Defying snow, shoppers make their rounds

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Neither sleet, nor snow, nor immovable autos kept shoppers from their appointed rounds on the season's busiest day of the year Friday, as snow bombarded southeast Idaho and police warned motorists, "Let's be careful out there."

While most of the traffic accidents occurring during the day were minor in nature, Idaho State Police and Twin Falls County Sheriff's officers investigated a collision south of Hollister on U.S. 93 Friday evening which reportedly killed six persons and injured three others.

The National Weather Service office in Kimberly was closed Friday for the Thanksgiving break, so no official snowfall measurements were available for Twin Falls.

However, the NWS in Boise reported a 12-inch snow depth there, breaking snowfall records, and a 9-10 inch snow depth in Burley. Pocatello reported 10 inches on the ground. Ketchum Ranger District officials in Sun Valley reported 3 inches of new snow Friday, with 13-15 inches on the ground. More snow is forecast through Sunday and a travelers advisory remains in effect through the weekend.

In Twin Falls, unofficial estimates put snowfall between 4 to 5 inches since Thursday morning. The wet, heavy snow caused a carport to collapse at 230 Fillmore and was blamed for a rash of fender-bender accidents, with no injuries, in Twin Falls Friday.

A Honda car parked at the edge of the carport escaped damage. The owner, Nona Askew, was not at home when the carport caved in, said her daughter, Vada Sorenson. "It created a problem, but no damage," she said. Sorenson called a towing service to lift the carport back up.

The AAA Auto Club was "swamped" with calls from stranded motorists. The AAA and Twin Falls Body and Paint shop, which handles AAA towing calls, reported receiving 5 to 6 calls an hour from motorists whose cars wouldn't start, or wouldn't move, in addition to receiving calls involving accidents.

"We've had lots of everything," said Sherric Thorp, with Twin Falls Body & Paint. "We've had six semis off the highway this morning, plus about 10 jump starts on batteries and about 10 people stuck in the driveway."

But even tow trucks were having difficulties coping with the rising tides of slush and snow.

"It's like the 'Outer Limits' out there," said Ruth Ryan of Ryan's Towing Service. "Both our tow truck and our Cadillac got stuck in the driveway yesterday, and it took a lot of shoveling to get out. We worked up an appetite for Thanksgiving though." Idaho State Police officers reported a two-car accident with injuries on Interstate Highway 84, between Twin Falls and Jerome, Friday afternoon. However, no further information was available.

Storms rewrite records

More on the way from the Pacific

By ROGER PETERSON
The Associated Press

A strong, wet storm slugged Northern California with rain and heavy, blowing snow Friday, dumping nearly 3 feet of new snow in the Sierra Nevada to close out a month that has already seen record accumulations.

And November's unusual blast of cold rewrote more record book entries as temperatures on the northern Plains fell as low as 31 below zero.

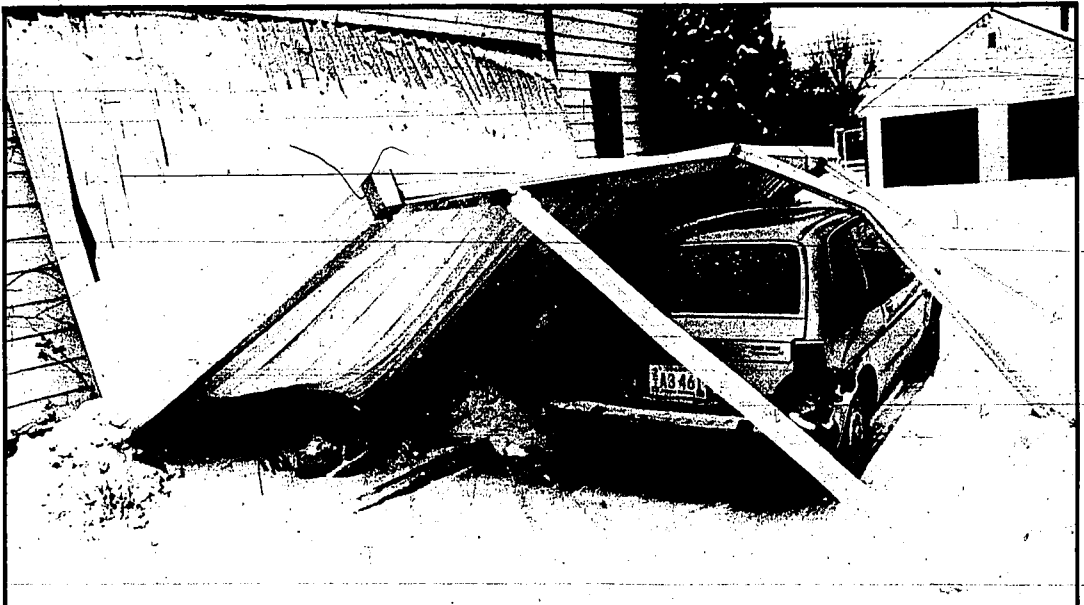

A snow slide buried two people at a Lake Tahoe-area ski resort Friday, killing one of them. The other man escaped without suffering serious injury.

The fast-moving Northern California storm snarled traffic with snow in mountain passes and dumped nearly an inch of rain at San Francisco. Pacific Gas and Electric reported outages at some 7,100 homes in Gilroy, Hayward and Livermore, but service was restored in an hour.

Wind gusted to 55 mph and mariners were warned of 12-foot waves along the coast.

Blue Canyon, Calif., got 8 inches of snow during the morning and by late afternoon, 33 inches of new snow fell at Donner Summit in the Sierra Nevada, the National Weather Service said.

Heavy rains, meanwhile, hit Southern California, with 7.5 inch

Heavy snow build-up collapsed a metal carport, causing minor damage to Amy Werth's Honda Civic, Friday, at her residence on Fillmore Street recorded in Los Angeles, causing power outages, mudslides and numerous traffic accidents.

Snow also fell from the central and northern Rockies out across the central Plains and the upper half of the Mississippi Valley. In Utah, Wasatch Front ski resorts reported up to 14 inches of new snow Friday. The higher Sierra Nevada and the Lake Tahoe area got 10 to 20 inches of snow Thursday. Chains were mandatory on vehicles using Interstate 80, the main highway between Northern California and northern Nevada.

Ahead of Friday's weather system, winter storm watches were posted for today for southern Utah, the mountains of northern Arizona, much of Colorado and Wyoming, western Nebraska and northwestern Kansas, with watches posted for Saturday night over eastern North Dakota and northwestern Minnesota.

Up to 17 inches of snow was on the ground Friday at Ainsworth, Neb. "It'll pull some more arctic air down ... and as it moves eastward across the Plains it'll spread that cold," said Pete Reynolds of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center at Kansas City, Mo.

Bismarck, N.D., dropped to a record low of 20 degrees below zero, one degree below the former record, while the coldest spot in the 48 states was 31 below at Grand Forks, Minn., posted a record low of 28 below zero, following Thursday's record low of 32 below.

Other records Friday included 18 below zero at Duluth, Minn., and 16 below at St. Cloud, Minn. The low of 14 below at Kalispell, Mont., was a full 10 degrees below the old record, set in 1905.

Firm finds way to show pesticide residue on food

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A California company has invented a four-star rating system to tell consumers how much pesticides are on the fresh fruits and vegetables they buy.

Ohio Research Systems, which has so far signed up two San Francisco Bay area supermarkets for its new service, is hoping to force farmers to use fewer pesticides by rating produce for chemical "cleanliness" and posting the results, an official says.

"We're trying to bring back pesticide-free food. We're trying to set the clock back 45 years," said Stan Rhodes, a chemist and Ohio resident.

The two supermarkets signed up so far are expected to begin offering fresh fruit and vegetables tested and rated for their chemical content around the first of the year. Rhodes said he hopes to serve dozens of West Coast retailers and the major food store chains within a year.

The service will add about 3.5 percent to the fruits' and vegetables' cost, Rhodes estimated.

But a state agriculture official called the rating service "a novel marketing idea" that is unnecessary.

"The government tests no more than 1 percent of the food," countered Rhodes.

Farm commodity prices edge upward

By DON KENDALL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Prices farmers get for raw products rose 2.4 percent in November, the second increase in a row for the monthly index, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

But even with the back-to-back increases, farm commodity prices on the average were still 7.4 percent below a year ago. Department economists say no major recovery is in sight and that the farm economy will remain sluggish at least through the first half of 1986.

The report said higher prices for cattle, broilers, corn, strawberries and oranges were mostly responsible for the November increase.

Lower prices for lemons, beans and grapefruit partly offset the gains for the other items.

According to department records, the rise in the price index this fall is the first since July 1984. Prices held even for several months last winter but dropped steadily until leveling off in September and rising in October and November. Meanwhile, prices farmers paid in November to meet expenses rose 0.6 percent from October but were still down 0.6 percent from a year ago. The increase was due mainly to higher prices for feed and feeder livestock.

Department economists said earlier this week that prices of livestock and crops have declined so much this year that farmers will get about 32 cents of each consumer dollar spent on food, the smallest share in more than 50 years.

The November price report showed that the farm prices of livestock and livestock products were up 3 percent from the October index but still averaged 3.5 percent below a year ago. Crop prices were up 2.7 percent from October but averaged 12 percent below the year-earlier average.

Department economists say farm income is expected to drop this year to a range of $25 billion to $29 billion from last year's $34.5 billion. Food prices are expected to rise slightly more than 2 percent, compared with a 3.8 percent gain in 1984.

According to the preliminary November figures, based primarily on mid-month averages, the price index for meat animals was up 3.6 percent from October but still averaged 2.1 percent below a year earlier.

Cattle prices were up $2.90 per 100 pounds from October, but hogs dropped 90 cents per hundredweight.

Overall, November farm commodity prices averaged 126 percent of a 1977 base used for comparison, according to the preliminary figures. That was up three percentage points from October average of 123 percent. In November 1984, the index stood at 136 percent.

In August, the index dropped to 121 percent, which was the lowest since November 1978 when it averaged 119 percent.

The November parity ratio was 51 percent, up one point from October and two points above September when it sank to 49 percent and tied for the record low reached, according to department records, in June of 1932 during the depths of the Depression.

Many economists say the old parity standard is outdated because it doesn't take into full account changes in farm productivity.

'Revolted' survivor, scientists oppose disturbing shipwreck

Judge's ruling clears way for attempt to raise Titanic

By AUDREY C. WOODS
The Associated Press

LONDON — An Admiralty Court judge ruled Friday that the British government cannot claim the goods salvaged from the sunken liner Lusitania, clearing the way for an effort to raise another famous shipwreck, the Titanic.

The government said that under a 16th-century law, it had first claim to any salvaged material brought to Britain, including that from the Lusitania.

Because of that law, John Pierce, Welsh leader of the Lusitania salvage operation, had feared that if he went ahead with his plan to raise the recently discovered wreckage of the Titanic, it might be seized when he tried to restore the liner at the Belfast shipyard where it was built.

The idea of bringing the Titanic up from the floor of the North Atlantic was vetoed by the French-American team that found it last September, and at least one survivor of the 1912 disaster is "revolted" by the prospect of disturbing the wreck.

The luxury liner Titanic struck an iceberg on its maiden voyage, taking 1,513 people to their deaths. The French-American team that found it 560 miles off Newfoundland, more than 19,000 feet below the ocean surface, decided to leave it where it was and make it a marine memorial.

Judge Sir Barry Sheen ruled Friday that the British government had no title to wrecks found in international waters, only to those within territorial waters.

The judge said no one had a better right to the salvage from the Lusitania than Pierce, the two American businessmen who claim to own the ship's hull, and the two salvage firms that took part in the 1982 operation.

After the ruling, Pierce said: "The Titanic is coming up."

He said he will press ahead with operations to raise the ship using a system of giant airbags, and start work with an international team in 18 months.

Pierce, 44, said he was "very confident" the Titanic could be raised. "As far as we know, she's in a condition that she's rebuildable."

Under his plan, two specialized underwater craft will fix tear-shaped bags along the length of the Titanic's hull. They would be inflated to give the wreck sufficient buoyancy to lift it to the surface.

Not everyone is as confident the ship can — or should — be raised.

American scientist Robert Ballard, who was part of the team that found the Titanic, said at the time that any attempt

Officials back state tax right

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top officials of the National Conference of State Legislatures have urged President Reagan to reject efforts within his administration to usurp the right of Idaho and five other states to handle problems arising from their use of the worldwide unitary tax for business.

Both the outgoing and incoming presidents of the conference contended the administration proposal to bar states from using the controversial corporate tax calculation ignores the voluntary good-faith efforts Idaho and other states are making in the tax that has been heavily criticized by some U.S. trading partners.

"This intrusion into state tax policy making is totally unwarranted," said outgoing conference president John Bragg, deputy speaker of the Tennessee House.

Pressure has been intensifying for Idaho and the five other worldwide unitary tax states to repeal that corporate tax system that bases state tax liability on the worldwide revenues of a multinational company instead of only those revenues directly generated by corporate operations within a state. Great Britain has led criticism of the method, pledging to impose financial penalties on U.S. corporations operating within its borders if the worldwide unitary system is not repealed by the six remaining states, which include Montana, North Dakota, Alaska, California and New Hampshire.

"It is an historical irony that after 200 years Great Britain again seeks to impose a tax policy on the 50 states," Bragg said.

But both Bragg and incoming conference president David Nething, a North Dakota state senator, claimed the states have made great strides on the unitary tax issue. A working group of state and federal officials issued its report calling for replacement of the worldwide system with one limiting state tax calculations to revenues earned within America's borders. But at the same time, the federal government was to increase its financial commitment to policing intra-corporation transactions that multinational companies can use to shift revenues outside the U.S. and avoid state taxes on them. "While the legislatures have been taking steps outlined in the principles, the Treasury Department has not yet prepared the needed legislation for introduction in the Congress," Nething said, noting that six states repealed the worldwide calculation in the past year.

Idaho would stand to lose millions of dollars in corporate tax revenues if it departs from the worldwide unitary method, which state Tax Commission Chairman Larry Looney has called the fairest way of assessing corporate state-tax liability. But Looney has said it is likely the commission will endorse that move this winter assuming the federal government comes up with the additional support to police intra-corporation transactions.

"The states are voluntarily solving this issue with our U.S. trading partners," Bragg told the tax-writing committees in both houses of Congress, "and should not now be usurped by any foreign power or be preempted by our own federal government."

Furor curtails police force

AMMON (AP) — The continuing controversy over creation of a two-man police department by the city of Ammon has prompted Mayor Russell Swensen to limit duties of members who pushed the new force into existence over voter objections. Compounding the problems facing the fledgling force has been the failure of one of the two officers to graduate from the state's law enforcement training school.

SNOW BUILD-UP
 During the last few days of continued snowfall and snow build-up the City Street crews have had an increasing problem with snow being pushed out into streets and alleys from private property. City Code Section 6-2-9 (D) prohibits the obstruction of public ways except by special permit. Those who block or partially block streets, alleys, and sidewalks with snow removed from private property are violating the law. They are also increasing their personal liability exposure by creating hazardous driving conditions for the traveling public. Property owners should pile snow on their own property to stay legal. Citations will be issued if continued violations occur.

Agency finds 2 Salt Lake City bombs similar

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has concluded that the bombs which killed two people in the Salt Lake City area last month were ignited by model rocket detonators, a radio station has reported.

KSL radio said Friday that police sources confirm the bombs used to kill Steven Christensen and Kathy Sheets on Oct. 15 were manufactured in a similar fashion.

The federal agency, which conducted tests on bomb remnants, said in its report to Salt Lake City investigators that the two bombs were packed with smokless gunpowder, the radio station said.

Officials confirm the detonators can be purchased at most hobby shops.

Christensen was killed when he picked up a bomb wrapped in a package outside his downtown Salt Lake City office. Mrs. Sheets was killed hours later by a bomb left outside her home.

On the next day, Mark Hofmann was injured when a bomb went off in his sports car. Police believe that bombing was accidental and they consider Hofmann their prime suspect in the case.

Hofmann, however, has not been charged in the bombings. He has been charged in an unrelated federal firearms violation — possessing a machine gun.

Meanwhile, the Utah Supreme Court will hear arguments Monday on whether police can interview a nurse who was in Hofmann's hospital room shortly after he was injured. Police want to ask the nurse about a conversation that took place between Hofmann and his attorney Ronald Yengich has maintained prosecutors should not be allowed to interview the nurse, who has not been identified, because her presence in the room was required and therefore covered by a confidentiality rule involving attorney-client privilege.

However, Deputy County Attorney Gerry D'Elia argued in a brief filed Friday with the high court that it was only in hindsight that Yengich tried to apply the attorney-client privilege to the nurse.

KSL television reported Friday night that in a deposition taken shortly after the conversation between Yengich and Hofmann, the nurse said police harassed Hofmann while he was recovering from his injuries.

It said the nurse overheard police saying "we can put him back together" so he can be executed later.

Cut urged in funds for commune probe

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The Legislature's Fiscal Office is recommending a substantial reduction in the money being sought to pay for the state's costs of investigating reports of crimes at Rajneeshpuram.

Attorney General Dave Frohnmayer and the state police are asking the Legislative Emergency Board for a total of $824,000 in emergency funds to cover costs of the ongoing investigation.

The fiscal staff, in a report released on Friday, recommends that the board allocate $114,000 now and set aside another $399,000 for future expenses of the probe.

The board, which handles budget matters between legislative sessions, meets Thursday and Friday at the Capitol.

Gov. Vic Atiyeh asked Frohnmayer to conduct an investigation after Indian guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh made allegations that numerous crimes had been committed at the Central Oregon city commune.

The guru's former personal secretary, Ma Anand Sheela, is in a West German prison pending extradition to Oregon to face charges of attempted murder, conspiracy and assault stemming from an alleged plot to kill Rajneesh's physician.

Rajneesh left the country Nov. 14 after pleading guilty to two federal immigration charges.

The fiscal staff urges the board to allocate $68,500 to the Justice Department and $45,612 to the state police to cover expenses through Oct. 31.

Kidnapping charge awaits

CALDWELL (AP) — A Parma woman, arrested in Idaho this week on a California kidnapping charge filed in connection with a child custody dispute, has returned to California to face the charge.

Bill Morrow, deputy Canyon County prosecutor, said a fugitive warrant against Minerva Cook, 25, was dismissed when the woman agreed to return to California voluntarily to face the charge.

The woman was arrested Tuesday on a charge of second-degree kidnapping from Tulare County, Calif. It alleged she improperly took her son, Michael, at Reedley, Calif., two years ago. The boy was being held here in protective custody.

California authorities said the woman and her husband were going through a divorce and had joint custody of the child when she took Michael and left the state.

Murderer's ex-wife given settlement

OLYMPIA (AP) — The ex-wife of convicted murderer Charles Rodman Campbell has agreed to an out-of-court settlement in her lawsuit against the state of Washington.

The state agreed this week to pay Francine Campbell $25,000 immediately, plus $600 a month for the rest of her life beginning in 1993.

Mrs. Campbell, 35, alleged her ex-husband raped her twice in December 1968 and January 1982, while he was assigned to a prison work-release program. They were married from August 1973 to August 1974.

Glenns Ferry grant will help city now, later

By BOB FREUND

GLENN'S FERRY — A federal grant that will reopen a potato processing plant in Glenns Ferry also will create a gift that keeps on giving — a new revolving fund for future economic development in the city.

A $360,000 award by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, announced earlier this week, will be loaned to Magic West Inc., owners of the former Redi-Spuds of America factory idled because of bankruptcy.

The federal money was the last piece of a complex financial package needed to put the plant back into the business of making potato flakes, hash browns and other frozen products. Magic West owner Roger Jones said Tuesday. The factory will employ at least 65 workers.

In addition to starting up the manufacturing plant during the next few months, the money also could plant another industry in Glenns Ferry or build a sewer line vital to business expansion in future years.

Under HUD's Urban Development Action Grant program, the city government actually received the federal cash. The city will lend the money to Magic West over 10 years at a below-market interest rate of 6 percent, said Jay Engstrom, economic development manager for the Idaho Department of Commerce, who handled much of the paperwork involved in landing the grant.

When Magic West's payments come in, the city government does not have to return the money to the federal government. Instead, it can invest it either in community improvements or into certain economic projects, Engstrom said.

Glenns Ferry plans to pump the cash back into business and industry, Mayor Dayle Messery said.

"It goes back into our account, and that makes money available for some other industry or some other business to expand or to hire more people," he said. "We're in an isolated area and we have to have this business to keep us going."

The latest grant is the second this year that will create a revolving fund for economic development. After a fire destroyed part of Idaho Circuit Technology, a circuit board manufacturer, the city obtained a grant of close to $200,000 from HUD's community development program through the state commerce agency.

The money has been loaned to ICT at an interest rate of 6 1/2 percent to keep it in business and allow it to add a second shift sometime during the next year. When repaid over the next five years, that money also is earmarked for economic development.

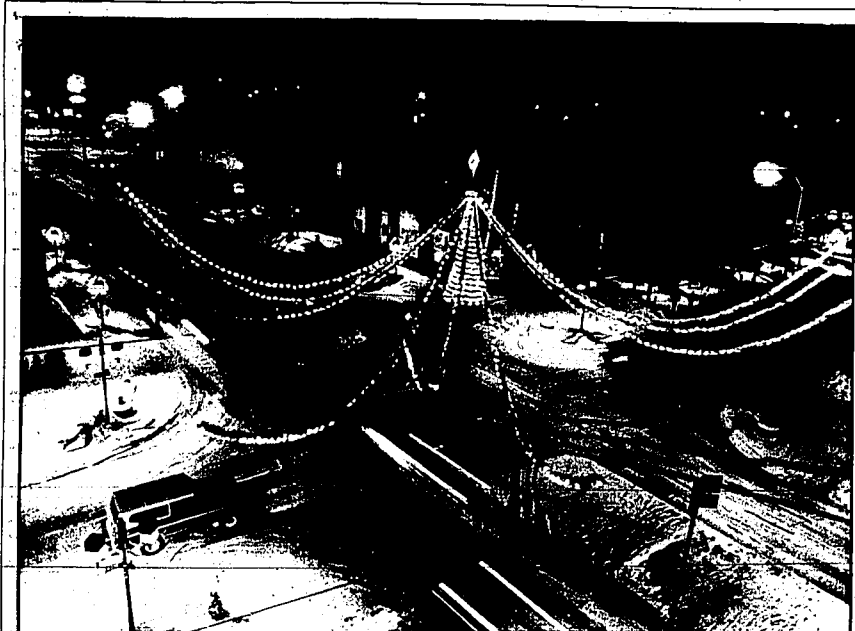

Snaring the grants in the first place is extremely difficult, requiring both the city's representatives, state government and the businesses involved to move reams of paperwork.

In Idaho UDAG grants are rare. The award this week was only the second given in the state, said Jay Hiri, HUD economic development specialist for Idaho and Oregon.

In 1980 the city of Caldwell was awarded $700,000 for a sewer extension to serve an industrial complex. However, the amount subsequently was reduced to $232,000 because of some technical flaws, she said.

There are 131 cities in Idaho classified as "distressed" cities, making them eligible for the grants, Hiri said. But many can't rank high on the government's priority list, even if they produce a superb project, because their level of distress is not as great as their competition for the grants — cities in more depressed parts of the country — she said.

Let there be light

The Christmas display of lights over Main Avenue and Shoshone Street illuminates the intersection as cars pass underneath. The lights were turned on for the first time Friday during a decorations-lighting ceremony. Downtown Twin Falls merchants have planned a list of holiday festivities, including Christmas music and a hospitality house serving warm beverages.

Wall replica brings war's dead home

Vietnam vets hope memorial will help America understand

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Some can't remember the names of their fallen comrades and some can't forget, but The Wall draws them just the same.

Vietnam veterans in fatigues, camouflage gear, and street clothes came to the College of Southern Idaho Exposition Center Friday in a driving snowstorm to remember a war in a humid jungle. Stretched out in the middle of the floor stood a photorealistic, half-size replica of the black granite Vietnam Veterans Memorial Wall that stands in Washington, D.C.

The replica will be on display through Sunday.

Kicking up the cow-manure scent from the floor of the arena, veterans stood in groups to remember sounds of machinegun fire, visions of sunrise, fog on statues of Buddha, and the smell of the enemy.

Al Creekmore, an ex-Marine from Burley, says it has been 20 years since he was in the jungle but he hasn't forgotten the smell. Nor has he forgiven the North Vietnamese for being his enemies.

Joining the Marine Corps as a 17-year-old, he was indoctrinated to hate them, he said. "Once a Marine, always a Marine," he says, by way of explaining the irritation that can sometimes get the better of him when he sees special treatment given to Vietnamese people in the United States.

Vietnam veterans, 9 million of them, are not treated as well, he says. When Jimmy Carter granted amnesty to draft evaders, veterans nursing the wounds of war and a chilly home-coming were ignored.

The memorial, he said, is for no one but the veteran. It was built by veterans for veterans.

Bitterness toward America and its government, for these men, is hard to reconcile with their own patriotism, said Bill Hayes of Burley, the clinical psychologist on duty at the memorial.

Because they came home to a country that wanted to forget the war and were split on as baby-killers, he said.

Radon test foul-up undercuts findings

The Associated Press

HAILEY — Health officials say it didn't do much good to launch a study of radon contamination in the Hailey area.

State health officials are working on surveys to determine how much radon, a potentially hazardous substance, is present in public buildings and private structures in Idaho.

But Bob Funderburg, manager of Idaho Division of Environment's radiation control office, said tests taken in the Hailey area and sent to the University of Pittsburgh for analysis aren't much good. It seems that because of what Funderburg calls "miscommunication," nobody knows which of the 20 test gauges installed in Hailey public buildings apply to which buildings.

"It doesn't look as if our studies will be worth too much," said Funderburg.

On a more positive note, Funderburg said the Idaho Bureau of Preventive Medicine has been awarded a $5,000 grant to begin studying radon counts throughout the state.

Dr. Fritz Dixon, head of the Bureau of Preventive Medicine, asked the Idaho Cancer Coordinating Committee for $27,000 for the study.

But the committee, which allocates revenue from cigarette taxes, didn't have that much money available immediately, said Funderburg. More money may come in after Jan. 1.

Area farmers hope to avoid repeat of 1985

Quest for 'hopper funds' moves to D.C.

The Associated Press

REPORT — A contingent of Magic Valley farmers will take its case to Washington, D.C., on Saturday for an intensified federal commitment to fighting grasshoppers if another infestation hits Idaho next spring.

"We hope to get them to understand what is needed here," said Minidoka County farmer Steve Young, chairman of the Hopper Committee, which represents southern Idaho farmers.

"We're after money, number one, but also experienced people and equipment," Young said. "If the government owns one acre or a million, they need to be responsible for it."

The federal government pumped more than $12 million into Idaho to conduct a two-month spraying program last year over more than 6 million acres of southern Idaho farm and rangeland. But losses from the grasshopper infestation — considered the worst in 30 years — still have been estimated in excess of $11 million.

Many producers felt the government waited too long to take action against the insects, which spawned on federally owned range. In addition, money to finance the spraying was unavailable in the spring and was secured only because of pressure from officials throughout the West.

Once the money was available, regulations of the U.S. Animal Plant and Health Inspection Service, along with problems contracting for crop-dusters caused further delays, some have said.

The Hopper Committee is seeking quicker action.

"We want them to let bids in December or January, which will include a retailer set to assure the planes will be ready when they are needed," Young said. "We're after a change in APHIS of their concept to protect rangeland instead of cropland." At this time there is no cropland protection program.

Officials called last summer's massive spraying operation successful, with a kill ratio in the area of 90 percent. But, with hundreds of grasshoppers per square yard in some areas, enough may have survived to threaten another infestation next spring under the right weather conditions, entomologists said.

A state grasshopper task force has been trying to find ways to handle another hopper invasion and to cover losses suffered by farmers or other producers indirectly affected, such as beekeepers.

The U.S. Senate has approved legislation earmarking $18 million for spraying next year, should another infestation occur.

The Magic Valley group is scheduled to meet next week with APHIS Administrator Bert Hawkins, Bureau of Land Management Director Bob Burford, Idaho's congressional delegation and other officials.

The committee also will discuss wheat grading with the deputy administrator of the Federal Grain Inspection Service and ethanol production from grains with an industry executive.

In addition to Young, members of the contingent going to Washington include plant pathologist Terry Miller, Cassia County Extension Agent Richard Garrard, Kendall Jones, Bill Hepworth, Jack Hoffman and Rosemary Haley.

Kimberly council shuts doors to consider reports on police

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly City Council met in executive session Tuesday night to consider information from two investigative reports on the city Police Department, but City Attorney Richard Greenwood said little was accomplished.

Councilmembers and Mayor Ron Jones authorized Greenwood to issue a brief release following the closed session. In that release Wednesday, Greenwood said a report from the Idaho attorney general's office, following an extensive investigation by that agency, "pointed out several significant errors in practices, procedure and conduct over the past several years" in the department.

But the statement did not disclose any factors pointed out in an equally lengthy investigative report by the Twin Falls Police Department.

The attorney general's report was completed several weeks ago and sent to Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter. After reviewing the report she said there was no evidence in the report that would support prosecution of anyone in the department.

A second investigation, requested by members of the Kimberly City Council and made by Commander Garry Corder of the Twin Falls Police Detective Division, was completed this week and submitted to Baxter. Copies were furnished to Kimberly City Council members Tuesday.

Greenwood said no decisions could be made at the Tuesday night session because it was not a public meeting. He said the mayor and councilmembers left the meeting with plans to further consider both reports and to make up their minds as to what changes may be needed.

"Until a final determination is made, the official reports will not be released to the public," Greenwood said. "Further meetings of the council will be held to deal with the two reports, and any decisions made will come in public as required by law."

He said it will not be up to him to decide if the reports are to be made public.

In announcing earlier that the attorney general's report provided no evidence to warrant prosecution, Baxter said seven of the nine allegations against the Police Department could not be prosecuted. And the attorney general's report recommended no prosecution because the acts were alleged to have occurred at a time no longer covered under the statute of limitations. Two others did not warrant any legal action, she reported.

Mayor Jones asked the attorney general's office to make an investigation of Kimberly police procedures last May. But he evoked strong criticism from several councilmembers because they were not aware of his action until investigators came into the community.

Councilmembers later said they had no objection to the investigation itself and recommended it continue, but they asked for a second inquiry by Twin Falls police officers.

most Vietnam veterans also talk much about the war until recently.
Creekmore said he hopes the wall will bring people out to talk about the war and to get in touch with their feelings by getting in touch with other veterans.

Poring through a well-thumbed paperback directory of the 50,000 names on the wall, comrades, who the names wanted, and then walked down the wall's length to the panel where the name was engraved in the stone.
There they stood gazing and running their finger across the smooth photo surface to raise the texture of the wall and in doing so smooth some memory of the dead.

"This'll Be The Day."
On a table in the north end of the arena displays of propaganda flew, small crowds.
Standing behind the table where he held material to support the effort to bring back troops missing in action, who may still be held as prisoners of war, Jim Thomas said, "The Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Falls through the snow to pick-up the replica was a good final mission."

Utah braces for more snow

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Utahns prepared to break out the boots and shovels once again as the rain showers of Thanksgiving began making way for a powerful Pacific storm expected to slam in to the Beehive State late Friday.
A winter storm watch was in effect for the southern two-thirds of the state Friday and Saturday, and travelers' advisories were issued by the National Weather Service for northeastern and central Utah.

Blaring above the clusters and individuals walking the wall, a speaker played recordings of the military songs of Vietnam. Interspersed with the Vietnam-era popular music, like Arlo Guthrie's "City of New Orleans," the Moody Blues' "Nights in White Satin," and Buddy Holly's

Southern and central Utah were expected to be hit hardest by the new storm, with 4 to 6 inches of snow likely in valley locations and a foot or more in the mountains by Saturday afternoon, Alders said.
Wasatch Front ski resorts reported up to 14 inches of new snow Friday morning, but most valleys received only rain. Snow was reported in the Uintah Basin and Carbon County, he said.
Roads were "no problem" along the Wasatch Front, where the bulk of holiday traffic was concentrated, Alders said.

Cold hurts crops in Washington

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) - Subzero temperatures and blowing snow have caused some damage to crops in Washington, says Washington State University Cooperative Extension agents.
The unseasonable weather hit with about 15 percent of Franklin County's carrot crop still in the ground, said Erik Sorensen, an area extension agent.

where about 1,200 of the state's 4,000 acres of carrots are grown. Carrots for the process market are usually harvested from August through November.
Growers may still try to harvest process market carrots if temperatures warm up, Sorensen said. Frozen carrot tops can be removed during processing.

Some areas, the snow arrived early enough to insulate the winter wheat crop from the frigid temperatures that followed.
"We're happy we had the snow cover before the weather started turning cold," said Tom Hoffmann, an extension agent in Colfax.

Six die in wreck on U.S. 93

HOLLISTER - Six people lost their lives and three were injured Friday night in an auto crash on U.S. 93 south of Hollister.
Officers at the scene reported that all six people killed were riding in the same car, said Idaho State Police dispatcher, Trudy Boswell. The three injured passengers had to be extricated from the wreckage of a second car. Police were still working at the accident scene at press time. The road was blocked for some time while the accident was being cleared.

Walter Hamby, inspector at the Idaho Dept. of Entry, south of Hollister, said he called police about 9 p.m., when a motorist stopped at the port to report the crash. There was, however, 200 more than a mile south of the port, he said.

Hamby said roads were snow-packed and slick at the time of the accident.
Names of the victims and other details were not available late Friday, police said.

Woman hurt in Blue Lakes crash

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls woman was hurt seriously, but six children riding with her escaped severe injury in a head-on crash on Blue Lakes Boulevard north Friday afternoon.
Irene R. Hance, 38, was under intensive care in unstable condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center late Friday night.

When it went out of control, slid across the snow-covered middle lane and struck a southbound auto head-on, police reported.
That auto, which was driven by Kimberly Mullins, 18, of Sagle, Boise, Calif., slid into a third car, which was driven by Larry Lynn Studer, 20, of Twin Falls, according to police. Neither of those two drivers were hurt.

James Milson, who investigated. One of the six children with her, which including four of her own children, sustained a cut, and was treated at a doctor's office, he said.
Two tots, ages 1 and 3, were riding in infant car seats and were uninjured. None of the drivers' apparel was wearing seat belts, police said.

Truck jumps sidewalk, lands inside store

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls man drove his truck into the window of the Fashion Crossroads clothing store Friday morning.
According to a report by the Twin Falls police, 60-year-old

Charles Darwin Huller of 593 Fillmore Ave. E. was parked in front of the store at 1301 Flaker Ave. E. At about 10 a.m., Huller reached over to unlock his passenger door and stepped on the gas pedal. The pickup truck jumped the sidewalk and landed partially in the store, the report stated.

Huller wasn't injured or cited. There was, however, $20,000 damage to his truck and about $1,800 damage to the store.

Murderer hires private eye

PROVO, Utah (AP) - A renowned private investigator says he'll work for mass murderer Henry Lee Lucas in an effort to clear him in hundreds of murder cases, including three in Utah.
Private investigator Jay J. Armes of El Paso, Texas, has joined the defense attempt for Lucas, charged in the murders of three women in Utah. However, Provo police say it's unlikely that Lucas ever will be tried in Utah, because there are too many cases pending against him in other counties.

Lucas confessed to hundreds of murders across the United States, but later recanted his confessions, saying that he only did so to embarrass police and get better jail living conditions.
"I'm intent on proving that Lucas did not kill the 600 women that he is charged with," Armes said. "And, as in all the cases that I take, I guarantee results."

Provo police say they still are confident that Lucas killed former Mormon missionary George Schamp in her home the night of June 30, 1978. City investigator Charles Pierpont, a Lieutenant in the Provo Police Department said he's sure Lucas committed the murder because he "knew things that only the killer could have known."

Quake aid from Utah proves low

OGDEN, Utah (AP) - Despite a plea from Gov. Norm Bangert for contributions, Utah's "Help Mexico Month" campaign has proven a disappointment, with only $1,244 collected in a special state fund for earthquake relief, officials say.
On Oct. 16, in announcing creation of a fund for earthquake relief fund, Bangert urged all Utahns to contribute.

State officials acknowledge the fund-raising effort has been hampered by a number of problems including that the state Social Services Department, the agency designated by the governor to administer the fund, apparently was given no warning of Bangert's proclamation and therefore was given no input into how the program was to be operated.

The campaign also suffered from lack of follow-up publicity to Bangert's proclamation. Further, Hispanic activists already had launched their own relief effort and it took weeks for supervisors of the state and private funds to begin talking about working together.

Seventh-Day Adventists pitch in to make church a reality

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

BUILH — A vision of a new Seventh-Day Adventist church in Buhl became an earthly reality this month with donations of money, time and labor from local church members.

For several years the congregations of the Twin Falls and Filer Seventh-Day Adventist churches have had a dream of a church in Buhl, says Shane Dresen, the pastor of the three churches.

Work on the 5,000-square-foot church, classrooms and kitchen was started in July with a major donation from Dr. Ralph Drake of Twin Falls "to get it going," Dresen says. The Idaho Seventh-Day Adventist Conference in Boise then contributed $25,000 toward the building fund and more money came out of the pockets of local church members, he says.

The local members also donated their labor and some materials to build the church, the pastor says. Most of the construction was done by Don Oltman and Orville Hamilton, two Twin Falls church members, who are also members of the national Seventh-Day Adventist church organization that consists of church members who donate their time and labor to building new churches and church schools across the country.

Rusty Biggs also donated concrete work, and Al Schaak provided paint, and his time, the pastor says.

"Altogether about 30 people helped build the new church," he says. "So it's been an old-fashioned building job," he says. "It really pulls us together as a family."

By saving the cost of labor and spending about $115,000 in materials, Dresen says, the new church "is worth approximately $250,000."

The church was built with "sacrificial" no gimmicks, "he says.

The new Buhl church has nearly 60 members, some of whom previously attended the Twin Falls church.

Before the church was built on Highway 30, east of Buhl, former pastor Lee Larson held community Bible classes in Buhl at a rented public hall.

Later the Calvary Assembly of God in Buhl, which holds Sunday services, invited the Seventh-Day Adventists to use its facilities, since they meet on Saturdays.

Although Dresen has been pastor of the local churches for only two months, he was already in on the ground level of the Buhl building when he was still pastor of the Heyburn church.

Larson asked Dresen for ideas, since Dresen and his congregation had designed and built their church in 1982.

As pastor of the three churches in Twin Falls, Filer and Buhl, Dresen says he is busy, but he receives plenty of assistance in conducting services.

"I've got some young bucks that love to preach and love to teach," he says.

Dresen says that sometime in December there will be a grand opening of the Buhl church, which is open to everyone.

U.S. church groups consider use of economic leverage on social issues

By ROBERT FURLLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Church groups armed with $10 billion worth of stock in American corporations are preparing to push their views on such issues as South African investment and nuclear research at shareholder meetings next spring.

Seeking to influence company policies on religious or moral grounds, these groups are armed with a recent federal court decision that makes their voting shares more potent at stockholder meetings.

The church groups don't win victories, but they often score victories on policy issues — at least partly because companies "don't want" controversial social issues raised publicly year after year.

A rule adopted in 1983 by the Securities and Exchange Commission would have made it harder to renew ballot fights on social issues after initial defeats at shareholder meetings.

But a federal court decision in Washington two months ago threw out the 1983 regulation on procedural grounds and the SEC says it won't seek to reinstate the order, at least for now.

The court ruling has enabled activists to mount 15 stockholder suits, that would have been barred under the 1983 SEC rule. These challenges involve such corporate giants as AT&T and IBM.

Since the court's decision, activists have proceeded full speed ahead to file formal complaints, Timothy Smith, executive director of the New York-based Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility, said this week. Some 70 or so ballot efforts have been filed so far.

Israel's Peres probes LDS plans

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres (proposed four religious political parties that he will investigate their claims that a proposed Brigham Young University center in Jerusalem plans to convert Jews to Christianity, Israel radio reported Tuesday.

The radio said the religious political parties told Peres they would not serve in his government if he did not act against what they consider to be a $15 million missionary center.

The building on the Mount of Olives is planned as an annex of Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, and will offer academic courses to American students, BYU officials say.

Religious Jews say they suspect the center will be committed to proselytizing because seeking converts is a tenet of the Mormon faith as founded in 1830 in the United States by Joseph Smith.

BYU president Jeffrey Holland said three months ago during a visit here that he would accept a public supervisory board to ensure the center is not used to convert Jews.

Holland said he would even exclude Israel from its cultural and academic activities if that was a condition for the project's completion.

Spacewalkers' assemblages test construction techniques

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Two spacewalking astronauts quickly assembled a 45-foot beam and a pyramid-shaped structure in the cargo bay of Shuttle Atlantis on Friday in a test of construction techniques that future homesteaders may use to build villages in orbit.

AP Wirephoto

As if building a giant Tinkertoy, astronauts Jerry Ross, left, and Sherwood Spring place struts on a tower

Sherwood Spring and Jerry Ross, working with the precision of a well-drilled team, built the long beam in less than 40 minutes and were able to construct a 12-foot pyramid in 11 minutes. This was much faster than experts had predicted, and Mission Control said the spacewalkers were an hour ahead of schedule at one point, despite occasional breaks to enjoy the view from their 220-mile-high construction site.

The beam was assembled from 39 aluminum tubular struts that snap together like Tinkertoys. The astronauts used six similar, but longer, struts to build a pyramid-shaped tower. Both structures were put together and then quickly taken apart, with the astronauts performing the cycle six times with the pyramid.

As they went along, the spacewalkers picked up speed. "This is making out pretty slick," said Spring. "This is pretty good." Earlier, he noted, "This is amazing, absolutely amazing."

"These gloves really have a good grip," said Ross. "It works super." "You guys are doing great," said Mission Control.

After building the beam once, the astronauts immediately began taking it apart, and reported that disassembly went even faster. In 65 minutes, they completed one entire cycle of construction and disassembly and started on the pyramid.

Television views showed Ross standing on one side of a platform with a rack of struts and Spring at the other side with another rack. Spring would snap yellow-coated struts into place, building one side of a segment, or bay, and Ross then would rotate the platform and secure other struts. When the bay was completed, they slid it upward, and started building another segment attached to the first.

The completed beam had 10 bays, and Spring told Mission Control, "For your information, the first bay took two minutes, 30 seconds."

Later, the astronauts got even faster. Eventually, the beam reached the height of a four-story building. Each of the bays had nine struts, which are 1-inch diameter tubular bars 4 1/2 and 6 feet in length. Both ends of each strut had sockets and spring-powered sleeves. The sockets mated to each other to form rigid joints. No tools were needed.

Several times the astronauts paused to look at the Earth below and one noted, "Ahhhhh, that's beautiful."

"We envy you your view," said Mission Control. Experts hope that the spacewalk and a similar one planned for Friday will demonstrate the ability of astronauts to join laboratories, living quarters and power modules to create space stations and even communities in orbit.

'Star Wars' proponent, science adviser resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential science adviser George Keyworth, a principal proponent of President Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense plan, has submitted his resignation, saying Friday he has achieved his goals in the job.

"I've been here a long time, longer than any of my predecessors," said the 46-year-old physicist who assumed the post 4 1/2 years ago. "And I've accomplished what I set out to do."

In a telephone interview Friday night from his home, Keyworth said he feels the space-based Strategic Defense Initiative program, popularly called Star Wars, is moving ahead and no longer needs him to push to ensure its survival.

Keyworth said he handed in his resignation to White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan on Wednesday. It is effective Dec. 31.

Hijack victim's body returned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The flag-draped casket of Scarlett Marie Rogenkamp, 38, the only American killed during last week's hijacking of an Egyptian jetliner, was brought home Friday and unloaded without ceremony from an airliner.

A light rain was falling as her casket was gently lowered from a Pan American World Airways flight from London. The casket was placed inside an enclosed luggage carrier and driven away.

The woman's parents, Vernon and Hedy Peterson, live in Occandine, Calif., about 40 miles north of San Diego.

Plane engine fire forces evacuation

CHICAGO (AP) — A fire in the engine of a Republic Airlines DC-9 jet forced the evacuation of 45 passengers at O'Hare International Airport, but officials said Friday there was only minimal damage to the plane.

"It was just some fuel in the tank of the engine," airline spokesman Walter Heilman said about Thursday's fire. "It apparently was nothing serious because the aircraft is back in service."

None of the passengers was injured and were shifted to other flights, Heilman said.

Israel delays reply in Pollard spy case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, expressing growing impatience with Israel, said Friday that country has provided no information in the Jonathan Jay Pollard spy case a week after it had pledged its full cooperation.

Deputy spokesman Charles Redman expressed dismay that Israel had recalled without explanation two diplomats who were said to have been the principal contacts of the 31-year-old Navy intelligence analyst.

"The Israeli government has assured us of their willingness to cooperate. However, they have not yet provided the full and prompt cooperation we requested a week ago," he said.

"We regret this delay and are urging the Israeli government to respond promptly."

In Jerusalem, government sources said Israel may allow the two, who reportedly worked for a secret defense ministry unit, to be questioned by U.S. officials.

The source said the two men could return to Washington for questioning if they kept their diplomatic immunity, which would shield them from answering questions deemed detrimental to Israeli security.

Redman's remarks represented an unusually harsh public rebuke of the chief U.S. ally in the Middle East but he insisted that there is no indication that relations between the two countries have been "fundamentally interrupted."

Specifically, Redman said the United States wants all the information Israel has in connection with the case, including the return of any documents Pollard may have given to the Israelis and access of U.S. investigators to the Israeli officials involved. Pollard was arrested along with his wife, Ann Henderson-Pollard, 25.

Israel was reported to have assembled hundreds of documents it obtained from Pollard but U.S. officials, speaking privately, said the papers had not yet been turned over to the United States.

Meanwhile, ABC News, quoting unnamed sources, said Friday night that the FBI is investigating reports that Pollard met with Israeli Prime Minister Peres or his aides when Peres visited Washington last month.

Much of the U.S. displeasure in the case centers on the return to Israel of a Friday of Jim Raviv, scientific attaché at the Israeli Embassy in Washington, and Yoseph Yagur, a scientific consul in New York.

Redman said only that Israeli officials confirmed Wednesday that two Israeli diplomats had left the country five days earlier. He did not identify them.

Israel maintains that it was not told by U.S. officials until Monday — three days after the departure of Raviv and Yagur — that the Reagan administration did not want any Israeli personnel involved in the case to leave the country.

Mail-order bride scheme 'backfires' to success

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Tom Williams says he really didn't expect to end up on Phil Donahue's national television show when he came up with his "mail-order bride" idea a couple of months back. "I stuck a $27.50 ad in the paper to provide women for my men," said Williams, who is building a replica 1800s-mining camp as a tourist attraction at Paystoke, 80 miles south of Anchorage.

The ad appeared in September. Then TV networks, magazines and the wire services had stories about Williams and the men at Paystoke. Donahue featured him last week.

"It backfired, I guess," Williams said Tuesday at a news conference he called to announce his engagement to Jill Bandoek, one of hundreds of women who answered the call for brides.

Backfired? Williams has received the kind of free publicity that Madison Avenue advertising men dream about. People from all over the country are calling to reserve hotel rooms that haven't been built yet. He has scrapped plans to build a 100-room hotel by 1987 — now it's a 300-room hotel, to be finished by next July.

"Well, it's a good backfire," Williams allowed. "We feel like we should go along with it." But, he added, "if it becomes a nuisance, and it interferes with my business or personal life... then there won't be any more interviews."

people for so many operations then, he said.

One of the organ recipients, John Norberg of Minneapolis, was given an unusual single-lung transplant that allowed doctors to use the lung and heart for two different men.

Doctors said it was the first time the heart and a lung of a donor were used for separate patients.

Organs of suicide victim help seven others live

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A West Virginia man who died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound provided organs for seven patients in a series of transplant operations at Presbyterian-University Hospital earlier this month.

It was the largest organ donation ever obtained from a single person, doctors said.

The heart, the pancreas, one lung, two kidneys and two corneas of the unnamed suicide victim were donated. About a dozen surgeons were required for the nearly simultaneous heart, lung and pancreas transplants on Nov. 15.

"We had to use four operating rooms at once — one for the heart, one for the lung, one for the pancreas and one to remove organs from the donor," said Dr. Bartley Griffith, who performed the lung transplant.

"Five years ago this would not have been possible at this institution," said Dr. Robert Hardesty, another transplant surgeon. The hospital did not have enough trained

Police say man slain because of friendly peck on cheek

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A man who kissed a woman he knew on the cheek and wished her a happy Thanksgiving was followed and killed by the woman's companion, police said.

Investigators said they had no suspects Friday in the Thursday night slaying of Albert Jiles, 20, of New Orleans.

Police said Jiles and two friends were walking in the French Quarter when Jiles saw the woman, kissed her and wished her a happy holiday.

A man who was with the woman took offense and hit Jiles, police said, but Jiles' friends stopped the fight and left with Jiles.

S. African battle escalates

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The main South African guerrilla group said Friday that its men planted land-mines and rocketed energy plants this week in a "generalized escalation" of the battle against white rule.

The mines, which killed a man on a tractor and wrecked police and army vehicles, and the rocket attacks Thursday added new elements to South Africa's 15 months of violence.

The attack on the refineries struck at the heart of the country's energy program. Police Commissioner P.J. Coetzee said the four to six rockets missed and the refineries were not shut down.

In a statement teleaxed to The Associated Press from its offices in Lusaka, Zambia, the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla group said the mines and rockets marked "a generalized escalation of both the political and military struggle against the South African racist regime."

Soviets say spouses will leave

MOSCOW (AP) — The emigration agency director has confirmed that some Soviet citizens married to Americans will be allowed to join their spouses, but did not say who or how many, a member of the "divided families" group said Friday.

Rudolf A. Kuznetsov, chief of the All-Union Department of Visas and Registrations, said only that "a group" of spouses would be allowed to leave and the other requests would be rejected, the source said, asking not to be identified by name.

A U.S. embassy official said he had heard the report of Kuznetsov's comments, but the embassy had no new information on the status of visa applications.

Crash-site dig to end Tuesday

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The U.S.-Vietnamese excavation of a B-52 crash site in Vietnam will end Tuesday, and the next-day Hanoi will hand over what it says are the remains of seven Americans killed in the Vietnam War, a Vietnamese Embassy spokesman said.

He gave no further details of the joint excavation in his statement Friday.

A team began digging at the site near Hanoi Nov. 19 and has recovered nearly 20 bone fragments and enough aircraft parts to determine that a B-52 crashed in the area.

The Vietnamese say a B-52 bomber was shot down by missiles Dec. 20, 1972, and four American airmen were killed.

Wreck closes seaway again

VALLEYFIELD, Quebec (AP) — A freighter slammed into a drawbridge on the St. Lawrence Seaway Friday, blocking the waterway only weeks after a 24-day closure stopped ships at the height of the shipping season. Two people were injured in the latest incident.

A Seaway spokesman in Quebec, Richard Juteau, said the Beauharnois Canal would be closed for at least 24 hours while engineers checked damage done to the St. Louis bridge. He said that if the drawbridge was not weakened, ships could sail around the area where a 60-foot-long section of the bridge dropped into the water.

Juteau said six ships were waiting in the canal by Friday afternoon, and predicted the number would grow quickly unless the canal is reopened soon.

Three trucks, and a car plunged into the St. Lawrence River after the accident, but no one was seriously injured, according to Cpl. Gerald Dubuc of Quebec's provincial police. He said two people in one of the vehicles were pulled from the water by the ship's crew and taken to a hospital, where they were listed in good condition.

Change for remarried Catholics 'unrealistic'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Four leading U.S. churchmen on Friday dismissed as "unrealistic" suggestions by Austrian, Japanese and Canadian prelates that a way be found to allow divorced and remarried Roman Catholics to receive communion.

"I don't see the possibility suggested would really be acceptable," Cardinal Bernard Law of Boston told reporters.

"Pastoral concern certainly is there, but part of our pastoral concern for the whole church has to be for the very-high value of the indissolubility of marriage and the maintenance of that very important key value for us is essential," he said.

Three other U.S. prelates who also were at the news conference gave similar answers when asked to comment on the proposals made at the extraordinary synod assessing the impact of the reforms of the Second Vatican Council.

"We have no evidence that such an accommodation could easily be made," said Bishop James W. Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, president of the U.S. Bishops' conference. "The basic question is how a person who continues in what is considered a state of sin be said to repent when in fact that person continues to live in remission that is invalid."

The church does not recognize divorce and Catholics who marry again without an annulment are excluded from communion. A recent poll of American Catholics conducted by the New York Times and CBS News showed 73 percent favor the acceptance of remarriage.

Sabotage freezes trains

TOKYO (AP) — Leftist saboteurs cut railway cables at 34 points Friday, knocking out commuters and paralyzing Japan's vital train system and paralyzing commuter lifelines that carry millions of people to Tokyo, authorities said.

It was the worst disruption caused by violence since the 1960s to a rail system renowned for punctuality and good service. Mikio Takahashi, a spokesman for the state-owned Japan National Railways, said 6 million Tokyo commuters were affected and another half-million in the Osaka area of western Japan.

Police arrested 48 people, and searched offices of the 1,300-member radical leftist group Chukaku-ha (Middle Core Faction) and the headquarters of the small Chiba Motorers' Union, said Tadashi Ito, spokesman for the Tokyo Metropolitan Police.

He said authorities believed up to 300 Chukaku-ha members, in groups of about 10, set out at about 3 a.m. with wire cutters and clipped hundreds of coaxial and optical cables along railway tracks.

Eagles, Vandals ready for rematch

E. Washington fullback Joe Kniffen (left) will be important to the Eagle offense; Jon Cox, No. 45 (right) won't start today despite turning the key play last week against BSU

Eastern Washington coach Zornes delighted to have a second chance

By STEVE CRUMP
 Times-News sports editor

MOSCOW — Same song, second verse? Don't believe it, say Idaho's Dennis Erickson and Eastern Washington's Dick Zornes. "Obviously we played pretty well last time and they didn't play real well. They'll be playing a lot better this time. They've seen what we can do and they'll be ready."

At issue is a 42-21 regular-season win by the Vandals here Nov. 2, a game which Erickson says was among Idaho's best and which Zornes says was one of Eastern's worst of the season.

"I said before we played last time that we couldn't afford to get into a shooting match with them, and that's exactly what happened," says the EWU mentor, whose team is ranked 11th in the last I-AA poll. "They have a lot of weapons and with their speed and quickness they'll be a difficult matchup for you."

At stake today is a ticket to Cedar Falls, Iowa, for a Nov. 7 meeting with Northern Iowa University in the quarterfinals of the I-AA playoffs. Idaho, the Big Sky champion, was pitted against Independent EWU in the first round while Big Sky runner-up Nevada-Reno got a bye.

The Vandals are less than delighted at having to play Eastern again, but the Eagles are overjoyed at getting a second chance.

"We're really excited," says Zornes, whose school was rejected for Big Sky membership last year. "It's a nice thing for the school. It's a nice thing for the program. It's a great reward for having a good season. We faced a lot of obstacles and still finished 3-2 despite a difficult schedule with a lot of tough games."

Zornes says Eastern's unique situation will make the Vandals' home-field advantage less than it usually is. "After talking to a couple of people involved in the playoffs in the past, it seems that the secret of winning is having a home-field advantage. For that reason, going to Idaho will cause the least disturbance of any first-round matchup we can have."

Zornes says Eastern's game plan will be essentially the same today as it was last time.

"We can't afford to make very many mistakes and give them easy touchdowns," he says. "We can't give them touchdowns because they'll definitely earn a few on their own."

The Eagles gave up three turnovers in the earlier game, and all of them hurt. Idaho defensive back Ernest Sanders recovered a Craig Richardson fumble on the opening kickoff at the EWU 25 and on the next play the Vandals' Eric Yerber was in the end zone with a Rick Sloan pass. Richardson forced the second kickoff and recovered it at the 8. Fumbled to punt four plays later, the Eagles put the Vandals on the EWU 41 to set up Idaho's second scoring drive.

Down 14-0 with less than five minutes gone, Eastern never really got into the game.

"We're going to have to play with a lot more intensity," says Erickson, whose team is 9-2 and ranked fifth among I-AA teams. "We can't be complacent because we beat them before."

Part of Idaho's success last time was containing the high-octane passing game of Rick Worman and in limited EWU's rushing game to 46 yards, including minus-3 yards by fullback Joe Kniffen.

"They will make some changes, but I don't expect a lot of changes," says Erickson. "Just like us, they've stuck to the same thing offensively for 10 football games, and they're not going to change much now."

Eastern will be without the services for two of its defensive stalwarts — outside linebacker Bill Altano, who broke his leg last week against Idaho State, and strong safety Mark Cordes, who suffered a sprained ankle in that game.

"As banged up as we are on defense, I'm not sure what we can do to stop them," says Zornes. "Actually we were lucky to beat Idaho State (42-21) last week. We made a couple of interceptions in that game on the goal line and pulled a couple of big plays offensively."

Erickson regards that injury talk as gamesmanship. Erickson's walking wounded are sophomore cornerback Virgil Paulson, who sprained his ankle last week against Boise State, and senior offensive tackle Tom Cable, who aggravated a leg injury he suffered earlier in the season.

Off-injured senior Mike Johnston is scheduled to start in place of Paulson, while junior linebacker Mike Cox — who turned the Boise State game around by intercepting a Hazzen Chotes pass and returning it for a touchdown — is listed behind junior Shawn Nilsson at linebacker.

Erickson says his starting quarterback will be Rick Sloan, who was picked off five times against Boise State last week.

"Rick didn't have a good game, obviously, but he did some good things too. He's our quarterback, but I will say that if he runs into problems I'll probably go to (junior) Scott (Lineham) earlier than I would have last week."

Key matchups:
Mike Kingston (EWU defensive tackle) vs. Paul Taggart (Idaho center). Vandal guard Tom Cable is listed as doubtful for today's game; if he can't play, center Matt Watson will take his place and offensive line, which has dominated all of its opponents this season, is up the middle with just three healthy guards including Watson — and one of them is a freshman. In Kingston, the Eagles' best interior lineman, can generate some pressure on quarterback Rick Sloan. It could throw off the Vandals' running and passing games.
Mark Tidd (Idaho free safety) vs. Rick Worman (EWU quarterback): Idaho's secondary is the weak point on defense, all the more so because starting cornerback Virgil Paulson is doubtful for today's game. That puts even more pressure on Tidd, who is the linchpin of the Vandals' defensive backfield. Worman can be expected to pick up Idaho's cornerbacks, as most passing teams do, which means Tidd will have to be all over the field.
Russ Elliott (EWU strong safety) vs. Scott Aaker (Idaho tight end). Elliott will probably start in place of Mark Cordes, who was injured last week against Idaho State. Aaker gave Cordes a bad time in the two teams' previous game, up against a less experienced back, he can be expected to catch more passes and run even farther with them unless Elliott gets some help.
Mark Caldwell (Idaho offensive tackle) vs. Bob DeHorn (EWU outside linebacker): Eastern's pass rush in the Nov. 2 game was negligible, and the Eagles lost one of their best pass rushers, outside linebacker Bill Altano, against Idaho State last week. That will put a lot of pressure on Caldwell, who must find a way to get around the 278-pound Caldwell and Aaker, who lines up next to him.

UTEP hit by phone tap rumor

The Associated Press

PROVO, Utah — A rumor that a phone line was tapped to intercept Brigham Young University's offensive play calls during its game with the University of Texas at El Paso has UTEP officials a little put out.

Nobody seems to know how the gossip started, but it's spreading. UTEP football coaches and officials, who do not want the school's biggest victory in years tarnished.

The Miners recorded a major upset by beating the nationally ranked Cougars 23-16 in El Paso on Oct. 26. It was UTEP's only win of the season.

Members of the respective coaching staffs use phones in the press box to call-down plays to a coach on the sidelines.

This CSI squad can rip up the court

TWIN FALLS — There can be little doubt that after one showing, College of Southern Idaho fans have taken this bunch of basketball Golden Eagles to their collective bosom.

They are, in a word, entertaining. The first five that Coach Fred Tremble puts on the floor look quick — and then he sends in a couple of burners.

This type of talk always brings up the matter of regional and national championships — those things that tend to endear teams to fans. But this team can't — it can safely be predicted, not go 31-0 with the national championship and still remain a vivid memory in the minds of all CSI faithful.

For instance, you don't forget your first look at the satin-smooth performance of a Steve Hogens, the meteoric dash of a Victor Kelly, the controlled rage of a rebounding Ples Vann, the feeling of power and strength combined with fluidity of a Rick Sobers, the intensity of a Jerry Williams. Nor do you forget a not-overly-gifted Dan Drissen who will ed himself to be a fast-break leader out of the center position. This team will leave individual impressions with you that they don't call make the NBA. They do make CSI tradition.

One of the good ways to judge the progress of things is by gauging the reaction of those associated with the day-to-day routine of the team. Other students, other teachers, other coaches within the program. In that regard, CSI is an unqualified success in the mind of former Coach Karl Kleinkopf, who currently heads up the PE department.

"Hey, I don't know that this isn't the best basketball team we've had here in a lot of years and I do know it's going to be the best fun to watch." Kleinkopf giggled and grinned at the end of the gymnasium during the Utah State opener.

Another totally satisfied fan is CSI President Jerry Meyerhoefer.

"They are a fun team to watch and they have individuals with specialized talents that set them apart and still compliment each other. And the thing I like most is that we haven't had a second's problem with any of them," the president said.

Meyerhoefer has a very positive note in that statement — the one about specialized and individualized talents. This crop has great potential as a team. But because there is a Joe Johnson who can wow the world with his jumping ability, because there is an Eric Newman whose rebounding timing excites, because there is a Chris Blocker who might be the best thing that's hit here, because there is a Greg Boyd who can shoot with just about any former Eagle, because there are youngsters up the bench who would have started in other years, there is also speed for dissemination.

It has long been felt here that the arrival of one player years ago resulted in the swansong of another simply because the latter didn't understand the crowd could oggle over the one and still fully appreciate — if not as vocally — the abilities of the second.

It is easy for an Eric Newman to get 22 rebounds on work and sweat, hear the crowd swoon over a 12-foot snatch by Johnson — and Newman to resent it.

The key to this team, in the minds of Kleinkopf and Meyerhoefer, is a maturity to understand all that and play through it.

And while there are no dummies on the outfit, the truth is that leadership by experience and by example falls easily on the shoulders of Blocker.

Meyerhoefer has been impressed repeatedly by this easy flow toward a mutual goal that permeates the team. Blocker can't play if it's necessary and the rest will play hard.

"During one of those (pre-season) scrimmages CSI was beating one team pretty handily and some of the players had understandably let up a little," Meyerhoefer recalls. "Blocker told them, 'If you're not going to play hard, I'm going to sit down. I won't play with anyone that won't play hard.' I really like that."

Meyerhoefer also heard Blocker tell a teammate who had just been chewed out by Coach Trentkin practice "don't listen to how he says it, just listen to what he says." And really liked that, "Meyerhoefer said.

Trenkle showed up for the Utah State game Tuesday night at about 6:20 p.m. Blocker was already suited up and on the court practicing.

And Trenkle really liked that.
