Magic Valley's snow piles up

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Winter's strong grip on the Magic Valley area tightened Tuesday with several inches of new snow creating extremely hazardous driving conditions and closing at least one school. Traffic pile-ups and slide-offs occurred faster than Idaho State Police and county officers could handle them. Idaho State Police in Twin Falls were requesting persons stay off area highways if possible. The agency reported that all major highways including Interstate 84 had a cover of solid ice with snow-felling and blowing and poor visibility. Roads in Jerome County were especially poor, officials said.

There had been no serious accidents by Tuesday evening, although several persons were injured. Officers were shuttling from one accident scene to the next with no time to make out accident reports, according to dispatchers. A 1-4 between Bliss and Mountain Home were closed for a two hours Tuesday evening when an overturned semi-truck blocked two lanes and numerous other slide-offs and minor accidents created serious traffic problems. The route reopened about 8:10 p.m. after trucks arrived to sand icy spots. The storm came on the heels of a Saturday snowstorm that dumped up to 5 inches on the Magic Valley area. About mid-afternoon, state police officers in Twin Falls were passing on a warning from the Boise headquarters of mid-winter blizzard conditions for night and early morning travel. The storm extended from Mountain Home east and south through Magic Valley, although it didn't go much farther north than Timmerman Hill below Wood River Valley, according to a spokesman at the Division of Highways office at Shoshone, Jackpot, Nev., reported only 1-1 1/2 inches at 3 p.m., although the storm was continuing. U. S. Highway 93 was reported good going south beyond Hollister. State highway reports showed State Highway 75 was only "wet" north of Timmerman, through Hailey and Ketchum, but had a snow floor from Galena to Stanley. Plows and sanding trucks began working on the

Frost affects record Idaho potato output

By BOB FREUND Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's potato production this fall has set a new record, but it also is significantly affected by frost, the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service says. In its first report of the season on the crop, the statistical agency Tuesday estimated that farmers have taken 109,935 million (109,900) sacks of potatoes out of the ground. That harvest breaks the record of 100,311 million sacks set in 1978, said Richard Max, statistician-in-charge of the service. It also is 16.6 percent bigger than last year's crop, the agency estimates. Idaho farmers harvested more acres of potatoes and recorded higher yields — a state record of 293 hundredweight per acre — to account for the increase, the agency estimates. Idaho's record production outpaced that of the entire United States. The national Statistical Reporting Service places the country's crop at 346,116 million hundredweight, up 10.5 percent from last year, Max says.

frost damage becomes most apparent. Max said the first look at total frost losses will appear in its Dec. 13 report on potatoes in storage. Mel Anderson, executive director of Potato Growers of Idaho, Tuesday said the frost damage appears much larger than the official figures. He estimated the total losses at a minimum of 20 million hundredweight, or about one-fifth of the state's entire crop. PGI takes its own survey of the potato crop on Dec. 1 by counting the amounts in farmers' storage. Anderson also disputes the reporting service's total production figure, as he has in some previous years. "Where are they?" he asks. "If you had a crop that size in this state, you'd have to put them everywhere, in garages... We sure don't have that problem around here." PGI is based in Idaho Falls. The potato industry was watching Tuesday's figures closely, because they are the first official statistics of the season. But the estimates largely confirmed market expectations, said Paul Patterson, University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service agricultural economist. "The market price-wise is already setting at a position that reflects this anticipated high production," he said.

The amount of Idaho potatoes available to go to market, though, remains in question. The spud harvest has been diminished by two freezes early this fall. "We have frost damage at harvest time ranging from 0 to 30 percent and averaging across the entire state at 7 percent," Max says. Those losses amount to a minimum figure because the government agency has not yet estimated spoilage in storage, where

Prices remain far below those of previous years. There has been little open market activity in the past week. Late October and early November prices to the farmer were $2 a hundredweight, with one high of $3.30, said Tom Cooper, Idaho Falls representative for the Federal-State

Storm strands scores, breaks records

By ROGER PETERSON Times-News writer

Up to two feet of snow fell Tuesday over northern Arizona and Utah as a storm turned eastward after piling up huge drifts in the Sierra Nevada, stranding hunters and hikers and breaking records for cold temperatures. At least 17 deaths had been blamed on a series of winter-like storms since last week, but most hikers and hunters reported missing in Northern California had been found as of Tuesday. Trucks slid off roads and power lines fell in Utah, and schools were closed in northern Arizona. "We're projecting significant winter weather across the mountains at fairly low elevations for this early in the season, and significant snow should remain over the mountains" into Wednesday, Jack Hales of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said early Tuesday.

Winnemucca, Nev., posted a record low of 8 degrees below zero Tuesday, and Yakima, Wash., had a record low of 7 degrees. Eureka, Calif., on the northern coast, had a record low of 4 for the second day in a row. To the east, Caribou, Maine, had a record low of 6 degrees. The heaviest snow Tuesday moved into northern Arizona and Utah. Ten inches of snow fell during the night in northern Utah at the Alta ski resort, after up to 14 inches fell in the state's mountains Monday. The Alta, Snowbird and Snowbird resorts had accumulated 22 to 24 inches. Several trucks slid off a road at Soldier Summit about 70 miles southeast of Salt Lake City, forcing the Utah Highway Patrol to close the pass for six hours early Tuesday, a dispatcher said. In northern Arizona, the city of Flagstaff, at an elevation of about 7,000 feet, got 10 inches in five hours and schools were closed. Grand Canyon had 14 inches and 24 inches of snow was on the ground at Jacob Lake, on the sparsely populated Kaibab Plateau between the Grand Canyon and the Utah border. At the popular south rim of the Grand Canyon, "we've only got a few people coming in now, and lots who want to get out," said ranger Ray Skeet. The highway leading to the canyon's north rim was closed, as it usually is in the winter. The storm was blamed for a "power" outage which darkened Utah's Kanab area just north of the Arizona border for about eight hours, said Utah Power & Light Co. spokesman John Serfustini. "They still have leaves on a lot of the trees, and they got 12 to 18 inches of this wet sloppy stuff," said Serfustini. An estimated 250 elk hunters remained stranded by up to 4 feet of snow in the Cascade Mountains of Washington state. One woman was found

CSI could become site of world trade center

By DEAN S. MILLER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho could become home to a world trade exposition center for Idaho if the Magic Valley Agricultural Institute gets its way. Tuesday Foggy Fisher and members of the institute presented a plan for an information and trading center to a group of educators, politicians, and businessmen from Twin Falls and around the state. Earlier in the day, and a county attorney gubernatorial candidate Gov. David L. Leroy promoted a similar plan in a speech to the Idaho Wool Growers Convention in Burley. Originally promoted by the Idaho Bean Commission last year, the plan aims to organize Idaho's efforts to increase foreign sales of the state's agricultural products and technology. The earlier plan called for the creation of an exhibition and information center, says Harold West, former executive director of the Bean Commission.

The new plan being promoted by Leroy and the institute adds a trading floor where private producers and foreign trade representatives could get together to bargain and sign contracts for sales. Leroy says the center should be privately funded by those who will most benefit from it. "Trading and institute promoters say that trade missions funded by the state or by commodity groups are stymied by their inability to sit down and talk price and delivery date. Because they represent an entire state or industry, they cannot strike a deal that brings business to one particular company. A privately funded center would allow representatives of private companies to buy and sell their products at the center, Leroy says. CSI President Gerald Meyerhofer is "very positive" about the idea and will be looking for space on campus that could house an exhibition and meeting center. With a number of trade delegations visiting Idaho every year, the

Congress moves to increase Uncle Sam's line of credit

By CLIFF HAAKS The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Concerned about President Reagan facing the Soviets next week in Geneva with the U.S. government in an embarrassing default, Congress moved Tuesday night toward temporarily increasing the federal line of credit. With congressional negotiators still groping for compromise on rival balanced-budget plans, the House Ways and Means Committee approved an $80 billion increase in the government's borrowing authority — the national debt limit — that would allow the Treasury Department to continue borrowing to pay its bills until Dec. 13. The full House is expected to consider the measure today or Thursday. The committee action, on a voice vote, came amid renewed signs that Reagan is unhappy about how those budget plans would cut Pentagon spending. Bargainers from the House and Senate met for less than 20 minutes and agreed only to break into a subgroup to try to make progress before a midnight Thursday deadline for action to increase the government's line of credit. "The checks issued by the government start bouncing on Thursday," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and chairman of the bargaining session, told the group of 66 bargainers from the House and Senate. A previous attempt at negotiations failed. Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., the assistant Republican leader, said late in the day it became clear "we just physically could not reach the agreement we needed to make" before the deadline. Meanwhile, the House moved to avert a different problem by voting 239-151 for a stopgap measure that would keep money flowing to most government agencies after an existing stopgap bill also expires at midnight Thursday. This measure, which would expire Dec. 12 — is necessary because Congress has passed only two of the 13 appropriations bill necessary for the fiscal year that started Oct. 1. That stopgap bill now goes to the

By R. GREGORY NOKES The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has proposed an "open laboratory" arrangement for the United States and the Soviet Union to exchange scientists and double-check each other's "Star Wars" research, a senior administration official said Tuesday. But the Soviet Union, so far, has refused to go along with any agreement that permits researchers to Star Wars technology, the official said, even though the United States believes such research is clearly permissible under the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty. The official, who briefed reporters at the White House on the understanding he had not identified, indicated the open laboratory proposal would be part of an understanding on Star Wars that could clear the way for a comprehensive new arms control agreement that also would include sharp reductions in strategic offensive nuclear weapons.

"We have asked the Soviets to sit down and discuss these matters with us, beginning now," said the official. The official said he is still hopeful that arms control guidelines can be worked out for the Nov. 19-20 summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Geneva. Reagan leaves for the summit on Saturday. The official said the proposed guidelines are being discussed through the American ambassador in Moscow, Arthur Hartman, and the Soviet ambassador in Washington, Anatoly Dobrynin. Another official said Tuesday that it is a Soviet refusal to agree that the United States can engage in research into missile defense technology that is blocking a potential compromise that could lead to guidelines at the summit. "I think there is some real potential to cut a deal if they say they can live with laboratory research," said the official, who specializes in arms control issues and who insisted on not being identified.

Patterson, who tracks potato prices, said Tuesday's figures will not help potato prices. "In terms of the short run, looking into the next one to two months, there's likely to be no impact on prices" because they're already setting at a very low level," he said.

most—industry—watchers—expect prices to strengthen somewhat. But, "The price likely will remain below last year's price," Patterson said. "Just how much below is going to be difficult to determine."
Although Idaho has grown more acres of potatoes in a single year, the average yield of 293 sacks per acre easily beat the previous best of 285 recorded in 1982.

The 1984 crop counted out to 86.6 million hundredweight at a yield of 266 sacks per acre, Max said.
Yields in the southwest 10 counties of the state, which do not include the Magic Valley, were up 40 sacks per acre. Yields in the Magic Valley and eastern Idaho were up 25 sacks per acre, Max said.

skies clear and the winds decrease somewhat. In the southeast should occur over Idaho toward the latter part of the week as skies clear and temperatures begin to rise toward normal.
Low temperatures were warmer than expected over most of the state due to an increased cloud cover. The lows in the state ranged from the coldest reported of 5 degrees at Elk City to the warmest overnight reading of 23 degrees at Malad and Hagerman. Highs were only in the 20s over most of the area with the exception of Malad where the temperature had reached the freezing mark.

"It's definitely cold out there," Ms. Dean said. "They (searchers) are doing the best they can to get to the people up there."
"It's probably going to take all week to get everybody out," said Jack Bartley, Yakima County search and rescue coordinator, adding that 50 to 75 had walked to safety by early Tuesday and National Guard helicopters rescued 31 Monday.

About 70 groups of hunters were contacted by helicopter Monday, Ms. Dean said, but many chose to stay because they didn't want to leave their gear behind.

In Northern California's mountain counties, at least 45 people including campers, hikers, hunters and others had been led to safety as of Tuesday by sheriff's deputies and rescue-squad patrols from isolated areas of the Sierra Nevada and El Dorado National Forest, said Erik Holst, a forest spokesman.

"But at least four more people — two men and two women — were reported missing in the Loom Lake and Wright Lake areas, including recreational areas about 70 miles east of Sacramento, he said.

In Nevada, rescuers searched for two backpackers lost between Reno and Carson City, but two overdue hunters were rescued west of Reno. By late Monday, the storm had stacked up to 5 feet of snow around Lake Tahoe, east of the Sierra divide.
A search also continued for a small plane carrying three people that took off Sunday from North Lake Tahoe, stopped at Truckee, Calif., and then headed west for Concord, Calif.

Lt. Steve Cader of the Placer County, Calif., Sheriff's Department said signals from an emergency radio transmitter were being traced from a heavily wooded area northeast of Foresthill.
Snow snarled traffic Tuesday in mountain passes north of Los Angeles, and a mudslide in the fire-dented mountains north of Ojai closed state Highway 33, officials said. Snow was 13 inches deep at Big Bear Lake in the mountains 85 miles northeast of Foresthill.

Reagan hopes summit will send signal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Tuesday he hopes his summit next week with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev will produce "a signal" from the superpowers to guide nuclear arms control negotiators.

Reagan ruled out any chance of reaching a far-reaching arms treaty at the summit and suggested the meeting will not even produce a joint communique. "I'm not a great fan of communique — the sort of settling on a statement in advance," the president said.

While arms control will be a subject of the two-day session "beginning" next Tuesday in Geneva, Reagan said, "I don't envision this meeting as being one where we will get down to specific numbers and so forth."

Reagan, in an interview with West European television reporters, said, "I would think that what we should be dealing with at the summit is the elimination of suspicion and mistrust to the point that we could turn the specific numbers (of nuclear weapons) over to those other negotiators, but that they could have a signal from both sides, from their government and ours from us, have a knowledge that we want them to continue and to arrive at an agreement."

The interview came against the backdrop of Secretary of State George Shultz' assessment that his trip to Moscow last week failed to narrow differences between the United States and Soviet Union on arms control and other issues.

"Well, I'm not as pessimistic as that," Reagan said. "I understand, of course, that it's not going to be easy. There's a long history of meetings between our two countries and, many times, without much result."

Reagan pledged, "I'm going to make every effort to try and reduce the mistrust and suspicion that seems to exist between our, well, not only our two nations but sort of the East and the West."

In a light-hearted comment, Reagan noted that next week's meeting will be the first summit at which the American leader is older than his Soviet counterpart.

"Maybe I can help this young man with some fatherly advice," Reagan said. At 74, Reagan is 29 years Gorbachev's senior.

Pointing to his experience as a union negotiator, Reagan said he is not nervous about bargaining with Gorbachev.

Reagan said the meeting wouldn't be just a "get-acquainted" session, and could spur the arms talks, which resume in Geneva in January. He emphasized that he will protect the interests of America's allies in Geneva.

Prince Charles of Wales spurs his horse to polo action

Charles scores hit in Florida society

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Prince Charles, playing polo during a 21-hour visit to Florida, scored a goal Tuesday to help his team win, and the crowd of 12,000 people cheered for their favorite, Princess Diana.

Earlier, Gov. Bob Graham and children bearing roses and Christmas ornaments greeted the royal couple at the airport. Charles and Diana also planned to attend a $4 million benefit dinner in one of the capitals of U.S. high society.

Charles shrugged off an errant shot that hit him from behind in the second half goal for the Palm Beach polo team, which defeated an all-star squad 11-10.

Early in the match, he barely averted a spill when his horse bucked, but the British prince recovered and pulled his mount upright.

At halftime, many in the sellout crowd at the Palm Beach Polo and Country Club stadium in suburban Wellington chanted, "We want DI! We want DI!"

Early in the game, a single-engine plane flew overhead trailing a banner asking, "Charles and Diana please help to free Ireland." The plane was chartered by the Irish American Unity Conference, a group based in San Antonio, Texas, that supports unification of British-ruled Northern Ireland with the Irish Republic. After the 42-minute match ended, Diana awarded the team captain the 2-foot tall Princess Diana Trophy, topped with a figure of a player, aboard a rearing horse.

She gave her husband and the six other players from both teams smaller trophies.

Charles raised his trophy aloft as the spectators, cheered. His wife then stepped up next to him on the platform before they left for private gatherings in Palm Beach.

Over the weekend, the prince's representatives came here to select fast, well-behaved ponies for the prince to ride during the six-chukker match, played in 80-degree temperatures.

Charles was treated for heat exhaustion after a match at Wellington in 1980.

Charles and Diana were to be guests Tuesday night at a $10,000-a-plate dinner at the Breakers Hotel in the upper-crust enclave of Palm Beach. Publicists for industrialist Armand Hammer said the dinner would raise some $4 million for the United World College in Montezuma, N.Y.

Bob Hope and Victor Borge headed the entertainment for the dinner. Such celebrities as actor Cary Grant, actress Joan Collins, media and sports magnate Ted Turner, talk-show host Merv Griffin, U.S. Sens. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., and Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and several other members of Congress also were invited.

Pentagon says Soviets near missile violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top Pentagon official, complaining of alleged Soviet violations of arms control pacts, said Tuesday the Soviets are in position to exceed the limits imposed by the 1972 antiballistic missile treaty.

Richard Perle, assistant defense secretary for international security policy and normally one of the administration's most severe critics of arms control practices, said, however, he can visualize an arms control agreement worthy of support.

Testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Perle defined such an agreement as one "that results in significant reductions so that the prospects the Soviets might attack and degrade our ability to retaliate would be significantly reduced."

"Such a treaty would be very much in the interests of the United States and I would support it," Perle said.

Perle has prepared a Pentagon report to President Reagan on Soviet violations of existing arms control agreements coupled with suggestions of what proportional responses the United States might make.

He said there is "an increasing pattern of violations," ranging from minor to serious, including the construction of a Soviet radar that he said probably is a key link in the erection by the Soviets of a nationwide defense system.

"We find no other plausible explanation for it," said Perle, dismissing Soviet explanations that the radar will be used to track objects in space.

He said the development poses the possibility of an imminent Soviet "breakout" from the restrictions of the ABM treaty which was designed to prevent the deployment of nationwide missile-defense systems on the theory that a nuclear attack could best be deterred without them.

"This is not theoretical," Perle said. "It is here and now. It concerns us greatly." He said he believes that continued "violations" will destroy the arms control process he added that, "Our hope is that we can fix that problem."

Perle defended the administration's recent reinterpretation of the ABM treaty to claim the future right to move beyond research to development and field testing of a "Star Wars" strategic defense system.

Singer Lewis has surgery on stomach

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Jerry Lee Lewis had one-third of his stomach removed during ulcer surgery Tuesday, and an associate said the fiery rock 'n' roller will have to slow down for awhile.

"If I have to put a hook on him on stage and drag him off after a certain length of time, I'll do it," said J.W. Whitten, the 50-year-old singer's road manager.

Lewis, known for his energetic performances and hectic private life, was reported in satisfactory condition after the four-hour operation at Methodist Hospital.

Sarah McCarver, the singer's mother-in-law, said Monday that doctors had told the family that Lewis stood a 50-chance of surviving the operation.

"There was a misunderstanding," said Dr. Gerald Liberman, Lewis' physician.

He said Lewis lost "a significant amount" of blood prior to his admission to the hospital Friday but was not in imminent danger of dying.

Joblessness among young rises steadily

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment among America's young people, particularly blacks, has risen for almost three decades despite government efforts to put youths to work, a government study says.

More than ever before, unemployment is "concentrated among minority youth, inner-city, low-income, and high school dropout youths," said the report, which was made available to reporters Tuesday.

The study was conducted by the National Research Council, which performed the two-year, $684,000 survey for the Department of Labor. The council is a nonpartisan, private group established by Congress to advise the government.

The report said that while massive federal jobs programs such as the Job Corps do help disadvantaged youths, the long-term benefits of those programs is uncertain.

Between 1978 and 1981, the federal Youth, Employment and Demonstrations Projects Act spent $6 billion and provided jobs for 6 million young people, the study found.

But "not much was learned about how to reduce the long-term employment problems of American youth," the report concluded.

YEDPA programs were dismantled at the start of the Reagan administration, which has shifted the focus for youth jobs away from government to private industry.

Helms rips Reagan on Medvid case, suggests a secret deal

SEN. JESSE HELMS Claims summit influence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms on Tuesday castigated the Reagan administration's handling of the case of a would-be Soviet defector and questioned whether his return into Soviet hands was the result of a "secret agreement" between the two superpowers.

Helms, at a hearing by his Senate Agriculture Committee, said the administration had abandoned the 25-year-old Ukrainian sailor Miroslav Medvid and "thumbed its nose at the legislative branch" of government to avoid bad feelings just before next week's U.S.-Soviet summit.

The State Department clearly decided it's more important to appease the Soviet Union than to allow a young man an unfettered chance for freedom, said Helms, R-N.C.

The administration allowed the grain freighter Marshal Konlev to leave Saturday despite a subpoena issued by Helms's committee, commanding the sailor's presence at the hearing.

Helms said that as the events unfolded around the vessel near New Orleans, the Soviets acted as though the ship were protected enslave with status similar to that of an embassy, and that the State Department "acted in accord with that view."

"Why was the U.S. government so protective of the Soviets at this time?" he asked. "Is there a secret agreement that we will send defectors back?"

Asked by a reporter later to elaborate, Helms said he did not know whether there had been other cases of Soviet crewmen attempting to defect and being returned to their vessels. A Romanian crew member was granted asylum in Florida in a similar incident a few days after Medvid's apparent defection attempt.

Charles Redman, a State Department spokesman, declined to comment directly when asked about Helms' charge. "I have no response to specific allegations of such a nature," he said.

But Redman added that in dealing with seamen and others who want asylum in the United States, "we are guided by the law, but also by strong moral convictions." He said that in Medvid's case, the government did "everything in our power" to give the crewman "a chance to express his choice in a non-threatening environment."

The House, meanwhile, voted 404-31 for a non-binding resolution stating that Reagan should have protected Medvid's rights, including ensuring him an additional interview on U.S. soil in an atmosphere free of intimidation.

"The State Department made a very fateful, unforgivable mistake," said Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif. The error "sent a message around the globe... changing the image of the Statue of Liberty," he added.

Helms also produced a witness at the hearing to criticize the report of an Air Force psychiatrist who examined Medvid on Oct. 28 and 29 and found the crewman mentally competent to make a decision and not under the influence of mind-altering drugs. The report suggested that Medvid's original effort to escape was more likely a lark than a deliberate, planned act.

Dr. William E. O'Malley, a Waterford, Va., psychiatrist who said he now does consulting work, testified that he was "appalled" by the report's conclusions. He said evidence suggests that Medvid made a premeditated bid to defect and that his later recantation was made under the influence of powerful mind-altering drugs—and possibly torture.

The drugs, believed to be powerful tranquilizers similar to those used in the United States to control psychosis and schizophrenia, can remain in the body and in effect willpower and produce a mental state of indifference and serenity.

Walker receives maximum penalty for spy involvement

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Arthur J. Walker, a retired Navy officer convicted of supplying secrets to a Soviet spy ring run by his brother, was sentenced to life in prison Tuesday by a judge who refused to "treat this as a slap-on-the-wrist case."

ARTHUR J. WALKER Says he dishonored himself

Walker, a 57-year-old retired Navy lieutenant commander, told U.S. District Judge J. Calvert Clarke Jr. that he wished to "apologize to all the citizens of this country for what I did."

"I dishonored myself. I devastated my family. Nobody could be any sorer," he said.

Clarke then sentenced Walker, of Virginia Beach, to the maximum of three life terms and four 10-year terms on seven counts of espionage, with the sentences to run concurrently. Walker, who also was fined $250,000, will be eligible for parole in 10 years.

Walker's wife Rita, the only witness at the sentencing hearing, testified that he became suicidal while he was spying and had an affair with his brother's wife in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

His brother, John A. Walker Jr., 48, a retired Navy chief warrant officer, and John Walker's son, Navy seaman Michael L. Walker, 22, pleaded guilty to espionage Oct. 28. In exchange for his cooperation with far greater responsibility than either—John Walker—or Michael Walker," the judge said. "I can't treat this as a slap-on-the-wrist case. The evidence is all to the contrary."

Defense attorneys, who had tried unsuccessfully to get a plea bargain for Arthur Walker, said they were stunned by the sentence and would appeal to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond.

"The message that's gone out from this is... if you're going to do it, do it big and don't try to lie because you can make them deal with you," said Samuel W. Meekins, one of two defense attorneys.

Arthur Walker described his role to FBI agents shortly after his brother's arrest May 20, but Assistant U.S. Attorney Tommy E. Miller said the government believed he had concealed the extent of his involvement.

Clarke convicted Walker Aug. 9 on charges that he gave his brother copies of classified Navy documents from his defense contractor employer, VSE Corp. of Chesapeake, in 1981 and 1982.

FBI Special Agent Robert Hunter told reporters it is possible Walker was spying before he retired from the Navy in 1973 and that he lured his brother, John, into espionage.

House panel OKs student loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Education and Labor Committee approved a bill Tuesday that would double the amount undergraduates could borrow in their last two years of college and give new teachers a five-year grace period on repaying loans.

The rewrite of the Higher Education Act would also extend for five more years the whole network of federal grant, loan and work-study programs that provide about $9 billion annually in aid to half the nation's 12 million college students.

In a move to make parents share in the costs of their children's education, the bill would require all students under age 23 to report their parents' income when seeking financial aid, unless the students are married, orphans, military veterans or otherwise financially independent.

The bill would raise the maximum Pell Grant — outright federal scholarships based on need — from $2,100 to $2,300 for the 1987-88 academic year. There would be $200 increases annually through 1991-92, when the maximum would hit $3,100.

The measure would retain the current $2,500 limit on how much college students could borrow in their first two years, but allow juniors and seniors to borrow $5,000. Graduate students, now limited to $5,000 in Guaranteed Student Loans annually, could borrow up to $8,000.

Court listens to hard core film debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court heard arguments Tuesday over how far people will go to see sexually explicit movies and how far communities may force them to travel to adult movie theaters.

In a Washington state case closely watched by small towns and cities, justices were told it is unconstitutional to isolate adult movie theaters in an "industrial wasteland" without proof they will cause harm if located elsewhere.

Jack R. Burns, representing film theaters, challenged a zoning ordinance in the tiny Seattle suburb of Renton, Wash., which he said effectively has barred adult theaters from commercial areas and limited them to "essentially an industrial wasteland."

But E. Barrett Prettyman Jr., a lawyer here representing Renton, said adult movie fans will travel a lot farther than the outskirts of town to view their favorite film fare.

He said the town of Point Roberts, Wash., with a population of 250, attracts 1,300 patrons a week to its adult theater. Apparently most travel some 36 miles from Vancouver, Prettyman said.

The court is expected to announce by July whether communities may force movie houses that show X-rated films to locate in certain parts of town and nowhere else.

The Renton ordinance bans adult theaters within 1,000 feet of homes, churches, parks and schools.

Marine vehicle yanked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps has taken the new fleet of tank-like Light Armored Vehicles out of service temporarily because of a brake problem, a spokesman said Tuesday.

Lt. Col. John Shotwell said the action was taken Nov. 2 on the recommendation of the vehicles' manufacturer, General Motors of Canada.

The contractor has already begun repairing the roughly 300 LAVs in the corps' inventory, Shotwell said.

The spokesman said the problem is not technically difficult to fix and the LAV's slow in the inventory should be repaired "in days rather than months."

Recorders found, but collision clues scarce

TETERBORO, N.J. (AP) — Federal investigators Tuesday recovered the cockpit voice recorder of a corporate jet that collided with a light propeller plane, but they said it could be months before they pinpoint the cause of the accident that killed the pilot.

The investigation is "a jigsaw puzzle and we don't know how many pieces there are," said Ica J. Furman, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board.

He said investigators did not know whether the recorder was intact, which would allow it to be examined at NTSB's Washington, D.C., lab.

In addition, federal investigators were analyzing exchanges between the control tower at Teterboro Airfield and the two planes, gathering radar data to pinpoint their paths, restructuring parts of the wreckage and interviewing witnesses.

Meanwhile, Bergen County Medical Examiner John Apovian tentatively identified one of the six people killed when burning debris fell Sunday over a 20-block area in the New York suburbs of Cliffside Park and Eatontown.

Apovian said a driver's license bearing the name of Abdallah Abdelhalim was found next to a charred body. He had no other information about the victim.

Investigators previously had said the victim could be Abdallah Fahah, 34, who has been missing since the crash. Fahah was sleeping in a second-floor apartment when the flaming jet slammed into two Cliffside Park apartment buildings, igniting a fire that engulfed three other structures.

Cliffside Park police said they were investigating the discrepancy.

Rear admiral flak put to rest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last Friday, Commodore, which Congress imposed in 1982, because it denied its one-fiscal 1986 budget authorization for the Defense Department. Wasting no time, the Navy issued fleet-wide orders Friday night changing the rank of commodore to rear admiral lower half.

The budget act authorized the change at the Navy's request, bringing to a close several years of internal controversy. The service had never been happy with the title commodore, which Congress imposed in 1982, because it denied its one-fiscal 1986 budget authorization for the Defense Department. Wasting no time, the Navy issued fleet-wide orders Friday night changing the rank of commodore to rear admiral lower half.

A one-star officer with the Army, Air Force or Marines is a brigadier general and is addressed as general.

The designation "lower half" will be used only when necessary to differentiate a one-star admiral from a two-star rear admiral. No changes are being made to the uniform.

Archbishop, pope cooperate in U.S. hostage release effort

LONDON (AP) — A joint envoy of the archbishop of Canterbury and Pope John Paul II will fly to Beirut today to negotiate with Moslem extremists for the freedom of four American hostages, the Anglican Church announced Tuesday.

Terry Waite, a special adviser to Archbishop Robert Runcie and a veteran negotiator in hostage crises, decided to go after receiving an encouraging message from the Americans' captors, the church said in a statement.

The announcement came five days after the hostages — a journalist, two academics and a Roman Catholic priest — sent a letter to Runcie, the head of the 70 million-member worldwide Anglican Communion, urging him to intervene.

TERRY WAITE
Envoy for English archbishop

Runcie said the Vatican had earlier asked Waite to intervene. Independent Television reported Tuesday night that Waite also will seek the release of Alec Collett, a 63-year-old British journalist abducted March 25 while on assignment for the U.N. Relief and Works Agency.

"Our association with the Vatican has close on the matter so Terry Waite is actually operating on the basis of our loaning him to the press," Runcie told The Associated Press in an interview.

"He is a joint envoy, and the pope is corresponding with us," he said.

A fundamentalist Shiite-Moslem group, Islamic Jihad, has claimed responsibility for seizing the Americans, who have been held for periods ranging from five to 10 months.

Islamic Jihad has said the hostages' freedom depends on the release of 17 comrades convicted in Kuwait of bombing the U.S. and French embassies in December 1983. Kuwait has refused to release the 17.

The United States has said it will not negotiate with terrorists but is willing to talk to them in efforts to secure the hostages' freedom.

In Washington, White House spokesman Edward Djerejian, asked about the U.S. attitude toward the archbishop's action, said, "We have never discouraged any responsible parties from making good-faith efforts to obtain the release of our hostages."

Last Saturday, after receiving a letter from the hostages, Runcie made a public appeal for the captors to meet with his envoy. Waite then had several telephone calls from an unidentified mediator in Lebanon, with whom he had been in intermittent contact during the summer. This culminated in the message from the captors.

The hostages' appeal to Runcie was contained in a bundle of 12 letters delivered Friday to the Associated Press bureau in Beirut. The letters included one to President Reagan, urging him to open negotiations for their release.

Signing the letters to Runcie and Reagan were Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for the AP; the Rev. Lawrence Jenco; David Jacobson, director of the American University Hospital in Beirut; and Thomas Sutherland, the minister of education.

Colleagues and relatives say the signatures were authentic.

There was no word on two other Americans missing in Beirut, diplomat William Buckley and the American University's librarian, Peter Kilburn. Islamic Jihad claimed Oct. 1 it had killed Buckley in retaliation for an Israeli air raid on Palestine Liberation Organization headquarters in Tunisia.

Waite, a 46-year-old layman who is Runcie's secretary for Anglican Communion Affairs, negotiated the release in 1981 of four Britons held in Iran.

Last February he secured the freedom of four other Britons who had been held for 10 months in Libya. In reprisal for a British police siege of the Libyans' London embassy,

Third AIDS patient dies despite drug

GRENOBLE, France (AP) — A third AIDS patient undergoing experimental treatment in France with the drug zalcitabine has died, the patient's doctor announced Tuesday.

Dr. Max Meouad identified the patient as a 27-year-old man who had been treated with the drug for six days before his death on Saturday.

On Monday, doctors in Paris revealed that a 38-year-old male AIDS patient treated with the drug also had died Saturday.

In subsequent interviews, one of the doctors, Philippe Even, said another patient had died after two days of treatment with zalcitabine in very early clinical tests last month, before the treatment was made public at a news conference.

But Even said results from the treatment of nine other patients were promising and the program was being expanded to five other French hospitals. He said the number of patients would be increased to about 20.

U.S. F-5 jets said going to Honduras

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Defense Secretary Humberto Ortega claimed Tuesday that the United States has agreed to give Honduras F-5 jet fighter planes as part of a U.S. campaign against the Nicaraguan government.

Speaking at a news conference, Ortega also said that a U.S. "spy ship" just off Nicaragua's Pacific coast consistently jams official radio signals and monitors communications of military units fighting U.S.-backed rebels. He identified the ship as the "ARC-24 Sphinx."

"We have information also that in the near future the U.S. will give its mercenary forces the infamous speed boats," Ortega said, referring to small boats known as "piranhas" that were used to mine the harbor at Corinto on the Pacific coast two years ago.

The Nicaraguan minister claimed that the U.S. steps are the result of the "strategic defeat" inflicted by the Sandinista army on rebel groups operating along the Honduran and Costa Rican borders.

When asked about the Nicaraguan official's comments, State Department spokesman Joe Reap in Washington said: "I have nothing on that."

Judges to file impeachment petition

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Superior Court judges in Ibague said Tuesday they will file an impeachment petition against President Belisario Betancur for his handling of the raid by left-wing guerrillas on the Palace of Justice.

A Justice Ministry statement said 95 people, including 11 Supreme Court justices and 33 other judges, were killed in the fighting between security forces and rebels who seized the federal court building in downtown Bogota on Nov. 6. Army troops recaptured the Palace of Justice in a furious assault after a 29-hour siege.

Many of the victims perished when a fire swept through the five-story building last Wednesday night.

Runcie hopes for 'religious summit'

LONDON (AP) — The Most Rev. Robert Runcie, the archbishop of Canterbury and leader of nearly 70 million Anglicans around the world, said Tuesday he was trying to arrange a "religious summit" for peace.

"I've always hoped that I might be able to draw together religious leaders in a religious summit for peace, comparable to a political summit," he told The Associated Press in an interview at Lambeth Palace, his official London residence.

"We are working away at that. We are trying to sort up opinion about it, and we are trying to think about a place to meet. But it's quite a slow business. I hope we can make some progress there."

Runcie, 64, speaking seven days before the U.S.-Soviet summit in Geneva, did not go into detail about the nature of such a gathering or what faiths might be represented.

"I hope that the Christian and religious voice can be heard more in the councils of peace," he said.

Runcie also expects to meet the pope in India in February.

Runcie has vigorously continued efforts by Church of England leaders over the past 25 years to heal the breach with Roman Catholics which dates back to 1534 when the Vatican refuted King Henry VIII a divorce from Queen Catherine of Aragon.

Pope John Paul II accepted Runcie's invitation to be the first pontiff to visit England and the two primates attended a service together in 1982 in Canterbury Cathedral.

Suicide driver rams monastery, kills 4 in assassination try

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A suicide bomber crashed a pickup truck loaded with explosives into a monastery where six senior Christian politicians were meeting Tuesday.

The bomber, two army guards and a woman were killed and 26 other people were injured, police said. They said a 2-foot-thick stone wall shielded the politicians from the main force of the blast, which gouged out a 20-foot-wide crater.

Three bombs exploded overnight in various parts of Moslem west Beirut, killing four civilians and wounding eight, police reported earlier in the day.

The meeting in the Christian suburb of Aukar in east Beirut was to discuss opposition to a draft Syrian-sponsored armistice agreement, reached last month by Lebanon's three strongest militias in an effort to end the 10-year-old civil war.

The six politicians gathered at the monastery belong to the Lebanese Front, a Christian-political coalition which was excluded from the negotiations.

Government lined up

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Jaruzelski stepped out of the Poland's new premier named his government Tuesday and, as expected, Foreign Minister Stefan Olszowski was dropped. He was removed from the policy-making Politburo the day before.

Zolniew Messner, who became premier when Communist Party chief Wojciech Jaruzelski gave up the job last week, named three new deputy premiers and nine new ministers in a major rearrangement of the government. Messner kept three army generals from the Cabinet of Gen. Jaruzelski.

President-elect Samuel K. Doe said in a radio broadcast Tuesday that an attempt to overthrow his government in Liberia had failed and he urged the rebels led by a fugitive general to "lay down their arms immediately."

Doe's statement was broadcast on Riva Radio, a Christian station that had been held by the insurgents earlier in the day. The broadcast, monitored in the nearby West African nation of Ivory Coast, indicated Doe's forces had gained the upper hand after a day of fighting with radio stations changing hands between rebels and loyalists.

In the broadcast, Doe called on the armed forces "to stand firm and to continue to remain loyal to the government." He said his troops were searching for "the remaining scattered rebels."

"I take this opportunity to inform the nation that the coup has failed. I'm still the commander in chief of the armed forces of Liberia and the head of state," Doe said in the broadcast.

He said he had ordered a dusk-to-dawn curfew and closed Liberia's borders and its international airport to aid in the search for rebels led by Gen. Thomas Quiwonkpa.

"Mr. Quiwonkpa and his chief lieutenants are being sought to be put under immediate detention," Doe said.

The broadcast was heard at 7 p.m. (noon MST), about 17 hours after fighting started with an attack on Doe's executive mansion.

Witnesses said at least a dozen bodies were seen being taken to a hospital.

Doe said in a telephone interview with NBC's London bureau earlier in the day that his soldiers had killed "about 15 rebels" who attacked the executive mansion before dawn.

"He made no mention of casualties in the broadcast heard in Ivory Coast," Richard Gilbert, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in Monrovia, the Liberian capital, said the center of the city was calm at mid-afternoon and that Doe loyalists had recaptured the government radio station.

Hi and Lois

START OF KREMLIN

Around the Kremlin's 61 acres in Moscow are brick battlements. Men started laying those bricks about when Christopher Columbus started planning his first trip to wherever.

Q: Wasn't Jacqueline Kennedy (maestro) — the youngest First Lady ever?
A: Almost but not quite. Julia Taylor was 24, Frances Cleveland 21.

Will bet you a small unspecified sum you can't come up with the name of the largest and richest city in the Western Hemisphere five centuries ago. Never mind, it was a Bolivian mountain town called Cerro Rico meaning "hill of riches,"

Miners took the equivalent of $2 billion out of one silver mountainside there.

Q: How come he's just sitting there?
A: It's the custom of those desert nomads of Northern Africa, the Tuaregs, to put on a clean robe every now and then, but not in place of the old one. The new robe goes over the old one. The old one is dirty so the new one gets that way almost immediately.

Our Language man keeps up with change. The standard Biblical punishment, for adultery, he notes, was to be stoned in the marketplace or wherever, and about half the national population now thinks that Rico means "hill of riches," sounds like fun.

Kansas says he won't miss visit with Carson

LYONS, Kan. (AP) — A one-time "regular" on "The Tonight Show" turned 64 Tuesday, saying he has had his turn in the spotlight and doesn't regret that it's over.

Farmer Wally Lattimer, who marked his 97th, 99th and 100th birthdays on the show, says he doesn't miss sharing his homegrown corn-hoop-and-homespun-philosophy with host Johnny Carson.

"It was an honor to start with" Lattimer said. "But I just had enough of running out there (to NBC studios) in Burbank, Calif. He's a nice guy, but I can see why he's been divorced so often. I wouldn't want to live with Johnny Carson."

Lattimer said he enjoyed the fame his appearances on "The Tonight Show" and "Hee Haw" brought him.

"I love to meet people," he said. "And I travel a lot. Everywhere I'd go, people knew me. I never got tired of that."

Lattimer, who's already outlived three of his nine children, was born in 1881 and came to Kansas from Illinois when he was 5.

New chess champion Ernest Hemingway fan

CHICAGO (AP) — Chess isn't Garri Kasparov's only passion, says Eric Schiller, a Chicago-based chess writer and friend of the new world chess champion.

Kasparov, a student of English, also is an avid fan of American authors, particularly Ernest Hemingway, Schiller said Sunday.

"He's something of a sex symbol in the Soviet Union," said Schiller, who met Kasparov in 1980 at a tournament in Manila and has written three chess books with him. The new king will be good for the game, because he contradicts the image of chess players as dull, eggheads, Schiller said. Karpov has the image of "a wimp," he said. "His other greatest passion is collecting stamps."

Hospital birthday party low-key but a high note

A sign on her Touro Infirmary room door read "The party's here," and inside balloons filled the room for Monday's celebration for daughter Nikki Forster.

The party was low-key, since Miss Lee, 65, is still recovering from heart bypass surgery she underwent at the hospital more than a month ago. Forster did not say how many candles were on her cake.

Among well-wishers who telephoned the hospital Monday were Frank Sinatra, Phyllis Diller and Quincy Jones.

'Cagney and Lacey' episode, movie on AIDS produce reaction

Switchboards busy in wake of Monday TV shows

By The Associated Press

Nearly 2,000 calls kept switchboards busy at hotlines and television stations around the nation as viewers voiced strong feelings over a "Cagney and Lacey" episode on abortion violence and a TV movie about a family's struggle with AIDS.

Nielsen overnight ratings on the controversial shows Monday night revealed that the NBC film "An Early Frost" attracted a larger audience than television movies usually do, and far more viewers than the competing episode "The Clinician" on the CBS detective drama.

Some complaining callers said the broadcasts promoted abortion and homosexuality, while others praised the networks for exercising their right to free expression. Hundreds of calls came from people simply seeking information on acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The "Cagney and Lacey" show gave "a very false picture of individuals within the right-to-life movement," said Loretta Klerfan, an Indiana Right to Life spokeswoman in Indianapolis.

About 200 anti-abortion demonstrators expressed similar views during a march outside CBS studios in Hollywood.

KFTV in Colorado Springs, Colo., KMGH in Denver, and WKZO in Kalamazoo, Mich., and WNEV in Boston also broadcast "The Clinician" despite protests.

KMGH aired a notice to alert viewers to the sensitive nature of the program and followed the show with interviews with abortion opponents, said Mary Carole McDonnell, director of programming and operations.

KFTV rejected a Colorado Right to Life Committee request that it run an anti-abortion documentary said assistant general manager Hal Kennedy.

Colorado Right to Life's directors had instructed 17 chapters to boycott CBS in November if no "fairness time" was allowed.

A small group held a quiet protest vigil outside WNEV in Boston during the broadcast, and an unidentified station employee said it received more than 30 calls.

"A lot of callers say they agree with freedom of the press," the employee told the Boston Herald.

Hundreds telephoned TV stations and special hotlines after an NBC broadcast of "An Early Frost," and a half-hour news report on AIDS.

"The phones have been ringing since we started," said Ethyl Porter, community relations director for KPCC-TV in Houston. Of the more than 1,000 people who called during the three-hour hotline, "most of our callers want to know the basics about the disease," Ms. Porter said.

Nearly 100 calls were logged at NBC headquarters in New York, all but 10 favorable, said spokesman Matt Messina.

Those who were against the film said basically the same thing: the film promoted homosexuality," he said.

Barry Cherin, an NBC publicist, said only 18 calls were received at the network-switchboard in Burbank, Calif. All but four of the calls were positive.

In the movie, the AIDS victim, played by Aidan Quinn, is initially rejected by his father, played by Ben Gazzara. The mother, played by Gena Rowlands, acts as an intermediary as the family comes to grips with the twin revelations of the son's homosexuality and his disease.

Nine counselors fielded more than 400 calls Monday night to a hotline temporarily set up by the Arizona Department of Health Services.

"Mostly they're concerned with the transmission of the disease," said Michele Hillmer, spokesman for the Health Crisis Network in Miami, of the callers following the two-hour movie.

An AIDS hotline operated by Howard Brown Memorial Clinic in Chicago logged 40 calls during the broadcast, compared with 12 to 14 between 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. on a typical night, said its director, Michael Scully.

Based-on-the-12-city-Nielsen-overnight ratings, "An Early Frost" had a strong showing for a TV movie, with a 23.4 rating, 33 share. A rating measures the percentage of homes with-TV; a share measures the percentage of homes with their sets on.

In the 12 cities, "An Early Frost" beat the first two hours of "Monday Night Football," which had an 18.8 rating and 26 share, and CBS' regular lineup that included the "Cagney & Lacey" episode. "The Clinician" had a 7.5 rating, 22 share.

Amory, pals stage protest at restaurants

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Animal-rights activists led by author Cleveland Amory invaded several exclusive restaurants to protest veal production and consumption.

The protesters wanted to tell chefs and diners that veal production is harmful to calves and those who eat the meat, but Amory and about 55 members of the Veal Ban Coalition received a lukewarm reception Monday at La Scala, the Rongon Racquel Club, La Famiglia and Bistrot Garden.

"I was pushed out the door of La Scala," said Lucy Shelton, Los Angeles area coordinator for People for Ethical Treatment of Animals.

The activists are trying to eliminate the production of milked veal, which they say involves locking day-old calves in dark boxes and feeding them a chemical-laced liquid diet that makes them anemic.

"They cannot turn around," Ms. Shelton said. "They have no bedding, no contact with other animals."

The calves are fattened on a liquid diet of milk products that is laced with antibiotics, she said. The antibiotics can build up a tolerance in people who eat the veal, making them more vulnerable to disease, she said.

Calls to the restaurants Monday brought a string of "no comments"

Witness ties site, hit men

SEATTLE (AP) — Robert Mathews, founder of the white supremacist group The Order, said he had a meeting in Denver on the day radio host Alan Berg was gunned down, a witness testified Tuesday in the racketeering trial of 10 alleged Order members.

Dennis Schlueter, 44, of Fort Collins, Colo., said Mathews and defendant David Lane visited him on June 18, 1984, at the shopping mall where Schlueter worked as a security officer.

Schlueter's testimony is the first directly linking Mathews and Lane to the Denver area on the day Berg was killed. The two men allegedly were part of a four-man hit team that killed Berg in the driveway of his Denver home on the night of June 18.

The testimony came as the federal racketeering trial entered its 10th week. The all-white U.S. District Court jury of nine women and seven men has heard some 225 witnesses to date, including nine former Order members or associates.

The defendants and 10 others indicted on racketeering charges are accused of committing two murders, counterfeiting money worth more than $4 million from robberies as they waged an Aryan crusade against Jews, racial minorities and the federal government.

Defendant Bruce Pierce allegedly pulled the trigger on Berg, who was Jewish, while Mathews and fugitive Richard Scutari stood guard. Lane is accused of driving the getaway car.

Pierce has been linked to Denver at the time of the killing through a fingerprint and motel records, while Scutari was shown to have called a friend in Florida from a Denver motel around the time Berg was killed.

Schlueter said he met Mathews, Lane and others allegedly associated with The Order through the Church of Christ in La Porte, Colo. He said he became acquainted with Lane and others through visits they made to his home for potluck dinners and other gatherings.

The reason Lane gave for visiting Schlueter at the shopping mall was to see whether a money order that Lane allegedly sent had arrived to help Schlueter stave off foreclosure on his home.

Schlueter said Mathews indicated they had arrived from the north.

Mathews indicated they had a meeting in Denver later that afternoon or that evening and they should get going. Schlueter said of their meeting about 11:30 a.m.

Berg was killed about 9:30 p.m. that day.

Schlueter said he was also visited at the mall in early June by defendant Jean Craig, who is accused by the government of studying Berg's movements before the killing to provide intelligence to Order members. Schlueter said Ms. Craig told him she "had some business in the area," but did not elaborate.

The Order fell apart last December when federal agents staged a series of raids on Whidbey Island, north of Seattle.

Soil tests set at blast site

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — A state environmental official says soil will be tested for contamination at battery manufacturing plant where a tanker containing lead oxide exploded.

There were no injuries in the explosion Monday morning at Gould National Battery, plant manager Earl Peterson said.

Department of Environmental Quality investigator Dale Wulfenstein said the spill posed no great health or environmental hazard. He said the owner of the tanker was paying to clean up the spill.

Peterson said the powdered lead oxide, a key ingredient in battery manufacturing, was being pumped into a storage silo about 11 a.m. Monday when the explosion ripped open the side of the tanker.

The powdery lead oxide was to be cleaned up and taken to a chemical waste dump for disposal, Peterson said.

$1 million damage in bookstore fire

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Flames raced through a University of California bookstore early Tuesday, causing $1 million damage to the building and contents, fire officials said.

The fire gutted the south end of the bookstore, which is located in the Martin Luther King Jr. Student Union at the UC campus here. Smoke and water damaged other portions of the building.

There were no injuries. The cause of the 3 a.m. blaze was under investigation.

Eleven engines and 32 firefighters needed about 1½ hours to extinguish the fire.

Investors withdraw request for youth center

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A planned hearing before the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission was cancelled Tuesday when applicants withdrew the request for a special use permit needed to locate a juvenile detention center on agricultural land northeast of Jerome.

County Zoning Administrator Al Hepworth said he cancelled the public hearing Tuesday afternoon after the investor group that planned to build the center withdrew their request. He said he understood the group would consider another location.

John Rasco, spokesman for the investors

group, said Tuesday night that the group has two other sites under consideration and withdrew the application for the Jerke site because of the attitudes of neighboring property owners.

"We have been looking at three possible locations, including the Jerke property, which does require a special use permit because it is zoned agriculture," Rasco said.

"We have decided not to put these kids at the attitudes of the hateful and unreasonable neighborhood of the people in that area," Rasco said.

Rasco said the decision in no way means that his group is dropping plans for a juvenile detention center in the Jerome area. Although he said he cannot disclose other possible sites now, his group at least wants an acreage. Plans call for housing both boys and girls from seven Magic Valley counties that have indicated they would utilize such a facility.

"All would be placed either by the courts or law enforcement," he said. "We will not be taking private assignments or those in the custody of health and welfare."

Rasco said state requirements for a detention center are different from those for shelter or foster homes. It may be that a special use permit would not be necessary if a commercially zoned property is selected.

The building on the Jerke property has been the family home and was the former city library building, which was moved to the Jerke farm and demolished.

Residents living in the nearby area met Monday night to prepare testimony they were to have presented, had Tuesday's hearing not been cancelled. They planned to explain why they do not want a juvenile detention center in their farm neighborhood.

JoAnne Johnson, one of the adjacent property owners, said a petition with 200 names has been obtained.

"Some of these are property owners in the neighborhood, but some are just Jerome area residents who don't feel such a facility would be desirable in our community," she said.

There are five widows living within 1 1/2 miles of the Jerke property, Johnson said. Residents were not confident of security measures in the old frame building and, she said, land owners near the proposed site felt their property values would decline.

Many counties cannot meet requirements for juvenile detention in their title. Since state law prohibits juvenile status offenders from being jailed, such counties would be faced with building new detention quarters. Youths could be placed in the Jerome center at a fee to the originating county of $50 per 24-hour period, or $25 for less than 24 hours.

Rasco said the center program would be one of assistance to the youths in getting a new start in life.

"He said his organization held an informational meeting for property owners when the Jerke site was first considered, but only three persons came. He said the three did not appear interested in what the center would do or how it would operate, but rather in what situations they expected might develop around the center and the juveniles who would be housed there."

Jail closure hearing delayed

TWIN FALLS — A hearing scheduled Tuesday on a request by two inmates to close the Twin Falls County Jail was postponed.

The county's new attorney, Lloyd Webb of Twin Falls, wanted more time to prepare for the "show cause" hearing requested by attorney Greg Fuller on behalf of inmates Michael Goodson and Ted Malney. The hearing is related to a lawsuit filed Oct. 22 by Fuller against Twin Falls County in which the inmates claim the 70-year-old jail is inadequate, unconstitutional and overcrowded.

According to court officials, no new date for the hearing has been scheduled.

Webb was hired last week by the County Board of Commissioners to replace County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter in the case.

At the show cause hearing the county will be asked to present evidence on why 5th District Judge Daniel Harbutt should not impose a temporary order on the county to close the jail, reduce the jail population and begin taking actions to build a new jail. In their main complaint, the jail inmates are requesting the court to permanently close the jail and order the building of a new one.

Valley's alive with sound of music

By MICHAEL VANAUDELIN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Over 500 high school students from the Magic Valley are attending the District Four Regional Music Clinic at the College of Southern Idaho.

The clinic, which began Tuesday, will continue today and conclude with a concert tonight at 7 p.m. in the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium.

The students are from schools in all areas of the Magic Valley, including Hat River, Glenns Ferry and Shoshone.

Jim Keizer, music teacher from Oakley, described the clinic as the best learning experience music students could get.

"This gives them the opportunity that they usually don't get," he said. "They get to do things that they normally wouldn't be able to do."

The students attending were selected by their respective music teachers, picking only the top 25 percent to perform at the clinic.

The clinic is divided into four groups: honor band, under the direction of Melvin Shelton of Boise State University; honor orchestra, under the direction of Larry Curtis of CSI; honor girls choir, under Winifred Alldaffer, a retired music teacher from Soda Springs; and a mixed choir, under the direction of Jerry Veving of Boise.

Keizer said the clinic receives a large amount of support from the schools.

"They very much support it," he said. "The teachers from all the schools feel that the clinic is an excellent opportunity for their students."

The advanced music students get a crack at material that is a cut above the music they usually play in school.

"Also, they are playing with students of higher caliber than normal," said Keizer. "Playing with better students and with better material gives them a chance to really cut loose."

Tickets for the concert are $2 for adults, $1 for students, and $5 for a family. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Toxics meeting in Boise

BOISE — The Citizen's Alliance for Progressive Action is sponsoring a two-day conference on toxic substances in Idaho Friday and Saturday at Boise State University, at which national and state experts will discuss topics relevant to Idaho ranging from the transportation of toxics to health effects.

Topics for Friday's session include an overview of Idaho's toxic-waste problem, the transportation of toxics, the effects of Superfund in Idaho and a panel discussion of the Envisirose hazardous waste dump near Grandview.

Saturday's session will include an overview of the health effects of toxics and panel discussion of the health effects of toxics in Idaho workplaces and communities, and another panel discussion of toxics right-to-know legislation.

Speakers at the conference include Peg Seminario, director of the AFL-CIO's occupational health and safety program; Dr. Fred Miller of the Environmental Policy Institute in Washington, D.C., an authority on the transportation of hazardous waste; Jim Jones, Idaho attorney general; and Dr. Charles Caldwell, a professor of "public health" at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, an expert in ethics and laws regarding toxics.

The conference is also sponsored by the Professional Firefighters of Idaho, the Idaho League of Women Voters, the Idaho Conservation League, and the OSIA Environmental Network.

The registration fee for the conference is $30 for CFAA members and $30 for non-members. There is a $10 late registration fee for those who register after Nov. 9. There is also an additional $10 charge for a speakers' reception to be held the night of the 13th.

The conference will be held at the BSU Student Union. Friday's session begins at 9 a.m. Saturday's meeting begins at 9:30 a.m. For more information call 344-7118 or 345-1872.

Neilsen's 'serious'

TWIN FALLS — A 44-year-old Twin Falls business executive who was injured Sunday night on an icy stretch of I-84. Highway 84 near the Nevada state line remained "serious but stable" in a 581 Lake City Hospital Tuesday night.

Craig Neilsen, who suffered a fractured neck vertebra about 11:15 p.m. Sunday, was in the cerebral vascular unit at the University of Utah Medical Center.

His northbound sports car went out of control after missing a large truck-trailer unit in heavy rush five miles south of Jackpot, Nev. It went into a spin, faced back south and was struck in the rear by a car carrying three employees of Club 93 in Jackpot, who were returning from Twin Falls.

The three, Dale Reiman, 25, driver of the car; Janice Eassey, 51, owner of the car and another passenger; Elaine Keiver, 25, all escaped serious injury.

Neilsen is president of Cactus Pete's Inc., owners of both Cactus Pete's and Horseshoe Casino and Hotel, and, among other interests, heads Neilsen & Co. of Twin Falls.

MVRMC sets board meeting on refinancing of bond debt

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Board, the Twin Falls, County Commissioners and the Idaho Health Facilities Authority are scheduled to meet separately Nov. 21 to approve refinancing of the hospital's $26 million bond debt, a move that could open new doors for the county-owned hospital and keep rates down for patients.

Under the current bonds MVRMC could not transfer money or move equipment to new clinics, such as the proposed Jackpot clinic, without getting approval from individual bondholders.

New contract language also gives the hospital greater flexibility in financing future capital projects; that could save the hospital money.

The two major changes could generate savings for the hospital, which had the hospital hold down charges to patients, Bingham said.

At the Hospital Board meeting Monday, board members were given the new bond proposals to study.

The board is expected to approve the new bonds at a special meeting Nov. 21 at 8 a.m. The County Commissioners will meet at 9 a.m. to approve the Hospital Board's action; and at noon in Boise, the Idaho Health Facilities Authority must act.

The rapid-fire succession of meetings is designed to allow Merrill Lynch, which is handling sale of the bonds, to enter the bond market as quickly as possible and take advantage of favorable market rates, Bingham said.

Fluctuating interest rates currently are in the hospital's favor. Board members learned in October that if MVRMC refinanced the bond, it probably would not save money.

Bingham said interest rates have dropped. If the rates stay at or below 9.75 percent, the hospital would stand to save $276,000 over the 30-year life of the 1981 bonds, he said.

In other action Monday, the board approved a contingency contract to buy a new CT scanner at $550,000 from General Electric. The contract secures the purchase price for one year for the hospital, but it does not require the hospital to buy the new CT scanner, Chairman Robert Valentine said.

However, the board also voted to close out the 1981 bond construction account and use the $310,000 as a downpayment on the CT scanner.

The board also approved a $22,000 study of the hospital's laboratory and radiology departments. Bingham said the study was necessary to "ensure an efficiently running lab."

Hailey attempts to force Idaho Power reconnection

By BARBARA NEIWERT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The city of Hailey is seeking an injunction against Idaho Power Company to try to force the company to reconnect the city's cogeneration plant at Indian Creek.

Idaho Power disconnected the cogenerator on Nov. 5 after telling city officials the city's liability limits of $500,000 are "unacceptable," attorney Keith Roark told council members Monday.

The contract for the Indian Creek turbine, which has been producing power for Idaho Power since July 25, requires the city of Hailey to carry a $1 million limit of liability.

However, now that insurance carriers are tightening their markets or charging prohibitively high premiums to cities and other governmental entities, it is "impossible" to attain the limits Idaho Power requires, Roark said.

He also claimed Idaho Power had violated the terms of the contract on two provisions.

Mayor Wordell Rainey said the cogenerator brings the city a monthly income of $2,000, even with the reduced flow the spring experienced this year. Councilman Bill House agreed the only choice was to try to obtain a court order to reconnect the system and receive payments for the power generated.

In other business: The council will recommend to the Airport Commission that it adopt a resolution making the airport's operating hours between 6 a.m. and 11 p.m. only.

Councilwoman Dorothy Moore said there has been a voluntary effort during the past year to keep noise down and keep aircraft traffic away from the major population areas in the valley. However, she said she wants "to see something done in writing."

A joint meeting of the Hailey City Council and the Planning and Zoning Commission that had been set for Nov. 12 was rescheduled for Dec. 3 at 7:30 p.m. The boards will hold a hearing to take public comments on use of the Union Pacific Railroad right-of-way, which extends through Hailey residential areas.

The city of Ketchum sent a letter to Dean Tisdale, director of the Idaho Transportation Department, advising any use of the railroad right-of-way for highway improvement be limited to that portion of right-of-way adjacent to existing Highway 75, Rainey said.

Opinions expressed by residents at the Dec. 3 meeting will be compiled and sent to Tisdale for the Transportation Board's consideration, the mayor said.

The council formally adopted names for three new parks in Hailey. The park on the west side of the Big Wood River has been named "The Lions Park" because of all the hard work of Lions Club members and their donations for the park, Moore said.

The new park on the east side of the river in the Della View Subdivision will be called "The Lawrence Heagle Park" in honor of the former mayor and councilman who also was active in the Hailey Rotary Club, Heagle spends the winters in Arizona will be notified by the city of the honor.

The third park, located in the Curtis Subdivision, will be called "Curtis Park" after developers Chuck and Lorraine Curtis.

Rainey said he contacted developer David Manogian regarding progress in a proposed light industrial park in Hailey. However, he said he has "no information at this time" about the number of leases Manogian has obtained.

The council unanimously moved to waive the building and inspection fees for an addition to the porch at the Senior Citizen Center.

A $330 grant awarded to the city to be used as "a benefit to all" by Mountain Bell will be given to the Hailey City Library.

West Witness ties site, hit men

SEATTLE (AP) — Robert Mathews, founder of the white supremacist group The Order, said he had a meeting in Denver on the day radio host Alan Berg was gunned down, a witness testified Tuesday in the racketeering trial of 10 alleged Order members.

Dennis Schlueter, 41, of Fort Collins, Colo., said Mathews and defendant David Lane visited him on June 18, 1984, at the shopping mall where Schlueter worked as a security officer.

Schlueter's testimony is the first directly linking Mathews and Lane to the Denver area on the day Berg was killed. The two men allegedly were part of a four-man hit team that killed Berg in the driveway of his Denver home on the night of June 18.

The testimony came as the federal racketeering trial entered its 10th week. The all-white U.S. District Court jury of nine women and six men has heard some 225 witnesses to date, including nine former Order members or associates.

The defendants and 13 others indicted on racketeering charges are accused of committing two murders, counterfeiting money and netting more than $1 million from robberies as they waged an Aryan crusade against Jews, racial minorities and the federal government.

Defendant Bruce Pierce allegedly pulled the trigger on Berg, who was Jewish, while Mathews and fugitive Richard Scutari stood guard. Lane is accused of driving the getaway car.

Pierce has been linked to Denver at the time of the killing through a fingerprint and motel records, while Scutari was shown to have called a friend in Florida from a Denver motel around the time Berg was killed.

Schlueter said he met Mathews, Lane and others allegedly associated with the Order through the Church of Christ in La Porte, Colo. He said he became acquainted with Lane and others through visits they made to his home for potluck dinners and other gatherings.

The reason Lane gave for visiting Schlueter at the shopping mall was to see whether a money order that Lane allegedly sent had arrived to help Schlueter stave off foreclosure on his home.

Schlueter said Mathews indicated they had arrived from the north.

"Mathews indicated they had a meeting in Denver later that afternoon or that evening and they should get going," Schlueter said of their meeting about 11:30 a.m.

Berg was killed about 9:30 p.m. that day.

Schlueter said he was also visited at the mall in early June by defendant Jean Craig, who is accused by the government of studying Berg's movements before the killing to provide intelligence to Order members. Schlueter said Ms. Craig told him she "had some business in the area," but did not elaborate.

The Order fell apart last December when federal agents staged a series of raids on Whidbey Island, north of Seattle.

Soil tests set at blast site

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — A state environmental official says soil will be tested for contamination at battery manufacturing plant where a tanker containing lead oxide exploded.

There were no injuries in the explosion Monday morning at Gould National Battery plant manager Earl Peterson said.

Department of Environmental Quality investigator Dale Wulfenstein said the spill posed no great health or environmental hazard. He said the owner of the tanker was paying to clean up the spill.

Peterson said the powdered lead oxide, a key ingredient in battery manufacturing, was being pumped into a storage silo about 11 a.m. Monday when the explosion ripped open the side of the tanker.

The powdery lead oxide was to be cleaned up and taken to a chemical waste dump for disposal, Peterson said.

$1 million damage in bookstore fire

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Flames raced through a University of California bookstore early Tuesday, causing $1 million damage to the building and contents, fire officials said.

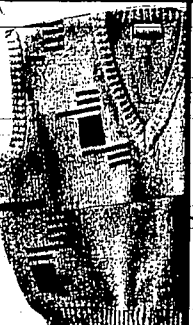

The fire gutted the south end of the bookstore, which is located in the Martin Luther King Jr. Student Union at the UC campus here. Smoke and water damaged other portions of the building.

There were no injuries. The cause of the 3-a.m. blaze was under investigation.

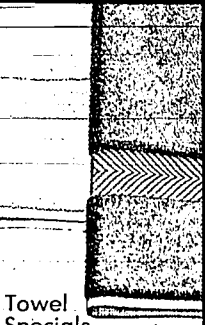

Eleven engines and 32 firefighters needed about 1½ hours to extinguish the fire.

Investors withdraw request for youth center

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A planned hearing before the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission was cancelled Tuesday when applicants withdrew the request for a special use permit needed to locate a juvenile detention center on agriculture land northeast of Jerome.

County Zoning Administrator Al Hepworth said he cancelled the public hearing Tuesday afternoon after the investor group that planned to build the center withdrew their request. He said he understood the group would consider another location.

The permit was requested for a 140-acre farm owned by Norman Jerke.

John Rasco, spokesman for the investors

group, said Tuesday night that the group has two other sites under consideration and withdrew the application for the Jerke site because of the attitudes of neighboring property owners.

"We have been looking at three possible locations, including the Jerke property, which does require a special use permit because it is zoned agriculture," Rasco said. "We have decided not to put these kids at risk because of the hateful and unreasonable attitudes of the people in that neighborhood."

Rasco said the decision in no way means that his group is dropping plans for a juvenile detention center in the Jerome area. Although he said he cannot disclose other possible sites now, his group at least wants an acreage. Plans call for housing both boys and girls from seven Magic Valley counties that have indicated they would utilize such a facility.

"All would be placed either by the courts or law enforcement," he said. "We will not be taking private assignments or those in the custody of health and welfare."

Rasco said state requirements for a detention center are different from those for shelter or foster homes. It may be that a special use permit would not be necessary if a commercially zoned property is selected.

The building on the Jerke property has been the family home and was the former city library building, which was moved to the Jerke farm and remodeled.

Residents living in the nearby area met Monday night to prepare testimony they were to have presented, had Tuesday's hearing not been cancelled. They planned to explain why they do not want a juvenile detention center in their farm neighborhood.

JoAnne Johnson, one of the adjacent property owners, said a petition with 200 names has been obtained.

"Some of these are property owners in the neighborhood, but some are just Jerome-area residents who don't feel such a facility would be desirable in our community," she said.

There are five widows living within 1 1/2 miles of the Jerke property, Johnson said. Residents were not confident of security measures in the old frame building and, she said, land owners near the proposed site felt their property values would decline.

Many counties cannot meet requirements for juvenile detention in their jails. Since state law prohibits juvenile status offenders from being jailed, such counties would be faced with building new detention quarters. Youth could be placed in the Jerome center at a fee to the originating county of $50 per 24-hour period, or $25 for less than 24 hours.

Rasco said the center program would be one of assistance to the youths in getting a new start in life.

He said his organization held an informational meeting for property owners when the Jerke site was first considered, but only three persons came. He said the three did not appear interested in what the center proposed to do or how it would operate, but rather in what situations they expected might develop around the center and the juveniles who would be housed there.

Jail closure hearing delayed

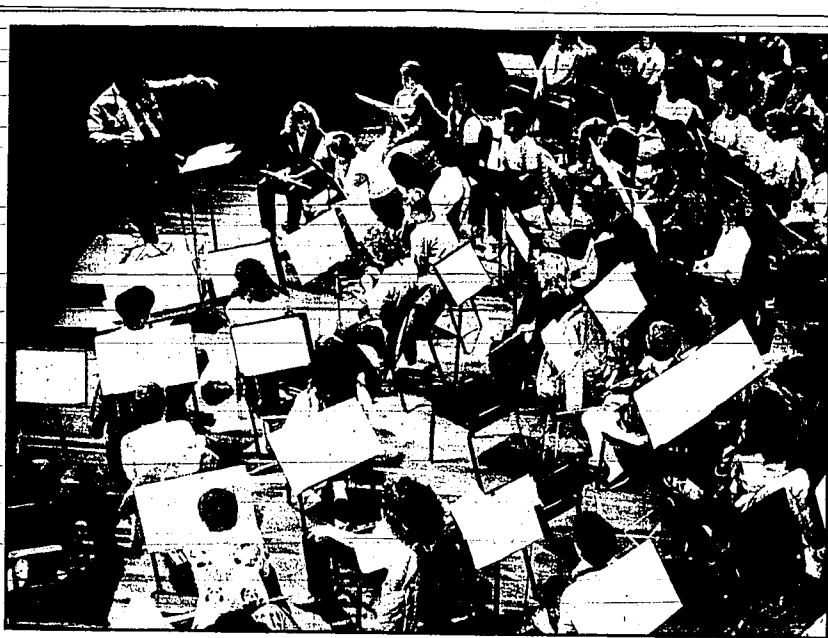

TWIN FALLS — A hearing scheduled Tuesday on a request by two inmates to close the Twin Falls County Jail was postponed.

The county's new attorney, Lloyd Webb of Twin Falls, wanted more time to prepare for the "show cause" hearing, requested by attorney Greg Fuller on behalf of inmates Michael Goodson and Ted Matney. The hearing is related to a lawsuit filed Oct. 22 by Fuller against Twin Falls County in which the inmates claim the 70-year-old jail is inadequate, unconstitutional and overcrowded.

According to court officials, no new date for the hearing has been scheduled.

Webb was hired last week by the County Board of Commissioners to replace County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter in the case.

At the show cause hearing the county will be asked to present evidence on why 5th District Judge Daniel Haribut should not impose a temporary order on the county to close the jail, reduce the jail population and begin taking actions to build a new jail. In their main complaint, the jail inmates are requesting the court to permanently close the jail and order the building of a new one.

Valley's alive with sound of music

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Over 500 high school students from the Magic Valley are attending the District Four Regional Music Clinic at The College of Southern Idaho.

The clinic, which began Tuesday, will continue today and conclude with a concert tonight at 7 p.m. in the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium.

The students are from schools in all areas of the Magic Valley, including Raft River, Glenns Ferry and Shoshone.

Jim Keizer, music teacher from Oakley, described the clinic as the best learning experience music students could get.

"This gives them the opportunity that they usually don't get," he said. "They get to do things that they normally wouldn't be able to do."

The students attending were selected by their respective music teachers, picking only the top 25 percent to perform at the clinic.

The clinic is divided into four groups: honor band, under the direction of Melvin Shelton of Boise State University; honor orchestra, under the direction of Larry Curtis of CSI; honor girls choir, under Winifred Alldaffer, a retired music teacher from Soda Springs; and a mixed choir, under the direction of Jerry Veving of Boise.

Keizer said the clinic receives a large amount of support from the schools.

"They very much support it," he said. "The teachers from all the schools feel that the clinic is an excellent opportunity for their students."

The advanced music students get a crack at material that is a cut above the music they usually play in school.

"Also, they are playing with students of higher caliber than normal," said Keizer. "Playing with better students and with better material gives them a chance to really cut loose."

Tickets for the concert are $2 for adults, $1 for students, and $5 for a family. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Neilsen's 'serious'

TWIN FALLS — A 44-year-old Twin Falls business executive who was injured Sunday night on an icy stretch of U.S. Highway 25 near the Nevada state line remained "serious but stable" in a Salt Lake City Hospital Tuesday night.

Craig Neilsen, who suffered a fractured neck vertebra about 11:15 p.m. Sunday, was in the cerebral vascular unit at the University of Utah Medical Center.

His northbound sports car went out of control after meeting a large truck-trailer unit in heavy slush, five miles north of Jackpot, Nev. It went into a spin, faced back south and was struck in the rear by a car carrying three employees of Club 57 in Jackpot who were returning from Twin Falls.

The three, Dale Reiman, 25, driver of the car; Janice Epsay, 51, owner of the car; and another passenger, Elaine Kevier, 25, all escaped serious injury.

Neilsen is president of Cactus Pete's Inc., owners of both Cactus Pete's and Horseshoe Casino and Hotel, and, among other interests, heads Neilsen & Co. of Twin Falls.

MVRMC sets board meeting on refinancing of bond debt

Hailey attempts to force Idaho Power reconnection

Conflict continues between attorneys

FORT HALL (AP) — A Washington, D.C., lobbying firm at the center of a conflict between attorneys for the Shoshone-Bannock Indian Tribes is headed by the brother of another tribal lawyer, Sho-Ban Treasurer Marvin Osborne said.

Senior tribal attorney, state Rep. Larry Echoltaw, D-Pocatello, has recommended to the Tribal Business Council that attorney Jack Toss be fired over his "inability to form a constructive relationship."

The Sho-Ban News reported last week that Echoltaw's differences with Toss stemmed from the latter's submission of a memorandum to the Tribal Business Council recommending salary increases for two staff members and the hiring of a lobbying firm.

Osborne said Tuesday that the firm, Karl Funke and Associates, is headed by the brother of Howard Funke, who is representing the tribes in water-rights negotiations with the state of Idaho. One of the requested salary increases also was for Funke, Osborne said.

But the treasurer said he was sure there is no irregularity in the hiring of a firm headed by the attorney's brother.

"If there was any irregularity, Howard would be the first to correct it," Osborne said.

The Tribal Business Council will act Friday on its contracts with attorneys, but Osborne said it negotiates with the state of Idaho between Echoltaw and Ross.

Voting in St. Anthony target of investigation

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — A privately financed investigation has been launched into "possible" voting irregularities in last week's St. Anthony city election.

"We have an attorney looking into a few things... some irregularities we're checking into," said retired businessman Anthony Gardner.

He declined to discuss specifics of what may be in question or who else is involved, but attorney Nels Sahl, who is conducting the probe, said he will be checking what he termed a unusually large number of absentee ballots cast in the election. He said about 10 percent of the entire vote came from absentee voters.

Other officials have said, however, that there have been allegations that Mayor Merrill Rose may have solicited absentee votes in his successful bid to hold off challenger Jim Willmore, a city councilman, to retain the city's top elective office.

Rose had no immediate comment, and spokesmen for the Willmore campaign said Willmore was not involved in any way in the investigation.

Fraud case trial opens

BOISE (AP) — A civil trial pitting a retired lawyer against House Majority Leader Jack Kennevik and seven other business people over an office building deal is in progress in district court in Boise.

Wayne D. Hudson, Boise, has accused Kennevik, former state legislator Lyle R. Cobbs, their partnership Cobbs-Kennevik and six other people of defrauding him out of at least a $522,000.

In a 63-page complaint filed in August, Hudson's attorneys, Richard B. Elsmann and Fred Kennedey, requested damages be trebled to $1.5 million, and sought punitive damages of about $1,044,000, plus attorney fees.

The other defendants are Mark Bazeghi, Kathy Bazeghi, Abbass Bazeghi, Larry Sundell, Brian Smith and Doug Sherwood, and their partnership, Webster Investments No. 3.

Attorneys trying the case before 4th District Judge Deborah Bail is expected to include 100 exhibits and last several weeks.

Hudson has a similar lawsuit pending in federal court.

Defense says upbringing caused Tate to panic

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Fearing by his isolated, right-wing upbringing led a 23-year-old member of a white supremacist group to shoot at two state troopers, killing one and wounding the other, the defendant's attorney said Tuesday.

"This is a case about fear and isolation," Patrick Deaton, lawyer for defendant David Tate, said in an opening statement at Tate's first-degree murder trial in Boone County Circuit Court.

But prosecutor James Justus said Tate knew what he was doing when he shot and killed Highway Patrol Trooper Jimmie Linegar after being stopped for a routine traffic check along a southern Missouri highway April 15.

Tate, 23, of Athol, Idaho, a member of The Order, a militant, white supremacist organization, is accused of killing Linegar, 31, and wounding Trooper Allen D. Hines, 35, with a silencer-equipped automatic pistol.

The defense has said it would not deny that Tate shot and killed Linegar, but would argue that he had been led astray by leaders of a right-wing religious faction.

Deaton said Tate's parents were immersed in their church, the Church of Jesus Christ Christian in Hayden Lake, Idaho, and he was given home instruction after his mother took him out of school in the ninth grade.

"Because of that, David never had the experiences that most young people had when they grow up," Deaton said.

The lawyer said a bomb that damaged the church in 1981 had a profound impact on the church.

"Suddenly, David and everybody else felt... their lives were in danger," Deaton said.

On April 15, the public defender said, "that fear for him all came together at that moment. The fear had been there and he panicked and started shooting. The shooting was a product of David's fear."

Justus, the prosecutor, said Linegar was shot 11 times and that Tate knew he "would come out shooting" when he was ordered out of the van.

Hines testified Tuesday that he walked to the passenger side of Tate's van and Linegar walked to the driver's side after they stopped the vehicle.

"I heard a short burst of automatic weapon fire, followed by a long burst," he said. "I crouched down, ran toward the back of the van and unslipped my pistol. I came around the left side of the van, saw Mr. Tate standing at the front corner. I saw Mr. Tate fire a long burst down the side of the van. I fired two shots, rolled down, fired two or three shots underneath the van."

Hines, who suffered three gunshot wounds, said when he moved around the side of the van he saw Tate running away. He said he found the fatally wounded Linegar with his gun still in his holster.

The prosecution has filed a motion of intent to seek the death penalty if Tate is convicted, but the defense has asked Judge Frank Conley to forbid use of the death sentence in the case.

Court rejects appeal, backs conviction

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Court of Appeals has upheld the drunken driving conviction of an Adams County man who tried an unusual approach in his appeal.

The court voted Tuesday to uphold the drunken driving conviction of Bryan Brown. The man was found guilty after a jury trial.

On appeal, Brown's attorney alleged his client actually was charged with two separate crimes, drunken driving and driving with a blood alcohol content of more than 0.10 percent, which is legally drunk in Idaho.

The Court of Appeals rejected the argument, saying other courts have acknowledged that driving ability is impaired with a blood alcohol content of 0.10, the court says. It is obvious that the Legislature intended to prohibit driving by one who is influenced by drugs or alcohol.

"A BAC of at least 0.10 percent allows the trier of fact to make a permissible inference that the defendant is under the influence," the court said.

Deaton said: "I heard a short burst of automatic weapon fire, followed by a long burst," he said. "I crouched down, ran toward the back of the van and unslipped my pistol. I came around the left side of the van, saw Mr. Tate standing at the front corner. I saw Mr. Tate fire a long burst down the side of the van. I fired two shots, rolled down, fired two or three shots underneath the van."

Hines, who suffered three gunshot wounds, said when he moved around the side of the van he saw Tate running away. He said he found the fatally wounded Linegar with his gun still in his holster.

The prosecution has filed a motion of intent to seek the death penalty if Tate is convicted, but the defense has asked Judge Frank Conley to forbid use of the death sentence in the case.

Investment earnings 'on target,' Moon declares

BOISE (AP) — Despite continuing gloomy forecasts of budget shortfalls facing Idaho government, state Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon says interest earnings on state investments are providing a bright spot in the revenue picture.

Even though interest earnings for October and the fiscal year to date are only about half of last year's, Miss Moon said Tuesday that she considers them "right on target."

The treasurer said by the time fiscal 1986 ends next June 30, interest on investments should have netted the state at least the $10.5 million projected to the 1985 Legislature, plus about $2 million in "by-product revenue" from borrowing nationally on state-tax-anticipation notes.

Last year, Miss Moon said some people criticized her revenue projection from state investments as too optimistic, calling the anticipated earnings "Moon money."

"It now appears that this year's Moon money will be there to help offset expected shortfalls in sales tax and other collections," she said in a press release.

"Last June's final figures showed that 'miscellaneous revenue' including the state treasurer's interest was $6 million higher than the Legislature projected," Miss Moon said. "It was a $9 million drop in expected sales tax receipts that caused the revenue crunch."

So far in fiscal 1986 the state general account has earned $2.7 million in interest on the various investments handled by Miss Moon, who is a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor next year. Earnings for October totaled $573,330.

That compares to interest collections of $1.1 million during October 1984 and $5 million up to that point in fiscal 1985.

Besides the general account revenue, Miss Moon said investments she has made on behalf of local governments in the state participating in her investment pool—netted $302,585 in October. The Idaho Public School Endowment Fund, of which the treasurer is custodian, also earned $635,513 during the month.

Shutdown nears at mine

ELK CITY (AP) — Operations should cease later this month at a heap leach gold mining plant near Elk City, where a potentially serious cyanide leak was discovered two years ago.

Hoskins-Western-Sonderregger Inc. of Nebraska, that company that had been operating the plant, has notified the Bureau of Land Management that it should complete the process of neutralizing the cyanide used in the operation within the next two weeks.

The plant was built on Federal land in 1983 to extract gold and silver from discarded mine tailings of the old Buster Mine. But periodic testing near the plant during its early days of operation found that cyanide had leaked into groundwater in the area.

Citizens have been calling for the closure of the operation, but the announcement that it would be shutdown this month has resolved the dispute.

Personal income in Idaho sees 4.5 percent hike

BOISE (AP) — Total personal income in Idaho is expected to reach $10.6 billion this year, an increase of 4.5 percent from 1984, according to a First Security Corp. publication.

Employment is expected to increase 1 percent, while wages are forecast to increase 3.5 percent for the year, the company's newsletter released Monday stated.

Income for the first six months rose 4.8 percent over last year, but a continuing downturn in agriculture and minimal job gains in other sectors of the state's economy were expected to erode second-half income growth.

In 1984, Idaho's total personal income was $10.1 billion, an increase of $77 million, or 0.3 percent, from the previous year.

Gains in personal income last year were greatest in the manufacturing sector, up 13.3 percent. Income from construction rose—12.9 percent, followed by mining, with a 10.3 percent gain.

Per capita personal income was $10,092 last year, a gain of 6.9 percent from 1983, the newsletter said.

It said Idaho's employment in the fourth quarter of this year was expected to be the same as in 1984.

Man claiming Hudson relationship files AIDS-related suit

—LOS-ANGELES (AP)— A man who says he was Rock Hudson's lover in the last years of the actor's life sued his estate for $10 million Tuesday, claiming that Hudson repeatedly had sex with him while concealing the fact he had AIDS.

"He asked Rock, and Rock denied he had it," attorney Marvin Mitchelson told a news conference as 31-year-old plaintiff Marc Christian said bitterly.

The suit alleges bodily injury, mental suffering and damages for fraud and deceit against executor Wallace Sheft, secretary Mark Miller and an unspecified number of doctors. It says they all conspired to hide the actor's affliction from Christian.

A woman who identified herself as a secretary in Sheft's New York City office said he was gone for the day Tuesday. Dale Olson, who had been Hudson's spokesman before the actor died Oct. 2, said he would relay a request for comment to Miller about the Superior Court lawsuit.

MARC CHRISTIAN Sues for $10 million

Mitchelson said Christian lived with Hudson for 2 1/2 years and was flown to Paris for AIDS testing last summer while the dying 59-year-old actor was hospitalized there.

"Mr. Christian did go to Paris and was examined by doctors there," Mitchelson said. "Their finding was he did not have the antibodies yet. Their diagnosis was he had to be monitored on a regular basis."

But Mitchelson's suit says: "It is probable that claimant has contracted AIDS from Hudson."

Mitchelson, who said Christian has love letters from Hudson which would be brought to court as evidence of their relationship, said the actor insisted to Christian that he was suffering from anorexia and purposely trying to lose weight but was not suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"This is the most unpleasant lawsuit I've ever been involved in," said the celebrity attorney. "There's nothing glamorous about it. It's a tragedy."

Hudson died at home Oct. 2 of complications from AIDS.

Mitchelson said Christian first consulted him three months ago, indicating he was considering a suit before Hudson died.

The attorney called the suit the first in the nation to deal with the subject of AIDS. The key issue, he said, is whether Hudson's doctors had a duty to tell Christian he was being exposed to the disease by engaging in sex.

"Certainly, they have a duty not to lie," said Mitchelson.

He didn't name the doctors accused in the lawsuit, saying he would identify them once he knows how much they knew.

The lawsuit said Hudson learned of his affliction in June 1984, but Mitchelson said the actor continued to have sex with Christian through February 1985. He said Christian didn't learn of the illness until it was announced on the radio in July 1985. Mitchelson speculated Hudson might have feared a loss of reputation if he told Christian.

Asked Christian's reaction, Mitchelson replied, "Anger, hurt, astonishment that someone so close moment he will receive a death warrant tell him and would carry on sentence" of AIDS.

Mitchelson said the separate actions were filed because the claim, not actually a lawsuit, requires 18 days waiting time before the estate accepts or rejects it.

Recovery crews to explore Wilberg Mine tunnel —ORANGEVILLE, Utah (AP)— Mine recovery crews plan to explore a badly damaged tunnel near the origin of last December's Wilberg Mine fire, hoping to find the last link of 27 victims of the blaze, an Emery Mining Corp. spokesman said.

A team of mine workers wearing breathing equipment will dig through the eastern-most entry of the five-tunnel 1st North, the main artery of the coal mine where 26 men and one woman were trapped and killed by fire, said spokesman Bob Henrie.

Twenty-five of the bodies were recovered last week and returned to their families for burial, but crews have found no sign of James Bertuzzi and Gordon Conover.

In a lower priority recovery mission, Henrie said crews will begin removing mining equipment valued at more than $10 million which was trapped along with the miners.

However, "I'm sure nothing will be moved until the investigators have done their inspections and given their OK," Henrie said.

Earlier, Henrie said miners who were aided temporarily while recovery squads removed the bodies would be recalled to work at the Wilberg and Cottonwood mines beginning with the midnight shift Tuesday.

Work at the Wilberg will continue to focus on the investigation of the disaster, Henrie said Monday.

Three tunnels bored nearly 2,000 feet to reach the victims' remains will be extended another 600 feet to aid establishment of an adequate ventilation system and provide investigators safe travel into that area of the coal mine, he said.

Henrie said the extension of the tunnels is expected to take until mid-January. Investigators will not be able to enter the area where the fire started until the tunnels are completed. Henrie said, but some exploratory work may be done near the mouth of the 5th Right section where the miners were working, attempting to set a production record, the night of the fire.

The Cottonwood Mine was part of the Wilberg before the fire. It was designated a separate mine earlier this year. Miners are doing development work there in anticipation of resuming coal production this spring, Henrie said.

Gem home sales pick up slightly over summer

—WASHINGTON (AP)— After running at a significantly reduced rate for the first half of this year, the sales of existing homes in Idaho picked up during the summer to post a 3.5 percent increase over sales during the summer of 1984, according to a new survey by the National Association of Realtors.

But the gain in the seasonally adjusted annualized rate of home sales was only a fraction of the average increase nationally between last summer and this summer and higher than the performance in only six other states.

According to the survey, home sales for the July-September quarter this year ran at a seasonally adjusted annualized rate of 11,700. That was up from the rate of 11,100 during the first half of this year but well below the temporary boom of 14,400 in the final quarter of 1984. Sales of the comparable July-September period last year ran at a rate of 11,300.

Without a significant boost in activity during the final three months of this year, home sales in 1985 will likely fall back to around the level of 11,200 in 1983, well below the 12,300 recorded in 1984, the survey indicated.

Nationally, the rate of home sales rose nearly 25 percent over the year amid personal income rising faster than inflation and mortgage interest rates declining to their lowest level in six years.

Thirty-five states reported a 10 percent or greater increase in the rate of home sales this summer with 23 of them posting increases of over 20 percent.

The national 2.5 percent rise in Idaho reflected the continued upheaval in the state's economy, where cornerstone industries like timber and agriculture have been wallowing in a depression.

Still, six states suffered even worse performances, with four of them, including Utah, actually seeing the sales rate decline from last summer to this summer.

Utah home sales dropped by 1.4 percent from the summer of 1984 while Texas posted a decline of 1.8 percent, Oklahoma 3.9 percent and North Dakota 7.1 percent. Recording smaller increases in the sales rate than Idaho were Alaska at 1.1 percent and Colorado at 1.7 percent.

Crista Lynn Palmer, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl, and Tyson McGuire, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer.

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Koeng and Mr. and Mrs. D.A. McGuire, Twin Falls, grandparents of the bride.

A reception was held following the ceremony. Serving were Connie Caraway, who also baked the wedding cake, and Cristy Swensen. Both are sisters of the bridegroom. Dawn Dunlap presided at the guest book, and Ava Butler was gift attendant.

The bride is a secretary at Cain's Furniture in Twin Falls, and the bridegroom is employed by Tupperware in Jerome. The newlyweds live in Twin Falls.

DEAR ABBY: I am a mature 15

(going on 16-year-old girl in love with a guy I'll call Craig. He's 16, and we've been together for two months, then had to break up because his ex-girlfriend told him she was pregnant with his baby. I was really upset when we broke up because Craig and I really love each other.

He just started calling me again and comes to see me quite often, and I'm getting attached to him again. His girlfriend is due in March, so he's back with her for now, but he doesn't love her, he's only interested in the baby. He told me this himself and I believe him.

My mother thinks I should stop seeing him, but I love him so much that would be hard to do. Can he get custody of his baby after it's born? What are Craig's rights, if any? His girlfriend is 16. What should I do? I've been reading your column every day for three years and I trust you, Abby. Please help me.

CONFUSED IN PENNSYLVANIA

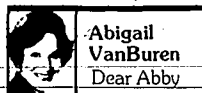

DEAR CONFUSED: Craig's first responsibility is to the young woman who is pregnant. Apparently he was "in love" with her prior to her becoming pregnant, and although his focus now is on the baby, he seems immature and unable to accept the responsibility for his actions.

Craig needs counseling, and it is now available for unwed teen-age fathers.

Your mother is right. You should stop seeing Craig. I urge you to consult Planned Parenthood so you will not find yourself in the same position as Craig's ex-girlfriend. Craig needs to learn self-control and birth control.

A 16-year-old boy can become a father, but until he is able to handle the responsibility of fatherhood, he is not yet a man.

Ranks of functionally illiterate grow

By BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

To those of us who read every day — who depend on newspapers and magazines for information and entertainment, fill out insurance forms, comparison shop at department stores, look up numbers in the telephone directory and relax with a good book — life without the written word is incomprehensible.

And yet for as many as 60 million adult Americans, one in three words are at best a mystery, at worst fearsome and shaming roadblocks.

According to Better Homes and Gardens, the numbers are huge and chilling:

- 27 million adult Americans are unable to read.
- At least 30 million more are functionally illiterate — they read and write so poorly that they cope only marginally.

- In just 15 years the functionally illiterate population could be as much as 70 percent of adults.

- Every year, 24 million functionally illiterate people are added to the ranks; some are immigrants who may or may not be literate in languages other than English, and, incredibly, 1 million come out of our schools.

Easy enough to understand is the private tragedy of illiteracy as it affects individual lives. We can sympathize with people such as the Connecticut mother who was passed through school without learning to read. "I behaved in class," she says, "and I was graded on behavior. No one believed me when I told them I couldn't read."

More difficult to grasp is the public tragedy and how it affects us. "The condition is a national disgrace and a growing threat to the promise of America," says Jim Cates, director of the Adult Performance Level project at the University of Texas, which has conducted research on functional literacy in the country.

"We are all victims of illiteracy. We pay the price for it one way or another," says Cates. "We pay because those who cannot function fully don't pay their share of taxes, can't maintain basic health and nutrition standards, can't understand governmental processes, and can't share civic responsibilities."

Research done by Cates' group found that just under 50 percent of all Americans over age 18 are truly proficient and in command of the skills needed to cope in our complex society.

One reason the problem is growing is that standards are higher today. Cates' research found most people can read and write, but society has become so sophisticated that those simple abilities are not enough.

Life is limited for the more than 40 million people who are "marginally" literate. They are people, for example, who can read well enough to perform their jobs adequately or to accept a promotion. A woman who left school to work after the sixth grade says it simply: "When you can't read too good, there's a lot of things you don't know."

Virtually every community has some people who are illiterate. Many who read and write poorly manage to stay, if not in the mainstream of society, at least on the edges. Others, however, do not. They are the poor, unemployed, disaffected. Those people cost as much as $6 billion each year in welfare and unemployment payments. Many are in prisons. The correlation between education and crime can't be ignored — about 75 percent of inmates have not completed high school.

Engagements

Coats-Casperson

TWIN FALLS — Raymond and Linda Coats announce the engagement of their daughter, Tara, to Lloyd Casperson, son of Max and Charlene Casperson, all Twin Falls. Coats, a 1983 graduate of Twin Falls High School, attended CSI and Ricks College where she majored in business management and completed on the Teton Valley ski team. She is employed at The Club. Casperson, who graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1980, attended BYU in Hawaii and then at Provo, Utah, where he majored in business administration. He is employed with the family business, Charmie Trailers, in Twin Falls. The wedding is planned for Nov. 27 in the LDS Temple in Salt Lake City with a reception the evening of Nov. 29 at the Twin Falls LDS Stake Center.

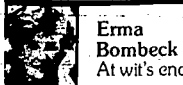

Tara Coats

With the possible exception of Muhammad Ali and Mr. T, few people take compliments well. Most of us are incapable of a simple "Thank you." Someone will say, "That's a pretty outfit you're wearing," and we'll grab a handful of it and say, "This old rag! It's a thousand years old. I was going to take the buttons off it last week and use it to dust."

Or if someone says, "That dessert was wonderful. You must give me the recipe," we counter with, "It would have been better with fresh strawberries, but they were $1.59 a pint. This recipe is nothing, you just add water to the junk in the box."

I have yet to tell anyone how fabulous they looked without their telling me, "I'm fat! I've got to start dieting Monday."

I tell myself this is probably why men find it so hard to give compliments.

Erma Bombeck At wit's end

They just can't seem to make you happy with them. I can count the tributes my husband has given me on one hand. On the birth of our first child, he punched me in the arm and said, "Way to go, kid." When my first book was published he shook me awake from a sound sleep and announced, "I finished it." And one Christmas, he bought me a refrigerator magnet of a chocolate soda and before I even opened it said, "I looked like you, but if you hate it I'll take it back."

It all started when we were kids. Modesty was a virtue. It was all right to be pretty and smart. It was bad to know that you were pretty and smart. If you were running for school office, it was all right to stand up and say you were the best in the class for the job. It was considered bad taste to vote for yourself.

Compliments are just something we're not comfortable with. There are times I could bite my tongue for not acknowledging them with more grace and appreciation.

When someone said, "Your husband is quite handsome," I had no reason to say, "It's the price you pay for shallowness." I just didn't know what else to say. And the man who said to me, "You write OK for a woman," I got back, "You read pretty good for a man." Why didn't I just take the compliment and run?

I honestly don't know what the answer is. The other night I saw the winner of a beauty pageant being interviewed. She once said, "Congratulations. Were you surprised to be named the most beautiful and talented girl in the state?"

Her eyes met his directly as she responded, "No, I feel the judges made a wise choice. This is something I always knew I would win someday. I was born to hold this title and look forward to winning the national competition."

Somehow, without modesty, she seemed less pretty and less talented. She looks a few minutes before. She joins a group of possibly 300 immediate presenters in this entire country. I know. In about five weeks, I will get a Christmas newsletter from each and every one of them.

Arrington, a 1978 graduate of Twin Falls High School, served an LDS mission in France and graduated from BYU last August. She teaches school in Murtaugh. Sorensen, a 1977 graduate of Valley High School, also served an LDS mission in Australia. He now works for an insurance firm in Orem, Utah. The couple will be married Nov. 23 in the LDS Temple in Boise.

Campaign under way to discourage habits of cigarette smokers

By WARREN E. LEARY
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The American Heart Association on Tuesday announced a four-point program to end cigarette smoking by making it an unsozial habit for adults and an increasingly expensive indulgence for teen-agers.

Association officials said the initiative would involve pressing for increases in cigarette taxes, restricting tobacco advertising, protecting non-smokers' rights and helping tobacco farmers change to other crops.

Dr. Thomas J. Ryan, group president, told the voluntary organization's annual scientific meeting that the effort would support the U.S. surgeon general's goal of making the country a "smoke-free society" by the year 2000.

Ryan called for restricting advertising and promotions of smoking "because tobacco is the only product on the market that is harmful when used as intended."

While the ultimate goal is a ban on all forms of tobacco promotion, Ryan said an initial step could be to limit advertisements by excluding models, slogans and inviting scenes. All that should be allowed is a picture of a cigarette pack, tar and nicotine contents and the surgeon general's health warning, he said.

The recommendations called for increasing federal, state and local taxes on cigarettes to price them out of the hands of young people. Studies show that each increase in cost deters thousands of teenagers from taking up smoking, the group said.

The association also said it would renew its efforts to get more state and local governments to pass so-called clean indoor air laws that restrict or ban smoking in public buildings or in the workplace.

By 1978, 38 states had legislation on public smoking and the movement has since spread to the local level.

"There is a growing sense among non-smokers that they deserve freedom from the annoyance of smoke-polluted areas," Ryan said.

The association said federal and state governments should look for ways to ease farmers' transition from tobacco to other crops or non-farm activities. Both the number of tobacco farms and farmers have decreased in recent years because of mechanization and increased imports, it said.

Coffee increases heart risk

BALTIMORE (AP) — A person who drinks five or more cups of coffee a day has an almost three times greater risk of having heart problems than a non-coffee drinker, according to a study of more than 1,000 doctors released Monday.

Findings from the study, which tracked 130 white males who graduated from The Johns Hopkins Medical School here between 1948 and 1954, were presented in Washington at the 58th scientific sessions of the American Heart Association.

Information on drinking habits was obtained from the graduating physicians at five-year intervals for up to 25 years. No information was obtained on whether the type of coffee was caffeinated or decaffeinated.

A person who drinks at least five cups of coffee daily has a 2.8 times greater risk of having heart problems than the non-drinker, the study found.

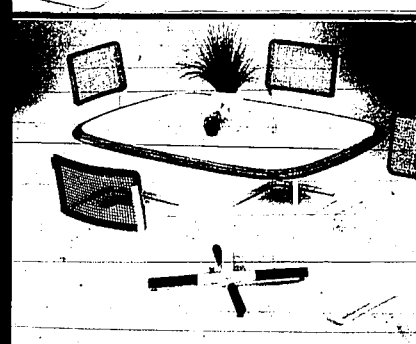

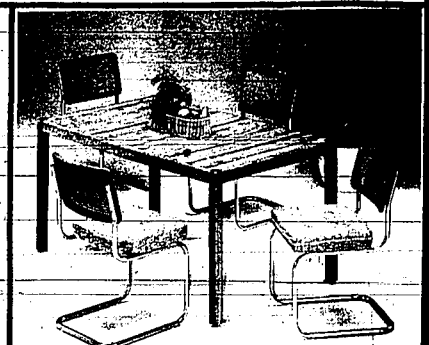

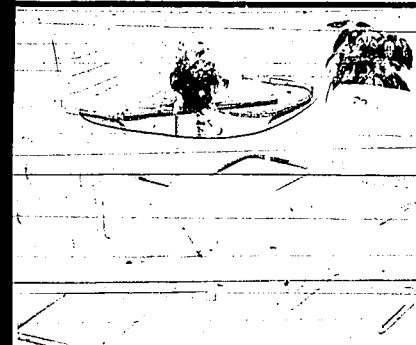

Even when other risk factors — smoking, high blood pressure, cholesterol levels and age — are considered, the study determined there is still a 2.5 times increased risk, the researchers reported.

Other studies into possible links between coffee consumption and coronary heart disease have resulted in contradictory findings, said Dr. Thomas A. Pearson, an associate professor and director of the Johns Hopkins Precursors Study. Some found a link, while others did not.

A spokesman for the National Coffee Association, Bill Brooks, said 10 of 12 major studies found no relationship between coffee drinking and heart disease. In one of the two studies that did, the findings were later reversed, he said.

Dutch export wide variety of cheeses for cooking

By TOM HOGGE
The Associated Press

As a longtime cheese buff, I have in my travels sampled the products of many lands including English-Stilton, French Camembert, German Limburger and the classical Swiss.

But in my opinion, the nation which leads the field is the Netherlands, the little country which has become a major exporter of these milk products with an annual total of some 307,000 tons. This comes to almost 25 percent of the total cheese exports of all nations.

The Dutch make dozens of cheeses, from Zelden, seasoned with caraway seeds, to Frisian, spiced with cloves. But the undisputed leaders in the field are Edam and Gouda, which alone account for the annual export of some 250,000 tons to about 100 countries.

Gouda, with its yellow-gold rind, is world famous for its distinctive flavor. It is described as a rich cheese with a fat content of at least 48 percent, which explains its creamy texture.

Gouda, at the age of 4 to 8 weeks, is soft and smooth and is delicious eaten with bread. "Old" Gouda, aging from 7 to 13 months, is dry and sharp and good with wine.

Edam, a sphere with a bright red casing, is good with hot, savory dishes in early life. As it becomes more mature, Edam goes well with beer and wine. It is especially tasty with Port.

Edam was once made from whole milk, but now the fat content has been reduced.

The Dutch have long claimed that Edam can be made only in the pastures of north Holland Friesland provinces. Government scientists finally tested this theory, making the cheese, using milk from the same conditions, in other areas. The cheese they produced was acceptable, but it lacked the distinctive Edam taste.

One fine cheese is her-rich Pompadour, which offers a number of cooking possibilities, such as this recipe for creamy eggs.

CREAMY EGGS
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup diced Pompadour cheese
2 tablespoons water
8 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon onion powder
Dash Tabasco

Salt and pepper to taste
Melt butter in large skillet. Add cheese and water; cook slowly, stirring until cheese melts. Add eggs, onion powder, Tabasco, salt and pepper. Cook slowly until eggs are set, scraping mixture frequently during cooking. Serves 4. Good with a chilled rose wine.

I love garlic and love to cook with it. However, I really don't like the mess each time I need a clove. So I peel several, put them in a jar and cover them with vegetable oil, screw on a lid and keep in refrigerator. The oil can be used in salad dressings.

You can keep fresh ginger the same way, just peel it and cut into pieces like the garlic cloves.

Product labels wording confuses consumer

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Dear Martin — I recently went shopping and decided to purchase two bottles of Pert shampoo. I handed the cashier two 50-cent Pert coupons. She looked at them and said she could not accept one because the coupon stated "One Coupon Per Purchase."

Was she right? I am confused and would appreciate it if you could explain what the words "One Coupon Per Purchase" mean. — Betty Dover, Hanceville, Ala.

Dear Betty — If the manufacturer changed the language they use on their coupons to "One Coupon Per Item" there would be a lot less confusion — among both supermarkets and shoppers.

Most supermarkets interpret "One Coupon Per Purchase" to mean that a consumer can only use one manufacturer's coupon on the purchase of an individual item. If you have two items, you can use two coupons, three items, three coupons, and so on.

But the interpretation of the word "purchase" is up-to-the-supermarket, and that is why consumers occasionally run into the problem you have experienced.

In a recent column, I published a letter from a reader in Henrietta, N.Y., in which she told of doubling as many as 18 coupons with values as high as 65 cents. Several readers found this hard to believe.

Mrs. Harold Marsh of Bay City, Michigan wrote: "To the best of my knowledge, stores do not double coupons over 50 cents." Georgann Schod of Long Beach, Calif., told me she had never been in a supermarket that would double as many as 18 coupons for the same item: "Either the writer is misrepresenting the amount, or I am living in the wrong part of the country."

Hard as it may be for some readers to believe, the reader from Henrietta really was able to get double value for all these coupons.

Supermarket Shopper

The supermarkets in several cities in upstate New York have been locked in battle for the past five years and have been using double and even triple coupons as their primary weapon.

During this time, the supermarket rules for redeeming multiple-value coupons have changed from time to time and from chain to chain, but the intensity of this coupon price war has led the supermarkets to offer double coupons with very few restrictions.

Wine added to roasts provides that extra little flavor 'lift'

By TOM HOGE
The Associated Press

I recently wrote a column on cooking vegetables with wine, and the grape does give a lift to many greens. But the classics in this field, of course, are meat, chicken or fish dishes cooked with wine.

As food experts have often pointed out, wine can transform an ordinary roast — stew, stew — into an epicurean delight. Coq au Vin, for instance, is based on chicken cooked in seasoned stock. But once red wine has been added, it becomes a gourmet classic.

Note, incidentally, that this famous dish is made ignoring the old adage of white wine for white meats and red wine with red. Such an unconventional combination can often work well, but keep in mind that fish should ordinarily be cooked with white wine.

When choosing a wine for the cook, don't spend your money on some vintage wine. Nor should you buy a bottle at the cheapest end of the scale. It's best to use a wine that you are going to drink with the dish.

The alcohol contained in wine evaporates, of course, when cooked above the boiling point, but the flavor remains, which underlines the need for a reasonably good wine to put in the pot.

If you are cooking with a fortified wine, such as sherry, you should flame the dish to make sure the alcohol evaporates. Just pour the wine into a heated spoon and pour it over the hot dish. Then touch a match to it and let the flame die down.

Meats that are marinated in wine to tenderize them should be dried before cooking. And all meat to be cooked in wine should be browned well before the wine is added.

Here's a recipe for chicken casserole cooked in white wine.

Pepper to taste
Pinch of paprika
Flour as needed
1 cup butter
1 cup fresh mushrooms
1/2 cup chopped onions
1 cup chopped celery
1 clove garlic, sliced thin
1/2 cup white table wine
Sprinkle chicken with salt and pepper and paprika and coat well with flour—Brown in 1/2 cup butter. Remove chicken and add remaining butter. Brown mushrooms, scallions, celery and garlic. Return chicken to pan, add wine and simmer slowly for 45 minutes, or until tender. Serves 4. Good with a chilled white wine, preferably the one the chicken was cooked with.

Dear Jane: Mario was happy to share his recipe, which you can serve over the pasta of your choice.

MARIO'S SPAGHETTI TOMATO SAUCE

3-4 cup olive oil
1 medium onion, chopped
3 cloves garlic, chopped
1 carrot, chopped
1 stalk celery, chopped
1 (29-ounce) can plum tomatoes, with liquid
4 fresh basil leaves
1 1/2 teaspoon salt
1-2 teaspoon black pepper
1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1 pound macaroni, spaghetti or other desired pasta, cooked

Heat oil in large saucepan. Add onion, garlic, carrot and celery and saute until golden, not brown. Chop tomatoes and add, with liquid, to vegetable mixture in pan. Add basil leaves, salt, pepper and sugar. Bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer 1 hour. Strain sauce through food mill or ricer. Return to pan. Add butter. Simmer 10 minutes until butter melts. Serve over pasta—Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Dear SOS: My friend has baked Clifton's Pumpkin Cake at Thanksgiving for years from Clifton's restaurant in Los Angeles, but she has now misplaced the recipe. — MARIA

Dear Maria: Your friend and dozens of other readers will love you.

CLIFTON'S PUMPKIN CAKE

3 cups sugar
3 cups all-purpose flour
1 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1 tablespoon soda
1 tablespoon cinnamon
3/4 teaspoon salt
1-2 cups oil
3-4 cups canned pumpkin
4 eggs, slightly beaten
Cream Cheese Frosting (see following recipe)

Blend together sugar, flour, baking powder, soda, cinnamon and salt in mixer at medium speed until well mixed. Add oil and continue to beat until dry ingredients are moistened. Add pumpkin and mix again until well blended. Add slightly beaten eggs and blend 1 minute longer. Do not overmix.

Turn batter into 3 lightly greased, paper-lined 9-inch cake pans. Smooth batter on top with spatula so cake will be level when baked. Bake at 325 degrees 40 minutes or until done. Cool on racks, then turn out and fill and frost with Cream Cheese Frosting. Makes 13 (3-layer) cake.

Cream Cheese Frosting

1 pound powdered sugar
1 (8-ounce) package cream cheese
2 teaspoons vanilla
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1/2 cup chopped raisins

Combine sugar, cream cheese, vanilla and butter. Mix until blended. Add raisins and mix until blended. Refrigerate until needed. Make sure cake is cool before frosting it.

Dutch export wide variety of cheeses for cooking

By TOM HOGE
The Associated Press

As a longtime cheese buff, I have in my travels sampled the products of many lands, including English Stilton, French Camembert, German Limburger and the classical Swiss. But in my opinion, the nation which leads the field is the Netherlands, a little country which has become a major exporter of these milk products, with an annual total of some 307,000 tons. This comes to almost 25 percent of the total cheese exports of all nations.

The Dutch make dozens of cheeses, from Leiden, seasoned with caraway seeds, to Friesland, spiced with cloves. But the undisputed leaders in the field are Edam and Gouda, which alone account for the annual export of some 250,000 tons to about 100 countries. Gouda, with its yellow-gold rind, is world famous for its distinctive flavor. It is described as a rich cheese with a fat content of at least 48 percent, which explains its creamy texture. Gouda, at the age of 4 to 8 weeks, is soft and smooth and is delicious eaten with bread. "Old" Gouda, coming from 7 to 13 months, is dry and sharp and good with wine. Edam, a sphere with a bright red casing, is good with hot, savory dishes in early life. As it becomes more mature, Edam goes well with beer and wine. It is especially tasty with Port. Edam was once made from whole milk, but now the fat content has been reduced. The Dutch have long claimed that Edam can be made only in the pastures of north Holland Friesland provinces. Government scientists finally tested this theory, making the cheese, using milk from the same cows and under identical milking conditions, in other areas. The cheese they produced was acceptable, but it lacked the distinctive Edam taste. One time cheese is Herbich Pommador, which offers a number of cooking possibilities, such as this recipe for creamy eggs. CREAMY EGGS

2 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup diced Pommador
2 tablespoons water
8 eggs, beaten
Dash Tabasco

Salt and pepper to taste. Melt butter in large skillet. Add cheese and water; cook slowly, stirring until cheese melts. Add eggs, onion powder, Tabasco, salt and pepper. Cook slowly until eggs are set, scraping mixture frequently during cooking. Serves 4. Good with a chilled rose wine. remember that our so-called valley really isn't a valley. We are a high plateau, and we have some high altitudes which can affect your baking. Cooks over Timmerman Hill often are at 6,000 feet, but even down here on the plain, elevations range from 4,300 feet at Rupert to around 2,000 feet above sea level at Glens Ferry. It does make a difference. There are some very good cookbooks available that deal with high altitude cooking. Ask for one for Christmas. I love garlic and love to cook with it. However, I really don't like the mess each time I need a clove. So I peel several, put them in a jar and cover them with vegetable oil, screw on a lid and keep in refrigerator. The oil can be used in salad dressings. You can keep fresh ginger the same way. Just peel it and cut into pieces like the garlic cloves. Remember when you're cooking with a bay leaf, remove it before you serve the dish. It is indigestible and should not be eaten.

Keep your cooking knives sharp. It saves time and tempers and is much safer. Dampen the edge of your bowl before using plastic wrap. It will seal better. And a good quality wrap is more expensive but twice as usable as bargain one. If you've never roasted chestnuts over an open fire, you are missing a special treat, but sometimes chestnuts are difficult to locate. A good substitute is to roast unshelled walnuts. Use one of the older type pop-corn holders, heat over the flames of an open fire, crack them open and enjoy!

become, the more we will go out — if only to be able to consume our food in the presence of other people. And with the decline of the family meal, restaurants will become the one place where we actually talk to each other. These days, we go out to be entertained, but if all these predictions are correct, we will soon start going out for comfort. Restaurants will become quiet once again, and they will become welcoming. And what we eat in these cozy places will change as well. In fact, it is already starting to do that.

chefs from France and the United States, the French chefs mentioned that restaurants in France have never sold so much cassoulet. "That's odd," replied the American restaurateurs, "we have never sold so much meat." Despite all the talk of light food and healthy food and the wonders of fish, chef after chef stood up to talk about the amount of heavy food that she is starting to sell. The verdict? Expect to see the renaissance of steak houses any day now. But I will go even further. If all these food companies are correct — and they must be, they're selling the stuff — what we go out to eat will change dramatically. Why go out for fast, light, healthy, expensive food when you can eat it at home? We will all go looking for the reverse. We will, in fact, go out for the kind of food we used to find at home. They when she was cooking. For if Mama is serving good cheese and fine cavaliar and pasta salads, the craving for hot stew and pot roast and country fried chicken will have to be satisfied elsewhere. And we will turn to restaurants for the slow, heavy, delicious foods of our past. There was a time when restaurants bragged that their food was just like your mother makes. Not anymore. In this microwave age, the restaurant of the future will have a big sign that says, "Nothing at all like what you'd eat at home."

Product labels wording confuses consumer

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Dear Martin — I recently went shopping and decided to purchase two bottles of Pert shampoo. I hand-coupons. She looked at them and said—she could only accept one because the coupon stated "One Coupon Per Purchase."

Was she right? I am confused and would appreciate if you could explain what the words "One Coupon Per Purchase" mean. Betty Dover, Hancockville, Ala.

Dear Betty — If the manufacturers changed the language they use on their coupons to "One Coupon Per Item" there would be a lot less confusion — among both supermarkets and shoppers.

Most supermarkets interpret "One Coupon Per Purchase" to mean that a consumer can only use one manufacturer's coupon on the purchase of an individual item. If you have two items, you can use two coupons, three items, three coupons, and so on.

But, the interpretation of the word "purchase" is up to the supermarket, and that is why consumers occasionally run into the problem you have experienced.

In a recent column, I published a letter from a reader in Henrietta, N.Y., in which she told of doubling as many as 18 coupons with values as high as 65 cents. Several readers found this hard to believe.

Mrs. Harold Marsh of Bay City, Michigan wrote: "To the best of my knowledge, stores do not double coupons over 50 cents." Georgann Schud of Long Beach, Calif., told me she had never been in a supermarket that would double as many as 18 coupons for the same item: "Either the writer is misrepresenting the amount, or I am living in the wrong part of the country."

Hard as it may be for some readers to believe, the reader from Henrietta really was able to get double value for all these coupons.

Supermarket Shopper

The supermarkets in several cities in upstate New York have been locked in a battle for the past five years and have been using double and even triple coupons as their primary weapon.

During this time, the supermarket rules for redeeming multiple-value coupons have changed from time to time and from chain to chain, but the intensity of this coupon price war has led the supermarkets to offer double coupons with very few restrictions.

This week's refund listings are for health products, and it is interesting to note that pain is the most common health problem in America: Every year, an estimated 18 million of us visit our doctors' because of headaches, 20 million experience pain associated with surgery, and 25 million suffer painful accidental injuries.

The Bristol-Myers Company has offered to send my readers a free sample package of Nuprin, its new ibuprofen pain reliever. Along with the sample, readers will receive a copy of the booklet "Pain, What It Is, How It Works, How We Cope With It." No purchase is necessary. Just send a postcard to Nuprin Pain Booklet, P.O. Box 1060, Baltimore, MD 21208, ask for the free Nuprin sample and the booklet, and make sure you include your name and address. This special offer expires June 30, 1986.

Wine added to roasts provides that extra little flavor 'lift'

By TOM HOGE
The Associated Press

I recently wrote a column on cooking vegetables with wine, and the grape does give a lift to many greens. But the classics in this field, of course, are meat, chicken or fish dishes cooked with wine.

As food experts have often pointed out, wine can transform an ordinary roast or stew to a gourmet delight. Coq au Vin, for instance, is based on chicken cooked in seasoned stock. But once red wine has been added, it becomes a gourmet classic.

Note, incidentally, that this famous dish is made ignoring the old adage of white wine for white meats and red wine with red. Such unconventional combinations can often work well, but keep in mind that fish should ordinarily be cooked with white wine.

When choosing a wine for the cook pot, don't consider your money on some vintage wine. Nor should you buy a bottle at the cheapest end of the scale. It's best to use a wine that you are going to drink with the dish.

The alcohol contained in wine evaporates, of course, when cooked above the boiling point, but the flavor remains, which underlines the need for a reasonably good wine to put in the pot.

If you are cooking with a fortified wine, such as sherry, you should flame the dish to make sure the alcohol evaporates. Just pour the wine in a heated spoon and pour it over the hot dish. Then touch a match to it and let the flame die down.

Meats that are marinated in wine to tenderize them should be dried before cooking. And all meat to be cooked in wine should be browned well before the wine is added. Here's a recipe for chicken casserole cooked in white wine.

CHICKEN CASSEROLE
Large chicken breasts, boned and split
1 teaspoon salt

Pepper to taste
Pinch of paprika
Flour as needed
1/2 cup butter

1 cup fresh mushrooms
1/2 cup chopped scallions
1/2 cup chopped celery
1 clove garlic, sliced thin
1/2 cup white table wine
Sprinkle chicken with salt and pepper and paprika and coat well with flour. Brown in 1/2 cup butter. Remove chicken and add remaining butter. Brown mushrooms, scallions, celery and garlic. Return chicken to pan, add wine and simmer slowly for 45 minutes, or until tender. Serve 4. Good with a chilled white wine, preferably the one the chicken was cooked with.

Southern influence flavors Missouri table

By SYLVIA CARTER

NEVADA, Mo. — Jim Bell's family has owned property in Missouri for 65 years. His wife, Camille, is the third generation of a family who owned rich, fertile bottom land by the river. They had the first cotton gin inside the levy at Caruthersville, the first land west of Tennessee across the Mississippi.

"When you're talkin' about farms," said Jim Bell, 32, "that's the best there is — I don't think there's any better land than that in the world. There's some equal, but I don't think there's any better. My whole family and my wife's family, on both sides, were farmers." He came to these parts — southwestern Missouri bordering Kansas — from Tennessee, where the members of his family still own some original Land Grant farms.

The Bells now work about 1,000 acres here, raising wheat, soybeans and beef cattle, and harvesting wild pecans, which they have turned into a business. Camille Bell's brother, James Bell, runs the Tennessee River-Camille Bell, 28, helps out at the pecan plant every day after putting in a full day teaching school; at the height of the fall season, the plant operates 24 hours a day.

"In my opinion, the pecan tree is one of the three prettiest trees," he said, driving along a country road bordering some of his land. "Just look at that one out there by itself." His other favorites — sugar maples and shagbark hickory trees.

Camille Bell, who spent summers in Caruthersville and the rest of the year in Florida, said, "My parents really do eat pecans in everything. I had never seen Jell-O in a life without pecans, until I came out here."

She puts on cooking demonstrations to promote pecans and enthusiastically reports that a pecan has seven to nine calories, about the same as a lifesaver. She can tell you the pecan's nutrient content, too: high in E, D, C and potassium.

"What we're going to have for supper tonight is a very, very typical southern meal," she said, "Apalachian, really." That means "sweet potatoe four or five times a week." And, added Camille Bell, from Kansas City to St. Louis comes through here about once a month to eat Camille's fried chicken.

The Bells live in a county where formal invitations were issued to hangings around the turn of the century, a county where Jesse James and the Younger brothers lived for a good spell.

Jim Bell is fond of making connections and comparisons between Missouri and his own rural, southern heritage. Here in Vernon County, which bordered the free state of Kansas, he said, "there are still a lot of feelings that people have toward Kansas because of the Civil War, especially in this town. People here remember the Civil War..."

"Pecans are a southern crop, and they grow in Missouri," Jim Bell said. "A lot of people don't know they grow here. Here, in the Midwest, there's a pocket of southern attitudes, an attempt at southern lifestyles... Our nuts are small, but Missouri pecans taste better than Georgia pecans. The oil content is five to ten percent higher than it is in any southern location."

That's one "southern" people from Missouri are obsessed with — Missouri pecans, because they really taste better, not just because they're from Missouri.

"In my opinion, the pecan tree is one of the three prettiest trees," he said, driving along a country road bordering some of his land. "Just look at that one out there by itself." His other favorites — sugar maples and shagbark hickory trees.

Camille Bell, who spent summers in Caruthersville and the rest of the year in Florida, said, "My parents really do eat pecans in everything. I had never seen Jell-O in a life without pecans, until I came out here."

"What we're going to have for supper tonight is a very, very typical southern meal," she said, "Apalachian, really." That means "sweet potatoe four or five times a week." And, added Camille Bell,

"steamed vegetables and corn bread through their freezer, but if you are pepper and lard were the staples. Camille Bell partly fries and then partly steams her chicken in a small amount of lard, after flouring the pieces in a paper sack. She cooks pork chops in much the same fashion.

The Bells keep some squirrel meat in their freezer, but if you are squeamish about eating squirrel, you cannot get it, the dumplings given below may be cooked in a rich chicken broth, for chicken and dumplings. When preparing dressed squirrels, Camille Bell soaks them overnight in salt water to get the blood out, then cooks them with salt and water in a pressure cooker until very tender. She strips the meat off the bones, returns it to the pot, and cooks the dumplings in the broth. These are noodle-type dumplings.

Following are some of Mrs. Bell's recipes, many of them handed down. Alec is her aunt, Tennessee Bacon is Jim Bell's grandmother and Maude Griffitts is his great-grandmother.

AUNT ALEC'S DUMPLINGS HANDS DOWN FROM GREAT-AUNT ROSIE

3 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-2 cup Crisco
2-3 cup plus 1 tablespoon water (or part broth from squirrel or chicken)

1. Place flour and salt in a bowl; toss to combine. Cut in Crisco, using a fork or 2 knives. Mix in liquid.
2. Turn out lightly floured board. Roll thin and cut into 1-inch wide, 5-inch strips. Put into the chicken or squirrel pot and cook until tender, about 10 to 12 minutes.

CAMILLE BELL'S STEAMED VEGETABLES

salt
2 pounds green beans, preferably Kentucky Wonder, cleaned
2 pounds potatoes, cut into halves or large chunks
2 pounds carrots, cleaned and cut in half
2 pounds onions, quartered
2 pounds small okra
bacon grease, optional
Place about 2 inches of water in a large, deep pan that can be covered tightly. Place green beans about 2 inches high in the bottom. Sprinkle each layer of vegetables with salt as you add the vegetables. Add potatoes, carrots and onions in order given, about 2 inches of each, and finally, okra. Bring to a boil, cover tightly, turn the heat down to the very lowest possible heat and steam for 6 hours. Do not stir.

"It's always better the second day," said Camille Bell. "And if your family gets together late, you can pour in more water." If seasoning the vegetables with a little bacon grease, use less salt initially. But cooked this way, the vegetables will have a wonderful flavor of their own. Crumble skillet corn bread into each bowl of vegetables. Makes 4 servings, with some leftovers.

CAMILLE BELL'S SWEET POTATO CASSEROLE

3 cups mashed cooked sweet potatoes
1 cup sugar
1-2 cup melted butter
2 eggs, well beaten
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
1-3 cup milk

Combine sweet potatoes, sugar, butter, eggs, vanilla and milk; mix well. Spoon into a 2-quart casserole and cover with topping given below. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Makes 8 servings.

SWEET POTATO TOPPING

1-2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1-4 cup all-purpose flour
1-2 teaspoons melted butter
1-2 cup chopped pecans
Combine all ingredients, mixing at 425 degrees well; sprinkle on top of sweet potato mixture before baking.

TENNESSEE BACON'S STACK CAKE

For filling:
1 pound dried apples
1-4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
2 cups sugar

For cake:
1-2 cup butter/milk
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup solid vegetable shortening
2-1/2 cups sugar
2 eggs
2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract
6-8 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt

1. Soak apples to cover in water overnight. Cook until mushy, about 1 hour. Add salt, cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves and sugar to the apples while hot. (You may cook the apples several days ahead of the time you make the cake.) Have this mixture hot and ready when you get ready to stack the cake.

2. Combine buttermilk, baking soda and baking powder in small bowl and stir lightly.
3. In a large bowl, cream together shortening and sugar. Add eggs and vanilla and beat well. Add milk mixture and stir well.
4. Sift together flour and salt and stir into mixture. Add enough flour to make dough easy to handle. Divide dough into 7 equal portions.

Pat each portion of dough into spread using the back of a spoon into waxed-paper-lined 9-inch pans. Bake each cake, which will resemble a large sugar cookie, for 10 minutes at 425 degrees.
5. Stack layers of cake, spreading each with the hot apple mixture. Let cake stand at least 24 hours before cutting.

MAUDE GRIFFITTS' HICKORY NUT CAKE

1-2 cup butter
1-2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1-4 teaspoon salt
3-4 cup milk
1 cup finely chopped hickory nuts.
4 eggs whites, stiffly beaten
2 cups heavy cream, whipped and lightly sweetened additional chopped hickory nuts
1. Cream together butter, sugar and vanilla until fluffy.
2. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt; add alternately with milk to creamed mixture. Beat until smooth. Fold in nuts and egg whites. Pour into 2 greased 8-inch pans.
3. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes. Cool on racks. For best flavor, cover cake and let stand a day before serving.
4. Just before serving, put layers together and frost with sweetened whipped cream. Sprinkle chopped hickory nuts over top.

HAM LOAF

4 cups (about) lightly packed coarsely ground cooked ham
1 cup firmly packed finely ground pork
1 large egg
2-3rd cup milk
6 medium scallions, finely chopped
1 cup parsley leaves, finely chopped
Glace, see recipe
Thoroughly mix together ham, pork, unbeat egg, milk, scallion and parsley. In a foil-lined shallow pan form meat mixture into an 8- by 4-inch loaf. Brush with a little of the Glaze. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 45 minutes. Siphon off fat. Cup foil around loaf and pour remaining Glaze over top; bake about 15 minutes longer. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. Makes 8 to 10 servings.
Glaze: Stir together to blend 1-3rd cup firmly packed light brown sugar, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, 2 tablespoons cider vinegar and 1 tablespoon medium sherry.

Tandoori cuisine reaches out to New World

By ROSE DOSTI
The Los Angeles Times

Tandoori. The name evokes exotic images of brilliantly colored diaphanous silks, gold and silver filigree, rubies and diamonds. Dancing girls, elephants and flying carpets. But if you know what tandoori really means, it would make you smelt the air for the wonderful aromas of baked bread and barbecued chicken.

The tandoor, an oven in which an entire category of foods originating in the North West frontier of India (now in Pakistan) are cooked, is probably one of the oldest ovens known to man. However, versions of the 4,000-year-old tandoor have traveled throughout the Near East, Middle East and North Africa.

The tandoor is a free-standing (or sometimes built-in) clay pit about five feet deep. The concentration of heat circulating in its cavity (the opening is about 1 1/2 feet) requires foods to cook vertically, or against the red-hot sides of the oven, which may explain the invention of long skewers and the creation of kebabs. Meat—fish or poultry—is marinated and threaded on long metal skewers that are then plunged vertically into the pit where they sear to tender perfection.

If you are wondering if tandoori can be prepared at home, the answer, happily, is yes. Tandoori is a great dish for parties since much of the preparation can be done ahead.

The choice of chicken cuts to use is up to the cook. The chicken marinates in a spiced yogurt mixture that includes a spice blend known as deghi mirch, which provides the red coloring in tandoori meats. This blend and other Indian spices can be purchased at most Middle Eastern or Indian grocery stores.

The marinating takes several hours or, preferably, can be done overnight. The chicken is then baked at highest oven heat until tender. And tender it will be.

Starting off, a tandoori meal is usually tikka, an appetizer made by skewering yogurt-marinated cubed chicken or fillets of chicken and cooking them as you would tandoori chicken.

The naan, which is brushed with a yogurt-and-poppy seed-mixture before baking, is one of several breads made in tandoori ovens. The bread is puffy, light and airy, and dries rather quickly, so it is best eaten fresh from the oven. It, too, is easily adapted for the home oven. Highest possible heat on the oven and close watching are required.

Anand put together a complete tandoori menu.

For a tandoori meal, start with tikka, the skewered chicken-cube appetizer. Tikka is usually dipped in chutney of various types. Anand shared a recipe for chutney made with cilantro and mint leaves.

The Tandoori Chicken is accompanied by vegetable dishes common to a party with a North Indian tandoori meal.

In one recipe, spinach is tossed with a white cheese called paneer, usually made at home. Commercially produced paneer is not available in local markets. However, feta cheese is a suitable substitute. A cauliflower-and-potato dish, spiced with chili powder, ginger, cumin and turmeric also is a popular side dish for Tandoori Chicken.

TANDOORI MENU

- Tandoori Chicken
 - Chicken Tikkas
 - Naan (Tandoori Bread)
 - Palak Paneer (Spinach and Cheese)
 - Aloo Gobi (Cauliflower and Potato)
 - Chutney
 - Yogurt
 - Papadam (Wafers)
 - Gulab Jamun (Fried Milk Balls)
 - Phir
 - Indian tea
- Indian tea, which are bread wafers, are sometimes available in frozen or packaged form at some Middle Eastern or Indian grocery stores.

TANDOORI CHICKEN

- 4 pounds breasts and thighs
- 1/2 cup yogurt
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons oil
- Salt
- 1 tablespoon ground cumin
- 1 tablespoon ground coriander
- 1 tablespoon paprika (deghi mirch)

- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 teaspoon onion powder
- 1 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1 red onion, sliced
- 1 tomato, sliced
- 1 lemon, cut into wedges
- 1 sprig parsley

Place chicken pieces in shallow pan. Combine yogurt, lemon juice, oil, salt, cumin, coriander, paprika, garlic powder, onion powder, ginger, onion, tomato, lemon and parsley. Blend well. Pour over chicken pieces and turn to coat well with marinade. Cover and let marinate in refrigerator overnight.

Place chicken pieces in single layer on baking pan, shaking off excess marinade. Bake or broil 35 to 40 minutes, turning once. Makes 8 to 12 servings.

CHICKEN TIKKAS

- 2 pounds boneless chicken breasts and fillets
- 2 to 3 tablespoons yogurt
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika (deghi mirch)
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- Salt

Cut boneless chicken into cubes and place in bowl. Combine yogurt, lemon juice, paprika, garlic powder, ginger and season to taste with salt. Pour over chicken. Turn chicken to coat well with marinade.

Place on baking pan, shaking off excess marinade. Bake or broil 10 to 12 minutes, turning once, basting with melted butter to keep moist. Makes 12 appetizer servings.

NAAN (Tandoori Bread)

- 4 cups flour
 - 1 teaspoon sugar
 - Dash salt
 - 2 eggs
 - 1 cup milk
 - Dash baking soda
 - Water
 - 1/2 cup yogurt
 - 1 teaspoon black caraway seeds (kahuni)
 - 1/2 teaspoon white poppy seeds (kajun)
- Mix flour, sugar and salt in large bowl. Make well in center. Slightly mix eggs, milk and soda in small bowl. Pour into well. Mix in flour, adding about 1-3 cup water as needed to make soft dough. Knead until dough is soft and pliable.

Pinch off 8 equal pieces of dough. Roll out onto floured board. Continue with other pieces of dough. Place on baking sheet. Blend together yogurt, black caraway seeds and white poppy seeds. Brush over dough. Place in middle rack of oven and bake at 500 degrees or broil 5 minutes. Makes 8 loaves.

PALAK PANEER

- (Spinach and Cheese)
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 (1-inch) piece ginger root, minced
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- Oil
- 2 pounds spinach, cleaned and chopped
- 1/2 feta cheese, cubed
- Saute onion, ginger root and garlic

Meanwhile, heat about 1-4 cup oil in another skillet and add cheese cubes. Cook until lightly browned on all sides. Remove from skillet and drain. Toss with spinach mixture. Makes about 8 servings.

Camille Bell, 28, helps out at the pecan plant every day after putting in a full day working school, at the height of the fall season, the plant operates 24 hours a day.

"This is a very personal business. They address mail-order labels by hand. About competitors in Chicago, Jim Bell said, "I don't think that anybody in Chicago is going to be as nice to them as somebody in Nevada, Missouri. I don't think they'd get the kind of service they would get from somebody in Nevada, Missouri. And I know if I have a complaint they aren't going to get the kind of sympathy they would here." For a catalog, write to: Midwest Pecan Co. Inc., 1 Pecan Plaza, Nevada, Mo. 64772.

Hospitality, too, is a matter of pride. Camille Bell, a curly headed beauty of energy, once baked eight coconut pound cakes and lined them up on eight foil-covered pieces of cardboard to return the favors of some folks who helped with hauling cheres on the farm.

from Kansas City to St. Louis comes through here about once a month to eat Camille's fried chicken."

The Bells live in a county where formal invitations were issued to hangings around the turn of the century, a county where Jesse James and the Younger brothers lived for a good spell.

Jim Bell is fond of making connections and comparisons between Missouri and his own rural, southern heritage. Here in Barton County, which bordered the free state of Kansas, he said, "there are still a lot of feelings that people have toward Kansas because of the Civil War, especially in this town. People here remember the Civil War."

"Pecans are a southern crop, and they grow in Missouri," Jim Bell said. "A lot of people don't know they grow here. "In my opinion, the pecan tree is one of the three prettiest trees," he said, "driving along a country road bordering some of his land. 'Just look at that one out there by itself.' His other favorites: sugar maples and Shagbark hickory trees."

Camille Bell, who spent summers in Caruthersville and the rest of the year in Florida, said, "My parents really do eat pecans in everything. I had never seen Jell-O in my life without pecans, until I came out here."

She puts on cooking demonstrations to promote pecans and enthusiastically reports that a pecan has seven to nine calories, about the same as a lifesaver. She can tell you the pecan's nutrient content, too: high in E, D, C and potassium.

"In my opinion, it's a very typical southern meal," she said, "Appalachian, really." That means "sweet potatoes four or five times a week." And added Camille Bell,

"steamed vegetables and corn bread some nights for supper. Salt and pepper and lard were the staples."

Camille Bell partly fries and then partly steams her chicken in a small amount of lard, after flouring the pieces in a paper sack. She cooks pork chops in much the same fashion.

The Bells keep some squirrel meat in their freezer, but if you are squeamish about eating squirrel or cannot get any, the dumplings given below may be cooked in a rich chicken broth, for chicken and dumplings. When preparing dressed squirrels, Camille Bell soaks them overnight in salt water to get the blood out, then cooks them down with salt and water in a pressure cooker until very tender. She strips the meat off the bones, returns it to the pot and cooks the dumplings in the broth. These are noodle-type dumplings.

Following are some of Mrs. Bell's recipes, many of them handed down. Alean is her aunt, Tennessee Bacon is Jim Bell's grandmother and Maude Griffitts is his great-great-grandmother.

AUNT ALEAN'S DUMPLINGS HANDED DOWN FROM GREAT-AUNT ROSIE

3 cups mashed cooked sweet potatoes
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup melted butter
2 eggs, well beaten
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
1-3 cup milk
Combine sweet potatoes, sugar, butter, eggs, vanilla and milk; mix well. Spoon into a 2-quart casserole and cover with topping given below. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Makes 8 servings.

SWEET POTATO TOPPING

1-2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1-4 cup all-purpose flour
2-1/2 teaspoons melted butter
1-2 cup chopped pecans
Combine all ingredients, mixing well; sprinkle on top of sweet potato mixture before baking.

CAMILLE BELL'S STEAMED VEGETABLES

1/2 teaspoon salt
2 pounds green beans, preferably Kentucky Wonder, cleaned
2 pounds potatoes, cut into halves or large chunks
2 pounds carrots, cleaned and cut in half
2 pounds onions, cleaned
2 pounds small okra
bacon grease, optional
Place about 2 inches of water in a large, deep pan that can be covered tightly. Place green beans about 2 inches high in bottom. Sprinkle each layer of vegetables with salt as you add the vegetables. Add potatoes, carrots and onions in order given, about 2 inches of each, and finally, okra. Bring to a boil, cover tightly, turn the heat down to the very lowest possible heat and steam for 6 hours. Do not stir.

"It's always better the second day," said Camille Bell. "And if your family gets together late, you can pour in more water — if seasoning the vegetables with a little bacon grease, use less salt initially. But cooked this way, the vegetables will have a wonderful flavor of their own. Crumble skillet corn bread into each bowl of vegetables. Makes 4 servings, with some leftovers.

CAMILLE BELL'S SWEET POTATO CASSEROLE

3 cups mashed cooked sweet potatoes
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup melted butter
2 eggs, well beaten
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
1-3 cup milk
Combine sweet potatoes, sugar, butter, eggs, vanilla and milk; mix well. Spoon into a 2-quart casserole and cover with topping given below. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Makes 8 servings.

TENNESSEE BACON'S STACK CAKE

For filling:
1 pound dried apples
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon cloves
2 cups sugar
For cake:
1/2 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup solid vegetable shortening
2 1/2 cups sugar
2 eggs
2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract
6-8 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1. Soak apples to cover in water overnight. Cook until mushy, about 1 hour. Add salt, cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves and sugar to the apples while still hot. "You may cook the apples several days ahead of the time you make the cake." Have this mixture hot and ready when you get ready to stack the cake.
2. Combine buttermilk, baking soda and baking powder in small bowl and stir lightly.
3. In a large bowl, cream together shortening and sugar. Add eggs and vanilla and beat well. Add milk mixture and stir well.
4. Sift together flour and salt and stir into mixture. Add enough flour to make dough easy to handle. Divide dough into 7 equal portions. Pat each portion of dough or spread using the back of a spoon — into waxed paper-lined 8-inch pans.
5. Bake each cake, which will resemble a large sugar cookie, for 10 minutes at 425 degrees.
6. Stack layers of cake, spreading each with the hot apple mixture. Let cake stand at least 24 hours before cutting.

MAUDE GRIFFITTS' HICKORY NUT CAKE

1-2 cup butter,
1-1/2 cups sugar,
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1-1/2 teaspoon salt
3-4 cup milk
1 cup finely chopped hickory nuts
1 egg whites, stiffly beaten
2 cups heavy cream, whipped and lightly sweetened additional chopped hickory nuts
1. Cream together butter, sugar and vanilla until fluffy.
2. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt; add alternately with milk to creamed mixture. Beat until smooth. Fold in nuts and egg whites. Pour into 2 greased 8-inch pans.
3. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes. Cool on racks. For best flavor, cover cake and let stand a day before serving.
4. Just before serving, put layers together and frost with sweetened whipped cream. Sprinkle chopped hickory nuts over top.

Alain's salad uses radicchio leaves for zip

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
The Associated Press

GOURMET DINNER Alain's Salad Salmon Steaks & Potatoes Spin Peas & Carrot Puree White Chocolate Mousse

ALAIN'S SALAD
Rinse endive and radicchio leaves and dry on paper towels, keeping each variety of salad green in a separate pile. Arrange endive leaves, spin fashion, around individual salad plates. Tear radicchio into bite-size pieces and mound in center of plates. Sprinkle with crumbled Roquefort or blue cheese. Cover with parsnip and chile. At serving time, sauté with Vinaigrette Sauce — oil, vinegar, mustard, salt and pepper in the proportions you like.

HAM LOAF
4 cups (about) lightly packed coarsely ground cooked ham
1 cup firmly packed finely ground pork
1 large egg
2-3/4 cups milk
6 medium scallions, finely chopped
1 cup parsley leaves, finely chopped
Glaze, see recipe
Thoroughly mix together ham, pork, unbeat egg, milk, scallion and parsley. In a foil-lined shallow pan form meat mixture into an 8-by-4-inch loaf. Brush with a little of the Glaze. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 45 minutes. Siphon off fat. Cup foil around loaf and pour remaining Glaze over top; bake about 15 minutes longer. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. Makes 8 to 10 servings.
Glaze: Stir together to blend 3-3rd cup firmly packed light brown sugar, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, 2 tablespoons cider vinegar and 1 tablespoon medium sherry.

Tandoori cuisine reaches out to New World

By ROSE DOSTI
The Los Angeles Times

Tandoori. The name evokes exotic images of brilliantly colored phanous, gold and silver filigree, rubes and diamonds. Dancing girls, elephants and flying carpets. But if you know what tandoori really means, it would make you sniff the air for the wonderful aromas of baked bread and barbecued chicken.

The tandoor, an oven in which an entire category of foods originating in the North West frontier of India (now in Pakistan) are cooked, is probably one of the oldest ovens known to man. However, versions of the tandoor oven have traveled throughout the Near East, Middle East and North Africa.

The tandoor is a free-standing (or sometimes built-in) clay pit about five feet deep. The concentration of heat circulating in its cavity (the opening is about 1-2 feet) requires foods to cook vertically, or against the red-hot sides of the oven, which may explain the invention of long skewers and the creation of kebabs. Meat, fish or poultry is marinated and threaded on long metal skewers that are then plunged vertically into the pit where they sear to tender perfection.

If you are wondering if tandoori can be prepared at home, the answer, happily, is yes. Tandoori is a great dish for parties since much of the preparation can be done ahead.

The choice of chicken cuts to use is up to the cook. The chicken marinates in a spiced yogurt mixture that includes a spice blend known as deghi mirch, which provides the red coloring in tandoori meats. This blend and other Indian spices can be purchased at most Middle Eastern or Indian grocery stores.

The marinating takes several hours or, preferably, can be done overnight. The chicken is then baked at highest oven heat until tender. And tender it will be.

Starting off a tandoori meal is usually tikka, an appetizer made by skewering yogurt-marinated cubed chicken or filets of chicken and cooking them as you would tandoori chicken.

The naan, which is brushed with a yogurt-and-poppy seed mixture before baking, is one of several breads made in tandoori ovens. The bread is fluffy, light and airy, and dries rather quickly, so it is best eaten fresh from the oven. It, too, is easily adapted for the home oven. Highest possible heat on the oven and close watching are required.

Anand put together a complete tandoori menu.

For a tandoori meal, start with tikka, the skewered chicken-cube appetizer. Tikka is usually dipped in chutney of various types. Anand shared a recipe for chutney made with cilantro and mint leaves.

The Tandoori Chicken is accompanied by vegetable dishes commonly served with a North Indian tandoori meal.

In one recipe, spinach is tossed with a white cheese called paneer, usually made at home. Commercially produced paneer is not available in local markets. However, feta cheese is a suitable substitute. A cauliflower-and-potato dish spiced with chili powder, ginger, cum and turmeric also is a popular side dish for Tandoori Chicken.

Yogurt is an essential part of any meal.

TANDOORI MENU

- Tandoori Chicken
 - Chicken Tikkas
 - Naan (Tandoori Bread)
 - Palak Paneer (Spinach and Cheese)
 - Aloo Gobi (Cauliflower and Potato)
 - Chutney
 - Yogurt
 - Papadam (Wafers)
 - Gulab Jamun (Fried Milk Balls)
 - Phaf
 - Indian tea
- apadams, which are bread wafers, are sometimes available in frozen or packaged form at some Middle Eastern or Indian grocery stores.

TANDOORI CHICKEN

- 4 pounds breasts and thighs
- 1 1/2 cup yogurt
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 1 tablespoon ground cumin
- 1 tablespoon ground coriander
- 1 teaspoon paprika (deghi mirch)

- 1 teaspoon onion powder
 - 1 teaspoon onion powder
 - 1 teaspoon ground ginger
 - 1 red onion, sliced
 - 1 tomato, sliced
 - 1 lemon, cut into wedges
 - 1 spring parsley
- Place chicken pieces in shallow pan. Combine yogurt, lemon juice, oil, salt, cumin, coriander, paprika, garlic powder, ginger, onion, tomato, lemon and parsley. Blend well. Pour over chicken pieces and turn to coat well with marinade. Cover and let marinate in refrigerator overnight.
- Place chicken pieces in single layer on baking pan, shaking off excess marinade. Bake or broil 35 to 40 minutes, turning once. Makes 8 to 12 servings.

CHICKEN TIKKAS

- 2 pounds boneless chicken breasts and filets
 - 2 to 3 tablespoons yogurt
 - 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 - 1-2 teaspoon paprika (deghi mirch)
 - 1-2 teaspoon garlic powder
 - 1-2 teaspoon ground ginger
 - Salt
 - 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
- Cut boneless chicken into cubes and place in bowl. Combine yogurt, lemon juice, paprika, garlic powder, ginger and season to taste with salt. Pour over chicken. Turn chicken to coat well with marinade.
- Place on baking pan, shaking off excess marinade. Bake or broil 10 to 12 minutes, turning once, basting with melted butter to keep moist. Makes 12 appetizer servings.

NAAN (Tandoori Bread)

- 4 cups flour
 - 1 teaspoon sugar
 - Dash salt
 - 2 eggs
 - 1 cup milk
 - Dash baking soda
 - Water
 - 1/2 cup yogurt
 - 1 teaspoon black caraway seeds (kalunji)
 - 1 teaspoon white poppy seeds (khas-khas)
- Mix flour, sugar and salt in large bowl. Make well in center. Slightly mix eggs, milk and soda in small bowl. Pour into well. Mix in flour, adding about 1-2 cup water as needed to make soft dough. Knead until dough is soft and pliable.

Pinch off 8 equal pieces of dough. Roll out onto floured board. Continue with other pieces of dough. Place on baking sheet. Blend together yogurt, black caraway seeds and white poppy seeds. Brush over dough. Place in middle rack of oven and bake at 500 degrees or broil 5 minutes. Makes 8 loaves.

PALAK PANEER (Spinach and Cheese)

- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 (1 1/2-inch) piece ginger root, minced
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- Oil
- 2 pounds spinach, cleaned and chopped
- 1-2 feta cheese, cubed
- Saute onion, ginger root and garlic

In 2 tablespoons oil until onion is tender. Add spinach and cook over low heat about 20 to 30 minutes until tender.

Meanwhile, heat about 1-4 cup oil in another skillet and add cheese cubes. Cook until lightly browned on all sides. Remove from skillet and drain. Toss with spinach mixture. Makes about 8 servings.

Plates from famous lily go on exhibit at Sotheby's

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — One of the world's famous flower books is Redoute's "Les Liliees," with 496 magnificent plates illustrating flowers of the lily family, but only about 200 copies were printed and these now sell for about $100,000 each, I am told.

Few readers of the Earthman column are likely to enter the bidding, but the auction gallery will display the entire set from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on four days beginning next Tuesday, November 13, at 1331 York Ave. Any gardener in New York would find this his time to see the paintings. They are painted on vellum, 12 1/2 by 19 inches each. His famous set of rose paintings, the lily-plate, however, have been carefully preserved in folios (from which the individual paintings lift out easily) and Matthew Weigman of Sotheby's reports they have never been exhibited anywhere before.

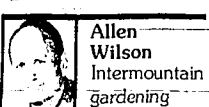

It is believed the only people who have ever seen the originals, since they were painted, were guests of the empress and her family. Sotheby's has devoted more space for exhibiting the paintings than for any other thing they have auctioned off in their history, Weigman tells me.

Another thing, the gallery has issued a catalog showing all the paintings in color, an expensive undertaking. The catalog is $40, a hefty price, but less than the $100,000 book, a rarity since its publication in 1802.

It might be worthwhile, for gardeners with huge plants of this wild Japanese Clematis to give some of their plants severe surgery in summer, so the flowers would appear from September until hard frost.

Slow down your watering habits for indoor plants during winter

Indoor houseplants require less water during the winter. As the days grow shorter and light intensity less, plants grow more slowly. This means less frequent watering.

Whenever a plant is watered, enough water should be applied so that a little runs out the bottom. If too little is applied, the soil in the bottom of the pot remains dry and few roots grow there. Fertilizer salts may also build up in the top part of the soil and cause root damage.

Autumn pruning protects trees, shrubs through cold

By EARL ARONSON
The Associated Press

Autumn is an excellent time to prune trees and shrubs to remove dead, diseased or unshapely growth to let more air and sun into their interiors.

Autumn is the best time to remove large wounds — over an inch in diameter — should be sprayed or painted with tree-wound dressing, readily available in aerosol cans. Use sharp tools and make smooth cuts, otherwise healing will be slower.

Explore the world of tea varieties for interesting way to chase chills

Few treats hit the spirits on a chilly winter afternoon like a good cup of tea.

Flavored teas are black tea with added natural or artificial flavorings, such as orange, strawberry, or cinnamon.

At the top of each branch you'll find a bud or pair of buds often larger than others and called terminal buds. New growth that will elongate the branch comes from these buds along sides of branches called lateral buds which generally produce leaves.

Plants depend considerably on what jobs you do or do not do for them. The way you start shrubs and trees will determine how they will look and function for the long time. Trim so you help the plant develop to its greatest potential and natural appearance.

Large wounds — over an inch in diameter — should be sprayed or painted with tree-wound dressing, readily available in aerosol cans. Use sharp tools and make smooth cuts, otherwise healing will be slower.

Western decor working its way into contemporary society

By BARBARA MAYER
The Associated Press

A recent informal survey of New York City restaurants turned up at least five with menus and decor based on the American West. This fall, an American furniture company introduced a 24-piece collection based on the West, and Tex-Mex cooking has been identified as one of the hottest trends in fast food.

"American Country West," a new decorating and source book. The author, who has been identified with American country decorating, about which she wrote several books, sees a difference between country and Western decorating.

are rough as in adobe, stucco and animal hides and baskets," she said. Even the accessories are outside. Andlers are often mounted over the fireplace or exterior of the house; rough animal hides may be slung over the arm of a sofa, placed on the floor or hung on the walls and American Indian woven rugs, pottery and baskets are often decorative elements.

the American West has two major sources. The distinctive color palette was popularized by the use of desert colors in makeup. The palette which includes white, beige and gold, turquoise and red "just looks right to use now," he said.

Three years ago, people in the west said country was dead, but sales figures didn't bear the experts out. It was one of the few times that the tastemakers said "forget it" and it went on despite what they said, according to Bishop.

We contacted Harriet Himmelman, known as "handiwoman" on the TV programs "AM Philadelphia" and "AM Los Angeles. Her reply to the query was an emphatic "no." She went on:

It should include a screwdriver, combination saw, combination square, slip-joint pliers, needle-nose pliers, adjustable wrench, vice-grip pliers, hammer, staple gun, nuts, bolts, sandpaper, steel wool, screws and nails. If the directions call for a well-ventilated room, be extra sure-it-is-well-ventilated. To avoid accidents, pull back long hair or wear a cap. Don sneakers and old sweatshirt and trousers when necessary. These tips may sound fundamental, but hundreds of thousands of accidents occur every year by people who ignore them because they don't sound important or there isn't time to take a few extra minutes to do them.

kitchen sink, use the aforementioned petroleum jelly to coat the rim of the plunger and thus create a good seal. Build up your confidence by starting on small projects. Georgia Tech leads first collegiate cage poll

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech's No. 1 ranking in the Associated Press preseason college basketball poll is a double-edged sword because "a tremendous amount of pressure" comes with the recognition. Yellow Jackets coach Bobby Cremins said Tuesday.

Georgia Tech got 28 first-place votes and 1,192 points from the nationwide panel of 63 sports writers and broadcasters to edge North Carolina to the top spot. Georgia Tech beat the Tar Heels 57-54 in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament championship game last season.

"It's a great honor, but I'm concerned about the high expectations," Cremins said after the poll was announced Tuesday.

"To be honest, right now I don't know if we can live up to it. It puts a tremendous amount of pressure on us. My expectations are usually very high, but they can't have higher than ones that have been put upon us," he said.

"I just hope we can deal with it."

Georgia Tech and North Carolina were among five ACC teams placed in the Top Twenty. In third place was Michigan, one of two Big Ten teams in the Top Ten.

The Tar Heels got 13 first-place votes and 1,148 points. Michigan had 13 first-place votes and 1,141 points.

The No. 4 team was Syracuse, one of two Big East teams in the Top Ten, with 936 points. No. 5 was Kansas, with four first-place votes and 821 points.

The ACC's Duke got two first-place votes and 911 points for the sixth-place ranking, and Illinois of the Big Ten got one first-place vote and 847 points for seventh place.

Georgetown of the Big East, last year's national runner-up, got one first-place vote and 824 points for eighth; No. 9 Louisville of the Metro Conference had 687; and Auburn of the Southeastern Conference rounded out the Top Ten with 670.

Last year's national champion, Villanova, was not ranked, nor was St. John's, a fellow Big East school and Final Four participant. Both teams lost several key players to graduation.

Villanova also was unranked going into the NCAA tournament last season.

Georgetown has been in the NCAA championship game three of the last four years, but now faces life without star center Patrick Ewing. The Hoyas were the top team in last year's preseason poll and held that spot for all but five weeks of the season.

The SEC is the only other conference to have more than two teams in the Top Twenty, with Kentucky ranked 11th and Louisiana State 14th. Kentucky will begin the season with a new coach, Eddie Sutton.

Notre Dame, the only independent team in the Top Twenty, was one of seven teams to receive first-place votes. The Irish finished 12th and received one vote for the top spot.

Rounding out the Top Twenty behind Notre Dame were Oklahoma; Memphis State, a Final Four team last year; Alabama-Birmingham; North Carolina State of the ACC; Nevada-Las Vegas; and, tied for 18th, Maryland of the ACC and Navy, schools 25 miles apart.

Seven teams in the rankings — Louisville, Auburn, Kentucky, Notre Dame, Alabama-Birmingham, Maryland and Navy — were not ranked in the final poll last season, which was taken before the NCAA tournament.

Besides the Big East and Big Ten, two other conferences placed two teams in the rankings: the Big Eight with Kansas and Oklahoma; and the Metro with Louisville and Memphis State.

Gooding moves into tournament finals

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

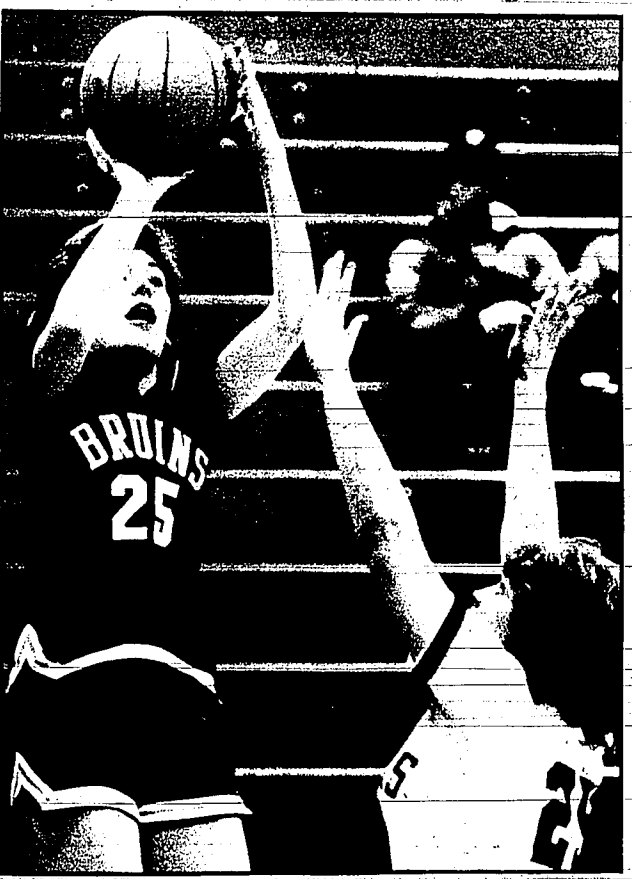

JEROME — The Gooding Senators clawed back from an early 10-point deficit to become the first to reach the finals of the Magic Valley Invitational Tournament by beating Twin Falls 44-37 Tuesday night.

In other action, Buhl downed Wood River 51-23 while Burley slipped past Valley 41-39. Action resumes at 6:30 p.m. today with Jerome meeting Valley while undefeated Minico and Burley collide at 8 p.m. for the right to advance against Gooding in Thursday's night championship battle.

The Bruins scored the 14-point, first-half flurry of Laura McQueen to pull away from an eight-all tie. The lead crested at 22-12 early in the second quarter but the Senators' Lisa Graves canned consecutive three-pointers and the Bruin lead was reduced to 21-18 at intermission.

The second half saw Gooding tighten its 2-3 zone as the Bruins consistently refused the perimeter shot. With 3:55 remaining in the third Gooding took the lead for good on an inside shot by Joyce Jacobson.

"I can't believe Twin Falls wouldn't shoot from outside," said Jolene Toone, Gooding Coach. "We just dropped back to prevent their inside scoring."

Free agents should find owners tight with salary offers

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball's largest group of free agents had the opportunity to negotiate with any team starting Tuesday amid indications that club owners will hold the line on big salaries and long-term contracts.

Eleven players beat the Monday midnight deadline, bringing the total to 28, the biggest number to file since the process began in 1976.

As part of new labor contract reached in August, this marks the first year that players do not have to go through a re-entry draft, which limited each free agent's dealings to 13 teams.

Such teams as the Kansas City Royals, Texas Rangers, Cleveland Indians, Philadelphia Phillies, Los Angeles Dodgers, Montreal Expos, Chicago Cubs, Houston Astros and even the New York Yankees, to a smaller degree, have claimed they presently have no plans to enter the free agent market.

The last 11 players to file included Hal McRae, veteran designated hitter for the top champion Royals, and infielder Bobby Grich of California. The others were infielders Dickie Thon of Houston, Tony Perez of Cleveland, Ivan DeJesus of St. Louis, Indians' outfielder, Benny Ayala, and pitchers Bruce Kison of Boston, Bart Johnson of the White Sox, Marly Byström of the Yankees, Mike Norris and Tommy John of Oakland.

The biggest prize is slugger outfielder Kirk Gibson, who made $665,000 last season and opted for free agency when the Tigers offered him a three-year deal.

The three-year offer was a departure from recent years for the Tigers, who have given long-term contracts to second baseman Lou Whitaker, shortstop Alan Trammell, outfielder Cal Lemon and pitchers Jack Morris and Dan Petry.

Tigers General Manager Bill Lajoie said his club is trying to resign Gibson and third baseman Tom Brookens, but otherwise would stay clear of free agents.

"The status is that Kirk is looking to other clubs," Lajoie said. "The difference is the length of the contract. We don't want to commit ourselves to something long-term. That's the stumbling block. It has nothing to do with the player — it's economics."

Dan Fehr, acting executive director of the Major League Players Association, is wary about the owners adopting a tougher policy on free agents.

"There's a new (free agent) system in effect now, and it's too early to tell if the owners are attempting to destroy it," he said. "There certainly appears to be a 'scratch my back, I'll scratch yours' approach here. If this becomes a pattern that influences the free agent market, then I'd have to say we have a problem."

California relief pitcher Donnie Moore became one of the top free agents when the Angels, who shelled out big money-long contracts in the past, offered him a three-year contract.

George Steinbrenner, the Yankees owner, said, "This isn't collusion or anything remotely like that. It's just a matter of everybody getting disgusted with the way they've been conducting business, and I'm as guilty as anyone."

"You're still going to see the top players like a Todd Murray or a Ricky Henderson for instance, getting top dollar. But it's the huge, stupid contracts that the fringe players got that put us in the mess we're in now."

Dick Baksterson, Mariners' vice president, isn't impressed by the available free agents this year.

"The quality out there is not the quality there was last year or in the past," he said.

However, Ken Harrison, the White Sox vice general manager, said, "The White Sox are not afraid to spend a buck. I don't agree with clubs that have taken themselves out of the free-agent market. I don't believe in painting yourself into a corner. If someone is available we want to be going to go after them."

"That's what free agency is there for; it's a tool."

USOC condemns Goodwill games

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Olympic Committee's refusal to sanction the 1986 Goodwill Games in Moscow stems from a "family squabble" and concerns about amateur sports funding, the head of the USOC said Tuesday.

Gen. George Miller, secretary general for the USOC, said fund raising by the Games' sponsor, Turner Broadcasting System, would hurt the USOC's fund-raising efforts.

"Whatever goes off the top for the Goodwill Games to Turner ... is not going to be available potential revenues for the United States Olympic Committee," he said. "There's no assurance we'd get them, but there is an assurance that once they're gone, they won't be available. That's a chief concern of mine."

Miller was at the Research Triangle Park to look over the facilities that will be used for the 1987 U.S. Olympic Festival, scheduled for July 15-26. The festival is expected to attract nearly 1,000 athletes in 34 sports.

Miller's comments came one day after he said the USOC would not sanction participation by American athletes in the Goodwill Games. The statement was issued in response to a report in the Nov. 6 issue of Variety magazine that said the USOC endorsed the event.

"That particular report in Variety magazine has caused me some problems in the marketplace. There is not a bottomless pit of sports advertising money in this country," Miller said.

"One of the chief problems these games are causing us is Turner Broadcasting ... is going to have to raise money. ... So it has to be made perfectly clear that it is an enterprise that the Turner people are conducting and we're not sponsoring it nor are we endorsing it," Miller said.

An "internal problem" for the USOC is the involvement of The Athletic Congress in the Goodwill Games and the interpretation of the 1978 Amateur Sports Act, said Miller and Dr. LeRoy Walker, president of TAC. The act divided the responsibility of amateur sports in the United States into national governing bodies — including TAC, which oversees track and field in this country.

The executive committee of the USOC is scheduled to meet in early February 1986 to discuss the problem, Miller said.

"If it had not been for TAC's ability to work with the Soviets, Turner Broadcasting ... would be acting as a coordinator of amateur sports for an international event, which seems to me to fly in the face of the Amateur Sports Act," Miller said.

Miller said USOC members differ over who is responsible to coordinate such multi-sport international events such as the Goodwill Games.

"There are some in the USOC," Miller said, "who would contend that it is in fact the responsibility of the USOC. There are others who would contend that it's the responsibility of the national governing bodies."

"That is an in-house problem that the USOC and its membership will sort out in the coming months," he said.

"TAC is getting $5.4 million to coordinate the Games, which are expected to draw 5,000 athletes from 50 countries — including 500 to 600 from the United States.

"That's misleading," Walker said. "What they set aside was $5.4 million for us to coordinate this to get 18 governing bodies and all their teams and all their expenses and all their per diem ..."

Walker said that "whatever is happening internally, we hope the committee ... will finally resolve it so that we don't have two camps interpreting the Amateur Sports Act differently in terms of the role of the USOC."

"I think we will settle that internally before this (the Goodwill Games) comes up again because Ted Turner is doing it this time ... but it could be done by anybody who wants to make a television show," he said.

"TAC's position has been to respond to the Soviet Union's request that we help coordinate the governing bodies and the governing bodies have agreed to that," Walker said.

Knicks brake 20-game skid

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookie Patrick Ewing scored 25 points Tuesday night as the New York Knicks snapped a two-season, 20-game losing streak with a 103-93 victory over the winless Phoenix Suns.

The Knicks, winless in eight previous games this season, had moved within four losses of the NBA record of 21 straight, set by Cleveland in 1982.

The Knicks, who scored more than 100 points for only the second time this season, earned a standing ovation from a crowd of 12,220, the smallest at Madison Square Garden in the season's weekday game of the season. The crowd had ridiculed the Knicks with catcalls throughout the ragged contest.

The Suns, now the only team in the NBA without a victory, are 0-8, the worst start in their 18-year history.

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Lewis Lloyd scored 25 points and converted a pair of key plays in the final four minutes to lead the Rockets to a 127-119 National Basketball Association victory over the Denver Nuggets Tuesday night.

It was Houston's fifth consecutive victory and put the 7-2 Rockets one game ahead of the 6-2 Nuggets in the NBA's Midwest Division.

The Rockets moved to a 120-110 lead with 2:22 to play after Robert Reid sank two free throws. But a pair of Alex English free throws and two consecutive three-point baskets by Mike Evans cut the lead to 120-118 with 1:21 left.

Lloyd brought the Rockets back within 108-106 to free throw, and Akeem Olajuwon hit a basket to put the Rockets back in control. With 1:11 to play, Olajuwon hit an inbound and Lloyd stole the ensuing inbounds pass and sampled.

Ralph Sampson, who fouled out of the game with 23 seconds to play, scored 23 points and Olajuwon had 20. Their performance helped nullified a 36-point show by Denver's English and 31 points by Lafayette Leaver.

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Reserve forward Tony Campbell hit a short jumper with 22 seconds left in overtime to lift the Detroit Pistons to a 124-122 National Basketball Association victory over the Washington Bullets Tuesday night.

The Pistons, 7-3, who came from 15 points down in the fourth quarter, were paced by guard Isiah Thomas with 32 points and center Bill Laimbeer with 27.

Washington, losers of six straight contests, fell to 2-6.

Utah State grid coach resigns

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Chris Pella has resigned as football coach of Utah State University, an official confirmed today.

Pella informed athletic director Rod Tweller of the decision and submitted a letter of resignation to USU President Stanford Gazler, said Chris Brown of the sports information office.

Pella, in his third year as USU coach, has a record of 8-24, including 2-8 this season.

The Aggies of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association have lost seven games in a row, including a 44-0 defeat at home Saturday to Brigham Young University.

USU has a bye this week and closes out the 1985 season at New Mexico State Nov. 23.

Perez surrenders roster spot

CINCINNATI (AP) — For the second year in a row, Cincinnati Reds veteran Tony Perez has agreed to surrender his spot on the Reds' winter roster so the team can protect a younger player. The Reds say, however, that won't prevent them from re-signing Perez for 1986.

"Hopefully — and I have no reason to believe otherwise — Tony will sign with the Reds long before spring training," said Roven Katz, his Cincinnati lawyer.

At the request of the Reds, the 43-year-old Perez declared himself a free agent Monday so the team can protect a younger player from being plucked by other major-league teams. Perez's removal from the 40-man winter-roster allows the Reds to place a younger player in his place on the roster.

Lefty says 'don't call me Lefty'

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — The Maryland basketball coach complained when the Atlantic Coast Conference media guide repeatedly called him "Lefty," but he says he's not trying to dump the nickname either.

Charles G. Driesell, known to fans, friends and sports writers for years as Lefty, said Monday he thinks constant use of a nickname is disrespectful for a 53-year-old coach with 502 victories.

Driesell, who has headed the Maryland basketball team for 16 years, said the ACC media guide used Lefty "about 25 times."

"Instead of Lefty's All-Americans, it should say Maryland's All-Americans or Coach Driesell's All-Americans," Driesell said. "I just prefer it that way."

USFL obtains TV access

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States Football League, which has been unsuccessfully seeking a network television contract, announced Tuesday it has reached agreement with RCA American Communications for satellite syndication of its games when it moves to the fall next season.

The system, which the league said was the first of its kind in professional sports, will still require the USFL to sell games to individual stations across the country. In addition, some games will continue to be carried by ESPN cable.

But league spokesman Bob Rose said Tuesday: "The decision has been made that we won't be on a major network."

The satellite to be used is scheduled to be launched Nov. 27 and will also be used by NBC to distribute its network programs.

Turner Broadcasting grid slate

ATLANTA (AP) — Turner Broadcasting will televise three football games on Nov. 23, including Minnesota at Iowa and Colorado State at Miami, Fla.

The Minnesota-Iowa game will be syndicated by Turner Network Television at 12:30 p.m. EST. Colorado State-Miami will be seen on WTBS, the Atlanta super station, at 8 p.m. EST.

WTBS also will show a Southeastern Conference game in the early afternoon time slot. The contest will be announced later this week.

This Saturday, WTBS will show Mississippi-Tennessee at noon EST, and Stanford-Arizona at 8 p.m. EST, while TNT will syndicate Michigan-Minnesota at 12:30 p.m. EST.

ESPN to air Pitt-Penn State

BRISTOL, Conn. (AP) — ESPN announced Tuesday that it will televise Penn State's college football game at Pittsburgh Nov. 23.

The game will begin at 7:45 p.m. EST. The cable network said — assuming ABC decides not to televise the contest.

If ABC, which has first choice of games involving College-Football Association teams, shows Penn State-Pitt, the game will begin at 3:30 p.m. EST.

ABC is expected to televise Nebraska-at-Oklahoma on Nov. 23 but will not make a formal announcement until after this weekend's games.

Browns release Jefferson

CLEVELAND (AP) — Four-time All-Pro wide receiver John Jefferson, who caught only three passes for 30 yards since joining the Cleveland Browns in September, was released Tuesday by the National Football League.

Browns Coach Marty Schottenheimer made the announcement at the team's training complex in Berea — in a two-sentence statement.

"For whatever reasons, things did not work out with John Jefferson and the Browns," he said. "Any other dialogue about his release would be counterproductive at this time."

Jefferson could not be reached for comment.

The 29-year-old former Arizona State standout was playing his ninth NFL season. He had appeared in seven games for the Browns, including two starts because of a hamstring pull injury to receiver Clarence West.

Jefferson, who reportedly had a one-year contract with the Browns for more than $385,000, was obtained by the Browns for an undisclosed draft choice in a Sept. 19 trade with the Green Bay Packers. Only the day before, Jefferson ended a contract holdout and signed a pact with the Packers.

The release of Jefferson leaves the Browns roster with 44 players, one short of the limit. Schottenheimer said an announcement would be made this week on who would replace Jefferson.

NFL ponders need for 'snowball' rule

NEW YORK (AP) — The chairman of the committee that makes the National Football League rules said Tuesday that officials should have stopped play when a snowball thrown from the stands in Denver Monday night disrupted a San Francisco field-goal attempt.

"We don't believe in penalizing the crowd because we have no control over the crowd," said Tex Schramm, chairman of the NFL's rule-making competition committee. "But to me, the referee should have killed the play — right at — that — instant, regardless of what happened to the kick."

The incident occurred in the waning seconds of the first half with Denver leading San Francisco 14-3 and the 49ers' Ray Werschling poised to try a 19-yard field goal. Just as the ball was snapped, a snowball landed in front of holder Matt Cavanaugh, who fumbled the football, then threw an unsuccessful desperation pass into the end zone.

Denver went on to win the game 17-16.

"I saw the snowball explode right after I snapped the ball," said Randy Green, center on the play.

"The ball and the snowball hit right at the same time. It obviously made a difference."

However, referee Jim Tunney said afterwards that while the officials called for more security at that end of the stadium, they were powerless to penalize the crowd for unsportsmanlike conduct.

"We have no recourse in terms of a foul or to call it on the home team or the fans. There's nothing in the rule book that allows us to do that,"

But Schramm, the president of the Dallas Cowboys, said in a telephone interview: "It should be like baseball. If a ball or a piece of paper or something that can distract a player comes on the field, they immediately signal time out. We stop games for dogs. You can't have something like that — next time, it'll be a beer bottle or a whiskey bottle."

Though snowballs have been thrown before, Monday night's incident was the first where one directly affected a play. However, league officials have been concerned over the effect crowd noise could have on the outcome of a game.

Schramm is also one of the principal backers of a move to put radio receivers in helmets so that quarterbacks can communicate with their teammates amid the din. The NFL experimented with it in exhibition games this season and will try it again next year.

In fact, the NFL has a rule to combat crowd noise — officials can tell the players and coaches on the home team to try to quiet the fans. If the officials determine they're not making the best effort to do it, they can penalize the home team for unsportsmanlike conduct.

"You have one of those every week. It's just not a fair thing for the visiting team," Schramm said.

"The crowds learn they can disconnect the clubs in tough situations. Instead of going from the shotgun, a lot of teams have to go under center. In short-yardage situations on the goal line, if the offensive line can't hear, they have to watch the ball. They don't get off fast and the defensive team has the edge."

Kentucky outlines fan behavior creed

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The University of Kentucky has adopted rules beyond NCAA requirements to govern contact between athletes and boosters and to monitor players' activities.

"There is no way anyone can say they don't know what the policies of the university are," said Brad Davis, assistant sports information director.

The new rules followed an Oct. 27 story in the Lexington Herald-Leader that quoted former basketball players as saying they received cash from boosters, sold their free season tickets for as much as $1,000 each and received excessive fees for speeches, all of which would violate National Collegiate Athletic Association rules.

Kentucky athletic director Cliff Haglan distributed the new rules to all coaches and athletic staff members last week, along with a memo dated Nov. 7 that said the regulations were effective immediately.

Also, Haglan sent a letter on Oct. 27 to boosters who have contributed money to the athletic association's fund-raising program, warning them against making payments or providing gifts to players. The letter said the university might sever its ties with boosters who violate rules by dropping them from basketball or football ticket lists and prohibiting them from attending other functions.

The new rules require athletes to make written reports of speaking engagements, provide information on summer jobs and register automobiles with the university. Such reports are not required by the NCAA.

The rules also require athletes to give their free seats only to relatives or fellow students and to make sure those people occupy the designated seats. Head coaches are responsible for ensuring that rule is followed. The NCAA does not require a coach to ascertain who is sitting in players' free seats.

Kentucky head coaches also must now approve in advance any speeches by players, something not required by the NCAA, and the sports information director must keep a record of such engagements.
