Economy worries analysts

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Orders to U.S. factories rose a modest 1 percent in November — even though demand for durable goods fell for the third consecutive month, raising concern among economists about the strength of the economy heading into the new year.

The Commerce Department said Thursday that factory orders totaled $34 billion in November, up $1 billion over the October level and the first increase in three months.

However, all of the strength came in demand for nondurable goods, which shot up by 2.5 percent, the biggest increase in this category in five years.

Demand for durable goods, items such as cars and appliances that are expected to last three or more years, fell by 0.3 percent. This setback followed even steeper declines in September and October of 0.9 percent and 2 percent, Because orders for nondurable goods are filled as quickly as they are placed, they provide little indication of future production. However, analysts said the string of declines in durable-goods orders was particularly troubling because it could be signaling future plant shutdowns and job layoffs.

"We have been forecasting a slow-down coming into the first half of 1986 and this evidence that it is occurring," said David Berson, an economist with the forecasting firm of Wharton-Econometrics in Philadelphia. "This shows that U.S. firms are still finding the trade situation particularly difficult."

Reagan calls drug traffic, terrorism menace to hemisphere

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — On the eve of his departure for Mexico and a meeting with President Miguel de la Madrid, President Reagan said Thursday that drug trafficking and terrorism — represent the most insidious and dangerous threats to the hemisphere.

And a senior administration official told reporters traveling with Reagan that "fleeting and terrorism" — represent the most wealthy drug dealers could soon become a insidious and dangerous threat to the hemispheric political force in Mexico as they "sphere today."

On the heels of a New Year's day exchange in written replies to "questions submitted by the Mexican news agency, Noticias de Mexico, Reagan charged that Soviet attempts to establish communist dictatorships in the Americas continue to be an obstacle to improved U.S.-Soviet relations."

Reagan and de la Madrid during their four hours of talks, Reagan complimented the Mexican government for showing "it has the

U.S. presses for broad economic sanctions against Libya

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan scorned Libyan leader Muammar Khadafy on Thursday as someone "who likes it all right to shoot 11-year-old girls," and the United States appealed to other nations to sign up for sanctions that have already cut U.S.-Libyan trade to a trickle.

Reagan, winding up a week-long vacation in California, was asked by reporters to comment on Khadafy's threat to hit back at Americans if the United States retaliates militarily for the Palestinian terrorist attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports Dec. 27.

"I don't answer folks who think it's all right to shoot 11-year-old girls," Reagan said in his first comment on the airport assaults in which 16 travelers and three terrorists were killed.

Among the victims was Natasha Simpson, the 11-year-old daughter of the Associated Press news editor, Michael Fetterman.

Since the raid last Friday, the administration has accused Libya of harboring Abu Nidal, the reputed leader of the terrorists. The United States has also said that military retaliation is one of the responses under consideration.

Khadafy countered with a warning that such action would lead to "tit for tat," with Libyans harassing

"American citizens in their own streets."

Evolving Reagan's rejection of Khadafy's remarks, State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said: "We particularly abhor Khadafy's making excuses for remarks."

Khadafy voices war threat

The Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Libya — Col. Muammar Khadafy has warned that any reprisal against Libya in response to the airport attacks with the airport attacks at Rome and Vienna could spark a war that eventually reaches American and Israeli areas.

The 43-year-old radical Libyan leader quoted by the official news agency JANA, threatened Wednesday that an assault on Libya would prompt him to "declare war" in the Mediterranean and in all the Middle East."

He called Palestinian guerrilla in Libya "the true sons of the martyred" — the 11-year-old girls who were killed in the airport attacks.

Khadafy said Libya has taken on the responsibility of "defending the people of Palestine" — the "field operations" of Palestinian fighters.

Assaults were launched against them

White-tie JANA reporter did not directly refer to the twin airport attacks on Dec. 27. Khadafy was quoted as saying that Palestinians are acting "as a reply to what Israeli fighter planes did in Tunisia when they massacred tens of Palestinians there."

Israeli planes bombed Palestine Liberation Organization headquarters in Tunis on Oct. 1, killing at least 60 Tunisians and Palestinians.

Khadafy said Libya has taken on the responsibility of "defending the people of Palestine" — the "field operations" of Palestinian fighters.

He said that as a result of trade restrictions imposed in recent years, U.S. exports of military equipment and high-technology to Libya have stopped; total exports have fallen from $860 million in 1979 to under $200 million in 1984; and a U.S. ban on imports of Libyan oil has restricted imports of oil products in the United States from $5.5 billion in 1983 to $6 billion in 1984.

"There's no doubt these measures, of course, would be more effective if they were undertaken more widely by the international community," he added.

Many European nations — including some close U.S. allies — purchase Libyan oil and maintain full diplomatic relations with the Khadafy regime, despite American pleas over the past few years.

Redman said sanctions "are actions best taken by the international community on a broad-based basis. If they're going to be effective they're going to have to be implemented forcefully by the international community and not just by one nation or a handful of nations."

He said that while such actions hurt business, "we regard the cost as justified by the importance of demonstrating U.S. opposition to Khadafy's unacceptable policies."

Redman also repeated State Department warnings against U.S. citizens traveling to Libya. He said there are 1,500 Americans in that country — 4,500 fewer than before a 1981 travel ban — and that their welfare is in danger "because of the unpredictability of actions by the Khadafy regime."

Blaze in Boston office building forces hundreds to flee

BOSTON (AP) — A smoky fire broke out at the Prudential Center on Thursday, killing at least one dozen people and forcing hundreds of people to evacuate the 50-story office building authorities said.

Twenty office workers and four firefighters were injured in the 3 p.m. MST blaze, which was brought under control about two hours later, said Fire Commissioner Leo Stapleton. Most of the injured re-

"They are running out of oxygen bottles," said Capt. Matthew Corbett, a fire department spokesman. "We are bringing them in as fast as we can. We don't know how many people are up there. We don't know how many people are hurt."

The fire apparently broke out on the 30th floor, which was vacant except for construction equipment and spread to at least two other floors after blowing out several windows, Corbett said.

The fire-burned construction materials, lighting fixtures, ceiling tiles and carpeting, Stapleton said.

"If there had been sprinklers, this building came over a loudspeaker a short time later."

"Halfway down the stairs, he said, adding that automatic sprinklers are only now being installed. "People were running around, screaming and running when the building was constructed in the early 1960s."

A restaurant on the 32nd floor began filling with smoke about 3:15 p.m. MST, said Dot Kayes, a waitress. The order to evacuate the which is on the building's 4th floor, said some employees who had gone into the building had been driven back by heavy white smoke. The station switched operators to a different location an hour after the fire began and employees evacuated.

Eric Medoff, who works on the 10th floor of the building, said he began smelling smoke about 3:15 p.m. MST, then heard an alarm go off.

Hart's decision due Saturday

DENVER (AP) — U.S. Sen. Gary Hart's expected announcement Saturday not to seek re-election in 1986 would leave two of the top three statewide offices open and probably set up a Senate race between two popular congressmen.

Gov. Richard Lamm, outspoken and highly regarded by voters, announced he would not seek an office in 1986 but would write, travel and lecture instead.

Hart, 49, probably will not talk openly about the presidency during Saturday's gathering of 300 friends and reporters at a restaurant in Evergreen, a scenic town in the mountain foothills west of Denver.

Airliner engine catches fire

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A small fire broke out in an engine of an Eastern Airlines jet carrying 186 people to Miami Thursday, forcing it to return to the Juan Santa Maria Airport, airport officials said.

A minor explosion occurred in an engine shortly after Flight 918 took off Thursday morning, said officials at the control tower, who did not want to be identified by name.

Rescue crews and firefighters were brought to the airport tarmac, but the plane landed without incident.

"Everything was restrained at the airport for evaluation," Eastern spokesman Glenn Parsons said.

Nigerians nabbed in drug raid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine Nigerian nationals, including a self-described tribal chief, were arrested and $3 million worth of heroin was seized in raids on what authorities called "high level heroin traffickers" in the Washington area, federal officials said Thursday.

Federal authorities have in the past year said that Nigeria has become a major source of heroin in the Washington area.

The New Year's Eve arrests came after seven months of undercover investigation that was capped when DEA agents seized 10 pounds of heroin from Lawrence O. Kulety, 29, at a residence Thursday afternoon in downtown Washington, said Carl L. Jackson, special agent in charge of the Drug Enforcement Administration Washington field office.

Tennessee prisons meet order

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The state attorney general told a federal judge on Thursday that the state had complied with a court order to reduce the population of its crowded prison system to less than 7,019 inmates.

Attorney General Mike Cody also told U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Higgins that only three of 14 state prisons exceeded their capacities, as specified in another court order, and that they should reach the proper levels in weeks.

AIDS victim will appear on Italian TV

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ryan White, the 16-year-old AIDS victim who has been banned from school, received Christmas presents and greetings from around the world and will fly to Rome next month to appear on Italian television, his mother said Thursday.

Jeanne White said in a telephone interview from her Kokomo home that Ryan and her daughter, Andrea, 12, "are looking forward to it. I got him a suitcase for Christmas for the trip."

She said the "three" would fly to Rome on Feb. 1 as guests of Italian State television RAI-Radio Television Italiano, and would appear Feb. 3 on the television newsmagazine "Italia Sera."

Linda Griffin, U.S. correspondent for RAI, said in a telephone interview from New York that the trip is contingent on Ryan flying up to it. If he is unable to travel, Ryan may appear via a satellite hookup, she said.

But Mrs. White said Ryan, who spent 44 days last fall in an Indianapolis hospital, "is doing real good. He now weighs 74 pounds. He was down to 54 pounds when he was in the hospital."

Mrs. White said Ryan, a hemophiliac who contracted AIDS through a transfusion, received 150

Christmas greetings from around the world. Flowers arrived from Hawaii and San Diego and "There were cards from Japan, Ecuador, places I've never heard of," she said.

Christmas Eve, a man from Indianapolis drove up and gave Ryan a chess set with a hand-carved wood table," she added. "He got several stuffed bears. There were donations of money, mostly small bills. He spent a lot of it buying comic books. He likes comic books, so he nearly bought out the store."

Griffin said the "three" — Ryan, his mother and Andrea — "will be asked to talk about their problems over there. They want to talk to Ryan about being in the middle of this for a year now; the social aspect of it."

"The particular case of Ryan has had a lot of publicity," she said. "They picked up on that in Europe."

Ryan's doctors discovered in December 1984 he had contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome through the blood products he takes for treatment of hemophilia.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is an affliction in which the body's immune system becomes unable to resist disease. AIDS, caused by a virus, was first identified in male homosexuals, hemophiliacs and intravenous drug abusers. As of Dec. 2, 1985, AIDS had struck 15,172 people in the United States and claimed 7,777 lives.

Ryan spent last year in a nationally publicized struggle between his mother, who wants Ryan returned to the normal classroom environment, and officials of the Western School Corp., who refuse to admit him because of fears that he could pass on the deadly disease to other students.

He missed so much of the 1984-85 school year that of his 10 months, school officials said he would have to repeat the seventh grade.

During the summer, Superintendent L.O. Smith said Ryan could not register for the fall term because so little is known about AIDS.

Mrs. White then went to court to have her son reinstated.

Since September, he has listened at home via a telephone hookup to his classes.

Mrs. White said she and her attorney would file a civil suit against the Indiana Board of Special Education Appeals.

The board will hear school attorneys argue against the findings of health officer Kathleen Angelone, who ruled in late November that Ryan should be admitted to class under state Board of Health guidelines.

One form possible weapon against AIDS.

FDA approves marketing of new drug

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration on Thursday approved marketing of a new drug, mentioned as a possible weapon against AIDS, to treat severe cases of a respiratory ailment that claims the lives of about 5,000 infants each year.

The FDA approved the sale of an aerosol form of the antiviral drug ribavirin, which in a different form is being tested against the AIDS virus. Its effectiveness against AIDS has not been proven, the agency noted.

The agency gave its approval to use of the drug for severe cases of respiratory syncytial virus, often known as RSV, which is considered a major cause of lower respiratory disease in the world.

ICN Pharmaceuticals Inc., the Costa Mesa, Calif., firm that produces the drug, said about 400,000 infants are affected by RSV infections each year in the United States.

Most cases are relatively mild, with symptoms resembling a cold. But an estimated 95,000 to 143,000 cases require hospitalization. About 5 percent of those patients die each year, the company said, with infant suffering from congenital heart disease at much higher risk of death than otherwise normal children.

The drug, being marketed under the trade name Virazole, is administered as a fine mist that is breathed into the child's lungs oxygen tent for lengthy periods — 12 to 18 hours a day for three to seven days — while hospitalized.

Dr. Frank Young, the FDA commissioner, said the use of ribavirin should be restricted to severe cases of RSV infection because of serious side effects from the drug. A small number of infants being treated with ribavirin died of cardiac arrest, though it was unknown whether the deaths were caused by the drug or the disease, the FDA agency's approval includes a list of recommended uses and warnings, called the product labeling, which specifies the conditions of use.

However, the FDA's specifications are not binding on physicians, merely advisory. An agency official said a doctor "could choose to use ribavirin for AIDS patients, although she questions the wisdom of such an action."

The use of an unapproved drug by a physician is considered the practice of medicine, said FDA spokeswoman Payne Peterson. "They can use it for whatever they decide."

But she questioned whether a physician would go beyond the FDA labeling. Other uses have not been subject to the same exhaustive testing as the approved use, and the aerosol version is not even being tested against AIDS.

Cabin fire preceded crash of Nelson's DC-3

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — A heavy-blaze had broken out in the cabin of the DC-3 airplane that crashed, killing singer Rick Nelson and six officers, federal officials said Thursday night.

Four of the five fire extinguishers aboard the craft, however, went unused as the seven perished in Tuesday's crash near De Kalb, Texas, from smoke inhalation and burns, said National Transportation Safety Board Chairman James Burnett.

All of the bodies were in the front of the plane, close to the cockpit, Burnett said.

Burnett, speaking at a news conference, said there were no indications of structural failure aboard the plane, a rebuilt C-47 that was 42 years old.

He said scientists were checking soot left on the bodies' skins to determine what was burning in the plane, which was carrying the entertainer, his fiancee and five members of his band to a New Year's Eve appearance in Dallas.

The only identifiable pieces of the plane remaining are a charred wing section lodged in a tree, a jagged tail section and a broken nose piece, Burnett said.

Accounts by the crash's only two survivors, pilot Brad Rane and co-pilot Kenneth Ferguson, will play a key role in determining what caused the crash, he said.

Pilots have the permission to talk to reporters, but Burnell cannot talk, he added.

He dodged yes or no answers to questions for about two minutes, Burnett said.

When Rane was asked where he first noticed smoke, he indicated in the cabin, Burnett said.

Authorities did not yet know what caused the fire or what was burning, he said.

The NTSB chairman said officials have not been able to find maintenance records on the DC-3, and federal records still show the plane registered to Century Equipment Co. in Los Angeles.

Century says it sold the plane to Nelson in May 1985, but Burnett said there was no transfer of title.

Although aircraft cannot be flown unless such a transfer is completed, Burnett noted that the transfer papers could have been lost in a bureaucratic shuffle.

Bank, 34, was in fair condition in St. Michael Hospital in Texarkana; Ferguson, 40, was in serious condition in the University of Arkansas Medical Center at Little Rock. Both suffered second- and third-degree burns and smoke inhalation.

Fugitive lawyer prepared to stand trial

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Since he returned last year from 13 years in hiding, Stephen Bingham has been preparing for his trial on charges arising from a deadly prison rampage involving a gun that prosecutors say he smuggled to an inmate.

Now, the onetime radical Berkeley lawyer says he's ready to face trial, starting Monday, on two murder charges and one conspiracy count.

"I'm going to get through with it," Bingham said in a recent interview. "I want to get this behind me. The only way I can have this is through a verdict!"

Bingham is accused of smuggling a gun into San Quentin State Prison on Aug. 21, 1971. The gun was used in a cellblock shootout that left six people dead.

"I want people to know I didn't do this," said Bingham, the 43-year-old son of a prominent Connecticut family. "It's the most important thing in the world to me right now."

Prosecutors allege Bingham slipped the semi pistol to prison revolutionaries during a meeting in an interview booth. Jackson allegedly hid the gun and extra ammunition under an Afro wig to go past guards and then forced officers to free 36 other inmates from their cells.

Bingham said he is confident he'll be acquitted even without those documents, because he thinks prosecutors won't be able to prove beyond a reasonable doubt he was involved in the gun-smuggling.

"It's frustrating, though, because a jury is obviously going to want to have some sense of what might have actually happened," he said.

Earlier this month, three other murder charges against Bingham were dismissed after a judge threw out his decision on findings in the 1975 trial of inmates known as the San Quentin 7.

"That kind of awareness, which I think is pretty widespread, is critical to me getting a jury that's really going to have an open mind on this," he said.

Bingham's attorneys intend to argue San Quentin officials set up Jackson, the young lawyer to get rid of Jackson, who was at the forefront of the prison reform movement. The attorneys are attempting to gain access to documents they think will prove a government conspiracy.

'Dr. Ruth' gives facts about sex education

Three cheers for the grandmotherly guru of sex education, Ruth Westheimer, who "dishes out" some straight talk about a subject few teens will discuss with their parents, and visa versa.

Westheimer is a graying lady who admits to a fair amount of personal shock over the sexual revolution of the 1960s and 1970s. She has become something of an institution for her popular "Dr. Ruth" radio and television call-in shows.

She is also an individual of integrity. When it was pointed out last week that her new book contains an important error on when a woman's fertile period occurs, Westheimer didn't hesitate to order the recall of all 115,000 copies from bookstores.

The error occurs in Westheimer's "First Love: A Young People's Guide to Sexual Information." In a chapter on the rhythm method of birth control, the book states: "The safe times are the week before and the week of ovulation."

It should say "unsafe."

"I proofread it myself," said Westheimer. "I'm not going to put the blame on anybody else. What I think happened is that in my mind, I read the word 'unsafe' and didn't catch that it said 'safe.' God forbid that somebody should read that and say 'This is a safe week.'

In a world in which publishing gaffes are commonplace, it's refreshing indeed to see someone so forthright on both admitting an error and moving quickly to correct it.

But more important, in our view, is the good work Westheimer is doing in making no-nonsense information about sex available to young people who need it most.

Westheimer avoids agonizing over questions of morality. She knows that, for many young people, the should-you, should-you-not questions are already resolved.

She is oriented, instead, toward the consequences. She emphasizes how unwanted pregnancy affects so many things in a young person's life, from career choice to self-image.

Some of this will strike purists as essentially immoral. It is wrong, some argue, to tell young people about sex for it only encourages them to experiment.

Ignorance, we think, has far worse consequences. Knowledge about sex is difficult to measure. But ignorance shows up all the time in unwanted pregnancies, abortions, and unloved children.

Westheimer, in her own way, is helping to dispel the myths and replace them with facts. And that's for the good.

George's defense crops up

This situation in Kimberly gets more interesting with time. I can just say I'm glad I don't live in Kimberly! Those people should be more concerned about their police force than about recalling mayors and councilmen.

The law enforcement in Kimberly appears to be grossly mismanaged and inept at best, and criminally negligent at worst.

What kind of police department can have several incidents of stolen case files, stolen evidence and evidence reports, not to mention firearms, a police officer and a citizen who conveniently "forgot" his gun permit and who was issued a new one? I am sure the police will do their duty, but they are certainly not up to the task.

Remember folks, these are the people who have the unbelieveable gall to pull you over and tell you that you are breaking the law!

Why pick on me for speeding or driving drunk? Lots of other people are doing it too! (Well, that line of reasoning seems to work for public officials anyway.)

I am laughing, with tears in my eyes, as I again read the Dec. 27 article relating to the liability insurance rate hikes being blamed on excessive litigation, and in which article certain lawyers lament to great lengths about the increase in their malpractice insurance premiums.

These lawyers complain of an increase in their premiums from $320 per individual to the astronomical sum of $1,300. As a recently retired family physician, I can relate the experience of an increase during the 1976-85 decade from less than $1,000 to over $13,000 for medical liability insurance.

During the 1975 medical liability insurance crisis, when physicians had difficulty even finding a company to insure them, I was told by a member of the Idaho Trial Lawyers that we were experiencing only what we deserved. Apparently today the shot punches more severely on the legal profession's foot.

It is continuously amazing that the Idaho

Striking at terrorists complex decision

Geoffrey Kemp

How should democracies use force to retaliate against brutal terrorist acts?

Indeed, should they do so at all?

What criteria should govern? Should any attention be paid to moral criteria?

In the immediate aftermath of last week's terrorist attacks against PLO at the Rome and Vienna airports, the White House urged Israel to use restraint in its inevitable retaliation. The argument was that attacks against PLO facilities in either Jordan or Syria could jeopardize the fragile peace process and risk dangerous military escalation.

But as it became clear that the most likely instigators of the attacks were the genocidal Abu Nidal extremists and Libya's Muammar Kadhafi, the White House advocated a tougher response.

This abrupt change reflects the reality of the war against terrorism — that political rather than military considerations carry the most weight.

But the purpose of retaliation is to punish and deter; therefore operations involving assassination, intimidation, blackmail and other dirty tricks are probably the most effective.

However, aside from legal questions, such methods have serious drawbacks. Covert operations take time, and therefore provide no instant and public gratification — an important factor in the domestic politics of most democratic countries. Thus, other activities can get killed, or more likely, can prove to be inept at the job.

And while covert operations may deter specific terrorist groups from launching attacks in the short run, they are unlikely to influence the larger international terrorist network.

This group will be deterred only if there are concerted political, economic and, if necessary, military actions by like-minded governments to clamp down on those who harbor and support terrorism as well as the terrorists themselves.

The alternative is to use military forces against known terrorist installations. The mode of attack can vary from aerial bombardment to direct assault by commando troops. Since terrorist bases are always located on somebody else's territory, military action against them requires either the cooperation of local rulers or direct violation of their sovereignty.

If air power is used, the reaction time can be quick, but, unless the targets are isolated and the bombing accurate, innocent civilians can and often are killed in the process.

If commandos are used, civilian casualties may be held down, but the probability of losses to one's own forces goes up. If the country harboring the terrorists has well-defended borders and a strong defense, the attacking force has to be large with commensurate increases in risks or casualties and escalation.

This brings us back to Israel: Its responses to terrorism and its accompanying instruments should be taken into account. There is no question that when Israel uses air power to retaliate, civilians are often killed. Washington was upset when Israel hit the PLO headquarters in Tunis in response to numerous terrorist incidents last summer. However, the concern of the State Department was political, not moral.

Tunisia is a friend of the United States, a country whose leadership is moderate and wants ultimately to achieve peace with Israel. If the Israelis had hit terrorist bases in Libya and killed the same number of civilians, the United States would have led the chorus in cheering them on.

We expect Israel to abide by codes of behavior appropriate to a democracy. Yet to assume that Israel can live up to the same principles that Western Europe and the United States aspire to in peacetime is a bad comparison. Israel is at war with most of its neighbors. We should remember how the United States and Britain behaved in World War II when we thought that our future was in jeopardy.

We used brutal methods to pursue the war effort because we thought that it served a greater good. We thought nothing of invading neutral countries, such as Iceland, or using the most unsavory methods to track down and eliminate German agents.

To expect Prime Minister Shimon Peres to put into effect what he said is illusory. He is much more concerned about the attitudes of Gen. Ariel Sharon and other hawks in his cabinet who have a more extreme agenda on who to target than he does. Nor in the last resort will the United States do anything practical to deter Israel from a strong response.

We want to see a settlement of the Palestinian problem, but we will not force a solution on Israel. Israel has a lot to answer for concerning its policies toward the Palestinians, especially those residing in the territories occupied by Israel after the 1967 war. However, so long as terrorism against Israel remains a cornerstone of official PLO policy, the Palestinian cause will remain discredited, divided and increasingly irrelevant to the rest of the world, the United States, one country that could truly help both sides if dealt the right cards.

If political criteria reign supreme, can there be any absolute values about the level of retaliatory force against terrorists? Aside from an obvious desire to keep innocent casualties to a minimum, I think not. Each case is different, and more terrible yet to come.

For the future we must prepare for "catastrophic" contingencies — when, for instance, terrorists succeed in obtaining radioactive material or biological weapons. At this point retaliation will be irrelevant; preventive measures or, if those fail, speedy and drastic action to limit damage — not moral considerations will be what counts.

Some resolutions for 1986

As a law abiding, taxpaying senior citizen, have resolved to make some resolutions for 1986:

I resolve to be unhappy over the jail inmate who are dissatisfied with their predicament. They are aware of the consequences of their crimes before they committed them; however, they have it good. They have a roof over their heads and winter nights, food for their stomachs, no time clock to punch, a bed to sleep in, indoor sanitary facilities, and, probably, more magazines and newspapers to read than the average low-income family. There is probably a radio, TV, a center to "socialize" with others, and a public defender to plead their case.

I resolve to not be riled by the door-to-door salesmen or telephone solicitors. After all, if I require the services or products, I assure the local telephone directory or the local newspaper can be of help to locate honest workmen or products.

I resolve to not be unhappy over the voting precinct changes, although I have to go twice as far; and to a precinct where car parking within two blocks is a problem. But after being unable to park closely to walk, I did not vote during the last election, which was my own perspective.

But when some goad me two nights ago, didn't I reply, "I'm sorry, but I have the correct telephone number." Then asked, "Are you still listed?" I said, "Yes, I am." I could explain that I didn't vote and the reason: he changed the receiver down. No, "thanks for your time." "I'm sorry," or even asked if there were others in the household that were registered.

I resolve not to have a slow burn when I go to the mailbox and find literature from congressmen, costing thousands of taxpayers dollars for their free stamping of mail. Two and three identical letters come to this address. After all, the letters do burn nicely in my fireplace on these cold winter evenings.

But after all is said and done, I've finally had one good laugh and my garbage men have one less item to throw on their trucks next trip! I had an old beat up suitcase in the basement that was of no use to me, when I took it out, I'd completed my two little boxes in the case, and it was smelly.

I decided to put a culture out with my garbage, as he'd seen a boy carry the case down the alley!

Peres threatens to retaliate

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres on Thursday warned that Israel would retaliate if the rocket attacks launched from south Lebanon.

A Soviet-made Katyusha rocket landed Thursday from south Lebanon damaged houses and crops in the border town of Kiryat Shmona. It was the first rocket to hit the center of the town of 20,000 since Palestinian guerrillas shelling prompted thousands to flee in 1981.

"If we find out that this is the beginning of a new process, we will react and not only the residents of Kiryat Shmona will remain sleepless," Maj. Gen. Orr, commander of the northern sector, said on Israeli radio.

Two dozen rockets have landed in northern Israel and in the Israeli-created buffer zone in south Lebanon in the past 10 days, said Israeli military sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Pilot's last message in dispute

PUNTA ARENAS, Chile (AP) — The pilot of a plane that crashed into an Antarctic glacier killing eight American adventurers and two crewmen said in his last radio message he would try to land through "a hole in the clouds" because he couldn't see the ground, a U.S. consular official said Thursday.

There were conflicting reports about the pilot's radio communications and about the weather at the time of the crash.

The bodies of the Americans, who died on their way to a New Year's Eve barbecue at a Chilean Antarctic air base, arrived Thursday at this southernmost city on the South American mainland en route aboard an air force transport plane. They were to be flown to Santiago, the capital, after autopsies.

The twin-engine Cessna 404 charter plane crashed into a glacier Tuesday night, 30 miles beyond its destination at King George Island and 744 miles south of Punta Arenas.

Airport attack toll rises to 16

ROME (AP) — The death toll in last week's terrorist attack at Rome's main airport rose to 16 on Thursday with the death of a Greek woman, the Interior Ministry said.

Efrosini Mediari, 56, died at San Camillo hospital, where she had been in a coma from a gunshot wound to the head since the Dec. 27 attack, said an ministry spokesman who refused to be identified.

Three people died in nearly simultaneous attack near the check-in counter of the Israeli El Al airline at Vittorio's airport. Ms. Mediari's death increased the death toll in the twin attacks to 19. Among the dead were five Americans. More than 120 people were wounded.

Rioters protest new city mayor

MEXICO CITY, Mexico (AP) — Rioters protesting the inauguration of a new mayor in the northern city of San Luis Potosi sacked City Hall offices and clashed with riot police, leaving one person dead and 60 injured, newspapers reported Thursday.

The trouble began Wednesday in the city 260 miles north of the capital when about 200 members of the opposition National Action Party, or PAN, protested the installation of Mayor Guillermo Medina de los Santos.

The mayor is a member of the long-ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party and the protesters claimed the election last year was tainted by fraud.

Air Force fighter jet vanishes

KELFAVIK, Iceland (AP) — A U.S. Air Force F15-C fighter jet on a training mission vanished Thursday off Iceland and its pilot is presumed dead, a NATO spokesman said.

Fridrik Eydal, a spokesman for NATO's Iceland Defense Force at Keflavik, said a search was launched after the jet mysteriously disappeared at 9:20 a.m. about 40 miles southwest of Iceland. But rescuers found no trace of the plane.

The search was to resume at daylight today, Eydal said. The name of the missing pilot was not released.

The Kuwait News Agency also quoted Arafat as saying Reagan was an "ungrateful person" because he forgave and had "chosen to forget" earlier PLO efforts in evicting members of the American community from Beirut.

Guru to leave India for Nepal

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, the controversial guru who was deported from the United States in November, plans to leave India for Nepal today, his followers said Thursday.

Rajneesh flew from his mountain retreat in the Himalayas on Thursday to New Delhi and was staying in a luxury hotel. He will take a commercial flight Friday to Katmandu, capital of the neighboring kingdom of Nepal, according to disciples in both countries.

His disciples said they did not know whether Rajneesh planned to settle in Nepal permanently. Rajneesh said in interviews last week with the Indian Express newspaper that he planned to set up a commune and settle on an island in the South Pacific, or near Fiji.

Ski champ found in avalanche

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Eveline Wirth, the acrobatic skiing world champion, was rescued by a police dog after being buried by an avalanche under two feet of snow for 40 minutes, police said Thursday.

Ms. Wirth had been skiing with a group of six outside marked trails in the Swiss Alps at 4,000-foot Hammetschwand Pass on New Year's Day when she became stranded, police said. The other skiers were unharmed but immediately launched a search.

Ms. Wirth regained consciousness after receiving first aid and was hospitalized for exposure.

Tribal clashes leave at least 20 dead

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) —

Violent fighting in a mineral-rich tribal district killed 10 or more in a neighboring tribe's homeland has led to at least 20 deaths and dozens of kidnappings, a black legislator said Thursday.

Police confirmed that seven blacks had been killed in the past two days in the tribal district of Mousie — neighboring KwaNdebele, 100 miles northeast of Johannesburg.

But residents said at least 20 people died in fighting over the past three days that included a New Year's Day assault on the headquarters of Mousie's chief, Mathebela, by hundreds of Ndebele warriors armed with clubs, spears and shotguns.

Police said they had confirmed a total of 20 deaths in fighting so far this year, both in tribal clashes and in anti-apartheid violence.

Nearly 1,000 people have died in 16 months of fighting against apartheid — mostly blacks killed by police or the army during riots. Others died in tribal clashes or were killed by fellow blacks who believed they were collaborators with the white-led government.

In Port Elizabeth, about 20,000 blacks joined clashes and anti-apartheid violence at the funeral of leading white anti-apartheid activist, Molly Black, 55, the white women's anti-apartheid organization that organized the news conference. Black mourners chanted hymns of praise for the woman whose lifetime campaign for civil rights had black radicals.

Meanwhile, police reported renewed outbreaks of anti-apartheid rioting and black attacks on other blacks in a dozen black urban centers overnight through Thursday.

The bullet-riddled and mutilated bodies of two black policemen were found in the bush in the Mousie district Thursday, police said.

The bodies of two black whose skulls were crushed and their hands tied behind their backs were found in the KTC black squatter camp outside Cape Town.

KTC and a neighboring camp, Cross Roads, have been wracked by fighting since New Year's Eve between conservative adults and young black radicals, according to Cape Town police and residents.

Most Muscovites who said they saw the speech said they were encouraged by it.

The speech marked only the second time Soviets have heard Reagan speak on television. The first occasion was the president's statement at the closing ceremony of the Gorbachev's visit.

"From his words, he also wants peace," said a young woman who refused to give her name. "As for his actions, only the future will show."

"It was very nice to hear," said Maria Sushkova, 40, an engineer. "It was a good beginning (to the new year) and we will hope for the future."

She said Reagan made a "very pleasant" impression.

The communist party daily Pravda and morning editions of the government daily Izvestia made no comment on Reagan's remarks, which were printed side-by-side with Gorbachev's greetings to Americans.

Reagan speech termed 'disappointing'

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet commentator on Thursday called President Reagan's New Year's greeting the Soviet Union's disappointment, but Muscovites reacted favorably.

Vladimir Alexeyev, a commentator for the government news agency Novosti, said Reagan's message dashed hopes that there would be a breakthrough in the Geneva talks between the United States and the Soviet Union in a short-based defense system of abandoned.

"On this score, the statement is a disappointment," Alexeyev wrote in the first official reaction to Reagan's address.

Although Reagan did not mention the Star Wars project by name, he nevertheless faithfully repeated the old Washington line and made it quite clear that he was not ready to cast indicated that personal attacks on the American president have been abandoned.

Reagan's policies have come under fire almost daily since the November summit with Gorbachev. But there has been a marked change in the treatment of Reagan himself, formerly criticized by name and caricatured as missile-packing Uncle Sam in the state-controlled Soviet press.

Soviet people, accustomed to adapting to whatever Kremlin line the Soviet Union Wednesday, and the media present, have changed accordingly.

"One young man, his 20s, walking in Moscow's Taganka Square replied: 'Splendid! Excellent!' when asked his impression of Reagan's message."

"I think Reagan is a bright man who understands that peace and working together are the most important things in the world," I am very happy he will visit our country," 19-year-old man, who refused to give his name.

The communist party daily Pravda and morning editions of the government daily Izvestia made no comment on Reagan's remarks, which were printed side-by-side with Gorbachev's greetings to Americans.

Sandinistas shut off Catholic radio station

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government on Thursday closed the official radio station of the Roman Catholic Church, after the station failed to broadcast most of a year-end message from President Daniel Ortega.

A notice from the government communications office did not say how long Catholic Radio would be off the air.

Monsignor Ilisimarek Carballo, director of the radio station, said the station did not broadcast Ortega's message, a speech of 15 minutes, failure on the part of the shift controller who forgot to link the radio station to the national network to receive the statement.

"We consider that the measure taken by the communications office is out of proportion because we didn't do it on purpose," he said.

In his year-end message, Ortega strongly attacked the United States and said that 1986 would be declared in Nicaragua the "year of all the arms against the aggression of the Yankee invader."

A youth was killed when police opened fire to repel the attack, it said.

The news agency said the attackers were members of the Lodhi tribe, but gave no reason for the attack on police.

In the neighboring state of Madhya Pradesh, three bands were killed in a night-long battle with police, who rescued a 73-year-old man who had been kidnapped by the gang, the news agency said.

Pre-dawn blaze destroys 3 downtown businesses

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) — A spectacular pre-dawn fire ripped through a shopping center in downtown American Falls Thursday.

The blaze gutted three of the five businesses there and caused extensive damage to a fourth.

"There's a lot of damage at this time," Power County Sheriff's Deputy Jim Jeffries said.

Firefighters were reported to have been at the Parkway Shopping Center where firemen from American Falls and Aberdeen battled heavy smoke and freezing temperatures for two hours before bringing the flames under control around 4 a.m. MST. Firemen were at the scene most of the day mopping up.

A specific estimate was not immediately available for the losses sustained by a dentist's office, a retail clothing store and a state liquor store, all of which were gutted by the blaze, or to an adjacent pharmacy, which received heavy smoke and water damage. Officials predicted the damage would run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The cause of the fire remained under investigation, but assistant American Falls Fire Chief Bill Edmonds said an explosion may have been the cause. He said the Idaho Fire Marshal's office was called in to assist in the investigation.

The sheriff's deputy who initially reported the fire said it appeared to have started in the back of the office of dentist William Pacheco.

"He said it looked like there may have been some sort of explosion because there was insulation on the partitioned-and-to-looked-like-part-of-the-roof was gone," Jeffries said.

Gutted by the blaze were Pacheco's office, the adjacent True Grit Western Wear, and the Idaho State Liquor Dispensary. Edmonds said a 16-inch cinder block wall between the clothing store and the pharmacy may have prevented the fire from engulfing the entire shopping center, which included a grocery store.

Earlier Thursday, firefighters evacuated eight people from an Idaho Falls apartment building after hot plates in one apartment apparently ignited paper and curtains. There were no injuries reported in the fire that caused extensive damage to one apartment and heavily damaged three others.

League backs day care plan

POTCHEFFIELD (AP) — The state's League of Women Voters has joined the campaign to end Idaho's distinction as the only state in the nation without some form of day-care-center regulation.

President Judy Thomas said the league has decided to back the state-run licensing plan proposed by Gov. John Evans last week on the issue of whether the modifications used for earlier this week by the Idaho Child Care Coalition.

That proposal calls for the Department of Health and Welfare to license all day-care operators and employees in the state as well as their facilities, which must meet minimum safety and health codes. In addition, Ms. Thomas said the league wants an FBI background check on any operators or employees who have not been Idaho residents for at least three years. The bill would only require background checks by local authorities.

The league, as the Child Care Coalition also wants to exempt from licensing those providing day care for the children of only one family.

Attempts to pass a state-run licensing bill last winter failed when a sharply split House was unable to resolve an impasse between the faction backing it and the one that has wanted to keep day-care control in the hands of local officials.

The leaders of those two factions, Republicans Pam Bengson of Boise and Donna Scott of Twin Falls, have joined forces this winter behind a bill calling only for background checks of day-care operators and employees.

Ms. Thomas called that bill step in the right direction, saying the league wants to work with both

Ice jam stable as mercury climbs

ONTARIO (AP) — Only some flooding of low-lying farmland was reported Thursday on the Oregon side of the Snake River as forecasters predicted the warming trend would continue into the weekend offering the prospect of a further reduction in the flood threat.

But forecasters said "just going to depend on the weather."

A National Guard unit attempted to return to one of the evacuated homes on Thursday to retrieve some personal belongings for the family, but Moore said ice surrounding the home had become so thick and chunky that the house was inaccessible.

A score of Guardsmen remained on a 24-hour call in case conditions change and water begins rising again in populated areas.

BOISE (AP) — Help may be coming from an livestock operators could say they likely quarter. The Wyoming Outdoor Council, a conservation group, wrote to President Reagan in for a rough ride with the Dept. of Interior's present grazing fee formula.

"We believe that due to pressures from the OMB that the pres-lands could get considerably more expensive. If the Office of Management and Budget puts the arm-on-the-agriculture-and-interior-departments-to-raise-fees, the old grazers off the land," said John Barlow, WOC president.

Ranchers claimed the fees reflected fair market value, but opponents said they were so low they were in Capitol Hill, producing many proposals. The WOC tried to persuade Congress to pass an environmental group not to push for higher fees. Barlow said they failed to convince the Sierra Club, Wilderness Society and Natural Resources Defense Council that any increase is going to force higher fees would mean bankruptcy for many grazers.

TV journalist joins Evans campaign

BOISE (AP) — Jean McNeil, for eight years producer of the "Idaho Reports" program on Idaho's public broadcast television system, has been appointed deputy campaign manager for Gov. John Evans' bid for the Senate.

Evans is expected to announce later this month that he's running for the Senate seat now held by Republican Steve Symms.

Evans' campaign manager, Kathi Rogers, announced Thursday that Ms. McNeil will have special responsibility for news media liaison.

"Jean is a big asset," said Evans. "She understands the issues facing Idaho and has earned the respect of her colleagues."

Ms. McNeil has reported and analyzed legislative sessions for the last eight years. She resigned from KAI-TV in Boise in May to do freelance writing and consulting.

She led the campaign, a pivotal election, one that should concern all Idahoans but particularly farmers and older citizens.

Publisher retires

SANDPOINT (AP) — Pele Thompson, publisher of three Northern Idaho newspapers, including the Sandpoint Daily Bee, retired effective Dec. 31.

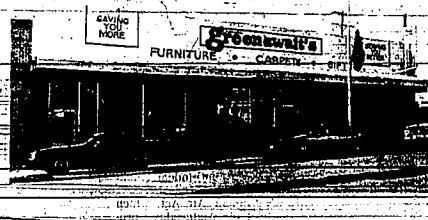

Thompson, 55, stepped down as publisher of the Bee, Priest River Times and Bonners Ferry Herald, both weekly, and was succeeded by his son, Jim, 32.

The three newspapers were sold to the Hagadone Corp. in the summer of 1984.

Hooker's last rape charge dropped

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Cameron Hooker, sentenced to 104 years in prison for kidnapping a woman and keeping her as a sex slave for 7½ years, had a final rape charge dismissed Thursday at the prosecution's request.

Superior Court Judge Clarence Knight agreed to dismiss the last rape charge against Hooker, 52, of Red Bluff, was convicted Oct. 31 of 10 of 11 felony charges after three days of deliberation by the jury. The jury could not reach a verdict on another rape charge.

Insurance dilemma idles some city services

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In Rupert, trash collection will be reduced to once a week and part-time employees have been laid off temporarily because the city doesn't have liability insurance.

In Jerome, non-emergency city vehicles are idled without insurance.

The two Magic Valley cities are in good company, as other municipalities and counties in Idaho were stripped of their insurance coverage.

The state Department of Insurance has made liability coverage for emergency vehicles available to desperate units of government.

But, the emergency program doesn't give cities and counties coverage on their property, law enforcement and daily operations.

While a self-insurance pool proposed by the Association of Idaho Cities is the only insurance hope for some municipalities, AIC's program is not operational. And Rupert Mayor Bill Whittom says his city needs insurance now.

Rupert is searching for private insurance carriers. In the interim, the city is treading carefully.

Whittom on Thursday issued an administrative order grounding all non-emergency city vehicles. City workers will respond to frozen water meters, but there will be none of the normal city operation and maintenance, Whittom says.

"We don't feel the risk is worth it." Whittom adds. "We need to reduce pure exposure as much as humanly possible."

Part-time employees were notified at noon Thursday that they won't work until the city's AIC program is up and running.

Whittom says his city needs insurance because "we can't afford the liability that goes with it," he adds. All remaining employees have been warned to be exceptionally cautious and not do anything that would jeopardize their position in the city.

His order also reduced city trash collection to one day a week, instead of twice a week for residents and daily for the business district.

He issued the order after conferring with the City Council and legal sources.

Whittom says ...

... also talked with some city residents ... and they generally were ...

... understanding.

"We feel it's a judgment call and it's the right call because the potential for wiping us out is there," Whittom says.

He adds, "We can't afford the insurance because we can't afford the liability that goes with it," he adds.

In the city of Jerome, non-emergency city vehicles also are parked until there's insurance to ride with them, and police have been asked to be careful in their arrests and driving, Mayor Ralph Peters says.

Peters says he crews are available to answer calls for frozen pipes and backed-up sewers

— which may not be considered emergency — enough to be covered under the state program, he adds.

The city has committed itself to the AIC pool, although bits and pieces of coverage are available from private companies.

There's nothing comprehensive to fit the city's needs, he adds.

Shoshone also is without insurance. No city services have been halted, however, City Clerk Ron Boian says.

"We just warned everybody to be extra careful," he adds.

The city sent an $18,000 check Monday to join the proposed AIC pool, since private insurance companies are not yet ready to come by, Boian says.

Shoshone also will sign up for the emergency coverage through the state plan.

Mall project on time

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Mall under construction in Bill Lakin's Building North should be ready for an October 1986 opening as planned, said Price Development Co. leasing consultant Rob Springman Thursday.

He has found tenants for about 55 percent of the approximately 70 small shops planned for the mall already, he said. Company officials have said that 65 to 70 percent of the small shops will be filled by the time the mall opens. That now appears to be a very realistic occupancy rate, Springman said.

The company has so far declined to release names of small tenants, but Springman said 70 percent of the shops making commitments so far are owned by national and regional companies. The remaining 30 percent are local enterprises.

The company is also making progress on locating tenants for five free-standing buildings on the periphery of the main property. Negotiations are under way to lease four buildings — from Blue Lakes Boulevard to a fast-food restaurant and two full-line restaurants — and one of two financial institutions, Springman said.

The free-standing building that would front Pole Line Road, where the construction office now stands, is being considered for a medical clinic.

A national trend toward locating shops in medium- and smaller-markets as large urban markets become saturated is helping leasing efforts, Springman said.

"The competition is so great, they are looking at mid-size markets like this," he said. "There may not be so many people here, but for the entire trade area, there is a comparable population."

Council slates session today on Kimberly recall

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly City Council will meet in a special session at 12:30 p.m. today to approve a downtown appointment to serve a recall election against Mayor Ron Jones.

City Clerk Edith Widmer has called the vote for Feb. 4, but the date must be approved by the City Council.

Petitions seeking a recall election were filed just over a week ago and Jones announced he will face the recall rather than resign. Rick Stone of Kimberly, who backed Jones' position in calling for an investigation of the Kimberly Police Department, said Thursday he doesn't see any chance of getting a recall petition signed off of office. It would take at least one more vote to oust Jones than he received in the last election in which he was a candidate.

Stone, who obtained a petition to recall Councilman Jack Wright, said he has not filed his petition.

Victim 'critical' following accident at sugar factory

By ANNETTE CARY

Sugar less than two weeks when the accident occurred, Lemke said.

The federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration ordinarily investigates fatalities and industrial accidents only where five or more people are injured, but there is a possibility the OSHA accident will be investigated, said OSHA Area Director Ryan Kuehne Michel Thursday.

The accident was the third serious one in the last five months at Amalgamated Sugar Co. factories in Idaho.

Roman, who is in his late 20s, entered a tunnel to inspect coal handling equipment when the accident occurred, said John Lemke, spokesman for Amalgamated at company headquarters in Ogden, Utah. Roman was in the tunnel by himself, he said.

"Evidently there was a soldering fire, which caused him to be overcome by smoke and probably carbon monoxide fumes," Lemke said. The foreman helping with the inspection, Galen Hess, entered the tunnel shortly after Roman and found him unconscious, Lemke and police officers said.

Roman was removed from the tunnel and given artificial respiration by employees and ambulance attendants, Lemke said. He was taken to a Minnema Memorial Hospital and then transferred by helicopter later that day to Salt Lake City.

Hess was also hospitalized at Minnema Hospital after being overcome by fumes, but has since been released, Lemke said. He believed Hess was briefly unconscious.

Roman is a seasonal employee, who had worked for Amalgamated OSHA has just completed an investigation of an accident at the Amalgamated Sugar Co. factory in Nampa. In that accident, a hand crank used to clear stones from a beet slicer was not removed before the slicer was restarted. The crank shot out of the machine, hitting and killing "employee" Loy Pleas, Kuehne Michel said.

OSHA is investigating whether or not a citation will be filed in that case by next week, Kuehne Michel said.

Amalgamated Sugar was fined in September for unsafe conditions at its Payette Valley factory, which led to the Aug. 22 death of employee Janet Jones. Jones was killed when a ton of sugar gave way suddenly as employees worked to remove the built-up sugar. She was hit with a 300-pound piece of compacted sugar, Twin Falls Sheriff James Munn said.

The company was fined $429. The amount would have been greater if not for the company's stop-and-go attitude, OSHA said. The two injured employees were brought to its attention and an agreement was reached to correct hazardous conditions immediately, an OSHA official said.

Company officials were surprised and upset by the three accidents, Lemke said, but added that all three were "unrelated" and "unpredicted."

Storm damage heavy to power station

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

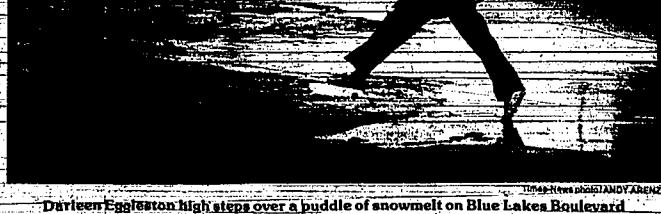

TWIN FALLS — Although all electrical service that was disrupted by a windstorm New Year's Day was restored Thursday, Idaho Power Company crews were continuing to repair heavy damage to the firm's South Park subdivision.

Barry Knoblich, division operations manager, said the winds Wednesday afternoon took out a section of transmission lines that feed the substation.

"We lost nine structures when the lines went down. We expect to have these replaced by the end of next week, but it will take about a week and a half to replace the station's transformer," Knoblich said.

When the wind took out the transmission lines, it resulted in damage to one of the station's transformer, requiring that it be replaced. Knoblich said it would be an expensive repair project, adding he isn't sure what the total damage

Man pleads guilty to exposure

TWIN FALLS — A Jugend twin Falls man pleaded guilty Tuesday in 4th District Court to two counts of indecent exposure.

Quinton Erey, 122 Washington St., N., will be sentenced Jan. 23 on the two misdemeanors charged.

Frey was accused of exposing himself to a 16-year-old girl Dec. 23 and a 5-year-old girl between Dec. 21-22 at his residence, according to a complaint filed with the court. The girls reported they saw Frey stand in front of the picture window of his apartment as they passed by.

Frey was released on a $1,000 bond.

Car rolls; woman injures hand

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls woman escaped with an injured hand Wednesday when her own car dragged her into an underground garage at the apartment building where she resides.

Twin Falls police officers said Mabel McNabb, 35 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., stopped her car on a ramp leading into the underground garage at the apartment house about 6:15 p.m. Wednesday. She got out to activate an automatic opener leading into the garage area, and the car, left on the downgrade of the entrance, began rolling. As McNabb attempted to get into the vehicle to stop it, she was carried along with the vehicle, injuring her hand.

Police said she could not get the vehicle under control and it crashed into some parked cars, causing minor damage to three of them.

She was treated at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and released.

Snow moisture above normal

TWIN FALLS — Higher-elevation snow courses in the South Hills continue to show above-normal moisture levels this month of year in spite of the past two weeks of dry weather.

The Twin Falls Soil Conservation District snow survey report as of Jan. 1 shows at present on Deadline Ridge's south snow course with 16 inches of water. This is 10 percent of normal for that date.

The north Deadline Ridge snow course has 33 inches of snow and 11.2 inches of water for a 120 percent of normal amount.

On Langford Flat Creek course there are 20 inches of snow with 4.7 inches of water for 94 percent of average. Shoshone Basin lists 18 inches of snow containing 3.3 inches of water, down to 76 percent of average.

Measurements for the January report were taken Dec. 29 by Marvin Taylor and Maurice Fuller. The two reported no new snow as of Dec. 29. Since that time one storm has added about .35 inches of new snow, according to U.S. Forest Service reports.

Anniversary

The Conways

EDEN — Mr. and Mrs. Paul Conway, 60, will observe their 60th wedding anniversary today. Conway and Helen, originally from Marion, Ill., were married Jan. 3, 1926, in Twin Falls. A retired sheepman, Conway ran his herds in the Humboldt Mountains in Nevada before purchasing a farm southwest of Hazelton in 1930 where he raised purebred Suffolks. Both Mr. and Mrs. Conway were 4-H leaders. They later purchased a farm 13 miles east of Jerome in the Eden area where he farmed until 1977. They still live at the site.

They celebrated their anniversary with a family reunion in August. The Conways have three children, Robert Conway and Norma Conway, both Eden, and Virginia Rab, Nam-

Rev. Tom Tucker officiated with Helen Connolly as organist and Richard Kuhn as guitar soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Elmer Dallman, Jerome, and Arthur Short, Walnut, Calif., and the bridegroom's parents are Charles and Rosemary Blake, Jerome.

Barbara Fairbanks was matron of honor for her sister, Cathy Roemer, who is the bridegroom and Judy Opelus was bridesmaid. Brady Mae and Sherry Ann Nelson, daughters of the bride, Marsia Ann Fairbanks, niece of the bride, and Kelley Marin Blake, niece of the bridegroom, were flower girls.

Kevin Blake, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man with Terry Roemer, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Charles Ruebelman as usher. Rodney Craig Nelson, son of the bride, was ringbearer.

Mrs. William Howard McKnight, of Twin Falls, grandmother of the bride, was a special guest.

Computers provoke new phobic reactions

By STEVE COLL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — It was her first day on a new job. Diane Kullen, 38, was standing in the office with the doctor who had hired her to sort out what was wrong with the computer she was running her about the glass-enclosed machine in the next room, the word processor Kullen would be using. He was saying what an efficient machine it was, how it could easily merge address lists with letters, alphabetize them and sort the whole bunch out by ZIP code.

Suddenly, she panicked. Her heart was racing and sweat began forming on her palms. It was like the time-a few years back-when she had been riding the Dupont Circle Metro station escalator here, looking down into the tunnel panics, she felt that day had been shaken so badly that it was months before she could ride another escalator. Even then, she had to ride with friends for a while, rebuilding her confidence.

She had gotten over all that-until she met the computer. "I will not go near that thing," she is saying a few days later in the relative safety of her Bethesda, Md., living room. "I'm glad it's in a separate office. It's going to be moved into mine." She says she loves it.

Every day she walks in there, I'm praying, "I hope it's not today that I have to work this word processor."

"I may look back someday and laugh at this. But right now, I don't think it's funny."

Kullen assumes that her fear of computers is "very strange." But evidence gathered recently by a team of business professors at George Mason University suggests that, far from being alone, she may be part of a sizable new category of American phobias—cyberphobes.

Working with a psychologist who specializes in fears, the professors surveyed 1,000 managers and professionals in the Washington area about their attitudes toward computers. Eleven percent of the managers surveyed were classified as "computer anxious"—they avoid computers when possible, but probably would be cured of their anxiety after taking a computer-training course.

Another 3 percent of the respondents, however, were found to be genuinely "cyberphobic." In the presence of a computer, these people seem to feel a sense of panic and terror, fear of contamination, breaking difficulties, dizziness, trembling and feelings of going crazy or losing control.

"Most of us sit down at a computer and there is a risk that we'll make a fool of ourselves," says Jerilyn Ross, the psychologist who worked on the study. "But the phobic is afraid that they'll become so overwhelmed with anxiety that they'll pass out or they'll go crazy."

Most of the time they'll lose control and harm the machine."

Phobia specialists say that it is not unusual for a pervasive new technology to provoke phobic reactions in a large number of people.

Part of the reason, they say, is that excitement and fear are closely related emotions. The same stimulating qualities that make some people go gaga over computers send others into a state of paralyzing fear.

"That's true of all technology," says Robert Culbert, director of behavioral treatment at the National Center for Behavioral Medicine. "You look at the introduction of railroads, automobiles, air travel, escalators, elevators—all the ways in which technology touches people's lives have been associated with transplant and fear-fear reactions, and with real phobic reactions. What happens in the population is that as the technology becomes more widely experienced, the fears tend to go away and give way to a residual phobic

Student government a family affair

SPOKANE (AP) — Most students thought Joe Geren and Belinda Tomlinson were just good friends during the student government campaign.

But the week before last February's election, when helium campaign balloons dotted campus ceilings, the two got engaged.

Two months later they were married, and now student government is a family affair at Spokane Falls Community College.

Belinda is president and Joe is activities vice president.

"They're kind of like a family to us; they're trying to get everyone married," says Lenny Luckey, who coordinates special events for students at the college.

The marriage doesn't seem to interfere with good government, Luckey says. "They don't get free passes in the black room."

Both are sophomore. The Geren's both act like strangers in the office. Romance does surface from time to time, even in meetings of the student senate.

"It's funny, Joe will sometimes try to hold my hand under the table," says Belinda. In the early days of the relationship, Joe wasn't always so willing to take that step.

When the two first started dating, Belinda says, "I took him ice skating—that was the only way I could get him to hold my hand."

"We met in September, started dating in November and we got married in April," Belinda says. "I didn't waste any time."

Belinda came to Spokane in 1983 after a year-and-a-half at Brigham Young University. The prospects of eligible men here looked bleak at first; she told a friend,

"I can't find anyone."

It was a business relationship at first, with both working for the Latter-day Saints Student Association (LDSSA). Belinda figured if I can work with her this well in this situation, let's do it for life, for ever!" Joe says.

The Mormon connection did become a minor issue during twin valley newspaper suggested a vote for the pair might bring religious censorship to student government.

If the LDSSA takes control, it is likely that the students of SFCC will no longer see the impartiality, or such things as "R-rated movies and other non-religious things will be banned," the letter said.

It later was discovered that the letter was written by an opposition candidate who had his sister sign it. The candidate was disqualified from the election.

Joe says the letter writer's concerns are unfounded. He says membership in school clubs is up this year and the student government has scheduled speakers from both ends of the political spectrum.

Joe will graduate in 1987 with a degree in advertising design. Belinda plans to transfer to Eastern Washington University this fall to study theater education. She hopes eventually to teach in a high school.

Son reneges on debt to bewildered parents

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in our 70s and in poor health.

Ten years ago, our son borrowed $10,000 from us. He promised to repay it on a monthly basis (no interest) within three years. He needed it for his business. His business has been thriving. He and his wife have a swimming pool; the two older children (an adult son and a daughter) have their own cars, and his wife also has one.

We have not received one penny of the $10,000. Four years ago, this son literally walked out of our lives without one word of explanation. He lives 10 miles away.

We have not had a telephone call, a card, a gift—or nothing. This also applies to his wife and children. The oldest is 21, the youngest is 11. We hope our son will come back because we hear from others who see them and his business with ours.

Before Christmas—my husband said, "Let's accept the fact that they don't want to be bothered with us, and stop sending them gifts."

(Until this year, we remembered them on all occasions—but they never acknowledged anything—just cashed the checks.)

What do you say, Abby? Where did we go wrong? We have never mentioned the $10,000 we borrowed.

—FUGITIVE PARENTS

DEAR FORGOTTEN: You say you live two miles from your son, his wife and their children, and for four years you sent them gifts for all occasions, none were acknowledged, yet you continued to send gifts and checks. Something is drastically wrong.

Have you ever phoned your son or written to him? Do you have a pro-missary note for the $10,000 he borwowed?

I would suggest that you initiate some kind of communication and try to find out why your son walked out of your life.

If you're reluctant to initiate it, ask a friend, relative, your attorney or clergy person.

There must be a reason why your son thinks you deserve this kind of treatment. This is a very bizarre and mysterious situation. I want very much to help you, but there are many unanswered questions. Good luck and God bless you. Please write again.

Oklahoma becomes seventh team in history to live up to pre-season notices

Sooners' Coach Barry Switzer, center, celebrates along with his players after Oklahoma beat top-ranked Penn State Wednesday night in Orange Bowl.

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
The Associated Press

The Oklahoma Sooners, who defeated No. 1 Penn State 27-10 in the Orange Bowl, were officially crowned as college football's national champion Thursday, falling only two points short of perfection to finish the season the way they started it—No. 1.

Only six other teams in the 50-year history of The Associated Press poll won the championship after being ranked No. 1 in the preseason.

Oklahoma received 55 of 57 first-place votes and 1,138 of a possible 1,140 points from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and sportscasters and won its sixth national championship.

Only Notre Dame, with seven, has won more championships than the Sooners.

Three voters failed to submit their ballots and couldn't be reached.

Michigan finished a distant second after defeating Nebraska 27-23 in the Sunbelt Fiesta Bowl. The Wolverines fifth in the final regular-season poll, received one first-place vote and 1,032 points.

Penn State's Orange Bowl loss cost the Nittany Lions what would have been their second national championship in four years. Instead, they slipped to third place with 900 points.

"I'm satisfied and happy it turned out this way," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said. "I always thought we had a chance to be good decisively. I think we were favored in every game we played, and we were."

Switzer said Penn State was "the best team we played this season, without a doubt; they're better than Nebraska."

Oklahoma will receive The Associated Press' national championship trophy on a date to be announced.

"Those who apply themselves too much to little things usually become incapable of great ones."

La Rochefoucauld

South rejoiced so much over a fine finesse that did him no good that he blew the play of his trump suit. Look over the day's trump combination to see if you can improve on his results.

South won the first spade with his jack—a free finesse that allowed a discard on dummy's spade king. South failed to notice that a discard would be of no use.

He crossed to dummy's club king and led dummy's lone trump to his South. West switched to diamonds for a second winner, and East later collected two more trump tricks for one down.

Let's look again at South's trump stiff. Since dummy's singleton allows only one trump lead from dummy, the defense must win three trump tricks whenever East holds four trumps to the ace (he ducks the first lead). Further, if West holds four trumps to the ace, three trump losers are even more obvious. The only other significant distributions are a 3-2-3 split or a singleton ace. Against either of these, first playing a low trump will give the suit only two losers.

In today's case, a low trump goes to West's ace and East is held to only one trump trick. West trumps 3-2, the defense wins a cheap trick easily, but the ice goes on an honor on the next lead. This leaves one trump outstanding, which South picks up with his remaining trump honor.

ANSWER: Four spades. North has 16-18 points and four-card spade support. Should be enough to score a game.

King of Swing

AGIB
Hochstrasser

BY BARBARA NEIVERT
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Like all good things, some music endures through the years. The Big Band sound of the 1930s and '40s is returning to Sun Valley this winter to help recreate the atmosphere of happiness and romance which bloomed after the depression.

Highlighting its 50th anniversary celebration, Sun Valley is bringing back the Big Band sound in a "Moonlight Serenade" dance featuring the Gib Hochstrasser Big Band-Kings of Swing Orchestra, will entertain at the Sun Valley Inn in the Limelight Room beginning this Saturday—and continuing each Friday-night-through-March 21. The exception to the schedule will be Feb. 7, when the Peter Duchin Band will perform.

In addition to the magnificent sounds of the "Kings of Swing," a featured vocal group will appear each week as the Andrews Sisters or the Modernaires.

Hochstrasser's Boise-based band is well-known throughout the state and has performed in Colorado, Nevada and Oregon as well. Hochstrasser directs the group and also plays drums and trumpet. Band members reside in Treasure Valley communities, but occasionally Hochstrasser uses local talent from Twin Falls.

Obtaining the musical scores of the "super bands" is a challenge. Tommy Dorsey, Les Brown, Count Basie, Harry James and others have a count-in impossible since they are no longer in print. Hochstrasser says, "He solves this problem by writing the scores for all 18 instruments himself. This process involves listening to recordings of each piece, noting the music and reproducing copies for the band's five saxophones, five trumpets, three trombones, guitar, bass, drum and piano, a combined effort of 75-90 hours for each song before it is ready to perform.

Hochstrasser says he is trying to preserve the flavor of the Big Band era. "We have a good response, and it gets better," he says, noting there is a resurgence of the sound-on-the-East-Coast right now. He predicts it should catch on in Idaho by 1988.

The Sun Valley Co. is trying to recreate the atmosphere and attitude that was prevalent during the 1930s and '40s. "Years of the resort," Carl Wilcox, public relations director for Sun Valley Co., says the Big Band sound will bring back that "pizzazz."

English professor, poet named Idaho Writer in Residence

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

LEWISTON — Once again, Gov. John Evans has pointed north to find Idaho's master of the written word.

In doing so, Evans has named Lewis-Clark State College associate professor English Robert Wrigley to serve as the state's Writer in Res-dence for 1986 and 1987.

As Idaho's second Writer in Residence, Wrigley follows University of Idaho English professor Ron McFarland to that position, which is sponsored by the Sun Valley Company, the Arts and Humanities Commission on the Arts and — the Asso-

In 1976 he won his first National Ed-owment for the Arts Creative Writing Fellowship grant of $7,500. His second NEA Fellowship came in 1984, with a stipend of $12,500. And in 1985 he received one of the inaugura-tions from the Idaho Commissifellowship carried a stipend of $3,500.

During his tenure, Wrigley will give public readings of his work and offer workshops in writing at high schools and college throughout the state. A yearly stipend of $5,000 accompanies Wrigley and forwarded his name to Evans.

Wrigley has published poems, articles and essays in more than 60 literary magazines nationally. "The

McFarland noted that he was often used as a "substitute teacher" and that he would rather have schools on his schedule visit him than to meet closely with 30 or 40 students really interested in writing, rather than have him speak to mass assemblies or teach full English classes.

On Wrigley's part, he remains un-committed as to how the position should be handled. "Without actuality having begun, I can't say. There will be no tours until March when I will go through five southern Idaho towns including Twin Falls," he says, adding that he intends to come to visiting Twin Falls sometime in March. And like McFarland before him, he sings praises for the College of Southern Idaho's assistant professor of English, William Studebaker. Besides having toured Maple Valley with the CSU professor, Wrigley calls Studebaker's poetry "wonderful" and "making the country come alive. When you hit him, I can see Shoshone Falls, the Snake River Canyon and the Shoshone Ice caves."

Pointing out one difference in style, Wrigley says, "Ron sought to promote Idaho writers. Me too. But I want to help writers in the West, particularly the Northwest. This is a rich area for writing."

In addition to being a wonderful place to live, Wrigley notes that the Northwest has several universities

among them the University of ing anywhere else but Idaho. His ex-posure to the Northwest came durty of Montana, where he earned a master's degree in creative writing.

Next, he took his first teaching position at Southern Illinois University. There, he found "Ritter fishing rods, no mountain and no forests." Swearing to take the first job in the West, he found open, Wrigley says he saw an ad for CSC, and "thought he'd never been in Lewiston-jumped at the job. Now, he proclaims his two loves to be his wife—an Idaho native—and Idaho."

Wrigley says he is looking forward to visiting Twin Falls sometime in March. And like McFarland before him, he sings praises for the College of Southern Idaho's assistant professor of English, William Studebaker. Besides having toured Maple Valley with the CSU professor,

Wrigley calls Studebaker's poetry "wonderful" and "making the country come alive. When you hit him, I can see Shoshone Falls, the Snake River Canyon and the Shoshone Ice caves."

For writers, his advice is simple. "Go read Milton. Great writers are great readers who like to read," he says, "including myself." He points out that it takes a great deal of reading to "recognize the grand subtleties of writing."

Movie pairs Holmes, Watson as youthful sleuths

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Since 1903, movies have treated the world's most famous sleuth using every possible approach, from "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" to "Sherlock Holmes—Secret Brother" to "Seven Per Cent Solution" in which he meets Sigmund Freud.

Through it all, no one ever thought of examining the detective's boyhood — until now. The notion occurred to screenwriter Chris Columbus, hus ("Gremlins," "The Goonies") and his script won the enthusiasm of Steven Spielberg, who enlisted Barry Levinson to direct "Young Sherlock Holmes."

The Paramount movie has been released for the holiday trade amid unorthodox reviews but amid good business. Levinson recently talked about the movie at his headquarters in Spielberg's Amblin Entertainment complex at Universal Studio.

He had just returned from lunch with the two young stars of the movie, Nicholas Rowe and Alan Cox, who were preparing to leave for another publicity whirl in Australia. "Why do movies take so long to make?" Levinson mused. "I can tell you how long. Young Sherlock Holmes took. I figure my son was conceived about the time I began writing."

Time has also altered one of his stars. Cox, now 15, has grown seven inches since playing young Watson. Rowe had already reached his full six feet.

The new film is only Levinson's third as director. A co-writer of Mel Brooks' comedies as well as "And Justice for All" and "Best Friends," he wrote and directed the admirable "Diner" based on his youth in Baltimore, followed by "The Natural" with Robert Redford.

The Columbus script portrays a lean, gaunt Holmes and Watson as teenagers. Holmes' dad is a man of great literature, though they were good, exciting stories. Unfortunately, they are not applicable to today's audience. They are a bit antiquated; films have accelerated

"I read some of the books to get familiar with the material," the director said. "I found they were not great literature, though they were good, exciting stories. Unfortunately, they are not applicable to today's audience. They are a bit antiquated; films have accelerated the pace." Holmes and Watson are teenagers, and Levinson added sadly: "I had to make the London schoolmates who are the heroes of the story of series of films on two levels: for their who of unexplained dealing. The movie contains disclaimers at the beginning and end admitting that Arthur Conan Doyle had written that Arthur

Bruce, Madonna top Billboard's pop charts for '85

By ROBERT HILBURN

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — The Material Girl was the battle, but the Boss won the war.

Or was it vice versa?

No doubt about one thing: Madonna and Bruce Springsteen were the year's dominant pop artists, according to Billboard magazine, the leading record industry trade publication.

But the matter of exactly who was the most successful artist is a bit sticky — a reminder that determining who is hot and who is not in the record business is partially a guessing game.

The reason for the confusion is that the record industry does not follow the film community's lead of putting its financial cards on the table. Studios routinely report film grosses to the press, but record companies do not customarily announce album sales.

In this vacuum, the industry turns to the Billboard chart for perspective. The magazine's year-end survey of its weekly album and singles sales charts has been, for years, the industry's standard for crowning its sales champion.

The winner this year: Madonna, thanks to her album, "Like a Virgin," and a series of smash singles, including "Material Girl" and "Crazy for You."

But Billboard overrules its own chart summary by declaring on Page 1 of its Dec. 28 issue, "Bruce was the Boss in '85."

The problem with relying solely on the charts is (a) they do not include concert grosses, which are an increasingly important part of the pop world... and (b)... they are merely an approximation of sales because they measure relative sales performance.

While No. 1 record one week might sell three times as many copies as the No. 1 record the next week, they both get the same number of points in Billboard's year-end tally for their weeks at No. 1.

Though Madonna may have earned more points in Billboard's charts, Springsteen was apparently tallying more points in the real world. He had the best-selling album of 1985, "Born in the U.S.A." sold more than 10 million units (its mid-1984 release), and he turned in what was far the most successful tour.

For all its problems, however, Billboard's year-end chart survey does give an approximation of how we're doing.

things went in 1985. Besides, the winners and losers depend on the print — and the losers can point to the imperfections to rationalize their poor performances.

Based on Billboard's ranking of albums and singles, here are the 10 artists who did the best on the pop charts during 1985: Madonna, Springsteen; Prince, Phil Collins, Bryan Ferry, Hall & Oates, Tina Turner, Tears for Fears, Tina Turner, Billy Ocean and the Pointer Sisters.

They were followed by Hall & Oates, U2, Kool & the Gang, Don Henley, Survivor, REO Speedwagon, Billy Joel, Foreigner, John Fogerty and Huey Lewis and the News.

That's the 10 most successful pop albums as measured by Billboard:

1. Bruce Springsteen's "Born in the U.S.A."
2. Bryan Adams' "Reckless..."
3. Madonna's "Like a Virgin..."
4. Wham!'s "Make It Big..."
5. Tina Turner's "Private Dancer..."
6. "Phil Collins' "No Jacket Required..."
7. "Beverly Hills Cop" sound track
8. Billy Ocean's "Solid Gold..."
9. Prince's "Purple Rain..."
10. Tears for Fears' "Songs From the Big Chair"

Billboard's top singles:

1. Wham!'s "Careless Whisper..."
2. Madonna's "Like a Virgin..."
3. Wham!'s "Wake Me Up Before You Go-Go..."
4. Foreigner's "I Want to Know What Love Is..."
5. Chaka Khan's "I Feel for You..."
6. Hall & Oates' "Out of Touch..."
7. Tears for Fears' "Everybody Wants to Rule the World..."
8. Diana Ross' "Money for Nothing..."
9. Madonna's "Crazy for You..."
10. Hall & Oates' "Take on Me..."

Alabama's "40-Four Weeks" was declared the most popular country album, followed by the Judds' "Why Not Me," George Strait's "Does Fort Worth Ever Cross Your Mind," Ricky Skaggs' "Country Boy" and Charlie Daniels' "Friendship."

The leading country singles: Ronnie Milsap's "Lost in the Fifties Tonight," Lee Greenwood's "Dixie," Brooks & Dunn's "Anytime," Reba McEntire's "Click," Michael Jackson's "Don't Stop Believin'," Rod Stewart's "Sailing," Wynona-Johnny Cash-Cris Kristofferson's "Highwayman" and Kristofferson's "Highwayman."

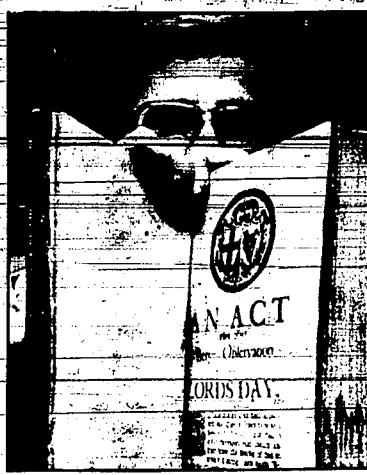

The black-list music chart was topped by Freddie Jackson's "Rock and Roll."

While No. 1 record one week might sell three times as many copies as the No. 1 record the next week, they both get the same number of points in Billboard's year-end tally for their weeks at No. 1.

Though Madonna may have earned more points in Billboard's charts, Springsteen was apparently tallying more points in the real world. Book returned to library a bit late

Librarian displays rare 328-year-old book returned to Pennsylvania library in overnight depository

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A rare, 328-year-old book apparently missing from the state library since the last century, was found returned in a library book drop bin, library officials said Tuesday.

The book, a volume of British laws enacted in 1656 and 1657, was discovered Monday in an envelope of suspected library officials, said David Hoffman, director of library services for the Pennsylvania State Library.

The battered leather-bound, 2½-inch-thick copy of "A Compendium's Collection" was published in 1657 and was one of the books purchased for the General Assembly under the direction of Benjamin Franklin, who was ordered to develop the state library.

"It's part of the collection of books that was purchased during the Colonial period when the General Assembly was meeting in Philadelphia," said state librarian Elliot Shekrot.

The volume was bought sometime after 1745 and before the Revolution, he said.

"It would really be hard to place a value on it. The thing that makes it unique is that it was an original," Hoffman said. "I could tell you what it would be worth. It's irreplaceable."

When asked how much the overdue charge for the book would amount, Shekrot said, "It's probably up in the thousands but the most important thing to us is that it was returned."

He said they included a zoning ordinance to limit development in suburban London and "many 'feelgood anti-London laws."

Shekrot said a library worker found the envelope in the library book drop Saturday, but it was not opened until Monday. There was no identification of who returned the book.

When asked how much the book would cost, Shekrot said, "It's part of the collection of books that was purchased during the Colonial period when the General Assembly was meeting in Philadelphia," said state librarian Elliot Shekrot.

Many of the paintings were acquired in Paris by two sophisticated Russian collectors, Ivan Morozov and Sergei Shchukin. Following the Russian Revolution, the collections were nationalized.

The selection will go to the National Gallery that will go to Russia is not yet resolved. But the Young Spanish Woman with a Guitar, Odilon Redon's "Flowers in a Vase," Berthe Morisot's "The Sisters," and Georges Seurat's "Nude with a Peacock" will be sent to Russia.

The list will be subject to fine-tuning," Brown said. "There is the possibility of including some American painters like Thomas Eakins and Whistler.

After the conference call, Brown said that the prospect of having the show had been in the works for some time. "We foresaw that if anything came of Geneve II, it would be a cultural agreement," he said.

Times and the critics from Newsweek and Time.

HOLLYWOOD — Wrestling may have its "Tuesday Night Titans" but the movies have the rough 'n' tumble Gene Siskel and Roger Ebert.

The Hollywood movie-making establishment endorses the pair's rare union on their importance as national critics.

With their triple-threat attack syndicated newspaper reviews, local and national TV, industry insiders say that those verbal counterparts have emerged as two of the most valued entities in the United States, ranking (they say) behind Vincent Canby of The New York Times and the critics from Newsweek and Time.

That is an opinion that was echoed throughout the industry. The Los Angeles Times talked with two dozen publicists and marketing and production executives to find out Hollywood's "take" on them.

WASAFC accepts applications

SANTA FE, N.M. — The Western States Arts Foundation is now accepting applications for its Thirteenth Western States Performing Arts Tour.

Professional performing arts companies and artists are invited to apply for inclusion on the 1987-88 roster of artists for which the Foundation provides support to presenters across the West for booking engagements.

To be considered for the tour roster, companies and artists must have a touring history and managerial skills necessary to tour through twelve Western states.

Deadline for receipt of applications to the 1987-88 Performing Arts Tour is Feb. 1. Applications are available upon request from Western States Arts Foundation, 302 Shelby St., Suite 200, Santa Fe, N.M. 87501, (505) 988-1166. Questions should be directed to Colleen Jennings, director of performing arts.

Companies and artists are chosen for the Western States Performing Arts Tour by panels of artists, presenters and arts administrators with the purpose of making quality performing arts available to Western communities.

The 1987-88 panelists, who will meet March 3-5 in Albuquerque, N.M., include Barry Bonifas, former director of programs at the University of Idaho, who will serve as Chair of the Music Panel; and Michael Reinbold, executive director of the Idaho Commission on the Arts and WESTAR Board Member, who will serve on the Theatre Panel.

On the cover

Four years after scenery change, Newhart remains CBS stalwart

By ANDREW J. EDELSTEIN

When "Newhart" debuted four years ago, it was kind of a thinking man's "Green Acres." A sophisticated urban couple — in this case, writer Dick Loudon (Bob Newhart) and his wife Joanna (Mary Frann) — moved to the country where they attempted to impose logic and reason on the local population. The series marked the return-to-prime-time of Newhart, the king of button-down cool, whose Saturday-night show on CBS was an audience favorite during the mid-1970s. On "Newhart" he played the new owner of the rustic Stratford Inn, a switch from Chicago psychologist Dr. Bob Hartley, his character on "The Bob Newhart Show." By way of contrast, Newhart's CBS Saturday-night colleague Mary Tyler Moore recently returned to prime time in "Mary," which seems little more than an updated version of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

Despite the change of scenery, Newhart is still Newhart: a skeptical, somewhat skeptical, a hip, middle-aged square peering out at the world through his half-glasses. Since its debut, the series has proven to be a consistent top-25 show and is part of CBS's strong Monday-night lineup.

Last season, Dick moved out from behind the desk at Stratford to become host of a local talk show, "Vermont Today," which has given the show new areas to explore. As the show has grown, Newhart has receded slightly into the background and let some of the secondary characters take the spotlight, which has also added to the show's depth.

And the show's writers have cooked up quite a bunch of characters.

Bob Newhart now stars as a talk-show host

There is Michael Harris (Peter Scolari), the Yuppie producer of "Vermont Today," an arrogant, calculating and funny man. He's the type of guy who lists as his long-term goals: "1) accomplish takeover of CBS, and 2) get chummy with Sinatra."

His foil is his girlfriend, Stephanie Vanderkellen (Julia Duffy), a spoiled princess who works as the Stratford Inn's chambermaid. This season, Miss Duffy has emerged as the strongest challenger to Shelly Long of "Cheers" as the best supporting female comic in series TV.

Stephanie and Michael, however, resemble normal people. The show's most memorable creations are something else again: the three weird handyman brothers, Larry (William Sanderson), Darryl (Tony Papenfuss) and Darryl (John Voldstad). The two Darryls are mute; only Larry talks. They give an other-worldly aura to the placid environment of rural Vermont and have also become cult favorites: whenever they enter, the studio audience cheers wildly.

ON THE COVER: Bob Newhart and Mary Frann star in "Newhart," which airs Mondays on KMVT, Twin Falls, and KBCI; Boise.

Mary Tyler Moore got on-the-job training for her role as columnist

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q. Now that Mary Tyler Moore has returned to a regular TV series, what's the series about and what part does she play? — M.B.

A. MTM stars in a CBS-TV series titled, simply enough, "Mary." Her co-star is James Farentino. MTM portrays a so-called "consumer advocate" columnist for a Chicago daily newspaper. That's why Mary spent some time in the Windy City not long ago researching her part at the offices of the Chicago Sun-Times. Columnists for the paper were eager to give her on-the-job hints. Wonder if the newbies auditioned for jobs as

Q. Isn't it true that Tony Bennett secretly would like to give up singing to concentrate on his first love, painting? — S.D.

A. No, not at all. Bennett loves to both sing and paint. His vocal ac-accomplishments are, of course, well-established. Singing pays the bills. But Tony has long been a serious artist. I've seen some of his paintings, and I'm impressed. And apparently I'm not alone. One of Bennett's oil paintings, titled "The South of France," was recently purchased by a Hollywood star with a keen eye for beauty — Cary Grant.

AH, VANITY! A middle-aged movie star is devoting all of her time and energy on a TV personality who has been gay for years; but firmly in the closet. She tells friends she is sure she'll be able to turn him from men to women. Hollywood money is not betting on her.

Q. As a teacher of English history, I'm eagerly anticipating a new film about the life of Lady Jane Grey, the young English queen who reigned for a brief nine days, and then was beheaded as a political pawn. Is the treatment historically accurate? R.Y.

A. This film has been directed by Trevor Nunn with scrupulous adherence to the period details of the 16th century. Although it's both an adventure and a moving love story, all unfolded against a background of Tudor court intrigue and royal duplicity, there's no emphasis on explicit gore. I've seen the film, and can assure you that Lady Jane's execution scene is handled tastefully, or with as much taste as could be mustered considering the harrowing real-life circumstances. Helena Bonham Carter, an 18-year-old English actress, stars as the tragic Lady Jane, and she's extremely believable in this, her first screen role. Keep an eye out for TV's late movies; you might catch "Nine Days a Queen," the 1936 film starring Nova Pilbeam.

Q. Did Victoria Principal so badly injure herself that she'll have to drop out of "Dallas" completely? — O.P.

A. Not so. Victoria suffered a bad back injury that was diagnosed as a herniated disc. She was forced to lay off from her "Dallas" chores for about three weeks. That's when rumors of a permanent bowout began to surface. But Principal had always assured me she'd soon be back on the job. By early December she was — although practically encased in a supporting back brace. Victoria was so enthusiastic about her return that she decided that in addition to "Dallas," she'd join

Q. We hear that Van Johnson left the Broadway company of the hit musical "La Cage aux Folles" because he could no longer stand playing a homosexual. What's his problem? — J.M.

A. Nothing to it at all. Keep in mind that the Broadway musical is based on the fabulously successful French movie about a nightclub operator and his lover, a male fan dancer. The sexual persuasion of the characters is no secret, of course, and Johnson knew that when he signed on for the Broadway run. His contract with the show lapsed Dec. 1, and Van didn't renew. He tells me he didn't stay because he had an ear infection that needed medical attention.

misunderstandings through the years, Jane and Peter Fonda have professionally kept things strictly non-competitive. One reason is that they are markedly different types of performers. Jane prefers social statement and prestige roles while Peter likes action and more populist parts. That's why I was bit surprised when Jane told me she and Peter are working on a movie project together, a "period" western. And, wouldn't you know it, Fonda's sister-and-brother-plan-to-play competing siblings.

Q. I read that Michael Douglas and Kathleen Turner perform all their own hazardous stunts in their new adventure film, "The Jewel of the Nile." Come on, isn't this, to put it mildly, pure baloney? — W.Y.

A. While these stars didn't do all their own hair-raising stunt work in "Jewel," they gamely performed the lion's (and honest) share of many sequences that could easily have been left to trained professionals. Years ago, intrepid Michael insisted on doing his own leaps and jumps in the TV series, "The Streets of San Francisco," and did similar duty for movies like "The China Syndrome" and "Romancing the Stone," precursor to "Jewel of the Nile." As for Kathleen, she went through some hairy sequences in "Stone," and took an intensive course in fencing for one sequence of "Jewel." Plus, she dangled from the side of a speeding train for additional footage. Though she was carefully tied on to prevent falling or being crushed, the scene was so hazardous, she vowed that she would never attempt anything like it again.

NO LADY, NO SALE: A famous singer/dancer-pranced into Bloomingdale's in Manhattan with her personal maid in tow. When a sales clerk in the linens department was too busy to give her immediate attention, Mme. Star sent over her maid with this message, "My lady wishes for you to wait on her immediately." The salesperson, not one whit intimidated, replied in syllables audible throughout the area, "She may be your lady, but fortunately, she isn't mine. Please tell her she'll have to waltz her turn just like everybody else!"

Q. I caught an absorbing Gary Cooper action movie on the TV late show, all about a ship's officer unfairly accused of a deplorable act that cost lives, thus creating a maritime

JERRY LEWIS
Movie sequel upcoming trial. Can you supply the title, which for the life of me, escaped me? — W.D.

A. Oddly, Gary Cooper starred in two different movies with this same theme. Though produced two decades apart, they weren't remakes. The first, "Souls at Sea," was filmed in 1937; the second, "The Wreck of the Mary Deare," in 1959. Now, it's up to you to recall which plot fits the deep-sea puzzle you're trying to fathom.

Q. I keep reading that Jerry Lewis will soon make a big movie comeback as a comedian. Anything to it? — L.H.

A. Lewis made a movie comeback of sorts in director Martin Scorsese's "King of Comedy," in which Lewis co-starred with Robert DeNiro as a Johnny Carson-type TV talk show host. The movie was not a comedy, and it didn't do well at the box office. Now, Jerry tells me, he's eager to try again for a comedy comeback. That's why he's set to co-star with former SNL funnyman Joe Pesci in "Son of the Nutty Professor." If the title is familiar, it's only because Lewis starred, directed, and co-authored the 1963 original movie, "The Nutty Professor." It'll be good to have Lewis and laughter reunited onscreen.

Q. Irene Dunne, one of Hollywood's greatest film stars, was also a great lady. What's become of her? Is she still alive? — G.S.

A. Dunne, who was 81 on Dec. 20, is alive and well and living in retirement with her grandson and granddaughter in Beverly Hills, Calif. She was recently the recipient of coveted honors for lifetime achievement from the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. Irene's career lasted from 1930 to her early retirement in 1952, and it was densely packed with memorable flicks ("Showboat," "Cimarron" and "I Remember Mama," among many others). Even the picture of the perfect lady onscreen had a lively sense of impish humor. She recently confessed to me that the only actor she ever had a crush on was the late Richard Burton — whom she never met.

Q. I roared at the off-the-wall antics of Chevy Chase and Dan Aykroyd in their new movie comedy, "Spies Like Us," in which they play a couple of mixed-up intelligence operatives. They also co-starred as spies in an earlier movie, didn't they? — E.K.

A. You're as confused as the boys are in "Spies Like Us." First-off, this movie represents the first screen pairing of Chevy Chase and Dan Aykroyd, though they did make many appearances in tandem on TV's "Saturday Night Live." Chevy played a bungling detective (not a spy) in "Foul Play," his auspicious screen-debut, while Dan was involved in bizarre crime-fighting in his big film hit, "Ghostbusters." Most coincidentally, Aykroyd originally opted for a career in criminology at Ottawa's Carlton University, studying this subject for four years before comedy beckoned.

Q. We were amused by John Lithgow's performance as the meanie toy manufacturer in "Santa Claus: The Movie." Somehow, he looked different, yet I can't put my finger on it. Could it have been his hair style? — N.C.

A. Not quite, but you're in the ballpark. Producers Iya Salkind and Pierre Spengler tell me that when Lithgow saw the first rushes, he decided he didn't seem quite cruel enough for the role. Therefore, he flew to San Francisco, where he commissioned a dental specialist to fit him with false teeth that would convey a more appropriate image. So dedicated is John, he supplied these choppers at his own expense.

'General Hospital' star relishes 'the fast food business of acting'

BY JOHN N. GOUDAS

"General Hospital" fans know Shelley Taylor Morgan as Lorena Sharpe, the sexy and forthright lady who fell in love with the town hunk and let him step all over her. In real life, Shelley would never allow this to happen to her. She is a very together person who took charge of her life after two unsuccessful marriages and followed a dream and made it happen.

"I got married at a very young age and was into believing the myth about marriage. The first time it was a case of both of us being too young and the second time, I was stuck in the role of housewife with a man who was very much a chauvinist."

Shelley has always wanted to try her hand at acting but circumstances got in the way (not to mention husbands) and she ended up working in an office, which didn't satisfy her at all. Little by little, Shelley started making the rounds and before long landed small bits in various TV shows. The big break came with "General Hospital."

Producer Gloria Monty's unerring eye saw something special in Shelley and gave her the juicy part of Lorena. Sexy Shelley was paired with muscular Steve Bond (Jimmy Lee Holt) and they ignited the afternoon soap.

In her personal life, Shelley has found the ideal man in builder Greg Taylor. He is the rock in her life and she attached his last name to hers as a sort of tribute to him. "Greg supported me financially and emotionally when I was out there trying to break into the business. He believed in me all the time and he helped me to believe in myself."

Although Shelley describes her romantic alliance with Greg as solid and near perfect, the couple has no intention of getting married, at least not in the foreseeable future. Shelley has decided not to have children and she sees no real reason for getting married.

Outspoken and honest Shelley enjoys the challenge of playing Lorena's emotional swings but knows that soaps have to be done fast and there's little time for shadings. She calls acting on a soap "the fast food business of acting" and when she starts to lament the fact that there may not be enough time to flesh out a scene, she just tells herself to "keep wrapping the burgers."

CHANNEL CHATTER:

People switching channels during "General Hospital" and "Guiding Light" may notice more and more familiar faces on NBC's competing soap "Santa Barbara." New to the cast is pretty Robin Mattson, who has had important roles on "General Hospital" (playing the institutionalized Heather Webber), "Ryan's Hope" (as the manipulative Delia), and "Guiding Light" (playing strong-willed Hope Bauer). On "Santa Barbara," Mattson again gets to play a dominating character in Gina DeMott.

Actors Steve Weber and Brian Bloom, who play Kevin Gibson and Dusty Donovan, respectively, on "As the World Turns," both appear in a recently released film. Both have featured roles in the new comedy drama "Flanagan."

In two "One Life to Live" items of note, Michael Storm is appearing in an off-Broadway production of "Loose Connections," which is directed by co-star Jack Palance. Ironically, it is Storm's character, Larry Woick, who is very much at odds with Palance's Ivan Kipling in the current storyline. Also, Blair Underwood is joining the cast in a newly created role of Bobby Blue.

Audiences trade views over TV in U.S.-Soviet 'citizen's summit'

By RENEE SCHOOF
The Associated Press

SEATTLE — After taping a three-hour "citizens' summit" linking about 400 Soviets and Americans by satellite, television host Phil Donahue said his only regret was that the Soviets weren't more candid.

With the exception of an artist who mentioned water pollution, no one from the Leningrad audience criticized any Soviet policy, a hoarse Donahue said after the taping Sunday.

He conceded that his aggressive style and concentration on controversy may have put the Soviets on the defensive.

Within minutes after the show began, Donahue was asking such questions as "On what issues do you vote?"

"We vote just as you do," for national and local representatives and some judges; a man in Leningrad replied.

Other questions were less easy to dismiss. Donahue said he did not want to wait until the final minutes to raise issues like Afghanistan and human rights abuses.

Soviet participants generally defended their government, said they had nothing to protest, described Americans as ignorant about the U.S.S.R. and claimed that views of an "Iron Curtain" were exaggerated.

"We do have prejudices about one another," Donahue said in his closing comments.

The program seemed to do little to reduce the prejudice. Lines of argument were clearly drawn. Participants were rarely asked follow-up questions or given time to elaborate on their answers.

PHIL DONAHUE
International moderator

When a Soviet man asked why the United States had missiles in West Germany and other parts of Europe, an American responded by asking why missiles point west from East Germany.

So much of the questioning went along similar lines that there seemed little time to chat.

An Alaska fisherman said he wouldn't have bothered to participate if he knew so much of the talk would be "political." He spoke of good times with Soviet fishermen in Dutch Harbor, Alaska, in the Aleutian Islands.

A Soviet artist said he liked the fisherman's face and would like to paint him. Faces in the audience showed an eagerness to talk, he said.

The Americans were indeed eager, ready to debate. The Soviets seemed to insist that their government was perfect.

Soviet moderator Vladimir Pozner said the session succeeded in showing the different ways in which people from each country view themselves and each other, as well as a common desire for peace.

"This will be a first step, albeit a trembling one, a first step toward understanding," Pozner said.

Donahue said he and Pozner have discussed the possibility of another "citizens' summit," probably with audiences from different cities.

Both audiences were selected by Marily O'Reilly, freelancing for Multimedia Entertainment, which syndicates Donahue's programs. Ms. O'Reilly said she was free to choose whomever she wanted in the Soviet Union.

Her selections in both sides included factory workers, fishermen, farmers, doctors, teachers, bus and cab drivers and students.

Ms. O'Reilly said before and after the taping that the Soviets were not fed any party line. Participants in the Leningrad audience also insisted they spoke freely.

The program was initiated and co-produced by the Documentary Guild, an independent Massachusetts outfit. Other producers were KING-TV, an NBC affiliate where the Seattle-part of the program was taped, and Gostelradio, Soviet television.

Charles Kuralt reflects on years spent finding stories 'on the road'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Some of Charles Kuralt's rules for on-the-road journalism:

Keep yourself out of the story. When covering the local tricycle race, never ride the three-wheeler.

While doing interviews, never talk to anybody about anything important.

And at the end of a day's work, never eat in a roof-top restaurant. "It's never the best place in town," he said.

Kuralt, who has worked at CBS News since 1956, began searching for America's back-yard stories in 1967. His Ma-and-Pa features have carved a distinctive niche in broadcasting. By temperament and physique, the paunchy Kuralt figures he's doing what he likes and does best.

"I have the best job in journalism," he said in an interview. "For all these years, I have resolutely ignored the news... My job is to make sure that no musical saw player, no one-room schoolhouse, and swimming pig goes unremarked in America."

And he really enjoys gabbing with people, the only exceptions being "self-important people, the kind you run into in business and politics," he said.

He's not interested in famous people. He figures the most famous subject "On the Road" he did was Wahoo McDaniel, the former pro football linebacker who became a wrestler.

The perks of the road include having no bosses, no jangling phones and no office politics. The van he shares with cameraman Izzy Bleckman and soundman Larry Giannecchi Jr. goes wherever the road bends. They're only concerned with finding interesting stories, timely gasoline, the best cooking in town and, at day's end, a warm bed.

Kuralt professes to know more about the country's motels than its moods. "The state of motels has improved vastly," Kuralt said. "There is a motel nearly everywhere. But we never stay in any fancy places because of our bus."

The cheapest room was outside Charleston, W. Va. — $6.50 for a bed, but no TV set.

In his 18 years on the road, Kuralt never got a speeding ticket. "We got a warning once in Amarillo, Texas, for some minor traffic violation," he said.

Kuralt's recently released book, appropriately titled "On the Road and also served as CBS' Latin America correspondent.

The Latin America assignment was exhausting, he said, and he lived in the back-of-the-book section of the news. He reported from Vietnam broadcast pieces — those gems of stories about the uncommon common man — just as they involved the fear of getting beat on a story.

Kuralt, who comes off the road this weekend to anchor "CBS News Sunday Morning," hasn't always lived to letting him shape his current job.

First dramatic series for HBO remains a cable-TV innovator

By JERRY BUCK
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — When "The Hitchhiker" sticks out his thumb on HBO he never knows where the ride is going to take him. His traveling companion may be a little strange, the ride discomforting and the destination bizarre.

"The Hitchhiker" is an adult anthology — offering half-hour psychological thrillers. "Each story is intended to be a cautionary tale," said Lewis Chesler, who is co-executive producer with Riff Markowitz.

New episodes starting in January include Barry Bostwick as a novelist whose fake suicide ends unusually; Peter Coyote as a director who manipulates an actress preparing for a big performance; Sandra Bernhard as a derelict who finds a deadly white powder; and Lisa Blount as a wholesome pop star who tries to update her image.

"The Hitchhiker" made its debut as the first dramatic series for Home Box Office in October 1983, two years before the commercial networks revived anthologies with NBC's "Amazing Stories" and "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" and CBS' "The Twilight Zone."

"The Hitchhiker" also pioneered the concept of bringing motion picture techniques to the home screen.

The producers hired film directors, including Roger Vadim ("Barbarella"), Paul Verhoeven ("Soldier of Orange"), Philip Noyce ("Heatwave"), Mike Hodges ("Flash Gordon") and Carl Schenkel ("Out of Order"), plus music-video director Brian Grant.

"I'd always wanted to do dramatic shows," Chesler said. "So I went to (HBO) and said, 'Look, pay television gives a certain license with regard to ideas which we can embrace and regular television cannot. And we have greater leeway in visual content, language and violence.' I remembered that 'The Twilight Zone' had been a very successful show and at that time had never been revived. Now, for the first time, we could take a psychological-oriented series and add these other elements. You could make it darker than it ever was."

Chesler said that because the audience tunes to HBO for movies he felt the series had to offer theatrical feature values.

Sandra Bernhard stars in an upcoming episode on HBO.

"What we could do here was to feel — make a series of miniature films," he said. "People watch HBO because they want to be surprised and they don't want familiarity."

Chesler said HBO made a survey and found the pilot of three half-hour shows was the highest-rated original program in the history of pay television.

"After that, HBO gave us additional funding and we went after feature film writers, directors and actors," he said. "We wanted people who'd never done television before. Because they saw these as small films they were willing to participate."

"The Hitchhiker" might be considered a "Twilight Zone" with nudity. Since virtually every program includes some instance of nudity, it seems to be obligatory.

Chesler was asked if it wasn't limiting to include nudity in every show. "Some of our shows are fantastical, some horror, some erotic, some psychological, so we have plenty of chances available to us," he said.

Sports highlights

10:30 a.m. (NBC) NFL FOOTBALL PLAYOFFS AFC semi-final, Cleveland Browns at Miami Dolphins.

The post-season's second round starts with what most experts consider a mismatch, with the 8-8 Browns, winners of the weak AFC Central, travelling to the Orange Bowl in Miami, where the defending AFC champion Dolphins win nearly 80 percent of the time.

Browns rookie quarterback Bernie Kosar returns to his college home field, where he led the Miami Hurricanes to a national championship two years ago. This time, however, he has neither a superior team nor the home-field advantage. A Cleveland win would be a huge upset.

2 p.m. (CBS) NFL FOOTBALL PLAYOFFS NFC semi-final, Dallas Cowboys at Los Angeles Rams.

The winners of the NFC East visit the winners of the NFC West. That doesn't necessarily mean both teams are riding high, however. The Cowboys lost their regular-season finale at San Francisco two weeks ago, while the Rams were losing to their cross-town rival "Raiders" on the season's final Monday night game.

Best-bet films

8:35 a.m. (WTBS) The Phantom of the Opera A remake of the 1925 silent chiller, this 1943 version of the story of a badly disfigured composer who falls in love with a young singer stars Claude Rains. The film won Oscars for cinematography and art direction.

1 p.m. (KIVI) The Day of the Locust Based on the novel by Nathanael West, this film takes a depressing-but-fascinating-look-at 1930s Hollywood as seen through the eyes of a young artist. Donald Sutherland, Karen Black and Burgess Meredith star in this 1975 release.

7 p.m. (KMVT-KBCI) Superman Christopher Reeves debuts as the man of steel in this 1978 release, which led to a pair of sequels. The film chronicles the famed comic hero's journey to Earth, his upbringing in a small farm town and his transformation into a super crime-fighter. Margot Kidder stars as Lois Lane, with Gene Hackman as the evil Lex Luther.

Creator of TV's 'Barney Miller' returns with ABC commitment

By JERRY BUCK
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Danny Arnold sat on the edge of a chair, cigar in one hand, his spectacles in another, and talked about his return to television after an absence of three years.

An Emmy was on the desk behind him. He has won Emmys for "Welcome To It," "Barney Miller" also won a Peabody Award, and this year the Writers Guild of America presented the Paddy Chayefsky Laurel Award to Arnold—for a lifetime of excellence in television writing.

Bronze statues of horses, some with jockeys, were all over his office. After "Barney Miller" left the air in 1982 after seven seasons on ABC, Arnold spent a lot of time racing his horses here and in Europe.

"I closed down 'Barney Miller' when the major writers left," said Arnold, who underwent heart bypass surgery in 1979 and turned most of the work over to his assistants. "After I was ill and came back everyone was burned out. I was faced with the possibility of having to quality and figured it was time to get off."

"And on my new projects if I can't find the help to maintain the standards I won't do it."

The writer-producer has a commitment from ABC for three half-hour comedy series over the next two years.

Arnold, 61, is 45 pounds lighter than when he had surgery. His thick blond hair is graying at the temples. He usually has a cigar in his hand or his mouth, but after his illness he cut his consumption of 25 cigars a day down to three.

The first sitcom he will do is called "Joe Bash," which stars Peter Boyle as a New York City foot patrolman.

"He's cynical, disillusioned, dyspeptic and has written off the world," said Arnold. "He's only got a few years to retirement and his attitude is that if everybody out there wants to kill themselves, let them. He started out young and energetic and idealistic, but he found the more he did for people the more disillusioned he became."

He has some other ideas for pilots, including a romantic comedy. "I'll do as many as I feel I can do properly," Arnold said. "You can have a good pilot and a good cast, but if you don't have the people to write it each week it doesn't matter how good the pilot or cast is, there's no sense going forward."

After he ended "Barney Miller," he spent some time in Hawaii, then began spending time with his horses.

"I did very little creative work. I read a lot of scripts. I found I had a writing block. When you've worked for many years at a particular pace you're looking for something else.

Arnold also is involved in his lawsuit against Columbia Pictures Television over the syndication fees from "Barney Miller." He contends he has not received his rightful share of the syndication rights, which he estimates are worth $150 million.

In the future, he said, he will syndicate his new shows himself.

Why did he decide to come back?

"You spend a lot of years working hard," he said. "Then you achieve success and stop. I'd be in Hawaii or Europe and people would say, 'Hey, you're looking good. Now that you're retired you're really having fun.' That used to kill me. It was like waiting around to check-out."

"Some people enjoy retirement. But others, like me, find that the work was what brought the enjoyment. I don't need to work for money. But I felt I was vegetating. I just needed to work."

His doctors told him to exercise judgment about working. "I work at a much slower pace now. I used to work 20 hours a day. Now I can only work five. I get to a certain point in the day when the machinery turns off. But, I will confess, it's nice to be back. I feel better."

1985 will go down in TV history as network Year of the Takeover

By JAY SHARPUTT
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Ted Turner proposed buying CBS for $5.8 billion. CBS fought him and won. Capital Cities Communications proposed buying ABC for $3.5 billion and succeeded. And so it went, and quickly won RCA, parent of NBC, for $6.28 billion.

Such was 1985, network television's Year of the Takeover, a year in which press baron Rupert Murdoch also played a part with his $1.4 billion purchase of Metromedia's seven television stations.

The impending GE-RCA marriage drew criticism from consumer advocate Ralph Nader, who brooded about the effect GE's ownership would have on the independence of NBC News in reporting on areas in which GE is involved, such as the defense industry.

Not to worry. NBC news and entertainment executives said after the takeover was announced in December, GE will leave the network alone.

The takeover is by no means a certainty yet. It still needs approval by government regulatory agencies, and there also could be Justice Department and congressional objections. But all that will be faced in 1986.

As for 1985, it was a fine year for NBC, now leading in prime-time ratings, but just awful for ABC, now third in the Nielsens. It was not fun, either, for six-season ratings champ CBS, and not just because it was second in season-to-date evening ratings as the year ended.

As 1985 began, Gen. William C. Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit against CBS News still was under way. He subsequently dropped it. But then came Turner's takeover attempt, and enough turmoil in CBS News to make Job's woes seem only the warm-up act.

In wounding of Turner, CBS Inc. spent $1 billion to buy back about 21 percent of its stock, a move that forced it to sell some of its assets and lay off employees, including 74 at CBS News and another 40 in its records division.

At CBS News, there also was the ill-fated attempt to boost the ratings of the third-place "CBS Morning News" by installing as its co-anchor the bubbly Phyllis George, who had no news background.

The ratings stayed down and the much-criticized George quit after nine months (her co-anchor, Bill Kurtis, quit two months before she did and returned to his old job as an anchor at CBS-owned WBBM-TV in Chicago). George's arrival and departure were only two of many notable moves at both CBS News and in ABC's entertainment and news divisions in 1985.

CBS News President Edward M. Joyce, reportedly disliked by some staffers for what they called his cold, aloof style, was ousted. He was shifted to another post at CBS Inc. and his CBS News post taken by the man he succeeded in 1983, Van Gordon Sauter.

Sylvia Chase and Geraldo Rivera parted ways with ABC News. Each had been with the "20-20" series since it began in 1978. Chase took an anchoring job in San Francisco. Rivera, whose contract was not renewed, said he wanted to assess his life and career.

Over in ABC's corporate towers, major shifts also occurred as the network sought ways in November to avoid the prime-time ratings cellar for the second year in a row.

The shuffle started when Anthony Thomopoulos resigned as president of the ABC Broadcast Group. A day later, Lewis H. Eriksen was demoted from president to senior vice president of ABC Entertainment. Brad Stoddard, head of ABC Motion Pictures, was named the new president of the entertainment division.

Although this made for a lot of coming and goings at the networks, the year's swiftest hello-and-good-by was made by a civilian, Barry Bremen, a part-time hoaxter. During the Emmy Awards show in Pasadena, Calif., he boldly walked on stage and accepted an Emmy without authorization.

Led away in handcuffs, he later was charged with an infraction, "interfering with an event." Many television observers agreed that he had handily won the 1985 award for Most Notable Entrance-and-Exit-in-a Single Day.

But other, less-publicized awards also were made in 1985. They included:

• God Is My Co-Anchor Award: To Dan Rather, who, in speaking of news, told executives of CBS affiliates: "Insofar as it's humanly possible, and with God's help, we're going to report it straight."

• Here's One for You and You Award: To the Emmy Award Industry, which in 1984 made only six awards. It now needs five separate ceremonies to give more than 150 of the coveted honors to those who have made national television what it is today.

• Second Thought Award:

Forbes magazine, for its Dec. 16 edition that hit the stands a few days before RCA agreed to a takeover by GE. In that edition, it was written:

"Today RCA is more likely to acquire than be acquired."

• Good Night and Good Luck Award: To HBO for "Murrow," a docu-drama about Edward R. Murrow, the saintly CBS News correspondent. In one scene, Murrow (Daniel J. Travanti) faces CBS chief William S. Paley (Dabney Coleman) and warns him:

"This industry has got to be a helluva lot more than an industry. It has to hold up a mirror to the nation, to the world. That mirror must have no curves. And it must be held with a steady hand."

• Camelot Preservation Society Award: To ABC News chief Roone Arledge, for canceling the scheduled broadcast of a "20-20" story about the rumored affairs of Marilyn Monroe with both President John F. Kennedy and Kennedy's brother, Robert. Arledge said the story needed more work.

• With All Deliberate Speed Award: To the Federal Communications Commission, which approved the Capital Cities-ABC and Murdoch-Metromedia deals in one day, The same day.

• I Won't Dance, Don't Ask Me Award: To Phyllis George for asking Gary Dotson, convicted rapist, and Kathleen Crowell-Webb, his repentant accuser, to hug each other. They declined.

• I Will Tell It Like It Is No More Award: To Howard Cosell, who is leaving ABC Sports after a colorful, often controversial career spanning 20 years (it is not a complete exit, though; he will continue on ABC Radio).

• Can't We Just Be Friends Award: To the Screen Actors Guild which, citing uncertainty on how AIDS is transmitted, said that actors do not have to do "open-mouth" kissing scenes if they haven't been told about it in advance.

While TV did hit highs in 1985, viewers saw more of the same

By JOANNE OSTROW
The Denver Post

NBC aird Bill Cosby ran away with prime-time television in 1985, while CBS was busy fending off takeover bids and a libel suit and ABC was out to lunch.

NBC, which earned more primetime Emmy nominations than ABC and CBS combined, was, at last, first in the ratings. If it can keep its hold on first place, NBC will win the prime-time season for only the second time in television history.

Television went back-to-the-future in 1985. The year saw the revival of the domestic sitcom, with "The Bill Cosby Show" — the most-watched series, and a return to anthologies. There was innovation in the form of performance art on PBS and an international collaboration of cable, network- and independents—for 17 hours of Live Aid. For better or worse, the tone of TV's programming seemed to be catching up with its slick commercials.

"Dynasty" spawned "The Colbys," MTV began VH-1, Sam and Diane resumed flirting on "Cheers," Bobby Ewing was buried, former news anchor Christine Craft headed for a Supreme Court hearing and Howard Cosell wrote a bitter farewell.

It wasn't Phyllis George's year.

The three networks competed for dwindling audiences as VCR sales climbed to a million a month and cable reached 46 percent of all TV homes. CBS forecast its market share for 1985 would decline by 3 percent.

Those who stayed tuned found standouts: "Death of a Salesman" starring Dustin Hoffman on CBS; "Creation of the Universe" making science poetry on PBS; "Golden Girls" showing new respect for "mature" women on NBC; "Moonlighting" providing photogenic friction between Cybill Shepherd and Bruce Willis on ABC.

But the glut of programming was more of the moronic same—"Hollywood Beat" and "The Insiders" on ABC; "HelloTown" on NBC; "Stir Crazy" on CBS. The usual hookers, psychos, junkies, terrorists, cocaine dealers and murderers were met by the usual cop duos, undercover agents and rugged individualists, those law-and-order special agents with their own sometimes-less-than-legal codes of conduct and with their own series.

"The Cosby Show," with Bill Cosby and Phylicia Ayers-Allen, helped NBC to first place in the ratings.

Prime-time vigilantism won approval. Miniseries wouldn't quit. The trashy romp through "North and South" was awful and "Hollywood Wives" was worse. They were ABC's top-rated miniseries for the year. Vid-bloc made melodrama of Mussolini on IIB9 and NBC and of Christopher Columbus on CBS. TV movies rehashed the disease-of-the-week formula with one exception: NBC's "An Early Frost" was a sensitive treatment of AIDS.

Most haunting TV news image: the media stampede in Beirut at an unruly press conference with the hostages after the TWA hijacking in June.

Most gruesome TV sports image: Washington quarterback Joe Theismann's broken leg. Most obvious sign-of-the-Decline of Western Civilization as We Know It: Phyllis George's suggestion on the "CBS Morning News" that falsely accused rapist Gary Dotson and alleged victim Cathleen Crowell

Weib share a hug on camera. George joined the broadcast in January and resigned in August to "rearrange my priorities."

Some of the year's memorable moments were sales pitches. Whereas shows are stretched to fill time, commercials are honed to deliver an urgent message in an expensive instant. With prime-time spots selling for $75,000 to $270,000, no wonder they are more distinctive than the programs. Recall Wendy's spoof of dreary Soviet fashions. Apple's "Big Brother" computer scenarios during the Super Bowl. Levi's 501 jeans rock vignettes. Chanel No. 5's stark swimming-pool tableau. And, for holiday-nostalgia, Norelco's modern shaver, an old pal floating away from the camera, leaving familiar tracks in the snowy hills.

Non-linear was the watchword for '85. To engage the MTV generation, network television delivered its electrodes in disconnected bits. • See 1985 on Page 37

The Live Aid concert saw a collaboration of cable, network and independent TV.

"Miami Vice" was artful until it got called "last episodes" of "The Honeymooners" were a word-of-boring. (A parody of Crockett and Tubbs on HBO's "Not-Necessarily-the News" was apt.) The anthology formal, TV's version of the short story for viewers with shortening attention spans, was recycled with mixed results. Series came and went with little time to prove themselves — does anyone remember "Hall to the Chief?"

The evening newscasts added anchor stars to their titles, made cosmetic changes and gave up talk of expanding to an hour. "NBC Nightly News With Tom Brokaw" trumpeted new theme music by John Williams. "The CBS Evening News With Dan Rather" got a new set and showed the sweater-vested winner of the race since 1982 looking grayer. "ABC World News Tonight With Peter Jennings," a inarqueful narrowred the gap but most often lagged in third place. A weekly prime-time news magazine remained a dream; after 10 attempts at such a format in 10 years, NBC put off "Roger Mudd's American Almanac" until after the February '86 sweeps.

Pleasant couldn't say NBC's "Holloway," and nostalgia didn't redeem CBS' "Homeland," the "Big Chill" ripoff.

Showtime's first attempt at a miniseries, "Tender Is the Night," was a critical success and its so-called "last episodes" of "The Kid-vid toy spinoffs continued to enrage children's advocacy groups.

"Personailities" doubling as merchandise included He-Man, Transformer, Gobots and Gummibärns.

Television settled into an era of contraction, similar to the belt-tightening endured by the newspaper industry in the past decade. "The gravy train days are over," lamented one ABC News producer. The proof was in the buy-outs.

In a year of merger mania, CBS was the lonesome network for takeover attempts. Interoffice warfare and musical executive chairs. At the end of '85, it remained William Paley's network, despite takeover attempts of varying credibility by Ted Turner, Jesse Helms and Dan Rather. A costly recapitalization move by CBS prevented a hostile takeover bid by Turner but also required deep cuts in staff. Ten percent of the CBS News staff was cut — 74 employees, many of them the respected Old Guard from CBS News' glory days, were told to look for work. Ed Joyce was bumped and Van Gordon Sauter got his old job back as president of CBS News. Retired Gen. William Westmoreland sued CBS for $120 million but withdrew his libel action after a highly publicized 18-week trial.

NBC had its own merger mystique, as General Electric agreed to pay $6.2 billion for RCA Corp., NBC's parent company. And NBC News continued to eye the cable news field as a competitor to Ted Turner's CNN; a decision is expected by Jan. 31.

ABC braced for the January acquisition by Capital Cities Communications — the first transfer of ownership of a TV network in the history of broadcasting, at a cost of $3.5 billion. Advance word is that Cap Cities is a more "conservative" organization, eager to cut back the top-heavy network ranks. The question remains whether the corporation's conservative bent will have any visible impact on programming.

All this merging and converging in the industry can't be bad for viewers. Just as NBC came from behind to reset the rules this year, in '86 there will be realignment, retrenching and, with luck, rethinking about what TV should look like. If the gravy train days are numbered, maybe they'll take some of the slop with them.

'Dalton,' NBC's story of a drifter, seems to be drifting in TV limbo

By JERRY BUCK

The Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Getting "Dalton" to the air appears to be as difficult as the tasks the wandering hero encounters in the scripts.

A hurricane struck during filming in New Orleans. Flash floods caused a delay in Houston. In Florida, actor Charles Taylor had to trudge through the swamps.

Now, NBC has shoved the series onto the back burner. It's doubtful whether the series will be scheduled before March, just a few weeks ago it seemed the show would go in January.

Taylor sat down then to talk about the peripatetic loner he plays in "Dalton." The character is from the movie "Code of Vengeance," which was second in the Nielsen ratings last June.

Taylor plays a mysterious drifter who encounters people in trouble. It's sort of a contemporary "Shane." He travels in a camper van with only a white German shepherd named Wichita to keep him company. He's also been compared to "Rambo," but the character is much more complex and much less violent.

Taylor said, "We're trying to get a dash of 'Rambo'—on-the-road, but with a dash of heart. I'm not sure we're there yet. They have to put a little more soul into the character."

"Dalton," like its character, is a show on the go. "I think they have to keep the show on the road to make it work," said Taylor. "Where's he going to drift?"

The idea is to film two shows in each location. So far, four shows have been completed. When the series resumes production after a holiday layover, it will be in the Los Angeles area.

"I did a certain amount of searching myself when I was in college. If you went directly to Vietnam you missed that. So Dalton's doing that searching now. In his travels he comes upon the underdog, and he identifies with the underdog. He cares. He doesn't do it for any legal purposes. He doesn't care what's right or wrong. He just cares."

Taylor is the only continuing character in the show, but he said, "'Dalton' really has two stars—the landscape and Dalton. Part of the concept is to show how he deals with the landscape. There won't be much romance in the show, it's not a main theme, but certainly there will be women in his life. More so, there will be a certain spirituality to him. A metaphysical spirituality. He's in tune with nature."

Taylor is a newcomer whose experience includes repertory theater and a guest role in a "Knight Rider" episode (in which he also played the Dalton character), and parts in "Mu... She Wrote" and the movie "Mask." He's also a former bouncer at such New York night spots as Studio 54, Regine's, Maquie and the Red Parrot.

He grew up as an Air Force brat and probably moved more often than Dalton. He was born in this country but spent his first five years in Italy. He attended 12 public schools, ending up a star defensive halfback at a school in Detroit. The 6-foot-4, 185-pound Taylor was also a competitive wrestler.

"I was brought up on the road," he said. "We lived everywhere. My first language was Italian."

He went on to Oakland University in Michigan, where he discovered acting. After he performed in a college play, a teacher suggested he consider acting as a career.

He spent five years studying and acting at the Hedgerow Theatre in Philadelphia. Later, he moved to New York and became a bouncer. He said, "One night a guy jumped me with a knife. I wrestled him to the ground and then he almost bit my thumb off. At that point I realized that I had to get out of the job. I was going to look like 'Scarface' without ever playing the role."

When he moved to California his prospects didn't seem too bright. He said, "I didn't have a job I didn't have anything. I had a job but quit it so I could interview for parts. I interviewed for 'Knight Rider' and they picked me out of 60 guys who tried out for the role. Someone asked me, 'Where have you been?' I said I'd been trying to stay alive."

The "Knight Rider" role was designed as a spinoff, but it was like "Cover Up," with a man and a woman. NBC passed on it and it was retooled into "Dalton."

Taylor is not married, but has a girlfriend. "It's a little tough being on the road," he said. "She visits, but she's also an actress and has to stick around here for auditions."

Producer/creator Harris regains sense of humor for newest series

By FRED ROTHENBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — It was one of those crossroads moments that Hollywood likes to glamorize with crescending violins and actors creasing their faces with steely determination.

Susan Harris' marriage had just broken up. Her 2-year-old child was acting up. And the television program on the screen was stinking up. "That's so awful," she remembers thinking. "Anybody could do that."

Fifteen years later, Harris has done better than that. Spurred by the crisis in her life, she wrote a script for the adventure series, "Then Came Bronson," before she found her niche writing comedy for "All in the Family" and "Maude," most notably the "Maude" abortion episode. She then went on to create "Soap," its spinoff, "Benson," "Fay" and "It Takes Two."

Now, she is creator-producer of "The Golden Girls," which is about four elderly women sharing a house in Miami. The critically acclaimed series is the only new program rated in the Top 10 this season.

Actually, Harris wasn't eager to devote so much time to another series. She found TV too restricting and was concentrating, instead, on writing movies. But NBC executives approached her for a show they were calling "Miami Nice," and she immediately was smitten by its freshness.

"It was the first time I had ever been excited about a network idea," she said.

Before "Golden Girls" came along, Harris had lost her sense of humor about sitcoms. She had just failed with ABC's "Hail to the Chief," a boorish satire about a woman-president that had no realistic, identifiable characters worth caring about.

"It should have been canceled," Harris said. "It was a bad show that missed. It was not our intention to do a bad show and offend everyone. But that's what we did."

Actually, ABC had shelved the project and only resurrected it after Geraldine Ferraro became a vice-presidential candidate. But, by that time, Harris' interest had waned.

So why did she go on with the project?

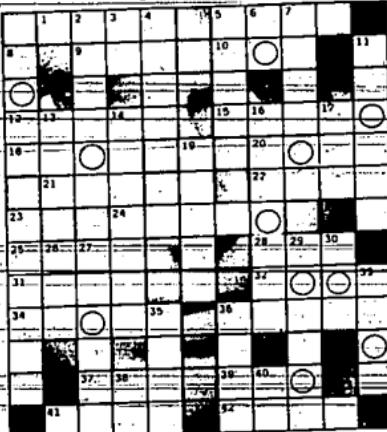

"Greed," she said. "When you're wanting to get a show on the air that badly, you lose your objectivity."

Last season, there was a siege mentality at third-rated ABC, and the network's incessant tampering alienated many writers and producers. The climate at NBC, where comedy has flourished under Entertainment President Brandon Tarikoff, is completely different, Harris said.

She likened the NBC atmosphere to that of ABC in the mid-1970s, when the network was building successful comedy blocks with "Taxi,"

Harris

"Barney Miller," "Soap" and "Mork and Mindy," Tom Werner and Marcy Carsey, now executive producers of NBC's "The Cosby Show," were key ABC executives for comedy then.

Harris noted that quality comedy generally came from shows breaking traditions and barriers. "Cosby," with its humorous parenting lessons, and "Golden Girls," which has neither token kids nor the seemingly requisite male or female heartthrob, certainly do that. Today's best comedies are funny, but also relevant and occasionally meaningful.

"I like to blend laughing-and-crying," Harris said. "The least threatening way to have impact is through comedy."

In some of her previous projects, Harris wrote the pilot episode, then left a silver bullet and went on to other writing assignments. "My husband (‘Golden Girls’ executive producer Paul Witt) used to call me creator-deserter," said Harris. But, with "Golden Girls," she "has written four of 18 episodes and makes weekly rewrites and suggestions on the (played by Billy Crystal), several ABC affiliates refused to carry it, contending it was a bad influence on children.

"Soap" now is in syndication and, Harris noted, it's "on at 7:30 in the morning in some markets."

Although this story might be considered more adult than typical TV fare, Harris still is frustrated by the medium's restrictions and break-neck pace to churn out two dozen episodes a season.

"The 23-minute form is brutal," she said. "And you cannot write realistic adults on TV the way you can in the theaters." She also complained about the language barrier, commercial breaks and the virtual insistence by networks that all major sitcom characters be likable.

TV seems to lag "many years behind life," Harris concluded.

When the spoony, sexy "Soap" was breaking taboos with, among other things, a homosexual character
