South Africa calls another policy retreat

By TOM BALDWIN The Associated Press

Analysis — A2

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A government panel on Thursday proposed repeal of the hated "pass laws" that keep South Africa's blacks out of white areas — the second major retreat from the apartheid system announced in two days. Even whites who oppose the government hailed the step. "This is the beginning of the end of apartheid," said Sheona Duncan, president of the Black Sash women's movement, which opposes the nation's system of racial segregation. "I really do think it means something. They are not playing around with words this time." Helen Suzman, an anti-apartheid member of Parliament, said, "This is probably the most important step forward in 30 years." A primary effect will be that families now restricted to their tribal homelands could join the men working in the cities, preventing the breakup of families. On Wednesday, President P.W.

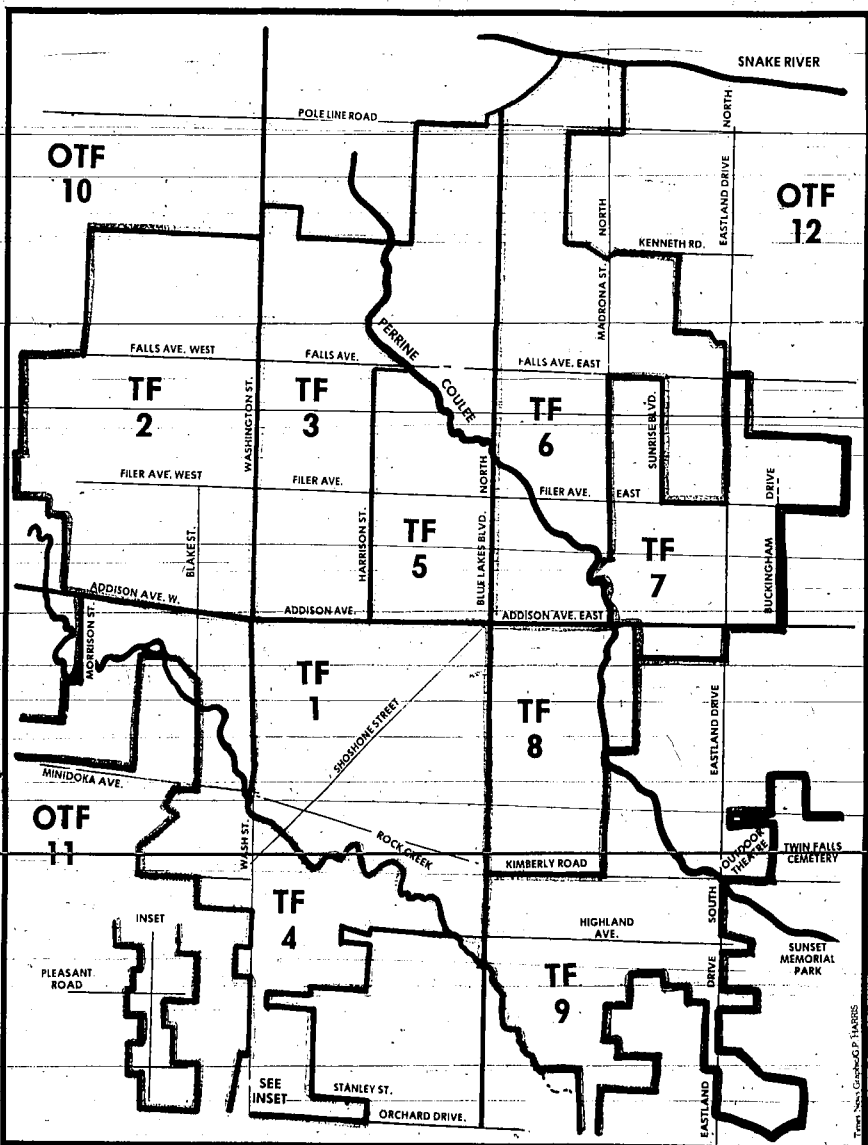

Botha told a congress of his National Party that the government was giving up its policy that blacks eventually have to become citizens of black homelands and relinquish citizenship in South Africa. Blacks, however, still will have political rights only in the homeland, and still will not be able to vote in South Africa. Police reported rioting near Cape Town, where they said they shot and killed three black men, and in Soweto, outside Johannesburg, where a 50-year-old white school teacher and 10 black students suffered shotgun wounds after police fired on "unruly" students. Residents of Soweto's White City Jabavu neighborhood said police arrested as many as 600 students around Hlangwe High School, holding an undetermined number of them in Diepkloof Prison under state-of-emergency regulations. • See APARTHEID on Page A2

Soviet spy defects; 25 agents named

By DAVID MASON The Associated Press

LONDON — The government announced Thursday that the Soviet spy master for Britain has defected and has identified 25 espionage agents, who are being expelled from the country. The Foreign Office said Oleg A. Gordievski, 46, had recently been appointed head of the Soviet RGB office in London, but defected because he "wished to become a citizen of a democratic country and live in a free society." He was granted asylum in Britain. Sir Geoffrey Howe, the foreign secretary, called the defection a "substantial coup" for the British security services. Erik Ninn-Hansen, Denmark's justice minister, indicated that Gordievski had been a double agent for the West since the 1960s, when he served with the Soviet Embassy in Copenhagen. Ninn-Hansen, speaking on Danish television, said Gordievski "supplied police intelligence with much information, also on conversations he conducted, and he was an extremely important source of information of significance to our security." The Danish minister said British and Danish counterintelligence services had been in contact with each other about Gordievski for some time, though he would not go into details. Britain's Foreign Office would not comment on Ninn-Hansen's statement. • See SPY on Page A2

Reagan keeps push for tax reform alive

By MICHAEL PUTZEL The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — President Reagan returned to Florida on Thursday determined to drum up interest in a tax bill congressional leaders say just isn't a top-priority item among constituents more concerned about the trade deficit or South Africa. Using his own age and inevitable retirement to identify himself with his elderly audience, the 74-year-old, second-term president pressed his campaign against "useless tax dodges" and called charges his tax plan would hurt the middle class "balderdash." Addressing about 2,600 senior citizens brought together by a national lobby financed largely by corporations that support the administration's tax bill, Reagan said he opposes the present system because it isn't fair. • See REAGAN on Page A2

Precinct-consolidation aim is efficiency

By ANNETTE CARY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls county and city voters are going to have to get used to new precinct boundaries and polling places, following the consolidation of 26 county precincts and 10 city precincts into a total of 12 joint precincts. The change may cause some confusion initially, but county and city officials are hoping it will make registration and voting procedures more efficient and less confusing in the long run. City residents will be the ones first affected by the change. The Nov. 5 election for three councilmembers

How will voters be affected? How do I find out where I vote in November city elections? City officials will be mailing notices of precinct changes and polling places to registered voters in the city limits, probably in mid-October. What if I don't receive a notice of where to vote before the November election? This should mean that you are not registered to vote in a city election. Where do I register to vote? City Hall or the County Courthouse. What if I am only registered for county general elections and not city elections? You will automatically become eligible to vote in city elections, anyway, with consolidation of voting rolls.

precinct and polling place. The county also plans to notify affected voters of the change. Only county voters who live in or near Twin Falls will have districts changed. There will not be a county election until the May primaries. Voters may register now at either City Hall or the County Courthouse. In the past voters had to register separately for city elections and county elections, which included registration for state and national elections. The system caught many city residents by surprise in the past when they learned too late at the polls that registration for county, state • See VOTING on Page A2

Senate pans plan for alien pickers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, considering major provisions of a bill to curb illegal immigration, voted narrowly Thursday to reject a plan that would have given fruit and vegetable growers a temporary workforce of foreign crop pickers.

The vote was 50-48 in favor of the motion to table — in effect, kill — the amendment.

The motion to kill the proposal was offered by the immigration bill's chief sponsor, Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo. No other major issues were resolved before the Senate adjourned Thursday evening, and debate was set to resume Friday. A final vote could be held Friday or next week, probably Tuesday.

Before the final vote, the Senate also must decide questions involving amnesty for illegal aliens, anti-discrimination protections for legal aliens, reimbursement to state governments for the cost of legalization, and the terms of sanctions against employers knowingly hiring undocumented workers.

Simpson's bill includes stiff employer sanctions and a delayed amnesty program that could take three years to begin.

While Congress debates the problem, more than 2,700 illegal aliens are caught by authorities every day and an unknown number cross into the United States, most of them finding low-paying jobs.

At the same time, more than a half-million legal immigrants arrive each year in the United States, which takes in more legal immigrants and refugees than the rest of the world combined.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., chief sponsor of the growers' amendment, said changing climatic conditions make it impossible for growers of perishable crops to use the rigid, current program for temporary foreign workers, which requires an 80-day advance notice to the Labor Department.

Simpson's bill would lower the advance time to 60 days, but Wilson argued that was inadequate. Growers of perishable crops, he said, need a force of up to 300,000 temporary workers in the country who can move from place to place on quick notice.

Under Wilson's plan, farmers would have to petition the government if they to bring in the foreign workers, and the attorney general must approve a maximum number to be allowed in monthly.

After nine months, the workers would have to return to their country of origin. To ensure that they go back, 20 percent of the workers' wages would be placed in escrow until they went home.

The workers would be given housing or a housing subsidy, workmen's compensation; federal and state labor law protections and the right to join unions.

But organized labor bitterly opposed the Wilson amendment. Labor officials believe the foreign workers face exploitation and would take jobs from Americans.

Prosecutor: Crime financed The Order

SEATTLE (AP) — Members of "The Order" — saw Jews, blacks and other minorities as common enemies, and embarked on a crime-funded revolution "to bring victory to the Aryan race," a prosecutor said in opening arguments of their racketeering trial Thursday.

They visited graveyards to get false identifications; established "safe houses" around the nation and offered salary bonuses for crimes like armored car holdups, Assistant U.S. Attorney Bob Ward told the jury in the racketeering trial against 11 members of the group.

All Order members took a loyalty oath, holding hands and forming a circle around a small child, Ward told the all-white, U.S. District Court jury.

"That child was supposed to represent the future of the Aryan race," Ward said. The oath also included the vow that members would "do whatever is necessary . . . to bring victory to the Aryan race," Ward said.

The group was founded in 1983 by Robert Jay Mathews of the northeastern Washington town of Metaline Falls, Ward said. "He eventually formed a desire to form an action group . . . to take action against groups that were causing problems for white people."

Mathews was killed last December in a fire on Whidbey Island after a shootout with federal agents.

His recruits "viewed as common enemies Jews, blacks, who they called 'mud people' and other racial minorities," Ward said.

Defense attorneys warned jurors repeatedly to treat the defendants as individuals.

"Make no mistake about it. This is a political trial," said Fred Leatherman, attorney for defendant Randolph George Duey.

"My biggest fear is that after you hear all the evidence . . . you're going to think back on all the evidence and where there's a doubt, you're going to want to lump them all together because of their beliefs."

The indictment lists dozens of crimes allegedly committed by those charged, including bank and armored car robberies, counterfeiting and two homicides, including that of Alan Berg, a Denver radio talk show host.

Genie is said to have granted wrong wishes

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A charity that raised $237,000 last year to grant children their dying wishes spent only $10,000 for that purpose and used the rest for fund raising, salaries and luxuries including renting a videotape player and X-rated movie, authorities said Thursday.

"The reality is, the dream has become a nightmare," Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said of the Genie Project.

In a lawsuit aimed at closing down the charity, Lieberman said the money not spent on the children was used to pay the operators, inflated salaries, hire a professional fundraiser, buy jewelry, and rent a car, a satellite player and a movie entitled "Sex Games."

"In the three years I have been attorney general, I have not seen a case that has made me angrier," Lieberman said.

The Genie Project was formed in October 1982 by Michael and Suzanne Bates, a couple who said they got the idea after reading an article about a similar organization in a national magazine. The Genie Project was not affiliated with any national organization.

torney for the Bateses, said there had been no effort to defraud the public or misuse charitable funds.

"The Genie Project has been run in a very public way," Donnarumma said. "There should be no suggestion it was some sham or device created to divert funds. To the extent there is a problem, I think it's going to be something — and I'm not even conceding it is — arising from poor exercise of judgment."

Lieberman said his investigation has convinced him otherwise.

"What kind of charity would take advantage of dying children for personal profit?" Lieberman asked at a news conference.

AIDS blamed for shortage

The Associated Press

Blood supplies are critically low in scattered sections of the nation and some health officials say unfounded fears of contracting AIDS may be keeping potential donors from giving blood.

"AIDS has just been in the public eye so much lately, you can't help but feel that plays a part in the shortage," said Dr. Adelfa Panlilio, acting director of blood services at the Red Cross chapter in Nashville, Tenn., where the inventory was 870 pints Wednesday, down from the usual 2,000 to 2,500 pints.

Some cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome have been linked to receiving transfusions of contaminated blood.

But "you cannot contract AIDS by giving blood," said Dr. William C. Sherwood, director of Red Cross Blood Services in Philadelphia. "Giving blood is an extremely safe and easy procedure."

Commitment needed to move Idaho ahead

Choosing his words carefully, as he has often done in the past, former Idaho Frozen Foods President Lee Odenwald nonetheless has some sobering thoughts for the Magic Valley as he leaves the area to take on a new corporate assignment.

Twin Falls and valley citizens, he says, must be willing to invest in community improvements to attract industry here. They must be willing to support education systems which need upgrading. They must change with the times. That is something, Odenwald says, which Idaho has not generally done.

Beyond these, Odenwald says, Magic Valley communities need to be more aggressive in their recruiting efforts. They must work more closely with both businesses and the state. Community leadership must be broader. Not enough potential leaders, he says, are involved.

Quality of life is important, but the community must be careful not to slam the door when specific proposals are raised.

None of these ideas are particularly new, nor has Odenwald been the only one to express them. Similar observations have come from other business leaders, like Aurora Capital's Marc Peperzak, and legislators like Sen. Laird Noh and former Sen. John Barker, Buhl.

But words, as all these individuals know, are not enough. In the end, the commitment to improvement must come from the people.

If we want better schools and better teachers, we must be prepared to build and equip the first and hire the second. If we want an improved recreational facility in the form of a swimming pool, we must be willing to pass the bond issue for it.

All of these mean tax dollars, and it is at that point that people often say no. This item is too expensive, they say. That proposal is too much.

There are always many reasons to say no. But the end result is that necessary improvements don't get made.

It is an old principle of representative government, but a true one: in the end, a community gets the quality it is willing to pay for.

If we Idahoans want the state to go forward, we must work for that goal and pay for it. That's the bottom line of Odenwald's message.

U.S. isolationism produces paradox

William Schneider

By signing an executive order imposing limited sanctions on South Africa, President Reagan has, he says, moved from a policy of "constructive engagement" to one of "active constructive engagement." His shift may have satisfied Congress, at least for the time being. Has it satisfied the American public?

Most likely, yes. According to the polls, Americans have two reactions to the crisis in South Africa: a deep aversion to that country's racial policies and a deep aversion to getting ourselves involved in another country's problems.

Last month the Gallup Poll asked people whether their sympathies were "more with the black population or more with the South African government." By more than 5 to 1, the public sympathized with South African blacks. Then Gallup asked, "What, if anything, do you think the U.S. should do next?" By far the largest number — 44 percent — said, "Don't get involved." Only 16 percent mentioned some form of sanctions.

Even though the public finds apartheid repugnant, the polls have never shown widespread support for sanctions. In a poll taken for Business Week early this year, the public resoundingly disapproved of the apartheid system. Nevertheless, majorities were opposed to policies that would ban new bank loans to South Africa or prohibit new U.S. investment there. Two-thirds opposed a trade embargo. Three-quarters did not like the idea of forcing U.S. businesses to close their South African operations.

Early this summer the CBS News-New York Times Poll asked people whether the U.S. government should do more to pressure South Africa to give up apartheid; 37 percent said yes, 43 percent said no and 20 percent had no opinion. The poll showed a 41 percent-33 percent margin against U.S. corporations refusing to do business in South Africa in order to show their opposition to apartheid. Blacks favored such a policy, but only by a small margin (41 percent to 35 percent).

Even after the South African government declared a state of emergency on July 21 and the violence in that country escalated, the American public remained divided. A late-August CBS News poll found the public split over whether the United States should bring economic sanctions against South Africa — 37 percent were in favor of sanctions, 34 percent were against and 29 percent "didn't know enough about it to say."

What explains the public's reluctance to back up its convictions? The polls reveal some concern that sanctions would end up hurting blacks in South Africa. And many believe that economic sanctions would not be effective in getting the government to change its policies.

But there is another reason. Most Americans do not support sanctions against South Africa, a right-wing regime that has been friendly to the United States. Most Americans also do not favor sanctions against Nicaragua, a left-wing regime with which our relations have been bitterly hostile. The two sentiments are not unrelated: Those who favor U.S. military aid to the anti-government rebels in Nicaragua also support U.S. sanctions against South Africa. The much larger number who oppose aiding the Nicaraguan rebels also oppose sanctions against South Africa.

What is at work here is not ideology but isolationism. The American public opposes sanctions against South Africa for the same reason it opposes sanctions against Nicaragua — it does not want to get involved in other countries' problems. That is one of the lessons of Vietnam and Iran. When we get involved in foreign conflicts, even with the noblest of intentions, we usually end up making the situation worse and getting ourselves into trouble — or so it is widely believed. Better to stay out, unless our national interests are directly threatened.

That is why the president's policy of limited intervention in Central Africa is unpopular. That is also why his policy of constructive engagement in South Africa is popular; by 58 percent to 37 percent, people say that "quiet diplomacy," as opposed to stronger action, is the best way to get South Africa to change its policies. The president did get into trouble a couple of weeks ago when he called the South African government a "reformist administration" and expressed the view, which he has since retracted, that segregation in South Africa "has all been eliminated." It seemed to be expressing approval of the South African government and its policies. That, to most Americans, is an unacceptable sentiment.

The president managed to get back to surer ground Monday, when, after announcing his policy of limited sanctions, he said, "Americans' view of apartheid is simple and straightforward. We believe it's wrong. We condemn it. And we are united in hoping for the day when apartheid will be no more." That is the kind of diplomacy the public seems to want these days — speak loudly, and carry a little stick. It makes us feel good, and we stay out of trouble.

(William Schneider is the Los Angeles Times' political analyst.)

Outrageous edge of rock and roll music becomes truly that BOSTON — There is something familiar about this scene. A public conflict between concerned mothers in silk and outrageous rock stars in skin. A People magazine cover with a showman headline: "Has Rock Gone Too Far?" A meeting with broadcasters this week, a congressional hearing next week, furrowed brows, lips that roll the words "Sex, Violence, Rock 'n' Roll" into one.

Have't we been here before? How many times before? Which side were we on before? Surely the Golden Oldies among us litter over memories of the Movement to Restore Decency, the midnight record burners, the prudes who only televised Elvis from the waist up. "They" as Elvis said, "are just frustrated old types anyway." And we were inclined to agree.

Rock was born and bred to be anti-establishment and despite the news that Ringo Starr has become a grandfather, yesterday's rocker is loath to become today's establishment. But even the most terminally tolerant of rock fans knows that something has happened since the days of the old hound dog. The outrageous edge of rock and roll has shifted its focus from Elvis' pelvis to the saw protruding from Blackie Lawless' cut-throat on a W.A.S.P. album. Rock lyrics have turned from "I can't get no satisfaction" to "I'm going to force you to jump out to eat me alive."

The veritable Prince of rock is now writing ballads to his sister — incest is everything they said it would be — and Motley Crue has become the bard of rape — "I'll either break her face or take down her legs." You do not have to be a "frustrated old type" to hope that your children don't go around the house humming the words to "Nightsalaker."

It's this heavy-metal message that is forcing an older generation of fans to become critics. One of them, Tipper Gore, 36, wife of Sen. Al Gore (D-Tenn.), mother of four and a Pink Collins fan, is one of those who said "enough." She and Susan Baker, wife of Jim Baker (R-Treasury), with two others formed something called the Parents Music Resource Center (PMRC). They have had as much publicity lately as Madonna.

The women of the PMRC have been attacked with such lethal epithets as "Washington wives," "ladies" and, gasp, "housewives," as if they were swinging pocketbooks at the heads of rock stars. Indeed some in the industry portray the "wives" and their allies in the PTA as right-wing censors out to limit the free speech of the whole music crew.

Frankly, I think it would be lovely if all the broadcasters, producers and musicians had the restraint to limit the amount of mayhem that went on over the airwaves. You cannot direct "adult" songs specifically into 15-and-over eardrums. The lyrics drift, like cigarette smoke, polluting everyone within range, doing the worst to the youngest.

But the goal of this group is really quite modest. They are not trying to censor the W.A.S.P., Jan the Talking Sisters, or Indict Pain and suffering on the Torture Hawk crew. Their primary aim is to get a label on the rock-music records, to win a consumer victory for parents. They would also like to bring-bag the worst of the puna covers and to get the raunchiest lyrics out front so the buyer could beware.

PMRC has not been without effect. This summer, the record industry agreed to a mild PG rating, providing that each company rate its own artists. But PG sounds a bit too much like OK. The PMRC would like a single industry-wide standard and an R. The PTA, for its part, would like more specific ratings.

I have reservations about ratings, though not the same ones the record companies have. The movie experience is mixed at best. Under the cover of an R, the amount of violence has actually increased. The ratings are often arbitrary (four-letter words are more of a no-no than chain-saw murders) and there is nothing like a dirty rumor to boost sales. But ratings are a better guide than what parents had before: nothing.

It ratings are nothing more, or less, than a modest way of reintroducing something called standards. It is a way the collective community of adults can say, "We disapprove." We disapprove of violence, we disapprove of sexual exploitation. We do not want our pre-teens to watch the W.A.S.P. smashing the head of a woman in chains.

Does that mean our kids will rebel? Frankly, it doesn't really matter. What does matter is that we let our children know what we think.

Letters/ Survival of wolverine might depend on preserving wilderness

Now is the time to write

Wolverines only live in the vast expanses of wild Canada. False. Wolverines live right here in the Sawtooth National Forest. The Smoky Mountains, Idaho's forgotten frontier, is home to this magnificent animal.

The current forest planning process may chase the wild wolverine out of the Wood River Valley's western mountains unless more people speak up for this animal's defense.

The wolverine is rated by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game as a "species of special concern." This classification serves as an early warning signal, alerting wildlife professionals and the general public to a species vulnerability. The proposed Sawtooth National Forest Land Management Plan is not good for our wolverine population.

The wolverine once ranged throughout the northern United States but is now almost extinct east of the Rocky Mountains. Today the wolverine can be found in dense conifer forests in remote regions. It ranges over a territory of several hundred square miles. The wolverine is a solitary animal, and a indicator of a wild unspoiled space.

In the past ten years there have been only 27 wolverine sightings in Idaho! Five of these sightings have been in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area and in the adjoining Boise National Forest. The wolverines call the Smoky Mountains their home.

The Smoky Mountains need to be recommended for wilderness. Both Presidents Nixon and Carter recommended this fine, wild, roadless area for wilderness. The proposed forest plan does not recommend wilderness for this outstanding area. Since the Smoky Mountains border the Sawtooth Wilderness to the south end, adding the Smokys to the wilderness system would also help reduce the crowding that is presently happening in the Sawtooths. And adding the Smoky Mountains to our wilderness system would guarantee a home for our wolverines.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game has recommended an 87,000-acre Smoky Mountain Wilderness to protect valuable elk habitat and the nearly gone wolverine. Please write in support of the conservationists proposal for a Smoky Mountains Wilderness. Write a letter for the wolverine.

The best hope for wolverines to survive in Idaho lies in preserving the remote wilderness areas where they live! Now is the time to write: Ron Sledson, Sawtooth National Forest, 1525 Addison Ave. East, Twin Falls-Idaho 83301. TOM POMEROY Idaho Conservation League Ketchum "Driver Arrested After High Speed Chase." I have never read a news item as ridiculous and asinine as the article in Tuesday's paper — I can't believe it!

Twin Falls, you have a great guy on your force and I hope you are proud of the way he handled that incident.

To think that the officer had a "supposedly" drunk person, unfit to drive, walking off, having the drunk close to a pickup — motor running, not driving; mind you!

Hey-oh-hey, that's something! Then the high speed chase — running red lights — endangering no telling how many lives, damaging property, etc.

Now tell me who should have the citations — Twin Falls, you have one helluva police officer, a 12-year-old cop, and I believe, would have handled that better.

Ex-Contra leader blasts U.S. 'terror'

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — A former leader of guerrillas fighting Nicaragua's Sandinista government charged in an affidavit released Thursday that the United States has continued military support for the rebels despite bans by the U.S. Congress and the World Court.

In the sworn statement released by Nicaragua, former Contra leader Edgar Chamorro also charged that the CIA "did not discourage" rebel atrocities, and said guerrilla units commonly terrorized villagers into joining them. The U.S. State Department issued a denial of the accusation on Thursday.

Nicaragua has charged the United States with waging "armed attacks" to overthrow its government. "Oral arguments in the case opened Thursday before the World Court, the judicial arm of the United Nations.

The court, formerly known as the International Court of Justice, has no power to enforce its decisions and depends on voluntary compliance by states coming before it.

Nicaragua first pressed its charges before the court on April 9, 1984. The case has been recessed for the past 10 months.

The United States is boycotting the proceedings, claiming the court has no jurisdiction.

The Reagan administration has said the dispute must be settled through diplomatic channels, and has charged Nicaragua with using the court as a "propaganda forum."

In the court session Thursday at the neoclassical Peace Palace in The Hague, Nicaragua's chief delegate, Carlos Arguello, charged that the U.S. National Security Council "directs the strategy and even selects the targets" of the anti-Sandinista rebels, known as Contras.

Arguello told the court that rebel attacks against Nicaragua have increased since May 1984, when the World Court issued an interim order calling for a halt to all U.S.-sponsored military action against the Sandinistas.

Arguello said the continued fighting "converts the United States Government into a terrorist state."

Nicaragua's vice minister of the interior, Luis Carrion, testified that Contra forces launched a new offensive against Nicaragua last June, two weeks after Congress approved $27 million in non-lethal humanitarian aid to the Contras.

On Oct. 1, 1984, Congress banned military support for the Contras through Sept. 30. Last week, the Reagan administration denied allegations that military support was continuing despite the ban.

Nicaragua introduced as evidence the affidavit by Chamorro, who said he directed public relations for the Nicaragua Democratic Forces (FDN), the major Contra force, until November 1984.

"A major part of my job as communications officer was to work to improve the image of the FDN forces," he said in the affidavit, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press.

"This was challenging, because it was standard FDN practice to kill prisoners and suspected Sandinista collaborators," Chamorro said.

In Washington, U.S. State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb, said Thursday. "We do not believe that the armed opposition deliberately or systematically inflicts injuries on civilians. The leadership has made an effort to prevent improper conduct."

Kalb added, "The administration's clear policy has been to neither support nor condone attacks on innocent civilians. The charge that the U.S. knew about or acquiesced in any killing of civilians is untrue."

Judge finds IRS agent guilty on mail fraud, filing counts

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Greene said the evidence showed veteran Internal Revenue Service auditor, seeking to quit his job of 25 years and buy an accounting firm, was convicted Thursday of defrauding the government of $115,000.

The judge rejected defense attorney G. Gilbert Athay's argument that while the prosecution had proven Hazz filed out tax returns seeking refunds ranging from $1,973 to $3,158, there was no evidence the IRS agent intended to defraud the government.

Sentencing was scheduled for Oct. 17. Hazz could face a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a fine of $250,000 on each charge.

Scientists back fears of 'nuclear winter'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Billions of people who survive the first blasts of a nuclear war would merely face drawn-out deaths by starvation, an international scientific group said Thursday, in a new study supporting the theory of a crop-ruining global "nuclear winter."

Though an image of total devastation after a nuclear attack may well be accurate for areas around actual targets, one of the report's authors said famine and disease in unscathed areas would be far more typical as hundreds of millions of tons of black smoke drastically cut sunlight and robbed crops of needed warmth and light from the sun.

"We are left with images of Ethiopia and the Sudan as being more representative of what the world would look like after a nuclear war for most of the people than the sorts of images we have of Hiroshima and Nagasaki," Dr. Mark Harwell of Cornell University said at a news conference on the report.

He said it "estimated" famine deaths of 1 billion to 4 billion of the world's 5 billion people after direct blast and radiation effects of actual attacks cost several hundred million lives.

"The main mechanism by which people would die after a large-scale nuclear war would not be blast effect, would not be burns, would not be radiation but rather would be mass starvation," he said.

The two-volume report, prepared by a special committee of the International Council of Scientific Unions, suggests that black smoke from nuclear attacks on urban areas — the main trigger for a "nuclear winter" — would cause sudden and perhaps long-term declines in temperatures and in light reaching the Earth, even in nations far from those attacked.

The findings basically support those of other groups, including the National Academy of Sciences, which have used atmospheric models as evidence that even a limited exchange could touch off some form of nuclear winter — especially in inland farm areas away from moderating influences of the oceans. The new report is based on more detailed modeling and computer work, the authors said.

The chairman of the study group, Sir Frederick Warner of Britain, former chairman of the British National Committee on Problems of the Environment, said, "This effort represents the consensus of a prestigious body of scientists. It would be a grave error to ignore their findings."

49 people die in head-on train crash

VISEU, Portugal (AP) — Weary firefighters using power saws and bulldozers pried apart burned and twisted wreckage Thursday to free injured passengers and retrieve the bodies of at least 49 people killed in the head-on crash of two trains.

More than 100 people were injured when an express train carrying hundreds of migrant workers to France crashed head-on Wednesday evening with a local train near this town in the mountains of central Portugal. Both of the diesel-powered trains were traveling at more than 60 mph, officials said.

The crushed coaches derailed, rolled down a 33-foot embankment and burst into flames that spread to an adjoining pine forest, firemen said.

The fire raged for nearly 12 hours and the heat was so intense that more than 10 hours after, the blaze was extinguished, the area remained hot and workmen needed heavy industrial gloves to handle the metal equipment.

Fire department officials and others at the site said in the confusion of the first few hours following the crash — when no one knew how many people were on the two trains — that they feared as many as 300 people might have been killed.

But railway officials said Thursday there were a total of about 350 people on the trains, and rescue workers drastically reduced their fatality estimates and stopped calling the crash the worst railroad disaster in Portugal's history.

Ousted Nigeria leader safe after overthrow ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Nigeria's ousted military leader, Maj. Gen. Muhammadu Buhari, is safe in Lagos, Radio Nigeria reported Thursday.

It was the new military government's first statement on Buhari's whereabouts since his overthrow in a coup on Aug. 27.

The radio, monitored in Abidjan, also quoted Nigeria's information minister, Lt. Col. Anthony Upko, as saying that Maj. Gen. Tunde Idiagbon, Buhari's deputy, had returned to Nigeria.

Idiagbon was on a pilgrimage to Mecca, Saudi Arabia, when Buhari was ousted in a barracks' coup engineered by Maj. Gen. Ibrahim Babangida, now Nigeria's head of state.

According to the radio, Idiagbon subsequently pledged his loyalty to the new regime and asked permission to come home.

The broadcast quoted Upko as saying, "The safety of Buhari and Idiagbon is being looked after in Lagos."

Later Thursday, Radio Nigeria broadcast Babangida's swearing in of his new Cabinet.

"The old theme — 'Your appointments as ministers have been based purely on your personal merit. You have been not been selected to represent your state authority or any group interest ...

'Let the whole country be your responsibility ... Let our different religious, tribal and cultural background be our strength and not a source of weakness.'"

Rocket blown up

KOUROU, French Guiana (AP) — Space Center officials blew up the European Space Agency's Ariane rocket less than 10 minutes after liftoff late Thursday when it moved off course and began falling, threatening inhabited areas, officials here said.

The order to destroy was given immediately after the rocket, carrying two communications satellites, left — its prescribed trajectory and lost altitude, the officials said.

The failure was Ariane's third in 15 launches.

Violence in Birmingham due for probe

LONDON (AP) — The government decided Thursday to hold a police inquiry into rioting in Birmingham, and rejected calls for a full-scale judicial probe of the two days of violence.

Birmingham's city council reacted angrily and said it would try to set up its own inquiry, headed by a person with a national reputation, to identify the causes of the rampage. Two people were killed, more than 50 buildings were wrecked by fire and many stores were looted in the violence Monday and Tuesday nights.

The rioting was the most serious in Britain since disorders in inner-city areas in London, Liverpool and Manchester in 1981.

Opposition parties had urged the government to set up an inquiry similar to the commission headed by Appeals Court Judge Lord Scarman that investigated the 1981 riots.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Cabinet decided Thursday to have West Midlands Chief Constable Geoffrey Dear prepare a factual account of the riot in collaboration with the chief inspector of police in Britain, Sir Lawrence Byford.

Home Secretary Douglas Hurd, the country's top law enforcement officer, said in a speech to the Association of Chief Police Officers that the first priority in Birmingham must be "a thorough and relentless investigation into the crimes committed."

He said he rejected the suggestion that the riot might have been a "cry for help" from unemployed people living in the run-down Handsworth neighborhood in Birmingham.

"The sound which law-abiding people heard in Handsworth on Monday night ... was not a cry for help but a cry for loot," Hurd said.

Hurd said he did not see a need for a major inquiry like the 1981 one. A police probe would establish the sequence of events and help to quash baseless rumors which "can do harm unless the true facts are established," he said.

Blaine hospital rejects joint management

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

HAILY — A bid to jointly manage Blaine County's two hospitals under Sun Valley's Moritz Community Hospital administrators was rejected by the Blaine County Medical Center Wednesday.

Unanimously, however, the center's Board of Trustees voted to begin talks with the Moritz board that will lead to joint management through an independent firm and eventually to consolidate the two hospitals.

"I'm in favor of consolidation as soon as possible," said Board Member Terry Hogue after saying he could not accept the plan initiated by the Moritz board. Except for Wallace Young, each of the seven board members at the meeting supported consolidation.

"It should have happened a long time ago," said Del Whitlow.

Young, a long-standing member of the board, said the people of the south county could not accept management of the Halley hospital by the Sun Valley administrators. He did say the issue of consolidation would come up again, however.

Board Chairman Kendall Kinghorn said he had "no interest for this to die" in giving his support to moving towards consolidation.

The board, however, did not believe a Moritz management team, led by Administrator Al Stevenson and Controller Mark Christensen, could impartially manage both hospitals.

One man cannot run another's business, said county Board Member Jack Basolo.

"To have a totally impartial management with Moritz's people is impossible," Basolo said.

"Conversely, I don't think we can go up and run your hospital. That's just reality," he said.

Under the proposal initiated by the Sun Valley hospital, Moritz administrators would take over management of the Halley hospital from Holy Cross Health Service, a private hospital management firm under contract with the county.

Christensen would administer the Blaine County center with assistance from Stevenson. With joint management, the two hospitals could save money by consolidating some services they now duplicate, including Moritz's computerized billing system. Moritz proposed to establish a three-year contract at $50,000.

Christensen estimated the arrangement could save $100,000 the first year, $136,000 the second and $153,000 the third.

Hogue said the savings under the arrangement was a benefit of the proposal, but he said the information is not specific enough to base a decision upon.

The proposal has weaknesses, he said. These included:

- Possible hidden costs the proposed arrangement with a health management consulting group Moritz belongs to.

- Neither Stevenson nor Christensen is licensed to administer the county nursing home that is attached to the medical center.

- Christensen has no experience as an administrator.

toward funding indigent medical care is changing his attitude toward consolidation.

Previously, the county was willing to pay for indigent care through property taxes, but now the commissioners are less willing to pay for the medical expenses of those who cannot afford the cost. The hospital's only alternative is to raise rates to those who use the center, he said.

To avoid higher medical costs, he said, consolidation will have to take place.

The board agreed to begin immediate talks with Moritz in hiring an independent firm to manage both hospitals.

Several said the independent firm could be Stevenson and Christensen if they wanted to form their own company. The joint management team would be selected through a bidding process, they said.

Storage control cheered

Activist underlines waste cleanup end

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — John O'Conner, leader of the National Campaign Against Toxic Hazards, Thursday praised a proposed Twin Falls city zoning ordinance to control hazardous chemicals.

O'Conner stopped in Twin Falls Thursday to talk with members of the Idaho Neighbors Network before continuing on his way toward Washington, D.C.

He is one of four drivers traveling across the nation with water and soil samples taken from potentially contaminated sites to draw attention to the Sept. 30 expiration of the federal hazardous waste cleanup program.

"Too often people hear about this hazardous chemicals mess and get depressed," he said. "But there are solutions."

The proposal of the Twin Falls Citizens City Ordinance Committee, organized by INN with City Council approval, is one example of the solutions that exist, he said.

The ordinance is "simple, but sensible," he said. It would restrict the storing of large quantities of hazardous chemicals such as pesticides to the heavy industrial area of the southeast corner of the city.

In the event of a spill or a fire, that would mean poisonous fumes would be most likely to drift away from the city instead of into it, he said.

"Every city should have citing criteria for manufacturing and storing hazardous materials away from population centers," he said.

Solutions also exist for cleaning up toxic hazards, he said. "It's not a technical problem but a political problem."

The Environmental Protection Agency's Superfund cleanup program as it exists now has not been the answer, he said.

A minimum level of $10 billion over the next five years is needed to make the program effective, he said. Now, oil and chemical companies finance most of the $1.6 billion program.

That amount has mostly paid for studies, he said.

Perrine pupils pledge allegiance

Students rate new school's beauty, features with A's

By DEANS MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fickle is the young heart and captured easily by a pretty face.

So it is with elementary school allegiances; there is school spirit growing at the new I.B. Perrine Elementary School after the first day of classes Thursday.

"This is a lot better than Harrison (Elementary School, an older school in the district)," said Harrison alumnus Kenny Anderson.

"I like the new school; it's nice, it's neat, too... it has different classes and it has stairs and elevators, too," Sarah Diffendaffer said, standing with her mother on the sidewalk after school.

Cortney Campbell, a fourth-grader, agreed. "I like it best because of the elevator; but we can't use the elevator, it's for the teachers and the disabled kids."

Being the first class in a new school is exciting, she said. "It's kind of fun because next year when we have new people we can say, 'We tried it out for you.'"

Shanelle Smith is a kindergarten at the new school, but she was too shy to say if she liked school or not. She was proud of a turtle she colored Thursday, though, and showed it off after posing for her mother's camera in front of one of the giant Crayola crayons that holds up the roof over the entry into the school.

Christi Deahl doesn't go to Perrine, but she likes it. She goes to Robert Stuart Junior High School next door and said Thursday afternoon she is a little jealous of her brother Allen, who had his first day at Perrine Thursday.

"The big thing I like about it is the library; they have this big deck thing," Allen said. He said he has already been allowed to go out on the balcony in the library that looks down on the rest of the room.

If said kids aren't allowed to play on the grass yet, so recess is not as much fun as it could be. He also said the outdoor bell is not very loud, so some kids were late coming in from recess.

Asked if he liked the colored blackboards in the building, he was quick to correct, saying, "Blackboards? — blueboards."

For first-grade teacher Kristy Patterson, the new school is a significant step up from the mobile trailer classroom she taught in last year at Bickel Elementary School. No longer will she have to bundle children up for a trip from the trailer to the school to go to the bathroom. When the call went out last spring for teachers to transfer to the new school, she said, "My bags were packed."

Her next-door-neighbor in the new school, Kammie Hafer, said teacher morale is high. "You can tell teachers are really proud... we've had three days to get ready and they've really pulled together."

Principal Lille Brown says her new staff has risen to the task of assembling their rooms in the three days before school started this week.

"This group happens to be an amazing group," Brown said. "I've never seen anyone work as hard as this group."

"I love this place," Brown said, taking a quick break from unpacking books. "Of course I think it's attractive... I was amazed at how quiet it is, you never heard the children going down the halls. It doesn't echo like a lot of schools do."

She said the new building is "definitely" a school designed by teachers and kids for teachers and kids and praised the architect and contractor for their cooperation.

The building was designed by Design West, of Boise and other Western cities, and built under contract with Arrington Brothers of Twin Falls.

She said she has been on planning committees for the new school for five years as a teacher and later as an administrator. "I've had an awful lot of input, more than I ever expected," she said. "Right down to the selection of colors. That's exciting."

Times-News photos by NEV SAGESEN

Cortney Campbell, above, thinks the new school is fun. Kindergartener Shanel Smith, left, was a bit bewildered by it all, while Allen Deahl, right, liked the library best of all.

Dam repairs needed

BLM to lower reservoir levels

GOODING — Officials from the Bureau of Land Management and the Idaho Fish and Game Department have announced a proposal to lower water levels in Thorn Creek Reservoir north of Gooding.

Repairs to the dam structure at the popular fishing reservoir are needed to meet minimum safety standards.

Charles Hasler, Shoshone district manager for the BLM, said the agency does not have a water storage certificate for the reservoir from the state's Department of Water Resources and that repair work is needed on the discharge outlet gate and the gate stem.

Hasler said the work was not completed earlier due to high water. "When this year being a high water year, he added that it is an excellent time to get the work done before winter weather sets in.

Bill Webb, regional director for the Fish and Game Department in Jerome, said his office is working closely with the BLM to schedule the lowering to maximize fishing opportunities.

Anyone interested in the status of the project is encouraged to contact other BLM in Shoshone, or the Fish and Game Department in Jerome.

AIDS fears cut blood donations

BOISE — "You can't get AIDS by donating blood," says Dr. Ted Walter, medical director of the American Red Cross Blood Services, Snake River Region.

Walters says that many people do not understand that the needle used during a blood donation is used only once, then discarded. The needles are never sterilized and re-used.

"This misunderstanding, we feel, has caused people to stay away from donating blood," Walters says in a news release. Blood donations for the three summer months have been well below the amounts donated last year for the same three months.

Walters says that the region has been able to supply hospital needs, but added that should the trend continue, shortages may develop.

The Snake River Regional Blood Services has been testing every unit of donated blood for the antibody to the AIDS virus since the test became available in the middle of March. Any unit found positive by the AIDS antibody test is destroyed. "Our blood supply is as safe as rigorous testing procedures can make it," he says.

Blood Services is encouraging healthy people between the ages of 17 and 66 who are not in the AIDS high-risk groups to donate blood so that patient needs can be met on a continuing basis.

House leader moves ahead on textile-quota legislation

By MIKE ROBINSON The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The congressional drive to shield U.S. industry from import competition advanced Thursday as the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee set an early date for action on quotas on foreign textile goods.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., told a news conference his panel would act on the textile bill, the spearhead of a wave of protectionist measures, on Sept. 26 and that the White House faces "a crippling fight with Congress" unless it toughens its stand against unfair trade practices abroad.

Meanwhile, Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee's international trade panel, told a jammed hearing that "things have changed since the last time we had a meeting on the textile bill." He said President Reagan's refusal to grant protection to the shoe industry has stepped up pressure on lawmakers to approve quotas on clothing and fabric imports.

Rostenkowski said lawmakers during their August recess found a groundswell of support for protectionist legislation and that created "an appetite on Capitol Hill for a tough trade policy."

He stepped short of joining in the call for protectionist legislation, saying there was "a fine line between jobs to find trade policy and protectionism; my job is to find it."

Rostenkowski termed Reagan's promises over the last week to accelerate action against unfair trade practices "welcome but late."

saying "political and economic reality" has forced the administration on a wide U-turn.

The Reagan White House finds its trade policy of benign neglect now defunct," he said. Rostenkowski, whose tax-writing panel is also the top trade committee in the House, said that by Sept. 26, he expects to start the final drafting of a major measure to impose strict quotas on imported textile goods. He said the bill should have little trouble winning approval.

"I can count," Rostenkowski said, "When you have 304 members endorsing it, I should think it wouldn't have too much trouble on the floor of the House."

Rostenkowski also said the committee expects to begin work next month on a more comprehensive trade measure to impose tariffs on imports from nations guilty of unfair trade practices. He said, however, that drafting would not begin until after the panel finishes work on Reagan's proposal to overhaul the income tax system.

Rostenkowski said the president's "strategy of slowing the push for tougher trade policy isn't working."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, talking to reporters about Air Force One as the president flew to Tampa, Fla., for a speaking engagement, said Reagan will make a speech on trade, possibly as early as next week. He added that it had not been scheduled and would not be a prime time television address.

On Capitol Hill, Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., issued a statement calling the president's trade moves "too little and too late."

"We have a bystander president who lives in an Alice in Wonderland world where deficits, be they trade or budget, simply don't matter," declared Gephardt, chairman of the House Democratic Caucus and a chief sponsor of legislation to impose 25 percent tariffs on imports from Japan and three other nations unless they redress their trade practices.

Before Danforth opened the textile hearing, he issued a statement saying that in a meeting between Reagan and Republican leaders on Wednesday he agreed with the president that "an orgy of protectionist legislation is not in the interest of the United States or any other nation."

Danforth praised Reagan for agreeing to combine forces with GOP leaders to draft export-minded trade legislation. But he said it would be "premature to be optimistic about the chances of coming up with a joint program."

The Reagan administration has opposed virtually all major trade bills in the hopper until now, and Democrats have been viewing the wave of job layoffs attributed to import competition as a windfall issue for 1986 congressional campaigns.

Lawmakers from West Coast export states lashed at the textile bill at the hearing, saying it would spark retaliation against American products from the nation's trading partners and weaken the economy.

"This is and of itself is dreadful legislation," Rep. Dan Evans, R-Wash., said. "In fact, it's a sham."

Rep. Ed Zschau, R-Calif., declared that the textile measure would make "the United States an outlaw in international trade; it would abrogate 34 separate trade agreements."

Lawmaker pushes 'truth in medicine' label requirement

Should all medicines be labeled to show which have been approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for their safety and effectiveness? When the FDA first began approving drugs, there was fear that advertising of approval would mean more than it should to patients. Similarly, securities laws ban reference to registration of a stock with the SEC, so you won't assume this means the government has approved it as a good stock to buy. I assume you knew that since 1903, drugs have to be approved for safety and, since 1962, for effectiveness.

Sylvia Porter

But now, Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., proposes that a law be passed to show approvals on the labels.

One advantage: You would be able to shy away from any unapproved drugs — and so would your physicians or pharmacists.

Another advantage: Generic drugs that merited approval could be sold with the approval on the label. Fear of unapproved generics would tend to fade because you could tell at once whether the item was approved or not. Since generics are often much cheaper, this could have a major effect in promoting consumer savings and perhaps limiting the upward spiral of health-care costs.

These savings helped promote the 1984 Drug Price Competition Act — the basis for a great drug industry trade-off. Under this trade-off law, manufacturers can lengthen the life of a patent on a new chemical to make up for the time lost during the approval. At the same time, generic companies can get those FDA approvals without repeating costly retesting of an already tested formula.

Why hasn't "truth in medicine" already become law? Because some drug companies don't want generics to get the advantage of being able to carry their approvals "on their sleeves."

And because other drug companies contend that not all generics are safe, so they would rather let you worry which are which while you buy the more expensive promoted brand.

The outlook: Nobody can tell as yet.

In the meantime, you should be aware that it's illegal to sell either a brand name or a generic substitute in interstate commerce if it lacks FDA approval. Thus, if the law is enforced — and the FDA is strict about this — you can feel assured that the necessary testing has been done. Both generics and entirely new medicines would be treated as "new drugs" under the law, because both active and inactive ingredients can be important to you. Thus, to make up an imaginary case, if the active ingredient were aspirin and in one instance it was mixed with gelatin and in another with baking soda, the effect in your stomach would be markedly different. Drugs also need research to develop new cures for deadly and debilitating disease. A drastic way to do this would be to keep the requirement for safety but permit drugs to be sold with a substitute warning that effectiveness is still being debated.

It could be required that the user of an experimental drug understand it was just that — and both patient and physician would do so at last.

What if a "truth in medicine" labeling law isn't passed? Then, you'll hear and see more warnings that generics are dangerous. And if you don't know which generics are approved, you'll pay more for the promoted brands.

BIG SECRET: In some cases, the same manufacturer produces both the promoted brand and the generic medicine. The generic may be sold by the same company under a different name or be resold to a generic company to distribute. The actual product would be exactly the same. Only the name and the price would be different.

Pressures to "dispense as written" by brand name are constant through advertising in trade journals; visits by sales representatives, with free samples, some with precious tickets to sports events; and glossy literature stressing the good and minimizing the possible side effects.

You are your first — and final — line of defense in this area. Buy wisely and look for your rights. In medicine this is not a handout because you are so susceptible to it.

This is why a "truth in medicine" law could help enlighten us so much.

Stocks suffer third day of broad losses

Financial issues lead average to two-and-a-half-month low

By JAMES F. PELTZ The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks skidded to a broad low for the third consecutive session Thursday, pushing the Dow Jones industrial average to a 2½-month low.

Interest rate-sensitive financial issues came under notable pressure. (Airline, retail, auto and telephone stocks also retreated.)

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 7.05 to 3,132.39, its lowest level since June 20, when it stood at 3,293.73. The average is off 25.30 points so far this week.

Losers swamped gainers by nearly 3 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index lost 0.86 to 106.36. NYSE-listed issues "hitting new 52-week lows outpaced those reaching new highs by 40 to 1."

Big Board volume totaled 107.07 million shares, against 100.38 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.62 to 226.72. The measure is down 5.72 points, or 2.5 percent, this week alone.

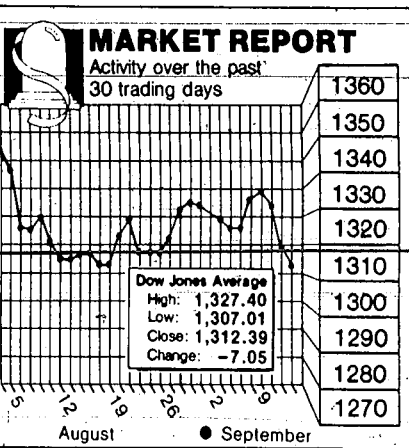

Ralph Bloch, vice president of Mosely, Hallgarten, Estabrook & Weeden Inc. in Chicago, stressed that the programs are reacting to established market sentiment.

"They tend to occur in the direction that the market is already moving," Bloch said.

The indicators these firms use are predicated on market strength or weakness.

Wall Street is hoping to get a clearer picture of the economy on Friday when the government issues August data on retail sales, industrial production and wholesale prices.

In the rate-sensitive financial sector, Chase Manhattan fell 1 1/2 to 52 1/2; Household International dropped 1 1/2 to 33 1/2; and Manufacturers Hanover was off 1 1/2 to 45 1/2.

Return to BYU college life awaited by Miss America

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — After a year of international travel and meeting political and business leaders, Miss America Sharlene Wells says she can't wait to crown her successor Saturday night so she can return to college life and tackle textbooks and term papers.

But the 21-year-old from Salt Lake City, Utah, said she realizes her life has been irrevocably changed over the past year, which has included discussions about a career in sports broadcasting with network and local television executives.

"That would be a waste of this whole year if I dropped back into the woodwork," she said in an interview this week as 51 young women competed to become Miss America 1986.

Miss Wells said that "each day was a surprise" as she traveled nearly 250,000 miles to 42 states, and to Australia, Japan and Paraguay, where she lived for 11 years.

Along the way, she said she made many contacts for the future.

However, hobnobbing at business luncheons and society banquets also left her yearning to be back with her contemporaries, said the statuesque blonde who will return to complete her studies at Brigham Young University in three weeks.

It was often difficult to live up to people's expectations that a Miss America should "have the savoir faire of a 40-year-old" and a business and political acumen to match, she said.

"You have to live with criticism and have it roll off you," Miss Wells said as she sat in her flower-decorated hotel suite.

For instance, she said that the sponsors of one business luncheon were peeved when she spent much of her time chatting with several women her age rather than move about the crowd of mostly older men.

It was frustrating also when a young man she had noticed would approach her — and ask for an autograph. Miss Wells said she would have been hoping for an invitation to dinner.

Miss America had to learn how to overcome the feeling of, "Well, I don't feel like being wonderful right now," put on a smile and extend a hand, she said.

'Narc'-turned-dealer suffers fatal drug drop

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Andrew Carter Thornton II, a former narcotics officer and suspended lawyer who plunged to his death from a plane holding $14 million worth of cocaine, had a history of drug and arms involvement across the nation.

"I'm glad his parachute didn't open. I hope he got a hit of a high out of that cocaine," said Brian Leighton, an assistant U.S. attorney in Fresno, Calif. He once prosecuted Thornton on a marijuana trafficking charge.

The body of Thornton, 40, a native of Paris, Ky., was found Wednesday on a driveway in Knoxville, Tenn. He was heavily armed, carried 77 pounds of cocaine in an Army duffel bag, and was attached to a parachute that had failed to open.

A key that investigators found on his body bore an identification number matching that of a plane that crashed while on autopilot earlier that morning, 60 miles away, Knoxville Detective Allen Hale said Thursday.

Tennessee police believe he was supposed to meet someone on the ground to deliver the cocaine. Knoxville Police Lt. Jerry Day described Thornton as "a kind of survivalist, an individual who was expecting trouble and ready for it."

Thornton, known to his friends as "Drew," served in the 1st Airborne Division in the mid-1960s, and was among soldiers sent to the Dominican Republic to restore order after a revolution. He was wounded and received a Purple Heart.

"He was an expert skydiver and the type of guy who wouldn't even let anyone touch his pack. He was a fanatic" about his equipment, said a friend in Lexington who did not want to be identified.

He joined the Lexington police in 1968 and stayed for nine years. In 1981, The Lexington Herald quoted sources as saying Thornton had set up the department's intelligence squad.

Police Chief John McFadden verified Wednesday that Thornton served on the department's narcotics squad from 1970 to 1973. He described him as an average officer and said he had worked his way through law school at the University of Kentucky while on the force.

After resigning in 1977, Thornton practiced law in Lexington. Four years later he was among 25 men accused at Fresno, Calif., in a theft of weapons from the China Lake Naval Weapons Center and of conspiring to smuggle 1,000 pounds of marijuana into the United States.

Numerous news reports in 1981 and 1982 linked the ring, which included several former Lexington policemen and other Kentuckians, to a larger group known as "The Company."

The larger group was described by a 1980 federal indictment in East St. Louis, Ill., as a dope- and gun-running syndicate with more than 300 members and $26 million in boats and planes.

Transplant patient does well

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Heart-transplant patient Michael Drummond's condition was upgraded from critical to fair Thursday, and hospital officials said he was showing no sign of rejecting his new heart.

Drummond, who was kept alive temporarily with an artificial heart, was moved to a different section of University Medical Center's intensive care unit reserved for patients in less serious condition, hospital spokeswoman Nina Trasoff said.

"He's doing real well" and has been walking around and visiting with his family, she said.

Drummond, who is being treated with the anti-rejection drug cyclosporin, has shown no sign of rejecting his second human heart, which was implanted Saturday as doctors removed the artificial heart that had kept him alive 10 days.

Officials have said Drummond was entering the phase during which the first signs of rejection would appear.

Drummond, a 25-year-old former supermarket assistant manager, eventually was expected to be transferred to a regular hospital room, and if he continued to improve, he could be released from the hospital within three weeks.

Nature takes over where low prices leave off for plagued wheat farmers

BOISE (AP) - With low market prices already pushing them to the brink of financial disaster, Idaho's wheat farmers are seeing nature take its toll on their 1985 crop.

The government's Crop and Livestock Reporting Service is now estimating the state's wheat harvest at its lowest level since 1979 with critical winter wheat production bearing the brunt of the reduction.

"It's been a steady decline," Agriculture Department analysts said. "The grasshoppers have taken their toll, but this last month has been pretty much due to the lack of rainfall."

Total production this year, based on Sept. 1 field conditions, is now estimated at 75.3 million bushels with the average yield at just under 56 bushels an acre.

Winter wheat production, forecast at record levels this spring before the onset of grasshoppers and bonfire conditions, is now forecast at 47 million bushels, nearly 10 million below the 1984 harvest and over 13 million lower than this spring's forecast for a record crop.

The average yield is projected at only 54 bushels an acre, the lowest since 1979 and well below the record of 67 bushels, which was the government's initial estimate for the season last year.

With prices continuing to plummet the past year, producers had already cut back acreage by over 3 percent last fall to 870,000 acres, and actual harvested acreage is expected to drop well below that level due to field abandonment because of drought and pest damage.

The government will not calculate actual harvested acre until late this fall after the spring harvest.

after the crop is in. The spring wheat harvest is forecast to be up from last year but only because farmers hoisted planted acreage by over 26 percent to 480,000 acres.

Nationally, the wheat crop is estimated at 2.3 billion bushels, down 8 percent from last year as the government continued to urge producers to cut back production amid price-depressing surpluses. The dry conditions also took their toll on other crops, the government said. The barley harvest is down to 72.3 million bushels as plantings were cut back by 90,000 acres and the yield plunged 12 percent to 58 bushels an acre.

Increased production is being forecast for sugarbeets, which should jump 8 percent to nearly 3.6 million tons, and for hops, which will be up slightly to 5.6 million pounds.

Return to BYU college life awaited by Miss America

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — After a year of international travel and meeting political and business leaders, Miss America Shariene Wells says she can't wait to crown her successor Saturday night so she can return to college life and tackle textbooks and term papers.

But the 21-year-old from Salt Lake City, Utah, said she realizes her life has been irrevocably changed over the past year, which has included discussions about a career in sports broadcasting with network and local television executives.

"That would be a waste of this whole year if I dropped back into the woodwork," she said in an interview this week as 51 young women competed to become Miss America 1986.

Miss Wells said that "each day was a surprise" as she traveled nearly 250,000 miles to 42 states, and to Australia, Japan and Paraguay, where she lived for 11 years.

Along the way, she said she made many contacts for the future.

However, hobnobbing at business luncheons and society banquets also left her yearning to be back with her contemporaries, said the statuesque blonde who will return to complete her studies at Brigham Young University in three weeks.

It was often difficult to live up to people's expectations that a Miss America should "have the savoir faire of a 40-year-old" and a business and political acumen to match, she said.

"You have to live with criticism and have it roll off you," Miss Wells said as she sat in her flower-decorated hotel suite.

For instance, she said that the sponsors of one business luncheon were peeved when she spent much of her time chatting with several women her age rather than move about the crowd of mostly older men.

It was frustrating also when a young man she had noticed would approach her — and ask for an autograph. Miss Wells said she would have been hoping for an invitation to dinner.

Miss America had to learn how to overcome the feeling of, "Well, I don't feel like being wonderful right now," put on a smile and extend a hand, she said.

'Narc'-turned-dealer suffers fatal drug drop

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Andrew Carter Thornton II, a former narcotics officer and suspended lawyer who plunged to his death from a plane holding $14 million worth of cocaine, had a history of drug and arms involvement across the nation.

"I'm glad his parachute didn't open. I hope he got a hell of a high out of that (cocaine)," said Brian Leighton, an assistant U.S. attorney in Fresno, Calif. He once prosecuted Thornton on a marijuana trafficking charge.

The body of Thornton, 40, a native of Paris, Ky., was found Wednesday on a driveway in Knoxville, Tenn. He was heavily armed, carried 77 pounds of cocaine in an Army duffel bag and was attached to a parachute that had failed to open.

A key that investigators found on his body bore an identification number matching that of a plane that crashed while on autopilot earlier that morning, 60 miles away, Knoxville Detective Allen Hale said Thursday.

Tennessee police believe he was supposed to meet someone on the ground to deliver the cocaine.

Knoxville Police Lt. Jerry Day described Thornton as "a kind of survivalist, an individual who was expecting trouble and ready for it."

Thornton, known to his friends as "Drew," served in the 101st Airborne Division in the mid-1980s and was among soldiers sent to the Dominican Republic to restore order after a revolution. He was wounded and received a Purple Heart.

"He was an expert skydiver and the type of guy who wouldn't even let anyone touch his pack. He was a fanatic" about his equipment, said a friend in Lexington who did not want to be identified.

He joined the Lexington police in 1986 and stayed for nine years. In 1981, The Lexington Herald quoted sources as saying Thornton had set up the department's intelligence squad.

Police Chief John McFadden verified Wednesday that Thornton served on the department's narcotics squad from 1970 to 1973. He described him as an average officer and said he had worked his way through law school at the University of Kentucky while on the force.

After resigning in 1977, Thornton practiced law in Lexington.

Four years later he was among 25 men accused at Fresno, Calif., in a theft of weapons from the China Lake Naval Weapons Center and of conspiring to smuggle 1,000 pounds of marijuana into the United States.

Numerous news reports in 1981 and 1982 linked the ring, which included several former Lexington policemen and other Kentuckians, to a larger group known as "The Company."

The larger group was described by a 1980 federal indictment in East St. Louis, Ill., as a drug and gun-running syndicate with more than 300 members and $28 million in boats and planes.

Transplant patient does well

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Heart transplant patient Michael Drummond's condition was upgraded from critical to fair Thursday, and hospital officials said he was showing no sign of rejecting his new heart.

Drummond, who was kept alive temporarily with an artificial heart, was moved to a different section of University Medical Center's intensive care unit reserved for patients in less serious condition, hospital spokesman Nina Trasoff said.

"He's doing real well" and has been walking around and visiting with his family, she said.

Drummond, who is being treated with the anti-rejection drug cyclosporin, has shown no sign of rejecting his second human heart, which was implanted Saturday as doctors removed the artificial heart that had kept him alive 10 days.

Officials have said Drummond was entering the phase during which the first signs of rejection would appear.

Drummond, a 25-year-old former supermarket assistant manager, eventually was expected to be transferred to a regular hospital room, and if he continued to improve, he could be released from the hospital within three weeks.

Block declares 8 counties disasters

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

BOISE — The governor's office announced Thursday that eight Idaho counties have been declared natural disaster areas by Secretary of Agriculture John Block.

Bonner, Boundary, Clark, Clearwater, Fremont, Idaho, Lemhi, and Shoshone counties have all been declared disaster areas because of drought and grasshopper infestations.

Mike Brush, with Gov. Evan's office in Boise, said they are "appreciative" for Block's declaration. The governor's office, Brush said, is closely monitoring the situation of the 15 counties in southern Idaho which have applied for disaster status.

While counties in the southern part of the state received the heaviest damage from grasshoppers, none have yet been granted disaster status.

Brush said the eight northern counties were declared disaster areas because of recent changes in the Emergency Agricultural Credit Act. Under the act counties contiguous to those declared disaster areas are included by proxy, according to Brush.

Disaster status opens the way for federal assistance programs in the form of emergency loans or deferral of interest on federal loans.

All eight counties in Idaho designated as disaster areas border on Montana. Fifty-five counties in Montana have been declared natural disaster areas because of drought conditions and grasshopper infestations.

EPA lists wood-preserving plants for study by Superfund project

SMELTERVILLE (AP) — Six Northern Idaho wood-preserving plants have been selected by the Environmental Protection Agency for study by the agency's Superfund cleanup project.

Listed by the EPA as sites with potential for hazardous waste problems were Kellogg Transfer, Inc. of Enaville; Forest Products Pressure Treating & Framing of Smelterville; Timbercraft Products of Hayden Lake; and Poles, Inc., L. C. McFarland Co., and B.J. Carney Co., all located in Bonner County.

The firms, which treat wood poles and posts with a preservative that inhibits rot and bugs, are among 104 sites in Idaho selected for study by the Superfund project.

EPA officials said they are concerned how the wood preservative, copper-chromate-arsenic, is handled. Brad Harr, senior hazardous materials specialist for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, said most wood-treatment plants in the state appear on the current edition of the agency's Emergency Remedial Response Information System list.

"We don't know if there's a problem. It just means these sites have the potential for a problem," Harr said.

"They all treat wood with a preservative which is basically an insecticide. If it's not handled properly, or if there's a lot of spillage, you could have problems," he said.

State officials, aided by a federal Superfund grant, may take soil and water samples at the company sites to determine if the wood preservative has contaminated the areas, Harr said.

Pilot found dead in copter wreckage

EMMETT (AP) — The body of an Emmett man was found Thursday among the wreckage of a helicopter that apparently crashed Monday on rangeland about 11 miles north of Emmett and just six miles from his home, the Civil Air Patrol and Gem County sheriff's officials said.

Jesus Gandiaga, 36, was the pilot of the helicopter reported missing Monday night after it failed to arrive as expected in Riggins, Sheriff Bill McConnell said.

Craig Mickelson of the CAP said the craft was spotted from the air just west of Squaw Butte on Thursday by Idaho Air National Guard personnel. A flight plan was not filed, Mickelson said.

DUI petition drive collects 10,000 names

KUNA (AP) — It took less than a week for an initiative petition drive for tougher drunken driving laws to produce nearly 10,000 signatures, says sponsor Rep. Lyman Gene Winchester, R-Kuna.

Winchester and others have started an initiative drive to enact even tougher drunken driving laws in Idaho. Winchester said stricter drunken driving penalties that went into effect two years ago still are not curbing the problem.

His proposal calls for mandatory driver's license suspension for even the first drunken driving conviction, a fine of at least $500 and a mandatory two-day jail sentence or an order to perform public service.

The petition drive was launched at the Western Idaho Fair at Boise. Winchester said he quickly used up the first $600 available for the drive, but got close to 10,000 signatures in the week-long fair. It will take about 33,000 signatures of registered voters to place the issue before voters in the November, 1986, general election.

New petitions are being printed, and Winchester said the initiative effort will move in the next 10 days to the central and northern parts of the state.

So far, voters from 37 of the 44 counties have signed the petitions, Winchester said.

"It's a real popular thing," he said, estimating that 8 out of every 10 persons signed the petitions.

Trucker pleads innocent in deaths

BOISE (AP) — A Meridian man has pleaded innocent to two counts of involuntary vehicular manslaughter in the death of an Eagle couple.

Fourth District Judge Alan Schwartzman on Wednesday set trial for Eugene Wayne McDonald for Jan. 27, 1986, Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Mike Henderson said.

McDonald, 41, is charged in the deaths of Richard Gibbens, 53, and his wife, Jola, 49.

Season tickets are on sale for the Magic Valley Symphony's three performances, which will feature a harpsichordist, boys chorus and pops concert.

Symphony tunes up for 27th season

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Still a vibrant musical force in the community after nearly three decades, the Magic Valley Symphony is gearing for its 27th season with three performances on the agenda. The first will feature harpsichordist Steve Moss, the second offers the Tucson Arizona Boys Chorus and the season finale will be the second annual pops concert featuring the Snake River Brass.

For its season ticket campaign, the symphony is offering a wider range of options this year. Patron tickets at $20 will admit two people to all three concerts, while a sponsor ticket at $50 will admit four people to the concerts. According to business manager Patty Hadley, the symphony is reaching for business support this season by offering contributor tickets for $50 which will admit up to eight persons, and trustee tickets for $100 which will admit a group plus dinner for two at the pops concert.

Moreover, Hadley points out that contributor tickets will include an eighth of a page of advertising on the symphony program, while trustee tickets include one-half page. "Our symphony program has always been a sheet folded in half, but this year it will be a booklet with the program, notes and advertising," Hadley says, noting that is the format commonly used by larger symphonies as an incentive for business support.

Formed in 1958 by a group of musicians who played together for the Magic Valley Dilettantes production of "Carousel," the symphony is composed of volunteers who, in addition to the regular Magic Valley Symphony concerts, are active in the orchestra pit at many other local stage productions.

According to Hadley, the symphony has had only four music directors over the years: Richard Smith - Del Slaughter, Larry Curtis and currently Carson Wong. She attributes the low attrition rate of directors as a factor in the symphony's stability.

In addition, strong guest artists have helped in attracting community support, she notes, pointing out that such luminaries as Jose Greco and Leonard Rose have performed with the group. This season offers Magic Valley residents a chance to see one of their own when Steve Moss takes to the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium stage at 8 p.m., Nov. 16.

A Twin Falls native, Moss is busy completing a doctorate degree in harpsichord performance at Claremont Graduate School in Claremont, Calif. He has taught harpsichord and music theory at Scripps College in Claremont and currently is researching Ernestine Schumann-Heink's performance in the premiere of Richard Strauss' opera "Elektra."

A 1976 graduate of Twin Falls High School, Moss studied piano in Twin Falls with Teala Bellini and cello with Helen Cozier. He has appeared with the Magic Valley Symphony as a member of the cello section and as a piano soloist, and with the Magic Valley Chamber Orchestra as a harpsichordist.

Also at CSI, the Tucson Arizona Boys Chorus will highlight the season Feb. 23 at 3 p.m. with patriotic selections, Broadway tunes and Western folk songs. The boys chorus has toured in all 48 mainland states and throughout much of the world. According to Hadley, the boys chorus doesn't normally perform with a symphony, but that its recent appearance with the Winston-Salem Symphony was a powerful success. She points out that the performance will be geared toward family entertainment.

Because last year's premiere pops concert came off so successfully, the symphony has expanded it to include a choice of two evenings this season, May 2 and 3. Slated for 8 p.m., both evenings at the Twin Falls Elks Lodge, pre-concert dinners will be available to all season ticket holders before both the symphony and The Snake River Brass perform light classics and popular music.

Hadley says that Magic Valley Symphony brochures with tear-off return slips are now available in area music stores for those wanting season tickets. For more information should call Hadley at 733-1079, or Sharone Steel at 733-8813.

Nerd bird, other critters teach kids morals

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — If all goes according to plan, the illustrated characters of Burley native Gary Anderson will become as common to preschoolers as Bugs Bunny, Smurfs and Hobbits.

Recently Anderson teamed with fellow Burley High classmate of 1975, Gary Hogg, to publish a children's book, "I Heard of a Nerd Bird," through Big Daddy Press of Los Angeles, Calif. Hogg wrote the book, while Anderson put his artistic talent to work bringing the many animal characters to visual life.

According to Anderson, the process has not been an easy one; rather, the book has taken a time-consuming, circuitous route before seeing final print. After a year at Hicks College, the young artist moved on to studies at Brigham Young University where the book idea first germinated.

Anderson says that Hogg, his best friend from high school who was also attending BYU at the time, would conceive children's stories, then read them at church and at libraries. "Everyone said he should get them published," Anderson says, pointing out that Hogg then asked Anderson and another artist to rough draft some illustrations.

"I came up with the characters he liked," Anderson says, adding, "I (Hogg) liked to use animals in writing because kids see the animals' human characteristics and the animals can teach them. All the stories have a real good teaching moral for kids." In spite of that, none of the big Eastern publishers would accept the book, he says. Finally, believing the book deserved a chance, Anderson and Hogg borrowed money and paid Big Daddy Press to publish it.

Anderson says that in "I Heard of a Nerd Bird," none of the Nerds can fly or sing like other birds. The protagonist, Happy Hawk, takes on the task of teaching one Nerd that he has the potential for those lofty achievements, which leads that Nerd to help other Nerds progress respectively. "It's for beginning readers, but adults get a lot out of it too," Anderson says.

Not stopping with that one book, the artist says that he has just sent off a set of illustrations for "Friendship in the Forest," featuring a skunk and a porcupine that cross

Country Western music show to benefit police association

Telephone crews are selling tickets

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A country Western music concert, sponsored by the Twin Falls Police Association, is scheduled for Oct. 3 in Twin Falls, featuring well known country music artists: David Frizzell and Shelly West.

Don Garey, president of the police officers association, said telephone crews have been making telephone calls to sell tickets to the event, since Aug. 26.

Funds raised by the concert will be used for the policemen's benefit fund and such programs as the youth baseball team. Garey said generally the proceeds will be kept in the benefit fund to assist officers and their families in case of serious injuries, illness or other costly family emergencies.

He said this is the first time the police organization has attempted such a fund-raiser. It will not replace the annual Policemen's Ball, which is another major benefit fund-raiser held by the police department staff in Twin Falls, he added.

There will be two shows on Oct. 3 in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium. The first performance is at 7 p.m. and the next at 9:30 p.m. Garey said the show will last about one and one-half hours.

The ticket sales will be restricted to the number of seats available and all tickets are on a reserve-seat basis. Cost is $12.50 per person.

Both West and Frizzell have grown up in country music families. West is the daughter of country music

Laotian musician given national award

By RICHARD GREEN
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — From a small apartment, Bua Sua Mua is carrying on a musical and spiritual tradition born thousands of years ago in southwest China.

Mua, a Hmong tribesman who aided the United States during the Vietnam War by leading Laotian villagers on military campaigns, now is waging a different kind of battle. He's trying to keep alive the heritage of his people.

The 70-year-old man was in Washington, D.C., Thursday to collect a $5,000 check from the National Endowment for the Arts. He will perform at Ford's Theater today.

He is one of 12 people to receive the award, which the federal agency says is the nation's highest recognition of extraordinary accomplishment and achievement in a traditional arts field.

Mua, who said he was a shaman, or spiritual leader, for his tribe in the mountains of Laos, fled with family members to Thailand and then to the United States in 1978.

"If we stayed in Laos, I and my family would have been killed," Mua said through an interpreter. He said many people who joined him in promoting the United States' cause in Vietnam were killed after the fall of Saigon.

While in Laos, Mua was concerned primarily with the spiritual health of his village. He said he followed in the footsteps of his father, grandfather and great-grandfather in becoming a shaman, healing the sick by promoting "good spirits" and dispatching "bad spirits" with music.

Music also was used to pass along historical information in the Hmong culture, which only recently acquired a written language. Hmong tribesmen have been identified as being in southwest China at least as early as 255 B.C. The Hmong emigrated from that area to Laos and Vietnam in the 1800s.

One of the primary musical instruments played by Mua is called a geej. Made of bamboo, the instrument is a woodwind that produces a high-pitched sound.

He teaches Hmong refugees to play the instrument and has given

Bua Sua Mua, playing an instrument called a geej, helps keep traditions alive in America performances at high schools and community events.

The performers, together with some Social Security benefits and seamstress, support the couple and their extended family, all of whom live in Mua's small apartment.

Jan DeWeese, a Portland music teacher, was putting together a community folk music festival when he discovered Mua. DeWeese since has written several grant applications for Mua, including the one that resulted in the $5,000 award.

He said the National Endowment for the Arts made the award after sending representatives to hear Mua's music.

"It makes me happy to play the music, but it also makes me lonely for the good friends and relatives I've left behind," said Mua, who began playing the geej 55 years ago. "When I play, in a way, I am playing for them."

By teaching the young to play the instrument, Mua said, he is trying to pass along Hmong cultural traditions that otherwise would die.

He said he particularly wants the music to continue in marriage and death ceremonies.

"I wish that the playing of (Hmong music) on the instrument will continue in the future and that this skill will not be lost," he said.

And although Mua said he realizes some diseases can be treated only by doctors, he is convinced his music can rid people of their illnesses.

"In the future I hope to again use music to attract good spirits and make the sick healthy again," he said.

National Geographic special airs Sept. 15

From the mysterious depths of the oceans to the jaws of the earth's deadliest animals, from the crazy grin of Sir Edmund Hillary to the gentle manner of Jane Goodall, the "National Geographic Specials" have, for years, introduced television viewers to fascinating people they're likely never to meet; places they couldn't ordinarily visit; and animals they'd usually never encounter.

Idaho Public Television will air "Great Moments with National Geographic" on Sept. 15 at 5:30 p.m., a 30-minute program created to celebrate the series' ten award-winning years on PBS.

Hosted by Hal Hlubok, "Great Moments with National Geographic" focuses on the unforgettable scenes — dramatic, beautiful, hilarious — from the 40 "Specials" produced since 1975. First-time viewers and long-time fans alike will delight in scenes including polar bears overcome with curiosity by a man in a cage; four trapped men on a handmade raft, braving the waters of the Yukon River; a giant whale playfully nudging a load of startled scientists; a montage of unusual types of sharks; a young spring buck gamboling while a lilie and deadly cheetah lurks nearby; and a lovely young woman, deaf from birth, jubilant as an electronic ear (toppan) allows her to hear for the first time the sound of her own voice.

Ad agencies place money on few new TV shows to survive

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Seven of last season's 25 new fall series lived to see their second year, including "Top Ten Programs," "The Cosby Show" and "Murder, She Wrote." But expect the 20 new shows for 1985-86 to produce a leaner crop.

That's the consensus of several advertising agencies who forecast such things and then invest their clients' money on the speculative business of what's hot and what's not in prime time.

The quality of the shows, as well as the programs' lead-ins and competition.

"We don't think there will be any breakout shows," said John Sisk, senior vice president for the J. Walter Thompson agency. "But we didn't predict the phenomenal success of 'Cosby,' either."

"I don't think they (the agencies) have any great insights into what works and what doesn't," said Dave Poltrack, CBS vice president for programming. "They tend to be more pessimistic than the final results justify."

Thompson predicted that 10 new shows would have a chance for survival but rated only four "best bets." Three were anthologies: "Twilight Zone" on CBS and Steven Spielberg's "Amazing Stories" and "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" on NBC. The other was Robert Wagner's new vehicle, ABC's "Lime Street."

McCann-Erickson projected that seven new programs would average the 25 percent share of the tuned-in audience that separates the moderate hits from the misses. They were ABC's "The Insiders," "Dynasty II: The Cobys" and "Lime Street," "Twilight Zone" and NBC's "Hell Town," "Amazing Stories" and "Alfred Hitchcock."

Dancer Fitzgerald Sample said only one show had clear hit potential, "Hell Town," starring Robert Blake as a barrister priest. DFS said "the show's Los Angeles gutter setting and positive moral values provide sensible counter-programming to ABC's 'Dynasty.'"

DFS said each network had one series with a good chance for success: ABC's "Lime Street," CBS' "Twilight Zone" and NBC's "Golden Girls." Most of the agencies judged "Golden Girls" the best pilot. It's a sitcom about four older women living together in Miami Beach.

It gave CBS a slight edge over NBC in total households. But all said that NBC would be the clear-cut winner in the key demographics of adults 18-49 and 18-49 groups that many advertisers most want to reach. CBS will continue to lead in adults over 50.

In the ratings race, two key battlegrounds will be Sunday at 8 p.m. Ettern time, when "Amazing Stories" and "Alfred Hitchcock" are against CBS' incumbent champion "Murder, She Wrote" and ABC's newcomer "MacGyver," and Wednesday at 9, when the competition is "Hell Town," top-ranked "Dynasty."

Blue Note releases cache of jazz gems

By JIM KELTON
Everett Herald

The continuing saga of Blue Note records, which involves the rebirth of one of the most important of all jazz labels in the modern era, continues to unfold in a manner that is marked by extraordinarily high quality and an adventurous sense of possibilities.

So far the new Blue Note operation — supervised by Michael Cuscuna and Bruce Lundvall — has concentrated on selective releases by remarkable new performers (Stanley Jordan) and massive reissues of work by outstanding veterans (Stanley Turrentine, Art Blakey). The result has been one of the most promising recorded jazz projects of recent years... and it gets better and better.

The latest series of Blue Note albums consists of audiophile pressings of previously unreleased masterpieces from the Blue Note vault, pressings that have been returned out via the digital, direct-metal-mastering process by France's renowned Pathe Marconi operation.

These are uniformly excellent albums and they feature some of the most impeccable sound and exhilarating music that the neo-Blue Note enterprise has yet produced.

Here are some entries of inestimable value.

"Alternate Takes" (BST 8439). Bud Powell (Blue Note BST 8439). The acknowledged piano titan who accompanied the Fuge of bebop were Art Tatum and Thelonious Monk. Tatum was a virtuoso equipped with unlimited technical wherewithal; Monk was a master architect whose approach to his instrument yielded theoretical concepts that are only now being fully explored.

Powell, a sensitive and troubled man, was in many ways an even more complex character. He was a stylistic genius whose capacity for intricate improvisation remains as mysterious as it is beautiful.

A dyed-in-the-wool romanticist, Powell combined classical and bebop elements in a seamless blend of rich experimentation and swinging clarity that is mind-boggling in its eloquent depth.

"Alternate Takes" is made up mostly by Powell compositions and contains ensemble help from Dexter Gordon, Sonny Rollins, Kenny Navarro, Philly Joe Jones, Patsy

Clark and others.

And it is a powerful demonstration of Powell's peerless abilities. In light of the fact that Powell eventually drifted into a quagmire of mental problems that for all practical purposes put an end to his productivity, "Alternate Takes" serves as an indispensable memorial to his prodigious beginnings.

"Another Workout." Hank Mobley (Blue Note BST 84431). Tenor saxophonist Hank Mobley (still occasionally giggling around Philadelphia) endured the insufferable fate of being regarded as too good for his own good.

The lush-toned beauty of his playing was considered overly soft in the days of hard bop and, thus, Mobley was relegated in hip listeners' minds to the safe sentimentality of the past.

In truth, however, he was an enormously gifted craftsman whose spontaneous interludes were often much more complex than their balladizing style indicated.

His employment by such revered figures as Horace Silver, Max Roach, Miles Davis and Dizzy Gillespie stands as persuasive testimony to his professional status.

Likewise, his magnificently symmetrical contributions to the rock-solid support of sidemen Wynton Kelly, Paul Chambers, Grant Green and Philly Joe Jones on "Another Workout" identify him once and for all as a solid major league.

So his social anger (a requisite for jazz recognition in the bebop period) was couched in jovialness; it was nevertheless as definitively stated as anyone else's.

"Here to Stay." Freddie Hubbard (BST 84135). Trumpeter Freddie Hubbard (one of the premier hotshots of the golden age of Blue Note) didn't bother to round off the edges of his bombastic assaults.

He was a brassy, blow-down-the-back-wall young Turk.

paths in the forest. "They have two distinctive traits that aren't too pleasant," Anderson says, noting that when the two animals meet, they immediately set about pointing out each other's faults.

Again, Happy Hawk appears to teach the forest critters that everybody has faults, but we should look for the good in each other, not the bad.

"I feel real good about being involved," Anderson says. "These stories teach good principles. Kids grow up with these principles instilled in their minds. I hope my pictures hold their attention."

"It seems like when I was taking lessons during my studies at school I was able to incorporate all different types of concepts including cartooning and Western," he adds. "In these books I try to fit the personality of the characters into the animals I illustrate."

Anderson, who is currently working on yet another book illustration, says several more are on the agenda for future publication.

Yet, if anything, Anderson's current situation is full control of their own destiny. With his brother, Jeff, the artist has participated in a three-man show at the Lightworks Gallery in Burley, exhibited at the Elkhorn Arts Festival, the Festival of the American West in Logan, Utah, and at many other exhibitions — all to show their Western art.

The brothers often attend mountain man rendezvous where they set up their easels to paint participants. Their Twin Falls apartment is filled with Western oil portraits and Jeff's Western wood carvings, and Anderson says Western art is his favorite.

In spite of that, Anderson thinks "I Heard of a Nerd in Brd" is doing well enough to someday see a second printing, while the other planned books are keeping him busy illustrating lizards, skinks, porcupines, hares and worms.

Pee-wee Herman's odyssey scores big for young director

CAPSULE REVIEWS
 Ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America and by the Los Angeles Times. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times reviewers.

BACK TO THE FUTURE (PG). An inventive premise — a teen-ager travels back in time and falls into the middle of his parents' romance — that is underdeveloped and over-produced. There are a few nice moments of nostalgia for a sexually upright, unenlightened past, but there are not enough bits of lovely inventiveness to pad out the gimmick. The outcome is hollow and materialistic.

THE BRIDE (PG-13). Director Franc Roddam and writer Lloyd Frankel's gorgeous-looking, sensitive reworking of the legend of Frankenstein's monster and his bride unfortunately misfires badly, due mainly to problems of structure and pace. With Sting as Baron Frankenstein and Jennifer Beals in the title role.

GREMLINS (PG). This story of a father's kind gift to his teen-age son, which turns sour, is a gold mine for people with old movies rattling around in their heads. It's sweet-and-sour funny, inventive, implausible (one good light switch turned on and the movie's over), and not for little or highly impressionable kids. It's also fairly rambling, but by the time an entire "It's a Wonderful Life" town is taken over by the dark green side, it's also wickedly good fun. With newcomer Zach Galligan, Phoebe Cates, Hoyt Axton and Frances Lee.

PEE-WEE'S BIG ADVENTURE (PG). Pee-wee's big adventure — that deranged, manic, eternally infantile TV kiddie-show host created by actor-writer Paul Reubens — probably annoys as many people as he amuses but, for those who are amused, the movie will be a treat. It is a comic odyssey, a kind of vulgarization of De Sica's "The Bicycle Thief" filtered through Jerry Lewis and "The road" movies, with Pee-wee off on a frantic hunt through L.A. and the American Southwest for his stolen bike. Director Tim Burton, a 26-year-old making his feature debut, has a real talent for low-down slapstick and comic horror; he is a man to watch.

PRIZZI'S HONOR (R). Prime John Huston; the director cocks a playful eye at Richard Condon's (and Janet Roach's) story of love, family loyalty and betrayal in and around a Mafia family where every emotion is larger than life, but death is only business. In its intricacy, it is like "The Maltese Falcon" done as Huston opera and set in Brooklyn. Jack Nicholson, Kathleen Turner, and (especially) Anjelica Huston as Maerose Prizzi are marvelous. Watching a thought make its way from behind Nicholson's eyes and, by a circuitous route, finally come out of his mouth is a monumental pleasure. This is probably the most satisfying role Nicholson has ever had and he attacks it with an unabashed delight that we in the audience share royally.

RAMBO: FIRST BLOOD PART II (R). Sylvester Stallone's John Rambo, a disillusioned Vietnam vet and walking hunk of vengeance and anger, returns. Only this time he's battling not merely a small Northwestern city police force, but the combined armies of the Soviet Union and Vietnam, as well as his own craven Washington superiors. Highly professional, but insane. Efforts of monstrous carnage, jungle mercenary beefcake and moral outrage only.

THE RETURN OF THE LIVING DEAD (R). Dan O'Bannon's sequel (sort of) to George Romero's low-budget horror classic "Night of the Living Dead," with a collection of thrill-crazy punks, crooked warehouse owners and Horst Wessel-loving mortuary attendants all menaced by a new outbreak of cannibal zombies. It is only for those with strong stomachs and cynical senses of humor. The atmosphere is sleazy and macabre, the blood level is unremitting, and the gags are among the poorest ever. For those who can take it, however.

O'Bannon has come up with a heady mixture of shocks and laughter.

WEIRD SCIENCE (PG-13). Yet another John Hughes 15-year-old boy wish-fulfillment movie; in this one, two high school social pariahs (Anthony Michael Hall and Ian Mink-chell-Smith) computer-create a woman to their own specifications. Luckily for us, it is Kelly LeBrock, who somehow manages to rise above everything that follows, including the "cool" scene of racial bigotry which seems now obligatory in Hughes' films. You might think by now kids would object to constant portrayals as sex-crazed housewrecking morons.

YEAR OF THE DRAGON (R). Mickey Rourke is sent to clean up the marauding youth gangs of New York's Chinatown in an astonishing success from Michael Cimino. The film has an arrogant, electric energy that dares you to look away from the screen for an instance, leaving you feeling that you have been smuggled behind the scenes of a closed world. Towering, claustrophobic and exhausting.

Telluride Film Festival keeps intact its reputation as eclectic showcase

By SHEILA BENSON
 Los Angeles Times

TELLURIDE, Colo. — The Telluride Film Festival spread its delicacies and discoveries again this Labor Day weekend and emerged with its reputation intact. After 12 years, it is still the most eclectic, ardent and rewarding hand-picked orgy of film in America.

It is also an amazing exercise in faith and chutzpah: You buy a Telluride ticket early and you buy blind — no advance word is ever given on the program, and the certain rumors that seep out flop more often than they materialize. (Louise Brooks, Satyajit Ray and Akira Kurosawa, none of whom ever arrived, were all sure bets in years past.) This year, the tributes went to a pioneer and shamefully neglected Mexican director, the striking stylist Emilio Fernandez; to Europe's compelling, enigmatic Hanna Schygulla, and to a magnificent visual artist, Alexander Trauner, whose nearly 50 years of production designs range from "Children of Paradise" to "The Man Who Won the Berlin" to "Round About Midnight" for Bertrand Tavernier, currently in production in Paris.

Gathered around these honorees was a brilliantly motley collection of films, their makers and their subjects from all over the globe. You could discover Peter Wang's deftly disarming cross-cultural hit, "The Great Wall Is a Great Wall," or meet, on film or on the irregular streets of Telluride, three amazing documentary subjects: singing band leader Howard Armstrong and Ted Bogan, stars of the exuberant "Louie Blume," and agent-producer-recounteur Paul Kohner, surpassing in person and in every way a documentary on his life and artfulness.

Overall, however, Telluride's 12th felt faintly like a program with a hole in it: It lacked one towering entry around which every other film would have fallen into its proper perspective. (Orion Pictures reportedly withdrew Kurosawa's "Ran" at a late date, saving its American debut for the New York Film Festival.)

The Kurosawa film might have provided the ballast that had distinguished some of the truly great past festivals; the years, for example, of Abel Gance or Andrei Tarkovsky. Still, this festival contained its own share of tremendous moments: "Chaos," by Italy's Taviani brothers, based on four stories by Pirandello; Fernandez's "The Pearl," a luminous film from the thinnest of John Steinbeck stories, and "The Funeral" by Juzo Itami, which might be called a Japanese film with Czech sensibilities.

In such a pressure-cooker intensity of programming, it is sometimes possible to see one theme floating to the surface of films separated by style as well as geography.

The rituals and very rhythms of death were explored in at least three of the most interesting works: Lynne Littman's heroic new documentary, "In Her Own Time," about the end of the life and the investigations of anthropologist Barbara Myerhoff; the "Requiem" and "Epilog" sections of the Taviani's "Chaos," and Itami's "The Funeral." They also pervade the less-than-successful but interesting Australian feature "Bliss" by Ray Lawrence.

It is as though, after cycles of coming-of-age, alienation and apocalypse films, death is the next appropriate subject (sometimes in dryly hilarious terms). In some instances, the ritual of dying becomes an ennobling process.

Brigham Young vs. Washington

It was dream matchup until last week

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Last year, Washington and Brigham Young were involved in a spat over who should be ranked No. 1 in the college football polls.

BYU, which finished 13-0, prevailed over the 11-1 Huskies in the final Associated Press rankings. But what a difference a year can make. This time, both the Cougars and Huskies have been bloodied with losses. Instead of battling for the lead in the polls, they are working to trim turnovers that led to losses for each team last week.

"The year 1984 is dead and gone," said Donn James, whose Pac 10 team squares off with the Western Athletic Conference's BYU here Saturday.

"Neither team is the same," James said. "We lost six solid defensive starters, four making it to the NFL, and it's not fair to try and take anything away that BYU accomplished last year."

The Huskies' 16-7 loss to Southern California is the only blemish on last year's record. Opponents of BYU's No. 1 ranking argued that Washington, which beat Oklahoma 28-17 in the Orange Bowl, played a stiffer schedule and deserved to be ranked higher than the Cougars.

That's ancient history, as far as James and BYU Coach LaVell Edwards are concerned. This year, they have a new set of problems, namely turnovers. Last week, the Cougars suffered through their second straight turnover-plagued game and fell to UCLA 27-24 in Provo after giving up four turnovers.

That loss came a week after BYU handed Boston College 28-14 at East Rutherford, N.J., but was guilty of six turnovers in the process.

The Huskies opened their 1985 season last week and spotted Oklahoma State two touchdowns in losing to the Cowboys in a 31-17 upset. A fumble recovery in the Huskies' end zone and a pass interception that led to a touchdown provided Oklahoma State with its victory margin.

BYU quarterback-Robbie Bosco threw four interceptions against Boston College and two, including one for a touchdown, against UCLA.

"That's basically our problem, and what the reason is, it's anybody's guess," Edwards said. "But we are not in a panic situation. I think we are making progress, and I think we'll be an outstanding football team."

The Cougars, who had won 25 straight games until last week's loss, slipped from eighth to 16th in this week's AP poll. The Huskies, who finished No. 2 behind BYU in the final AP poll last year, are unranked in this week's survey. BYU boasts one of the nation's best passing attack with Bosco and wide receiver Glen Kozlowski the biggest threats. Bosco has passed for 848 yards and five touchdowns in his first two games, and Kozlowski has had 15 receptions for 328 yards and two touchdowns.

The Huskies demonstrated a solid passing attack in their loss last week.

Senior quarterback Hugh Millen completed 21 of 38 passes for 232 yards, all three statistics career highs. He also threw two touchdown passes to junior split end Lonzell Hill, the first two touchdowns of Hill's collegiate career.

The big question on the Huskies is the defense, and James admits he's unsure whether the defense is ready to play BYU. "I think you could have a very experienced defense and play against that offense and give up a lot of yards," James said. "With a couple of poor breaks, you could give up a lot of points."

Edwards describes his team's offense as a controlled passing game. The Cougars have amassed only 186 yards rushing in their first two games.

However, James says his team can't spend all afternoon worrying only about the pass.

"You can't go in and say 'we've got to stop the pass,' because they can run it," he said. "They spread their offense all over — use the whole field."

Coed tourney opens Saturday

TWIN FALLS — The second annual Twin Falls charity coed softball tournament will be held Saturday and Sunday at Frontier Field.

This year's tournament will benefit the Twin Falls Optimist Club and the many youth programs they support.

Sixteen co-ed teams will participate in the double-elimination tournament. Play begins each day at 9 a.m. with the final game played at 7 p.m.

Last year's champion, Q-92 from Rupert, will be back to defend its crown. The public is invited and there is no admission charge.

Deputies place in shoot

ARCO — Two Twin Falls County Sheriff's deputies placed at the American Protective Services Pistol Tournament held here recently.

Deputy Keith Christensen finished second in the high master division, while Deputy Walter Hamby was third in the expert class.

Christensen finished four points behind Boise police officer Jerry Smith in his event, with 1,438 points. Hamby had 1,417 points, 19 behind the event winner, Leonard Denton, an APF employee.

Christensen and Hamby also took second in the two-man team division, with 1,143 points. Rexburg police officers Lynn and Keith Archibald won the event with 1,160 points.

More than 100 peace officers from Idaho, northern Utah and western Wyoming participated in the event at the pistol range at the Idaho National Energy Laboratory near here.

There were 1,500 possible points in the individual competition, 2,400 for teams.

DU trapshoot slated

TWIN FALLS — Budweiser of Twin Falls and Ducks Unlimited will sponsor the first annual Magic Valley Fun Shoot Saturday at the Twin Falls Gun Club.

The competition will feature several different forms of shooting for hunters of all skill levels.

Entry fee is $25 for four events, or $20 for shooters 17 years of age or younger.

Events will include a duck blind buddy shoot, fleeing teal buddy shoot, firing line sky buster and ringneck hunter delight.

Each event may be shot more than once, with the second round for all four events costing shooters $15, or $5 per event.

There will be drawings for prizes.

Further information can be obtained by phoning Dick Krause at 733-4855 or Norm Lancaster at 733-3743.

Miami signs Blackwood

MIAMI (AP) — Safety Glenn Blackwood, the Miami Dolphins' defensive captain in 1984, agreed to contract terms with the National Football League team Thursday, ending a two-month holdout.

Blackwood, a 6-foot, 190-pound veteran out of Texas, had started every regular season game for the Dolphins for the past four years. In his six years with the NFL club, he has a total of 402 tackles and 18 interceptions.

Blackwood, 28, whose older brother Lyle also is a defensive back with the Dolphins, called the defensive signals for the team last year. In his absence, second-year safety Bud Brown has been handling that chore.

Coach Don Shula said he will ask the NFL for a two-week roster exemption for Blackwood, allowing the player as long as two weeks to prepare before he is counted against the roster limit of 45. Shula said he doesn't expect Blackwood to play this week against the Indianapolis Colts.

Wilkins threatens holdout

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins, the sixth leading scorer in the National Basketball Association last season, has threatened to sit out the 1985-86 season if the Hawks refuse to renegotiate his contract.

"I do love to play, and it would be hard for me to do something like that (sit out the season)," Wilkins said Wednesday.

Wilkins, 28, averaged 27.4 points last season and has a three-year scoring average of 22.1 points, has two years plus an option year left on a six-year contract he signed with the Hawks in 1982. That contract paid Wilkins $450,000 last season and increases by $25,000 each of the next two years.

Ovett meets Cram Sunday

LONDON (AP) — England's injury-plagued Steve Ovett meets record-breaking compatriot Steve Cram Sunday for the first time since the Los Angeles Olympics 1,500 meters final last year.

Ovett collapsed dramatically in the latter stages of the race, having ignored medical advice to pull out because of a strengthening virus.

The 28-year-old middle-distance champion has struggled back onto the international scene this season but is still short of full fitness.

Ovett, however, maintains, "I'm in quite good shape and my hamstring injury has cleared up."

Ovett and Cram meet in the Peugeot Talbot Westminster Mile through the streets of London.

Mets win playoff flip

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets won a coin flip Thursday — along with a game — and will be at home Monday, Oct. 7, for a one-game playoff against visiting St. Louis in the event the teams finish the season tied atop the National League East.

The Mets beat the Cardinals 7-6 Thursday to take a one-game lead in the division. The teams play three more games, Oct. 1-3 in St. Louis.

Before the game, Dal Maxvill, a former Cardinals' infielder and now the club's general manager, called "heads" as National League President Chub Peeney tossed a coin. It came up "tails." General Manager Frank Cashen represented the Mets.

The playoff would be held one day after the regular season, the starting time to be announced at a later date.

New sports network offered

NEW YORK (AP) — Major League Baseball, the National Basketball Association, the National Hockey League and the men's and women's golf and pro tennis organizations have jointly announced they will take part in a new programming service called Sports Newsatellite.

The new service will be a half-hour feed of highlights and feature material of the participating sports delivered via satellite three times a day, seven days a week to local television stations. Those stations will then edit the feed to suit its own needs.

Baseball has offered a similar service since April to 117 stations around the country. The new service, an outgrowth of Baseball Newsatellite, is scheduled to get under way Oct. 21.

The announcement was made Thursday in Nashville, Tenn., at the Radio and Television News Directors convention.

Dietrich takes soccer win

DIETRICH — Alan Stoddard paced the Dietrich Blue Devils to a 3-2 soccer victory over Twin Falls Christian Academy Thursday night.

Stoddard punched in two goals leading the Devils. John Bingham's goal was the deciding factor in the match.

Niekro goes after 300th win tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — Phil Niekro's actions never give a hint of what is ahead. By his easy-going ways, he could be preparing to go fishing, go hunting or win his 300th major league game.

"If I ever ran like the other pitchers did, I'd fall down," said Niekro, a 46-year-old knuckleball specialist for the New York Yankees who tries for victory No. 300 Friday night against the Toronto Blue Jays.

"I guess I've been lucky because I let my body tell me what to do," Niekro said. "When I'm hungry, I eat, regardless of what time it is. When I'm sleepy, I sleep, regardless of what time it is. Who's to say you have to do everything on a time schedule?"

It's an unorthodox lifestyle, but one that certainly has worked for Niekro, now 15-9, with victories in each of his last five starts.

In an era of fastballs and strikeouts, of Dwight Gooden and other young arms performing amazing feats on the mound, Niekro is a throwback.

His fastball would not make many high school batters blink. His curve is OK, as is his slider. But it's another pitch that has kept him around — and successful — for so long.

It is the knuckleball, that baffle batters and catches alike. Niekro throws his from a motion that never seems quite complete, his follow-through sometimes winding up with his right hand at his knees and other times with it about belt high.

The pitch dips and darts, slides in an out, and — as often as not — leaves the batter helpless. It can backfire, too, and that is why Niekro's ledger lists a National League-leading winning percentage of .810 with Atlanta in 1982 as well as a tie for the major league records for wild pitches in an inning (4) and a game (6), both set with the Braves on Aug. 4, 1979.

Philip Henry Niekro was born on April Fool's Day 1939, in Blaine, Ohio. He and his younger brother, Joe, were star athletes at Bridgeport, Ohio, High School, where Phil played on the basketball team with John Havlicek.

After seven years of mostly minor-league service, Niekro hit the majors for good with Atlanta in 1967. He won 23 games in 1969, 20 in '74 and 21 in '79. He threw a no-hitter for the Braves against San Diego in 1973 and was named to the All-Star pitching staff four times.

But when his contract expired at the end of the 1983 season, Braves owner Ted Turner decided Niekro was too old and let him go. The Yankees signed him as a free agent in January 1984, and Niekro responded with a 16-4 mark and a 3.03 earned-run average.

"I never doubted I had something left," Niekro said.

Colbert fires 66 to lead at Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — PGA tour veteran Jim Colbert fired a 6-under-par 66 Thursday to grab a 2-stroke lead over a dozen players in the first round of the $300,000 Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament.

Colbert, who won the event in 1972 at a different Milwaukee-area course, had six birdies and no bogeys in an out, and — as often as not — leaves the batter helpless. It can backfire, too, and that is why Niekro's ledger lists a National League-leading winning percentage of .810 with Atlanta in 1982 as well as a tie for the major league records for wild pitches in an inning (4) and a game (6), both set with the Braves on Aug. 4, 1979.

Trevino lists U.S. Ryder Cup starters

SUTTON COLDFIELD, England (AP) — Nonplaying Captain Lee Trevino nominated Curtis Strange and Mark O'Meara to lead off for the United States in Friday's opening action in the biennial Bell's Scotch Ryder Cup golf matches.

Strange and O'Meara will oppose the Spanish duo of Seve Ballesteros and Manuel Piñero in the first of four morning foursomes competition in which each member of the two-man team plays alternate strokes on the same ball.

An exchange of lineups Thursday afternoon by Trevino and Tony Jacklin, the captain of the British-European team, also produced these foursomes matches:

Tommy Kitson and Calvin Peete vs. Masters champion Bernhard Langer of West Germany and Nick Faldo of England; Lanny Wadkins and Ray Floyd vs. British Open champion Sandy Lyle and Ken Brown, both of Scotland; and Craig Stadler and Hal Sutton vs. Howard Clark of England played this year. It was really an easy round," Colbert, 44, said. "My golf has been lousy. I haven't practiced. But I felt prepared to play here."

Colbert's last tour victory was the 1932 Colonial National Invitation.

A dozen golfers were tied for second, all grouped at 4-under-par 68. The group included Bill Kratzert, who won the 1980 GMO at Tuckaway; two-time tour winner Joey Sindelar; Roger Maltbie, also a two-time winner this year; Payne Stewart, and local pro Ed Terasa.

"I would say that's odd to have that many people with the same score," said Maltbie, calling the tournament wide-open.

"Even if someone had a 64, you would still feel you were in it with a 68," he said. "I don't know anyone who won a tournament on Thursday."

Five players were tied for third at 3-under 69, including George Burns, winner of last week's Bank of Boston Classic in Sutton, Mass.

Kratzert bogeyed No. 10, a tough par-4 at 445 yards, to finish his round 33-35-68, or 4 under.

Jack Nicklaus, playing in the G-MO for the first time as a professional, also had problems on that hole and on No. 9. Nicklaus, playing the back nine first, recorded a 2-under 70.

He three-putted from the back fringe for a bogey on No. 18 and double bogeyed No. 9, also a par-4, when he drove in the rough then squirted a 3-iron into trees to the right of the green. It took him two to reach the green from there, then he two-putted.

Nicklaus was 5 under par at one point on the back nine.

"Not a very good finish, was it?" said Nicklaus, who is joined in this tournament by his 23-year-old son, Jack Nicklaus II.

It is the first time the two have played together in the same Professional Golfers Association event.

The younger Nicklaus, an amateur, shot an 80 in this, his second PGA tournament. He played in the Quad Cities Open but failed to make the cut.

The 72-hole tournament is to conclude Sunday.

you wasted the whole year. A good oddsmaker is the key component to making money in a sports book operation. Most oddsmakers who check with their counterparts before putting out a line on a game to make sure they don't get burned by being too far off.

Once a line is set, an oddsmaker will adjust it to reflect the amount of money being bet on both sides. If more money is bet on the underdog, for example, the line will narrow to attract equal money on the favorite.

"What you try to do is get about the same amount of money on each side of a game," said Reizner. "That gives us a pretty good edge because we get the extra 10 percent."

For example, Reizner said bettors may put down $200,000 on one team in a Super Bowl and $240,000 on another. If the first team wins, the book would lose $200,000 on that team, but win $240,000 on the other. Add in $20,000 for the 10 percent juice and the book has a $64,000 profit.

If the game goes the other way, the bookmaker would win $200,000 and lose $240,000 on the straight bet, a loss of $40,000. But that would be reduced by $20,000 because of the 10 percent juice on the losing bets.

"So what we're doing is betting $20,000 to win $66,000," said Reizner. "We can lose, but we can win more than we lose. It gives us a good betting average."

But bookmakers say they're having a harder time beating players because of the growing sophistication among bettors and the tools at their disposal, particularly home computers.

A better specializing in one sport may be able to analyze a game more closely than a bookmaker, who must put up dozens of lines a week.

"You put up 49 or 50 games a weekend and you'll make a mistake," said Bob Martin, a top oddsmaker who is now retired. "There are people who specialize in this and they'll pounce on a mistake. A specialist will beat you, but you move your price to get other people who won't."

Martin said today's bettors are generally better than those of a few decades ago because they have more information to work from and they can also watch a variety of games via satellite television.

"Their information is just better in general, and that's not the inside information because that's overrated anyway," he said. "They use computers, do a lot of thinking. They're a lot smarter than the old timers."

Reizner also credits the proliferation of inexpensive personal computers with attracting a new breed of sports bettor who uses them to compare stats and make calculations before laying down a bet.

"Some expert computer people know how to feed a machine that will give you stuff that it would have taken months to do in long-hand," he said. "I think computers have brought a great deal of interest to sports betting."

Reizner estimates between 5 and 10 percent of all bettors can give sports books a good run over a long period of time, up from 1 to 2 percent a decade ago.
