Better not cry, tax forms are comin' to town

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Taxpayers will get their annual greeting from Uncle Sam on Thursday, along with a rare apology from the government as the Postal Service begins to deliver 87 million 1985 income tax forms and instruction packets.

that taxpayers should receive their packages between Dec. 28 and Jan. 10. That gives people who are anxious for refunds a jump on completing their returns ahead of the April 15 deadline.

Last year was a disaster for the IRS because of "outlets" in switching to a new computer system delayed millions of refund checks.

In a letter on the front of this year's forms, IRS Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger Jr. says he regrets the "difficulties and inconvenience that resulted" from the delays and that the IRS believes last year's problems won't recur.

The 1985 forms resemble past versions, but there is one difference sure to delight taxpayers: a slight lowering of the tax rates.

An "indexing" law enacted in 1981 to reduce inflation's effects on the tax system is being implemented for the first time. Indexing is aimed at eliminating "bracket creep," the phenomenon that pushes a taxpayer into a higher tax bracket when he or she receives a pay raise to offset an increase in living costs.

The indexing changes for 1985 widen the brackets by 1.1 percent so more income will be taxed at a lower rate, raise the personal exemption from $1,000 to $1,040, and increase standard deductions for people who do not itemize.

For single people, the standard deduction is increased to $2,390, up from $2,300, and for couples filing a joint return the $3,400 standard deduction rises to $3,540.

Based on the inflation rate this year, the 1984 tax indexing changes will increase those amounts by another 3.7 percent, which will be reflected on next year's forms.

Other changes for 1985, which are explained in the tax instructions, involve alimony payments, deductions for charitable contributions, the earned-income credit for low-income taxpayers and new rules covering divorced or separated parents who claim children as dependents.

The forms taxpayers receive will depend on what they filed last year. The IRS is mailing out 47.6 million 1984 "long forms" which are used by people who itemize deductions or who make more than $50,000.

Another 39.4 million packets will include the short 1040A form and the 11-line 1040EZ form.

The 1040A can be used by married or single people whose taxable income is under $38,000. The 1040EZ, the simplest of all the forms, can only be used by single people who... See TAXES on Page A2

Magic Valley's own Santa

Love of kids brings out the elf in him

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

David VanLeeuwen has been living up Christmas celebrations for the last 15 years

TWIN FALLS — If you don't believe in Santa Claus, you haven't met David VanLeeuwen. Like any Santa, VanLeeuwen is busiest around Christmas time, when he can be found talking to children about their Christmas wishes at parties, schools or on the street.

He also makes house calls. If you are having a holiday party with a number of vehicles parked around your home, don't be surprised if Santa shows up. "Sometimes when I'm on my way somewhere through a residential area and see what I think is a holiday party in progress, I may just walk in. I get a lot of reaction when I show up unexpectedly," the Twin Falls man says. "And of course I get a lot of offers for refreshments, but I would never drink anything while I'm in this outfit."

Why does someone voluntarily take on the demands that are made on Santa at this time of year?

"I love kids. I have raised six of my own and I have four grandchildren," he says. "My 2-year-old granddaughter was at a party where I visited recently. She didn't recognize me and didn't want anything to do with me until I asked her to come to 'granda,'" and then she realized who it was and we got along fine. Some youngsters are overwhelmed by seeing Santa in person."

For the last 15 years, he has been taking part in Christmas festivities around Twin Falls and other Magic Valley areas. His wife keeps an appointment book on his holiday appearances, and it generally leaves little time for his impromptu visits.

VanLeeuwen's popularity with area groups probably lies in his highly authentic appearance.

"I've always been heavy," he says of his 340-pound frame. "Fortunately, or unfortunately, I am built just like the original and I don't have to add any padding."

He wears a beautifully tailored red velvet suit with white fur trim. His beard, mustache and long white locks are real hair—and while it comes from a yak, it's hard to tell that he didn't grow it himself. It represents an investment of about $150, VanLeeuwen says.

slight bells, which he obtained many years ago in Heber City, Utah, from a friend who had used them on the harness for his sleigh team. With the experience he had in rearing his six sons and daughters, he knows a lot about getting along with youngsters. "I think it's because I look them right in the eyes and I give each one my full attention as we talk," he says.

—and now—my—(20-year-old)—son wants to get into it, too. While VanLeeuwen is paid for appearances he makes for special gatherings and parties, the most enjoyable part of the role is when... See SANTA on Page A2

Family share of pie shrinks

Spending power of families with kids declines 19 percent

By ROBERT FURLLOW
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Families with children are sharing a smaller portion of the nation's economic pie, despite a recent trend of mothers going back to work, according to a new study commissioned by Congress.

The study, conducted for the congressional Joint Economic Committee and released Wednesday, said the share of national income going to families with children has dropped 19 percent since 1973.

"If the nation's children are regarded as its social, political and economic future, the information is very disturbing," said Rep. Dan Oby, D-Wis., the chairperson of the panel.

The study gave no simple explanation for the decline. But it mentioned as contributing to the situation the increasing number of families headed by one parent — usually a woman.

Single parents headed 24.7 percent of all families in 1984, up from 16.4 percent in 1973, the study said. It found that families with single female heads had a mean income last year of $13,257, less than 40 percent of the $34,379 average income for two-parent families.

According to the report, families with children now account for 53.3 percent of the nation's population, down from 61.5 percent in 1973. But their share of the national income since 1973 has fallen even faster, from 40.2 percent to 32.6 percent.

"The last decade has been one in which economic performance has been disappointing for many Americans, but it has been particularly tough on kids," Oby said.

He said young couples have dealt with the problem of declining real income in several ways, including having fewer children and deciding that wives and mothers should get full-time jobs.

The study was conducted under the direction of Sheldon Danziger, a professor of social work at the University of Wisconsin and head of its Institute for Research on Poverty.

Danziger found that the loss in mean income — as measured in constant, uninfated dollars — has affected families across all economic strata, from poor to rich. But the biggest declines have been among the poor.

From the poorest to the richest, in five segments of about equal numbers of families, the income declines over the decade were 34 percent, 20.2 percent, 10.9 percent, 4.7 percent and 1.7 percent, the report said.

Safety is holiday word on Magic Valley roads

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In contrast to the national holiday traffic picture, the Idaho State Police office in Twin Falls reported that all was quiet on area roadways on Christmas Day.

While a persistent inversion layer has kept the Magic Valley cold and smoggy for the past few weeks, it has made for predictably clear weather.

Road conditions were generally good around Idaho, according to the State Police, and there were no major holiday travel problems or hazards.

Nationally, at least 123 people had been killed in holiday traffic accidents as of the two-day Christmas period drew to a close Wednesday.

Locally, the Twin Falls County Sheriff's office reported that road conditions around the county were good for travel and there were no accidents involving serious injuries or deaths.

According to figures from a survey conducted for the American Automobile Association, some 32.5 million Americans were planning to travel on the nation's highways during the holiday period.

In the Mountain West, survey figures predicted that 1.7 million of the region's 12.5 million residents would be taking to the highways between Christmas and New Years.

In addition to the more than 32 million traveling by car, light truck, or recreational vehicle on highways nationwide, another 9.5 million were expected to travel by air, bus or rail-making a total of 42-million travelers, or nearly 18 percent of the country's population.

Travel by all modes of transportation during the holiday period will be 6 percent higher than in 1984, when 40 million traveled during the holiday season, the study said.

Lawyer/doctor feud waged over hotlines

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A lawyers group, infuriated by a telephone hotline that warns doctors about patients who sue frequently, is launching its own hotline to let people know if their doctors have been sued.

Gary Paul, president of the Los Angeles Trial Lawyers Association, said the attorneys' hotline will be in operation by Jan. 15 and predicted it will cut into the business of doctors who are repeatedly sued for negligence.

"It will steer the public to doctors with good records," said Paul. "And it may eliminate a number of lawsuits filed against 10 percent of the doctors."

There are doctors in this town who have spent more time in court than I have," he said. Samuel Shore, an attorney coordinating the lawyers' hotline project, said he and a small staff are working with Los Angeles County computer records listing malpractice suits going back as far as 10 years.

It will cost patients $5 per query to get information on a doctor's lawsuit record, said Shore. The client will be mailed a report listing lawsuits against the doctor and suggesting where to go to look up more information. For the other hotline service, Physicians Alert, doctors pay $10 per inquiry about a patient's lawsuit record and are normally charged a fee of $150 per year to join.

Shore, a former surgeon, said Physicians Alert was contrary to doctors' obligation to treat the sick.

"The Hippocratic oath says nothing about treating only people who have not filed lawsuits," he said.

And Paul said the doctors' hostility "has as its purpose the intimidation of patients to keep them from filing lawsuits."

But David Zeilin, a spokesman for the Los Angeles County Medical Association, disputed those charges.

"I don't think any doctor is going to refuse treatment of a patient who's ill," Zeilin said. "... But 'professional plaintiffs' do exist. If a doctor finds he has one of those, he'll be utterly meticulous with his records. He will take great pains to write down everything."

"It's another form of defensive medicine," Zeilin said.

"We know that 25 percent of medical malpractice suits are without merit," he said.

Essay stirs debate on doctors, funerals

BOSTON (AP) — An assertion that doctors should attend their patients' funerals has touched off an outpouring of support — and some dissent — in the pages of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Several doctors agreed that their responsibilities to patients and the families left behind do not end at the moment of death. But one physician's wife lamented that adding funerals to doctors' duties will further cut into the time they spend with their own families.

The letters in Thursday's issue of the journal were a response to an essay by Dr. Patrick Irvine of the St. Paul-Ramsey Medical Center in St. Paul, Minn., that appeared in the magazine last June.

"I am reluctant, almost embarrassed, to bring this up with colleagues," he wrote. "When I do, they look a bit distant and become quiet. They haven't thought about it much, or so they say. Few with whom I have talked have ever attended patients' funerals."

Going to patients' wakes and funerals gives families a chance to talk about their own experiences during the death, he said. It demonstrates that the doctor valued the person who died.

And it helps the doctor, too. "My feelings need resolution just as the family's feelings do, and society's rituals help me with that as well," he wrote.

Irvine cited a survey, published last year, showing that less than 10 percent of doctors send cards or flowers or attend their patients' funerals.

In response, Dr. Julia E. Connelly of the University of Virginia School of Medicine wrote: "Attending the funeral, viewing the body of writing a letter forces the physician to acknowledge death. It forces him or her to face the sadness and pain, the guilt and the frustration of losing a patient."

However, Dr. William L. Hedrick of St. Mary's Hospital in Minneapolis responded that a wake or funeral is not the best time to talk with a deceased patient's family.

Holiday fires leave four dead

The Associated Press
 Holiday fires in four states killed four people and injured 16, including five critically, and authorities said three of the blazes were linked to Christmas decorations.
 In Albany, N.Y., 62-year-old Robert Baker died in a fire early Wednesday that reportedly started when an electric Christmas star-ornament ignited curtains in a dormitory apartment, officials said.
 In Westport, W.Va., a father-and-daughter were killed early Wednesday when a fire engulfed their home, injuring seven people. Two of the seven people injured in the blaze had to be hospitalized, including the man's wife, who was listed in critical condition. The cause of the blaze has not been determined, officials said.

Second plane propeller found

CONCORD, Calif. (AP) — Authorities on Wednesday found the second of two propellers from a small plane that crashed into a shopping mall crowded with Christmas shoppers, killing four people and sending 74 to hospitals, officials said.
 Nine of 14 people still hospitalized were in critical condition Wednesday, two days after the twin-engine Beechcraft Baron slammed through the roof of a Macy's at Sunvalley Mall, raining melted roofing tar and flaming aviation fuel on the panicked crowd below. The crash caused an estimated $3.5 million in damage to the mall.
 Security officers found the missing propeller Wednesday wedged between an information booth and a stroller rental concession, said police Lt. Richard Gordy, who added that federal investigators would resume trying to determine the cause of the accident Thursday.

Prison system beats deadline

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee prisons had room to spare Wednesday in advance of a federal judge's Dec. 31 deadline to reduce the number of inmates of 15 state facilities to 7,019.
 Correction Department spokesman John Taylor said 6,963 adults were behind bars Wednesday.
 In addition, the state had 88 empty beds at three reception centers for new inmates. In sharp contrast to overcrowding that led U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Higgins to order the prison system closed to all but the most dangerous new inmates as of Oct. 23 until all inmates had beds.

 All that time, about 1,000 newly-sentenced inmates were forced to sleep in gymnasiums, corridors and offices.

Teaching incentives popular

ATLANTA (AP) — States seeking ways to improve public schools are turning increasingly to monetary incentives that reward good teaching, according to the Southern Regional Education Board.
 Since early 1984, 28 states have implemented performance-based salary scales for teachers or are studying plans to do so, said Lynn Cornatt, director of the Career Ladder Clearinghouse at the Atlanta-based board.
 Unlike traditional pay scales based on experience, the new programs make greater use of evaluations, a basis for teacher salaries.
 "The underlying theory is that these programs will make teaching a more attractive profession," she said. "Teachers can stay in the classroom and be rewarded for staying in the classroom."

Anti-abortion violence feared

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion rights advocates say they fear violence against abortion and family planning clinics is now aimed at burning people in the clinics during business hours and not just at damaging buildings.
 "All of the clinics are more apprehensive than usual," said Bill Hamilton, spokesman for the Planned Parenthood Federation of America.
 They fear a repeat of the bombings and arson that began during the holiday season last year and continued to the Jan. 22 anniversary of the Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion.
 "That's when it all came to a head last year," Hamilton said.
 Although violence against abortion and family planning clinics was down overall this year, abortion rights advocates said recent letter bombs in Oregon and the bombing of a clinic in Manhattan are particularly worrisome.

Investigators say bad bookkeeping loses billions of taxpayer dollars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators have found that billions of taxpayer dollars are lost or mismanaged through the failure of more than half of the government's 427 accounting systems to meet federal requirements.
 "The major problems so far remain, largely unchanged," the General Accounting Office said Wednesday, three years after Congress passed the Financial Integrity Act to curb fraud, waste and abuse in government.
 Widespread and often long-standing weaknesses and breakdowns in agency internal controls continue to result in wasteful spending, poor management and losses involving billions of dollars, Comptroller General Charles A. Bowsher said. "The weaknesses also have made outright fraud more feasible."
 While most of the agencies found problems with their own accounting systems, their reports to Congress and the White House often do not mention them and thus do not provide an "accurate, clear assessment" of their overall status, the GAO said in the 71-page report timed for release on Christmas Day.
 The investigators said serious internal control problems continue in a wide range of areas, including weapons procurement, Social Security and the collection of education, small business and other government loans.
 "Overcharges for goods and services, cost overruns, overpayments, the purchase of faulty equipment and a host of problems—related directly to inadequate government internal control and accounting systems—erode the public's confidence in government," the GAO said.
 "Adding to the government's dilemma is the overall poor condition of agency accounting and financial management systems," it added.
 Of the 427 accounting systems used by 18 federal agencies, 226 were cited. The GAO said they either had not complied with the government-wide standards in use for 35 years, or their officials did not know whether they did.

Pilgrims gather in church to pray at Jesus' birthplace

BETHLEHEM, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Thousands of pilgrims from around the world crowded into the Church of the Nativity on Christmas Day to sing and pray in a medley of languages over the site where the Christ child was born.

Choir music echoed through the church and bells pealed outside to call worshippers to prayer.

Mass was conducted non-stop in the grotto beneath the church where some pilgrims waited in line for as long as 30 minutes to touch the 14-point silver star marking the spot where Mary is believed to have given birth to Jesus.

Most pilgrims did not seem to mind the delay. Joseph Wood, a 20-year-old pilot from Nashville, Tenn., said Christmas in Bethlehem was an experience unlike any other.

There is a special atmosphere, seeing places of biblical significance, Wood said.

Pontiff decries violation of rights

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Wednesday delivered his Christmas Day message to a world he called "scandalously" marked by human rights violations, starvation, oppression and mass suffering.

Referring to himself as "the bishop of Rome, the successor of Peter and one of the human beings on pilgrimage towards the end of the second millennium," John Paul said he wanted to put the words of Jesus into the "context of the signs and needs of our times."

Wearing a gold mitre and vestments, the pontiff spoke at noon from the central balcony of St. Peter's Basilica overlooking St. Peter's Square. Crowded below were 30,000 faithful and tourists, who stood in the chilly air under a gray sky. In his message, the pope quoted from the New Testament book of Titus, repeating the Christmas message that "we should live sober, upright and godly lives."

Referring to himself, he added, "He repeats it as one defenseless in the midst of a world that is armed and too often defeated by the temptation of arrogant power and oppression."

"He repeats it forcefully in a world where there are still people dying of starvation and where human rights are scandalously violated and a mass of suffering weighs upon humanity," the pope said.

"Men and women listening to me, the more human world of which Christ the Lord, born in Bethlehem, is the first fruit, is a world inhabited by a new people... that knows how to be sober with regard to the resources of the universe and wise in the use of the energies of its own mind, for it knows how to resist the false mirage of a progress that is indifferent to moral values and looks only to the immediate and material advantage," John Paul said.

He spoke of a people working towards achieving a community "in which every individual will feel accepted, respected and esteemed." He concluded: "The church intends with all her strength to be the minister of this message which springs from Christmas, so that today's world will not lack the prospect which gives meaning to joy and sorrow, death and life."

Mandela calls for Christmas mourning

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Anti-apartheid activist Winnie Mandela visited her jailed husband Wednesday and declared Christmas "a day of mourning" for blacks.

In Unbulubvu, Natal province, police said at least 40 blacks died in a hatchet, stick and gun battles between Zulu and Pondo tribesmen in the three days preceding Christmas.

About 2,000 Zulus and 3,000 Pondos were involved in the tribal battles, which are common in that area, and scores were injured, police said.

The tribal battles can be set off by anything from a stolen cow to a suspected sexual transgression. Police said they "did not know what caused the latest fighting."

Mandela, make up South Africa's largest ethnic group — 6 million blacks out of the nation's 24 million blacks. The Zondos, ancient enemies of the Zulu people, are a small tribe whose territory of the Indian Ocean side of South Africa abuts Zulu property.

Mrs. Mandela had a 40-minute Christmas visit with her husband, Nelson Mandela, founder of the armed wing of the African National Congress, the main guerrilla group fighting the government.

Mrs. Mandela said her 67-year-old husband had recovered from his prostate surgery last month but remained in solitary confinement in Pollsmoor Prison's hospital wing.

She said Christmas Day 1985 was the worst of the 21 Christmases her husband has spent behind bars.

"If anything, this particular Christmas is far worse than all the other Christmases... because he is in solitary confinement," said Mrs. Mandela, who is 59.

"There is no justification at all to hold him in the prison hospital. He has recovered fully," she told reporters at a Cape Town luxury hotel. "This is nothing more than further harassment."

Mandela is serving a life term after being convicted in 1964 of plotting sabotage in an effort to topple the white-led government.

"Christmas has ceased to be of any specific meaning to the oppressed people of this country," Mrs. Mandela said. "Christmas has become a day of mourning. It has ceased to relate to the birth of Christ."

In Soweto near Johannesburg, the Rev. Arch Mquandlo said Christmas attendance at his 15 Methodist chapels in the sprawling black township of 2 million was down 50 percent.

Mquandlo said blacks who traditionally observe Christmas with festive parties, weddings and dances were ignoring celebrations this year to demonstrate opposition to rule by the white minority government.

Police said four blacks were killed on Christmas Day in race-related violence around the country. They said police shot one man to death in rioting near Cape Town and that three other people were killed by fellow blacks near Durban, Cape Town and outside Johannesburg.

European volcano eruption triggers quake; one killed

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Four live volcanoes of glowing red lava streamed down Mount Etna on Wednesday following a surprise eruption that triggered an earthquake. The quake destroyed a resort hotel, killing one person and injuring 12 other guests, officials said.

A Catania city official said about 200 firefighters, police and civil defense workers were ready if it became necessary to evacuate about 5,000 residents of two villages on the southern slope of Europe's most active volcano.

However, the official, Roberto Sorge, told the Associated Press by telephone the towns did not appear to be in danger because the molten lava streaming from a height of about 5,900 feet was being trapped in a large reservoir about 1,640 feet below.

"There's a lot of space in the reservoir, and as long as it continues to flow there, there is no danger," he said.

Refugees reported murdered

GENEVA (AP) — Pirates killed 50 Vietnamese boat people in a savage murder and rape attack in the South China Sea last week, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner on Refugees said Wednesday.

Spokesman Leon Davico said the survivors — all women and children except for two — gave his account of what he termed a "horrible attack" to the U.N. agency's representative in the Malaysian capital of Kuala Lumpur.

The 50 Vietnamese, mostly from the Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon) region, fled their Communist country Dec. 12 in the hope of reaching Malaysia.

"After sailing for four days, they were stopped by a fishing boat with an apparently friendly crew who offered to help them get to Malaysia."

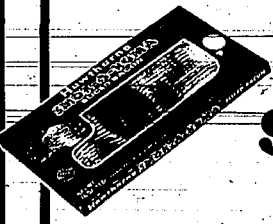

"Two men, one woman and three children were invited to come aboard the fishing boat which then took the Vietnamese craft in tow."

"Five hours later a second fishing boat arrived from which about 20 pirates, armed with knives and iron bars, boarded the Vietnamese boat and began searching the people for gold and valuables. All men above the age of 17 were thrown into the water, even the two who had been invited aboard the 'friendly' ship."

"Most of them drowned because they could not swim. The women were raped. After the pirates left, a man who had managed to keep floating by holding on to a jerrycan joined the 26 women and children on board and helped them to put up a sail again."

Davico said the Vietnamese reached the Malaysian coast Dec. 19. On the same day, he said, another survivor who had been picked up by Malaysian fishing boat also arrived.

What's what

In metropolitan offices of major stockbrokers almost anytime during the business day, there'll be somebody who drove there in a Mercedes-Benz to get financial advice from somebody who got there in a bus.

Took 12 or more assembled people creating a disturbance, to be called a riot. That, under England's renowned Riot Act of 1714, "The Sheriff was supposed to show up and read aloud that piece of legislation — whence cometh the old "reading the riot act" line.

Q. Didn't President Dwight Eisenhower have a staff man whose job it was to trim the President's toenails?
A. That was President Chester Arthur. His valet did such. Eisenhower didn't delegate the toenail job.

GYMNASTIUM
"Gymnasium" can be a fairly suggestive word; if you go back to its root meaning, "an exercise for which you strip."

Our Chief Prognosticator thinks you'll soon be able to buy an electronic switchboard for your house — so you can call your main number, then dial extension digits to ring the individual phones, or to turn up the heat, or to douse the lights, or to check e-mails on the answering machine, or to feed the goldfish, or to draw the blinds, or to... And on and on.

One of the most noteworthy awards for meritorious service was accepted with large pleasure by a self-employed fellow in Worcester, England. He bought a watch. And had it engraved: "Presented to myself by myself in recognition of the 55 years' work I have done while working for myself. Thanking me. A. Hancock, 1904-59."

Cronkite's Christmas brightened by a tiny yacht

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The joy at Sunward Yacht Corp. played Santa's elves for a few days this month after receiving a special request for a ship model for former CBS news anchorman Walter Cronkite.

The model is a miniature of a 48-foot ketch that Sunward Yacht is building for Cronkite, a long-time sailing enthusiast. The cruising sailboat has been under construction for about a year and is scheduled for a February launch, said Bob Masiska, owner of Sunward Yacht.

The model was commissioned a month ago by Cronkite's wife, Betsy, on Christmas gift for her husband. Masiska said he was reluctant to make the model "because we have so much work to do here in the shop, but Christmas gifts are special."

"It just occurred to me rather late," Mrs. Cronkite said. "Bob really scurried to make this work."

Funaska said he and his crew "had to work like mad to have to pull down to rushing it, trying to get it done for Christmas." But on Monday, a Sunward Yacht worker heading to New England for the holidays hand-delivered the model to

Married couple enjoys 77th holiday together
LEWISTON, N.Y. (AP) — Wednesday was the 77th Christmas for Bert and Minnie Israel as a married couple. Bert is 102 and his wife 97.

Both remained active into their 90s. Israel cooked and canned foods and made clothing for needy neighbors. Israel formed until failing eyesight and hearing forced him to stop. They moved from the farm to the nursing home in 1984.

Israel is confined to a wheelchair, said Ms. Sloma, but Mrs. Israel shows up for movies and takes part in parties, crafts, religious services and bingo games.

Jim 'Ernest P.' Varney to lead festival parade
MONROE, La. (AP) — Actor Jim Varney, better known to television viewers as advertising's humorous but facetious character "Ernest P. Worrell," will be featured in a Mardi Gras parade in February.

Jim Varney, who invented Ernest and his hapless neighbor, Vern, has agreed to be grand marshal of the Krewe of Janus Parade on Feb. 1, a sponsor said this week.

Chuck Dickey of Louisiana Gas Service Co., which is sponsoring the parade, said his company was lucky to get Varney because he's such a success in the advertising world.

"He represents some 90 companies," Dickey said.

The Twin City Jaycees' third annual Mardi Gras celebration actually will be held 10 days before Fat Tuesday itself. A jazz concert will be held in Monroe before the parade.

Singer Peggy Lee hopes to leave hospital soon
SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Singer Peggy Lee, suffering from complications from double-bypass heart surgery 12 weeks ago, spent Christmas Day in a hospital bed but was expected to go home before New Year's Day.

"She is making satisfactory progress and will be released in the near future," Maureen Freudinger, nursing supervisor at St. John's Hospital, said Wednesday. Doctors have said she will be released in a few days.

Miss Lee, 65, underwent the heart surgery Oct. 7 in New Orleans and was operated on again two weeks later when an infection developed.

She was flown to the Santa Monica hospital Dec. 9 for treatment of complications from the surgery. Ms. Freudinger said.

The smoky-voiced singer is known for such hits as "Fever," "Is That All There Is?" and "Why Don't You Do Right?"

Staff tries to cheer artificial heart patient Lund

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Nurses volunteering to work extra shifts for artificial heart recipient Mary Johnson said they have worked doctors in the week since her surgery, and her family thanked the hospital staff Wednesday.

Staff members also tried to make Christmas as cheerful as possible for her husband and son.

"I really want to be here and make sure they're all right," said Kristen Johnson, heart replacement coordinator for the Minneapolis Heart Institute at Abbott Northwestern Hospital.

"I feel responsible for them," Ms. Johnson said of DuWayne Lund, 45, and Scott, 14, who have been staying at the hospital since Mrs. Lund's emergency implant Dec. 18.

"They're really a very brave, strong family," Ms. Johnson said Wednesday. She had been at the hospital more than 24 hours Christmas Eve and returned to work Christmas morning. "I don't think I could handle it nearly as well as they can and that really helps all of us."

Mrs. Lund, 40, the first woman to receive an artificial heart, remained in critical but stable condition Wednesday. Doctors said she had not emerged from a light coma and was undergoing dialysis to help her kidneys dispose of waste products.

"Nothing has changed at all," Abbott Northwestern spokesman Mark Dixon said. "We're just continuing to do what we've been doing — intravenous feeding, kidney dialysis and so on."

Doctors said that although Mrs. Lund's kidneys had not improved as quickly as hoped since being weakened by her massive heart failure, none of her organs appeared to have been damaged irreversibly.

"The heart's working fine, so doctors can really concentrate on helping her other organ systems and that would have been more difficult otherwise," hospital spokeswoman Mary Small said Wednesday.

Soviets honor Smith

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has issued a postal stamp in memory of Samantha Smith, the Maine schoolgirl who wrote to late Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov asking that the superpowers work for a more peaceful world.

Samantha, of Manchester, Maine, joined the Soviet Union as an Anticommunist in July 1983 and received worldwide attention as a young peacemaker. She died at the age of 13 in a plane crash in Maine on Aug. 25.

The five-kopek stamp bears an artist's rendition of the young schoolgirl and her name in Cyrillic letters. Five kopeks (about six cents) is the postage for sending a letter within the Soviet Union.

"Several years ago this girl wrote a letter to Moscow, then visited the Soviet Union, where she became convinced of the sincere striving of Soviet people for peace," the newspaper Vechernyaya Moskva wrote in a brief article accompanied by a photo of the new 1985 stamp.

Samantha was received as a little ambassador of peace," the newspaper said.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev sent a telegram of condolences to Samantha's mother, Jane Smith, after the plane crash in which Samantha and her father were killed.

Descendant of Lincoln dead at 81

HARTFIELD, Va. (AP) — Robert Todd Lincoln Beckwith, the last surviving descendant of Abraham Lincoln, died on Christmas Eve at the age of 81.

Beckwith, the great grandson of the 16th president, had lived in a nursing home, according to officials at the funeral home where the body was taken. The community is about 45 miles from Richmond, the capital of the Confederacy.

Charles Bristow of the Bristow-Paulkner Funeral Home said he knew little about Beckwith, except that he was descended from the Civil War president.

He said Beckwith's widow would make arrangements on Monday. Published records show he had been married three times but was childless.

Lincoln and his wife Mary Todd had four sons. Three died in their youth; the eldest, Robert Todd Lincoln, served as Secretary of War under President James A. Garfield and died in 1926 at the age of 82.

Robert Todd Lincoln and his wife, Mary, had three children; their youngest, Jessie, eloped in 1897 with Warren Beckwith, a classmate and football star at Iowa Wesleyan College.

They had two children: Mary Lincoln Beckwith, who died in 1975 and Robert Todd Lincoln Beckwith, who was born in Riverside, Ill. on July 18, 1904.

The great-grandson received a law degree from what is now Georgetown University.

Blaine board targets flow of Big Wood

Minimum stream rate desired

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Blaine County Board of Commissioners voted on Monday to ask the state for a minimum stream flow of 200 cubic feet per second for the Big Wood River.

The river needs the minimum flow to protect its recreation and aesthetic values, which the board believes is important to the local tourist-oriented economy.

Protecting those values, the board believes, are in the local public interest — one standard the Idaho Resources Board must balance with other concerns when considering minimum, in-stream flow requests.

Ed Nigbor, county planning and zoning administrator, said the public's desire to maintain a high water level in the Big Wood to protect its recreation and other values may be more important than other uses.

Depending on the county, that might be a primary interest, Nigbor said.

The 200 cfs the county will request is separate from 70 cfs requested by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game for the Big Wood River to protect only its fisheries. At a hearing on the Fish and Game application this fall, however, many Blaine County residents said they would like to see more water in the river, prompting the county's request.

"I would think (state officials) got a feeling of the last public hearing, that Blaine County is interested in really protecting the Big Wood River," Nigbor said. "I hope they see that that is also in the best interest of the state."

Based on readings from a gauging station near Hailey, Nigbor said the river has an average minimum flow of 200 cfs for at least seven months each year. Average flows below 200 cfs are during the winter months from November to March.

Requests for minimum in-stream flows are made to the Water Resources Board, which reviews them before making an application on the water right to the Department of Water Resources, which makes the final decision on the requests. If approved, the board holds those water rights in trust for the people of the state.

Like all other water rights, a minimum in-stream flow is subordinate to any existing water rights.

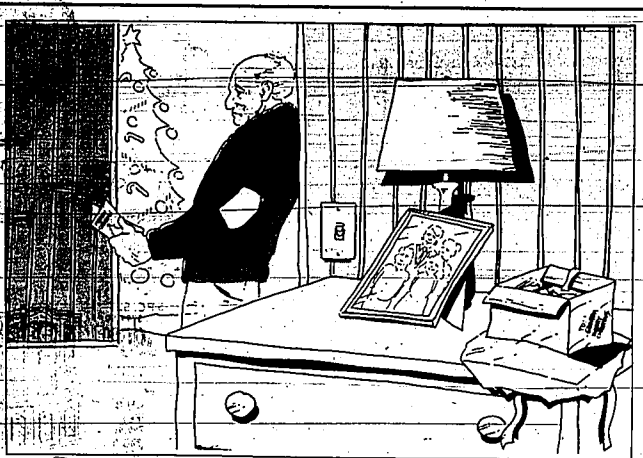

Because of that, the board did not hesitate to approve the request for 200 cfs for the river from the southern boundary of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area to Bellevue.

The board did discuss asking for 150 cfs between those points.

"What makes this work is that the (agricultural) diversions, for the most part, are down at the end of the stream," said Commissioner Alan Reynolds.

Most of the major diversions are below Bellevue, Nigbor said, although there are some small diversions north of Bellevue. He said, however, the use of those diversions is diminishing as the

Some of the elderly spend holiday alone

Grown-children often avoid nursing homes

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The situation goes on all year long, but it's especially noticeable at Christmas.

"When carolers, local residents, and businesses bring gifts and attention to nursing home patients their concern is appreciated, but officials wish the concern would be spread out during the year.

The fact is that a great many nursing home patients — nationwide, as well as at Skyview-Hazelde facilities in Twin Falls — are without family ties.

Their "aloneness" contrasts starkly with the season which stresses close-family relationships.

Where are these elderly patients' children? As in any human situation, there is no single answer; but a combination of many factors.

However, Richard Drake, administrator of a local nursing home, sees "the situation" as a reflection of "our society as a whole."

"Television, magazine ads — everything glorifies youth," he said. "We don't look up to the elderly as they do in Japan and China, where grey hair is considered a sign of wisdom."

Some of the residents simply have outlived their children, or never had any. The majority of those who never hear from their offspring have been estranged from them for decades before they get to the nursing home, according to Claire Drexler, activity director.

"Many times, after their children left home, say 50 years ago, they lost track of them for whatever reason," she said.

But despite all these understandable situations, the hard fact remains that some middle-aged children live close enough to be able to visit parents in nursing homes, yet they avoid doing so.

"Television, magazine ads — everything glorifies youth. We don't look up to the elderly as they do in Japan and China, where grey hair is considered a sign of wisdom."

— Richard Drake

Drake said he can understand this, even though many of these 40- to 60-year-old children have to deal with their guilt feelings.

"Some of them can't deal with the physical deterioration they see in a nursing home."

"When they see their parent in a wheelchair," Drake said, "they see themselves, and they can't cope."

Crowing old isn't a pretty picture, the administrator admitted, and with cosmetic as well as physical disabilities, elderly parents don't resemble the person their children remember. Obviously, if the oldsters didn't have major problems, they wouldn't be in the facility, he added.

"When we see what we don't like, the first impulse is to draw away," Drake explained; but children then feel guilty and their reaction to this is to either "just quit coming or come in and overreact."

Some of the most critical family members are — in the latter category, the administrator said. "They complain about the care their parent receives, yet 'then go in and talk to me' to the parent — so loud we can hear it."

Changes in boat licensing proposed

Blaine commission wants more funds

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — A bill that will change how the boat license and registration fees are allocated to Idaho's counties has gained the support of the Blaine County Board of Commissioners.

The board voted Monday to support the measure, which would triple the amount of money the county receives to improve and maintain waterways used by the public.

Sponsored by the Idaho Better Boating Committee and Sen. Ann Rydloch, R-Idaho Falls, the bill will transfer the responsibility for administering the Idaho Safe Boating Act to the Department of Parks and Recreation and will redistribute the license and registration fees to the counties where the boats are used instead of going to the boat owners' home county.

Mary Austin, director of the Blaine County Recreation District, said a legislative audit report found that Blaine County could receive about $5,000 under the proposed system of allocation. In 1984, the county received about $2,300 from the fees, she said.

Austin said the county would receive more because many of the boaters using waterways in Blaine County come from throughout the Magic Valley, with most of the use at Magic Reservoir in Blaine and Camas counties.

The proposed legislative amendment would transfer some of the license and registration fees collected in other counties to Blaine County. The fees are placed in the county's vessel account and are used for such improvements as docks and their maintenance and recreation site maintenance, Austin said.

Austin added it now costs the county about $5,000 to maintain sites used by boaters without making any improvements. The money not available in the vessel fund comes from the county's general fund, Austin said.

"We'll be getting into the hole in the next few years if we don't get some changes," she said.

Austin said, however, that counties with large populations and large numbers of boats to license and register will probably fight the amendment, although there is also a large number of smaller counties supporting the measure.

Because the amendment faces an uncertain future, County Assessor Bob Thomas said the county may have more success at getting money from "the vessel funds" nearby.

"I've been hoping to get the amendment passed."

Thomas said many members of clubs associated with Magic Reservoir live throughout the Magic Valley, and many have enough influence in their home counties as part of the vessel funds transferred.

Gooding opens bid on water plant job

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News writer

GOODING — The City of Gooding is taking bids to repair a building at its waste water treatment plant.

Engineer Scott Bybee told the city council last week he was ready to advertise for bids on the $15,000 repair project.

The bids will be opened on Jan. 8 at a special meeting of the council in City Hall.

Mayor Gene Heller said the plant began operations in July 1983, but the mechanical building has developed a "settling problem" in the floor.

In February, state environmental engineer Gary Burkett notified the city by letter that the building had a "major structural problem" and the concrete slab floor had subsided 2 inches as a result of the uneven settling.

He told the council that because the building houses a plumbing center that is crucial to the waste treatment process and because the settling problem had caused some pipe and electric conduit breaks as early as February, the problem would have to be corrected to avoid a possible violation of the plant's operating permit.

Bybee told the council last week the problem will be corrected by installing concrete pilings under the floor to support it and stop the settling.

Since the plant was less than two years old when the problem occurred, the city has spent several months exploring a possible insurance settlement.

Heller said last week there would be a partial damage payment from the insurance company, but some of the repair costs will have to be borne by the city.

In other business, the council granted city employees a $50 per month, across-the-board raise.

"Our employees do a good job and they need to keep up with inflation," Heller said when he proposed the cost-of-living increase.

New Year's resolutions need realism to ease expectations

This is my annual New Year's resolution column. If you have trouble keeping New Year's resolutions, like I do, may I suggest writing a column. It's one thing to fall (keep a promise to yourself). It's quite another to fall to keep a promise to the Magic Valley.

Having said this, I must add I really doubt whether the Magic Valley cares whether I don't eat chocolate in 1986, or whether I limit myself to one overdraft check a month (well, we have to be reasonable about these resolutions). And having said that, I wouldn't care even if Magic Valley did care. Which brings up a very interesting point about resolutions.

change. One time I made a promise to God to lose weight. Only later did I realize that I had not cared enough about losing weight to do it myself.

But in the future, surely I could find enough desire to lose weight and please God, too. The end to this story was every time I bit into a piece of pizza or popped a noodle in my mouth I'd think a murderer had been murdering pound gain. I knew I had committed the unpardonable sin and almost lost my faith altogether.

Like I said before, making successful resolutions can become a very tricky game.

Salvation Army kettles hit dry spot

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Faced with a shortfall in Christmas kettle collections, Salvation Army Commanding Officer Lt. Doug Tolrud says he is considering sending his troops back to the storefronts for a few days after Christmas.

"It appears we're about $5,000 below in the kettles," Tolrud said. "In addition, the United Way has had to withdraw about $8,000 of support from the Salvation Army due to a lapse in United Way donations, making the army's financial picture even sicker."

In Burley, kettle collections are down from $4,000 last year to $1,500 this year.

Kettle donations support the Salvation Army's Christmas groceries. Salvation Army personnel deliver 250 food baskets to the needy, hand out one new and one used toy to over 400 children, and drop off gifts to about 500 people in nursing homes and retirement homes.

The organization will also serve

Christmas dinner at the Burley Jail. Tolrud attributes the drop in donations to cold weather. "I don't think it's (only) because of economic times, it's just the weather. . . . The merchants will tell you the same . . . the people are not getting out, they're not taking their hands out of their pockets."

Salvation Army bell-ringers may be stationed at the Blue Lakes Mall, K-Mart and Payless Drug Store if Tolrud decides to prolong the giving season.

Woman's car taken for fast joyride

TWIN FALLS — A South Park resident had her car stolen for about an hour and 15 minutes on Christmas morning, only to have it found on a nearby street with its lights on and motor running — but without keys.

At 5:45 the Twin Falls Police Department received a call from Cecilia Rhodes at 295 Lois Street, reporting an abandoned red and white car which had been left near the rim of Rock-Creek Canyon.

Sanitary rules for Fremont day care eyed

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — Health officials may ask counties that have adopted local day-care licensing ordinances to include some rules covering sanitary conditions.

Fremont County Commission Chairman James Sidoway says he had been advised by District 7 Health officials the county will be asked to amend its ordinance to include health provisions.

Debra Dunn and daughter of Rupert.

Weddings

Flynn-Chojnacky

JEROME — Debra Flynn became the bride of Steven E. Chojnacky at St. John's Catholic Cathedral in Boise on June 1.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil George Flynn, Fruitland, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Lee Chojnacky, Jerome.

Connie Newell, Idaho Falls, was matron of honor with Anna Wood, Meridian, sister of the bride, and Lynne Davis, Boise, serving as bridesmaids. Brandi Slover, Nampa, was best man for his brother. Ushers were Gerald and Richard Chojnacky, also brothers of the bridegroom, and Clinton Slover, Nampa, brother-in-law of the bride.

A reception was held following the ceremony. Linda Chojnacky, Jerome, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Susan Schilling, sister of the bridegroom, were gift attendants. Serving were Carolyn Chojnacky and Mary Winn, sister of the bridegroom.

The bride, a 1975 graduate of Fruitland High School, graduated from Boise State University in 1980 with a degree in advertising design. She works as a graphic art consultant for Ore-Ida Foods, Inc., in Boise.

The bridegroom, a 1975 graduate of Jerome High School, graduated from Idaho State University in 1977 in diesel mechanics and works for Trebar Kenworth Sales in Boise where the couple lives.

Artist overcomes problem with vision

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Richard Yahze sits hunched over a small canvas in his dormitory room, a palette of acrylic paints at his elbow.

He is painting. He works very quickly. He paints clouds and mountains. He paints water. He paints the sun and the moon and the stars.

"In an hour or two of working this way, he will turn out a completed painting."

"That might not seem so unusual, except for the thing: Richard Yahze is legally blind."

"When I'm in school that's all I do — paint," said Yahze, a 19-year-old Navajo student at the Arizona School for the Deaf and the Blind. "It helps me think of things. It helps me get rid of problems in my head: I just forget everything and get into my painting."

Born with albinism, a condition that left him with blond hair, very fair skin and no pigment in his retinas, Yahze has 20-200 vision in one eye and 20-300 in the other, said James B. "Blue"

Bickford, the school's principal for the visually handicapped.

Yahze also has nystagmus, an involuntary twitching of the eyeballs.

Nevertheless, Yahze has been drawing and painting since he was a child.

Despite his talent, Yahze has never taken art classes. He taught himself, and since coming to Tucson has helped teach others.

He used to help sighted painters at the Tucson Museum of Art, and he is teaching his brother silversmithing. He has plans to do silkscreening and sand painting.

"It seems like everything about my life is art," he said.

Asked if he can "see" his paintings in his head before he starts, Yahze laughed. "Everyone asks: 'If I have it in my head, no — I just sit down and start painting.' I just paint whatever comes."

He also paints to order and is concerned with productivity.

Phone cards gain popularity

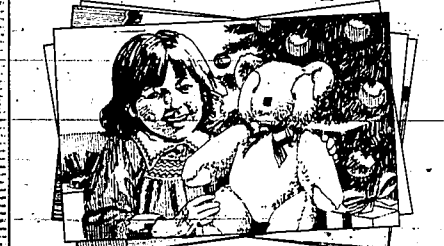

PARIS (AP) — Cash cards, which can be inserted into specially designed pay telephones and provide the answer to the problem of not having enough coins to use "street" phones, are popular in Europe, says MIS week.

and pay units are subtracted from the card during the call, according to the management information systems publication. If the card is used up, the caller can insert a new card to complete his call.

The plastic cards, which the user purchases from the telephone company, are worth a specific amount.

The cash-card system is being tested for possible adoption in the United States.

Couple's wish for Christmas cash wins favor from readers

DEAR ABBY: "Can't Decide" was annoyed with her newlywed daughter for requesting cash instead of a Christmas gift. The newlyweds admitted that they were in debt and could use the money to pay off some of their obligations.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

The mother thought the young couple was "nervy." You agreed, and advised the mother to give them a gift of her choice, plus some advice on the importance of living within their means.

Abby, being in debt is pretty normal these days for newlyweds. I think the young couple showed good judgment and maturity to request a practical gift instead than some useless dust collector.

The mother should be proud of her daughter's wisdom and integrity. I can't imagine where she got it! And you, Abby, should be ashamed of yourself.

SANDY-PASQUANTONIO
DEAR SANDY: Your letter was one of the many complaints that hit my desk.

All right, Mother, ignore my original advice and give the newlyweds a gift of cash even though it's not your idea of a proper Christmas present.

And come St. Valentine's Day, be a sweetheart and recommend they seek help from the nearest consumer credit counseling service so they can learn how to budget their money and stay debt-free.

DEAR ABBY: Re the item from Upset in Elk River, Minn., and her "problem" with the principal removing the bathroom compartment doors, I say she has no beef!

Women have insisted on equality for so long that it is amusing to see their reactions when they get a real dose of it. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander! I say, "More power to the principal!"

FED UP WITH "LIBBERS"
DEAR FED UP: Since when is removing the option of privacy in a woman's restroom a "dose of equality"?

Women's rights is about equal pay for equal work and equal opportunity, and you, sir, should get your mind out of the bathroom.

DEAR ABBY: I need help with a problem. My 16-year-old daughter refuses to eat. She is losing weight. She is 5 feet tall and I don't think she weighs more than 80 pounds. She claims I am nagging too much, and we always end up in a fight.

Is her diet a "teen-age fad" that I am making too much over? She says she "bats out," but I can see by the way her pants sag that she is lying. Am I right to be concerned?
—NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO-NAME: Yes! Your daughter is anorexic! She perceives herself as being "too fat." She is a telephone operator for a place with which I do business. I'm a normal (unmarried) male.

I know absolutely nothing about her, but we have had a few laughs and short conversations that had nothing to do with business. (I told her I was fascinated by her voice.

In love with a voice. I have heard her, she quills frequently on the telephone. Do you think I'd be crazy to ask her to meet me for a cocktail or coffee or something?

NAMELESS, PLEASE
DEAR NAMELESS: You'd be crazy not to. Go ahead and ask her. You have nothing to lose but your illusions.

She laughed and said I had a nice voice too. Period.

Do you think I'd be crazy to ask her to meet me for a cocktail or coffee or something?

Doctor's personal touch important to his practice

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Just before noon every Tuesday and Thursday, an assistant to Dr. James Gordon walks into his waiting room and offers the patients a plate of sandwiches.

When one of his patients has surgery, Gordon's staff sends flowers on the second day after the operation. If a patient refers a friend or relative to the doctor, he makes sure to send a thank-you note.

"It just makes the patients happier," said Gordon, an ophthalmologist. "People try to put a lot of fancy names on it. They call it marketing. It's not that."

Dr. Yorram Hahn, an obstetrician-gynecologist, presents new mothers with brightly decorated baby bibs that bear the inscription, "Special Delivery By Dr. Hahn." He also sends flowers and thank-you notes.

"What's the big deal?" Hahn said. "It helps if you warm the heart a little."

The two St. Louis-area doctors are part of a trend among private practitioners to improve the quality of patient relations and possibly gain a competitive edge in the increasingly congested medical profession.

According to the American Medical Association, the number of medical doctors in patient care nationwide increased more than 12 percent from 1980 to 1983, while group practices increased more than 40 percent from 1980 to 1984.

The 15,485 group practices in 1984 had 140,392 physician positions, almost 60 percent greater than the number of positions associated with group practices in 1980, a medical association spokesperson said.

In addition, chains of neighborhood medical clinics have sprouted in American cities, presenting what are advertised as convenient alternatives to private practices.

The AMA also says the number of health maintenance organizations in the United States increased from 216 in 1979 to 337 in 1984, a 35 percent jump.

Greg M. Korneluk, a Lewiston, N.Y., consultant to physicians, said private practitioners have to emphasize their strength — personalized care — to survive the growing competition for patients.

"What's happening is an evolution of how service is delivered in our society," Korneluk said in a telephone interview. "Five years ago, we were all willing to wait for our hair barber. Now you don't go to a place if you can't get your food right away."

For doctors that means stepping out from behind their charts and records and showing some personal consideration and compassion for patients, Korneluk said.

"It's almost like tunnel vision for a lot of them," he said. "They are so concerned about making the patient get better that they lose sight of the office procedures around them."

Korneluk recently told a two-day seminar he conducted at Christian Hospital — Northeast-Northwest that treating patients in a friendly manner is the best way to ensure return visits and referrals.

For his fee of about $10,000, Korneluk imparted heavy doses of common sense to the 80 doctors who attended the seminar. Hire pleasant receptionists and nurses, and be familiar with the charts and records before meeting with patients. When speaking, use the patients' names and look them in the eye.

Hospital Administrator Riek Van Bokkelen said the consultant was hired because of the importance of doctor-patient relationships.

"Hospitals don't admit patients," Van Bokkelen said. "Doctors do that. ... We provide doctors with educational resources, then they decide what they'll do with it."

Most doctors are never taught the importance of a comfortable office, kind gestures or the personal touch, said Dr. Stephen Hantman, a member of the hospital's staff.

Wedding advice: Marry a rich battery salesman

I took my daughter aside recently and said, "Forget what I said about marrying a doctor. Go for a man who manufactures batteries, and those receding lips will never touch plastic for as long as you live."

It is true. During the Christmas season alone, a man who makes batteries sells enough to let him retire at age 28 and never work another day in his life.

To say that we have moved from the Stone Age to the Battery Age is the greatest understatement of all time. I am not just talking a single battery that I put in a talking robot for my young son. I'm talking four, six and eight batteries that run everything from electronic games to your toothbrush.

We are looking at electronic Christmas cards, new to the market this year ($35 for a box of six) that will require a battery one-sixteenth of an inch thick. We're looking at home computers that do your budget, balance your checkbook, record albums, recipes and inventory your household items... batteries not included.

We're looking at electronic games already in the homes of two million families) and toys in record numbers that need from one to eight batteries to operate.

The camera that Daddy points at the family gathered around the tree needs batteries. So does the little car that your preschooler rides over your foot. Dolls that do robotics do it the easy way... on batteries. Even games that are not hooked up to the television set need batteries to light up and beep.

Don't think for a minute that batteries, like light bulbs, are interchangeable. You can't steal from one to make the other one go. I have purchased products where the batteries for them are available directly from Iron Curtain countries during the months with R in them. (No personal checks, please!)

No, it's definitely a battery market this year. No one wants anything any more that just sits there and does nothing. If it is worth buying, it is worth lighting up, beeping, moving, printing out, beeping, doing a back flip, playing music or lighting.

I told my daughter, "It doesn't matter if a potential mate is three feet tall, looks like a troll and has the personality of a food processor, just so long as he is in batteries."

Just remember a cartoon I saw recently by Roger Bollen. It shows two kids knee-deep in toys with one of them saying to the other, "How many batteries did you get for Christmas?"

"Think about it."

Over 200 germs cause colds

By REDBOOK

You probably won't catch a cold from kissing — but you could get one from shaking hands.

There are some 200 viruses responsible for the common cold, according to an article in the January issue of Redbook, and with them come a series of myths about how the disease is spread.

"Bundle up or you'll catch your death," the old wives' tale warns, but research indicates there's no truth to it.

There are more colds around during the winter months, but the reason is that in winter people spend more time cooped up together indoors, putting their physical contact with cold viruses. Also, a majority of cold-causing viruses are more active in winter.

The chill and draughts of air-conditioning also get blamed for causing colds, but the real culprit is low relative humidity.

In a Canadian study, schools with high relative humidity reported 40 percent fewer cold-related absences than those with low relative humidity. A British study reported low relative humidity "impairs immune response and increases susceptibility to upper respiratory infection."

Rescue helicopter crashes, injuring all three aboard

MONUMENT VALLEY, Utah (AP) — An emergency medical rescue helicopter bound for Colorado struck a power line during takeoff and crashed, injuring three people one critically.

Mike Myers, the pilot of the Air Life helicopter, was in critical but stable condition after he underwent surgery early today at Monument Valley Hospital, officials said.

Hospital Administrator Jack Williams said Myers and two nurses with him who were seriously injured all were later transported to St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Junction, Colo.

Myers suffered internal bleeding, rib fractures, a fractured arm and scalp cuts.

The other two members of the medical flight crew, neonatal flight practitioner Lisa Gaultle and neonatal flight nurse Linda Breley, sustained broken arms and possible internal injuries.

Williams said the helicopter, from Grand Junction, arrived here shortly before 11 p.m. Tuesday to assist in a premature birth. Physicians decided, however, that the infant was healthy and did not need to be transported to the larger medical facility at Grand Junction, he said.

Myers was taking off shortly after 11 p.m. when his chopper struck a power line and went down, Williams said.

Monument Valley lies in a remote, mountainous area of Utah about 250 miles southwest of Grand Junction. The emergency staff of St. Mary's hospital in Grand Junction routinely provides emergency flights via Air Life as needed for the area, said Sister Marianna Bauder, administrator at St. Mary's hospital.

Woman slain; father, sons injured critically in knife attack

SEATTLE (AP) — The wife of a prominent Seattle lawyer was stabbed to death at their home Christmas Eve and the lawyer and his two sons were critically injured, police said.

The King County Medical Examiner's office said today an autopsy would be performed Thursday at 8:32 p.m. Tuesday at the home in the Madrona-Capitol Hill area of the city. Sgt. Joe Santford said.

There were no suspects and no known motive. An intensive investigation was under way this morning in Harborview Medical Center's intensive care unit, nursing supervisor E. Binkley said.

Fog breaks over Seattle, loosening logjam of Christmas air travelers

SEATTLE (AP) — Dense fog that has fouled holiday plans for thousands of travelers for a week thinned slightly Wednesday at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport after officials had to divert at least three flights.

"This is just a brief break. Enjoy it today, because tomorrow we suffer," said National Weather Service specialist Bob Herzog.

The break in the fog, which allowed the most stranded travelers to catch their flights, was due to dry air flowing from the east, Herzog said.

But he warned the air flow was expected to slow during the night, putting Seattle "back in the soup again."

Airport supervisor Pete Wise said operations at Sea-Tac had been nearly normal since Tuesday morning.

Even commuter aircraft were able to land with few restrictions much of Tuesday, said Carl Olsen, Federal Aviation Administration night duty officer.

Three incoming flights were diverted Wednesday morning to Portland, Ore., and those passengers were to be bused to Seattle, said Cheryl Spencer of the FAA regional office in Seattle.

But Wise said fog again lifted by midday, allowing both arrivals and departures.

Pat Calman, an airport operations controller, said there appeared to be no backup of travelers at airport ticket counters.

"We're not that heavily trafficked on Christmas Day," he said.

Most travelers seemed to have been packed with their luggage, Calman said. On Tuesday, the airport reported an unusually large amount of baggage from which passengers had been separated in the turmoil since the fog first intensified enough to snarl air traffic last Wednesday.

The number of flights through the airport was still well below Sea-Tac's normal load of 60 a day, but as the crowd began thinning, Wise said, "the (passenger) backlog's not as big as you'd think."

"I think a lot of people have been able to fly out, either from here or at Boeing Field," a county airport 10 miles to the north.

Church gym must pay back wages

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church-owned Desert Gym must pay nearly $56,000 in back wages to a janitor fired in 1981 for failing to meet church worthiness standards, a federal judge has ruled.

In an order released Tuesday, U.S. District Judge David Winder signed a settlement agreement stipulated by both sides in the 2-year-old lawsuit filed by former employees of three divisions of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The former janitor, Arthur Mayson, was among the plaintiffs who filed suit. He claimed the church discriminated against him when he was fired in April, 1981.

Winder ruled the church, was wrong to fire Mayson because the janitor was not engaged in religious activity and therefore was not exempt from state and federal laws prohibiting dismissal of employees for religious reasons.

In September, Winder said Mayson was entitled to reinstatement with back pay equal to the difference between what he earned since his termination and what he would've earned had he not been fired. The amount set was $58,896.

Winder has not ruled on discrimination claims by six former employees of Beehive Clothing Mills, a church-owned business which manufactures temple clothing for Mormons.

Dying Oregon man receives life-saving gift for Christmas

PORTLAND (AP) — Doctors at Oregon Health Sciences University Hospital gave a dying man the gift of a new heart in the early hours of Christmas Day and he was reported in critical but stable condition following the transplant.

The two hour and 45 minute surgery performed on Daniel V. Acker, 25, of Hillsboro, was only the second such operation ever performed in the state. The first was done on Dec. 4 and the patient, Wesley Merrill, 44, of Battle Ground, Wash., was released from the hospital on Dec. 19.

"Because of severe congestive heart failure before the operation, the patient (Acker) would not have survived another 48 hours without the new heart," said Dr. Adnan Cobanoglu, assistant chief of the hospital's cardiopulmonary surgery division.

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

West says that he is perfect already, there is only one of two places for him, and that is heaven or the lunatic asylum.”
— Henry Ward Beecher.

West's near-perfect defense doesn't get today's job done. East must do everything—right—to beat South's game.

West's club jack was covered in dummy, and South ruffed away East's ace. Trumps were drawn in three rounds and South played his diamond king. Both defenders were careful on this trick. West played his deuce to show an odd number of diamonds, and East refused his ace to isolate dummy's diamonds. So South continued diamonds to East's ace, and it was obvious that East should lead spades. Which side should be lead?

West's East makes the lazy play of the trump blocking, the suit blocking and the deuce can take only two spades more being forced to lead to South's "dead" dummy.

West should have two reasons for making the correct lead of his low spade. First, he should know South's exact distribution, and second, he should know that the game cannot be beaten without three spade winners. Ergo, East must play West for the ace of spades, and the low spade lead is the obvious choice.

'85: Sports' year of lost innocence

By BRUCE LOWITT
The Associated Press

The news of sports spilled off the sports pages and into the news and finance sections — a spillover that, on police blotters — in 1985. Once again, winning or losing occasionally became secondary to how the game was played.

Pitcher Tom Seaver of the Chicago White Sox and Phil Neri of the New York Yankees became baseball's newest 300-game winners. Pete Rose made a different kind of pitch in a television commercial, he said that like any family, baseball had "problems" and was "trying" to solve them.

The one that struck hardest at baseball's wholesome image was drug abuse. Seaver, including Dave Parker and Keith Hernandez, paraded to Pittsburgh to testify that they had used cocaine and knew of others who had. A Philadelphia caterer, Curtis Strong, was convicted of selling cocaine to current or former members of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The new commissioner, Peter Ueberroth, vowed to crack down on drug and alcohol abuse, and implementing a testing program for everyone but major league players. But by year's end, the owners had terminated their drug agreement with the players' union and only acrimony remained.

In college football, Kenneth Davis was touted as a Heisman Trophy candidate and his school, Texas Christian University, a national power by season's end. Both were in disgrace. Davis admitted he and several teammates had been paid to attend the school. They were thrown out of the squad and TCU failed to win a Southwest Conference game.

A newspaper also claimed to have uncovered evidence of improper payments to Texas A&M players under Coach Jackie Sherrill and his predecessor, Tom Wilson. Both denied the allegations.

In college basketball, Villanova shocked defending national champion Georgetown 64-62 in the NCAA title game, ending the Patrick Ewing era. The loss didn't damage his market value. The 7-foot center was drafted No. 1 by the New York Knicks, the winners in the National Basketball Association's seven-team lottery of losers, and signed a 10-year, $21 million contract.

But college basketball, too, was scandalized. John "Hot Rod" Williams, several teammates and other Tulane University students were accused of perjury. A newspaper wrote that 26 Kentucky players had been paid by boosters during former coach Joe B. Hall's 13-year reign.

The scandalizing has become a pre-Olympic tradition continued three years in advance of the Seoul Summer Games, the North Koreans demanding a role as co-host. NBC, burned by the American-led boycott of the 1980 Moscow Games, bought the rights to the Seoul Olympics for between $300 million and $500 million. And Turner Broadcasting System and Soviet sports officials announced the creation of the Goodwill Games, a quadrennial event starting in 1986 in Moscow.

Howard Cosell all but vanished from the broadcast scene, but the caustic criticism expressed in his book "Never Played the Game" aroused as much controversy as Cosell ever did while behind a microphone. ABC subsequently dropped him from its World Series coverage. The network also canceled his highly acclaimed but poorly rated SportsBeat program.

The North American Soccer League, which flourished only a decade ago, died in 1985 while the gentlemanly Major Indoor Soccer League continued to limp along. In May, a riot in Brussels, Belgium, involving British and Italian soccer fans claimed 38 lives and a fire at an antiquated stadium in Bradford, England, killed 53 spectators.

Death also claimed Roger Maris, the New York Yankees' home-run hitter; Brooklyn Dodgers pitchers Burt Hooton and Reggie Mungo, the former a Hall of Fame spiltballer, the latter immortalized in song; ex-Boston Red Sox pitcher Smokey Joe Wood, former major league player and manager; Bob Scheffing, American League umpire; Bill Kunkel, sportscaster; Bob Prince of the Pittsburgh Pirates and Frank Glieber of CBS; golfer Rod Pines; former pro basketball star Marv Zanitsky; Maurice Pender, first president of the NBA; longtime boxing trainer Gus D'Amato; John B. Kelly Jr., president of the U.S. Olympic Committee and Olympic sculler; pro hockey Hall of Famer Eddie Shore; and Frank Selke, Philadelphia Flyers goalie. Pelé Lindbergh, Jake Neville, longtime trainer at Villanova to whom the Wildcats dedicated their NCAA championship, and Riva Ridge, the 1972 Kentucky Derby winner.

Still, sports is supposed to take the world's collective mind off the travail of reality and it generally succeeded in doing so from first pitch to last out, first turn to checked-in flag, kickoff to final gun, starting gate to finish line, tip-off to buzzer.

Rose's successful pursuit of Ty Cobb's hit record overshadowed his success as Cincinnati's manager. The Reds finishing second in the National League West behind the Los Angeles Dodgers. In the NL East, the speed Manager Willie Herzog and pitcher McGee helped St. Louis beat NY's Young Award winner Dwight Gooden and the New York Mets to the title.

In the American League West, Rod Carew passed 3,000 hits but the California Angels wound up one game behind George Brett's Cy Young Award.

The playoffs were expanded by two to a best-of-seven series. Kansas City and St. Louis, after losing the first two games, staged potent-winning comebacks.

The Royals had one more rally left. No team had won the World Series after losing the first two games at home. The Royals did. They were given life in the sixth game by the controversial ninth-inning call of first base umpire Don Denkinger. And in the 11th inning, Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog and pitcher Joaquin Andujar were ejected by Denkinger. Sabershen — a father briefly 24 hours — nailed down the Series and the MVP award with his second complete-game victory.

Andujar was ejected by Denkinger. Sabershen — a father briefly 24 hours — nailed down the Series and the MVP award with his second complete-game victory.

In the National Football League, quarterback Joe Montana became a legend. Super Bowl MVP in January as the San Francisco 49ers buried the Miami Dolphins and their record-breaking quarterback, Dan Marino, 38-16.

Then the United States Football League played its third and probably last spring-summer season, the owners voting to retrench from 14 to nine teams and resume play headed for the NFL next September, 14 months after Baltimore beat Oakland 28-24 for the USFL title.

The USFL signed its third consecutive Heisman Trophy winner, quarterback Doug Flutie, but lost most of its stars — Steve Young, Gary Anderson, Mike Rozier, Reggie pound defensive lineman, goal-line running back and national phenomenon.

The NFL had four new head coaches — Cincinnati's Sam Wyche, Detroit's Darryl Rogers, Indianapolis' Rod Dowhower and Tampa Bay's Leeman Bennett — and Bud Grant returned to Minnesota after a one-year absence. Before the year ended, Bum Phillips quit as New Orleans' coach and two coaches named Campbell were fired — Hugh by Houston and Marion — by Philadelphia. In the Canadian Football League, British Columbia defeated Hamilton 37-21 to win the Grey Cup.

Oklahoma started the season ranked No. 1 in The Associated Press college football poll. Auburn (with Heisman Trophy-winning running back and national phenomenon) and Minnesota were ranked No. 2 and No. 3, respectively.

Los Angeles defeated Boston for the league title. It was the Lakers' ninth title — and their first victory in nine championship meetings with the Celtics.

Along with ending new potential NBA stars included — Indiana's Wayne Tisdale and Seattle's Wayne McDaniel. Two other contrasting newcomers were Manute Bol, Washington's spindly 7-foot-6 Sudanese; and Atlanta's 5-7 Spud Webb.

And there were four new NBA coaches. Philadelphia's Matt Guokas, New Jersey's Dave Wohl, Chicago's Stan Albeck and Seattle's Bernie Bickershoff — and one new city, Sacramento, Calif., new home of the former Kansas City Kings.

Edmonton won its second consecutive National Hockey League Stanley Cup, defeating Philadelphia four games to one, and the Oilers' Wayne Gretzky won his sixth straight NHL award as fifth scoring champion. Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute dedicated Providence for the NCAA hockey title and Czechoslovakia beat Canada to win the World Hockey Championship.

Czechs also won both singles titles at the U.S. Open tennis championships as Ivan Lendl beat John McEnroe and Hana Mandlikova upset Martina Navratilova.

West Germany's Boris Becker became Wimbledon's youngest men's champion, while Navratilova won at Wimbledon and Australia and lost to Chris Evert-Lloyd in the French. Stefan Edberg won the Australian Open and fellow Swede Mats Wilander won the French.

In golf, West German Bernhard Langer won the Masters and Scotland's Sandy Lyle the British Open. Taiwan's T.C. Chen nearly won the U.S. Open before a quadruple-bogey eight on the final day allowed Andy North to slip past him. Hubert Green won his second national championship and Curtis Strange won a single-season record of $342,320 and three tour titles. Similarly, Nancy Lopez won five times and a single-season record $416,473 on the LPGA tour.

The U.S. Ryder Cup team lost to Europe for the first time in 26 years and to Canada in the World Cup.

Michael Spinks became the first light heavyweight boxer ever to defeat the heavyweight champion when he outpointed Larry Holmes, who had moved within one victory of matching the late Rocky Marciano's 49-0 record.

Tony Tubbs took the WBA heavyweight title from Greg Page and Pinklon Thomas retained the WBC heavyweight crown by stopping Mike Weaver.

Marvelous Marvin Hagler stopped Thomas Hearns in the third round to win the undisputed middleweight crown and Donald Curry knocked out Milton McCrory in the second round to unify the welterweight title. In federal court in Manhattan, promoter Don King was acquitted of tax-evasion charges.

Spend a Buck won the Kentucky Derby, the owner Dennis Wink sought greener pastures in New Jersey, passing the remaining Triple Crown races. Spend a Buck then was retired, as was John Henry, the grand dicker who was thought of as racing's all-time money winner.

Tank's Prospect won the Preakness and Creme Fraiche, another gelding, gave trainer Woody Stephens an unprecedented fourth straight Belmont victory. Chief's Crown, the favorite in each Triple Crown race, was the disappointment of the year in those three races and the Breeders' Cup.

Nihilator turned the fastest mile in harness racing history on the same day. Prakas won the Hambletonian in stakes-record time.

NASCAR driver Bill Elliott won 11 auto races and ran his 800 meters all 14 races and won in 27 world marks were surpassed, four by middle-distance runner Valerie Brisco-Hooks. Outdoors, 20 world records were broken, three by British runner Steve Cram.

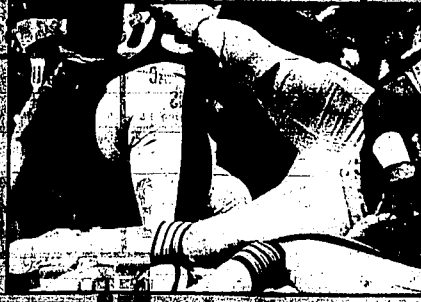

In track and field, an off-year following the 1984 Olympics, Mary Decker Slaney picked herself up from her fall in Los Angeles and won all 14 races she ran, from 500 meters to 5,000 meters and longer. 27 world marks were surpassed, four by middle-distance runner Valerie Brisco-Hooks. Outdoors, 20 world records were broken, three by British runner Steve Cram.

Since 1978, when Alabama captured the national championship over Southern California despite a Eight teams changed managers among them — to the NFL. One thing is still his is $1.2 billion antitrust suit against the older league, which insists it has no desire to merge with the USFL.

When the NFL resumed play, Chicago won 12 in a row before running into Miami, the league's last perfect team. The Bears also had the game's biggest name — William "The Refrigerator" Perry, a 308-back Bo Jackson), Iowa (with the Heisman runner-up, quarterback Chuck Long), Florida — and finally Penn State took turns at the top. The third-ranked Sooners wound up playing the unbeaten Nittany Lions in the Orange Bowl on New Year's night, perhaps for the national championship.

No. 2 Miami, which had a Sugar Bowl date with Tennessee and a shot at the title as well, ended the Gerry Faust era at Notre Dame by demolishing the not-so-Fighting 24-14 regular-season loss to the Trojans, the final poll to pick the No. 1 team, has been pretty much cut-and-dry.

The selection of Alabama again in 1979, Georgia in 1980, Clemson in 1981, Penn State in 1982 and Miami (Fla.) in 1983 didn't cause much of an uproar. Even Brigham Young, the team everybody loved to despise, was a solid winner in 1984 with an unargued 13-0 record.

It could all be academic this year, too, if the "Pac-10" state meets third-ranked Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl. But there is one very large "what if" — what if Oklahoma, 10-1, defeats Penn State?

Traditionally a highly ranked team that knocks off No. 1 in bowl game vaults to the top spot (see 1983, Miami 31, Nebraska 30; 1982, Penn State 27, Georgia 23; 1978, Alabama 14, Penn State 7; 1977, Notre Dame 38, Texas 10, etc., etc.). Ironically, the problem this time is that while Penn State and Oklahoma will be dueling in the Orange Bowl, the team that usually calls that field home, the second-ranked Miami Hurricanes, will be facing eighth-ranked Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl.

And not only does Miami also own a 10-1 record, but the Hurricanes handed Oklahoma its only setback, 27-14 back on Oct. 19. It took three weeks of yelling and screaming by Coach Jimmy Johnson after that triumph before Miami leaped ahead of Oklahoma in the Associated Press poll.

Then there's fourth-ranked Iowa, with a 10-1 record, which will meet No. 13 UCLA in the Rose Bowl. The possibilities are almost as numerous as the National Football League's playoff formulas.

The No. 1 ranking again proved hard to hold in 1985. Oklahoma was the preseason choice, but the Sooners didn't play their first game until Sept. 28 and slipped to No. 2 when Auburn walloped Southwest Louisiana 49-7 on Sept. 7.

The Tigers were No. 1 for three weeks but lost to Tennessee 38-20 on Sept. 28 and gave way to Iowa. The Hawkeyes enjoyed a five-week reign before losing to Ohio State 22-13 on Nov. 2.

Florida, a team on probation, became No. 1 for the first time ever amidst a storm of controversy. The brouhaha and the rankings both lasted just one week. Georgia took care of the Gators 24-3 on Nov. 9 and Penn State moved up to No. 1 for the final five weeks of the regular season.

BYU was not a candidate to repeat its 1984 title although the Cougars had an outstanding 11-2 regular season and won or shared the Western Athletic Conference championship (with 10th-ranked Air Force) for the 10th year in the row. One of the Cougars' losses was a stunning 24-16 upset at the hands of lowly Texas-El Paso, which has won only 15 games in the last 11 years — and just that "one" this season while losing 11.

The nation's top two teams, Penn State and Miami, were both independents while Oklahoma won the Big Eight crown and Iowa took its first outright Big Ten title in 27 years. Other conference champs were Tennessee (Southeastern), Texas A&M (Southwest), UCLA (Pac-10), Maryland (Atlantic Coast), Tulsa (Missouri Valley), Bowling Green (Mid-American) and Fresno State Pacific Coast Athletic Association).

And the rest of the bowl lineup looked like this:
Coe nation's top two teams, Penn State and Miami, were both independents while Oklahoma won the Big Eight crown and Iowa took its first outright Big Ten title in 27 years. Other conference champs were Tennessee (Southeastern), Texas A&M (Southwest), UCLA (Pac-10), Maryland (Atlantic Coast), Tulsa (Missouri Valley), Bowling Green (Mid-American) and Fresno State Pacific Coast Athletic Association).

But it was West Germany's Becker, Slobodan Zivonjovich of Yugoslavia and Connors who exemplified the vast changes taking place on the men's tour.

Becker became the youngest, the first German and the first unseeded player to win the prestigious men's singles title at Wimbledon. Zivonjovich upset Wilander at Wimbledon and ended the year by upsetting McEnroe in the Australian Open.

For Connors, a five-time U.S. Open champion and winner of two Wimbledon titles, 1985 was the first year he failed to win an official tournament since he turned pro in 1972.

As befits such a year, 1985 saw four different players capture the men's singles in the Grand Slam tournaments: Wilander taking the French Open, Becker winning Wimbledon, Lendl capturing the U.S. Open and Sweden's Stefan Edberg emerging as the Australian Open champion.

In contrast, Navratilova and Llyod met in the final of three of the four Grand Slam tournaments, Llyod winning the French and Navratilova capturing Wimbledon and the Australian Open. But Mandlikova stopped Llyod in the semifinals of the U.S. Open, and defeated Navratilova in the championship match to win the crown.

Yet, while the two top women dominated, there is a growing number of young pretenders to the throne including Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, Steffi Graf and Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany, Czechoslovakia's Helena Sukova, Sweden's Catarina Lindqvist, Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini, Canada's Carling Bassett, Yugoslavia's Andrea Temesvari and Americans Pam Shriver, Zina Garrison, Kathy Rinaldi, Bonnie Gadussek, Stephanie Rehe, Terry Phelps and Kate Compert.

There were 10 first-time winners on the men's Nabisco Grand Prix including Becker, but probably none was more popular than Tom Gullikson, a doubles specialist who won at Newport, R.I., at the age of 33. Others, grabbing their first career titles included Tim Mayotte, Larry Stefanki, Paul Annacone, Matt Anger, Argentina's Horacio de la Pena and Martin Jaitte.

Czechoslovakia's Miloslav Mecir, Italy's Claudio Panatta, West Germany's Andreas Maurer and Ricky Osterthur, Spain's Sergio Casal and Diego Perez, and Sweden's Peter Lundgren and Jan Gunnarsson, both Navratilova, 29, and Llyod, who will be 31 on Dec. 21, have said they will continue their rivalry the longest in the history of the sport and Connors, 33, has given no indication he is considering retiring. But two former Grand Slam champions, Britain's Virginia Wade and Romania's Ilie Nastase, say they have played their last singles competition.

For McEnroe, 1985 was a very un-McEnroe-like year. He lost his No. 1 ranking to Lendl, reached the final in only one Grand Slam tournament — the U.S. Open — and finished the year with a 21-day suspension after surpassing $7,500 in fines. Still, he captured eight Grand Prix tournaments and posted a 71-8 match record in 1985.

Only Lendl did better. The new year hopefully will help bring order to the game as the tennis year will switch to a calendar year. But because of the changes, the Nabisco Masters in December, the Australian Open will return in January and the year-ending tournaments will be just that: the Virginia Slims Championships being played in November and the Nabisco Masters in December.

Aerial harassment of big game can imperil pilot's health

The buck dropped in his tracks, killed with a single slug that broke his spine.

My shot had tumbled him painlessly into the tall sagebrush which choked the steep draw leading into Indian Springs Creek in the South Hills near Twin Falls.

The neck shot had been necessary for two reasons: first, it eliminated the animal's suffering and second, it prevented a wounded animal from running away from me.

As I walked back and forth through the sagebrush, I realized that there were about a dozen similar outcroppings and the buck was nearly as hard to find dead as he'd been while still living.

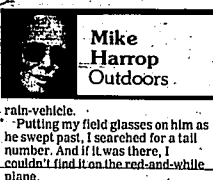

And as I thumbed through the shoulder-high sage, I heard an airplane dropping along below me in the canyon.

"As I located the animal and dressed it out, I realized that the pilot was methodically flying up each draw leading off the creek below, harassing game as he went.

I'd finished the chore and had climbed out onto the flat above my kill when the small aircraft came up the draw where I'd been hunting.

I was through hunting, so I was more curious than angry as the pilot buzzed me about 20 feet off the ground.

And watching him fly, it occurred to me that the guy wasn't really a pilot—he was operating an all-terrain-vehicle.

Mike Harrop
Outdoors

"Pulling my field glasses on him as he swept past, I searched for a tail number. And if it was there, I couldn't find it on the red-and-white plane.

Using an airplane to harass wildlife is illegal at any time, but it can be fatal to wildlife in the fall if it moves them toward a hunter or if it uses up energy reserves they need to escape predators and make it through rough weather.

Of course, using aircraft to harass game is illegal because it represents a danger to pilots, game animals and hunters.

As the pilot buzzed past me, I thought of the carbine in my hand and decided this pilot was endangering himself more than he threatened me or the game animals.

Years before, I wrestled with myself and barely maintained enough control to avoid trying to shoot an airplane from the sky.

I'd been hunting antelope in the Alberta sand hills north of Tabor, trying desperately to reach a line of antelope in the path of a herd of antelope I was stalking.

My hands, elbows and knees were bleeding from crawling through the prickly bark and abrasive sand. It was warm, and I'd forgotten to bring my water bottle, so my mouth and eyes felt hot and dry.

Shaking with exhaustion, I finally reached the sand dune toward which the antelope were browsing. I'd made it ahead of them, and my prospects were excellent.

I crawled to the top of the dune and peered through the sparse grass growing there. Sure enough, the antelope were continuing toward me, perhaps hoping for shelter.

Seen through field glasses earlier, the antelope had been working their way toward the lee of a particularly large dune that offered some protection from the howling wind.

My dune had placed me upwind of the feeding herd's probable course, but antelope depend more on their eyes than on their noses. And besides, it was the only feasible stalk going. The country was too open on the downwind side of the herd's line of approach. I hoped they'd be in range before they reached a point completely downwind from my blind.

From the air, the stalk was easy to see. I was wearing a blaze-orange jacket, and antelope stand out from the background colors because of their white rumps.

I could imagine an eagle seeing my stalk, or perhaps a flight of migrating songbirds.

But when the aircraft made a low pass over the dune, it startled me. He gained a few hundred feet of altitude, then dove on the antelope, driving them away from me.

It wasn't bad enough that he'd ruined my stalk—he had to return and fly in slow circles over the dune where I stood, wagging his wings to mock me.

And I thought of the rifle in my hand and realized that the slow-flying aircraft was a sipping duck.

I began to foucher the weapon twice, then forced myself to lower it. The pilot deserved to be punished for what he'd done, but he didn't deserve to die for it. I'd settle for getting him in a dark alley some night.

Of course, that night in an alley never came—they never do. And if I did meet that pilot, I'd never know his identity.

But someday, somewhere—someone is going to watch a pilot ruin his hunt and think of the rifle in his hand.

He is going to shoulder the weapon and shoot straight, and a tragedy will be born.

But before that happens, many hunters will shoot many cartridges at offending airplanes before hitting anything vital.

And game wardens won't need complaints complete with tail numbers of aircraft to identify problem pilots—they'll be able to discover offenders by the number of holes in their airplanes.

Westerners fight acid rain

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

A coalition of conservation groups and seven states, convinced coal-fired smelters and power plants are the major cause of acid rain, are urging Washington to enforce federal laws designed to stop the hazardous emissions.

A five-year acid-rain study in the Rocky Mountains proves there is "a linear relationship from acid rain and emissions from distant sources."

"If we cut the emissions in half, we'll cut the acid rain in half," Dr. Michael Oppenheimer, an atmospheric physicist for the Environmental Defense Fund, said in the study.

"As far as science is concerned, the case is closed. Acid rain is destroying our human and natural environment and we know what to do about it," he said.

Acid rain is caused by sulfur and nitrogen in coal, oil, gasoline and other fossil fuels. When the fuel is burned, sulfur and nitrogen byproducts are spewed into the atmosphere. Carried to high altitudes, they mix with water in a chemical reaction, forming a weak acid which falls to earth as acid rain.

"We've demonstrated the pollutants can travel hundreds of miles and this can substitute the notion that Midwestern power plants are causing the bulk of the acid rain across the bulk of the Eastern United States," Oppenheimer said in a telephone interview from New York.

The study analyzed federal data from monitoring stations in Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho and Arizona. Data on air pollutants, including sulfur, from those stations was compared with emissions from 11 copper smelters in Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada and Utah.

Some or all of those smelters were shut down at different times during the study period due to strike or economic problems.

"These pollutants were traveling hundreds of miles and being deposited in the high Rockies and northward," Oppenheimer said. "One can say the cluster of smelters in southern Arizona is contributing more than half of the acid in the acid rain in Colorado."

On Dec. 5, several environmental groups, including the EDF, and the seven states—New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Minnesota, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Vermont—filed suit asking U.S. District Court to order the Environmental Protection Agency to issue new emission standards for power plants.

Oppenheimer estimated a 50 percent cleanup would cost $5 billion during the next 10 years and could be done by installing equipment to wash the sulfur out of the smoke.

He said the EPA's own studies show the cost of acid rain damage in the East alone is $7 billion per year.

"When we add it all, we see the cost of the damage is far less than the cost of a cleanup program," Oppenheimer said.

DU gun auctions add acreage to U.S. refuge system

PORTLAND — Members of Ducks Unlimited, Inc., the nation's largest private waterfowl organization, has raised over $1.4 million to acquire wetlands for the national wildlife refuge system, according to Interior Secretary Don Hodel.

The collective contribution is the largest single cash donation ever made to the migratory bird conservation fund. This fund is used by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to buy wetlands and other wildlife habitat for ducks, geese and other waterfowl.

Accepting the record donation from DU President Peter H. Coors, Secretary Hodel said "Ducks Unlimited" has been a major partner of ours in the ongoing duck stamp campaign. DU's more than 600,000 members in North America have given a tremendous boost to our effort to protect vital wetlands and waterfowl resources."

Ducks Unlimited raised the money in 1984 during the 50th anniversary of the federal duck stamp through the auction of 1,000 limited-edition, custom-grade 12-gauge shotguns. DU purchased the firearms from Sturm, Ruger and Company for auction to DU members. The organization's annual fund raising banquets held by local chapters throughout the United States and Canada.

The over-and-under shotguns bear engravings of the 1934 and 1984 duck stamps and interior department and DU logos. The auctions raise $1,420,900 from DU members with the largest single big topping $7,000.

Hodel serves as chairman of the migratory bird conservation commission which will oversee the expenditure of the DU money.

"Wetlands conservation is an investment in the future," he said. "While their values to wildlife and fisheries are readily apparent, they also serve the added function of controlling floods, restoring water quality and recharging groundwater. Their preservation is simply good stewardship for the next generation. DU's historic donation is a fine example of the spirit-of-my-take-pride-in-America theme by which we at the interior department hope to encourage all Americans to share a greater awareness and take greater responsibility for the wise management of the nation's public lands and waters."

Coors, president of the brewing division of the Adolph Coors Company, reaffirmed Hodel's comment saying, "long after this money is spent, it will continue to have an impact. It is more of an investment than a grant. The waterfowl and the hundreds of other species that use wetlands will be its beneficiaries. Someday, in the distant future, some youngster somewhere in North America will gaze up and see the magnificent waterfowl that will be produced on the lands this money will secure. The 600,000 members of Ducks Unlimited are proud that we've conserved the resource for those who will follow."

Ducks Unlimited was organized in 1934 to help perpetuate North American waterfowl and other wildlife through the preservation and restoration of wetlands in breeding areas in Canada, where the majority of the continent's ducks and geese are produced. Recently, DU expanded its efforts to include wetland preservation in the United States as well as protection of wintering areas for waterfowl in Mexico.

SDale, of the duck stamp, know formally as the migratory bird hunting and conservation stamp, is the principal way that money is raised for the migratory bird conservation fund.

The stamp must be purchased by all waterfowl hunters 16 years of age or older. About two million hunters and other conservationists buy the $7.50 revenue stamp each year. Since 1934, more than 4.5 million acres of wetlands for wildlife have been acquired for the national wildlife refuge system through the duck stamp program.

The migratory bird conservation commission acts as the federal government's real estate agent. It studies areas proposed as migratory bird refuges and evaluates their locations and acquisition costs and ultimately decides which areas will be purchased or leased and added to the refuge system.

The commission includes Hodel, secretary of agriculture John R. Block, secretary of transportation Elizabeth H. Dole, Senators Thad Cochran and David Pryor and Representatives Silvio Conte and John Dingell and the chief conservation officer of each state where a land purchase is proposed.

Fly fishers plant eggs in Boise River

BOISE (AP) — The Boise Valley Fly Fishermen's Club has given Mother Nature a hand, planting 3,000 brown trout eggs in stream beds feeding into the Boise River.

The 200-member club hopes to establish the basis for natural reproduction of the fish in the River Run area by planting the eggs, club member Bob Juola said Saturday.

More than 50 club members, working with the Idaho Fish and Game Department, brooded near-freezing water temperatures to plant the Whitlock-Viebert boxes containing fertilized fish eggs.

Normally a female brown trout finds a spot where water tumbles over loose gravel to plant her eggs, according to Juola, a math professor at Boise State University.

The female wiggles her body back and forth in the gravel to dig a little hole. When the male swims up beside her, she lays her eggs, and the male ejects milt, which fertilizes the eggs, Juola said.

Afterward, the female swims a little ways and does another dance that covers the eggs with rocks and gravel. The eggs stay in place until they hatch and the fish swim away.

The Whitlock-Viebert boxes are jaded, tilted, sand-filled and are almost empty of more eggs to survive than would survive under nature's system, Juola said.

World champ says caller, not call fools the ducks

STUTTGART, Ark. (AP) — Butch Richenback, who makes duck calls for some of the best quackers in the world, says it's the caller, and not the call that makes the difference. "The caller is the key," Richenback said recently as he watched the World's Championship Duck Calling Contest. "If the caller don't put it in the call, it don't come out. If he puts it in there right, then he can call a duck."

Richenback makes "Rich-N-Tone" calls in his shop at Stuttgart, the kind of call used by 1985 world champion Mike Koller of Kansas City, Mo.; 1985 Champion of Champions David Starks of Stuttgart; women's world champion Jennifer Gill of Stuttgart; the Junior world's champion and the Arkansas state cham— pion. The Rich-N-Tone calls are hand-drafted from a variety of woods, acrylic and what Richenback calls imitation ivory. "I just make one style, designed it myself," said the 1972 world champion caller and winner in 1975 of the Champion of Champions contest, which is held every five years. When Richenback, 39, won his titles, he used a Dixie Mallard call designed and built by D.M. "Chick" Majors of Stuttgart, the 1945 world champion. "He taught me everything I know. He taught me how to make calls and how to blow them, how to tune them," Richenback said. "The business of making duck calls keeps Richenback from using one."

very often. "When you work on duck calls until three or four in the morning, you don't feel much like going hunting," he said. "You don't feel like doing much except going to bed. This was supposed to be a hobby."

The business expanded, mostly by word-of-mouth, and keeps expanding, with a new Rich-N-Tone model designed by Starks and due out in January. "I ship them everywhere," Richenback said. "I shipped three dozen to Japan about three years ago. I've got them in Canada. I know I've sent one to England. "Don't have a distributor. I do that myself. They call and order and I send them."

Richenback said his calls are 4 to 5 inches long and are made out of cocobolo, rosewood, bois d'arc, cedar, walnut, teak, dywood and other woods. "I sell them faster than I can make them," he said. The wood calls take about 45 minutes to make and sell for $30. The acrylic call costs $100 because it takes about three hours to make, Richenback said. Starks is a full-time hunting and fishing guide, said the call he designed is bigger than the standard Rich-N-Tone to hold more air and produce a bigger sound. "It's a little louder and has a little more duckier sound," he said. Starks' 11-month-old son has his own Richenback-built caller. "We start them out real young around here," Richenback said.
