives' Committee on Agriculture. "In Washington, we hear about the same problems, but it's always on paper."

For instance, Bryan Samuels, food policy specialist from the U.S. State Department, will take back an earful on government export programs from Dallia Reese of Burley, a wheat grower who just completed two terms as chairman of the Idaho Wheat Commission.

The tour aims also at giving the visitor a healthy slice of farm and ranch life, those dawn-to-dusk days. Each spends a few days with a family raising crops and with one raising livestock.

"They've been on combines; they've been on horseback; they've been range conservation projects; and more," says Mark Moorman, president of Food Producers.

On Tuesday, the Congressional aides also saw some agribusinesses that pass crops to market and research facilities that contribute new production techniques to agriculture.

They spent part of the morning at Magic Valley Foods Inc. in Rupert, a potato processor, and part of the afternoon at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's fish hatchery near Hagerman.

In between those two stops, scientists at the U.S. Snake River Conservation Research Station near Kimberly brought them to the edge of agricultural technology.

The researchers demonstrated new soil-saving irrigation devices. They timed waterings with a newly proved crop water sensor. And they shuttled them out to the back 40 for a look at cultivation methods that can grow two crops in a field each season instead of one.

With federal budgets still a hot issue, station chief W. Dorat Kemper also wanted to plant a

Price Mall breaks ground at 10 a.m.

Leasing representative will be recruiting interested businesses the rest of week

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Top Price Development officials including John Price, president and owner of Price Industries, and Robert Springman, a Price leasing representative — will be in Twin Falls today to break ground for the Magic Valley Mall.

Groundbreaking ceremonies are set for 10 a.m. near the corner of Blue Lakes Boulevard and Pole Line Road.

Price is expected to speak at the morning ceremonies to civic and business leaders invited from throughout the Magic Valley and at a noon Rotary Club meeting.

Springman says he will stay in town for the rest of the week to recruit businesses for the new mall.

He will not be setting up an office, but he will be contacting companies which have already expressed interest in moving to the mall, he says.

Interest in the new mall is strong, he says.

The Twin Falls area is a "good retail center," and the local economy is "strong, growing and vital," he says.

Price has already announced that J.C. Penney's and The Bon will be moving from downtown Twin Falls to the Magic Valley Mall. The manager of the Idaho Department Store has also said his store may move from Main Avenue to the new mall.

Penney's, The Bon and a chain store new to southern Idaho, Shopko, will be the three anchor stores of the mall. Price officials say plans are designed so that a fourth anchor store can be added in the future.

Price Development has plans in Twin Falls for a 400,000-square-foot covered mall with more than 70 shops, restaurants and service centers.

The company is one arm of Price Industries, a firm with real estate development and broadcast interests. The firm employs more than 4,000 people, says Bob Mitchell, which have already expressed interest in moving to the mall, he says.

Price Development has more than 3 million square feet of space in shopping centers and covered malls in Utah, Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico, Wyoming, Nevada, California and Idaho.

Striking Merc clerks file NLRB complaint

Management refused employee session

By BARBARA NEIWEIT
Times-News correspondent

HAYLEY — Striking clerks of the Merc Department Store and Food Center filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board Tuesday after management representatives refused to attend a negotiation session called by the disgruntled employees.

Nike Stanton, a representative of the Boise chapter of the United Food and Commercial Workers Union, said the only charge filed with the NLRB so far involves firing or punishing employees for union activity.

Stanton began advising the strikers after they formed an informal union and walked off their jobs Aug. 8.

The strikers asked for the negotiation meeting last week in response to an offer from the store's general manager Dick Stephens which would have allowed four of the strikers to return to work. In a letter to the women sent by Stephens, he said the first four to ask for their jobs back by 10 a.m. on Aug. 16 would be rehired.

However, the women said they wanted to negotiate concerns about wages, benefits and working conditions before returning to work and asked for the Monday meeting.

Roger Fleener, president of the Boise-based chain of Merc stores, said Tuesday he is unaware of the charges filed with the NLRB.

"I don't know a thing about them (the charges)," Fleener said, adding that he considers the strike over and the store to be back to "business as usual."

"We are not discussing or bargaining our personnel policies with the media," Fleener added.

Stanton said the failure of the Monday management attempt Monday's meeting with the strikers resulted in the labor complaint being filed.

"Their (the strikers') demands were very reasonable," Stanton said. They were not asking for an arm and a leg," he said, adding the wage increase they want falls far below industry standards for the area.

Now that formal charges have been filed, a labor board agent will be assigned to the complaint, Stanton said. Depending on the backlog of cases, final determination may take 30 to 60 days, he said.

The striking women were prepared Monday to present management representatives with a list of demands, including higher wages and benefits, increased working conditions, morning, afternoon and evening breaks, sick leave policies, insurance and employee relations.

CSI will shift budget increase to state, not local taxpayers

By PAULA EUBANKS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho administrators want to shift the entire CSI academic programs budget increase for 1986-87 to state rather than local shoulders, CSI President Gerald R. Meyerhoefer told board members Monday night.

Meyerhoefer said he asked for an increase from the state Department of Education in his testimony last week at State Board of Education budget hearings in Boise.

"In past years, state funding of increases has gone down and the local funding's gone up," Meyerhoefer told the Times-News. "This year we're asking for the entire increase from the state."

While 8 percent of the proposed increase would maintain current operations, 2 percent would bring CSI salaries on a par with similar positions in surrounding states, as well as create videotaped courses to be sent to Magic Valley high schools.

"That's our wish list," Meyerhoefer said of the salary equity and videotaped courses' budget proposals. "They will be the first things to go" if the state decides not to fund the entire proposed budget increase.

The proposed $7.5 million budget must finally be approved by the Idaho Legislature next spring.

Meyerhoefer also reports that the state Department of Education CSI might be told of any holdbacks after the first week in September, when Gov. John V. Evans' staff reviews August requests to see if the Department of Education is over budget.

Last year, the state held back 3 percent of the CSI appropriations, or about $120,000 for both vocational and academic programs, Meyerhoefer said.

CSI administrators hope that budget savings that include cutting the 1985-86 session of the food service training program and leaving a top administration position open for a year will buffer the impact of any holdbacks. The position is the director of student services and personnel.

In other business, Meyerhoefer reported a $20,000 electricity costs saving this year through conservation efforts, including computerized monitoring of temperatures and use of hot wellwater for heating.

The savings came despite a 6-percent increase in the average temperature of buildings, and both an unusually cold winter and, hot summer that needed more heating and air conditioning than average years, he said.

CSI's overall utility budget is about $260,000, Meyerhoefer said.

The CSI board also approved a property tax levy of more than $2 million that will be divided between Twin Falls and Jerome counties' taxpayers.

Range fire investigated

TWIN FALLS — The House Creek fire that covered about 16,500 acres of range last week between Roseworth and Three Creeks is under investigation by Bureau of Land Management officials for possible arson.

Dan Hughes of the Boise BLM District said the fire was man-caused and there is some indication it could have been started by an arsonist.

He said his department has made a preliminary investigation in the area of the fire and will probably have more information by late next week.

Officers who were assisting at the scene of the fire said Bob Groves, who has a ranch near Antelope Springs, lost at least several head of cattle and other ranchers may also have lost livestock that were trapped in small canyons and ravines.

One rancher reportedly saved 25 head of cattle.

Burglars lift goods from number of cars

TWIN FALLS — A number of automobile burglaries were under investigation in Twin Falls Tuesday, including entry into two cars that owners had left unlocked.

Brenda Hamilton of 510 Elm View Drive, reported someone entered her unlocked vehicle sometime between 1 a.m. and 8 a.m. Monday while it was parked at her home. She said a cassette deck valued at $200 was removed.

Loss of $389 in items from another unlocked vehicle was reported by Jessie Biggerstaff, who said the vehicle was burglarized Sunday night or Monday morning while it was parked at 2092 Hancha Vista Dr. The car was in the driveway when someone entered it and removed a typewriter and CB radio.

Gregory Veet, who was on leave from U.S. Air Force assignment and working temporarily for Frontier Motors, told police someone entered his car while it was parked at Canyon Springs Inn, about 1 a.m. Tuesday. He said the car was owned by Frontier Motors and was locked at the time. A side window was broken out and thieves removed $430 worth of items, including cassette tapes and a watch. Damage to the window was estimated at $15.

Adamson: subsidize farms

BY DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Jerome attorney and potential 2nd District congressional candidate Dan Adamson says President Reagan's threats to remove agricultural subsidies will not assist farmers. Adamson said Tuesday that while he supports Reagan on other issues, a too strict adherence to Reagan's proposed free market agricultural policies will wipe out the agriculture industry. In a recent letter to the Times-News, Adamson proposed a plan for agricultural subsidy changes. He said the government should help farmers with the price of production instead of subsidizing commodity prices. "We subsidize the low side (production cost) until ag can get on its feet we are at least moving towards a real free economic system," Adamson said Tuesday. American commodities compete in a highly subsidized market that pits nation against nation, rather than farmer against farmer, he said. The American farmer is one of the best-equipped and most productive businessmen in the world and can stand up to any other farmer in the world but no other government in the world. "Forget about abandoning and separating farm and state for the next several years," at this particular time in history we cannot ask our farmers in this highly subsidized ag world to compete, not with other farmers, but to compete directly with foreign governments," Adamson said. Adamson said his plan would aid farmers through the current financial crisis and into a stronger period in which free market reforms can be instituted. "But for now," he said the federal budget deficit and the resulting strong dollar have priced U.S. exports out of foreign markets. "We don't lack demand," Adamson said. "Our government has taken away from the industry our ability to meet the demand by 'fouling up' our ability to export our crops." Adamson's plan says the U.S. government should: • take a more active role in promoting American commodities;

• relax anti-trust provisions relating to the producers of raw agricultural commodities; • institute shipping changes to make ag commodity shipping cheaper; • join on importers to buy commodities in bulk; • place a moratorium on ag foreclosures on federally funded property; • close the Commodity Credit Corporation; • develop an arm of the USDA to trade raw U.S. ag commodities for others needed in industry and; • control the strength of the dollar. "There is a direct relationship that budget deficit and to the high value of the U.S. dollar that is so devastating to agricultural exports in this country, not to mention that this problem has a direct relationship to the high interest rate on loans to farmers," Adamson said. Adamson said he has farmed for many years and is part owner of a 7,000-acre farming operation and a dairy that runs about 500 head of cattle.

Jail

The county probably would have had to add more jail staff again next year, Heipleman said. With the program, the county probably will be able to get by through the 1986-87 budget year. Munn said the probation program has eased the population in the jail. Yet it still was high, in the mid-40s, at times. Munn reported earlier that all 76 beds in the jail can't be filled because of security problems and segregation requirements, such as keeping sentenced inmates away from non-sentenced and juveniles out of the sight and sound of adults. When the population hits the high 50s, deputies begin transporting to other jails, Hopkins added. Although the jail population dipped to 20 people for a time, it has increased to 40 plus, Hopkins said.

County officials had expressed worry that the jail would be reduced by a volunteer jail standards committee to a 24-hour holding facility because of its inadequacies. If that occurred, the county would have increased costs of transporting inmates to other jails. As it is, more than $2,200 was spent to board county jail inmates in other county jails between December 1984 and April 1985. The amount didn't include transportation costs or labor. Hopkins announced that the Gooding County Jail, which is often used by Twin Falls County, will double its rate of housing prisoners. Effective Oct. 1, it will cost $20 per inmate, per night. In early budget discussions the commissioners had considered spending an additional $2,000 for the transportation and housing costs of inmates in other jails in addition to adding more jailers. Yet, the proposed $20,000 didn't make its way to the final budget draft. Munn said he didn't ask for any more money to transport inmates to other county jails. The $4,000 he requested for the upcoming year has been adequate for the past three years, despite a ever-increasing jail population. The public will have the opportunity to comment on the county budget when hearings are held during the first week of September.

Mayor fed up with lawsuits

CALDWELL (AP) — Mayor Al McCuskey says he's fed up with "frivolous" lawsuits against Caldwell, and he wants the city to fight back. "We're trying to get information out to these attorneys (filing the suits) that we are mad as hell and we are not going to take it any more," McCuskey said at a City Council meeting on Monday. He said an upcoming resolution will instruct City Attorney C.A. "Skip" Stryser to respond with countersuits when "nuisance suits" are filed. The mayor said a nuisance suit is "a lawsuit that has very little basis in fact, and that has not been as detrimental to the complainant as the attorney presents."

BURLEY — A Burley couple's garden was growing so well it caught the eyes of passers-by, and one of them called the police. As a result, officers went to the home, at 1827 Overland Ave., and harvested the garden, taking 41 marijuana plants and the residents of the home into custody. The garden owners, Mary Danzog, 38, and Theodore C. Danzog, 33, were charged Tuesday morning with manufacture of a controlled substance. Officers said they found 14 plants were growing in planters and 27 others in rows in the garden site. The Danzogs were being held in the Cassia County Jail Tuesday awaiting arraignment.

Restaurant says money's gone

TWIN FALLS — A report of the theft of $603 in cash and checks from The Broiler Restaurant at 1111 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., was received by Twin Falls police on Monday.

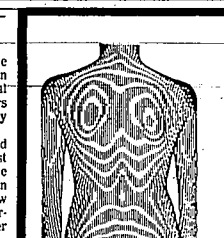

Stan J. Hess of Rt. 2, Jerome, who manages the restaurant, told police he left the money in an envelope in the office between 6 a.m. and 4 p.m. Sunday. He said the office door was not locked but is reserved for employees only. It is adjacent to the restrooms, he said, and could have been entered by someone in the building, since the restaurant is open for business Sunday. The theft was under investigation Tuesday.

Man's successes too sweet to keep to himself

DEAR ABBY: Our 38-year-old daughter (I'll call her Florence) after seven years of being divorced (no children), recently met a man she thinks she could love enough to marry. He's 42, also divorced, attractive, considerate, has a great sense of humor and is a very successful businessman. Therein lies the problem. "Larry" announces the price of everything — his Mercedes, his condo, his tailor-made suits, etc. He has mentioned (more than once) his $300,000-a-year salary as president of his own company. Florence has told him that she likes him as a person, but his constant talk of how much everything costs turns her off. He thanked her for pointing this out to him, and justified it by saying that having come from very humble beginnings, he was proud of his success. Florence understands this, but even after she told him it turns her off, he still brags about his money. Larry seems quite smitten with Florence and has told her that she is the kind of girl he's been searching for all his life. Florence tells me she's considering ending their relationship before she becomes more emotionally involved.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

I haven't been much help to her. Have you any tips for me to pass on to her? I'd hate to see her drop this to him. They seem so right for each other. — HER MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: Let your daughter make her own decisions. Only she knows what she can live with. If wonderful cannot overcome his compulsive bragging about the cost of everything, he can add losing Florence to the list.
DEAR ABBY: I'm 29, old enough to be serious about a guy, which I am. I'm sure he's serious about me. He's 38 and a lawyer. We've been dating for about a year, but our relationship doesn't seem to be going in a serious direction. I can't pin him down to any kind of commitment, but I know I'm the only girl he's seeing. When I ask him about our future, he's very evasive.

He teases me and says he enjoys having me around because he likes my laugh. I don't want to waste my time if he's not serious about me. What should I do? — LAUGHING GIRL
DEAR GIRL: Give him six months to make some kind of commitment. If he's still evasive, offer to introduce him to a hyena and say goodbye.

DEAR ABBY: I heard on the news that a 12-year-old boy was kicked out of the Boy Scouts because he didn't believe in God. I really got upset because I am a 12-year-old boy and I don't believe in God either. My friends don't respect me when they find out I don't believe in God. Then they try to convince me that I am wrong. Why can't they accept me the way I am? I don't go around telling people not to believe in God just because I don't. I don't think the Boy Scouts have the right to kick people out for their beliefs, do you? — TICKED IN IOWA
DEAR TICKED: The Bill of Rights guarantees every citizen freedom of religion. That means the freedom to embrace any philosophy concerning religion he or she so chooses, including the right to not believe in God. And no, I don't think the Boy Scouts have a right to kick a boy out because he doesn't believe in God.

Planning can ease the start of the school year

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — With the start of school, attention is focused on children and their adjustment to the classroom. But parents need to realize that the transition from summer vacation to school days can disrupt the whole family, says Dr. Gregory W. Brock, a family therapist.

Brock, director of the Marriage and Family Therapy Program at the United States International University here, believes that parents and children can better weather the transition if the negative hassles are minimized.

"All of a sudden when the school year starts, the bell of routine tightens around the neck, a little planning can loosen the belt a bit," says Brock, who has been a practicing marriage and family therapist for 12 years and is a clinical member and approved supervisor of the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy.

"The younger the child, the more specific the questions. Ask a first-grader if he had milk for lunch, or is in a different class or that you what side of the room his desk in don't get to sit by the window this on," Brock advises.

Once school has started, parents need to remember, that the expert once is full of disappointments for the children, as well as excitement. deal with these issues himself.

Parents will find it works best to just listen seriously to the child's complaints, but allow the child to deal with these issues himself.

You can trick your kids into eating right

By REDBOOK

Wise mothers can outsmart their children and trick them into actually liking foods that are good for them.

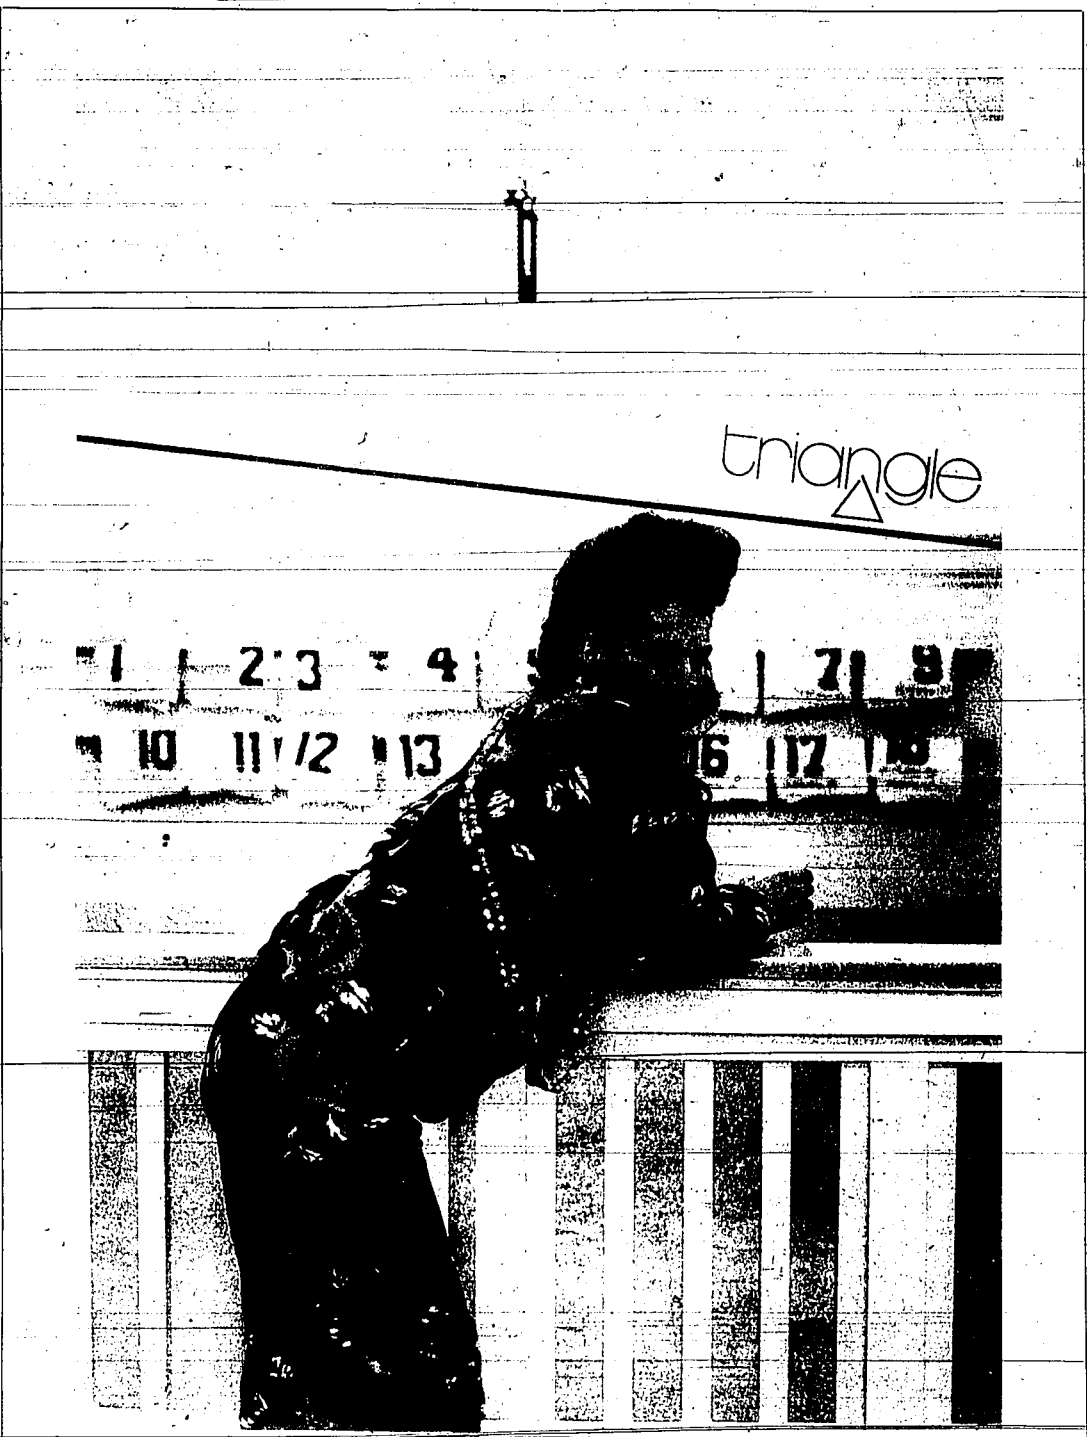

Two experts, Annette B. Natow, Ph.D., R.D., and Jo-Ann Heslin, M.A., R.D., answer some of the most-asked questions from mothers in the September issue of Redbook, explaining how to get a child to eat right without tears or tantrums, fancy foods or fuss.

"Toddlers between the ages of 1 and 3 tend to be finicky eaters, the experts say, but patience and offering good food choices can lay the foundation for healthy eating habits.

What about the toddler who refuses to eat meat?"

"It is better not to make an issue of a child's refusal to eat a specific food — just be sure you are providing substitutes while continuing to offer meat to your child, and one day he'll surprise you by eating it," Natow and Heslin wrote.

Toddlers can be encouraged to eat vegetables by serving them in unfamiliar form, such as creamed or in matchstick pieces. Serve raw vegetables at the start of a meal when the child is hungriest. Some fruit, such as peaches and apricots, have many of the same nutrients as vegetables.

California colors, flavor enhance outdoor meals

Entertaining in great style, whether you're by a lake or on a stream, a few food ideas may make your outdoor meals a breeze. Here are some ideas for California barbecue.

This tempting menu of barbecuing, which can be enjoyed by all ages, is a variation on the traditional California barbecue. It's a variation on the traditional California barbecue, which is a variation on the traditional California barbecue.

To remove the crust, slide the tip of a spoon gently underneath and lift it out. Carefully stack the bread with butter, embedding the butter in the pit. Rotate the whole to the top of the pit and then just repeat the process. If not served right away, give them a sprinkling of lemon juice to preserve their golden-green color.

Cookbook solves amateur gardener's vegetable overload

By LOUISE LAGUE
Special to The Washington Post

In the urban office building where I work, a co-worker surprised me the other day with a tiny object that was causing her a great delight.

Now, she is a single lady of some sophistication, graying at the temples, and a superb and serious professional. What she was holding in her hand, as tenderly and lovingly as a baby, was a miniature purple eggplant, no more than an inch long. "I grew it," she said.

She told me that she shares a garden with country friends, and that she had planted this seed, and that this was the harvest. Since it was too minuscule to make into ratatouille, she was keeping it with her as a pet.

This phenomenon is just the tip of the August iceberg of course. In no time, the desks in my urban office building will be filling up with great bags of surplus tomatoes and zucchini, lovingly brought forth by hordes of amateur gardeners who cheered them on and now haven't the slightest idea of what to do with them all.

A gift of home-grown vegetables is a wonderful one, of course, as is a harvest from one's own yard. But the trouble with amateur gardening is that the vegetables are always of one species; nobody who gardens only in his spare time ever seems to come up with the ingredients for a perfect pasta primavera. It is always a load of tomatoes or a load of zucchini.

Fortunately, the cookbook market is also currently flooded with books on vegetables because of the current preoccupation with freshness and health, and the fact that for most of the currently popular diets, you can't have too many vegetables.

One of my favorite books is based on that premise. It's called "Too Many Tomatoes, Squash, Beans, and Other Good Things: A Cookbook for When Your Garden Explodes" (by Lois M. Burrows and Laura G. Myers; Harper-Coleophon-Books).

One reason I like this book is that it calls the zucchini plant "incredibly productive." If you have a consistent problem with garden explosions, this book is well worth the $8.95 investment.

Both tomatoes and zucchini are most vitamin-packed when eaten right after picking, but both will keep nicely in the refrigerator. And when you're ready to cope with them, here are some recipes to help:

STACKED TOMATOES
(4 servings)
4 tomatoes, peeled and halved

Salt and pepper to taste
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup minced scallions
1 cup grated cheddar cheese

Place tomatoes in buttered casserole and top with remaining ingredients in given order; bake in a 325-degree oven for 20 minutes.

—From "Too Many Tomatoes, Squash, Beans, and Other Good Things: A Cookbook for When Your Garden Explodes," by Lois M. Burrows and Laura G. Myers, Harper-Coleophon Books

VERY FRESH CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP
(4 to 6 servings)

Freeze this in bags before adding the cream and egg yolks, and enjoy summer-fresh cooking all winter. The frozen base is an excellent tomato sauce as well.

12 very ripe tomatoes, peeled and cut up
1 cup water or chicken stock
1 cup sliced celery
1/2 onion, sliced
1/4 cup minced fresh parsley
3 tablespoons cornstarch
3 tablespoons butter, melted
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 teaspoons salt

TOMATOES STUFFED WITH CHARD AND PINE NUTS
(6 servings)

1/2 cup pine nuts
1/2 cup olive oil
1 large onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, mashed
1 cup cooked, chopped drained chard or spinach
6 medium tomatoes
Salt and pepper to taste
1 to 2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons minced fresh basil

Saute the pine nuts in 2 tablespoons olive oil. When

Fresh ground pepper to taste
2 cups light cream
1 egg yolk, beaten

Simmer tomatoes, water or stock, celery, onion and parsley for 30 minutes. Puree and strain. Mix cornstarch and melted butter together; stir into soup over medium heat until the broth boils and thickens.

Add the brown sugar, pepper and salt. (Freeze if desired at this point.) Combine cream and egg yolk, and stir one cup of hot soup into it, then stir the mixture into the soup and heat, being careful not to let it boil.

A taste of the Swiss highlands provided by dessert recipes

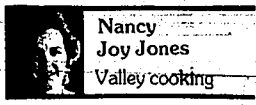

If last summer was my "Old-Woman-Who-Lived-in-a-Shoe" time, this year has been totally different. The only full-time occupant was Pipkin, our cat.

Oh yes, some of the college kids were home, some of the time (I know because of the mysterious appearance of dirty clothes and used dishes and the equally mysterious disappearance of food and the gas key.)

Now the college bunch are gone, but I think one will be calling soon, because I discovered two unmatched shoes in his room this morning. Our pocketbooks are thinner, but we are looking forward to the graduation, a college graduate (maybe even two of them) this year.

But, we aren't without teenagers. In fact, we've gained another "trendy" gal to go with our own. Her name is Sandra, and she's from Switzerland. As a Rotary Exchange student, she'll be attending Minico as a senior this year. She speaks fluent English, but our "accents" throw her because she learned "English" in English, not American English.

She won me over right away when she said she liked Willie Nelson. She loves horses and is looking forward to riding for hours on end

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

In some of Idaho's vast spaces we met her and her parents a month ago in Switzerland. In fact, her parents gave us the "Deluxe-Three-Day-Tour-Of-Switzerland-In-One-Day." We went to the top of the Jungfrau Alp, via the railroad behind the Elger Mountain's famous North Face, for lunch. Then we ended the day watching a beautiful sunset, having dinner beside the water and the 600-year-old bridge in Lucerne.

It was marvelous, and now we're anxious to show Sandra our corner of the world. Her mother sent me an authentic Swiss cookbook in English. It's a treasured addition to my collection and has some super recipes I want to share with you.

I especially like it because it is quite basic and, except for some of the more specialized cheeses, the ingredients are easy to find.

The Swiss also love potatoes and use them in unusual ways (combined with pasta, for example) but, as usual, I went directly to the dessert section and will share a couple of those this time:

With the apple harvest just ahead, you might like to try this pie.

THURGAU APPLE PIE
2 1/2 ounces butter
1 pinch salt
3/4 cup brown sugar
3 eggs
1 tablespoon cream
1 cup plus 1 tablespoon flour
9 ounces chopped almonds
5 apples
butter for the pan
4 tablespoons raspberry marmalade

Whip the butter until foamy. Stir in 1 1/2 tablespoons sugar, 1 beaten egg and the cream. Gradually fold in the sifted flour. Let rest in a cool place for one hour.

For the filling, whip the remaining eggs and 2 tablespoons sugar until creamy. Add the almonds. Grate two apples, unpeared and add to egg and almond mixture. Pare, core and halve the remaining three apples.

Roll out the dough and place it in a buttered 9-inch pie pan. Spread with the almond mixture. Place the apple halves on a wooden board, flat side down. Thinly slice the apples but not all the way through so that the slices are still connected. Arrange the apples in the pie shell. Bake for 40 minutes at 450 degrees.

In the last 5 minutes of baking, spread the apples with 2 tablespoons marmalade. Remove from oven and spread with the remaining marmalade. If you can't find marmalade, just try good raspberry jam.

A super back-to-school Swiss breakfast is Muesli. You can buy this dehydrated and prepared in the cereal sections of some supermarkets or health food stores. This is a variation of the original which was developed by a Dr. Bircher.

BIRCHERMUESLI
6 tablespoons rolled oats
1 1/4 cups milk
juice of 1-2 lemons
1 apple
1 banana
1 orange
6 tablespoons ground nuts
7 ounces berries of other fruit

Mix the oats with the milk and sugar. (I realize the recipe didn't call for any sugar, but I would try about 1 teaspoon to start with and add for your own taste. Brown sugar is good.)

Wash the apple and grate into the oat mixture. Add the lemon juice and stir well to prevent discoloration of the apple.

Slice the banana. Peel, halve and pit the oranges and cut into thin slices. Cut the berries or other fruit into small pieces. Add all fruit to the oat mixture and stir. Top with ground nuts before serving.

In an additional note to the recipe it was suggested you garnish with whipped cream as desired. In Dr. Bircher's original recipe, only apples are used and instead of milk, a mixture of half water and half condensed milk is used.

This also is good with yogurt, either plain or flavored.

Well, here are a couple of authentic Swiss recipes. I will experiment with some of the cheese dishes and give them to you this fall.

Enjoy!

lightly browned, remove from pan and set aside. Add 2 more tablespoons oil to pan and saute onion and garlic until soft. Remove from heat. Add the chard or spinach, the pine nuts and 2 more tablespoons of oil and mix. Hollow the cavities of the tomatoes. Sprinkle insides with salt, pepper, sugar and basil; stuff with chard mixture. Arrange tomatoes in a baking pan. Drizzle remaining 2 tablespoons olive oil over them, and bake at 350 for 15 minutes. Chill, then bring to room temperature before serving.

  - 6 small zucchini
  - 2 tablespoons butter
  - 6 scallions, chopped
  - Salt and pepper to taste

Turn on high heat and toss zucchini mixture until just heated through. Remove from heat and season to taste with salt, pepper and freshly ground nutmeg. Serve immediately, sprinkling with parmesan cheese.

GREEN AND GOLD SQUASH

- 1-4 teaspoon pepper
- 3 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1-2 cup milk
- 1 cup shredded sharp cheddar cheese
- 1-2 cup cracker crumbs

In a large frying pan, saute onion in salad oil until golden brown. Remove from heat; stir in shredded zucchini and yellow squash, parsley, salt, oregano, pepper and slightly beaten eggs blended with milk. Spoon about half the mixture into a buttered 1 1/2-quart baking dish; sprinkle with half the cheese and half the crumbs. Make a second layer of the remaining squash; sprinkle with remaining cracker crumbs. Arrange the last of the cheese in a crisscross design on top. Bake, uncovered, in 350-degree oven for about 45 minutes.

Row cover material tests give unclear yield results

I have used two different commercial row cover materials on 10 different vegetables at Ricks College this spring and summer to evaluate their effectiveness.

So far, the benefits have been quite limited. Although vegetative growth has been stimulated, there seem to be only limited differences in earliness and yield.

The two row cover materials tested were slitted clear, polyethylene plastic and a woven fabric material named Reemay. Both materials are sold in five-foot widths. The plastic is supported by wire hoops while the lighter Reemay fabric requires no support. They were placed over single or double rows of plants with the edges and ends held down by soil.

I had expected to have problems with the covers blowing off the plants. They stayed in place very well even during heavy winds if adequate soil was placed on the edges. The slits in the plastic and the loose weave of the fabric allowed air to move through them, rather than filling up and blowing away like a balloon.

Both materials are said to provide frost protection, making it possible to plant earlier. I had applied the material to only one frost-sensitive vegetable before the last frost. Tomato plants had been growing under both materials for about two weeks before a light frost of 31 degrees. All leaves were frozen under both materials.

However, plants were not killed and new leaves were quickly regrown by the plants. These plants produced their first ripe fruit at the same time as uncovered plants transplanted a week after the frost. If the plants had not been damaged by the frost, they probably would have ripened sooner.

Best results were obtained on peppers. Peppers covered by plastic and Reemay began growing again much faster after transplanting than uncovered plants. Ripe fruit has been harvested about two weeks earlier with plastic covers and a week sooner with Reemay fabric.

The most striking growth differences were noted with bush beans. The warmer environment under the plastic and Reemay caused seeds to germinate faster and plants to grow faster and larger.

Row covers were removed about six weeks after planting because plants were beginning to grow through the slits. However, when plants were picked three weeks later, the uncovered plants had the largest amount of beans. Later pickings were larger on the covered plants so that after four pickings, yields are about the same.

Other vegetables under test include lettuce, broccoli, okra, eggplant, cucumbers, cantaloupe and watermelon. Lettuce and broccoli harvest was about one week earlier under covers. Plant growth differences have been noticed with cucumbers and melons, but it is too early to see if there are any yield differences.

In all the trials, both covered and uncovered plants were planted at the same time. These probably would have been greater differences noted if the covered plants had been planted earlier and protected from frost by insulating material such as a blanket. The row covers do increase the temperature underneath, making earlier planting possible.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College.

Give melons a thorough inspection

By EARL ARONSON
The Associated Press

A favorite summer rite of watermelon lovers is thumping and shaking and looking for some sign of what could be inside. In short, trying to find a perfect watermelon.

But judging the quality of a watermelon is very difficult unless it is cut apart, says Mary K. Sweeten, Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service food and nutrition specialist. A recent produce industry study indicated that about 40 percent of consumers find melons the most difficult fruit to judge for ripeness and freshness.

Admittedly unreliable, here are a few appearance factors that may help guide you to a ripe, juicy watermelon:

The melon's surface should be relatively smooth. The rind should be slightly dull — not shiny or very dull. The ends should be filled out and rounded and the underside creamy in color.

Good melons have firm, juicy flesh with good red color. White streaks and whitish seeds indicate immaturity. Avoid a melon with dry, mealy flesh or watery, stringy flesh, signs of overmaturity or aging after harvest.

Leggy Rubber Plant

A major problem with rubber plants is their tendency to become leggy. This is fairly easily changed by air layering propagation, which also will establish an attractive new plant.

For air layering you need only a knife, a handful of sphagnum moss, a package of rooting hormone (such as ROOTONE), available at garden shops, some electrical tape, and a 10-square inch piece of polyethylene (sandwich wrap).

About two inches below the lowest leaf cluster of the mother plant, cut an angular slice a third of the way through the stem. Coat the interior of the cut with the hormone powder, which encourages root development. Reinforce the stem at the cut by taping two toothpicks alongside the cut. Avoid covering the cut itself with tape. Dampen the moss, roll it into a 2 1/2-inch ball, halve the ball (as you would a peeled orange), place the halves around the stem to cover the cut, and knead the moss together again.

By ANDY LANG

electrician?

A. — You are correct. No flue is needed. In fact, all that is necessary is to place the heater where you plan on using an electric heater. I want it and plug it in. However, if I install it myself or will I need an electric heater, you probably will need an electrician, especially in areas where the code requires it. If you plan on built-in electric heat, the time to have it done is while the framing is up and prior to installation of the walls. Therefore, the electrician should be consulted before you begin work.

McHale: 1982 Expos were plagued by coke

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The New York Times on Tuesday reported that John McHale, president of the Montreal Expos, said cocaine was the reason his team did not win its division championship in 1982, when the team generally was considered to be the best in the National League.

Tim Raines, who was a sensation as a rookie, was the only member of the '82 Expos to be publicly identified as a cocaine user and voluntarily entered a treatment center after the season.

"Now that I look back," Raines is quoted in the Times as saying, "I probably was the only one that did undergo treatment, but I wasn't the only one that needed it." Raines told the Times he became involved with cocaine through older teammates and became a heavy user, using cocaine virtually every day.

"I had it in a little gram bottles that I kept in my pocket," Raines said. "Actually, a lot of times I would put it in my batting glove and then in my pocket. I was trying to find ways of not getting caught."

When he slid into a base, Raines added, he protected his investment. "Usually, when I carried it in my pocket, I'd go in head first."

In 1982, Raines' batting average dropped 27 points to .277. In 1981, he stole one out of every 1.97 times he reached base; in 1982, he stole one out of every 3.26 times.

"I struck out a lot more; my vision was lessened," Raines said. "A lot of times I'd go up to the plate and the ball was right down the middle and I'd jump back, thinking it was at my head. The umpire would call it a strike and I'd start arguing. He'd say, 'That ball was right down the middle.' When you're on drugs, you don't feel you're doing anything wrong."

Lionie Smith, an admitted heavy user when he played the outfield for the St. Louis Cardinals in 1983, was quoted in the Times as saying: "I think it slowed me down, not just running but my mental thinking. I wasn't as alert."

"Look at my defense. It seemed like I was averaging two or three errors a game. I was getting picked off. Everything I swung at was away."

"I think the Times gives an unfortunate and inaccurate slant to the problem," said Lee MacPhail, president of the club owners' Player-Relations Committee. "All of the information in the Times article occurred two to three years ago. We have had none of this since the joint review council was inflated."

MacPhail, meanwhile, lay baseball's inability to get a handle on the drug problem on the players' union.

"We don't have the knowledge of the dimension of the problem on the major league level because the players' association won't allow us to test the players."

The players' union has objected to mandatory testing citing an infringement of their constitutional rights. "I understand the argument of constitutional rights but everybody in our society has to surrender some rights. That is why we have laws," MacPhail said. "I don't think it is too much to ask a small group, 650 individuals, to agree to testing. And I believe in time they will agree."

"Lee is a loyal soldier," Gene Dizza, general counsel to the players' union, said when asked to comment on MacPhail's remarks. "When the council last met in May, he co-authored a statement which said the program had meaningfully contributed to minimizing serious problems of chemical use and abuse in major league baseball."

Auburn remains wary despite ranking as Southern power

Editor's note: This is the second in a six-part series previewing the prospects of different regions' college football teams.

By ED SHEARER
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — While Auburn appears to be the South's college football power in 1985, Coach Pat Dye knows preseason expectations sometimes fail to materialize.

"This football team has a lot of potential, but you know what potential is — that's all it is until it produces," Dye said. "We will just have to wait and see how far that (potential) will take us."

Auburn has been in the preseason spotlight before. The Tigers were the first choice a year ago to march through the Southeastern Conference and seriously contend for the 1984 national championship.

Instead, the Tigers struggled through a 9-4 season, finishing third in the SEC and 14th in the final Associated Press poll.

"Last year was not such a bad year by a lot of standards, but when you are picked to be No. 1 in the nation, '94 is not very good," Dye said. "Being picked No. 1 was certainly premature, but it was something we enjoyed during the buildup for the season."

Elsewhere in the South, Maryland is favored to capture the Atlantic Coast Conference championship for the third year in a row and Miami, Fla., Florida State and South Carolina are expected to lead the way in the Southeastern Conference. The Citadel and Furman should battle for the title in the Southern Conference, a Division I-AA league.

There will be a new look offense for Auburn when it opens the season against Southwestern Louisiana on Sept. 7.

Dye has lived with the Wishbone attack since his days as an assistant under Bear Bryant at Alabama. He's decided to take a look at the I-formation this year, primarily because of senior Bo Jackson, a 1983 All-American who missed six games last year with a separated shoulder.

Jackson, who has 2,517 career yards, has carried the ball 20 or more times in only three of his 27 regular season games. By contrast, three-time Georgia All-American Herschel Walker carried the ball less than 20 times in only three of his 33 games, while netting 5,259 yards in the I-formation.

Auburn is heavily favored to capture the SEC title this time, with its most serious challenge expected from Florida, which won't win the championship even if it goes undefeated.

The Gators swept to the 1984 SEC title, the only one in the school's history, but that crown was stripped by the conference because of recruiting violations that landed the Gators on NCAA probation for two years. Teams on probation, with sanctions, are ineligible to win SEC titles.

Of the eligible SEC contenders, Alabama, Tennessee and Louisiana State appear to have the best shot at Auburn. Georgia's win of three successive titles beginning in 1981 is in a rebuilding stage.

Auburn and Alabama each return 16 starters from last year, most in the SEC, with Mississippi State bringing back 15 starters, including 10 on defense.

Auburn has two All-SEC linemen back, defensive end Gerald Robinson and offensive guard Jeff Lott, and Alabama also has a pair of all-conference stars in linebacker Cornelius Bennett and defensive tackle Jon Hand.

Florida must rebuild its offensive line, but the Gators have some proven backs in quarterback Kerwin Bell and runners Neal Anderson and John L. Williams. Alonzo Johnson ranks as one of the area's top outside linebackers.

Like Florida, has some spots to fill in its line, but the Tigers also have some gifted backs — quarterback Jeff Wickersham and running backs Dalton Hilliard and Garry James.

Tennessee's attack will be geared to Tony Robinson, who had 2,089 yards of offense in winning the quarterback slot on the All-SEC team last year.

Mississippi, which went 3-5 last year, has 18 starters back for 1985, including two All-ACC defenders — guard Bruce Messner and back Al Covington.

"We are talent-wise a little better than last year, but I don't know if it will be reflected in the win-loss record, though," Maryland Coach Bobby Ross said. "It is very important that we go off to a good start."

With Clemson coming off probation and picked to finish second, the ACC will have eight teams officially in their race for the first time since 1970. Georgia Tech and Virginia are expected to nail down the other two first-division spots in the 1985 race.

Among the top talent returning in the ACC are quarterbacks John Dewberry of Georgia Tech and Kevin Anthony of North Carolina, wide receivers Terrance Lott and Clemson's Chuck Hartung of Duke and John Ford of Virginia, offensive tackles Jim Dombrowski of Virginia and Joe Millichnik of North Carolina State and defensive end Gary Baldinger of Wake Forest.

Miami, the 1984 national champion, is coming off a disappointing 8-5 season.

Chicago won NFC Central in '84; hoping for '85 repeat

Grant returns, but division full of new coaches

Editor's note: This is the third in a six-part series previewing the NFL divisions' prospects this season.

By NICK GERANIOS
The Associated Press

The Chicago Bears, hoping for continued magic from Walter Payton and a full season from quarterback Jim McMahon, will try in 1985 to become the first team to repeat as NFC Central champion since Minnesota in 1978.

Chicago led the National Football League in defense last season in building a 10-6 record and winning its first title since 1963. The Bears defeated Washington in the playoffs before losing to San Francisco in the division final.

Coach Mike Ditka says his goal is a Super Bowl title. "If we settle for less, we're foolish," he says. "We found out that it wasn't really that hard to get where we were last year, but it was a bit harder to go all the way."

Chicago's first title of any kind since 1963 was accomplished mainly by a defense that ranked first in the NFL.

Walter Payton finished second in the NFL with 1,684 rushing yards last season, when he also wrested the all-time rushing record from Jim Brown. Payton, 31, shows no sign of letting up as he enters his 11th season with 13,309 career yards.

But the Bears ranked just 26th in pass offense, using six different quarterbacks because of injuries. Starter Jim McMahon played just nine games while throwing for 1,146 yards and eight touchdowns.

The defense featured four Pro Bowl starters and posted a record 72 quarterback sacks. But contract disputes kept several key veterans out of camp, including linebackers Mike Singletary and Al Harris, and safety Todd Bell.

Green Bay under Forrest Gregg, is hoping to repeat the 7-1 second half of last year rather than the 1-7 first half.

The explosive offense was led by Lynn Dickey's 3,195 passing yards and 25 touchdowns. Pro-Bowler James Lofton caught 62 passes for 1,361 yards, while Paul Coffman grabbed 43 passes. The rushing attack featured Jerry Ellis and off-injured Eddie Lee Ivey, with 562.

On defense, rookie free safety Tom Flynn led the conference with nine interceptions, and the linebacking looks strong. But the line is in flux, with nose tackle Terry Jones lost for the season but end Ezra Johnson, troubled by back problems in 1984, has looking good in preseason drills.

Bud Grant, returning from retirement to pick up the pieces in Minnesota, has a career record of 161-99-5 from 1967 until 1983 with four Super Bowl appearances. He will be trying to make something from a team that finished 3-13 last season, its worst record ever.

"Our objective has to be to reach the Super Bowl," says Grant, reaching at once to the top. "But for anybody as far down as we are, it will probably take at least three years to get back."

The return of quarterback Tommy Kramer, who threw for just 1,678 yards and nine touchdowns in an injury-plagued year, should produce some points.

Grant says the only area that doesn't need improvement is kicking. Jan Stenerud, oldest player in the NFL at 42, was 20 for 23 in field goals last season and made the Pro Bowl.

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers take the field for the first time in their nine-year history without John McKay as head coach.

Leeman Bennett, who coached the Atlanta Falcons from 1977 to 1982, takes over for McKay, who won only

NFL experiences first instant video overrule

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Art McNally, the National Football League's supervisor of officials, did what every fan would love to do: He changed a referee's call after watching a televised instant replay.

McNally toyed with the experimental rule in three previous exhibition games in the past week, but he used it to correct a night-in-the-first-time error on Monday in the fourth quarter of the San Francisco 49ers-Denver Broncos game.

San Francisco rookie wide receiver Jerry Rice announced a pass at midfield, was hit while in the air, then dropped to the ground. McNally, in a white jacket, interrupted the game and asked referees to check the play. He called a conference while Upstairs, about 50 yards from the play, McNally saw things differently. "He's watching the game as it progresses," and "he's seen a mistake has been made, he's something he knows is in error, or will change the call," Reader said, he has a strong feeling of the play. "If he's not 100 percent sure, such as a fumble, interception, or in this case, McNally saw Rice catch, stepping out of bounds, drop the ball before both of his feet by defensive contact, he would hit the turf. One foot had landed, communicate with the umpire, but the other had not," McNally Jack Reader, assistant supervisor, ruled the pass incomplete, giving officials in New York, said Tuesday. "I had no doubt that it was an instant replay would come in handy. There are some great referees, but there isn't anyone who is going to see everything."

The call didn't stop the Broncos from marching on to a 20-13 victory.

The instant replay rule will be used in five more exhibition games this summer, all of them nationally televised, and then will be studied by the league's rules committee for possible use next year.

The last time the league experimented with instant replay to second-guess officials' calls was in 1978.

Feds may go after 'Hot Rod'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Federal prosecutors may take up the case against former Tulane basketball star John "Hot Rod" Williams if a mistrial puts it out of state court for good, says U.S. Attorney John Volz.

"We are monitoring the case. If for some reason and I'm not predicting anything, the case cannot be prosecuted in state court, we will look into the possibility of pressing federal charges, if any are prosecutable," said Volz.

Orleans Parish prosecutors have said that the language in a mistrial order signed Thursday by Criminal District Judge Alvin V. Oser may keep them from bringing Williams to trial a second time.

In his order, Oser said prosecutors goaded defense attorneys into seeking a mistrial by failing to provide evidence that might have helped prove Williams' innocence.

Prosecutors have asked Oser to soften the language of his order, saying that as it stands it might prevent a second trial because of constitutional provisions against double jeopardy.

Oser is to hear that request Friday.

Astros use grand slam to obliterate 2nd-place Cards, 17-2

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Mark Ballew got his pitch and Dickie Thon got his chance to play regularly Tuesday night and drove in four runs in as the Astros clubbed St. Louis 17-2.

The loss dropped the Cardinals 1 1/2 games behind New York in the National League East.

Ballew hit his second grand slam of the season to get the Astros started in the third inning and Thon, now playing regularly against right-handed pitching, produced a two-run triple in the fourth and a two-run homer in the sixth inning.

"(Ricky) Horton had to get a fast ball in to me," Ballew said. "I knew it had a chance but I knew it was going to hit the fence. Once you jump on early on them, you shut out their running game. Hitting is contagious in a game like this."

ATLANTA (AP) — Ryne Sandberg hit a two-run homer in a three-run eighth inning Tuesday night to give the Chicago Cubs a 5-2 victory over the Braves.

Chicago's hitting surge caught the Atlanta Braves off guard.

Atlanta's pitcher, Steve Carlton, struck out 10 batters but pitched a seven-hitter Tuesday night in leading the

New York Mets posted the San Francisco Giants 3-1.

Gooden, 19-3, became the first National League pitcher to hit for the cycle to reach 200 strikeouts in both of his first two seasons. The 29-year-old right-hander, who led the majors with 276 strikeouts last year, increased his major league leading total this season to 208. Herb Score of Cleveland is the only other pitcher to reach 200 strikeouts in his first two seasons, having accomplished the feat in 1955 and 1956.

The 16 strikeouts also tied Gooden's career high, set last season against Pittsburgh.

Gooden's 19 victories tied him with St. Louis' Jorgin Andujar for the major league lead, and Gooden's sixth shutout tied him with John Tudor, also of St. Louis, for tops in the big leagues. Gooden's winning streak is the longest in the majors this season and he lowered his earned-run average to 1.74, the best in baseball.

The victory, the 13th in the last 16 games for the Mets, kept them in first place in the National League East.

Los Angeles 5 Philadelphia 4

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mariano Rivera's 11th-inning run-scoring triple carried the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 5-4 victory Tuesday night over the Philadelphia Phillies, snapping a two-game losing streak for the National League West leaders.

Steve Sax hit a one-out single off Roger Kent Tekula, 4-9. After pinch hitter Bill Russell popped up for the second out, Duncan hit a line drive that bounced off, the knees of left fielder Greg Gross and carried into center to score Sax with the winning run. It was the fifth game-winning hit for the season for the Dodger.

Reuschel won for the first time in more than a month as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Cincinnati Reds 3-2.

Henke helps Jays clinch 3-2 win over Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — In just over three weeks, Tom Henke has risen from the minor leagues to become the top reliever on the top team in baseball.

"It has been fun, coming up here and doing well," the right-hander said Tuesday after pitching two scoreless innings for his fourth save as the Toronto Blue Jays edged the Cleveland Indians 3-2.

"I'm trying not to put any pressure on myself, thinking of us being in a pennant race," Henke said. "I'm just trying to do well one hitter at a time, because the worst pressure is what you put on yourself."

Henke has not given up a run in 16 innings since the Blue Jays promoted him from Class AAA Syracuse late last month.

"He's just being promoted for us," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox, whose club improved its major league leading record to 74-45.

Tony Fernandez scored one run and drove in two, including the tiebreaker in the seventh inning, to give the Blue Jays the victory.

Toronto snapped a 2-2 tie with one out in the seventh when Jesse Barfield tripled to center and scored on Fernandez's second single of the eight games in the past two years and was 6-10 last year.

"This is a better team than the one I took over in Atlanta," says Bennett. "I expect us to be able to compete for the championship of our division."

Defensively, the Bucks allowed a team record 574 yards last year. The burden will fall on first-round draft choice Ron Holmes, a defensive end from Washington.

Quarterback Steve DeBerg threw for 3,554 yards and 19 touchdowns. His top receivers were Kevin House, with 76 receptions for 1,065 yards, and Gerald Carter, with 60 catches.
