New cancer treatment brings hopeful calls

By SANDY JOHNSON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — News of a promising new cancer treatment at the National Cancer Institute prompted a flood of calls to the federal center Thursday from people desperate for a cure from the disease.

"What they're saying is, our mother, our brother, our sister is dying at this very moment. We have nothing to lose. We want to be a candidate," said Carol Case, the institute's chief of public inquiries.

"Our 800 (telephone) numbers are jammed this morning," said Paul Van Nevel, the institute's associate director for communications.

The callers want information about a new treatment called adoptive immunotherapy that turns ordinary white blood cells into "killer cells" that attack malignant tumors.

The treatment was announced Wednesday in an article in the New England Journal of Medicine.

In 11 of 25 patients with advanced cancer, doctors were able to shrink tumors by at least 50 percent and, in one case, apparently eradicate the disease.

Officials cautioned that the treatment is still highly experimental, carries toxic side effects and is also very expensive. It is available only at the cancer institute in Bethesda, Md., a Washington suburb.

"This is really the first step," said Dr. Steven Rosenberg, director of the research project. "But it demonstrates that it is possible to manipulate the immune system and make a variety of cancers in a variety of locations disappear."

Rosenberg also cautioned that the experimental program can only treat about eight patients a month. We get several hundred inquiries a day.

Just as previous "breakthroughs" in the search for a cancer cure have spawned a huge public response, so has this one.

By mid-day Thursday 1,000 calls had poured into Cancer Information Service hotlines.

"My mother had a malignant brain tumor. The doctor says it will grow back and kill her. She has less than a year to live," one caller told an operator at the Rockville, Md., information center.

"I have colon cancer, a tumor on my liver. My prognosis was three months. I've passed that already. I saw the research on TV and I wanted to see how to get on the program and what it would cost me," one man said.

"What we're looking for are people searching for every possible cure for their loved ones. People are willing to go anywhere. They say, 'I have money, I'll do anything to buy my way into this.'" Ms. Case told a reporter.

She recalled that in 1978, when a cancer drug called thymidine was introduced, "We had called thymidine from their death beds. They heard about this new drug and they wanted to take it. It's very reminiscent of those times."

Tests of the disease-fighting protein interferon in 1980 also brought a deluge of calls.

Final phase for farm bill starts slowly

By JIM DRINKARD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House and Senate conferees began negotiations on the 1985 farm bill Thursday under a Reagan administration threat to veto the legislation if they don't rein in the cost of agriculture subsidies.

But they immediately ran into snags on relatively minor issues such as wool subsidies and sugar import quotas, and senior committee members from both sides retired to the office of Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., to see if agreements could be reached behind closed doors.

"We're not going to get anything done if we do it one item at a time, Dole said. "A package, offstage would probably be quicker."

In a letter from Agriculture Secretary John Block and budget director James C. Miller III, Congress was put on notice that President Reagan will stick to his allowance of $50 billion for crop programs over the next three years.

That letter, and one from Secretary of State George Shultz on the subject of sugar quotas, rubbed some members the wrong way. Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., said they were "tantamount to blackmail and coercion."

The House version of the farm bill has been estimated to cost $55 billion through 1988 for commodity subsidies. The Senate bill $38 billion. Both are far above the $34.8 billion spending guideline Congress set for itself earlier this year, and would mean at least near-record farm spending for the near future.

While saying both bills make some progress toward the administration goal of a more "market-oriented" farm sector, Block and Miller said the legislation repeats some of the

AIDS report sees mother-child link

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Pregnant women infected with AIDS may run a risk as high as 65 percent of passing the infection to their unborn child, the Centers for Disease Control said Thursday in guidelines calling for testing of high-risk women who are or may become pregnant.

The guidelines, to be published Friday in the CDC's weekly bulletin, deliberately avoid any mention of abortion in the case of an infected pregnant woman.

But it does urge counseling for such women on the risk, and Dr. Anthony S. Fauci of the National Institutes of Health, conceded that: "I think it's naive to think it wouldn't come up."

The guidelines, one of a series being issued by CDC and the Public Health Service on AIDS precautions, deals with the most innocent of the victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome — infants who contract the deadly illness before birth.

The CDC says it has recorded 217 cases of AIDS in children, of whom more than 130 have died. In 165 of those cases — 76 percent — the mother was the only risk factor.

While the risk of transmission is not firmly established, said Dr.

Donald R. Hopkins — CDC deputy director — "limited available data suggest a high rate of transmission — in one study as high as 65 percent."

In addition, Hopkins said, researchers have found one case in which AIDS appears to have been transmitted to the child through breast feeding.

Besides the risk to the infant, pregnancy may increase the risk to a woman who carries the virus but shows no symptoms, the guidelines say. Pregnancy sometimes suppresses the body's immune system, so AIDS virus in a woman's bloodstream may be more likely to actually cause the disease.

The guidelines recommend counseling for pregnant women carrying the antibody but, carefully, avoid mentioning abortion as an option.

Dr. Donald Ian Macdonald, acting assistant secretary for health in the Health and Human Services Department, said that was part of a deliberate decision to keep the guidelines "abortion neutral."

"We've tried to present data," Macdonald said. "This is an abortion-neutral paper. We neither recommend nor do not recommend abortion."

He said the authors approached the guidelines "not as moralists, not as politicians, but as physicians."

Business fee to fund agency

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The newly created Idaho Department of Commerce is developing a licensing fee on the state's businesses to bolster its budget and establish economic development programs.

Department Director David O. Porter said Thursday the fee would range from $50 to $500 and would be linked to the number of workers employed by a business.

Porter and Gov. John Evans reviewed the fee with a group of Magic Valley business leaders and legislators trying to organize an agricultural trade center in Twin Falls.

Porter estimated the fee could raise as much as $2 million for operation of the new department, which is responsible for economic and community development programs.

"If we are to develop an international marketing program in Idaho, we're going to have to look at funding the Department of Commerce," he said at the meeting.

Evans said Thursday he supports creation of a fee, he remarked specifically for the department, instead of approaching the state Legislature for a large increase from the general fund.

The precise proposal still is being designed.

State officials in Porter's department and in the Idaho Tax Commission are working on ways to assess the fee. Two options may be as an independent licensing fee

Evans sees promise for CSI trade center

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A proposed agricultural trade center at Magic Valley College in Twin Falls, Idaho, could help the state and link it to other agricultural trade centers in the West.

Gov. John Evans said Thursday he sees promise in the idea of a trade center at Magic Valley College, which is the largest college in the Magic Valley region.

Evans said Thursday he supports creation of a fee, he remarked specifically for the department, instead of approaching the state Legislature for a large increase from the general fund.

The precise proposal still is being designed.

State officials in Porter's department and in the Idaho Tax Commission are working on ways to assess the fee. Two options may be as an independent licensing fee in the Northwest. Surrounding states pump as much as $3 million yearly into their agencies dealing with economic development, he said.

Fee income also would grow with the economy, Porter said. As firms became more profitable and took on more workers, they would pay more.

The employee-based fee, often nicknamed a "head tax," would spread the costs of economic development programs across almost all of the state's businesses, with each paying a small part, the state official said.

Business executives consulted about the proposal so far have backed the idea enthusiastically.

The money raised would fund the department's in-house operations and its entire economic development thrust, he said, including international marketing programs.

State lawmakers who heard the proposal gave it some prospect for success in the upcoming legislative session.

"My opinion is that it would have a fair chance," said Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly. "That approach is viable."

The fee proposal may need some careful steering, he cautioned, remembering battles over creation of the state department.

Sen. Noy Brackett, R-Twin Falls, who is vice chairman of the Revenue and Taxation Committee, agreed.

Idaho has at least 23,500 businesses with payrolls, according to 1983 U.S. Census figures. Most have fewer than 100 employees.

Twin Falls drug dealer receives 3-year sentence

By QUINN KRYSON
The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls drug dealer was sentenced to three years in prison Thursday for selling narcotics.

The 33-year-old defendant, who was not named, was sentenced to three years in the Idaho State Penitentiary for selling narcotics.

The defendant was charged with selling narcotics to a minor.

The defendant was found guilty of selling narcotics to a minor.

one of the counts on a technically perfect sentencing Thursday.

Campbell was ordered to serve one year each on the four tax counts out the terms will run at the same time. He was ordered to spend two years in prison on the drug charges.

The sentence means a minimum of 24 months in prison for Campbell, praised by friends and acquaintances as a man who helped others. His attorney, Gar Heckley of Boise, filed the conviction and sentence which will be appealed.

Campbell also will serve three years on parole after his jail sentence is finished.

Heckley described drug dealing as "one of the most serious crimes occurring in our society on a large-scale basis," with a "tremendous negative impact" on society.

He said Campbell dealt drugs over a long period, from the fall of 1983 until January of 1985. "There is no reason why he shouldn't be in jail," Heckley said.

He urged Ryan to sentence Campbell to five years in prison and impose "heavy, stiff fines" for the tax violations. The maximum penalty on each drug count could have been 15 years in prison and a $50,000 fine. The maximum on the tax charges could have been three years in prison and fines of $100,000 on each count.

Drug and alcohol abuse counselor Linda Mazzarelli, Boise, who said she was a former drug user, said Campbell became active in an anti-drug program in the Twin Falls area, called "Chemical People," and made "significant contributions" to the organization.

Because of the investigation into Campbell's drug dealing, he was asked to drop out, she said, and the Twin Falls "Chemical People" group never amounted to much after that.

When Heckley asked Ms. Mazzarelli if Campbell's contributions to the anti-drug effort offset the damage he caused by dealing drugs, she said no. "But people can change."

Former Twin Falls attorney Tom Stephan, now practicing in Orlando, Fla., said Campbell helped him recognize that he has a drinking problem.

"I am an alcoholic," said Stephan, even though he doesn't have a drink for six months. Campbell kept reminding him to do something about his drinking problem, enlisting the support of a friend, District Judge Daniel Meehl.

Stephan said Campbell eventually arranged a mid-June meeting with his father, Robert D. Stephan, Meehl, and another Boise lawyer, T.J. Jones, at which he was forced to confront his drinking problem.

"I'm very thankful" for Campbell's help, Stephan said. "If he could help other people like he helped me."

He said he felt some people, such as Campbell, could use substances such as alcohol and drugs without abusing it. "I have never seen him abuse a substance," Stephan said.

Robert Stephan, Tom Stephan's father, also praised Campbell. "I'm very grateful to Mitch Campbell. I attribute my son's recovery to him," he said.

Social worker Pharis Stanger, Twin Falls, said Campbell was licensed as a foster parent from July of 1984 until March of 1985. He took in several juveniles with problems, and there never was a report of drug violations while Campbell served as a foster parent.

As far as he was concerned, Stanger said he felt Campbell did a good job. Campbell was not into drugs when Campbell served as a foster parent.

Hackney urged Campbell, saying as early as mid-1984, Campbell was trying to break away from the drug scene. "He could be a positive asset to the community," Hackney said.

Campbell said he got into drugs when the prevalent social attitude seemed to tolerate the use of drugs and alcohol as long as they were not abused.

He said he at first saw "no harm" in supplying drugs to his friends, but eventually concluded he was contributing to their problems.

Campbell said the drug problem will be resolved by putting people into jail.

"I don't have the answers for you," said Ryan.

Ryan acknowledged he was having problems with the case. He described the elder Stephan as "one of my school and dearest friends," and a law school classmate.

telephone calls. "Five years' later, Interleukin is still under experimentation," said David Lehmann of the American Cancer Society in New York.

When (word about) Interleukin was first spread around the country, everyone was calling them. Anything something sounds like a new cancer treatment, the public is mobilized," said Judith Stein, project director of the Cancer Information Service at the Institute. The service's toll-free telephone number, 1-800-A-CANCER, has been swamped with calls about Rosenberg's therapy.

The procedure uses Interleukin-2, a natural hormone-of the immune system, to transform ordinary white blood cells into cancer warriors. These cells are treated outside the body and then injected into the patient, where they attack cancerous tumors throughout the body.

One woman treated suffered from melanoma, a dangerous form of skin cancer, that had spread throughout her body. The treatment wiped out the cancer, and she is free of the disease a year after the therapy.

Another patient had renal cancer that had spread to his lungs. After the therapy, three lung growths disappeared and two others shrank and were surgically removed.

Still another patient had kidney cancer that had spread to his lungs. After the treatment, dozens of tumors disappeared, while the rest shrank dramatically.

Rosenberg, interviewed on NBC's "Today" show, said his treatment "represents the first new kind of approach to cancer in perhaps 20 or 30 years."

To some of the 652,000 people that the American Cancer Society says will die of cancer this year, the therapy signals hope, however slim.

past failures of farm policy.

"There is little disagreement that our present farm policies have failed," they wrote. In the past five years, net farm income has stagnated, farm debt has risen and farm exports have declined. At the same time, federal outlays for our farm programs have more than quadrupled.

"Among 'fundamental reforms' Reagan will demand before signing farm bills, the officials said, are cuts in farm income subsidies beginning in 1987, instead of the two- and five-year subsidy freezes called for in the Senate and House bills, respectively.

The administration also demanded the elimination from the bill of "sweeteners" in 1985 crop programs for "sugar," rice, soybeans and sunflowers. Dole added the provisions to attract last-minute votes and win Senate passage of the bill on Nov. 23.

can conduct trade missions. "The problem is that no government representative can actually make a sale, nor can he quote a price or delivery date," an institute publication said.

At least one other center, in North Dakota, is doing the same thing. It also had its roots in private industry, but now is funded with a $1 million annual appropriation from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Trustee-recall bill in works

BOISE (AP) — Idaho State Superintendent Jerry Evans said he plans to propose legislation that would allow for the recall of school board trustees, who are now exempt from the state's recall laws.

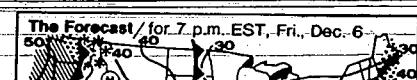

But the proposal would make it more complicated to recall a trustee than to recall a legislator or city council member.

Under Evans' proposal, anyone who wishes to recall a school board trustee would have to prepare a written complaint charging that the official committed an unlawful act while in office or that the trustee failed to properly perform his or her official duties. The petitioner would present those charges to a district court judge.

Committee accuses Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee adopted a report Thursday accusing the Justice Department of misleading a federal court and President Reagan by withholding documents from Congress during a probe of the Environmental Protection Agency.

In addition to approving the report by a 22-13 vote, the committee also asked Attorney General Meese to seek a special prosecutor to determine whether anyone should be prosecuted.

The 1,300-page report centers on events in 1983, when a number of congressional committees were investigating allegations of political manipulation of the Superfund — the nation's toxic waste cleanup program.

President Reagan, on the Justice Department's advice, refused to hand over department documents to Congress on a claim of executive privilege.

Vet ends fast phone call

KENT, Wash. (AP) — A Vietnam veteran who has gone without food for 51 days in a bamboo cage to publicize the plight of soldiers missing in action, spoke to President Reagan by telephone Thursday and agreed to break his fast.

Gino Casanova, who entered the cell on Oct. 16, planned to leave the cage Friday and enter a hospital to receive nourishment, said Jim Johnston, a spokesman.

"I wanted to go and grab a Big Mac right away," said Casanova, 34, who started the fast at 185 pounds and lost nearly 40 pounds. "But we want to make sure we do things right."

Casanova, who drank only water with lime juice, said it was "a great privilege" to talk to Reagan.

Casanova, of Tacoma, had vowed to remain in his cage without food until Dec. 16, with each day representing a Washington state resident still missing in action in Southeast Asia.

Seamen given veteran status

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-one years after they participated in a unique D-Day operation, some civilian merchant seamen were formally declared veterans by the Pentagon on Thursday.

The designation, announced by Assistant Air Force Secretary Tidal W. McCoy, was given to the roughly 1,000 merchant seamen who sailed "blockships" in Operation Mulberry during the allied invasion of Europe in 1944.

The decision means the men are entitled to apply for service discharge certificates, which in turn will make them eligible for such veterans' benefits as home loans, medical care and burial in a national cemetery.

Gala dinner honors magazine

NEW YORK (AP) — William F. Buckley Jr. shared chicken potpies Thursday with 700 of his friends, including President Reagan and Charlton Heston, to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the National Review, the conservative magazine he founded.

The guests included journalist Mike Wallace, CIA Director William Casey, actor Tom Selleck and former Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce. Reagan was to give a 10-minute speech.

Other speakers were to include Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.; William Rusher, publisher of the National Review; conservative columnist George Will; and Priscilla Buckley, sister of the founder and the magazine's managing editor, who is retiring at year's end, said spokeswoman Dorothy McCartney.

Carole ready for execution

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Condemned murderer Carroll Edward Cole, calmly facing the last hours before his execution, talked with an investigator Thursday about one of the 14 or 15 killings he says he committed for revenge against an abusive mother.

Cole, who has said he has "messed up my life so bad that I just don't care to go on," was scheduled to die at 3 a.m. MST by injection at the Nevada State Prison.

Although convicted of killing two women in Nevada and three in Texas, the 47-year-old Cole had formally confessed to 13 killings and had told a psychiatrist he killed 35 people, all but one of them a woman. In his final interview Wednesday, he scaled that back to 14 or 15 murders.

Rescue workers aid a victim of the Arco explosion

Pair of refinery blasts leave 5 dead, 45 hurt

The Associated Press

Explosions rocked oil refineries in California and Louisiana on Thursday, igniting fires that killed five workers and injured scores of others, including six who were critically burned.

Two workers were killed and 45 others hurt when a blast at the Atlantic Richfield Co. in Carson, Calif., refinery shook a neighborhood and shot flames 500 feet into the air.

In Lake Charles, La., a hydrogen compressor at the Cligo Oil refinery exploded and ignited a flash fire that killed three workers who were trying to repair it, said plant manager R. J. Gurleton. Two other workers suffered minor burns.

The Arco explosion "rumbled pretty good... like an earthquake," said Sandi McDonnell, who was working across the street.

Paramedics attending a ceremony rededicating a county fire station to the late producer of the TV show "Emergency" jumped into action when they heard the blast nearby, said Los Angeles County fire spokesman Mike Moura. Many of the injured were treated on a grassy patch across the street from the refinery.

"I saw a white fume near the ground, heard a loud hissing noise," said Warren Hutto, who was making a delivery to the refinery and who tried to climb a fence to safety. "It blew me over—the top!" he said, holding up hands bandaged after the fall.

"I saw the flames, heard the blast, a fantastic explosion," said county Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, who was at the ceremony to dedicate the station to the late Robert Cinader, producer of the television show "Emergency" which was filmed there. The drama series centered on two fire department paramedics and their rescues.

"It was burning so loudly and so vigorously that it drowned out the (public address) system," said Fire Chief John England, one of those at the ceremony.

The 9:50 a.m. explosion was in a "refinery unit" used to heat the octane of gasoline and that flames were fed by gasoline from a pump that feeds the unit. The fire was put out an hour later. He denied earlier reports "by firefighters" that hydrogen was involved.

Man mistaken for intruder shot dead

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A 24-year-old man who broke into his own "tragic mistake," said no charges were shot and fatally wounded would be filed.

Several people were at Worley's intruder, officials said. A house Saturday night because the Randall S. Worley died Wednesday woman who lived with Worley had at an Omaha hospital. Police issued threatening calls, police Deputy Douglas County Attorney said.

Vaseline claims OK'd by agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission has decided to let the makers of Vaseline claim their product protects to skin and relieves itching.

The commission had banned several spurious claims from Vaseline ads in a 1963 order, which charged the company with deceptive advertising.

The commission announced Thursday, however, that it is dropping portions of that ban after reports from the Food and Drug Administration's over-the-counter drug review program.

Thanks, volunteers, for Park tree lights

The worst November weather in a half-century or more is behind us, and despite its shortened length, a Christmas season is here. The valley economy struggles with negative signs. Sure, there are things to be sour about.

Set those aside this coming Sunday at 5 p.m., and join what we hope will be a huge crowd of people in the snowy (well, not too snowy) Twin Falls City Park for the second week of afternoon holiday programs of Scripture, singing, caroling and watching the lighting of the trees.

Or drive past the park any evening of the week. The scene is tasteful and professional. The lighting is as well done as you would see in any city in America.

The number of people responsible for this is too large to list them all in this space, but we'd like to acknowledge a few. One is Council member Mary McClusky, who has helped see this idea to fruition when some of her colleagues pooh-poohed it. Others are Sue McClusky and Donna Brizee, who have spent many hours around town in the past few weeks promoting the lighting programs. Another is Richard Brizee, whose Advent Candle at the bandshell has provided a warm, seasonal touch.

Hundreds of volunteers have assisted in many ways. Choirs, church groups, civic organizations, businesses have all lent of their time, people, and most important, their energy.

That kind of cooperation is what makes a community. When times are tough, it is easy to say things like lights in a city park don't matter. Nonsense. They mean more.

Thanks, everyone.

Production to administration

Sorry to hear that Twin Falls is confused concerning the future. My father helped dig the basement for the Idaho Department Store, and I can remember when Lew and Marion had a sale yard across the alley from the I.D. At that time, Twin Falls tract had many producers and few administrators and "added value" people. At that time we used 30¢ gas to haul a acre to the site and bought a $20 hamburger. Now we use $1.30 gas to haul a 30¢ cow and can buy a $3.00 hamburger.

If things get too tough over there, come to Lincoln County. Our land values increased 6.5 percent last year. The FPA has 12 farms for lease and our farm taxes increased by 50 percent.

We were only able to give the administrators a five percent increase in wages, even though they are terribly overworked and underpaid. If you can't survive here as a producer, you can take out bankruptcy and become an administrator of our tax dollars.

dark and etc. . . Well, as taxpayers, we have a right to know what is in this report, it affects our community and its reputation.

I suggest that we, the citizens of Kimberly, should go to the next council meeting on Dec. 10 and demand a full accounting of what is in that report, and also, the report that was submitted against the mayor and Tim Qualls and Barney Pife Corder. I suggest that we live in this community and it's time to clear the air. Get all of the facts out in the open, not in a confidential report. If we don't attend the meeting and demand this full accounting, then we deserve what we get (and what we've got), which isn't much.

Editor shows understanding

After I attended a recent meeting concerning the media in Twin Falls, I was convinced that of all the people present, Stephen Hartgen, as managing editor of The Times-News, has the greatest influence on our community. It is a great responsibility for such a young man to carry, but several recent articles and editorials in The Times-News have convinced me that he has really developed an increased concern and understanding of the problems of Idaho and this community in particular.

Mr. Hartgen's editorial in the Dec. 1 paper, concerning the problems of the Pufflet Plant and the compromise made by workers, who are taking a cut in wages to hold their jobs, was timely. His comments about the need for less extravagance reflected the feelings of many of us who remember the Great Depression when a bicycle was considered a luxury.

In another recent editorial, Mr. Hartgen quite correctly sided with school authorities when parents protested the cancellation of a school assembly because of drunkenness among several students. These parents should have read an article in Sunday's Purade Magazine which stated that teachers are handicapped by students and parents who give them no respect. Here in Twin Falls, where teachers are underpaid and using ancient text books (according to Mr. Hartgen's editorial of Dec. 3), parents should make an added effort to assist the teachers.

I was also delighted to see in Sunday's paper that finally Gary Fay, a member of the Twin Falls School Board, has joined Mr. Hartgen in seeking help from our Legislature to improve the quality of education in Idaho, and in Twin Falls in particular.

For years I've written regularly to Boise begging our Legislature to provide more funds for better education. At last it appears that I am no longer going to be a lone voice howling in the wilderness. People with influence are howling! Also of interest was the City Council's study about turning over the management of the city parks and golf course to private enterprise. This may really be beneficial to our community, and might even be cheaper. Our sanitation department seems to be running smoothly since it's been operated by a private company. Perhaps, too, the City Council should consider getting a private individual to build and maintain a swimming pool. The Sligar pool in Hagerman has been successfully operated by a private individual as long as the Harmon Park pool. And I swam as a child at Banker's where my grandchildren are swimming now.

It was interesting too, I thought, that the City Council has decided belatedly to hire an expert to help determine the fate of our fair city. I doubt that even the expert planner can do anything about our slow economic growth, but I'll wager he'll agree that we can't lure any new business into a community whose schools are under staffed with teachers who are underpaid. Nor will new families likely locate in a town too cheap to have a swimming pool for the kids. So let's face it. All the problems of this community are related in some way to better financing of education and a more progressive overall attitude, which is what Mr. Hartgen has been saying.

Let's demand a full accounting

An open letter to the people of Kimberly: It's my understanding that the report from the Attorney General's office has been released, to our "so called" City Council and the mayor.

1. for one, would like to know what's in it. Whatever it is, it must be good, for K. Ellen Baxter to say she couldn't prosecute on most of the charges, because the statute of limitations has run out. Some of the charges date back to 1971. That's a long time for our present council to stand by and let it happen.

So, it looks like they might try to suppress this Attorney General's investigation. Why do you think we haven't heard anything about it for several weeks? Are they hoping we'll forget about it? It looks like they want to continue treating us like mushrooms. (Keeping us in the half the mothers of pre-school children in the Bay Area are working, one child in five lives in a single-parent family, and last year there were 10,000 requests to the city's child-care coordinator that went unfulfilled. About two-thirds of those who need child care can't afford the average $450 a month. Nevertheless, it's taken a long time for day care to become a breaking issue.

Traditionally, most corporations have enlisted parents into their work force without assuming any responsibility for child care. The amount of energy needed to lift child care off the corporate launching pad has been intimidating. Families with young who need child care most often have the least leftover fuel to expend in organizing.

The major attraction of the new San Francisco law is that it will not only enlarge the number of child-care slots and lower the costs, but bring care closer to the parents' workplace. This is more than a convenience; it gives parents a stronger connection to centers and a chance to tunc with and visit their pre-schoolers.

The San Francisco ordinance is only a modest first step in forging a private-public partnership for kids. But it's a decent example of what can happen when women use power to get a piece of that agenda "off the back burner."

There are still some who find the notion of putting child care in downtown skyscrapers a bit peculiar. When outsiders talk to Walker about the plan, "They say to me, 'Can you imagine gray-suited executives riding up the elevator to the 26th floor with a bunch of sticky-fingered kids?' I say, 'Yeah. I can. It would do them a world of good.'"

Well, here comes that world of good: The sticky-fingered kids are on their way to the San Francisco workplace.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe

San Francisco lifts child care off corporate launching pad

BOSTON — Three years ago on yet another fund-raising walkathon through the streets of San Francisco, Supervisor Nancy Walker started adding things up. There was a city in which the majority of the supervisors were women, the mayor was a woman, and the two members of Congress were women. But the sum total of their efforts didn't impress her.

Ellen Goodman

"I couldn't look at one thing we'd done to keep a commitment to the women's community," said Walker. She walked and thought that day about the lack of a women's agenda, and the need for women to hold their elected officials accountable. "Our interests always get put on the back burner. We say, 'Oh well, we'll wait until' next year."

Today, San Francisco is the first city in the country with a law that makes developers of major new projects provide rent-free space or ante up $1 a square foot for nearby child-care centers. No child care, no building approval.

Walker decided to hold herself accountable. When the local Child Care Law Center drafted an innovative day-care ordinance, she got hold of it and said, "Let's just do it." And they did it.

I expected them to scream like stuck pigs from here to next week," says Walker. But opposition has been muted. At least one major developer is reportedly ready and waiting for the regulations to be completed so he can come aboard. Maybe San Francisco developers are getting conditioned to public-minded strings on private projects. After all, the new zoning laws also mandate a budget for art. As Walker says, "If you hang a piece of art for $8,000 in the lobby, why not put kids in the building. They change every day, and people never get bored with them."

Aside from the esthetic beauty of pre-school mobiles, on-site day care may also make some business sense. It gives the developer a competitive edge in selling space to corporations, especially when the city has an office vacancy rate of 12 percent. It gives the corporation an edge in hiring and holding the loyalty of a young work force. It is no secret that a worker's performance goes up when anxiety about the children goes down.

But the real profit motive behind this ordinance is for the working families of the Bay Area. Like families in every city in the only industrialized nation in the world without a day-care policy, there are more children here in need of day care than places to care for them.

To roll all the stories down to statistics, half the mothers of pre-school children in the Bay Area are working, one child in five lives in a single-parent family, and last year there were 10,000 requests to the city's child-care coordinator that went unfulfilled. About two-thirds of those who need child care can't afford the average $450 a month. Nevertheless, it's taken a long time for day care to become a breaking issue.

Traditionally, most corporations have enlisted parents into their work force without assuming any responsibility for child care. The amount of energy needed to lift child care off the corporate launching pad has been intimidating. Families with young who need child care most often have the least leftover fuel to expend in organizing.

The major attraction of the new San Francisco law is that it will not only enlarge the number of child-care slots and lower the costs, but bring care closer to the parents' workplace. This is more than a convenience;

'President's man,' even if under fire, deserves confirmation

WASHINGTON — A regrettable controversy has developed in the Senate over a basic principle of government. The principle, simply stated, is that barring the most compelling reasons, a president is entitled to have his executive nominees confirmed.

James Kilpatrick

This time the controversy revolves around Robert K. Dawson, a 39-year-old Alabama lawyer nominated by the president to become chief of the Army Corps of Engineers. Dawson's credentials are impeccable. He served for seven years as administrator of the House Committee on Public Works. For the past four-and-a-half years, he has served as principal deputy assistant and vice president acting assistant secretary of the Army for civil works. Not the slightest question has been raised about his integrity or his character.

Dawson with "an overt hostility to protection of wetlands." In October, a bipartisan group of 10 senators warned of "extended debate" if the Dawson nomination is brought to the floor.

In 1980 and again in 1984 on a promise to reduce the regulatory burden of the Washington bureaucracy, Dawson sincerely believes that he is carrying out that promise in seeking to speed the processing of permits to fill—and thus to destroy—wetlands. The environmental groups have taken a broad view of the corps' jurisdiction; their position is that the "waters of the United States" embrace virtually every rill, creek, run, stream, marsh or bog throughout the nation. Dawson is not so sure that Congress meant to give his office authority over every isolated pothole or persistent puddle from the Florida keys to the Alaskan tundra.

are thought to remain. In some states the loss of wetlands has been severe. Iowa once had 2.3 million acres of natural marshes; only 36,500 acres are left. California has lost all but 450,000 of 5 million acres. Nebraska's Plattewater Basin has dwindled over the centuries from 94,000 acres to 8,500. The picture is not wholly bleak. Half the states have passed their own wetlands conservation acts. Programs in New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware have been especially effective. Even so, the drain goes on.

Dawson insists that he is as concerned as anyone about preservation of wetlands that truly matter: He points out that most of the annual loss has nothing whatever to do with his office. The Interior Department estimates that 87 percent of the loss comes from exempt agricultural conversion; 8 percent results from urban development and 5 percent from other development. Of the 12,000 applications a year for permits to fill, about 4 percent are disapproved outright, and another 18 percent are withdrawn to avoid formal disapproval. The other 78 percent are granted, mostly at the district level.

Negotiators continue talking

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators, after an earlier glimmer of optimism, broke up Thursday night without agreement on a bill to cut the federal deficit to zero by the end of the decade.

"We're just talking. No decisions," said Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., leader of the House negotiators, after receiving what the Senate termed its "final offer."

The two sides traded ideas throughout the day. The talks, taking place behind closed doors in the Capitol, were aimed at settling differences between House and Senate versions of the balanced-budget plan.

Reagan wants gas lid lifted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration in January will again ask Congress to remove price controls that are keeping a federal lid on nearly half the nation's natural gas supplies.

Energy Secretary John Herrington said Thursday.

"My idea is that the president should have natural gas deregulation in his State of the Union speech," Herrington told the National Association of Manufacturers.

Herrington dismissed assertions that the administration "is not serious" about again trying to remove the price controls remaining on so-called "old" gas from wells drilled prior to 1977 after its attempt to do that during 1983 and 1984 was soundly rejected by Congress.

Controls on so-called "new" gas from wells drilled since April 1977 were removed last January under a 1978 law. Since then, spot market prices for the fuel have dropped 25 to 35 percent.

Tobacco firm wins libel award

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal jury on Thursday awarded the manufacturer of Viceroy cigarettes $5.05 million in damages in a libel suit against CBS Inc. and a popular television commentator.

The U.S. District Court jury deliberated for about an hour and 45 minutes before assessing the damages against Walter Jacobson, a commentator on WBBM-TV, and CBS, which owns and operates the station.

In its ruling Nov. 26, the jury found that Jacobson, who anchors the 5 p.m.-and-10 p.m. news, libeled the Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. in a 1981 commentary in which he said the cigarette maker was trying to lure children to smoke with advertising equating the habit with alcohol, sex and drugs.

Toys, baby exercisers recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three baby toys and two styles of baby crib exercisers are being recalled by their makers because of potential hazards to children, the Consumer Product Safety Commission said Thursday.

F.J. Strauss Co., Inc., of North Bergen, N.J., is recalling the baby toys which contain small parts that could lodge in an infant's throat and choke the child, according to the commission. No injuries have been reported, however, officials said.

The baby crib exercisers are being recalled by Danara International of South Hackensack, N.J., because of excess levels of lead in the paint on them. No injuries have been reported from these products either.

About 100,000 of the crib exercisers have been sold by Danara for about $8. They were marketed nationwide.

4 die in bus crash

PAW PAW, Mich. (AP) — A tractor-trailer rammed a school bus on a snow-slickened interstate highway Thursday and pushed it into a bridge abutment, killing at least four people and injuring 20 others, authorities said.

Three of the people were dead at the scene and a fourth — a 9-year-old girl — was dead on arrival at Bronck Methodist Hospital in Bronck, Kalamazoo.

Court upholds denial of abortion funds

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The Pennsylvania Supreme Court, dealing a setback to pro-choice advocates, Thursday unanimously upheld the state's right to deny medical funds for most abortions.

The court in a 7-0 ruling said a section of the state's 1982 Abortion Control Act denying the Medical Assistance payments for abortions did not violate the Pennsylvania Constitution.

"The question here is whether because the commonwealth provides funds to indigent women for a safe delivery, they are therefore equally obligated to fund an abortion," the court said in an opinion by Justice James T. McDermott.

The court said a woman's right to an abortion does not guarantee the right to state funds, even when the state "chooses to subsidize alternative constitutional rights."

The Medicaid program had funded abortions for needy women before the 1982 law took effect. Under the law, state Medicaid payments now can fund only abortions needed to save the life of the mother or in cases of rape and incest.

Kathryn Kolbert, an attorney for the Women's Law Project in Philadelphia, called the decision "a devastating setback for the rights of poor women."

"For a poor woman who needs an abortion, the denial of funding is the same as saying 'you can't have an abortion,'" said Kolbert, one of the lawyers who challenged the statute.

But state Rep. Stephen Freind said "the decision means the state will be able to 'save the lives of between 3,000 and 5,000 innocent unborn children every year.'"

"There are those who say that when we cut off funding we are being discriminatory against the poor because the middle class and wealthy can still pay for abortions, while the poor cannot. I'm saying they're half right, but for the wrong reason," he said.

"We can't save the lives of the unborn of the middle class and the rich. But at least now we can save some of the lives of the unborn of the poor," he said.

Oregon heart-transplant patient OK

PORTLAND (AP) — The condition of the first heart-transplant recipient in Oregon improved Thursday as doctors termed the operation a success.

Wesley-Merrill, 44, of Battle Ground, Wash., received the heart during an operation Wednesday night at Oregon Health Sciences University Hospital.

"He told me this morning he hasn't felt this good in months," said Dr. Jeffrey Hosenpud, a cardiologist who took part in the 2½-hour operation.

The donor heart came from Robert L. Olive, 27, who died Wednesday night from injuries sustained when he was shot in the face. The Oregonian newspaper, quoting unnamed sources, reported in a copyright story in its Thursday edition. Hospital officials, citing a policy against releasing such information, would neither confirm nor deny the report.

Police said Olive had broken into a northeast Portland apartment when he was shot by a convicted robber on leave from the Corrections Division Release Center in Salem.

Merrill's condition was upgraded Thursday from critical to serious but stable, hospital spokeswoman Lee Lewis said.

"There were no surprises," Dr. Albert Starr, head of the

Dr. Adnan Cobanoglu, left, holds the donor heart as surgeons prepare for the transplant transplant team, said of the operation. "The donor heart took over the normal circulation without any difficulty whatsoever."

Hosenpud said Merrill was sitting up in his bed and breathing without the aid of a respirator within a few hours of the operation. "He says he was a little sore along his incision but that he felt terrific and he's glad it was over," Hosenpud said. "He's been waiting a long time and he's pleased he could see this through."

Merrill, a construction worker, was suffering from coronary artery disease and a "clogged heart," members of the transplant team aid. The patient entered the hospital Oct. 27 to await a donor heart.

Starr told a news conference following the surgery that Merrill's own heart was "very much enlarged. It was beating very poorly. He could have died anytime, certainly in a matter of months."

Request for rate hike denied gas company

BOISE (AP) — Contending that new statute approval of the Intermountain Gas Co.'s rates actually should be slightly lower than they are, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission has denied the company's request for a $2.8 million rate hike for southern Idaho customers. Commissioners said they declined to order a rate decrease because the company's total revenues were the same as those calculated by the commission. The commission's calculation showed that rates should be reduced by a fraction of one percent.

In the order handed down Thursday, commissioners said a trend-had day, commissioners allowed the Intermountain Gas proposed hike for southern Idaho customers. The commission considered the $9,003 in money the commission used to intervene in the case. The coalition large volume users from going off the system, which would increase rates for other ratepayers.

This was the first time the commission considered the group that has intervened in the case. The 1985 Idaho Legislature customers' needs. "Not all of the passed legislation allowing utilities to regulate are enjoying a (revenue) that appear before the reduction in consumer complaints received by our staff," commissioners said that under the slowness said.

McClure amendment bars PCA action

The Associated Press and The Times-News

The Senate has approved an amendment sponsored by Sen. James McClure of Idaho to forbid local production credit associations which have voted against mergers to have their service areas taken over by another credit association.

McClure on Wednesday won approval for an amendment to a package bill designed to strengthen the Farm Credit System. The Senate passed the bill, S-74, similar legislation also was passed Tuesday night by the House Agriculture Committee.

In separate action, a House subcommittee has approved legislation creating a new National Commission on Agricultural Finance. Sponsor Rep. Richard Stollings, D-Idaho, said the committee is designed to make there is adequate long-term financing available to farmers.

A 15-member committee is to be appointed by the president and the House and Senate agriculture committees. Within 12 months, the commission is to submit a report to Congress, with recommendations on how to provide a sound and primarily self-supporting credit program for farmers and ranchers.

McClure's legislation is aimed at the Eastern Idaho Production Credit Association, headquartered in Pocatello, which earlier this year voted against joining a five-state merger of local associations.

"The BIPCA last month lost a lawsuit aimed at preventing the new Interstate PCA from moving into its territory to offer farm financing."

McClure's amendment would accomplish the same thing, it applies retroactively. Under the amendment, if the stockholders in a local PCA do not approve a merger, the Farm Credit Administration can't authorize another association to serve the same territory.

The amendment also prohibits district Farm Credit Banks from charging higher assessments, or reducing any financial service, to a PCA that chooses not to merge.

In arguing for his amendment, McClure noted the conflict between the Pocatello-based PCA and the Spokane-based Interstate PCA.

"They voiced their right to disagree with the system and were rewarded by having their territory overhauled," said McClure. "The new Interstate PCA came in and set up offices in direct competition to their association."

"McClure said it is not beneficial to have two associations competing in the same territory."

However, a top official with the Farm Credit Banks of Spokane Thursday said the bill threatens to scuttle a reorganization that secured millions of dollars in aid from the other farm credit banks across the country.

"At this juncture, to have this prohibition is very serious for the future. What it says is that it undoes the whole commitment or contracts for aid that were in place," said Duane Marshall, executive vice president for Farm Credit Services of Spokane, which operates the system's combined land bank associations and production credit association offices.

Stivers: Unitary tax action months away

BOISE (AP) — It may be at least several months before the federal government pushes legislation to repeal the unitary tax systems used by six states, including Idaho, says House Speaker Tom Stivers.

Idaho is one of a handful of states which uses the so-called "unitary" tax system for multinational corporations with operations in Idaho.

Some business groups and political candidates have been pushing for repeal of the law, saying it's a factor keeping companies from opening new plants or facilities in Idaho.

Other state officials say repealing the law could cost Idaho up to $20 million per year in lost tax revenue.

And industry spokesmen testified at a committee hearing at the Statehouse on Thursday that some business are concerned that if the tax is removed from large, multinational corporations, taxes on other Idaho businesses will go up to offset.

"The federal government has talked of starting legislation to end states' ability to impose unitary tax systems, especially on companies headquartered in foreign nations."

Stivers said he has been advised that although a bill is being prepared, it will not be pushed until "well into next year" to allow states to act on their own.

David Porter, administrator of the Department of Commerce, said Idaho is in "an increasingly untenable position" because in essence the state is trying to enforce its tax laws not only nationally, but in foreign countries.

"But he said if the unitary tax is repealed, it won't necessarily mean a rush of industrial expansion in the state."

When Oregon repealed its unitary tax, he said, there was some growth, but that was because that state went after new companies aggressively.

He said Idaho's "passive approach" has not been working. "I'm skeptical that industry will flock to Idaho if we repeal the unitary tax, unless it is tied to an aggressive effort to attract industry," he said. "I don't think we are in the marketplace letting people know about our advantages."

Porter also suggested that if Idaho is going to give up the tax, it should try to get something in return.

Lottery winners turn unlucky in California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Guatemalan who won $2 million with a spin of the California Lottery wheel surrendered to immigration authorities Thursday, the latest in a string of winners who have instant trouble.

Julio Morales, 23, a construction worker who lives in Hollywood, attracted the attention of immigration authorities after he won Monday when he nervously refused to tell reporters how he came to the United States.

Morales, 15, the second $2 million lottery winner to face possible deportation.

Jose Caballero of San Jose won the top prize Nov. 4 and was arrested by federal agents two days later. Caballero has admitted coming here illegally from Mexico.

Caballero and Morales join a wild card case of lottery winners who also have lost, among them a woman who was arrested on an outstanding petty theft charge, a man whose winnings were attached for delinquency on child support payments and a woman who saw most of her $100,000 prize frozen by a company suing her husband.

"When you're drawing from a universe in which there are all kinds of people, you're going to get a little bit of everything," said California Lottery spokesman Bob Taylor.

So far, 120 people have spun the wheel, 11 of them winning $2 million and the others winning a total of $20.5 million.

Morales already has a brother and sister, 15-year-old twins, facing a February deportation hearing, said Joe Thomas, deputy director for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Even if Caballero and Morales are deported, both can keep their winnings, although the federal income tax bite of the yearly $100,000 checks will be increased from 20 percent to 30 percent.

Suspected hijack planner says he wants to state case

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Mohammed Abbas, whom the United States has charged with masterminding the Achille Lauro hijacking, was quoted Thursday as denying he plotted the piracy, while at the same time explaining its purpose.

Abbas repeated, in an interview with the pro-government newspaper, Al-Uhūd, an assertion he had made shortly after the hijacking, that he was willing to go to the United States to tell the true story of what happened. At that time, he said he would only go if he was guaranteed safe passage, and the U.S. Justice Department responded that he is wanted for a criminal act and would be put on trial if he came to the United States. The hijacking of the Italian cruise ship, he was quoted as saying, was aimed at the Israeli port of Ashdod. The paper said he contended the hijackers were "forced" to take control of the ship when they were prematurely identified.

"The target of the operation was neither Italy nor its passengers, since it is a friendly country that enjoys respect among all Palestinians," he was reported as saying. "I'm not a terrorist." Abbas was quoted as saying "The biggest terrorist is (President) Reagan. America, which continues to support the Zionist (Israeli) aggression on the Palestinian people and harms millions of people, does not have the right to accuse anyone of terrorism."

The paper quoted Abbas as saying the Palestinians were "fighting for freedom and must never be regarded as terrorists."

The paper quoted him as saying, "News about the death of the crippled American passenger (Kinghoffer) was fabricated by the American media to tarnish the image of the Palestinian fighters. . . . The American could have been dead in his cabin out of fear or shock."

Witnesses on the ship said the hijackers shot Kinghoffer and pushed him overboard in his wheelchair.

Opposition uniting behind Aquino

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The long-divided political opposition appeared Thursday to be uniting behind the presidential candidacy of Corason Aquino, the widow of assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino. . . . Meanwhile, the Supreme Court agreed to hear nine separate petitions appealing for cancellation of the Feb. 7 special election called by President Ferdinand E. Marcos. Marcos indicated he might agree to participate in a nationally televised debate requested by Mrs. Aquino. "My conversations with ladies have always been pleasant and I presume I will survive this encounter," he said in a news release. Mrs. Aquino blames Marcos for the Aug. 21, 1983, assassination of her husband and for the acquittal of 28 men accused of complicity in the killing.

Unif Aquino was gunned down at Manila airport when he returned from three years of self-exile in the United States, many thought he might be able to defeat Marcos in an election. Most observers said if more than one opposition candidate split the anti-Marcos vote in the election scheduled for February, Marcos' victory would be assured. Presidential aspirant Salvador H. Laurel said he and Mrs. Aquino will jointly announce the name of the single opposition candidate Sunday. Mrs. Aquino, expressing surprise at Laurel's statement, declined to say if she would join him.

Pope joins in service for unity

VATICAN CITY (AP) — In a major gesture of Christian unity, Pope John Paul II and Roman Catholic bishops recessed an international assembly Thursday to conduct an ecumenical service with 10 Protestant, Anglican and Orthodox representatives.

The 10 men have been following the bishops' two-week meeting, called an extraordinary synod, as observers. It is the first time other Christian denominations have been invited to a synod.

The pope led the 40-minute service, conducted in English, at the modern Synod Hall.

It came three days before the end of the bishops' conference, which was convened by John Paul to assess the state of the church since the end of the Second Vatican Council 20 years ago.

"Divisions among Christians are contrary to the plan of God," the pope said in his homily. He said the restoration of unity will not be possible without "a wholehearted personal commitment" by all individuals concerned.

"Any faltering in the movement toward unity since the impetus of the Second Vatican Council is partly due to the fact that we have not attended enough to this interior dimension," John Paul said.

NATO makes offer to lower arms levels

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The NATO alliance on Thursday proposed to the Warsaw Pact a reduction of non-nuclear forces in central Europe in an effort to break the deadlock in the 12-year-old talks.

It was the first announced arms initiative from East or West since the superpower summit last month in Geneva. It called for withdrawal of 5,000 American troops in Western Europe, 11,500 Soviet troops from Eastern Europe and for verification under a three-year agreement, according to a summary issued by Western officials.

In Washington, President Reagan said the offer by the Western allies abandoned the "previous NATO insistence that both sides agree on the number of troops in Europe before a treaty is signed."

The two sides have been unable to agree on the strength of the opposing forces in Europe. The Warsaw Pact says each side has about 800,000 troops, including air force personnel. NATO says the Warsaw Pact has more than 1.1 million troops deployed in Europe.

Speaking for the Warsaw Pact, Soviet spokesman Nikolai Nolland said the NATO proposal "does not give cause for optimism" but would receive careful scrutiny.

Nation's oldest war veteran dies at 109

LEBANON, Pa. (AP) — Nearly nine decades after he fought in the Philippines and in the Boxer Rebellion, the United States' oldest military veteran died Thursday at the age of 109, officials said.

Doctors at the Veterans Administration Medical Center here said Walter Pleate died at 6:40 a.m. from bronchial pneumonia.

"He just wouldn't wake up," said R.W. Mengel, a hospital spokesman. "The parts just normally gave out."

Born on Oct. 10, 1876, in Bridleburg, now part of northeast Philadelphia, Pleate enlisted in the Army on Feb. 24, 1899, said Al Mann, a VA spokesman in New York City.

The United States, which declared war on Spain on April 25, 1898, had ended its fighting in Cuba by August of that year. But until early 1902, U.S. troops continued battling guerillas in the Philippines, where Pleate was sent with the rest of Company 1 of the 2nd Infantry Division. While in the Philippines, Pleate was an interpreter of Tagalog, a native language spoken by many Filipinos.

Pleate also fought in the Boxer Rebellion, an uprising in northern China started by a secret society angry at the "invasion" of Western culture. Troops from the United States and seven other nations quelled the uprising, so named because the insurrectionists practiced gymnastics and calisthenics.

Pleate was discharged on Feb. 8, 1902, five months and a day before Congress officially declared an end to the Spanish-American War.

Mann said he had no record of Pleate receiving either injuries or medals.

Pleate had spent the past 48 years in VA hospitals in Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

A VA official who asked not to be identified said Pleate had been declared mentally incompetent in 1969 and was scarcely aware of the birthday parties held every year for him.

"Walter was liked by all the personnel," said Mengel. "Everybody had a good word for him."

Pleate became the nation's oldest military veteran on Oct. 30, 1984, when Henry Chaloner died at Bay Pines VA Medical Center in St. Petersburg, Fla., at the age of 110.

With Pleate's death, the oldest veteran is Christian F. Steinhilber of California, who is in West Los Angeles VA Medical Center and turned 107 on May 3. Steinhilber was in the Army's 1st Artillery Corps, 71st Company, from March 16, 1899 through March 15, 1902, according to the United Spanish-War-Veterans-In-Washington.

Pleate, who had no surviving family, will be buried Monday at a military cemetery at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa., Mann said.

Agents hook whopper: suspected extortionist

ATLANTA (AP) — FBI agents dived into the Chattahoochee River to hook a suspected extortionist who was waiting in the water for a $550,000 payoff, the agency said.

Allan W. Field, 37, was arrested Wednesday night, as he swam away from a bridge on the river at the northwest edge of Atlanta, said FBI Special Agent Joe Hardy.

Hardy said several owners of a restaurant chain, which he refused to identify, had received threatening letters in the past week, and one of the owners received a phone call with directions for delivering $500,000.

The owner was led to the bridge, where he lowered a package of money on a rope to a man in the water. Agents dived into the river and arrested the man in midstream, Hardy said.

Field would be charged with extortion and interfering with interstate commerce by acts or threats of violence, Hardy said. Field's last-known address is Marietta Motel, Hardy said.

City police install radio scrambling system

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A $3,500 radio communication scrambling system has been installed in Twin Falls city police cars and the dispatch center to keep police messages secret from the public and press.

Public Safety Director Tim Qualls said this week on all communications between cars and station. However, in the future, he said, it will be used only in special instances when it is important to investigations and police activities that information be kept confidential.

Commander Pat Bermingham said there is no way to know how many monitor sets are in use in the area, but he said many are in the hands of criminals who use them to keep track of police activities.

He said in the event of a serious crime or in drug investigations and surveillance work, criminals can keep ahead of the police by monitoring their communications.

"At one of our training sessions in Boise," Qualls added, "we had a mock surveillance system set up with two officers in a motel room and trainees attempting to track them down. We had numerous calls from the public asking about the incident, and one woman even called the two men in the motel room and warned them."

Qualls said the scrambling of police communication is also aimed at the press. He said when officers are at a crime scene or are planning to serve a search warrant, reporters and photographers following information heard on their "scanners" can easily find out a suspect or cause other problems for investigators.

"When something major happens, every reporter wants to get the information first, and immediately," Qualls said. "Sometimes we don't even know what we have ourselves, but we are swamped by questions and calls from the media. We release the information as soon as we can."

Bermingham said the scramblers are small units that are carried in patrol cars and can be switched off or on at any time.

"There are some weaknesses in the system. If there is an area-wide manhunt or other activity, they are useless, since other law enforcement agencies could not communicate with Twin Falls city officers. They would be turned off in that event. Also one of the dispatcher units in police stations generally be left open without scramblers because of a need to communicate with police-carrying "walkie-talkie" equipment, which has no scrambler capabilities.

Qualls and Bermingham said the scrambling of messages will be reserved for special occasions, such as those involving serious felonies.

"Monitoring police calls is becoming a popular pastime," Bermingham said. "There are a number of retired couples or individuals here that monitor just for entertainment."

Officers cited the chase of two Washington state convicts through Twin Falls and Jerome counties early in 1984 as an example of police monitor units were used to the advantage of the criminal. The two fled Twin Falls with officers in pursuit and fired several shots, one hitting a Twin Falls policeman. The two managed to elude city, county and state officers for some time before they were captured in Jerome County. After they drove from the freeway into dairy pasture and abandoned their car, police found a radio monitor that had helped them keep track of the movement of police cars.

Bermingham said it is probably possible to unscramble, but police can avoid this by switching to other channels.

Lawyers criticize insurers

Suggest practices are cause of crisis
By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Department of Insurance Director Wayne Soward got an earful Wednesday night from local attorneys during a public hearing on the liability insurance crisis facing many units of government.

No representatives of the insurance industry attended the meeting with Soward at the College of Southern Idaho campus.

Twin Falls attorneys Lloyd Webb and John Legworth criticized the claims settlement practices of insurance companies, saying they were slow and expensive to pursue. They also said some of the recent crises in liability insurance was caused by bad practices in the industry.

The two deans of the Twin Falls bar criticized insurance companies for setting premiums unrealistically low during periods of high interest rates, in order to write more new business and cash in on interest income.

As an example, Webb said another medical malpractice insurance crisis is on its way in Idaho because insurance companies are setting premiums too low.

Criticizing the litigiousness of the insurance industry, Legworth told Soward he jockeyed with insurance company lawyers for five years on a case he settled last week was twice the amount he asked for originally.

Another lawyer suggested that if the law limits fees for plaintiffs' attorneys, it should also limit fees for defense attorneys, so that the lawyers for insurance companies would be encouraged to more quickly wrap up claims.

Webb said the complaints of insurers that the "litigious society" is responsible for high insurance premiums or unavailable coverage do not ring true in Idaho. "We don't have the high verdicts of other parts of the world," he said.

Soward agreed, "Idaho is different and, unfortunately, the insurance crisis is HEARING on Page B3.

Month was a chiller

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The National Weather Service has confirmed what most people have been saying, November was an unusually cruel month.

William Galkin of the National Weather Service, in Kimberly, said the month was the coldest November since records began in 1896 and managed to set several other all-time records.

The average monthly temperature for last month was 26.6 degrees, wiping out the previous record set back in November 1916, when the average was 26.8 degrees.

Total snowfall for the month reached 22.6 inches, the most ever recorded for November. The closest previous records could be traced to the 12 inches received in a single storm in November of 1977.

The average temperature for the month, 26.6 degrees, is 12.1 degrees below normal, while the total precipitation of 1.88 inches is .87 of an inch above normal.

The heaviest storm came on Nov. 25, when 5.1 of an inch of moisture fell in a four-hour period. And there were 16 days in which more than .01 of an inch of moisture was measured. Even with the help

Nasty weather no indicator of climatic shift

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An incoming ice age? A switch of seasons? Winter, officially, won't arrive for another two weeks, yet we are slinging snow off our shovels, pushing cars out of icy ruts and pulling parkas over our heads.

Certainly some malevolent weather machine is wrecking this wintry havoc.

Well, there are huge waves of weather operating, National Weather Service officials say. But the force that has thrust an early winter on us does not involve a great change in climate — or even a weather engine like the El Niño ocean current that was responsible for unusually heavy rain over the West in 1983.

"There's no evidence we're going through any long-term change," says Ken Bergman, meteorologist with the NWS Climate Analysis Center in Washington.

Instead, this spate of shivering-cold-and-boot-deep snow is a condition that just happens every once in a while, Bergman and other NWS officials say. In a way, the forecasters simply expect the atmosphere to defy its normal patterns and knock the seasons out of whack occasionally.

That doesn't mean there aren't some scientific reasons for this year's fall freezes and November winter.

The simplified explanation is that an extremely stubborn ridge of high pressure anchored itself high over the Gulf of Alaska and Canada in the upper atmosphere.

Why it formed isn't entirely clear, although forecasters did notice some significant cooling of waters in the North Pacific toward the end of September. Those may have had some effect, says Bergman.

These upper air patterns steer the weather that we encounter at the surface, and the bottom of this wave hung right over the Intermountain area, says Bergman, one of a four-man team who issues the NWS national long-range forecast.

"It favored dragging the cold air masses out of Alaska and Canada and western

BLM gets go-ahead to pursue Box Canyon land trade talks

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — The U.S. Bureau of Land Management's Advisory Panel adopted a resolution Thursday encouraging the agency to continue its negotiations with a private landowner seeking to develop a small hydro-power plant and fish hatchery in the Box Canyon area.

The Shoshone BLM District must choose between preserving the privately owned, yet pristine, upper third of the canyon in a trade-off with the owner in exchange for a right of way through agency land — or turning down the request and going to court to protect the habitat of four candidates for listing as threatened and endangered species on public-land it manages in the canyon.

"No matter what we do, this office is going to get a black eye," said Bob Cordell, area manager for the Bennett-Hills Resource Area of the Shoshone District. "It's a question of whether you're going to get shot in the left leg or the right leg."

The BLM has designated its 128-acre holdings in the canyon as an "Area of Critical Environmental Concern." In addition to providing a habitat for the candidate species for threatened and endangered status, the canyon has unique scenic and natural SHOSHONE — Even before the discovery of its four candidate species for protection under the Endangered Species Act, Box Canyon was recognized as a unique setting.

While there may be a handful of sites similar in setting or appearance to Box Canyon, it still strikes BLM Advisory Council members as unique.

"In my opinion it's the best," said Tom Prescott, chairman of the Advisory Council.

Others on the council shared similar opinions throughout the meeting. Both Prescott and Vern Ravenscroft recalled seeing the canyon's unique blue waters for the first time, the impression it gave of being a special place.

Few in the Magic Valley, however, know of the area's existence. While the mouth of the canyon is accessible from the river and Bluehart Springs at the canyon mouth is a popular site for scuba diving and fishing, few people have ever been up inside the canyon to see its unique vegetation. While the BLM owns land in the canyon, there is no public access to it from land.

Efforts have been made in the past to preserve the canyon area, Ravenscroft included it in a bill he introduced in and carried through the state Legislature in 1971 placing restrictive covenants on water rights in Upper Box Canyon.

That same bill also placed restrictions on Malad Canyon, Bluehart Springs, and the Upper end of Wingate Springs. Ravenscroft's concern at the time, he said, was trying to protect some representative stretches of the Hagerman Valley, which were quick

P&Z recommends 4 for appointment

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission selected four new members Thursday to recommend for appointment to the board, but has yet to find anyone from the city's area of impact who is willing to serve.

Recommended for appointment to the commission are: Frank King, a trust officer at Idaho First National Bank; Henri LeMoine, with LeMoine Realty and Appraisal; Barbara Crumrine, personnel assistant at Idaho Frozen Foods and Gary Karnes, a real estate loan manager at Twin Falls Bank and Trust.

The city received applications from 13 persons for the positions, most of whom applied this week when the city made a last-minute appeal for candidates. Three were ruled ineligible because they had not lived in Twin Falls County for the last five years.

None of those who applied were from the city's

Deceased Tommy Callen made mark in livestock

WENDELL — Tommy Callen, 56, who was killed Monday afternoon in a traffic accident near Wendell, was described by associates as a life-long figure in the livestock business in Magic Valley.

He is a member of the Callen family that has been involved in ranching and livestock production since the beginning of cattle organizations and businesses in the area.

He was born on the Callen homestead in Jerome County, southwest of Jerome which is still owned and operated by a brother, Jerry Callen Sr.

In August, he purchased the Gooding Livestock Co., and changed it to the Magic Valley Livestock Sales Inc., and had owned and managed it since that time.

For 10 years prior to that, he managed Janss Farms in Gooding County.

Singing to ring from bandshell

TWIN FALLS — The Christmas in City Park Committee will celebrate the second Sunday in Advent with a musical presentation at the park bandshell.

The program will include performances by The Maglofords, directed by Mike Fischer; The Sweet Adelines, directed by Darlene Porter; and the Magic Valley Chorus, directed by Carson Wong.

The second candle on the advent wreath will be lit by the Rev. Robert Van Nest of the First Presbyterian Church and members of his congregation. He will also read scripture from the Bible.

Mayor Emery Peterson will give the welcome. The new decorations on City Park trees will remain lighted throughout the ceremony, which will begin at 5 p.m.

The ceremony will last an hour or less, but committee members are warning spectators to dress warmly.

Stallings to help craft farm bill

WASHINGTON—D.C.—Rep. Richard Stallings was named Thursday as a cosponsor of the 1985 Farm Bill by House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kikadee LaGarza. House and Senate conferees began meeting Thursday afternoon to reconcile various differences in the farm legislation passed by the two bodies. "We have worked long and hard this year in committee to produce a responsible farm bill," Stallings said. "I am delighted and honored to now have the opportunity to help craft the final product acceptable to both the House and Senate."

Pick-up set for ski swap items

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley skiers with equipment at the College of Southern Idaho Ski Club ski swap can pick up their equipment Sunday. Ski Club advisor Bob Wright said Wednesday that the CSI Gymnasium will be open from noon to 3 p.m. Sunday so that people can stop by to see if their equipment has sold. Checks for equipment that sold will be issued next week and equipment that is neither sold nor picked up Sunday will be donated to some local charity. Wright said the equipment has gone to the Idaho Youth Ranch and similar groups in past years.

of a wet November, moisture for the calendar year up to Sept. 30 stood at 7.31 inches, or 20 in. below normal. But the wet "water year," that began Oct. 1, is off to a good start with 2.84 inches of precipitation. Two new records for daily low temperatures were set. A reading of of the water in the canyon for his projects. But he would guarantee the BLM a minimum flow of 20 cubic feet per second at the point of diversion, flow in the canyon is about 450 cfs.

The BLM holdings in Box Canyon, however, are bordered both above and below by private land owned by Earl-M. Hardy-of-Boise—in his most recent proposal to the agency, Hardy offered to preserve roughly the upper third of the 1 1/2-mile-long canyon. Limited public access and scientific study would be allowed to state universities, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, and similar organizations.

While the swap may be an attractive option for the BLM in some ways, it is not the most appealing. Restrictions on the way the agency manages the ACEC.

While you're bundling up, you might hope for better news from the long-published Old Farmer's Almanac. But, alas, there's little comfort there.

Because it provides habitat for candidate species to the threatened and endangered lists, the agency must manage the land as if the four were already on the list. If it is determined that Hardy's proposal will have a significant impact on the species, the agency may have to turn down his request for a right of way.

"The winter months will bring colder-than-normal temperatures and near-or-above-average precipitation to the northern third of the county," the Farmer's Almanac says. Its forecast for November in the Rocky Mountain region called for frequent cold spells accompanied by snow, which, of course, is what happens in December.

While the upper third of the canyon is in the most pristine condition and offers perhaps the greatest scenic value, field studies have not yet shown that it provides a habitat for all four of the candidate species.

While you're bundling up, you might hope for better news from the long-published Old Farmer's Almanac. But, alas, there's little comfort there.

If it decides to deny the right of way request, however, the BLM may not be able to protect its lands—control from the impacts created by projects above and below. In effect, the risks or damages to the candidate species could be even greater.

While you're bundling up, you might hope for better news from the long-published Old Farmer's Almanac. But, alas, there's little comfort there.

In expressing his support for the motion, to continue negotiations, councilmember Loyal Barron said: "The only reasonable third may also 'provide suitable habitat' that has yet to be confirmed by further study."

"It's something we would normally expect in December or January, more so than in November," says Glenn Rasch, chief of the Scientific Services Division for the NWS Western Region office in Salt Lake City. "I don't think anybody really has an answer as to why (it happens)."

Lately the westerly wind has moderated the weather a bit. But the respite may not last. There now are signs that the cold pattern will reform, says Ken Mielke, NWS meteorologist at Salt Lake City.

However, the NWS now is working on a dynamic model, that mimics how the earth's air currents flow and interact. Its accuracy is at about 10 days right now, but scientists are studying ways to "give it" a longer run.

"It's easier to explain the snows than this enormous pattern though. So far, it's about 40 years."

Long-range forecasting primarily is a statistical effort, but one with about 67 percent accuracy up to 90 days. It looks at conditions that have coincided with weather changes in the past and tries to project them.

Kalen McClain, Buhl, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl and Nicholas Smith-Zurawski, Racine, Wis., cousin of the bride, was ringbearer. Crissy Conney, LeCenter, and Bradley Jones, Bedford, Texas, both cousins of the bride, were candlelighters.

Pam McClain, Buhl, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, attended the guest book. Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Byron Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Glen Jones, grandparents of the bride.

A reception and dance were held at the Okoboji Club at Spirit Lake. Deb Jones, Boise, cousin of the bride, Mary Jones, Des Moines, and Sandy Jones, Bedford, Texas, all aunts of the bride, served.

Lisa and Douglas McClain

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents at Mr. G's Supper Club at Millford, Iowa. Following a trip to Las Vegas the couple resides in Buhl.

Man's problems with IRS worry wife

DEAR ABBY: I have been a housewife for all our married years, never having held a job outside the home. My husband owns his own business.

In the last six years, he has not filed state or federal income tax. It was not his intention to defraud the government, but actually a case of poor bookkeeping methods and his inability to afford an accountant.

If the government catches up with him, would I be equally guilty? Could I be arrested?

I dearly wish he would file his taxes, pay what he owes and get it over with, but I have no control over his business affairs, and I don't want to be a nagging wife. The business is in his name only.

If we were to be divorced, would I be held liable for his past taxes during the years we were married?

Please answer in the newspaper. Obviously, I cannot risk having my answer delivered to our home in Dear Abby envelope.

DEAR JUST: First, when a personal reply is requested, the writer sends a stamped, self-addressed envelope so there is no indication that the letters from "Dear Abby."

Second, although I am not qualified to answer legal questions, I can offer some free advice: Tell your husband to see a lawyer immediately about his failure to file state and federal income tax. If he turns himself in before he is discovered, the penalty will probably be considerably lighter. Then ask his lawyer for another one) what your liability would be as a spouse or ex-spouse.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter was recently married at a formal church

Abigail VanBuren

wedding, which we arranged to have videotaped at a considerable cost to us.

I heard that several people were planning to bring their children (several under three years of age), so we made arrangements to have the church nursery opened, and we even paid two licensed nursery workers to look after the children during the wedding. The ushers were instructed to politely ask those who brought children to take them to the nursery.

I was astonished at the number of guests who pushed past the ushers, ignored their request and took their children to sit with them during the wedding. Some children became restless during the ceremony and started to talk and chide. Instead of being taken out of the church, they were "shushed" and scolded — all clearly audible on the tapes.

These same children were permitted to crawl around on the floor during the reception!

— WEDDING RUINED
DEAR WEDDING: It can't — unless one hires "bouncers" to back up the ushers whose polite requests are ignored.

DEAR ABBY: Recently, after 55 years of marriage, I lost my loving wife. I lost my sweetheart, my gourmet cook, my nurse and my best friend.

In the 55 years we were married, I sent her flowers only twice. Now I put flowers on her grave twice a week.

I tell her picture every morning and kiss her how much I love her. Before she went away, my morning greeting was "Is the coffee ready?"

Somewhere I read the following: "Carve not upon a stone the dirgeful words that mourners say at graveside, rather tell me while I live." I wish I had another chance to put your thoughts on paper.

DEAR A.R.: No one has "another chance," but because you took the time to put your thoughts on paper, somewhere just one thoughtless husband may see himself and show his loving wife by word and deed how much he loves her.

The "chance" you missed is still available to countless young men — and women, too. Thank you for a priceless reminder.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

AT&T COMMUNICATIONS OF THE MOUNTAIN STATES, INC., NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR RATE INCREASE

AT&T Communications of the Mountain States, Inc., has filed an application with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission for a $3,059 million increase in revenues within Idaho.

The company contends in its filing that the rate increase is necessary to bring the prices for AT&T Communications' services more in line with actual costs. The most significant of these costs are the fees-called access charges—AT&T Communications pays to local telephone companies for connection to their networks.

During 1985, AT&T Communications estimates it will lose $947,000 on its intrastate operations in Idaho. To counter these losses on its intrastate operations and to maintain revenue requirements, AT&T Communications is proposing the following changes:

- Increase rates 50 percent for intrastate long distance calls 55 miles or less. AT&T Communications also is proposing "Idaho Community Calling," an optional calling plan that would offer AT&T Communications' customers who call short distances on specific routes an opportunity for significant price discounts.
- Reduce the discount for evening long distance calling (5-11 p.m., Sunday through Friday) from 40 percent to 25 percent, and reduce the discount for calls made nights and weekends (11 p.m. to 8 a.m. nights, 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. Saturdays; and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays) from 60 percent to 40 percent.
- Increase all long distance rates (including those listed above) by 18.5 percent to satisfy the remaining revenue requirements.

The proposal would not affect interstate calls, nor would it affect all long distance calling within Idaho. The proposal would apply only to AT&T Communications' long distance service between northern and southern Idaho, and between General Telephone's northern Idaho service area and other Idaho telephone companies. For example, the proposal would affect calls that cross the Salmon River, calls between Lewiston and Boise, or calls between Pocatello and Coeur d'Alene.

AT&T Communications has based its proposal on an interim increase of $2,724 million while the Commission reviews AT&T's proposal. The interim proposal includes the time-of-day discount reduction and the rate changes for short distance calls (including "Idaho Community Calling") described above. The interim proposal also requests a 14 percent across-the-board increase in long distance rates.

The Commission will conduct public hearings on AT&T Communications' proposal at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 5, 1986, in the Commission's hearing room at 427 W. Washington St., Boise, Idaho. Comments are welcome and should be sent to Commission Secretary, Idaho Public Utilities Commission, Statehouse, Boise, Idaho, 83720.

Put priorities in order to get career on track

By COSMOPOLITAN

A poor sense of priorities can torpedo a career, but, fortunately, pinpointing what is most important in a job is an acquired skill anyone can learn.

Workers who don't have their priorities straight, according to an article in the December issue of Cosmopolitan, don't focus clearly on the most important goals, don't know what tasks need to be done when, and are unaware of the habits that can mark them as less than serious about their job.

Here are what some experts advise about setting priorities:

• If you don't know what the most important part of your job is, ask "There's no need to second-guess."

said Marge Baxter, a time-management consultant who also conducts a time seminar at New York University. "When in doubt, simply ask your supervisor what your main priority should be — what you're being paid to do."

• Remind yourself of the No. 1 priority. Keep a phrase displayed that will help you keep it in focus. Reminders of daily deadlines help keep you from being distracted.

• Be organized. This is not an end in itself, but it allows you to function effectively.

Ear infections can be source of serious ills

NEW YORK (AP) — Middle ear infection is a common disease among children which, untreated, can cause hearing loss, ruptured eardrums and even life-threatening complications, warns Dr. David J. Lim, a Deafness Research Foundation director.

If an infant or older child has a cold with a sore throat and earache, it's possible he or she may also have a middle ear infection, he says. The infection is called otitis media, or OM.

To add to the problem, when OM becomes chronic it often causes deafness and children can't tell adults that their hearing is impaired. They don't know, says Lim, an authority on OM.

So serious and widespread is the problem, according to the foundation, that of the 33 million infants born in the United States each year 71 percent will have had OM at least once before they reach their third birthday. And a third will have had three or more bouts in that time.

The Deafness Research Foundation, based in New York, is the only national voluntary health organization committed to basic and clinical research on deafness and hearing disabilities. It is financing research to be understood OM and devise methods to treat or prevent the disease.

Lim, an otolaryngologist, and his research team have been working on OM for 20 years at the Deafness Research Laboratories, College of Medicine, Ohio State University in Columbus.

Dow hits 1,500, then slips

By MARYBETH NIBLEY
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market finished mixed Thursday in a busy session during which the Dow Jones industrial average climbed above the 1,500 mark for the first time.

After seesawing most of the day between moderate and sharp gains, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 1.49 to 1,482.91 at the closing bell. The blue chip index relinquished about an 11-point gain in the final hour.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange reached the fourth highest total on record, 181.01 million shares. On Wednesday, 133.16 million shares changed hands.

Trading in the over-the-counter market swelled to a record volume.

Analysts have been expecting the market to pass the rally that has continued almost uninterrupted since early autumn.

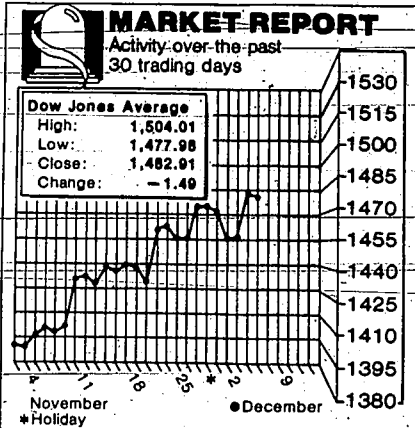

The market chalked up heavy gains Wednesday, with the Dow

Jones industrials and an array of other trading barometers surging to record levels.

Investors flocked to the market again Thursday, and professional buying programs were set in motion. But the sellers came, too, and seized the opportunity to take profits.

One of the most actively traded stocks, Texaco, closed up 1/4 at 31 3/4. A judge heard testimony at a hearing in Houston to decide whether to uphold a jury's finding that Texaco used improper tactics in breaking up a proposed merger agreement between Getty Oil and Pennzoil. The jury said Texaco should pay $10.5 billion to Pennzoil.

Also actively traded, Viacom fell 6 1/4 to 57 1/4. A major real estate syndicator, JMB Realty, revealed in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission that it has acquired an 11.6 percent stake in Viacom, which has been a subject of takeover speculation. But JMB Realty said it had no plans to seek control of Viacom.

Reagan's Cabinet urges overhauling basic antitrust law

By TOM RAUM
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's Cabinet has recommended an overhaul of one of the nation's basic antitrust laws — the Clayton Act — to cut standards for corporate mergers, particularly for import-injured industries, administration officials said Thursday.

Under the proposal, firms able to demonstrate heavy losses from overseas competition could apply for an exemption of up to five years from merger-restricting provisions of the 71-year-old act, the officials said.

The package of proposed amendments, initiated by Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, also would relax standards on mergers in general as well as sharply scaling back penalties for some antitrust violations.

Baldrige, outlining details of the package in a breakfast session with reporters, claimed the current law "which bans certain proposed mergers in advance of their U.S. firms in foreign competition."

He said the thrust of the proposed changes would be to allow mergers that would increase an industry's competitiveness.

Baldrige said that under current law, the government has only two options for dealing with an industry that pleads injury from imports: give it assistance in the form of tariffs or quotas, or turn-down its petition.

"We want a third option," Baldrige said. "We'll say, 'For five years, we'll exempt you from the antitrust laws on mergers so you can restructure yourselves.'" he said.

He called the proposed modifications "the height of common sense."

The package before the president is a slightly toned-down version of an earlier Baldrige proposal which would have flatly repealed the section of the Clayton Act — section seven — requiring advance Justice Department review and approval of mergers.

The final version had the endorsement of Attorney General Edwin Meese III and will be submitted to Congress as a legislative package with the Justice Department's blessings if approved by the president, said Matt Sheehan, a Justice Department spokesman.

"But remember, at this point these are only proposals," Sheehan said, emphasizing that the president "has not yet had a chance to review the proposals."

The recommendations were sent to the president on Tuesday during a joint meeting of the Cabinet Domestic Policy Council, chaired by Meese, and the Economic Policy Council, chaired by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III.

The proposed revisions would not exempt industries from price-fixing provisions of antitrust law, according to B. A. Cooper, a Baldrige aide.

Cooper said the overall thrust of the proposed changes is to bring the Clayton Act, which has not undergone any major revisions since 1914, into line with today's marketplace.

If endorsed by the president, the plan would add to a growing list of major trade initiatives that the president has announced to help boost U.S. sales abroad since unveiling his new, more activist trade policy in September.

In addition to allowing for a three-to-five year exemption from merger restrictions for import-battered firms, the proposed antitrust modifications would:

- Reduce penalties for certain antitrust violations from the current triple damages to single damages.

Confidence is imperative between jobs

If you were to find yourself suddenly unemployed, what would you do to cope financially?

Would you be tempted to rip up your credit cards and eat only canned foods by candlelight to save on electricity?

Or would you go out to buy a new suit, take your spouse to dine at one of the best restaurants in town and then take a week off at a Caribbean resort?

As the merger and acquisition spree in U.S. business continues, this point is clear: More and more employees at all levels will be laid off.

The average time between jobs today for a middle manager is from five to six months. For a younger person who is more flexible and may require less salary, the average may be only a month or two. For an older professional at a higher pay level, the time between positions is typically much longer.

The way people respond financially indicates how a person is dealing with a job loss psychologically.

Steve Finner, senior consultant with Lee-Hecht & Associates, a New York outplacement consulting firm which helps terminated executives find new positions.

"Extravagant spending could be a way of denying a serious situation. Such a person may renovate the kitchen or purchase expensive gifts.

"Other individuals, perhaps in a state of depression, stop spending, even on necessities for a job search. They may cut out personal items — dry cleaning, hair care, even shoe polish — tightlippedness that is counterproductive."

Confidence is imperative, Finner stresses. He suggests that you get in control of your finances. Among his specific proposals:

- Look at your fixed expenses — mortgage, car payments, loans, utility costs — and set up a budget if you don't already have one. Don't try to cut back unrealistically on expenses; a maximum would be 15 percent.
- Examine how to finance your household may be getting. Most companies provide severance pay usually based on one week's salary per year of service. If you'll be receiving a lump sum payment from your former employer's pension plan, don't spend it or pocket it until you talk with an accountant and find if you would be wise to roll over the full amount into a tax-deferred retirement plan.

- If possible, avoid extending credit lines or borrowing. Small amounts combined with monthly interest charges mount up.
- Study all your assets with the goal of using some of the money to invest in your career.
- Keep accurate records, for many expenses incurred during a job search are tax-deductible under current laws. Congress is not likely to alter these provisions; check the rules carefully.
- Keep detailed records on all travel by car, plane, bus or train to job interviews, hotel or motel charges, plus receipts for your meals if you travel to another city for an interview; records for entertainment or meals with a potential employer or professional colleague when the meeting was a means of seeking a new position.
- Such record-keeping, besides having therapeutic value, provides an individual with a good means of monitoring progress made on the search," Finner observed. "For example, a terminated executive would notice he had lunch with one professional colleague last week when he should have met with at least three, or he can track how one meeting has led to another."

If you're a job seeker, view your search effort as an investment in yourself and your career. Look at the whole enterprise as your career investment. Say you were earning $60,000 a year, and you estimate it will take six months to find a new position: That works out to your time's value at $200 a day. At that rate, it makes no sense to type your letters when you can hire someone for $10 an hour. Evaluate every expenditure in the same way: Will it help you reach your goal or not?

Get the most out of every expenditure. Some will help improve your morale as well as the impression you make. The ultimate increase in your earnings may bear out the wisdom of your investments.

A job search is a tough period, no matter how much you try to sugarcoat it. One woman I know invested $10,000 over a nine-month period on costs related to a job search, including clothing, dinners, travel, phone calls. She would usually have affected most of the money for a summer rental but now emphasizes the investment was worth every cent.

Sluggish retail-sales pace quickens toward end of month

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
The Associated Press

Sales by the major retailers were disappointing in November, but the chains said Thursday they were cheered by a strong rebound in the crucial Christmas-selling season following Thanksgiving as well as the main force fueling economic growth in recent years.

Analysts said the November performance was below expectations and voiced concern over continuing sluggish consumer buying, which has been the main force fueling economic growth in recent years.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., the nation's largest retailer, said its sales for the four weeks ended Nov. 30 fell 4.4 percent from the same period a year ago.

K mart Corp., ranked second, said its sales edged down 0.5 percent.

Home-loan limits hiked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two strict provisions of money for home mortgages — announced Thursday that they were increasing the loan limits for mortgages to reflect increases in home prices.

The action will increase the limit for single-family homes from the current $195,000 to $193,250.

Mortgage limits for two-family houses were increased to $170,450. The limit for three-family houses was raised to $205,950 and the mortgage limit for four-family houses was increased to $256,000.

The changes were announced by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., known as Freddie Mac, and the Federal National Mortgage Association, or Fannie Mae.

Both institutions were created to purchase mortgages from primary lenders, thus increasing the amount of mortgage money available. Financial institutions generally follow these guidelines in order to ensure that the mortgages that the finance can be sold in the secondary market.

The new limits will take effect for mortgages purchased by Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae after Jan. 1.

CSI's K and T Steel Tourney begins tonight

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Defending National Junior College Athletic Association champion Dixie and Casper College, with veteran Coach Swede Erickson making his first Twin Falls appearance, will highlight the K and T Steel Tournament at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium this weekend.

Dixie, the biggest team in the twoday tourney, will take on Casper in the opener at 7 p.m. Friday while College of Southern Idaho meets Central Wyoming in the 9 p.m. nightcap. It will be losers vs. losers and winners vs. winners Saturday night.

There is considerable change in the Dixie team that won this tournament last year as part of a 25-game winning streak that culminated in national juco honors — not the least being the replacement on the coach bench by Ken Wagner for long-time coach Nell Roberts.

But in the won-lost column, not a lot has changed. Dixie saw that 25-game streak ended by Ricks College two weeks ago, but the Rebels avenged that defeat the next night in Rexburg. Since then, Dixie has repeated as the Phoenix Valley of the Sun Tournament champion and will be 7-1 coming into tonight's battle.

CSI Coach Fred Trenkle saw the Rebels at Rexburg and pines "they are a very big team again, but quite different from the Dixie teams we've been used to playing. This team appears very inside-oriented offensively and doesn't shoot the long shot much. Defensively, it is a little more passive than last year's team. But there are the two things that are constant: they have excellent size and maturity and they shoot extremely well."

Tallest of the Rebels is 6-foot-11 "and he's every inch of that," Trenkle says. Sophomore Mark Clark from Auckland, New Zealand, Dixie's shooters are 6-5 John Beucher and 6-7 Todd Crow, both freshmen from Salt Lake City, while Todd Reid (6-2) is the point guard. Clark joins with 6-5 Josh Burgeon as a rebounding stalwart and Trenkle calls Byron Vaeolo, a 6-5 transfer from BYU, "probably their best athlete."

Trenkle says it appears Casper will come into the K and T with a 5-1 record, losing to highly regarded Nebraska Western by six points in Casper's T-Bird Classic over the Thanksgiving weekend.

"Casper, like Central Wyoming, apparently is quite a bit like us," Trenkle says. "Players in the 6-4, 6-5 range, pretty good depth and just excellent athletes. I am told that Casper has two top-quality players and the team has good quickness and great point potential."

Central Wyoming returns a lot of good players from last year but they've had trouble getting meshed so far and will come in about 3-3 (Central was slated to play Ricks on the way in)," Trenkle continues. "I know they have good athletes returning and they play very much like us. They'll try to pressure in a match-up zone and run with the ball. They are always well-coached."

"I know they are disappointed with their tournament so far, especially being 1-2 in the Casper tournament, so I look for a real challenge Friday night. One thing I do know. The fans are going to see a lot of athletes on the floor in that game," Trenkle says.

CSI enters its tournament in good health with 6-7 transfer Jeff Rekeeweg perhaps seeing his first action. He's been out for more than a month with a leg stress fracture.

"The doctor has given him OK for Jeff to play a little, just test it. He doesn't want him giving it a full workout yet," Trenkle reports.

With two wins under his belt, Trenkle says "so far I'm pleased with this team. For the most part, the players are showing good intent, city and getting themselves prepared to play. I've talked to the couple, three I think have tried to shoot a little on us in that department."

"If Rekeeweg is able to get back to full shape — and that's going to take all after Christmas it appears now — he seems to be exactly the type of team I've always wanted," he continues. "Great athletes, good quickness and solid competitors. Of course, we'd love to have the 6-10 guy in the middle, but I think with all the other physical and mental attributes this team has, it has the potential to get the nationals."

"I definitely feel we can compete for the regional championship because this team can play defense and you have to shoot early in the road," Trenkle says. "Everyone in Utah says it appears that Dixie will be the team to beat, meaning the nationals will be in St. George. But I don't over-look Snow or Utah Tech. But if it's Dixie, then we'll have a good idea of what the Southern Division is like after this weekend."

A booster get-together will be held at Canyon Springs Inn following Friday night's action. Meanwhile, Eagle Booster President Jim Miller said season tickets will be available at the door Friday night and a purchase on Saturday will apply to that session's admittance.

Kimberly, Valley gain tourney finals

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly Bulldogs will meet the Valley Vikings for the championship of the annual Snake River Holiday Basketball Tournament Friday night.

The home-standing Bulldogs saw that Thursday when they topped Murtaugh 70-49 after Valley had dented Hansen 53-38 in the curtain-raiser.

Hansen and Murtaugh will play for the consolation prize at 7 p.m. with the championship slated to start about 8:45 p.m.

Kimberly 78, Murtaugh 49

Kimberly had one false start before putting the young Red Devils behind them.

The Bulldogs blazed out to a 24-8 lead in the first quarter before Murtaugh, behind the scoring of John Tribulla, put together a flurry that narrowed the deficit to four points. But Kimberly hit on a mid-point spree to close the half and then burst away in the third quarter by outscoring the Red Devils 27-8.

Murtaugh — 21, 29, 19, 18
Kimberly — 24, 29, 26, 25
Murtaugh — Stashy 2, VanLewen 4, Palmer 4, Cummins 8, Tribulla 19, Walmer 2. Totals 18 11:25:49
Kimberly — Myers 7, Crawford 2, Stark 8, Heffernan 2, Davis 4, Hitecomb 2, Kelsey 1, Paul 8, Shaw 4, Wright 9, Hendrix 3, Sant 3. Totals 29 20:24:28

Valley 53, Hansen 38

Valley turned to a full court press in the second quarter to force numerous turnovers in the Vikings' 63-38 victory over Hansen in the opener.

Hansen showed patience and movement in the first period when the Vikings tried a man defense. The Huskies moved ahead 15-5, after a 2-2 deadlock.

But in the second period, the pressure had an immediate telling effect on Hansen's ability to get the ball downcourt. The Vikings outscored Hansen 12-2 in the first six minutes of the period. But it wasn't until the third quarter that the Vikings pushed into a double-digit lead.

Hansen succeeded in coming back to within eight points with 1:47 left in the game but watched Valley score the final seven.

Hansen — 13, 19, 25, 38
Valley — 15, 20, 20, 38
Hansen — Allen 11, Simpson 8, Norris 4, Miller 6, Hancock 2. Totals 16 10:20:28

Revenue shortfall threatens Idaho outdoor programs

BOISE — For the second straight year, revenues for Idaho hunting and fishing licenses are running significantly behind projections, raising the possibility of a 7.7 percent reduction in spending on programs financed by those fees.

"License sales through November are below last year and will probably be below projections (for the full budget year) unless things turn dramatically in the first six months of next year," Fish and Game Department financial officer Steve Barton told the commission Thursday.

Revenue from the sale of licenses and hunting tags was over $225,000 behind receipts for the July-November period of 1984—the first five months of the budget year, and Barton said if that trend holds as it appears it will, the department will receive about $12 million from license and tag sales this year.

That would be about $1 million short of the amount projected. Last year after projecting about $13 million in receipts, the department generated only $12.4 million.

Barton said there is an indication through some preliminary survey results that the number of sportsmen in Idaho may be leveling off even though the population of the state continues to grow.

"We may have entered a period of no growth in Idaho," Barton said. "We don't know for sure, but it's something we're looking at."

The critical figures in the department's licensing situation are those for resident hunting and fishing licenses, and so far for the current spending year the budget deficit is in all but two categories — resident hunting and resident junior hunting. There was a 29 percent drop in combination hunting-fishing license sales, a 15 percent drop in fishing licenses, a 14 percent decline in junior combinations and a 13 percent reduction in senior combinations.

The department has informally curtailed spending on the programs financed by those fees-to-date, Barton said. But without a turnaround in receipts, he said the commission may be forced to take formal action curtailing programs.

In other action, the commission gave its support legislation being offered by Idaho Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited to double the price of combination and steelhead permits to $5 with the additional revenue going to promote improvement in the state's runs.

That bill has been offered by the commission in past legislative sessions without success, as many lawmakers balked at the boosting the price for Idaho residents even though the permit is only a fraction of an angler's investment in the sport.

Fish and Game Director Jerry Conley also told the commission that the severe early winter weather this fall has already cost the department to protect hayracks and orchards from wandering big game looking for food in the deep snow.

He said that while emergency feeding has not begun yet, the department is preparing to begin supplying feed along the South Fork of the Boise River, a traditional area for that program.

Idaho selection near MOSCOW — The Keith Gilbertson, a volunteer coach at University of Idaho this past season, as emerged as the leading — if not the only candidate — still being considered for the post relinquished Monday by Dennis Erickson.

Sources in northern Idaho suggest that Gilbertson's knowledge of the passing offense the Vandals have used to succeed the past four years is as thorough as Erickson's.

Gilbertson first became associated with Idaho when he joined the first staff Erickson put together at Idaho. He spent the next three years working with the Los Angeles Express in the USFL and then rejoined the Idaho staff on a volunteer basis this fall when the USFL franchise disintegrated.

Erickson and the remainder of his Idaho staff will switch to University of Wyoming immediately.

Bruins boast tallest lineup in Twin Falls' basketball history

Editor's note: The following is a preview of the Twin Falls High School boys' basketball season. Previews of Minico and the rest of the Gem State conference will be run in Sunday's Times-News.

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The tallest basketball team that Twin Falls High School has ever started will take the court Saturday night in Nampa for the Bruin boys' season opener.

But don't understand that too quickly.

"We are going to lose some games, particularly early," says Coach John Astorquia. "Our season is aimed at improvement through December, January and the first part of February. In this state, everything hinges on what happens in late February and March."

There are several reasons for Astorquia to feel that way — not the least being that three of his tallest players weren't "Bruins" last year. The team is not overly quick, it really doesn't have a proven scorer, and although Astorquia says there is promise, the matter of shooting remains an unknown quantity.

The Bruins' tallest is 6-foot-10 Pat Clark, a senior transfer from Menasha, Minn. He is joined underneath by 6-9 Dave Fulton, who started the past two years for Glenn Perry, and by Fulton's 6-4 brother, John, a Junior who lettered for the Bruins.

Returning Bruins are part-time starter Tom Prater, a 6-3 senior who averaged 1.6 points and one rebound per game last year, and 6-2 senior Pete Jones, another part-time starter who at 6-9 averaged 2 1/2 rebounds and one point per game.

Up from the sophomore team is solid Kenny Pugh, 6-4, and guards Gabe Ostyn, 6-4, and Tom Muller, 6-0. They will be the only junior representatives on the roster.

Jeff Scheel, a 6-3 senior, was one of last year's top scorers on the junior varsity.

"Front-line size is excellent," says Astorquia, "and I think the perimeter shooting is better than average. The players believe in what we are doing and in each other. They are willing to work extremely hard and they believe in the team concept."

While those are the pluses, Astorquia notes, "Overall, team quickness is not great. It may take awhile to come together as a cohesive team and it also will take some time to adjust to the system."

Depending on who gets the final starting assignments, Twin Falls thus could start a team to rival the elevation of Burley's 1979-80 team that was 6-10, 6-7, 6-5, 6-4. The front line also rivals the 1974 Twin Falls aggregation that went 6-9, 6-8, 6-6 but "dropped off" to a 4-7 guard.

That team went on to collect Twin Falls' only state basketball championship, but two of those seniors were in their third starting year and the leading scorer was a three-year letterman and two-year starter.

There are two prime reasons however, that Astorquia says he will bid his time before making a pronouncement on the squad because "you have to remember that a year ago the nine players on this team were playing for five different teams — the Twin Falls sophomores, Juniors and varsity, the Glenns Ferry Pilots and Mentor, Minn. My thinking is this team could be slow coming together — at least to the point of knowing how, when and where we should be doing things. Things could happen sooner than that for us, but I'm looking more toward the second week of January.

The team could be together by then, but I have no idea what our record will be. We might be undefeated, we might be winless."

Astorquia's most to his concern is pathfinding.

"I think that probably that is our weakest area right now. We don't handle the ball real well coming up the floor and we're also having some problems with dribbling and passing in our half-court offense. But the players have made good progress in those areas the past couple of weeks."

From a shooting standpoint, Astorquia said, "as a team it's better than I expected for now but not where it will be in three weeks. We have to be able to run our shot from any place we want it shot from. Dave Fulton is about the best at the present time."

On a plus, Astorquia said "I think this can become a really good defensive team because it has more quickness than I believed it would have. I think we'll be basically a zone team because we don't want to move the big guys too far from the basket. But there is enough quickness that we can use other types of defense, too."

Filer trims Pilots in Canyon showdown

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

GLENN'S FERRY — A furious fourth-quarter rally fell short for the Pilots as Filer eked out a 48-44 victory.

Filer's win allowed the Wildcats to take sole possession of first place in the Canyon Conference.

Filer had a chance to win the game handsly, taking a 15-point lead in the final quarter. But the Pilots refused to quit and stormed back to make it too close for Filer Coach Wade Quisenberry's comfort.

"We tried to pull them out of the zone without taking away from the offense," said Filer mentor Wade Quisenberry. "But we gave the momentum away." Down 15 going into the last stanza the Pilots opted for an early offense and cut the deficit to two with 56 seconds remaining. But Sandra Greer, who had six of her team's eight final points, got behind the full court pressure to preserve the win.

"We're a little disappointed — but Filer played outstanding defense," commented commentator Pilot Coach Ken Fask. "We can't afford to lose Barb Johank that early in the game," he headed.

Filer's Terri Standee hit the second of a trio of three-point bombs as the teams battled for the early lead. Behind by a pair, Filer got the big break as Johank picked up her third foul with only six minutes elapsed and went to the bench for the balance of the first half.

Holly Linehan got inside for an easy bucket and the visitors took a lead they would not again relinquish. Pam Pember, a 6-foot-1 sophomore, contained Filer's offense within striking distance with her work on the boards and rolled in a follow shot with .04 left and it was 25-19 Filer at halftime.

Johank started the third quarter as she had the first to pull her team within four but the home team could not find a field goal between three by their opponents. Then, after trading baskets, the Wildcats went on a nine-point tear as Glenn's Perry cooled.

The loss snaps a six game winning streak and leaves Glenn's Ferry at 6-1 on the season. Filer is also 6-1 for the season and 5-0 in Canyon action.

Oklahoma's Casillas wins Lombardi award

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Oklahoma nose guard Tony Casillas was named Thursday night as the 1985 winner of the Lombardi award, which annually goes to the player deemed as the nation's top college lineman.

Casillas, a 6-foot-3, 280-pound senior, had 35 tackles, four for losses and two interceptions.

In seven games this year for the Sooners who play Southern Methodist on Saturday. He missed two games with an injury.

Other finalists for the trophy, presented in honor of the late National Football League coach Vince Lombardi, were Boston College nose guard Mike Righi, Oklahoma State defensive tackle Leslie O'Neal and Michigan defensive tackle Mike Hammerstein.

Lombardi, who coached "The Glee Club" Packers and the Washington Redskins, died in September 1970 of cancer.

The Downtown Rotary Club of Houston presents the award at a benefit dinner, with the proceeds going to the American Cancer Society for cancer research. Officials said this year's benefit will make the event's contributions over the $1 million mark.

Shoshone zips into conference lead

SHOSHONE — Someone forgot to tell Pat O'Maley that Christmas is over two weeks away.

O'Maley hit up the scoreboard and immediately outscored Raft River Thursday night as the Indians routed the Trojans 60-34 in a Magic Valley Conference game.

"Was she that girl that nobody guards?" asked Raft River Coach Olen Warr.

O'Maley scored 32 points including four three-point buckets. Fourteen of her points came in the fourth quarter.

Six minutes into the first period, O'Maley hit her first three-point bucket, lifting the Indians to an early 17-4 lead.

With starters Tonya Hill playing sparingly and Kellen Ketchum out of Raft River became frustrated in the second quarter as two players picked up technical fouls.

Julie Hubbard hit a pair of buckets with a "little over a minute" in the half. Shoshone had boosted it's lead to 18 points.

The landslide continued in the fourth quarter when O'Maley hit her third "three-point" bucket, "the Indians led 54-27."

"We played defense well," said Shoshone Coach Ed Sandy. "And defense always gets you points."

Warr is still looking for a little consistency in his Trojan team.

"This is the same team as we had last year, but we're not as good," said Warr.

BLISS — The Richfield girls picked up 21 points from Pegeen Thomas Richfield took the lead in the second quarter and held it by narrow margins through the second half. Bliss, getting a three-pointer from Venus Smith, closed the deficit to two and got the ball back in time for its last chance at a tie. That shot bounced away and Richfield expanded the final margin at the foul line.

Richfield hit an 11-20 free throw attempt to "ice" the victory while Bliss was five-for-eight at the line.

Hunter orange mandate eyed by commission

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The state Fish and Game Commission will set up an "internal committee to investigate the possibility of mandating that Idaho hunters wear hunter orange vests or coats beginning next year.

"We need to consider it just out of common sense. It makes no sense killing people," Commission Chairman Fred Christensen said Thursday after hearing an emotional plea for the mandate from the mother of a Lewiston police officer killed in a hunting accident two months ago.

"But I predict this proposal will take a stormy route," Christensen said of expected stiff opposition from some hunters. "We wouldn't take any concrete action without public comment."

Nancy Carille of Idaho Falls outlined the details of the death of her son Richard in a 20-minute, emotionally-charged hearing before the commission, finally urging the panel to intensify safety regulations for hunters in the state.

"I know that people are killed in many ways," Mrs. Carille said. "But in hunting, most accidents will happen if we don't take action."

Richard Carille, 26, the father of an 11-year-old son, died Oct. 5 in a hunting accident in northern Idaho. Fish and Game spokesman John Gahl said Don Hazen, the hunter who apparently shot Carille, is facing possible charges of involuntary manslaughter.

"If you consider ... the responsibility of hunters ... and take the emotion out of it," Gahl said, "this is an emotional issue," Gahl conceded. "What we want to try to do is to put it on a rational basis — hunting safety statistics — and take the emotion out of it."

"Hunter orange is not going to save every life, but we do know it can help an awful lot," Gahl said. "But Christensen said that no matter how logical the mandate might seem, opposition, at times intense, can be expected from those claiming it infringes on their rights — and that it will inhibit their ability to stalk game."

"This is an emotional issue," Gahl conceded. "What we want to try to do is to put it on a rational basis — hunting safety statistics — and take the emotion out of it."

Thomas-led Pistons beat Nets 113-111

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Guard Isiah Thomas scored 17 of his game-high 28 points in the second half Thursday night, leading the Detroit Pistons to a 113-111 National Basketball Association victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Piston guard John Long, who scored 21 points, broke a 108-108 tie with a layup with 46 seconds left in the game, and added a free throw with five seconds remaining when the Nets' Micheal Ray Richardson was ejected with his second technical foul.

Thomas canned two free throws with four seconds left before New Jersey's Mickey Johnson made a three-point field goal with two seconds remaining.

Kelly Tripucka scored 13 points for Detroit, 13-6, while guard Vinnie Johnson added 11.

Richardson scored 13 points in the third quarter as the Nets led 86-83 with one period to play.

Detroit trailed 99-91 midway through the fourth quarter before

Pro basketball

Thomas led a three-point goal and Long canned a free throw and a basket to pull the Pistons into a 101-101 tie with 4:55 to play.

NEW YORK (AP) — Terry Cummings scored 18 points and ignited a 14-4 streak in the first 4:37 of the fourth quarter Thursday night to break open a close game, and Sidney Moncreif scored a game-high 19 points as the Milwaukee Bucks defeated the New York Knicks 105-95 in the National Basketball Association.

With the Knicks ahead most of the game and holding an 81-80 edge after three quarters, the Bucks rallied to take a 92-85 lead at the 7:23 mark of the final quarter and never again

Milwaukee — which had trailed 56-50 at halftime — led the score at 64 with 6:47 left in the third quarter with a 11-3 spurt after New York had opened its largest lead of the game at 61-53.

Darrell Walker topped the Knicks with 15 points, Trent Tucker had 14, including three three-point shots and Pat Cummings had 13 points and 18 rebounds. Rookie Patrick Ewing, who was averaging 20.5 points per game, was held to 11 points.

Paul Pressey added 15 points to the Bucks' attack and Craig Hodges had 11.

Warriors 121, Clips 104

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Purvis Short scored 31 points and six other Golden State players reached double figures Thursday night as the Warriors ended a three-game losing streak by beating the Los Angeles Clippers 121-104.

Golden State held a 10-point lead after three periods and outscored Los Angeles 15-6 over the first 15 minutes of the last quarter to go up by 20 points. Short had five of the 15 points, and he totaled 23 points in the second half.

Guard Eric Floyd was the Warriors' second leading scorer with 18 points, followed by guard Chris Mullin with 16.

The Clippers were led by forward Cedric Maxwell with 20 points and 10 rebounds, followed by forward Marques Johnson, averaging 24 points a game, was shut out until 24 minutes before halftime, when Los Angeles trailed by 18 points, and he finished with 15 points, 13 in the second half.

Golden State had lost seven of its last eight games. Los Angeles lost for the fifth time in its last six games.

Australia Bowl draws crowd

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — More than 22,000 crowds have been sold for Saturday's inaugural Australia Bowl between Texas A&M and Wyoming, the first college football game ever to be played in this country.

The matchup counts in the Western Athletic Conference standings for both teams, and organizers are hoping the game will be the first in a series of future games in Australia.

The teams arrived Wednesday after an exhausting flight that took more than 36 hours, and flew into talk that the financial burden the falling Australian dollar had imposed on the local organizers had put the whole promotion in doubt.

Thirdkill signs with Celtics

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics said Thursday they have signed forward David Thirdkill, who had been waived by the National Basketball Association club in his final preseason cut.

He takes the roster spot of Sly Williams, who was released Monday after missing eight consecutive games and reportedly not keeping in touch with team officials following a hemorrhoid operation.

The 6-foot-7 Thirdkill, 25, who started his college career at College of Southern Idaho, played well in training camp. But Boston kept Williams and guard Rick Carlisle when it reduced its roster to 12 players Oct. 22 by cutting Thirdkill and guard Carlos Clark.

Minnesota taps Gutekunst

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — John Gutekunst, Minnesota's defensive coordinator for the last two years, was named head football coach of the Gophers Thursday.

Gutekunst, 41, succeeds Lou Holtz, who left Minnesota last week to replace Gary Faust as Notre Dame coach.

"We are here today beginning a new era here in Gopher football," Minnesota President Kenneth Keller said at a news conference introducing Gutekunst. "It couldn't have been a better thing for Minnesota."

Fay's sports have circulated that Maryland Coach Bobby Ross was Minnesota's first choice, but he has a proven Division I winner while Gutekunst has never held a head coaching job. But on Thursday morning, Ross removed his name from Minnesota's consideration when he announced that he would stay at Maryland.

Bosco put on Shrine list

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 34-man roster featuring Washington State running back Reuben Mayes and Brigham Young quarterback Robbie Bosco has been selected to represent the West at the first annual Shrine East-West All-Star college football game, it was announced Thursday.

The game will be played Jan. 11 at Stanford Stadium.

In addition to Mayes, who averaged 112.4 yards per game this season, the backfield will feature Tulsa's Gordon Brown and Oregon's Tony Cherry. Sharing the quarterback duties will be Mark Rippen of Washington State.

Vandy hires Rice coach

HOUSTON (AP) — Football coach Watson Brown, who gave the downtrodden Rice Owls a 2-0 record, is returning to respectability over the past two seasons, resigned Thursday night to return to his alma mater as head coach at Vanderbilt.

Brown, who directed the Owls to a 4-18 record over two seasons, made the announcement late Thursday after meeting with his coaching staff and team.

In a careful announcement, he said his resignation would be immediate.

Mushers thump Ketchum 70-27

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (AP) — The Camas County Mustangs thumped the young Ketchum-Sun Valley Outthroats with a full court victory in the first half to collect a 70-27 victory Thursday night.

The Mustangs' pressure allowed Ketchum to build up a 47-15 lead in the first half and the Outthroats weren't able to dent that in the final two quarters.

THE ACES

"Equality of opportunity is an equal opportunity to prove unequal talents."

heart to dummy's 10, losing to East's jack. It's too late to try the diamonds, and South's maximum take is only eight tricks.

South has a chance for a ninth trick in either of the red suits. The secret lies in choosing the suit that offers the better chance. South wins West's spade lead, and a quick count of tricks reveals eight tricks.

The finesse in hearts is a 50-50 chance. It wins whenever West holds the heart Jack. Dummy's long diamonds offer a better shot.

- WEST: J10 9 8, K 8 2, A 9 5 4, J 9, J 8 4. SOUTH: A K Q, K 8 2, A 7 3. EAST: 8 3 2, J 7 3, K 10, 10 9 5 2. North South: 1-4, 1-4, 1-4, 1-4.

ANSWER: Two spades. In this sequence, a jump to three spades is invitational; the single raise shows just about this strength.

Idaho in a glance

Casual reads show well on coffee table.

By STEPHEN HARTGEN

TWIN FALLS — To the right of the photograph, taken down Shoshone Avenue, workers are finishing the first story of the Perrine Hotel.

To the left, a woman and child in a two-lonely, store-front town. Nothing holds the horse-flimsy buckboard-stop-to-chat-with-a-eye. The place is rough and bleak, with man wearing a starched collar. Behind more than a touch of the Klondike — an in them, a packed, wheel-marked street stant city in an unlikely place, built to stretches to a hazy, near horizon. A swirl of serve a particular economic need. dust blurs the intersection.

Above is an enormous expanse of empty sky, save for a hint of cloud. Then again, the memory of people still alive in this the cloud may be only a smudge on an ag-

Review

Three or four generations have passed in the intervening 80 years, but the Magic Valley today, and indeed much of Idaho, is surprisingly similar in tone if not in appearance to those early years. The state remains essentially isolated. It is a long way by car to anywhere.

Imagine how it must have seemed at the turn of the century. To be sure, people traveled less often and there was less contact by mass communications with the outside world. Still, it seems hard to believe that 80 years ago, the automobile was a novelty, airplane flight a foolhardy tempting of fate, television unvented. The world has changed and so have we.

Yet, that past remains close to us, particularly in Idaho where development has been slower. "Entering Idaho. Set your clock back 25 years," says the bumper sticker. The remark is only partly in jest.

Some of that quality of the Idaho past has been captured in two new coffee table books on the state published this year. The one is "Idaho," by photographer John Marshall and writer Curt Conley. The Graphic Arts Center Publishing Company, Portland, Ore., 1985.

It is one in a series of dramatic photographs which have come from this publisher in the past decade. They make great Christmas gifts, the kind of book to be set out for guests or given as gifts as a reminder of "home."

With a somewhat different approach, but still essentially a picture book, is "Idaho: Gem of the Mountains," by Merle Wells and Arthur A. Hart, Windsor Publications, Inc., Northridge, Calif., 1985. Wells is the state's historic preservation officer and Hart the director of the State Historical Society, which is the book's chief sponsor.

Wells and Hart attempt a comprehensive overview of the state's history and through some color photography, its present landscape. It thus overlaps with Marshall and Conley's approach. In photos and text, the state's history is preserved for all to see. See GLANCE on Page D2

Cowboy books lasso humor

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Idahoans Jack E. Miller and Don Gill will be on hand at Judi's Bookstore Dec. 14 from 1 to 3 p.m. to autograph their collaborative book, "Tough-n-Tender." A book of poems, photos and illustrations on the lives of real working cowboys. It was authored by Miller, while Gill provided the illustrations and Pete Conlon the puns at the tough world of cowboy life.

His latest joint effort with Black, "Buckaroo History," is but a continuation of outrageous portrayals of cowboy life in a series that includes "Cowboy & His Dog, Or Get In The Pickup," "Rider and Roper," "On the Edge of Common Sense" and "Doe While You're Here."

Gill, who hails from King Hill, has been illustrating Western Stockmen's calendars for 12 years. He's found a natural place which fire the pages of Black's books which fire the reader is fed throughout time, first seeing a Abstralphiticus buckaroo, then ending the book with Sidemeat Lamore, who won pitchin' pennies with the chiet of the Photonians.

Among his irreverent descriptions of ancient cowboys is the one about Eric the Dead, a Neanderthal buckaroo: "His headgear, was remarkably similar to the modern cowboy headgear after it's been worn for 2 or 3 years. Other Gem books in brief

TWIN FALLS — For other books available at local stores this Christmas season, consider these:

"Father & Son" — Harper and Row, $15.95, 188 pp. A personal biography of the late Senator Frank Church by his son, F. Forrester Church, Young Church, a preacher for an upper outside Unitarian church in New York City, writes a vision of love powerfully depicted between himself and his father, who was diagnosed as having terminal cancer at age 23, but who lived and prospered for 35 more years.

"Idaho Folklife" — University of Utah Press & Idaho State Historical Society, $19.95, 228 pp. An anthology of essays sought to bring within the covers of a single volume a broad conspectus of folklife in the Intermountain West and surrounding states.

"Hans Brinker, or The Silver Skates" — Dell Publishing, $3.95, 200 pp. Originally published in 1888, the book was among the first written to entertain rather than instruct young readers. Of special interest to Idaho readers, the cover illustration is the work of Stephanie Gerber of New York City.

Gerber is the daughter of Clarence and Lenore Parker of Twin Falls. Her models for the cover are her sister and brother-in-law, Pam and Bill Hartley, both school teachers in Twin Falls.

Calendars note state history

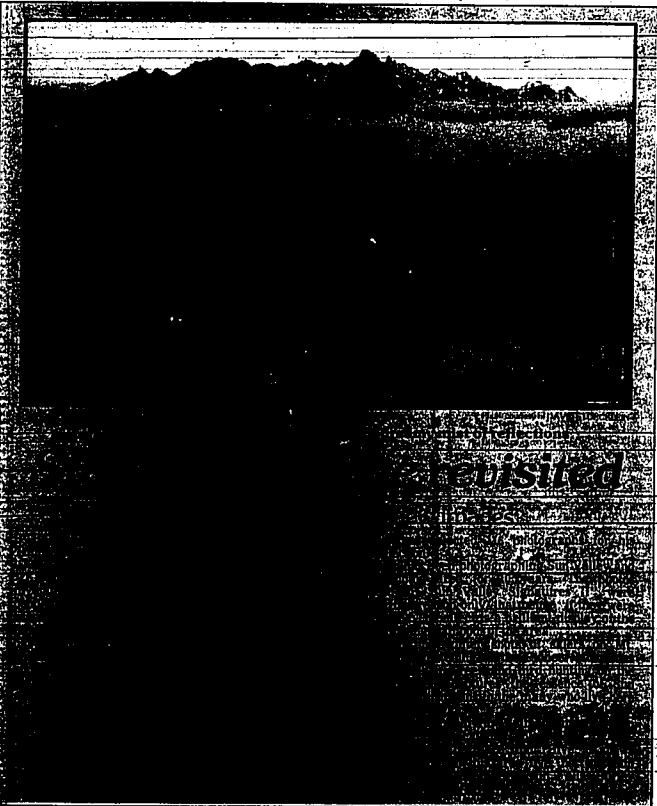

TWIN FALLS — For a daily glimpse of Idaho's past, "A Date With Idaho History" and "The Jerome Idaho History" and "The Jerome County Historical Society" calendar are available this Christmas season. The "A Date With Idaho History" calendar is available in paperback for $4.95 and in hardcover for $9.95. The "Jerome Idaho History" calendar is available in paperback for $4.95 and in hardcover for $9.95. The "Jerome County Historical Society" calendar is available in paperback for $4.95 and in hardcover for $9.95.

Published for the first time, "A Date With Idaho History" features but nostalgic scenes as well. Beginning with a photograph of the tractor, the calendar moves on to Ada County sheriff's office in 1901 February with a Clarence E. Bisbee and a 1910 Bisbee shot of downtown photograph of Shoshone Falls. It ends with a rabbit drive that took

Fingerpicker picks up Sunday

The flying fingers of Chris Procter will spin guitar music from traditional folk to ragtime and old beat jazz harmonies at the Bradshaw Academy this Sunday. Procter is the winner of the U.S. National Fingerpicking Championship in 1982. The concert begins at 2 p.m. Suggested donations are $5 for adults and $2 for senior citizens and students.

ISU, museum present guided view of Halley's Comet at planetarium

POCATELLO — The Idaho Museum of Natural History and the Idaho State University physics department and the Friends of the Museum will present "Halley's Comet: Once in a Lifetime" Dec. 10 and 11 at 7:30 p.m. in Room 204 of the Physical Science Building on the ISU campus.

Dr. Barry Parker, professor of physics at ISU, will present the opening-illustrated-lecture. The audience will then be divided into small groups and ushered into the university's planetarium. Weather permitting, a telescope viewing of the comet will be available; otherwise, a short film on the comet will be shown.

The Pocatello Astronomical Society and physics department graduate students will be on hand to assist with the telescopes and viewing.

The public is asked to bring in mind that the seating capacity in the planetarium is limited—as are the number of telescopes. Everyone will have the opportunity to participate books range from Sandpoint to the Boise, the Bear Lake Country to the Sawtooths. Historically, they move from the Oregon Trail to the diversified state which is Idaho today.

That leaves both with a hurried glance, as if the authors were trying to squeeze in one of every typically Idaho scene. The result, in both, is an unfortunate "if this is Tuesday, we must be in Pocatello" quality.

They are samplers of the state's communities, scenery and, in the case of the Wells and Hart text, history. Both leave a nice afterglow but you come away wanting something more substantive.

The Wells and Hart book claims to be an "authoritative history" of Idaho, but neither volume sufficiently fills that need. Indeed, there is no comprehensive, scholarly history of Idaho comparable to, say, T.A. Larson's "History of Wyoming." University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb., 1978.

There are at least two reasons for this. One is the great diversity of Idaho, geographically, socially, politically and economically. It is simply difficult to encompass it all in one volume.

Wayne is easier to characterize, despite its clash of ranching, coal and oil. It is high-plains West, cold, remote and in many ways, barely settled. One journalist who has spent time in both says Wyoming is like Afghanistan.

Idaho is more subdued but with a wider variety. The deep divides to which still hamper the state's development have been there since it was first settled in the 19th century.

The second reason is the specialty nature of historical research today. Regional and state history has been relegated to local historical societies while the university ranks are filled with Ph.D.s, examining minutiae on abno-history and the like.

Few historians take the broad view and attempt to make it readable, and those who do, like Barbara Tuchman, find themselves scorned in academic circles.

The result is that, in Idaho's case, we have remnants of material on the Nez Perce Indians, and adequate scholarship on the early fur trade, the Oregon Trail, a bit on timbering (mostly on the Woodbles and the union movement) and mining, but very little on the history of Idaho agriculture. Our political leaders have so far been given short attention.

The last biography of William Borah is a generation old and nothing substantial on Frank Church is yet available.

Wells and Hart hit some of these high points in brief fashion. The book moves in short sections of a few pages each, putting together a number of historical society photos, many of them published here for the first time.

Marshall and Conley take a different approach, leading off with a short essay on the state's history and natural beauty, then going right to the pictures which are arranged geographically.

As in every publication from Graphic Arts, the photography is stunning and the reproduction quality excellent. Residents, as well as casual visitors, will find favorite, familiar scenes. My own is the double-page, autumn panorama of the City of Rocks near Almo (pp. 124-125).

For what they are, both these books introduce the state well. But neither should be taken as the last word. They may be adequate for the casual collector, but the serious scholar will want more.

Stephen Hartgen, managing editor of The Times-News, has a doctorate in American studies from the University of Minnesota.

Disgruntled Sunday football fans can opt for choral concert at CSI

TWIN FALLS — Those wishing to escape the grunts-and-groans-of television football are invited to motor over to the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium Sunday at 3 p.m. for a CSI choral concert. Three choral groups will be featured.

The Chamber Choir, a group of 22 singers drawn from the CSI student body and the community at large, will present music from the Renaissance along with several more contemporary numbers.

The Madrigal Singers, a newly formed group made up of Carson Womg, Lloyd Ravan, Phyllis Van Gest, Laura Vincent, Lori Fisher and Ruth Hettig, will present a group of selections which were originally written for the singers' enjoyment as they sat around after dinner singing together.

Winding up, the Jazz Choir will give a slightly different flavor to the concert by presenting familiar numbers that include "We've Only Just Begun," "Red Roses for a Blue Lady" and "Christmas Song," better known as "Chestnuts Roasting on an Open Fire."

Admission is complimentary, but donations for the Music Department Scholarship Fund will be accepted.

There are at least two reasons for this. One is the great diversity of Idaho, geographically, socially, politically and economically. It is simply difficult to encompass it all in one volume.

and Fairfield.

The pictures in this book capture not only the landscapes, but people actively enjoying the outdoor beauty of the mountain valleys and prairies.

Sun Valley is a very special part of southern Idaho," says Stoecklein, noting that people from other communities "come up to wind surf on Redfish Lake, backpack, hunt for deer, grouse and pheasant, fish on Magic Reservoir or gather firewood for the winter months.

"They know it's their treasure," he says.

For those who live in the area or pursue its pleasures, the photos in this book bring alive the memories of places we've been and vistas we have seen which have merely been locked in our mind's eye.

The simplicity of the view from the north side of Timmerman Hill illustrates the feeling that home is just around the corner or the tourist is on his last leg to Sun Valley. Many have felt the exhilaration as they drive over the crest of the hill and sweep down the curving highway into the Wood River Valley.

Likewise, a personal image is created as one watches a storm brew over the Sawtooth Mountains or a spectacular sunset impede upon the daylight. These and many others are captured on film to refresh one's memories or create an enticement to visit the scene.

"A photograph should excite you, depending on your mood," Stoecklein says, and this element has been demonstrated well.

Ten thousand copies of "Sun Valley Signatures '85" have been printed on a background of handmade Japanese paper. Stoecklein says this was done in an effort to alleviate the starkness of a white background for his photos.

Eight different inks and two varnishes combine to create the cover photo, bringing out the contrast of frost-covered aspens against a background of pines.

Sun Valley Co. commissioned a special edition of the book "to help commemorate the 50th anniversary of the resort. Six of the pages in this special edition have been replaced with nostalgic photographs of the early days of Sun Valley, Stoecklein says. The edition is also dedicated to the resort's founder Averitt Hartman, with a special introduction by Sun Valley author Dorcie Taylor.

"Sun Valley Signatures '85" sells for $29.95 and is distributed locally at Vetschemm and Sun Valley bookstores, as well as at the Twin Falls Airport and the Vista Bookstore in Boise.

Is there a "Sun Valley Signatures '85" in the works? Stoecklein says it's a possibility.

For day-to-day fascination, historical notes are included. Here's a sample for Friday, Jan. 3: "Insane asylum nearing completion, we hear of room reservations for Idaho Falls edition of Blackfoot paper (1880).

On the same page, one learns that Idaho had the first Jewish governor in the U.S., that sagebrush was once valued at $15 a cord and that an Idaho cowboy and pioneer, one fish on Magic Reservoir or gather firewood for the winter months.

"They know it's their treasure," he says.

For those who live in the area or pursue its pleasures, the photos in photographs and illustrations. Miller fills the pages with poetry like this one entitled, "Handy To Have Around."

We are delivered by nature in pairs,
We are extensions of a Spirit that reflects two extremes of the working cowboy.

We are tough...
From the using, in the heat of summer,
To the cold and lonely of winter.

and some look like exposed tree roots. Still...
We are tender.

We warm your heart,
and we brighten in a sad face by resting supportingly on slumped shoulders.

Yes, nature made us yours in the beginning, and we will be with you 'til the end.

Whether young or old,
We belong to you, cowboy, Tough'n Tender!

Miller, a businessman for five days a week, a cowboy buckaroo and rodeo call roper on weekends and holidays, spends a couple of months each year working cows with friends who are cowboys by trade. Wanting to give something back to his friends, he says he started by taking some pictures and their writing poem about those men and the lives they lead—these are the results.

The idea mushroomed into a book.

Pirates plunder Live Aid bounty

Bootleg recordings divert earnings

LONDON (AP) — The man who dreamed up Live Aid charged Thursday that unauthorized recordings of the charity concert are making millions of dollars for music pirates instead of benefiting the African famine relief campaign.

Although the recording of the concert is not protected by copyright, promoter Bob Geldof charged it was being illegally reproduced by pirates who he says are taking money that rightfully belongs to Live Aid and the starving people for whom the concert was held.

"The money the bootleggers make is preventing people living. Those people who prevent people living are called murderers. When you buy this (unauthorized recording) you kill someone else," Geldof said.

"What these people are putting in their pockets quite literally is food and water and shelter and medicine," the Irish rock star told a news conference launching a campaign against copyright pirates.

The campaign is being run by the International Federation of Phonogram and Videogram Producers, representing 650 record companies in nearly 70 countries.

The Band Aid and Live Aid bootlegs have sold 4.5 million copies so far in the last year, and that means $3 million to $5 million stolen from the Band Aid Trust.

federation spokesman James Wolsley told AP Radio.

On a worldwide basis, the recording industry is losing about $1.2 billion a year to music pirates, he said.

The July 13 Live Aid concert in London raised about $60 million for the British Band Aid Trust while the concert in Philadelphia brought $25 million into the Live Aid Foundation in the United States.

No copyright recording of the concert was made because of complicated legal problems, Geldof said. Organizers now are negotiating to make a film of the mammoth event.

The federation said in a statement that it has discovered six unauthorized versions of the concert, all highly professional cassettes and records made in Indonesia. They are on sale in the Middle East and in parts of Europe, the federation said.

The 1984 Band Aid charity recording of "Do They Know It's Christmas," made by British rock stars, also has been copied as has "We Are The World," the charity recording by American artists.

Geldof said he would do whatever is necessary to "stop" the pirate recordings of Live Aid.

Columbia drops Geldof's contract

By ROBERT HILBURN and STEVE POND
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Is it time for Boomtown Rats-Aid?

Bob Geldof, whose Live Aid pop campaign raised more than $60 million for famine victims in Ethiopia, has been dropped by his U.S. record company, the singer's attorney, Ina Melbach, said Wednesday.

Melbach said by phone from New York that Columbia Records failed to exercise its option on Geldof's band, the Boomtown Rats. But she does not expect the group, which still records for Phonogram in Europe, to be without a U.S. label long.

"This isn't a case of Geldof feeling dejected," Melbach said. "Several other companies have shown interest in the group and a new deal should be completed by Jan. 1 (Bob's) excited about the interest of other labels and is looking at the whole thing as the beginning of a new chapter in his life."

Still, the surprise move makes Columbia look like the Strangle of the record business in view of Geldof's remarks in recent interviews about how his Live Aid activities have been a drain on his finances.

Ironically, Geldof received a Special Achievement Award of $20,000 Tuesday night in New York in the fourth annual World Hunger Media Awards program sponsored by pop singer Kenny Rogers and his wife, Marianne.

Columbia representatives refused comment beyond acknowledging that the group is no longer on the roster. But the decision was believed to be based on the band's lack of sales in this country for its latest album, "In the Long Grass," reportedly sold fewer than 75,000 copies, far below an acceptable level for a veteran group on a major label.

Yet industry observers were surprised by the Columbia action. "It's a terrible move from a public-relations sense," said a Los Angeles record company vice president, who asked not to be identified. "How much could they be losing on the band?"

"If they were on our label and some accountant said we should drop them, I would go to the wall and say, 'Keep them.' I don't care what their sales were. It just seems, like bad vibes. I'm sure you'll see them plucked up immediately by another company which will put a big push behind them."

Another executive here expressed some sympathy with the Columbia decision. "As a humanitarian, Geldof is unparalleled, but as a rock band, they didn't cut it — and, after all, we are in a business," he said. But he also doubted that his company would have dropped the Rats at this time. "Certain people are good to have just for your label's image."

Melbach said Columbia did make the group an offer after letting the option period pass, but that it was not deemed sufficient when measured against the interest being shown by other labels. The contract she is now putting together calls for both solo Geldof albums and group J.P.s.

Coffee-table books abound

A sampling of attractive holiday gift candidates

Reviewed by JEFFREYS UNGER
Dallas Times Herald

A friend is threatening to take all the coffee-table books he's received over the years and turn them into a coffee table.

It's clear, of course, that the people who bestowed these weighty tomes obviously didn't give enough thought before making their purchases. Here's no other way to explain the presence in his library of books on the history of Siamese fighting fish and what's new in Thrace.

So, as a public service for those people still shopping for Christmas gifts, we hereby present a sampling of gift books available this season.

Starting them at the top, there's "Sightseeing: A Space Panorama" (Knopf, $24.95), a collection of 84 spectacular color photographs from space from the NASA archives, with a foreword by Arthur C. Clarke. Clarke is also one of the contributors to "The Planets" (Bantam, $24.95), a compilation of essays on the planets by leading U.S. space scientists, and fiction by some of the best-known writers in the field: Robert A. Heinlein, Ray Bradbury and Philip Jose Farmer. "Space, Time, Infinity" (Pantheon, $29.95) by James S. Trefl, a professor of physics at the University of Virginia, is subtitled "The Smithsonian views the universe." Trefl traces the development of the universe, discusses theories about space and examines the so-called new physics.

On another level, biologist Joseph Levine and photographer Jeffrey L. Rotman have combined to produce a beautiful book, "Undersea Life" (Stewart, Tabori & Chang, $24.95). Levine's text focuses on the often fragile interrelationships among marine inhabitants and raises questions about the future of the world's oceans.

For lovers of animals above ground, consider "The Noble Horse" (G.K. Hall & Co., $75), by Montie and Hans D. Dossenbach with a foreword by the Duke of Edinburgh. This handsome slip-cased volume details the history of the horse, its evolution, relationship with man and role in sports.

Those who like to travel will find they have several great travel books to choose from. "Dream Machines: Classic Cars of the '50s and '60s" (Macmillan, $35), by Jay Hirsh, is an elegant tribute to the golden age of the U.S. automaking industry. The book features 100 color photographs of classic cars, such as the Mustang, Avanti, Corvair, Dodge and Tucker, with a short description of each vehicle and its "specs." Photographer Stephen Salmeri traveled coast to coast to collect the photographs for "Cadillac" (Rizzoli, $50). The book contains 90 of those photos, some of them hand-painted by his wife, Sybil, Michelle Salmeri, and a text by Owen Edwards. The mood of the photographs varies widely, from melancholy to ebullient.

Those who enjoy reading another way might enjoy "Normandie: Queen of the Seas" (Vanderhoeck & Reinecke, $30), a celebration of the legendary liner. The text, by four authors — including one whose company built and owned the great ship — tells the life story of the "Normandie" from her birth to her ending in a mysterious fire in World War II. Another similarly handsome book, this one in paperback, is "The Queen Mary: The Official Pictorial History" (Sequel Books, $9.95).

Those who delight in the destination more than the journey could profit from "Ireland" (Salem House, $24.95), by Dervyl Murphy with photographs by Klaus Francke. Murphy, a respected travel writer, offers readers a survey of her native land, from its historical roots to the political turmoil of today. "Ireland From the Air" (Crown, $25) describes Dublin novelist Benedict Flynn's compelling text with aerial color photographs. Michael Ruetz's "Scottish Symphony" (New York Graphic Society, $30) captures the beauty of the entire country, from the Highlands to the Hebrides, throughout the seasons. The book contains 69 color illustrations, including seven panoramic foldouts. David Attenborough, the author of "The Living Planet," wrote the introduction.

Beautiful color photographs by Tore Gill enhance "Vidal in Venice" (Summit, $29.95). Vidal is, as usual, a delightfully entertaining guide to the city he calls perhaps the most beautiful "clique on earth" (Venice II, (Vanderhoeck & Reinecke, $24.95)). "Venice: A Roller's first book of travel" (Vanderhoeck & Reinecke, $24.95) is an illustrated, many of them featuring the Venetians.

"The Sevilla of Carmen" (Marrow, $29.95), by photographer Robert Adams, is a collection of 100 color photographs of Sevilla, the city to which Adams spent 10 years. It is illustrated by Adams' wife, Barbara, who was also a photographer. The book contains 130 duotone photographs and features a section on the "toros" (bullfights). Information on Bluet and Medicine, the authors of the novella on which the opera is based.

Moving closer to home, country and western music fans might enjoy "Nashville: Music City USA" (Abrams, $29.95), by John Eomax III, the "story of the new country music." The text is augmented by 250 illustrations, including 100 plates in full color. And "The Islands Club: Islands of the West" (S&W, by Page Slinger with photographs by Francis Langley, which explores islands off the Pacific Coast from Baja California to Vancouver. Some of the islands are in full color. And "The Islands Club" (General Public, "San Francisco" (Abrams, $49.50) contains photographs by Morton Beebe and paens to the city by the bay by such well-known San Franciscans as columnist Herb Caen and novelist, Hunter S. Thompson. "The Islands Club" covers everything from the city's magnificent views to the obligatory shots of the Golden Gate Bridge.

New and worthwhile reference books include the three 1986 Hammond Gold Collection World Atlases, each of which contains updated and revised geographic information, such as the Phylu place name system in China and the new names of Soviet cities (Rybinsk is now "Ar dropov, for example). "Harper's Bible Dictionary" (Harper & Row, $27.50) explains every aspect of the Bible, including archaeology, culture and theology. "The Macmillan World Encyclopedia" (Macmillan, $29.95) sets out the full history of civilization from 2000 B.C. to the present. Author Colin McEvedy provides commentary.

Biography reveals complex family life of church leader Young VISALIA, Calif. (AP) — Mormons family relations that developed to may wince at the family discussions Brigham Young had with some of his 55 wives, but a history professor describes his biography of the church leader as accurate and sympathetic.

Brigham Young would admit he directed the best-organized "American Frontier" as part of a series of American biographies published by Little, Brown and Co. of Boston.

"The books are mostly about presidents, their wives or other political figures from the East Coast," said Bringham, whose book was distributed Monday in college bookstores. "But they're not just biographies. They're all tied to a larger theme."

Young serves as an archetype of the expanding American frontier, starting with his birth in Vermont in 1801 and spanning the pioneering role in church and Western settlement in the 1840s to his death in 1877.

"I use a lively, anecdotal style," said Bringham, a history instructor at College of the Sequoias in Visalia 170 miles north of Los Angeles. "I tried to bring out the human interest. The man had 55 wives and 57 children. As you can imagine, there were some highly complex interrelationships that developed to keep everything organized."

Young either was or became a master of organization under the circumstances, Bringham concluded.

"This shows up in other things," Bringham said. "Even his detractors admit he directed the best-organized members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints."

"Brigham Young was a prophet of God in the church, and I'm not sure how the broad spectrum of church members will take the book," he said.

Of Young's many wives, 16 bore his children. Many of the wives were women to whom Young gave his name and protection.

"They weren't wives in any other sense of the word," Bringham said.

Young reflected "a religious enthusiasm rare among other frontier Americans," the author found. "Calling upon his Yankee ethics of hard work, striving for success, and a sense that all experience was part of God's will, Young supervised the creation of a new society that soon attracted thousands of followers from around the world."

Poet Larkin dies

By MICHAEL DIRDA
The Washington Post

Philip Larkin, who died Monday at the age of 63, was one of the most admired English poets of his generation. Now, as he was said of another English poet — he belongs to the ages.

Larkin would flinch from such a statement. He was, from all accounts, an extremely modest man; even notorious for his homespun virtues, diffidence and melancholy.

Buckley debuts as kids' book writer

By LESLIE HANSCOM
New York

William F. Buckley Jr. has a new book out. Hasn't he always? Tell us, William F. Buckley has two new books out. That is hardly startling news either. Everybody knows that he has a double supply of energy, industry and tenacity. So here is a last effort to deliver tidings out of the ordinary — in one of the new books, Buckley is making his debut as a writer of story books for children.

In the near vicinity of his 60th birthday, Buckley didn't need to go hunting for new endeavors, but here he is invading the territory of Beatrice Potter and Dr. Seuss. The work which propels him into the field is "The Temptation" — of Wilfred McGuane. It is a hardy, start-up story in which he puts his indignation to a challenge that, for him, must have been a stretching experience. He undertakes to record the predicament of a boy who has no money.

Buckley's hero, Wilfred Malachy, is the son of a hard-up writer who insists that "money or no money, Wilfred will attend a desirable boarding school. At five years old, Wilfred is under heavy pressure to keep up with the standard of living. To surmount the problem, he determines to emulate Robin Hood and engage in crookedness to benefit the poor himself. In successive comic episodes with conscience, he steals from his schoolmates, helps one of them, for a fee, to cheat on exams and even robs the collection plate at chapel.

Wilfred is made to face his own downfall when he tries to use the power of a computer in the school lab, which is plugged into the supernatural. The computer, instead of carrying out his desires like an obliging genie, balks but out for his security and rights him to gain a new footing on the paths of righteousness.

This improving tale was invented by Buckley as a contribution to one of the more interesting of recent publishing projects in the field of children's literature. Originating with Tom Dunwood, editor of Ariel Books, which packages literary projects for youngsters, the idea is in the hands of writers famous for different kinds of work into writing for children. The series, called Goblins Tales, makes its debut this fall with two titles. One of them is "Wilfred Malachy." The other is "Spectacles," written by Ann Beattie, whose characteristic audacity as a novelist is usually taken to be the yuppie generation. Two more of the series are scheduled for publication — "Illustration" and "Appearance" — are to be published soon, written by the novelist Thomas McGuane and the playwright David Mamet.

Buckley was one of the first to take the bait, he says, mainly because he never learned the technique of saying no. Anybody who has read "Crushing Speed" or "Overdrive," two books in which he lags the crowded life he leads, is aware that his days are scheduled down to the minute to get everything in. He managed to squeeze in the kiddies' book because he wrote it on a holiday in Tahiti last Christmas. It dimmed his vacation, he admits, only to the extent of one afternoon at the word processor.

He is speaking of this droplet in the bucket of his activity on a day when he is scheduled to broadcast or record eight appearances for radio and television before he sleeps. The setting in which he is talking is his New York dwelling, a maisonette apartment with its own street entrance on Park Avenue. It looks as though he must have dislodged a Medial to move in, but the previous tenant was Dag Hammarskjold, when he was head of the United Nations, and presided at a banquet which could come to dinner and food at home. Somehow it is gratifying to know that it wasn't here that Buckley sat imagining the poverty of Wilfred Malachy.

To the eye of one who remembers him when he was a big man on campus almost 40 years ago, Buckley looks amazingly unchanged from the day he looked then. Since that long ago time, he has reared and educated a son and marveled, like most parents, at how little the younger generation reads. "Once when Christopher was about 15," he says, "I took him with me on a trip to make to San Francisco — on the plane. I sat going through briefcases, and he sat with earphones clamped on, listening to rock music. Finally I couldn't stand it. I turned to him and said, 'Did you ever read a book?' He lifted one earphone and said, 'Yeah, 'Treasure Island.' " I put back the earphone. " Nevertheless, Christopher Buckley will be publishing his first novel in the spring.

The other book — which the elder Buckley is publishing more or less coincidentally with "Wilfred Malachy" is "Right Reason" (Doubleday, $10.95), the latest collection of his essays. This is the familiar Buckley, rambling with the wanted logic stand on matters as disparate as the shooting down of the Korean airliner and the magic of the horseshoe. Only in an oblique way do the two books overlap.

Nashville Sound lends easily to warm holiday sentiments

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — More than a dozen country performers have albums out with traditional Christmas songs and some new Yuletunes featuring an occasional country-like folkiness.

"It's a little incongruous to think about a Christmas album by Twisted Sister," says Ed Benson, executive director of the Country Music Association. "It's more likely to come from someone like Barbara Mandrell or the Statlers."

Record promoter Lee Stoller of Nashville says country artists have a wider appeal. "Country artists are more family oriented. They relate more to family and values of Christmas. The young rock scene is not quite in fo family," he said.

Mike Hyland, an 18-year veteran of the music business, says there is a radio market for Christmas music by country singers but not for their rock 'n' roll counterparts. "Christmas music doesn't fit the formats of rock stations," said Hyland, a publicist who worked for four record companies.

"Rock formats are too structured," he said. "But a country music station will go on (play) a song by a country artist in early December as a Christmas song."

Back on the shelves for the second season is "Once Upon a Christmas" by Dolly Parton and Kenny Rogers. The album, which sold more than 1 million copies last year, includes five original compositions by Miss Parton plus such standards as "White Christmas," "Silent Night" and "Winter Wonderland/Sleigh Ride."

The duo also starred in 1984 in a TV special, "Kenny and Dolly: A Christmas to Remember." The record was their first album together and their first collaboration since their hit duet in 1983, "Islands in the Stream."

"I was raised in a Baptist family and I've always thought of Christmas as a special time, a time when families who might be apart the rest of the year can come close together again," said Rogers.

Brenda Lee's "Rockin' Around the Christmas Tree," although not a country song, has been a traditional holiday favorite and has sold 7 million copies since becoming popular in the early 1960s.

"I get requests for it year-round," says Miss Lee, whose current singing style is country flavored.

Alabama's "Alabama Christmas" is the seventh album for the four-piece band that has racked up 218 straight No. 1 singles.

"It's some of the best work they've done," says producer Harold Shedd.

The album is designed as a Christmas card from the group. The front is "The Christmas Embossed Alabama Christmas." It opens to a gatefold center displaying the lyrics plus candid Christmas shots of the four. A new single to be released from the album is "Joseph and Mary's Boy."

Veteran country star Conway Twitty, who has had 50 No. 1 hits over a career that has stretched almost 30 years, said his 1983 album, "Merry Twistas," ranks as the best project he has ever done.

"I took us nine months with technical ventures—you can't imagine," he said. "Its 54 minutes long but it's like a 54-minute single."

The record is a storybook album. The jacket opens and includes a drawing of a Christmas village with a snowman, sleigh, reindeer and an hour and a half items.

"For kids, it's like watching for an hour as well as listening," Twitty said. "I'm prouder of that project than anything."

He has been negotiating to make an animated TV special based on the album.

His entertainment complex north of Nashville, Twitty City, is elaborately decorated every December in Christmas motif. Last year 100,000 people visited the complex during the year-end holidays.

Cristy Lane also has a Christmas album out. Called "Christmas Is the Man From Galilee," it contains 21 songs, most of them standard holiday tunes.

The Statlers used a steel guitar on their album this year, "Christmas Present." So did B.J. Thomas on his "All Is Calm, All Is Bright."

Some other Christmas albums by country stars include "Christmas" by the Oak Ridge Boys; "A Gattin Family Christmas," by Larry Gatlin and the Gatlin Brothers; "Pretty Paper," by Willie Nelson; "The Spirit of Christmas," by Ray Charles; "It's Gold—Home for Christmas," by Merle Haggard; "East Tennessee Christmas," by Chet Atkins; "A Country Christmas," volume 4, by various artists; "The Best of Christmas," by various artists; "Country Christmas," a TV album by various artists; "Christmas to Christmas," by Lee Greenwood; "Tennessee Christmas," by various artists; and "Christmas at Our House" by Barbara Mandrell.

The Country Music Association's Benson says the Christmas music reflects "the general attitude of country acts toward family and lifestyle. The values of home and family come out."

Patty Duke hopes to heal splits in Screen Actors Guild

By DEBORAH CAULFIELD
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — When Patty Duke was in the fourth grade, she served as class treasurer. She hated it. Nobody liked the class treasurer. It would be her last political office until—recently—when at 38 Duke became the second woman elected president of the Screen Actors Guild.

"This second political foray looks more promising, judging from the friendly greetings and congratulations the petite actress received the other afternoon as she wended her way around the tables at Le Dome.

During a lunch of pasta and hot tea, Duke said that she hopes this cordiality becomes the trademark of her regime.

"Without meaning to sound egomaniacal, I fancy myself as someone who gets along with people," she explained. "I love actors and found myself getting very disheartened about the way our union was being portrayed in the media. The hassling that would have been private guild business went very public."

(Former president Ed Asner's two-term administration from 1981-85 was marred by bitter acrimony and in-fighting between Asner and his supporters, and a splinter group, the Actors Working for an Actor Union, spearheaded by Charlton Heston, the politically conservative Heston repeatedly accused Asner of bringing his own personal political views to bear on union business.)

"It certainly didn't hurt the reality of the union, which is fiscally sound and better than ever," Duke said. "But the feeling of being a SAG member was one of slightly cringing, for some of us, I thought if I could just go in there and say, 'All right, gang, why don't we all just knock it off and play nice,' we'd get our business done."

"I ran (for the presidency) mainly because of a real concern among my friends and myself that the union stood a threat of being weakened by folks who wanted to keep it small and quiet. Well, I've got kids (Sean, 14, and Mackenzie, 12) who are guild members. I want to make sure this union exists for them."

She defended Asner (who supported her during the campaign), saying: "All of Ed's personal political causes really did not enter the board room. While it may sound absurd to say that Ed Asner could be naive, I do believe he had a certain naivete that he could expound on his personal political beliefs, and people wouldn't assume that he was speaking for the guild."

Duke, who sits closer to Asner politically than to Heston, maintained that she tackled that problem early on in her campaign.

"When I went in front of the nominating committee, their major concern was, 'Where are you going politically here?' I made it very clear that I was going to maintain my work in several areas, and that they should make it clear to the membership that if people didn't want that, then they shouldn't vote for me."

The actress said that she would continue to support issues concerning the nuclear freeze and an equal-rights amendment "which I don't think are political, although others might. The other groups I support concern themselves with violence against women and raising money for AIDS research, which are obviously not political issues." She acknowledged that maintaining such impartiality would be tough: "I don't believe that any of us has to give up our civil rights to do this job, and I love exercising my civil rights. I'm proud of being an American; I like the system. The system says that I get to tout who I like and why. I've chosen to find a way to do that — to not give up my civil rights but at the same time not put myself in the position where anyone can interpret who is speaking, Patty Duke the person."

The actress said that she would like to see the union portrayed as "a friendly, dignified, well-informed representative of 58,000 people. I want the warmth and the fun of actors to be witnessed again when people think in terms of our guild."

The SAG members who evidently had no problem with Duke's views, the actress garnered 56 percent of the 19751 ballots cast a record turnout for the 58,000-member union.

Duke's main opponent, Ed Crane (who was backed by union conservatives) received 7,419 votes or 28 percent of the ballots cast. Dark horse candidates Tony Cecere and Charles Holden received 735 and 289 votes, respectively.

Duke said that the first priority for her administration is the issue of the proposed merger between SAG and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists (AFTRA), which has been kicking about for years.

Crowds jam major Renoir exhibit

By WILLIAM WILSON
Los Angeles Times

BOSTON — The venerable Boston Museum of Fine Arts has a blockbuster on its hands and seems a trifle flabbergasted thereby. The matter is nearly 100 paintings by the Pierre-Auguste Renoir, the largest survey of his work in over a decade.

The exhibit arrived here via London and Paris for its only U.S. appearance. Ever since, proper Bostonians and improper visitors have lined up to see it with an enthusiasm elsewhere reserved for rock concerts and lotteries. Attendance is topping 2,800 visitors daily, and ticket sales ensure that some 450,000 souls will have trooped the galleries by the time it all folds up Jan. 5.

A visiting critic catching up with the show was ushered in by a museum factotum. "Oh, you are lucky. It's not so bad right now," she remarked brightly, causing the critic to wonder how much worse it gets. Renoir's radiant paintings were visible only in "small" patches behind a wall of people shuffling along like patient zombies on a conveyor belt.

Back in the galleries it was at least still possible to identify the whereabouts of Renoir's most popular work in several areas, and that the crowd gugged up five bodies deep in a kind of human gridlock.

That is no way for civilized people to look at art, even though only civilized people have the necessary patience, tolerance and grace to do it this way. One rather wishes they would be more religious and v away in droves, forcing exhibiting institutions to devise tactics for less claustrophobic viewing.

So much said, it still must be admitted that one finally does experience the art, nevertheless, and that there is a certain perverse justice in the glut of people at this particular event.

What's what

That unrelenting fighter Jake LaMotta says, "There's too much of violence in this world, and most of it has been perpetrated by Sugar Ray Robinson. Sugar Ray Robinson and Sugar Ray Robinson... In fact, I fought Sugar Ray Robinson so many times I ought to have diabetes."

Our Language man contends three out of four television viewers every evening patiently watch two reports they don't understand, never have understood, and never will understand. One, the meteorological jargon of the weather forecast, and two, the Dow Jones averages.

HUNTERS

Q. Hunters often love to kill, maybe 75,000 deer a year. How many bears do they kill?

A. About 600, typically.

Q. Most popular manmade tourist attraction in the United States is Mt. Rushmore, right?

A. Next to the Golden Gate Bridge, it is.

Q. The first Teddy Bear was named after one Thomas Blake—who on June 11, 1857 became the first preacher in the world to be referred to as "the Reverend."

A. A Brooklyn woman, the wife of a candy-store owner—in 1902, saw a cartoon of Theodore Roosevelt, gun in hand, sparing the life of a cub bear that had been brought into the President's camp. At her sewing machine, she turned cloth scraps, shoe buttons and excelsior into a toy bear, which she labeled "Teddy's Bear," and displayed in the store window. It sold immediately. She made two more. They sold. The husband promptly went into the toy bear business.

BLAKE

Numerous people named Blake, it's said, can trace their ancestry back to one Thomas Blake—who on June 11, 1857 became the first preacher in the world to be referred to as "the Reverend."

Those who research the Bible say 181 women are mentioned therein. No-report at hand on how many mentions of wine and song. Will check further. Stand by.

'One Magic Christmas' puts sharp bite on a classic story

TWIN FALLS — Following are capsule reviews of films currently playing in the Magic Valley. Ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America and the Los Angeles Times. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times reviewers.

BACK TO THE FUTURE (PG). An interesting premise — a teen-ager travels back in time and falls into the middle of his parents' romance — that is underdeveloped and over-produced. There are a few nice moments of nostalgia for a "scoutly" youth, unenlightened but lovingly inventive to pad out the gimmick. The outcome is hollow and materialistic.

BETTER OFF DEAD (PG). When you are a teen-ager, love is a comedy of errors, an itching in your heart, that you just cannot scratch. This goody adolescent angst is what fuels

Movie reviews

'Better Off Dead' — an inventive, odd-ball gem that takes the teen-comedy genre of the endangered species list. Marking the debut of 25-year-old writer-director Savage Steve Holland — the movie shows off his nutty visual imagination that lovingly re-creates all of the worst traumas of teen life.

DEATH WISH 3 (R). This is the kind of movie that does not need a director; it needs a munitions expert. There is nothing even vaguely heroic (much less believable) about Paul Kersey (Charles Bronson); our architect turned avenging angel, for the third time: He is a sad, pathetic soul whose grisly public executions only put his friends in mortal danger and provoke more rapes, murder and pillage.

ONCE BITTEN (PG-13). Hilarious, tight vampire comedy in which gorgeous countess Lauren Hutton finds it increasingly difficult to find the virgins, the source of the blood that keeps her eternally youthful. For a film aimed primarily at teen audiences, it is amazingly sophisticated in leaving so much to the imagination — and, innocently, with Jim Carrey as Hutton's likable high school student victim and Karen Kopins — as his chaste girlfriend.

ONE MAGIC CHRISTMAS (G). A modern reworking of some of the ideas in "A Christmas Carol" and "It's a Wonderful Life," which director Philip Barson, cinematographer

Frank Tidy, the designers and cast (including Mary Steenburgen and Harry Dean Stanton) fill with loving detail, golden light and unforced sentiment. A grizzled Christmas Angel aids, spectacularly, beleaguered lower-middle class Toronto family. It has all the trappings of a classic — and a contemporary view with surprising bite — but the script by Thomas "Annie" Vanderhaar, in its determination to avoid gush and sentimentality, sometimes seems cold, narrow and undeveloped. (Dickens and Capra, after all, weren't afraid of jerking tears; and this movie should not have avoided them either.)

RAINBOW BRIDE AND THE STAR STEALER (G). A hastily made cartoon feature with a popular doll as its central character that offers too much commercial content and too little entertainment. The animation is stiff; the storytelling muddled. Children deserve better.

ROCKY IV (PG). Eloquent vacuousness is the shape of the new "Rocky," which is bigger, squishier, slower, more preposterous and infinitely emptier than the earlier three. Filled with contempt for everything Russian, and centering around a match between Rocky and a blond Soviet giant pumped with steroids, the film flip-flops at the last second, allowing hope for change in individuals of the two countries, while saying in its other-98-percent that the Soviets are simplistic animals worthy only of our contempt.

Hunkcutt, who seems to have wandered over from a Bond film, as a sunny Dallas housewife and mother; the reasoning behind her kidnapping, or Hackman's taking his semi-stranded son, Matt Dillon, into the line of fire to get her back. Only good for lovers of the traveltogue or the high-speed chase, European-style.

Rocky returns yet again, but for what?

By PAUL ATTANASIO
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — It's called "Rocky IV," and the obvious question is, "For what?"

The series by now has acquired an almost Kabuki-like flavor: a semi-annual ritual of muscle in which Rocky Balboa, although the champ, is recast as the underdog; preferably by "a wreckin' machine" (as Burgess Meredith used to say); does an emotional and mostly unintelligible monologue on the general topic, "What does it mean to be a man?"; and, after a climactic battle beyond the limits of a man or even a Timex, emerges victorious (oops! did I give it away?).

In "Rocky IV," which makes "Rocky III" seem like a masterpiece, Ivan Drago (Dolph Lundgren) — the Olympic boxing champion — arrives in the States with his Valkyrie wife (Brigitte Nielsen); his handlers tout the superior virtues of the Soviets — scientific training, he turned Drago into, well, a wreckin' machine. Meanwhile, Rocky (Sylvester Stallone) and Apollo Creed (Carl Weathers), former adversaries and now bosom chums, have lapsed into comfortable middle age, which makes Apollo uncomfortable — it misses the roar of the grasspant and the smell of the crowd. So he challenges Drago to an exhibition match which, since this is an MGM-UA movie, occurs at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas.

The preflight frivolity is full of showgirls, spangles, an Uncle Sam costume (for Apollo), the soul singer James Brown and even sportscaster Warner Wolf, all of which, it seems, is supposed to epitomize American decadence. And sure enough, Drago, for whom a smile would be a holiday indulgence, beats Apollo badly, so badly that (after some twitching) he dies in the ring.

"I cannot bih diffitted," Drago announces. Evidently, the other "Rocky" movies never opened in Russia, because if they had, heck, that is, he could be defeated, if there was just a man out there with enough heart, who can say fervently, despite the marbles in his mouth, "I just gotta do what I gotta do" — and "I'm a fighter — all we can do is just go with what we are" — and "You gotta go one more round when you're like yuh, can't ya?" and "That man is... Merv Griffin????!!!!"

Well, no, but it might as well be, for "Rocky IV" hasn't got the slightest relation to reality, from the fact that Stallone's line aquiline nose, if he were really a fighter, would look by now like a squashed plantain, to the ludicrous training montages. Drago's training consists of little sparring and no heavy bag, but much straining against a number of computerized Nautilus machines, and illegal steroid injections (oooooh... those Russians — they're such cheaters). Rocky, on the other hand, journeys to the Siberian wilderness, where he chops wood, lifts boulders, scales mountains, drags dog sleds, hangs from a huyloil, for his sit-ups, and does no sparring at all. It's Angelo Dundee as Fred Flintstone.

Say what you like about the original "Rocky," at least it was about something — a sweet pug up-against the system, and in love with his dower.

"Rocky IV" appears to be an epic about Sylvester Stallone's penchant for self-abuse. All the air has gone out of Rocky, something Stallone, who also wrote and directed, seems to realize — he won't leave his movie alone. It's riddled with hapless gimmickry: zooms, slow motion, double images, freeze frames, embarrassing MTV-style montages, a noisy, aggressive sound track, and flashback after flashback to the movies that have gone before, in order to remind you why you're there, as if to insist: "See, this used to be a good idea, and Stallone's shteps are considerably broader than his attention span — the movie's been edited for an audience poised to change the channel, which, lamentably, it cannot.

"Rocky's face — absolutely like stone!" says the TV announcer in the Moscow arena, which presumably is supposed to alert you to the

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13." Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for attendance of children under-13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

- G: General Audiences, all ages admitted.
 - PG: Parental guidance suggested. Some material may be objectionable to children.
 - PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for attendance of children under-13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.
 - R: Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
 - NC-17: No one under 17 admitted.
- All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

'Rocky IV' a knockout

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Rocky IV," Sylvester Stallone's flag-draped battle with a robot-like Bolshevik boxer won a unanimous decision in the first round of the holiday season box office, scoring $31.8 million.

Stallone's Rocky Balboa outlanded — his hard-bodied twin brother Rambo, with the five-day Thanksgiving holiday also for "Rocky" showing a better per-theater average than "Rambo-First Blood, Part II."

The big-screen bout between Stallone's Balboa and the laboratory-honed Soviet challenger Drago, a nearly non-speaking role played by Dolph Lundgren, took in an average $24,000 on 1,325 screens over five days.

Disney's "One Magic Christmas" raked in $4 million in its second week to take third — and "King Solomon's Mines," the Richard Chamberlain retreat of the 1950 Oscar nominee, was fourth with $3.8 million in its second week of release.

The Michael J. Fox time-warp fantasy "Back to the Future," now in its 22nd week of release, was fifth with a $2.2 million weekend gross. The "Top Gun" was rounded out by "Jagged Edge," "Once Bitten," "To Live and Die in L.A.," "Rainbow, Brite and the Star Stealer" and "Bad Medicine."

The Hollywood Reporter, an entertainment-trade newspaper, reported Tuesday that industry analysts estimate "Rocky IV" may gross $150 million, depending on how much competition it receives for the under-25 male audience to which the movie is aimed. A box-office gross of $150-million would translate into about $72 million in rentals for distributor MGM-UA.

Trapped, paranoia-bound 'White Nights' defects on itself

By SHEILA BENSON
Los Angeles Times

In "White Nights" Mikhail Baryshnikov plays Nikolai Rodchenko, a dance defector from the Kirov Ballet, who, after eight years

MIKHAIL BARYSHNIKOV
Talents largely wasted

and citizenship in the West, finds himself back in the Soviet Union after an airplane disaster over Siberia. About halfway through the film he has a short, very private dance on what is supposed to be the stage of the Kirov — anguished, impassioned movements about enslavement and freedom to the voice of the late Vladimir Vysotsky, outcast Soviet singer. Created primarily by Baryshnikov (with Twyla Tharp), is a burning and indelible moment of humanism, shattering moving because it is touched with our knowledge of Baryshnikov's own

Savor the moment. It is the one time when director Taylor Hackford has everything right in this cold, trapped, claustrophobic movie, which manages to do wrong to two cultures and to the talents of both Baryshnikov and Gregory Hines. It is the most unpleasant, paranoid film-making since the excesses of "The Godfather." When David Watkin's camera work is beautiful, framing the two dancers perfectly as they move around a Kirov rehearsal hall, the music they are dancing to is crummy MTV pop stuff, plected with an ear to the sound-track album. When the art direction — the Kirov exteriors or inside Baryshnikov's handsome Leningrad apartment — is dicit and elegantly correct, the costuming is so blatantly unusable as to make you giggle. (The film's two Soviet women, Isabella Rossellini and Helen Mirren, wear red, even when an escaping Rossellini is attempting to be as inconspicuous as possible.) Rear-projection shots, as cars tour Leningrad, are of awful quality. At all times the wretched high-concept, low-intelligence story contrives to bring everything down to its sissy level.

Screenwriters James Goldman and Eric Hughes, working from Goldman's story, have decided that double dancing defectors will bring their point home better than one. So in addition to Baryshnikov's character, there is tap dancer Raymond Greenwood (Gregory Hines) who quit the United States during Vietnam, married his young Soviet translator, Darya (Rossellini), and, once his propaganda usefulness is over, has been shunted up to Siberia, presumably to play Sportin' Life in the frozen provinces forever.

In a move that passeth all reason, once the stately marling KGB Col. Chaiko (Jerry Skolimowski) gets his hands on Baryshnikov, he puts him into the care of Hines and his wife, moving them both to Leningrad in the process. If the intention is to shape up an injured ballet dancer — the better to parade him at a gala only 10 days away — might it not be better to have him in old ballet shoes rather than with a lachrymose, em-pattered tap dancer?

But brooding over logic will only make you crazy during these endless white nights. You will worry about inconsistencies, stupidities, improbabilities. If Baryshnikov is, as he says, thrilled about being able to dance Balanchine in the West, why don't we see him dancing Balanchine, not that kitschy old war horse "Le Jeune Homme de La Mort"? Because this Roland Petit ballet is about the death of an artist? Prul. Rather, because it is sensationalistic semi-camp, the balletic equivalent of MTV, and so that the nose, so pointedly left for the Young Man in "Le Jeune Homme" can be echoed by a dangling electric cord on the deserted stage of the Kirov.

No one of sound mind would suggest that today's Soviet is the place for artists to express themselves openly, but the oversimplification of "White Nights" becomes infuriating. Like so many Hollywood movies today, its characters live in isolation, one or two figures per landscape, barely ever interacting. As for the dancing, which comes preceded by absurd "Flashdance" warm-ups, it is as luzzed-up and simplistic as the rest of the film. Only Fine as the two men can be, they are never let loose to do what each does best. Hines, the essence of speed and sophistication, must be neurotic and glasses and an H.R. Haldeman hair-stetch — over — in — dances — out — salvage any distinction in this Baryshnikov (with the exception of turgid, gray-underwear movie.

the Vysotsky solo, never has match the story line of him. The story line dance number by the two of them as a joyous release, somewhere out of the Soviet Union, but it never comes. As for the rest of the cast, Skolimowski and Geraldine Page take turns munching up the scenery. Skolimowski wins by a curled lip, but only because he is on screen more often. The rest of the film is a profaned Rossellini, who plays abject terror marvelously, and John Glover as the best Hines, the essence of speed and sophistication, must be neurotic and glasses and an H.R. Haldeman hair-stetch — over — in — dances — out — salvage any distinction in this Baryshnikov (with the exception of turgid, gray-underwear movie.

'Christmas' borders on weird

By MICHAEL HEALY
The Denver Post

You better watch out: "One Magic Christmas" is coming to town, and it's one weird movie. Remember that classic of sick humor, the National Lampoon Magazine cover, showing a cute pup with a gun to its head and the announcement: "Buy this magazine or we'll shoot this dog." Recalling that joke will get you into the mood for this movie, which uses a similarly ungente technique to put a young mother of two into the Christmas spirit.

Hard to believe? Listen to the story line in this supposedly cheerful little holiday piece. Ginnie Greiner (Mary Steenburgen) is not looking forward to Christmas, for a number of reasons. Her husband, Jack (Gary Basaraba) has been out of work for six months and the family is about to be kicked out of a bridge into an icy river. The two children appear to have drowned and Ginnie comes back to an empty house, to contemplate her sins against Santa.

about all the things they want from Santa.

Jack, who is a big believer in Santa Claus, is disturbed by Ginnie's carelessness, and seems unperturbed by the family's increasingly desperate situation. We are supposed to admire his sentimental air-headedness in the movie, and respect to Ginie as a latter day Scrooge. Actually, she seems to be the only one with a glimmer of brain activity in the whole story. Ginnie's sin of seeing things as they are is soon to be punished by a Christmas angel, Gideon (Harry Dean Stanton), who is charged by St. Nicholas with putting the lady into a holiday mood. He does this by arranging for her husband to be shot dead in a bank holdup.

No fooling. And as if this were not enough, the bank robber steals the family car, containing little Gai and Abbie, and runs it off a bridge into an icy river. The two children appear to have drowned and Ginnie comes back to an empty house, to contemplate her sins against Santa.

The kids pop back to life rather quickly, but resurrecting Jack is a bit more difficult. In another appalling scene, Ginnie explains to the kids that Daddy is dead, and is not coming back ever, ever, ever again. Gideon, the strange agent of an angel, tells little Abbie that bringing her daddy back to life is beyond his powers, and that she must go directly to Santa Claus to find out the way to get her mom to effect the re-activation. It is her mom's fault, after all, that Daddy died.

So off the little girl goes to the North Pole, where Santa's workshop is manned not with elves, but with The Dead.

At last, a network has produced a miniseries for the whole family

By ANDY NOBLE

Finally — a miniseries with no cleavage, violence, infidelity, incest or other staples of the genre. It's "Alice in Wonderland," airing Dec. 9 and Dec. 10 on CBS.

The Irwin Allen production features nearly 40 stars disguised by animal-like costumes, songs by Steve Allen, a score by the Emmy Award-winning composer Mort Stevens and a script by Pulitzer Prize-winner Paul Zindel that combines two Lewis Carroll classics, "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" (1865) and its sequel "Through the Looking Glass" (1872). Part one tells of Alice's early adventures and part two continues them as she finds herself on the "other side of the looking glass."

The miniseries is awash with dozens of special effects from Allen, the so-called "master of disaster." Among them, Alice falls unendingly down a rabbit hole; grows to giant size; engages a picture owl who assumes a physical presence; and encounters a weird monster that materializes in a variety of ways out of her subconscious.

Allen calls Natalie Gregory, the 4-foot-3-inch 10-year-old who plays Alice, "the best actress I've ever worked with. She is surely the best study I've ever observed," he says. "She not only knew her own lines, but even those of approximately 40 other stars she worked with throughout the two months of filming."

Gregory has been acting professionally for only two years. She appeared as Courtney Kennedy in the CBS miniseries "Robert Kennedy and His Times" and was in series such as "Matt Houston," "Trapper, John, M.D.," and "Cagney & Lacey." It was her appearance on the latter that caught the eye of Allen and network execs and led to her being cast in the title role.

The cast in part one includes Red Buttons (the White Rabbit), Sherman Hemsley (The Mouse), Shelley Long (the Dodo Bird), Donald O'Connor (the Lory Bird), Scott Bakula (Pat the Pig), Sammy Davis Jr. (the Caterpillar), Martha Raye (the Dutchess) and Imogene Coca (the Cook). Part two features Telly Savalas (the Cheshire Cat),

Alice (Natalie Gregory) meets Tweedledum (Steve Lawrence) and Tweedledee (Eydlle Gorme)

Roddy McDowall (the March Hare), Sult, Pat Morita (a Horse), Mervyn Dole (the King of Hearts), Griffin (the Conductor), George Arte Johnson (the Dormouse), Gobel (the Gnat), Tweedledee and Robert Morley (King of Hearts), Tweedledum (Eydlle Gorme and Jayne Meadows (Queen of Hearts), Steve Lawrence), Karl Malden (the Ringo Starr (the Mock Turtle) and Walrus), Louis Nye (the Carpenter), Sid Caesar (the Gryphon), Carol Channing (the White Queen), Jonathan Winters (Humpty Dumpty), Harvey Korman (the White Warden (the Owl), Sally Struthers (a King), John Siamos (the Messen-Rose), Ann Jillian (the Red Queen), Ernest Borgnine (the Lion), Patrick Duffy (the Goat), Steve Beau Bridges (the Unicorn) and Lloyd Bridges (the White Knight).

Theatrical movie-making likely to keep Alda away from more TV

By ROBIN ADAMSSLOAN

Q. Do you think Alan Alda will ever return to TV on a regular basis? — D.F.

A. Probably not in the foreseeable future. This past summer, Alan completed making a theatrical movie entitled "Sweet Liberty." It's a movie-within-a-movie — co-starring Michael Caine and Michele Pfeiffer, among others — about the making of a flick about the American Revolution. Anyway, Alda told me he wants to take at least six months off before even thinking about working on another theatrical movie comedy. So, it appears that Alan has no plans whatever of re-appearing on TV — regularly or otherwise.

A. Since Henry Fonda's death, his widow Shirlee, many years younger than he, has been making the social rounds. Naturally, she's been romantically linked with practically every bachelor in New York and Hollywood. I asked Shirlee not long ago about remarriage. Her response astonished me. Shirlee said that since the late Henry was such a hard act to follow, she never, never in — tends to get married again. I and several others reminded her that never is a very long time.

Q. Is rock singer Madonna pregnant? — D.S.

A. The word from Hollywood is that she is. Madonna and her husband Sean Penn were tentatively scheduled to co-star in a new movie, "Shanghai Surprises." And she was being sought to star in an update of "And God Created Woman," the 1957 French movie that launched the then sex kitten Brigitte Bardot. Then an informal series of "but's" began to hang over these two projects. The big "but," my Hollywood spy tells me, is that Madonna and Penn may have a personal production of their own to pre-empt the two movie projects.

Q. Is Rachel Ward, the pretty TV and movie actress, having marital problems because she and her husband are separated so much by their work? — A.C.

A. The 28-year-old Rachel is married to actor Bryan Brown and they have a year-old daughter, Rosie. The marriage is going swimmingly. No separations. One reason is that Rachel and her husband try as much as possible to work together. Their latest joint venture was "Fortress," a movie that was shown on cable TV. Rachel is now quitting work for a while to accompany Brown to China where he will star in another movie. "We try not to work at the same time," she explains, "and have too long a separation. That, I think, is fatal for a marriage in this business."

Q. Where has Diane Von Furstenberg disappeared to? She was always mentioned in gossip columns and other newspaper stories. — R.M.

A. Diane fell in love with a Frenchman, sold her New York apartment, moved to Paris and bought a house there to be near him. I hear he's quite a lady's man and she has her work cut out for her, as they say. But then Diane, a self-made millionaire, is no slouch herself.

Q. What's this about Princess Caroline of Monaco doing a striptease at private parties? Has she lost her sense of decorum? — A.W.

A. Princess Caroline does not (and never did) perform a striptease in private or public. She was at one time a tempestuous young woman

Working marriage is working whom her parents found more than a bit difficult to handle. Those days, as well as an ill-advised marriage stemming from those days, are distinctly over. Princess Caroline is married to Italian businessman Stefano Casiraghi, and is a devoted mother to the couple's child. In other words, she's mellowed, matured. What she does like to do these days is sing. Princess Caroline has a preference for vocalizing German songs to orchestral accompaniment. It isn't sexy but it is, at least to her, satisfying.

Q. Is it true that, of all people, Mae West could be pegged as a prude? Seems mighty unlikely for this notorious sexpot. — K.N.

A. It may be hard to swallow, but in many ways, it's the truth. As just one example, La West abhorred purple language, especially when uttered by females. Once, at a Hollywood party, she was introduced to Bette Davis, who was overheard using some extremely choice expletives during the evening's conversation. The horrified Mae remarked to her escort, "Well, I guess we've heard the best of her!"

BIG BOOST: That highly publicized dance John Travolta had with Princess Di at the White House function for the royal couple has done his career a lot of good. He's got a four million dollar deal with Robert Stigwood to do a sequel to "Saturday Night Fever," his best movie. This new film is titled "Far From Over" and all that coverage of his twirling at the White House will certainly give the new movie a push when it comes out.

Q. Didn't Lucille Ball really dislike the late Vivian Vance, who so beautifully played Ethel Mertz on the old "I Love Lucy" show? — L.B.

A. I don't know where you unearthed this tidbit, but it's not true. Mention such a thing to Lucy and the response is likely to be quite angry. Soon after completing work as a street bag lady on her recent TV movie "Stone Pillow," Ball reacted like that during one of those question-and-answer sessions before a California audience. Much of the discussion was about, naturally enough, the old "Lucy" show; When Vance's name came up, Lucille became charged with emotion. "Ten days before she died," said Ball slowly, "I had a chance to tell her how much she meant to me. There never was a gal like Vivian."

Q. An article about Orson Welles referred to Sally Ann Howes, the British actress whose credits include starring on Broadway in "My Fair Lady," as having once had a big affair with the famous actor. True? — R.W.

A. I caught up with Sally Ann Howes in London and she confided that, when she was younger, she and her family stayed yearly at a hotel in Manchester, England, where she met Welles at a theater fund-raising dinner. Afterward, they adjourned to the coffee shop, where they chatted about movies, show tunes and politics till 2:30 a.m. Next morning, the hotel porter told the Howes family that Welles had later approached him, offering a bribe if he'd divulge her room number, but that he withheld the information out of loyalty. Sally Ann's parents were pleased, but the 18-year-old Sally Ann wasn't. She told me, "frantically, I was furious. I adored meeting Orson, enjoyed our intimate conversation, and would have been utterly delighted had he come knocking on my door to continue where he left off — had it not been for that over-protective porter!"

Q. I've heard that Cheryl Tiegs is heading for a nasty divorce. What's it all about? — O.P.

A. Cheryl is completing the process of divorcing husband Peter Beard, a professional photographer. Her current beau is Tony Peck, the son of actor Gregory. Anyway, the word I get is that Cheryl is demanding that Beard turn over all photographs he made of her — in the buff and otherwise — as a condition of the legal split. Beard is said to be resisting. Since Cheryl's lush livelihood is made by posing before the camera, she's not likely to back down. All this might provide some fireworks.

Q. Every year I see the Academy Awards on television, but I'd like to know more about how it all started. Where can I get such information? — R.K.

A. "Inside Oscar" (Ballantine), by Mason Willey and Damien Bona, reveals such fascinating inside Oscar stories as how Louis B. Mayer, hoping to keep unions out of Hollywood, dreamed up the idea of the Academy as an elite private club; how Frank Capra almost singlehandedly saved the Oscar from obsolescence in the mid-'30s when the actors, writers and directors were boycotting the Awards; how TV changed the ceremony forever; how Hollywood rebels George C. Scott, Jane Fonda and Marlon Brando shook up the Academy — and much more. The book will be out in March 1986 — just in time for the Awards ceremony.

Q. We hear that actor Cliff Robertson's marital difficulties have sent him into seclusion. Has he really been avoiding friends and family? — M.B.

A. Not quite, but close. The disclosure by actress Dina Merrill that she wants to end her longtime marriage to Robertson hit him extremely hard. So hard in fact that Cliff is planning to take to an unnamed New England hideaway to put his thoughts on paper. In other words, he needs a lot of time — alone — to thrash things out. Cliff promises that he'll be back in action soon. I forgot to ask him if during his voluntary seclusion in the woods he'll be reachable via AT & T telephone lines.

Q. Is Roger Moore, who plays James Bond on the screen, married? — R.P.

A. Moore is indeed married, and how. His beautiful wife, Luisa, tells me she and Roger "have been together 25 years." That must be something of a Hollywood marital record. The couple has a daughter, Deborah, who recently made her first movie in Rome. Moore, who is British, has long been a true international sort — turning up as often in Monte Carlo as in London and Hollywood. He recently underwent knee surgery in Hollywood, and there at his side, as usual, was faithful wife Luisa.

Q. What is rock singer Sting's real name? Is he married? — G.S.

A. Sting was born 34 years ago under the name of Gordon Matthew Sumner. A former school teacher, Sting has been married and divorced once. He and former wife Frances Tomelty had two children. His "constant companion" these days is Trudy Styler, who recently broke the English singer — who's currently separated from the rock group The Police — a son. The boy was named Jake, and is Sting's second child by Styler. Film footage of the birth is included in Sting's recent rock documentary, "Bring on the Night."

Q. Is TV actress Lindsay Wagner getting married for a third time? What happened to her first two marriages? — H.J.

A. Lindsay, 36, was first married to actor Michael Brandon. That union ended in divorce in 1979. Then, the former "Bionic Woman," married stuntman-actor Henry King in 1981. That marriage also went by the boards: Lindsay called the other day to breathlessly announce her third marital fling. She and Fred Whitehead, a Hollywood television executive, are engaged, it is said. Wagner.

Can villainy and Mascolo's snarl save a flagging 'Santa Barbara'?

By JOHN N. GOUDAS
and EVE LUBIN

Can villainy turn "Santa Barbara" around? With Joe Mascolo about the California beach town as greedy Carlo, it looks like NBC is borrowing a page from "General Hospital" and its own "Days of Our Lives."
Not too long ago "Days" was struggling. In came Mascolo as the nefarious Stefano, the Mafia warlord ready to kill off the town of Salem to have his way. Ratings picked up in this obvious plot steal from "General Hospital," soap opera's leader of trends.

"Days" even borrowed the "General Hospital" casting line. When "Hospital" first went crooked, producer Gloria Monty hired the debonair George Gaynes, once a Broadway singing star, to become the sinister underworld leader. Gaynes went on to become a hit in Dustin Hoffman's "Tootsie," but not before showing afternoon fans how to leer and snarl in a gentlemanly manner.

Since Gaynes wasn't available for "Days," being busy with "Punky Brewster," Joseph Mascolo covered. After all, he belonged in the Gaynes mold. Joe sang with Luciano Pavarotti in the movie, "Yes, Giorgio." In his heyday on Broadway, Gaynes had doubled, performing with the Metropolitan Opera, and singing alongside Rosalind Russell in "Wonderful Town." A Burt Reynolds buddy, Joe worked with Burt in "Sharkey's Machine" performing yearly at Reynold's theater in Jupiter, Fla.

Having terrorized half the citizenry of Salem, Mascolo now plies his trade in Santa Barbara, holding back a bit in the snarl. The writers and Joe are being careful in the early stages. Carlo flexes a few muscles and is outwitted at times.

But the devil has made his presence known. If "Days" fans are a bit confused watching "Santa Barbara" it's understandable. The aim is to hook fans with Stefano-Carlo. To Joe Mascolo it's a shoo-in. Along with the smoking gun, you may hear an aria.

PLOT PORTENTS:

Carter breaks the football record and Grant suffers a heart attack on "Another World." Edward prevents Felicia from going to the marriage license bureau. Sally finds Brittany nursing a drunk Catlin.

Jack gets Gloria to admit that she tries up Betty on "Ryans Hope." Jill set to hide Dakota in Roger's apartment. Johnny buys Maeve a condo in Florida.

Jeremy wants to get out of his vow of celibacy on "All My Children." Daisy forgives Palmer and agrees to move back in. Phoebe is dead set against Tad and Hillary's wedding plans. There is a surprise winner in "The Woman of the Year" competition.

Woody's marriage proposal to Mimi turns into a major argument on "One Life to Live." Asa starts bidding war for the Banner. Clint, outraged by Viki, agrees to a divorce.

Estelle goes after Lloyd to get a bigger divorce settlement on "Search for Tomorrow." Hogan discovers Lloyd dipped into his funds to bail out Turner Industries. Rivera wants to buy the Caldwell house and the TV station in order to get a foothold in Henderson.

CHANNEL CHATTER:

Hard-working and popular actor Josh Taylor, a veteran of "Days of Our Lives," playing Chris Koslitchek, will take on his second prime time series. Fans may remember when Taylor left "Days" to star in "Ryker," where he played a hard-nosed detective who got in plenty of scrapes. When that show failed, Taylor returned to the soap. He now will be tackling a comedy series co-starring with Valerie Harper in "Valerie," but has also decided to remain on the soap. In the NBC comedy, Harper and Taylor are married, with Taylor playing an airline pilot who flies international routes.

"As the World Turns" has followed the lead of "Search for Tomorrow" by snaring a famous fashion designer to appear in their show. Noted designer Oleg Cassini will show some of his latest works when he guests stars on the soap Dec. 26. This culminates a storyline and small fashion shows that have been building over the weeks.

Q: According to a supermarket newspaper, Susan Anton, who's well over six feet tall, is secretly self-conscious about her height, and prefers to play it down. Yea or nay?

A: NE.

Q: A decided nay. I checked with Ed Libonati, the young director of Susan's popular new TV commercial for Harrah's Casino, in which she sings, "I'm just wild about Harrah's." Libonati tells me that Susan is not one whit touchy about her size. "In fact," says Ed, "she sometimes plays up her height with high heels, big hats, etc..." When she and world's middleweight champ Marvin Hagler, who also appears in the commercial, showed up for taping, each was accompanied by their own entourage, sizing one another up — literally. "Marvelous Marvin, who's about 5'7", and Susan hit it off for real, for in one camera shot, she takes a poke at him. "It feels great punching a world champion," she kidded, "but I wouldn't have tried it were any shorter, believe me!"

Q: I'd love to know how some of the big movie moguls got started — it must be tough to get to the top. — D.W.

A: Veteran movie legend Joseph E. Levine, the fabled filmmaker whose new one will be "The Glow" mystery thriller, is candid about his origins: "I sold newspapers in Boston at age 7 — and got my ears boxed if I didn't do it just right. And I shined shoes door-to-door on Sundays. I remember I took home about half a dollar for my Sunday work, which wasn't bad. My stepfather made $4 a week."

Perry Mason shows his old flair; wins the week's ratings for NBC

By FRED ROTHENBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Perry Mason, still undefeated in the courtroom, also proved unbeatable in the ratings last week, notching the No. 1 ranking for NBC's TV movie, "Perry Mason Returns," according to figures released Tuesday by the A.C. Nielsen Co.

The nostalgic movie, which featured the unflappable defense attorney proving that his true-blue former secretary, Della Street, was innocent of murder, had a 27.2 rating, the best performance of any TV movie this season.

Last week, NBC ordered another "Perry Mason" movie for May, but the show's star, Raymond Burr, has ruled out a weekly series. The original "Perry Mason" ran from 1957-66.

With "Perry Mason" and Thanksgiving night reruns of "The Cosby Show" and "Family Ties" leading the way, NBC won the week of Nov. 25 - Dec. 1 with an average rating of 18.2 to CBS' 16.3 and ABC's 14.4. (A rating measures the percentage of the nation's 85.9 million homes with television.)

Now one-third of the way through the 30-week prime-time season, NBC leads with an average rating of 17.9 to CBS' 16.9 and ABC's 16.1. CBS researchers say the network would have to beat NBC, on average, by half-a-ratings-point every week to catch NBC.

NBC had six of last week's Top 10 shows, including the best-ever performance for "Miami Vice," while CBS had the other four.

CBS' "60 Minutes" was second with a 26.7 rating, closely followed by "The Cosby Show," with a 26.6 and CBS' "Murder, She Wrote," with a 26.4. Then came "Family Ties," "Miami Vice," NBC's "Golden Girls," CBS' "Kate & Allie" and CBS' "Newhart," tied for eighth, and NBC's "Cheers."

Network researchers said some of "Miami Vice's" gain came from college students, who watch the series in dormitories and fraternities that are not metered by Nielsen, coming home for Thanksgiving, watching the show and getting their choice recorded by the ratings service.

CBS' "Dallas" was 11th and ABC's "Dynasty" was 13th, the first time in nearly two years that first-run episodes of the serials both finished out of the Top 10. Besides its sixth weekly victory, NBC also won the November sweeps for the first time since 1974 with a rating of 17.8 to CBS' 17.2 and ABC's 16.0. The four-week sweeps period ended in the middle of last week.

...Three times a year — the sweeps months of November, February and May — ratings for local stations are measured and used to determine future advertising rates. The networks, in an attempt to bolster the fortunes of their local affiliates, offer special programs, such as miniseries and blockbuster movies.

NBC had the lowest-rated miniseries, "Mussolini: The Untold Story," but won the sweeps on the strength of its regular series and movies. NBC's "An Early Frost," "Hostage Flight," and "This Child Is Mine" were among the highest-rated films last month.

"We did it primarily with our regular schedule," said Gerald Jaffe, NBC's vice president for research projects. "We had very few pre-emptions."

Dave Poltrack, CBS' vice president for research, said each network improved its November rating from a year ago, with NBC registering the biggest increase, 11 percent.

Poltrack attributed the gains to the "strong performance" by miniseries "that bring light viewers to the set." ABC's "North and South" averaged a 26.0 rating, CBS' "Kane and Abel" had a 22.7 and "Mussolini" an 18.7.

Last week, Part 3 of "Mussolini" ranked 16th and Part 2 was 18th. ABC introduced "Dynasty II: The Colbys" to its regular Thursday night time slot on Thanksgiving and it ranked 50th out of 68 shows. It was hurt by its lead-in show, "Shadow Chasers," which had a 6.2 rating and ranked 67th for the week.

"The number for 'Dynasty II' has got to be a disappointment," said Mike Eisenberg, CBS' director of research.

"Absolutely not," said Marvin Mord, ABC's vice president for marketing and research services. "That's exactly what we had anticipated... It probably will be the spring before it starts to build."

Last week's five lowest-ranked shows, in descending order, were CBS' "George Burns Comedy Week" and ABC's "Benson," tied for 64th, NBC's "American Almanac," "Shadow Chasers" and ABC's "Our Family Honor."

Chicago Post publisher upset with 'Mary'

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Mary Tyler Moore plays a newspaper columnist in a new television show scheduled to begin Dec. 11, but a publisher is fighting her debut at the fictional Chicago Post.

The publisher of the real Chicago Post, Alderman Richard Mell, has asked the show's production company to "cease and desist" broadcasting the program and says he will go to court if necessary.

"This is just a way of saying, 'Wait a second. A trademark is the fundamental right of a person in this country, who is starting a small business for protecting himself from the big guy,'" Mell said Tuesday. "The big guy just wants to come in and step on him."

MTM Enterprises calls the Chicago Post a fictional, third daily newspaper in Chicago. Mell's paper, a monthly publication distributed free, with an estimated circulation of 40,000, has existed two years and is protected by federal and state trademarks, he says.

"I think MTM is obviously a large corporation, and they feel a small company is apparently not worth bothering with," Mell said. "If their attorneys had checked the trademarks, they probably would not have used it (the Chicago Post name)."

An attorney handling the matter for MTM Enterprises in Chicago was out of his office until Wednesday, and the firm could not comment, said Mary Hutchings Reed, an assistant in the office.

In the program, titled "Mary," Miss Moore will be a "voice of sanity surrounded by a coterie of crazy characters," said Mell's attorney, Robert Levy.

The newspaper where they work is "sleazy," a point the show's producers don't dispute, he said. The fictional paper, for example, runs a story about a groom-to-be arsonist and carries the headline, "Arsonist Sets Himself on Fire, Wedding Night Spoiled."

"The Chicago Post is not a sleazy newspaper," Mell told the Chicago Tribune about his publication.

Most editions run 16 pages and carry display ads and a classified section. There is a sports section, a crossword puzzle and columns, including ones on politics, cooking and Social Security.

Levy said letters were sent about two weeks ago to MTM Enterprises Inc. in Studio City, Calif., and to the New York corporate offices of CBS, the network that will air the show.

"We have had contact and have had some negotiations," Levy said. "Apparently they have in-lined many of these shows in advance."

"There was an offer made (by their attorneys) to allow them to use the name under a trademark license," Levy said. He said the offer was rejected but wouldn't say how much was involved.

"My clients have worked very hard to establish a real newspaper and have a good reputation," he said, referring to Mell and co-owner James Boratyn.

6 p.m. (CBN) The Bells of St. Mary's Two 1944 Academy-Award winners, Bing Crosby and Ingrid Bergman, star in the sequel to "Going My Way," the film that won Crosby his Oscar. In this one, Father O'Malley (Crosby) is assigned to a run-down parish where Bergman is the sister superior. Released in 1945, the film features Crosby's introduction of "Aren't You Glad You're You?"

8 p.m. (KMVT, KBCI) Victor/Victoria Gay Paris takes on a literal meaning in this hilarious, 1982-Blake Edwards ("The Pink Panther") offering about a destitute woman who is hits the big time posing as a female impersonator. Julie Andrews, Robert Preston, James Garner and Alex Karras star.

8 p.m. (KTRV) 2001: A Space Odyssey Stanley Kubrick ("Dr. Strangelove") directed this visually awesome science fiction epic (based on a short story, "The Sentinel," by Arthur C. Clarke) about a manned space mission to Jupiter and a nearby human computer that goes haywire and complicates the trip. The film's sequel, "2010: The Year We Make Contact," followed in 1984.

Sports highlights

11 a.m. (CBS) NFL FOOTBALL: Dallas Cowboys at Cincinnati Bengals.

The high-scoring Bengals need a win to stay in the thick of the AFC Central race. Currently 6-7, the Bengals are tied with Pittsburgh, one game out of the division-lead-held-by-Cleveland. Bengal quarterback Boomer Esiason has been a passing phenom since taking the starting job away from Ken Anderson early in the season. Dallas, 9-4 and sitting alone atop the NFC East, would come close to clinching the division title with a win.

2 p.m. (NBC) NFL FOOTBALL: Los Angeles Raiders at Denver Broncos.

This game will go a long way toward deciding the champion of the tough AFC West. Both teams are tied for first and probably headed toward the playoffs. The Raiders took the first meeting between the two this year, a heart-stopping overtime win two weeks ago in L.A. The Broncos bounced back with a gritty win at Pittsburgh last week, however, and should be tough in noisy Mile High Stadium.

The new season

New shows may advance ABC; NBC may run away with winter

By MORGAN GENDEL
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — When prime-time television's "second season" begins in January, look for ABC to improve its ground, NBC to show up with an embarrassment of riches and CBS quite possibly to wind up just plain embarrassed.

That is the scenario suggested by the new series on deck at the three networks. Highlighting the annual New Year's rite of replacing series will be the returns of Mary Tyler Moore, Valerie Harper, Jack Klugman, Hal Linden and, in spirit, Walt Disney.

Also ready to go are new shows from the hit-makers behind such

Miller" producer Danny Arnold; "The Disney Sunday Movie," new one-hour features in the Disney tradition; and "The Eagle and the Bear," a one-hour comedy-adventure about an ex-KGB man who defects to the United States and teams up with a street-wise private detective. ABC and Columbia Pictures Television reportedly auditioned numerous Soviet emigres before settling on American Howard Sherman as the comic Russian. "He's like a fish out of water, like Mork in 'Mork & Mindy,'" one source said. "They're very-high-on-Howard-Sherman." Thus far, only a pilot has been ordered.

All three networks are expected to announce schedule changes officially

Other shows moving to CBS' front burner: "The Couch," a spinoff from the short-lived "George Burns" • See SEASON on Page 46

At NBC, Brandon Tartikoff dispelled speculation that the currently top-rated network would no longer stick with relatively poor performers, as the network did in previous seasons when it had nothing to lose:

series as "Murder, She Wrote," "Cagney & Lacey," "The A-Team" and "Barney Miller."

ABC has a particularly strong roster of series-in-waiting — an irony of sorts considering that they were developed under the regime of Lewis Erlicht, who recently was demoted to a lieutenant under new programming chief Brandon Stoddard.

Though Stoddard has refused to comment during his transition period, industry insiders say ABC is particularly high on six new shows with another five capable of serving as replacements.

The six are: "The Rowdies," a one-hour action-comedy starring Pat Harrington and Connie Stevens as household security operatives; "Fortune Dane," from executive producer Barney Rosenzweig ("Cagney & Lacey"); and starring "Rocky's"; Carl Weathers as a trouble-shooter for the mayor of San Francisco; "Perfect Strangers," a buddy comedy featuring Beverly Hills Cop scene-stealer Bronson Pinchot and comedian Louie Liger; "Joe Bast," a sitcom about a burned-out cop from "Barney

The fewest changes are expected at NBC, which, as of Friday, expected to win the key November ratings period for the first time since 1974. NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff said that he will most likely replace only two hours of shows in January and plug in a remaining 3.12 hours in March, when the network will drop its "Sunday Night at the Movies."

One player certain to make the early-'88... lineup is "The Last Precinct," a zany cop-house comedy starring Adam West ("Batman") and co-created by Stephen J. Cannell ("The A-Team"). Tartikoff confirmed that the show will premiere after the Super Bowl Jan. 26 and "could be deployed right after that." An obvious spot for it would be Wednesday nights, replacing "Hell Town."

CBS' "Mary," starring Mary Tyler Moore and premiering Dec. 11, is indisputably a big gun, but there is speculation that the network's other replacement shows might fill blanks. Advance word on "Eoley Square," a lawyer comedy produced in-house at CBS and set to follow "Mary" Wednesday nights, is grim.

Comedy Hour," starring Harvey Korman and Valerie Perrine; "Tough Cookies," another cop-house comedy, this one starring Robby Benson; "Melba," starring Melba Moore; Suzanne Pleshette's new drama, "Bridges to Cross" and a half-hour series based on the Universal film, "Fast Times at Ridgmont High."

CBS executives also refused to talk about mid-season changes.

Over at NBC, Tartikoff dispelled speculation that the currently top-rated network would no longer stick with relatively poor performers, as it did in previous seasons when it had nothing to lose. "What I don't want to be guilty of is canceling shows that could turn out to be the next Knight Rider, 'Cheers' or 'Family Ties,'" Tartikoff said.

One likely candidate to disappear in January could be "TV's Bloopers & Practical Jokes," whose absence could pave the way for a comedy.

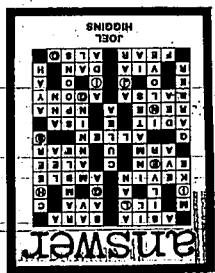

block of such shows as "Valerie," starring Valerie Harper, and the new Jack Klugman series based on the British show, "Home to Roost."

Tartikoff remarked that in previous years he has felt like the little Dutch boy trying to plug the dike with his finger, but now "I sort of feel like an air-traffic controller. All these pilots are trying to land and I keep telling them to circle one more time."

Still waiting for a runway on NBC: "Blacke's Magic," starring Hal Linden and from the "Murder, She Wrote" creative team of Peter Fischer and Robert O'Neill; "All Is Forgiven," from Les and Glen Charles and James Burrows, the men behind "Cheers"; "Slingray," a high-gloss Stephen J. Cannell production, and "Dalton," an action show from Universal.
