Geneva clears air, Reagan informs cabinet

By TERENCE HUNT
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan told his cabinet on Friday his talks with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev "cleared the air" in superpower relations, and administration leaders from Washington to Geneva trumpeted the message that the summit "succeeded beyond any reasonable measure."
Reagan acknowledged he failed to soften Gorbachev's opposition to the "Star Wars" missile defense plan. And the administration's claim of summit success was countered by fresh criticism that there were no concrete results on nuclear arms reductions.

Reporters, Reagan also said the summit produced evidence that the Soviets want a political solution in Afghanistan.
"I told him (Gorbachev) that if we were going to make any gains at all, we should start by trying to eliminate the distrust and the suspicions that have existed so long," Reagan said.
"Out of this came an evidence that they want a solution to this problem," Reagan said, referring to what he called "quite a discussion" of Afghanistan during the first of several private fireside chats with Gorbachev.
Reagan did not give any details, but Secretary of State George Shultz, briefing the group after the president left, said progress was made on procedure and "some of the substance" involved in persuading the Soviets to withdraw their troops from Afghanistan.

Reagan also said he believes the Soviets may move soon on human rights, but declined to discuss details.
At a news conference called to give their reaction to the summit, two former arms negotiators lamented the lack of concrete arms-reduction steps.
"The two arms races are to go on," said Gerard Smith, the chief U.S. arms negotiator for the SALT II talks.
Paul Warnke, chief negotiator for the unratified SALT II agreement, said the good news from the summit is that Reagan and Gorbachev agreed to meet again. "The bad news is that not much will happen then, ground," Warnke said.

regretted the president did not agree to abide by provisions of the SALT II treaty for an additional year. The accord is due to expire on Dec. 31.
Reagan's cabinet secretaries, assembled at the White House, applauded as the president entered the Cabinet Room.
Describing two days of meetings with Gorbachev, Reagan said: "Nothing was papered over, nor did anyone try to pretend that we had done better than we had. On some (issues) we just could not quite come together."
"We have a lot of work in the meantime," the president said. "We have cleared the air and I think we have a sense of the common ground."
The president said he told Gorbachev that "words" and the Soviet leader agreed that "words are not going to be enough. It will take deeds to eliminate the suspicions, the mistrust on each other's parts."

Asked by a reporter if Gorbachev had touched on Star Wars, Reagan replied, "Not on that issue."
However, a White House official insisted that it was "an important step" and "maybe potentially significant" that the Soviets did not insist on including an explicit anti-Star Wars statement in the summit's final communiqué.
The official, who declined to be identified, suggested the omission offered hope for the nuclear arms negotiations that resume in January.
But the official conceded the Soviets might have been satisfied by "communicate."

U.S., Soviets renew air ties

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Direct commercial airline service between the United States and the Soviet Union will resume next year for the first time since President Reagan suspended flights after Poland imposed martial law in 1981, the Reagan administration announced Friday.

The civil aviation agreement "fell apart completely" on the final evening of the summit.
Officials said that the main stumbling block was economic, not diplomatic — a concern by Pan American Airways, the U.S. carrier designated in the agreement, that it would lose money on renewed air service to the Soviet Union.

An agreement to resume the flights was finalized in Moscow on Friday after months of negotiations, including intense discussions last week between U.S. and Soviet officials during the superpower summit in Geneva.
"President Reagan said he hoped his summit with General Secretary (Mikhail S.) Gorbachev would help bring the people of our nations together," Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said in a statement. "This agreement is an immediate step in that direction."
Administration officials had hoped to complete the negotiations while Reagan and Gorbachev were still in Geneva, but a senior official told reporters at the White House that

Under the agreement, Pan Am will be authorized to fly to Moscow and Leningrad, and the Soviet government airline Aeroflot will be allowed to serve New York and Washington. Each will be allowed stops in European cities and four round-trip flights per week.
Pan Am said that it plans four flights a week to the Soviet Union starting April 27 and originating from various cities. Until now, Aeroflot has been allowed only diplomatic flights to Washington.
Reagan suspended U.S. landing rights for Aeroflot on Dec. 29, 1981 after the Soviet-backed government in Poland imposed martial law in response to rising political unrest led by the Solidarity labor union. He canceled them after the Soviets shot down a South Korean airliner in 1983.

Thomas Moran's large painting of Shoshone Falls, created in 1900, now hangs in a museum in Tulsa, Okla.

If sale of prints proves successful

Oil painting of falls may come to Idaho

By ANNETTE CARY

TWIN FALLS — If the sale of prints of "Shoshone Falls on the Snake River" by Thomas Moran is successful, area residents may have a chance to see the original masterpiece.
A newly-formed committee has been awarded the rights to reproduce and sell copies of the oil painting created in 1900. Proceeds will be used for special projects of the Twin Falls Public Library. And no project seems better suited than bringing the original oil painting to the state, says Librarian Arlan Call.
Since the first recorded visit of white men to the falls in 1847, the view has been a popular subject for artists and photographers, says local historian Virginia Ricketts. But no artist as well known as Thomas Moran has ever tackled the subject.
He painted the falls in a grand way — using a canvas 6-by-11 1/2 feet.
He did not rely "upon size to suggest bigness, however," Charles A. Caffin reported in Harper's Weekly when he saw the painting in the National Academy of Design.

Rather Moran "resolutely attacked the big elements of his subject — the rock formation, like giant ramparts and bastions, and the plunge of the mass of water," Caffin wrote. "On these there is an infinity of patient labor expended, which leaves, however, no sense of niggling detail. The composition counts fairly as a whole, and possesses an impressiveness which cannot be reasonably ignored."
Moran was born in England in 1837, according to Fritiof Fryxell, who wrote "Thomas Moran; Explorer in Search of Beauty." When Moran was a boy his family emigrated to America. He was educated in Philadelphia, showing an aptitude for art at an early age. Fryxell writes.
Moran also appeared to be something of an adventurer. As a young man he visited Europe and traveled extensively through the Eastern United States, according to Fryxell.

In 1871 he made his first journey to the West to see the Yellowstone region as a guest artist with the Geological Survey of the Territories. It was his first of several tours of the West "that were to establish him as a great, imaginative artist, and the foremost interpreter of western landscapes," Fryxell writes.
In his lifetime he came to be called Thomas "Yellowstone" Moran. Today he is known as the dean of American Western painting.
While Moran was making his first trip to the Yellowstone area, Shoshone Falls was in the midst of the Idaho gold rush, Ricketts reports. Several rich placer mines were located in the Shoshone Falls amphitheater, yielding the purest gold in the territory, she writes in a brief history of the falls.
The falls later became something of a tourist attraction, when Charles Walgamott and Joe Sullaway built a tent hotel for tourists from the north canyon wall and brought tourists from the Shoshone railway station to see the falls.

Sweeping tax code changes about ready

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The House Ways and Means Committee moved toward completing work Friday night on a sweeping revision of the tax code that would reduce the top personal income tax rate from today's 50 percent to 38 percent.

Altogether, the changes already approved by the committee and those still pending would provide a modest tax cut for most individuals by boosting taxes on corporations by more than $100 billion over the next five years.

Pending before the committee meeting in closed session as scores of lobbyists clustered outside, was a package proposed by Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., that would make significant changes in President Reagan's tax overhaul plan of last May.

Unlike Reagan's proposal, Rostenkowski's package would retain the deduction for state and local tax payments, increase slightly the capital gains tax, curtail more business tax write-offs and retain tax breaks for second homes and "401(k)" retirement programs.

Rostenkowski proposed telescoping today's multiplicity of individual tax brackets into four brackets: a 15 percent tax rate for couples' taxable income up to $23,000; 25 percent for the

Tensions delay Senate progress on farm bill

By JIM DRINKARD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate labored Friday to calm partisan tensions and finish a 1985 farm bill that would give President Reagan some policy victories while spending far more than the White House wanted.
The bill emerging from under a pile of proposed amendments contained several of the key policy goals outlined by the administration when debate began a year ago, including a gradual lowering of price-support levels for key crops to make them more dependent on market forces and less on federal policy.
"This is revolutionary change no doubt about it," said Agriculture Secretary John Block. "If you look in the last 50 years, you'll never find in these farm programs where they've always gone down."

But the bill, which still would have to go to House-Senate negotiations to work out differences between the two chambers' versions, also was laden with contradictory provisions and with expensive "sweeteners" added by Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., to attract support.
The primary contradiction — and the one that most angered farm-state Democrats — was the inclusion in the bill of both a four-year freeze on income subsidy levels for grain, cotton and rice farmers and a one-year freeze that calls for cuts in the three following years.
Democrats feared the four-year version they had won in the bill in the Agriculture Committee would be abandoned by the Republican-controlled conference delegation, which was seeking to cut costs and meet White House goals of a more

Kate weakens; snow covers Northwest

Tropical Storm Kate, blew into Georgia and the Carolinas with heavy rain and winds up to 60 mph Friday, while snow and cold closed schools and roads in the Pacific Northwest.
Kate weakened from hurricane status after it departed the Florida Panhandle but still washed out bridges in its path and left tens of thousands "without power" in the Carolinas and Georgia. Schools were closed in many communities.
There was almost no visibility at times in Charleston, S.C., where 3.1 inches of rain combined with gusts up to 60 mph caused a rash of accidents.
Lowland flooding was reported along several rivers in South Carolina, including the Congaree River and the Wateree River. Flooding of roadways was reported in North Carolina's Southern Brunswick County.
Up to 4 inches of snow fell in Oregon, causing dozens of minor traffic accidents and closing schools. Blizzard-like conditions prevailed early Friday in the Columbia Gorge, where westbound lanes of Interstate 84 were closed for about three hours because of accidents. The highway Boise. Gusty winds caused blowing and drifting snow in many areas and left highways in treacherous condition.

In Seattle, temperatures in the 20s kept snow from a storm Thursday night on the ground and closed some icy roads winding up the city's hills.
Elsewhere in the state, computer monitors found ice and cuts in the snow. The Washington State Patrol reported at least five people had died in weather-related traffic accidents. Many schools were closed, as were courts in Seattle.
Rain continued through the mid-Atlantic states, the upper Ohio Valley and southern New England. Rain mixed with freezing rain, sleet and snow slickened roads in New York state and New England. Snow fell from Michigan across the upper Mississippi Valley to North Dakota, Escanaba, Mich., received 5 inches of snow in a six-hour period.

Hanford lab to develop space reactor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department on Friday picked its Hanford National Laboratory atomic reactor for use in space to power the exotic lasers, radars and particle-beam weapons for a "Star Wars" missile defense system.

The revival of work on space-based nuclear power is largely prompted by President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, as the Star Wars program is known formally. But scientists see the compact reactors someday powering better communications and air traffic control satellites, probes to the outer planets and, eventually, even a manned space flight to Mars.

To put a spacecraft in orbit around Neptune with chemical pro-pellants alone would require a flight time of more than 20 years," said Herbert Davis, planning manager for the SP-100 space reactor program at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

"A 100-kilowatt nuclear-electric propulsion system could cut this time in half."

The Energy and Defense departments and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration launched the SP-100 program in 1983 after Pentagon and NASA officials concluded that batteries and solar cells now used on most satellites cannot produce the amounts of energy needed for space-based weapons.

The Hanford lab, at Richland, Wash., was picked by Energy Secretary John Herrington over four other national laboratories vying to be the test site in the $80 million program to have a reactor ready for space use in the early 1990s.

The four other Energy Department labs that were in the competition are in Albuquerque, N.M.; Idaho Falls, Idaho; Oak Ridge, Tenn.; and at the Nevada atomic weapons test site 100 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

Most of the government's previous research into liquid metal-cooled fast reactors, the design chosen earlier this month for the program, has been conducted at Hanford and Oak Ridge.

The government spent between $3 billion and $4 billion from 1955 to 1978 on developing atomic reactors for use in space, but work on the program slowed to a trickle in the middle 1970s.

So far, the United States has put only one reactor into the heavens, the 500-watt SNAP (Systems for Nuclear Auxiliary Power) model 10A, in 1965. It worked for just 43 days before shutting down prematurely because of an electronics mishap.

But interest was reviving even before Reagan announced his plans to accelerate research for a Star Wars defensive shield against nuclear missiles. In early 1983, the House Science and Technology Committee was told that existing military communications satellites were vulnerable to electromagnetic forces from hostile nuclear explosions.

State's wheat men bag barley campaign

BOISE (AP) — Fearing a backlash from conservative lawmakers backing the ban on compulsory union membership, the Idaho State Wheat-Growers Association has temporarily dropped its campaign for legislation creating a farmer-financed Barley Commission.

By a margin of 17-13, the association agreed with Legislative Committee Chairman Bernie Brown that pressing for the amendment with its mandatory financing scheme could jeopardize the continuation of the state Wheat Commission that is also financed by a mandatory grower checkoff.

On other issues, the wheat growers backed creation of a special trade center to coordinate efforts to export Idaho produce. Officials in the Magic Valley region that idea last week, suggesting the center be located at the College of Southern Idaho.

The association called for major tax policy changes including replacing the property tax as a means of financing schools. It also urged the state income tax. The growers contended farmers have borne the brunt of mounting demands for school and local government financing.

Board shoots down Gem chancellor plan

LEWISTON (AP) — The state Board of Education voted against the concept of a chancellor system for higher education Friday, saying consideration of the system would divert attention from the need for more funding from the state Legislature.

"I don't think it's timely," board member Dennis Wheeler of Coeur d'Alene said of the chancellor system. "I think the Legislature should get its financial house in order."

Board member Robert Montgomery was the only member to vote for the proposal. Member Charles Grant of Rexburg did not attend this week's meeting at Lewis Clark State College.

The system would have given the chancellor the authority to fire the presidents, and the chancellor would have recommended to the board people to be hired for presidencies.

The system also would have transferred administrative functions of the Idaho State School for the Deaf and Blind at Gooding to the office of the state superintendent of public instruction. The school currently is administratively independent.

The state's university and college presidents currently answer directly to the eight-member education board. Under the chancellor system, the presidents would have reported to the chancellor.

Pocatello gets regulations for day care

POCATELLO (AP) — On Tuesday, Pocatello will join the ranks of local governments in Idaho with day care regulations, despite last-minute objections from some operators during Thursday night's City Council meeting.

The action comes after the Idaho Legislature has spent several recent sessions failing to agree on statewide regulations.

Pocatello's new day care law will require all operators within the city to obtain employee background checks through the police department.

Even though the regulation is seen by some local day care operators and council members as an effort to guard children against abuse, other operators attacked the measure.

According to the ordinance, any provider having six or more children under their care must be licensed by the city.

13 research efforts sought

POCATELLO (AP) — Thirteen research projects are part of a $913,000 state package which will be turned in to the National Science Foundation for funding in 1986, but that money won't come to the state unless the Legislature sets aside $300,000 in matching funds, officials say.

"If we don't get the matching funds, I'm fairly certain we won't get the money," said Edwin House, chairman of the Idaho State University Department of Biological Sciences.

Ten of the projects would be performed at the University of Idaho, while three would go to Idaho State University.

Man faces charge of poisoning cattle

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — A Dec. 5 preliminary hearing has been set for a 34-year-old Chester man charged with poisoning cattle belonging to a neighbor.

Lyle H. Soderquist was arraigned Thursday on felony charges of poisoning cattle and malicious injury to property. Magistrate Jerry Reynolds continued bond at $10,000, and Soderquist was released pending the preliminary hearing.

A report from the Fremont County sheriff's office said Soderquist was arrested after Keith Saurey of Chester reported finding four of his cattle dead in his yard.

Leaders hear outsider's views on downtown

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls has a "remarkably clean, healthy-looking downtown," but any downtown has to work harder when a new mall comes to town, said David Peterson, an urban planner who visited Twin Falls Thursday and Friday.

Curtis T. Eaton, who introduced Peterson to a small group of area business and community leaders Friday, said that several downtown leaders had felt the need for an outside view of what is right and wrong with downtown. He and Earl Faulkner had checked Peterson's credentials and invited him to town, Eaton said.

Peterson had no formal ideas to announce Friday, but did say he would prepare a report on his visit. In the meantime, he left area business leaders with some general thoughts on the subject of downtown.

There is no single answer to help downtown Twin Falls compete with the Magic Valley Mall now under construction, but there are common experiences shared by other cities that have faced similar situations, Peterson said.

Although it is certainly preferable for most downtowns not to have malls to compete with, the successful ones are those that make the best of the situation, he said.

With an increase in the shopping available, cities need to attract more people to the community and get them to stay twice as long, Peterson said.

Live music and other educational, cultural and entertainment activities can be introduced to downtowns to give people an extra reason to come downtown and to stay longer, he said.

With The Bon and J.C. Penney's leaving downtown north of the city, the impact of losing them can be diminished by using activities to make downtown just as interesting without them, until new tenants can be found for the vacant buildings, he said.

Keeping a downtown healthy usually means picking up some of the best features of an indoor mall, while playing up those characteristics alien to mall en-viroments, he said.

Malls, of course, can control the weather, he said. "There's no hot, no cold, no windy, no wet," he said.

They also offer a uniformity comforting to some shoppers. The environment is pleasant and safe, he said. Shoppers know what hours the mall will be open, and that the stores will all be operating on the same schedule, if the mall is well run. They also know how far they will have to walk, he said.

Parks says drinking led to beatings

Dog calms murder-trial testimony

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With her white poodle in her lap, Deanna Parks told a 5th District Court jury Friday how her husband battered her over a period of years until April 30, when she fatally stabbed him, as her trial for murder entered its fourth day.

Mrs. Parks, 38, is accused of second-degree murder for the death of her 62-year-old husband, Walter Louis Parks. Parks died of a single knife wound to his chest.

The defense claims she acted in self-defense, while the prosecution contends her act was intentional and with malice.

When she began testifying Friday morning, Mrs. Parks became upset and her dog, Essey, was brought into court. On its way to the witness stand, the small dog jumped on the court recorder's lap.

With the jury excluded, Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Jeff Hosking wanted the dog removed because he claimed it was prejudicial and distracting. The dog's appearance was a surprise, he added.

Defense attorney Jim Meservy said the dog calmed Mrs. Parks so the trial could proceed.

"The dog is not on trial. So what?" Meservy said.

Judge Daniel Meehl allowed the dog to remain as long as it wasn't disruptive. As Mrs. Parks testified most of the day, the dog made an occasional appearance when it stretched its head above the witness stand and licked her arms.

While on the stand, Mrs. Parks unfolded the details of her life with Walt Parks. She said she lived with him for years before they married in June 1984.

There was a relationship of good times and bad, according to the woman. She described a good man, who, when drunk, he became argumentative and sometimes beat her. "I would come to do nothing right (when he was drunk). I didn't like to see him drink. He would get out of control in things he would say and do," she said.

The beatings occurred about once a month through their years together and they argued constantly, Mrs. Parks said.

When separated for a few days

Deanna Parks, charged with second-degree murder in the death of her husband, testified Friday with her dog in her lap during the latter part of 1981, he telephoned her and asked that she meet him at the house they had been sharing, Mrs. Parks said.

"It seemed so good to hear his voice," she said. When she arrived, he was drunk and ordered her to remove her clothing.

"He took off his belt and he whipped me, and he whipped me, and he whipped me," she said, breaking into tears. "I knew when he was going to hurt me. Anything would set him off."

But she stayed with him, she said, because she loved him. "I really did."

On the night of April 30, after they had eaten dinner at their small home at 535 1/2 Main Ave. W., they argued again, Mrs. Parks said.

They had been drinking and talking about bills. He said he was going to leave and take half their savings, she said. She replied that was unfair because he had a good job and she was unemployed.

"It was the look on his face, a very hateful look, a get-even look," she said. "He was angry. ... He came at me and I struck him. I didn't mean to."

"Did you intend to kill him?" Meservy asked.

"No, I didn't," she replied.

Mrs. Parks said she had been beaten by no one else but Walt Parks. Upon Hosking's questioning, she said her former husband had hit her. "I forget about this; it had been so long ago," she added.

Two defense witnesses testified late Friday afternoon that they saw bruises on Mrs. Parks; but had not seen her husband abuse her.

Another defense witness said he had seen Walt Parks kick Mrs. Parks.

Before adjourning Friday, Hosking asked the court to sequester the jury because of a three-day wait before the trial and the risk they would hear something about the trial through the news media.

Meservy agreed about the risk, but asked instead that the jurors be ordered not to read any newspapers, Meehl denied the motion to sequester, but warned the jurors to stay away from daily newspapers and television news programs.

The trial will resume Tuesday and is expected to be completed Wednesday.

Magic Valley United Way nears $250,000 goal

By MICHAEL VANAUSDELN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley United Way has collected more than $200,000 on the way to meeting its goal of $250,000 for 1985.

"We'll get it," said UW Director Sandy Thomas. "We just have a few more districts to report in and then we should have our goal."

Campaign Chairman Jeff Harris also said he feels the goal will be reached.

"There is $40- to $50,000 out there," he said. "I expect us to reach our goal. ... A few of the districts have started late. Murtaugh, for instance, has waited some time to raise their money because it is better to reach the farmers after the harvests."

Both Harris and Thomas felt that all districts should be done with their fund-raising efforts by mid-December.

This year, the UW received several large contributions from businesses in the Magic Valley. Idaho Frozen Foods made the largest contribution at $23,000.

"This shows what can happen when administrations get involved," said Harris. "The Twin Falls Bank & Trust started it all by giving $22,400, and then Idaho Frozen Foods topped that. This was the first time Twin Falls Bank & Trust has been beat."

Harris said the amount of money raised from individual businesses has been greater than last year.

Despite the increase in donations, Harris said he feels the UW had not reached its fund-raising potential.

"What is still happening is that only 23 to 24 percent of the people being asked to give, give," he said.

The money raised is distributed according to the needs of individual districts.

"We have interviewed all the districts," Harris said. "and with the money we have collected, we hope to fill all their needs."

Businessmen go on road for education

By STEPHEN HARTGEN
Times-News managing editor

TWIN FALLS — An educated work force in Idaho is essential if Idaho is to attract business to the state, and creating it means committing more money to education, two Boise business leaders said Friday.

At a breakfast meeting with area business and education representatives, the two outlined how they were traveling the state on behalf of a new group, the Education Coalition for Idaho, seeking support for increased revenue from the Legislature to fund educational needs.

"These are solutions which will require additional taxes," said A. Randolph Ayre, vice president for legal affairs with Boise Cascade Corporation. "We see it as an investment in the future of our children."

Co. outlined a revenue proposal for an additional 1-cent sales tax, which would generate about $60 million. That would go a long way, they said, to meeting educational needs, which they estimated at about $70 million.

In response to a question, Sen. Laird Nov, R-Kimberly, said he doubted such a proposal would get enough support from Democrats, organized labor and moderate Republicans to pass.

Nov, who was in the audience, said labor and Democratic representatives consider the additional sales tax proposal "regressive" and will "push for higher income tax rates or expansion of the sales tax" on some services. "Unless we get support from that group," he said, "it will be difficult to get anything passed."

Ayre acknowledged the magnitude of the effort. He said the coalition, made up mostly of business representatives, leaned toward a sales tax as the most "equitable."

"Education is a state-wide issue," he said. "We think the tax should be broad-based." But he didn't rule out support for other revenue measures, such as increases in the income tax, if the sentiment developed that way.

Nov cautioned the group that other needs beyond educational funding were also important. He identified corrections, state employee pay, and covering a revenue shortfall — now estimated at $18 million — as particularly critical.

"The Legislature does sense strong support for funding education," Nov said. "The task is to find a fair way to fund it which will lead to a better life for all."

Ayre urged the group to try to develop an education-support team among local business leaders and legislators in the community and to approach local legislators with their concerns. "If we go downhill in education," he said, "we will not have the people to pay for it."

Nampa facility aids Alzheimer's victims

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Alzheimer's disease has struck an estimated 5,000 people in Idaho, but until last month, there was no special facility to care for them.

The Nampa Care Center, a nursing home owned by Hillhaven Corp., opened a 27-bed wing Oct. 1 just for Alzheimer patients. Director Nancy Orr said it is the only facility in Idaho specifically designed for Alzheimer victims.

Alzheimer's disease has struck between 1 to 2 million people age 65 or older. It is a brain cell disorder, with no known cause or cure.

The disease starts with short-term memory loss and progresses to apathy, social withdrawal, disorientation, wandering, erratic moods and sometimes a loss of motor skills.

Because patients tend to wander away, nursing homes often restrained them and did not offer therapy, Orr said.

The Nampa nursing home is designed to soothe patients' emotions and help them with their daily activities. Director and social worker are provided. And the facility will provide long-term or temporary care, or overnight, for a day, a week or a month.

"Sometimes families need a rest," she said. "Neither Medicare nor private insurance pay for victims of Alzheimer's disease. The cost at the Nampa home is $52 a day, Orr said.

To inform Idaho residents and educate them on Alzheimer's disease, Orr and Karen Dale, a social worker with Hillhaven's Special Care Unit, took a swing through Idaho and presented a three-hour community education program Thursday evening at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center on the disease. They also spoke in Idaho Falls and Pocatello.

"We're trying to teach families that they can't do it alone," Orr said. "They need to pull support from their families and formal services."

Although the Magic Valley has no facility, Orr said there is a family support group available through the Office on Aging. For information, call the office at 734-7583 and ask for Janice Stone or Mary-Donner.

Wendell wrestling schedule puts hold on attendance rule

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — A change in the wrestling schedule is making it difficult for Wendell school officials to enforce the 90 percent attendance rule.

Due to a change in the date and location of the meet, the match had to be scheduled at 10 a.m. during regular class time. Wendell school officials then said the wrestlers would not be excused from school because of the 90 percent attendance rule, a two-year-old policy which restricts non-academic activities during school hours.

However, four wrestling students appealed the school official's ruling and asked the Wendell School Board this week for permission to be excused from classes for the Tuesday match in charge of scheduling to find another date for the match, then agreed, somewhat reluctantly, to excuse the wrestlers if it is not rescheduled.

Since three of the five board members are parents of wrestlers, the board was sympathetic to the students. Still, they said, the state rule should be respected and schools need to cooperate in an effort to schedule sporting events around classroom hours.

School Superintendent George Crawford said the main problem is that wrestling matches are scheduled less formally and less in advance than football or basketball games.

"It seems there needs to be more continuity in that," he said.

The Wendell district also needs the cooperation of other school districts to schedule wrestling matches after school or on Saturdays, Crawford explained.

If the Nov. 26 match cannot be rescheduled, Wendell wrestlers will probably be excused from school to participate, Crawford said.

"We're trying to adhere to it (the 90 percent attendance rule)," he said, adding, "I'm not saying that we always do."

In other business:

Crawford said hot lunch prices may have to be raised next semester.

The lunch program, he explained, is not financially sufficient, but is operating under an $8,000 to $10,000 deficit. The deficit, he added, is from summer expenses, such as wages and food supplies for the beginning of school.

A five cent price increase would give the program an extra $34,800 per year, Crawford estimated. In two or three years, depending on the stability of food prices and wages, the $100,000 hot lunch budget would be clear of its deficit, he said.

Elementary School Principal Robert Kester said Wendell can charge an extra nickel per meal and would still be below or as low as the prices of most other Magic Valley schools. Wendell prices now are 65 cents for elementary students and 75 cents for the older students.

The board decided to change auditors. Gooding CPAs Oakley and Jones, who do audit work for nine other school districts, will replace LeGeorge Rogers and Evans, CPAs in Jerome, who will no longer be doing school audits. This change, Crawford noted, will save the district about $1,300.

Crawford said the Wendell school bus service, contracted by Dick Eaton, was recently inspected by a state official. The inspector, Crawford said, reported that "all inspectors would be out of a job if all bus contractors were as competent and conscientious as Eaton."

This district's bus service costs more than service of other comparable districts because Wendell runs a shuttle bus from the elementary and high schools to the new gymnasium almost every hour, Crawford said. Still, he said, the shuttle is needed since walking would be impractical because of time, weather and student control problems.

Giving an update on the proposed sale of the school's football field by the high school, Crawford said the evaluation has not been completed yet. The appraisal value compared to marketability will determine if, and when the property will go on sale.

troil them," said Roland Zollinger, Malta. "There is a lack of education in the community about noxious weeds."

"Look here tonight," Zollinger said about the lack of public concern over the matter. "We have to educate the public. I've watched it (weed infestations) happen to farms and it has to be stopped."

"I'd have paid for an ad," Adams said, to help make the public aware of the problem with noxious weeds.

Over the last 15 years the Forest Service has spent over $200,000 to control leafy spurge. Two primary areas of infestation are the South Fork of the Boise River and the Goose Creek area near Oakley.

What malls do not offer is the sense of community that downtown areas, in downtowns, the buildings are "tall, short, brick, wood, old, new. There is tradition," he said.

Downtowns often fare well when they capitalize on the elements that malls do not have — banks, government offices, old buildings, a variety of restaurants, employees on lunch breaks — but also strive for some of the reliability of the malls, he said.

"You have to run faster," he said. "You have to prove you have better service, are more reliable and more fun."

Asked about an idea proposed by Mayor Emery Petersen to cover the downtown mall, he said he had a personal bias against covering streets and "making something indoors that should be outdoors." Sidewalk coverings do have possibilities, however, he said.

Downtown Twin Falls is already in a good position to meet the challenges of the Magic Valley Mall, he said. But he warned that it could not "stand still or it will lose ground."

Telen is executive director of Spokane Unlimited, Inc., which has developed and refurbished downtown Spokane. He also has a private consulting firm specializing in smaller towns.

Tax credit for energy-saving ends Jan. 1

TWIN FALLS — Homeowners planning to install energy-saving tax-deductible improvements should be aware that the federal tax credit law expires Jan. 1, according to the National Association of Tax-Practitioners.

To qualify for tax credits, the improvement must be completed by the end of the year, said association President Douglas Bennett Sr.

The deadline applies to both energy conservation and renewable energy source credit programs, according to Bennett.

The conservation credit program applies to expenditures on homes built before April 20, 1977, and covers such items as insulation, storm or thermal windows and doors; caulking and weatherstripping. Also included in the program are such things as more efficient burners for an existing furnace, automatic setback thermostats, automatic flue controls.

The commission is considering establishing a "new zone" that would take in the proposed Mountain Empire Dairyman's Association plant southeast of Jerome. The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Christian Scientists open Thanksgiving service

TWIN FALLS — With Thanksgiving day occurring in the middle of National Bible Week, the local Christian Science congregation is making preparations for it.

A special Thanksgiving Day service is planned for the community. Neighbors, friends and anyone wishing to join with members of First Church of Christ, Scientist in giving thanks to God on Thanksgiving Day are invited to attend.

During the same week, the local church joins other denominations in marking this year's National Bible Week theme: "Bring your mind, as well as your heart, to the Bible." The special National Bible Week reading room display will be in the windows of the Christian Science reading room, 235 Main Ave. W.

Attendees on duty welcome visitors to stop in to browse among the Bible materials available, or to use them for study and prayer. The Bible is central to Christian Science services and practice. And the upcoming special Thanksgiving service is no exception.

It will include hymns of praise, brief silent prayer and the Lord's Supper, as well as readings from scripture.

Scheduled to begin at 11 a.m., the hour-long Thanksgiving service will be held at the church, 169 9th Ave. E. Care for infants and toddlers will be provided by local church members.

school-age children are invited to attend the services.

The importance of the Bible to Christian Scientists and the depth of their gratitude for the word of God, is seen in a statement issued by the editor of Christian Science periodicals in connection with National Bible Week: "More words than ever before in the history of mankind are being poured out today but most of them seem like adding dry sand to an already massive desert. The Bible, however, is full of words that satisfy our deepest thirst... we go forward, finding the living water which supplies our thirst for spiritual meaning and life, and we become more fully convinced, that in this all-important quest the word of the Bible truly is our constant guide."

At the Christian Science Center in Boston is a display attracting visitors from around the world and many different denominations. The multi-media Bible exhibit is the result of collaboration between Protestant, Catholic and Jewish scholars and designers. A 44-foot, carved plexiglass map of the holy land, keyed to hand-held receivers, electronically traces the journeys of Bible characters. A Bible study center houses a variety of Bible translations, commentaries, and dictionaries and rare Bibles.

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Reformed Church will present the film "Heavenly Deception" at 7:30 p.m. Sunday. ## Mormon attitudes improve

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — During his 40 years as a Presbyterian minister in predominantly Mormon Cache Valley, the Rev. Miner Bruner has seen attitudes toward non-Mormons improve, he said.

Speaking at the Campus Christian Fellowship Center Monday, Bruner said in the beginning it was difficult to get support for a USO to serve a military unit stationed here.

Parents were concerned about the USO opening because they feared their young daughters would want to date the non-Mormon military people they met there, he said.

Since then Mormons and non-Mormons have worked together productively to establish such organizations as hospice and the Alliance for the Visually Aged, he said.

He said Mormons took a "giant step forward" when the late church president Spencer W. Kimball said it had been revealed that the priesthood was to be extended to blacks. "I see some Mormons having a hard time dealing with that, but their feelings are probably no different than people in parts of Texas, Louisiana or other places where prejudice has been inbred."

October federal deficit tops $27 billion mark

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government, which ran up the largest deficit in history in 1985, started the new fiscal year on the same note, recording a $27.09 billion imbalance for October, the Treasury Department reported Friday.

The department said that government revenues of $57.88 billion for the first month in the 1986 fiscal year were outstripped by government spending of $84.97 billion.

For the 1986 fiscal year, the Reagan administration has projected a total deficit of $177.83 billion, down 8.4 percent from the record $211.31 billion deficit run up in fiscal 1985.

The Treasury Department's monthly statement said that the revenue total included $29.73 billion in individual income tax payments and another $18.71 billion in Social Security taxes. Corporations paid $1.18 billion to the government last month.

The top spending categories for October were the usual ones, led by the Department of Health and Human Services. HHS, which handles Social Security payments, spent $27.27 billion in October, followed by the Defense Department, which spent $21.28 billion.

The third largest spending category, interest on the $1.87 trillion national debt, totaled $11.41 billion in October and is projected at $19.4 billion for the entire year.

First pilot lost buried in Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — Navy Lt. J.G. Richard C. Sather was buried on a grassy slope in an extinct volcano crater Friday, ending 21 years of uncertainty for the family of the American listed as missing in action in Vietnam longer than any other.

Sather, of Pomona, Calif., was shot down over North Vietnam on Aug. 5, 1964, when he was 26. He was the first American pilot to have crashed in North Vietnam.

Sather's remains were among those of seven people recently identified by the Army's Central Identification Laboratory here.

JFK death noted at rites in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — The assassination 22 years ago of President John F. Kennedy was commemorated Friday by a local Democratic group and two Texas Green Berets chapters who laid wreaths and said prayers.

Fewer than 100 people gathered under overcast skies in front of the Texas School Book Depository, the building from which the Warren Commission said Lee Harvey Oswald fired the fatal shots Nov. 22, 1963, from the sixth floor.

At the depository, a priest read a brief prayer, a red, white and blue wreath was placed on the ground and the Navy fired a 21-gun salute.

In a separate ceremony a few blocks away, a wreath was laid at the Kennedy Memorial.

What's what

Pastry sculptors in Tokyo couldn't find a photograph of the Statue of Liberty taken from the rear. Too bad. Their replica, sculpted from 66 pounds of sugar and 22 pounds of white chocolate, looked just fine from the front. From the back, though, it looked sort of like the Sphinx.

In an analysis of male and female mentalities, a Dr. Pierre Floreny, clinical professor of psychiatry at Canada's University of Alberta said, "The male brain is the more likely to malfunction."

Just off Interstate 94 near Billings, Mont., is a giant rock called Pompey's Pillar. On it Captain Clark scratched his name and the date July 25, 1806. You can still read it. It's said to be the only known physical evidence left of the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

Q. Early sailors dreamed up the mermaid when they first saw that sea mammal called the manatee. What does the manatee eat?

A. Plants.

If New York City had the same ratio of residents per square mile as Alaska, there'd be 14 people in Manhattan.

Q. Did Abe Lincoln's original version of his Göttsbyburg Address contain the words "under God"?

A. No. It turned up later in the quotation books.

American men did not get as many broken bones a couple of centuries ago as they get now. Or so says a scientist at the Smithsonian Institution. His lifelong examinations of skeletons shows 14.8 percent of the men today suffer fractured jaws, noses, skulls. But only 4 percent of the colonial men did so.

UN opens Central America debate

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A former U.S. spy master and a Sandinista woman who lured a Nicaraguan general to her bedroom and death opened the General Assembly debate Friday on violence in Central America.

U.S. Ambassador Vernon A. Walters, a retired army general and former deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, returned from Washington Friday afternoon to deliver the U.S. allegation of Sandinista repression in Nicaragua.

She renewed her government's claim that America, through CIA-backed rebels, was waging an "illegal and immoral war" and was "intent on destroying the Sandinista popular revolution in Nicaragua."

She said the war has left 3,632 people dead, 4,039 wounded, 240,000 homeless, 5,232 kidnapped and 7,582 orphans, and has cost $1.5 billion "to our fragile economy."

In her speech to the assembly, Ms. Astorga assailed the U.S. Congressional approval of a bill to provide $27 million in humanitarian aid to the anti-Sandinista rebels, including unarmed planes, helicopters and trucks.

were killed this week in fighting in Mamelodi and Queenstown in Cape Province, police confirmed Friday.

For the second time in a week, witnesses accused police of firing on protesters without provocation at an anti-government demonstration.

South Africa, meanwhile, suffered further blows to its economy. Euro Motors Ltd., the South African subsidiary of French carmaker Renault, said it was closing its operation because of heavy losses.

Region wary of rumblings

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Rumblings have been heard in two more volcanoes in Colombia, and a southern governor asked foreign experts Friday to find out if there is a danger of an eruption like the one on Nov. 13 that killed 25,000 people.

Ney Guzman, geology professor at Valley University in Cali, said the devastating eruption of Nevado del Ruiz may have triggered volcanic activity in the 300-mile stretch of the Andes Mountains.

Gov. Mercedes Apraz of Narino province in southern Colombia said the 15,721-foot high Azufral volcano, 37 miles southwest of Pasto, was "making very strange noises" on Thursday.

Guzman said there also were reports of steam and rumbling on Thursday from the 14,111-foot Galeras volcano, 12 miles west of Pasto.

Cash-strapped ISU eyes Division II

POCATELLO (AP)—Mounting financial problems for the Idaho State University athletic program have spawned a debate over whether the Big Sky Conference school should drop from the NCAA's Division I-AA to the less expensive Division II, and football coach Jim Koetter said it has already affected his recruiting.

"Anytime you have negative publicity, it'll hurt you," said Koetter, who has already started recruiting efforts for next season. "Things like this just keep adding to the problem."

Koetter, whose 5-5 Bengal squad wrap up the season Saturday against 11th-rated Eastern Washington, said some of his current players have already expressed enough concern about the Division II talk that he will be meeting with them next week on the matter. He said he needs a commitment from the university administration so he can tell potential recruits "where we're going, to be."

Idaho State President Richard Bowen first raised the prospect of the school dropping to Division II status when he told the state Board of Education this fall that the athletic program was continuing to run large deficits with some projections seeing the red ink totaling over $140,000 in less than three years.

"The fact is that the institution is engaging in an enterprise which at present exceeds its ability to support," Bowen said.

Division II status was among his proposed solutions, but the move would result in a reduction in athletic scholarships that would lower the quality of teams and translate into reduced gate receipts, television and radio income, booster contributions and payments for tournament participation.

"I think the sentiment I've heard recently is that we will not drop down to Division II," said Kathleen Hildreth, ISU women's athletic director.

But Assistant Athletic Director Scott Hobday, citing similar financial problems plaguing both Boise State and Idaho, suggested a move down might be acceptable if the other two Big Sky schools in the state would do the same thing.

"If we go to Division II all by ourselves, we wouldn't have any place to go," Hobday said. "We would lose more students who wanted to attend ISU. I just think about everybody is opposed to ISU going to Division II by ourselves, but opinions about going as a league will vary."

University-wide budget problems prompted ISU to shift $90,000 earmarked for athletics to other programs this year, resulting in the elimination of men's tennis and wrestling in 1986-1987.

Hildreth estimated that dropping from Division I-AA to Division II would probably save the school some $300,000 a year, but at the same time she said the move would cost it about $318,000 in lost revenues.

"I think we're just in a stage of input," she said. "Dr. Bowen is just trying to gather as much information as he can about the pros and cons and consequences. Because of that, there's a lot of talk going on."

BSU tests Idaho

Title at stake

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

MOSCOW — Twice in the last three years, the University of Idaho has kept Boise State out of the NCAA Division I-AA football playoffs.

"That could happen again here today," But for the first time, the Broncos could return the favor.

"They could be conference champions if they win," says Boise State Coach Lytle Selenech. "If we win, it could mean a possible playoff berth for us. This game always means a lot. This year it means more."

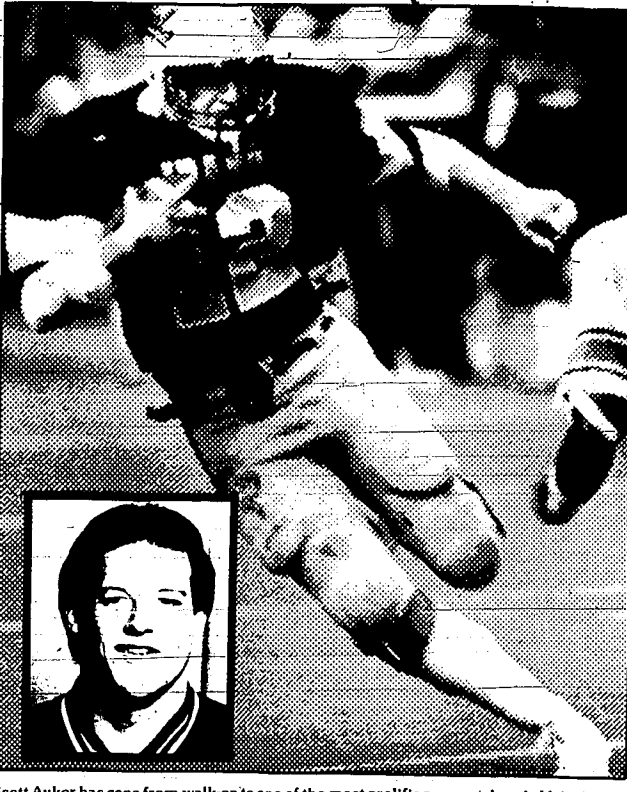

"It boils down to one football game," concurs Idaho Coach Dennis Erickson. "This is the season for us — we're in control of our own destiny."

Kickoff time is 2 p.m. MST in the Kibbie Dome. Both teams are 5-1 in the Big Sky Conference, one-half game behind Nevada-Reno, which has already wrapped up its regular-season schedule.

An Idaho victory today would give the Vandals their first league championship since 1971 and the No. 1 berth from the West in the I-AA playoffs, which start next weekend. A win by the Broncos would put Boise State into the playoffs for the first time since 1981 and give the Big Sky championship to the Wolf Pack.

Idaho won this game 37-9 last year and has dominated the Broncos almost totally since the arrival of

Scott Auker has gone from walk-on to one of the most prolific pass-catchers in Idaho history

Auker

Small-town boy makes good splitting the seam for Vandals

By TIM KEOWN
Special to The Times-News

MOSCOW — Football has been described, ad nauseam, as a game of inches and inches.

For University of Idaho senior tight end Scott Auker, the emphasis is on the breaks — good breaks.

Auker came out of tiny Fruitland High School as a combination quarterback running back and blocker. He walked on at Idaho without much fanfare, but he has since become one of the most prolific pass-catchers in the history of a school that has had some legendary receivers.

Auker began his collegiate career as a split end in motion in a light-end-in-the-spring-of-1983 to order to back up all-Big Sky performer Kurt Vestmann. After Vestmann was injured late in the 1983 season, Auker took over. He has been there ever since.

The move to tight end was one in a series of good breaks for Auker, but the transition was not easy.

"When I came here, I was moved to tight end at 190 (pounds)," Auker recalled. "I had never lifted weights in high school and I had a personal goal to gain the muscle I needed."

Now a solid 6-foot-2, 225 pounds, Auker is still not the prototypical tight end, — in Coach-Dennis Erickson's pass-happy offense, Auker doesn't need devastating blocking skills.

The move, however, was not a ticket to instant fame.

light end. If someone would have told me five years ago that I would be in this situation, I would have told them that they were crazy."

That situation is currently seen in place in the Big Sky in receiving behind mercurial teammate Eric Varber. Auker has caught 73 passes for 742 yards and four touchdowns for the fifth-ranked NCAA Division I-AA Vandals, who boast an 8-2 record.

Last year, he led the Big Sky with 72 receptions for 834 yards, good enough to place him eighth in the country.

The Vandal offense is tailored-made for a quick, mobile tight end, such as Auker.

Erickson's passing game sends three receivers in motion on a single play. It is an offense of deception, and while it has earned Erickson the title of "genius" in some circles, it drives opposing coaches and defenders up the proverbial wall.

Auker says he sometimes has trouble containing himself when he watches the defense attempt to adjust to the different Idaho formations.

"I can look out of my stance and see that they didn't do it right" and I know that I have the whole field wide open," Auker said. The implementation of Erickson's offense was an important break for Auker. When he first came to Moscow, the offense was quite a bit different than it is now.

"When I first got here, we ran the veer under Coach (Jerry) Davitch," Auker said. "When Coach-Erickson came and it changed the passing offense, it was

Lewis-Clark St. hands BSU first-game upset

By SCOTT PEYRON
Special to The Times-News

BOISE — Lewis-Clark, that embattled little state college in Lewiston, has finally gotten some of the powers-that-be in Boise.

The Warriors shot and rebounded with mid-season crispness Friday and shocked Boise State University 69-56 before 3,125 astonished fans at the Heat Dairy Classic college-basketball tournament.

Idaho State leapt past North-West Nazarene College 73-60 in the first game of the all-Idaho tournament, and will meet Big Sky Conference rival Boise State tonight at 8:30 in the Pavilion.

Idaho State and Lewis-Clark State are to square off at 6:30 p.m. Lewis-Clark guard Darryl Jett lost a free-flowing offense on the Broncos with his speed, shooting and ball-handling. And the Warriors won for the second time in their last three meetings with Boise State.

Jett, playing all but two minutes of the game even though he sustained a sprained ankle, scored 16 points and had four assists and four steals. Steve Williams, 9-for-12 from the field, led all scorers with 19 points and contributed seven rebounds and four assists. Forward Maurice Tanner, who hit seven of his nine field goal attempts, had 14 points and six rebounds.

All of those who thought the 30-24 advantage LCSC established in the first 20 minutes was a fluke, the Warriors had a handy response: 71 percent second half field goal shooting, 17-for-24.

LCSC, an NAIA school, advanced its record to 9-3 by beating the Broncos.

Boise State, 0-1, fell almost hopefully behind by making just nine of 30 first half shots. Forward Kelvin Rawlins worked among the smaller Warriors for 12 points and six rebounds, but the only Boise State player with much rhythm offensively was guard Craig Spjut, who had to hit two three-point shots to finish with 12 points.

Senior forward Donn Holston, one of the few familiar faces in a new-look Idaho State program, scored 18 points and appeared seven rebounds to help the Bengals push aside the Crusaders of NNC, another NAIA institution.

Idaho State's victory scenario — or at least a key element in it — perhaps was not one they can count on repeating against NCAA Division I opponents, although the Bengals played robust defense and missed only five of their 28 free throws.

But how often do you out-bow somebody 42-27?

Holston's seven boards and the six scrappy forwards and Bruce Galtor might be expected, but Steve Garrity — a red-then-freshman — somehow came up with nine rebounds. Holston played a game of assurance, not only leading all scorers but assisting on four other baskets. Garrity was the Bengal fast-break.

It was that fast break that slapped NNC in the face after left-handed forward Ricky Young had drawn his team to within 59-54 with 3:08 to play. Holston either scored or assisted on the Bengals' last seven points to close out the victory.

Some of Idaho State's new hands made their mark, to be sure. Transfer center Dave Danforth scored 15 points with a remarkable shooting touch while Garrity banged around for nine

BYU tries to top Air Force with Utah

By BOB BLACK
The Associated Press

PROVO, Utah — Brigham Young University's football team may be coach for Florida's Citrus Bowl, but Coach LaVell Edwards says the assurance of a post-season play doesn't mean his team will let up in its final two games.

The Cougars, who jumped from 16th to 11th in the AP college football poll after last weekend's win over Air Force, entertain Utah at noon in Provo Saturday in the annual intrastate blood-letting.

"By playing the University of Utah and also playing for the conference championship," the team shouldn't have a let-down, Edwards said.

A BYU victory would give the Cougars more than bragging rights in the state for the next year. It would keep them on track for a 10th straight Western Athletic Conference title.

The Cougars, 9-2 overall and 5-1 in the WAC, can be guaranteed at least a share of the conference crown with wins over Utah and Hawaii. Air Force, 10-1 and 6-1, wraps up its conference title this weekend in Hawaii.

"We have two tough games left with Utah and Hawaii," Edwards said. "We can't even begin to think about the bowl." There will be no shortage of enthusiasm for the Utes, when these teams meet for the 60th time. Utah, 8-3 and 5-2, can finish near the top of the conference standings with a win over BYU. Coach Jim Fassel says a Utah win on Saturday also would keep the Utes in the running for a post-season bowl invitation, although he admits the chances would be slim at best.

He knows one thing: it won't be easy.

"BYU has an outstanding team," said the first-year coach. "Everyone looks at their offense, but their defense has been outstanding all year. They are an excellent defensive football team."

Brigham Young's defense was especially effective in the Cougar 26-21 win over Air Force. BYU fell behind 14-0 early in the first quarter after Cougar turnovers led to two Falcon scores, but the defense effectively shut down Air Force's wishbone attack and enabled BYU to launch a second-half comeback.

The Utes were not as impressive on Saturday. They fell to Colorado State, a loss which all but eliminates them from the WAC title chase. Fassel said key mistakes cost his team — the game and that's something he can't afford against the Cougars.

Is national championship on line in Norman?

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — The Big Eight Conference title will be on the line when No. 2 Nebraska and No. 5 Oklahoma collide Saturday, but players on both sides say there is more at stake than that.

"This game is for the national championship," said Nebraska fullback Tom Rafterman. "That's how I feel about it and I feel they (the Sooners) feel the same way."

"I think either one of us could go to the Orange Bowl and beat Penn State," he said.

"This is our season right here," said Oklahoma linebacker Brian Bosworth. "We've got everything on the line. It comes down to this every year."

A Nebraska victory would send the Cornhuskers to the Orange Bowl as conference champions, where they Oklahoma State, they are expected to receive a bid to play in the Gator Bowl, with the Cowboys going to the Orange Bowl.

would send Nebraska to the Fiesta Bowl.

If Oklahoma wins, the Sooners would need to beat Oklahoma State next week to go to the Orange Bowl. If they win Saturday but lose to conference champions, where they Oklahoma State, they are expected to receive a bid to play in the Gator Bowl, with the Cowboys going to the Orange Bowl.

Saturday is the first day bowl bids officially can be extended.

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer this week addressed the possibility of playing for a national championship, and said Nebraska has an advantage over his team because the Huskers are playing their final game of the year.

"We have to win three in a row for us to have a chance to go prove it, against three very good football teams," he said.

"Our row is a little harder to hoe than theirs. If they beat us, they've got a chance to go prove that they're the number one team in the country."

"If we win this ballgame, then we're going to try to stay in a position to play Penn State for the national championship," Switzer said. "To stay No. 2, you have to win on the road (against Oklahoma State) and then beat a good SMU team here. That's tough."

The Cornhuskers have averaged 395 yards rushing per game, best in the nation, and are ranked second in total offense. Oklahoma counters with a defense ranked second nationally against the rush, allowing 65 yards per game, and ranked first in total defense.

College football

This is the weekend for traditional college football rivalries and, as usual, many of the traditional postseason goodies.

At the top of the list, more than a month down the road, is the national championship and top-rated Penn State, assured of a trip to the Orange Bowl, puts its No. 1 ranking and 10-0 record on the line in a night game at arch-rival Pitt.

Meanwhile, second-ranked Nebraska visits No. 5 Oklahoma for their annual Big Eight showdown. A Nebraska victory sends the Cornhuskers to the Orange Bowl and a possible 1-2 match with Penn State. But if Oklahoma wins, it must play Oklahoma State next week and the Cowboys are still alive.

The only other pairing of members of the Associated Press Top Twenty finds No. 12 Ohio State at sixth-ranked Michigan in what used to be — and still might be — a Big Ten Rose Bowl shootout. But if third-ranked Iowa wins or ties at home against Minnesota, the Hawkeyes go to Pasadena.

Eighth-ranked UCLA needs a victory at Southern California to become the Pac-10 representative in the Rose Bowl. Rounding out the Top Ten, No. 4 Miami, headed for the Sugar Bowl; entertains Colorado State in a night game and seventh-ranked Oklahoma State visits Iowa State.

In the Second Ten, No. 11 Brigham Young (Florida Citrus Bowl) plays host to Utah, No. 13 Air Force (Bluebonnet) is at Hawaii for a night game. No. 15 Baylor can make it to the Cotton Bowl by winning at Texas, No. 16 Tennessee will move a step closer to the Sugar Bowl if it wins at Kentucky, No. 17 LSU is at Notre Dame, Southern Methodist at No. 18 Arkansas (Holiday Bowl) and No. 19 Texas A&M at Texas Christian.

Ninth-ranked Florida, No. 10 Auburn, No. 14 Florida State and No.

20 Georgia are idle.

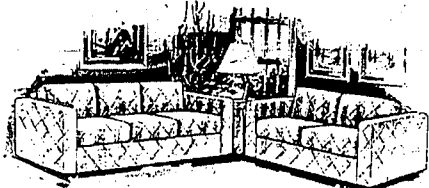

Last week, Penn State avenged a 1984 rout at the hands of Notre Dame. This week, the Nittany Lions try to repeat against Pitt, which whipped them 31-1 a year ago. The Panthers own a 33-25-4 advantage against Penn State in Pittsburgh.

"We were embarrassed last year," says Penn State quarterback John Shaffer, "but it's not necessarily revenge."

BOBBY WOLFF

"The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger."
 — Shakespeare.

If South gets complacent about today's slam, he is destined to go down. Only those who have suffered from past "bad suit-breaks" are likely to post a plus score.
 South ruffs the second heart, noting that good breaks in both black suits will land an easy 12 tricks. South's hand will score 5 hands and the A-Q of clubs. Dummy's trump will score the diamond ace and South hopes, a diamond ruff and three club tricks.

Opening lead: Heart jack

If South's planning stops here, he draws trumps, cashes the A-Q of clubs and leads a diamond to dummy's ace. The club king falls to split the suit and South's maximum falls to only 11 tricks and a down one.

To make the slam, South must provide for bad breaks in the black suits—He ruffs the second heart, cashes the trump ace and leads a trump to dummy's nine. Dummy's last heart is ruffed with his trump jack, and the ace and queen of clubs are cashed. A diamond is led to dummy's ace and a low club is ruffed with South's last trump. A diamond ruff places the lead in dummy, the last trump is drawn and dummy's clubs are high.

What is the technical name given to South's winning line of play? It's called a "dummy reversal"—a procedure by which dummy's system makes the master hand.

BID WITH THE ACES

South holds: ♠ 7 6 2 ♥ A K 5 2 ♦ 8 6 4 ♣ 9 8

North South

ANSWER: Two diamonds, a tempo-rizing bid. South has too much for a raise to two hearts and not enough for a double raise to three.

 MOTHS DO NOT EAT CLOTHES
 Moths lay eggs, which develop into larvae. These larvae are the guilty culprits! They then change into pupae and form cocoons, from which later emerge the innocent moths.
